W. P. Tierney Wants Cash Before He Agrees to Settlement.

City Council Discusses Agreement With Power Co. Behind Closed Doors—Other Civic Business.

At the regular meeting of the city council last night the absentees were aldermen Hume and Annable. Dr. Rose was present and was congratulated upon his recovery from his recent illness. The mayor announced that an agreement had not yet been concluded with the West Kootenay Power and Light company over the latter's litigation with the city and the matter was discussed in committee of the whole behind closed doors.

When the council meeting was practically over Ald. Irving expressed his opinion very strongly that the press should be informed of the real trouble in the settlement with the power company. Briefly, this is the situation inducing the council to exclude the press earlier in the evening. The power company and the city are willing to drop the litigation now pending before the privy council, including of course all that has gone before, each party paying its own costs; but D. McBeath and Co., and W. P. Tierney, the latter being the "Co.," who are party defendants to all the litigation, threaten to sue the power company for $15,000 damages, caused by the injunction proceedings when McBeath and Tierney were contractors for the excavation work. Mr. Campbell insists that as part of the settlement the city shall hold the power company harmless from any action for damages brought by these original contractors. Mr. Tierney was seen in the matter and he demands $1000 before he will sign a settlement. As he has not put up a dollar for the costs involved, and as he will only bring his damage action in case the city succeeds before the privy council, the mayor and aldermen will not consider the question of paying him a cent, and will go on with the action rather than do so. Mr. Campbell is to be seen today and if he insists on being protected from any action McBeath and Tierney may bring, the appeal will be gone on with.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved, the report of the finance committee recommending the payment of sundry current accounts, including $450.83 payrolls, was received and adopted.

The mayor referred to the presence of the city solicitor, who, he said, was leaving for England tomorrow and was anxious to get through with pending matters. "As you know," concluded his worship, "at an informal meeting of the council we held on Thursday last, I was instructed to act with the city solicitor and confer with the manager of the West Kootenay Power and Light company and effect a settlement of the pending litigation between the city and the company, the latter's appeal from the decision of the full court in the city's favor, being now before the privy council. Mr. Macdonald and myself attempted to complete an agreement with Lorne A. Campbell, and his solicitor, Mr MacNeill, on the basis that each party should pay its own costs and that all litigation should cease. We were unable to complete this agreement for reasons that Mr Macdonald will explain. I think the council should go into a committee of the whole and fully consider the situation. The account of the council's proceedings in committee of the whole should not be reported."

The council then went into a committee of the whole and The Daily News reporter withdrew during the discussion which followed.

Retiring electrical engineer Dickson, who has now left the city's service, submitted his notes bearing on the running of the city power plant from its starting up in December last to date. Mr. Dickson's report included full details of rewiring the city system, now partly completed. Mr. Dickson advises that when the power plant is finally taken over by the city several matters be carefully gone into. The report was filed.

The Allis-Chalmers-Bullock Co., Ltd., sent in an account of contractors Mconald and Macpherson for extra work done at the power plant, claiming $181.63. The company asked for payment on the ground that this work saved the city expense in installing the machinery, as the city would have been obliged to build a suitable road.

Ald. Selous—Did we not build a suitable road?

The mayor—No, not one that machinery could have been carried over. This extra work is for a road to connect with our road. We agreed to build a suitable one from Nelson to the power plant.

Ald. Irving—I think the city is out enough as it is.

Mr. McCulloch will be asked his opinion of the matter.

The Allis-Chalmers-Bullock Co., Ltd., also wrote asking if it was not possible for the city to pay something on account of the amount held back by the city until the completion of the power plant, in view of the fact that the plant was running satisfactorily.

Ald. Selous and Ald. Irving thought no payment should be made until the plant was completed.

The mayor said there were two sides to the question.

On being asked, Mr. Dickson stated that owing to the want of a governor, no final test has been made and the plant has not yet been taken over.

There is about $14,000 due when the plant is finished according to contract.

The mayor thought the situation should be carefully considered.

Ald. Irving—There is no fear of the company closing the power plant. We have had to wait long enough on the company's pleasure.

Ald. Selous—The more we hold out the quicker the company will complete the plant.

Ald. Irving—We have no guarantee when the plant will be finished.

Ald. Selous suggested that the company be asked by the mayor "Suppose we pay you $5000, what guarantee or forfeit can you give us that you will instal a governor according to contract within 60 days." A motion to this effect carried.

H. F. Service addressed the council as to rates for business electrical signs and as to the position of such signs, none now being allowed to overhang the sidewalk. He suggested some changes. The signs would light up the streets well and make a good showing under present conditions; he could do no business. He submitted arrangements recently made in Vancouver.

Ald. Selous moved that a bylaw be prepared along the lines of the one in use in Vancouver for electric signs and the motion carried with the provision that the streets bylaw be also amended to permit of overhanging electric signs.

A petition from Gore street residents for a sewer between Kootenay and Stanley streets, was referred to the board of works.

Dr. Arthur reported testing samples of milk from the city dairies and finding them satisfactory.

The city solicitor wrote saying he was leaving for England on May 21 and asking for $2000 in the case of the W. K. P. and L. compnay vs the city. The city's case was all ready. It was decided to grant Mr. Macdonald's request in case no settlement was arrived at with the power company.

The school building bylaw was finally passed and adopted.

Tenders were put in for the new iron pipe for the extension of the water service in Bogustown, some 4000 feet. The lowest tender was for $59.50 per 100 feet, put in by the Ashdown Hardware company. This tender has been accepted.

Ald. Irving brought up the question of the dandelion pest. An experiment will be made with an alleged cure. The medical health officer will be asked to act for the benefit of the council.

After some routine business the council adjourned at 10:30 until Monday, June 30.

The court of revision will be held on Friday, June 28, at 10 a.m.

R. I. C. VETERAN'S DEATH

EDWARD DALY PASSED AWAY AT YMIR, AGED 92

FUNERAL TO BE HELD IN NELSON ON WEDNESDAY

(Special to The Daily News)

Ymir, May 20—Edward Daly, father of Patrick Daly and Mrs. A. C. O'Neill of Ymir, passed away last evening at the residence of his daughter. The deceased was 92 years of age and only reached Ymir on the 12th instant from Montreal, having come west to visit his sons and daughter, a trip he enjoyed greatly and was looking forward to the summer with his own, when the grim reaper called and he passed away as quietly as a sleeping babe.

Born in the year 1815 at Ardee in the county of Loth, Ireland, he was for 33 years connected with the Royal Irish constabulary, retiring in the fall of 1881 with the rank of sergeant and entitled to full pay. Mr. Daly came to Canada and settled in Montreal. The deceased leaves a wife, five sons and three daughters. The funeral will be held at Nelson on Wednesday and a service will be held in the Catholic church at Ymir on Tuesday. Rev. Father Althoff will hold mass over the remains.

The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of all Ymirites in the hour of their affliction.

SOCIALISTS ARRESTED

Would not Obey Toronto Policeman's "Move On" Order

Toronto, May 20 — Three socialists were arrested Saturday night for attempting to harangue a crowd on a principal street. They were W. C. Gribble, 23 Carleton St.; E. A. Drury, 14 Bismarck street and F. Seadskin, 17 Elizabeth street. When the socialists began their outdoor meeting, the police called upon them to "move on" and they refused. Gribble stopped speaking, but Drury refused to move on, and Seadskin started in to tell the public that the workingmen were being robbed and exploited by the capitalists.

MINING RECORDS

At the mining recorder's office on May 20 certificates of work were issued to Steve Hawkins on the Empire for two years, to Nelson Chisholm on the Little Nell for two years and on the Damarescotta, Surprise and Goodenough fraction, to E. Latulippe on the Joint fraction, to E. O. Nelson on the Stronghold, Mint and Stronghold fraction, and to William Moore on the Cliff.

MAKE SLOW PROGRESS

Jury Not Yet Complete for Haywood Trial at Boise.

New Venire May Have to Be Called Before Twelve Men Can Be Secured—Socialist Reporters Disagree.

(Special to The Daily News)

Boise, May 20—Progress in getting a jury for the Haywood trial was slow today. In all 18 men were examined; of these 16 were excused for cause. The state passed four of these. Each side exercised one peremptory challenge during the day, making six for the state and five for the defense. When the state was directed to make the sixth challenge, the defense took formal exception to it, having more than five, this being in pursuance of the position it took last week when the court decided that the new law was effective, giving the state and the defense ten peremptories each, the old law having given the state only five.

The venire is nearly exhausted and another will have to be issued tomorrw This will cause further delay. It took 18 men to get two today. With nine more peremptory challenges, if they all be exhausted, it will require about 80 more talesmen if the same proportion be made.

A feature of the case today was the taking up of the case of John Fisher, already passed by both sides. He was confronted with a man named Allen, who claimed Fisher had told him "these men ought to be strung up."

On examination Allen said he was working for the defense at $3.50 per day and had talked with many persons. He had his memory only to depend on for this statement respecting Fisher. The latter denied making the statement. He may have said the men should be hanged if they were guilty, but he had not expressed an opinion that they were guilty. The court overruled the challenge of the defense.

T. D. Calahan, an aged attorney, who has lived here for 40 years, has been entered as counsel for the defense.

The defense is well posted on every talesman coming up for examination. In one case today the record covered 11 pages of typewritten matter. These records are brought forth for reference during the examination of the talesmen.

An interesting controversy has broken out between representatives of rival socialist papers. George H. Shoaff, correspondent of the Appeal to Reason, has denounced Dr. Herman F. Titus, of the Seattle Socialist, as a traitor to the cause and warned all socialists against him. The statement was published in the Appeal without mentioning Titus' name. The latter charged Shoaff with meaning him and the latter admitted it. Titus has published a denial in which he challenges anyone to put is finger on an act of his disloyalty to the accused men. Last fall, during the political campaign, he published an alleged exposure on the part of John F. Nugent of counsel for the defense, to induce the socialist candidate for judge of the seventh district, in which Caldwell is located, to withdraw in favor of the democratic candidate. When he came here Nugent ordered him out of his office. Titus claims he was loyal to socialism in that matter and that it had nothing to do with the murder case. In his report of the case he is far less radical than Shoaff.

LOGS ON THE RAMPAGE

YALE-COLUMBIA LUMBER CO.'S BIG CUT CAUGHT IN A JAM

"KLONDYKE JOE" PERFORMS A PLUCKY RESCUE

(Special to The Daily News)

Grand Forks, May 20—The Yale-Columbia Lumber company's logs, amounting to many millions of feet, are now strung along the main river between here and Curlew and the rapid rise of the water during the past 24 hours, has brought them down with a rush which led to an immense log jam at the 3rd street bridge. At 4 o'clock while the crowds were watching the fruitless efforts to break the jam, John Hutchinson, who had stepped on the jam to chop off a half submerged log, fell into the river and was quickly swept under the bridge by the wild swirl of water.

The alarm was given and Joe Snavily, known here as "Klondyke Joe" put off in a boat 100 yards below the bridge and started in pursuit of Hutchinson, who could not swim a stroke, but had managed to seize hold of a passing log. Snavily pluckily and deftly rescued the man nearly a mile below the bridge, Hutchinson who was nearly all in and chilled to the bone, was driven to his home and taken care of.

The river is within two feet of the high water mark of 1902.

BYLAW CARRIES

New School Building is Now Assured

The bylaw for providing $60,000 worth of city debentures for the erection of a new public school building carried yesterday by a vote of 181 for to 39 against or a majority of 142. The bylaw required a three-fifths majority of the vote cast, and it will be noted that less than one fifth of the vote cast was against the measure. The figures are:

	For	Against
East Ward	113	24
West Ward	68	15
Total	181	39

The total vote polled was 220. On March 28, 1905 when a school building bylaw was submitted for a lesser amount than that passed yesterday, the vote stood 100 for and 161 against, with a total vote of 261.

IMPORTANT COMMISSION

ALBERTA'S COAL INDUSTRY TO BE INVESTIGATED

COMMISSION WITH WIDE POWERS APPOINTED

An order in council has been passed by the Alberta government appointing Hon. Arthur L. Sifton, chief justice of the supreme court of Alberta; Lewis Stockett, manager of the Bankhead mines, and William Hasom, president of the Coleman miners' union, and a working miner of Coleman, commissioners to investigate and report on all matters concerning the relations of employers of labor to the laborers employed in the coal mining industry in the province, and more especially in relation to the wages paid to the laborers; the length of time constituting a working day; the conditions that are, or should be, taken to avoid accident or injury to the persons so employed; and the compensation of such persons or their dependents or representatives in the event of injury or death while engaged in such employment; and in this connection to enquire into and investigate and report upon all circumstances tending to the elucidation of the differences between the operators and the men. The sittings of the commission will be held at the principal coal mining centres of the province. E. Trowbridge of Edmonton will act as secretary to the commission.

WON BY THREE YEAR OLD

EXCITING RACE FOR BROOKLYN HANDICAP

JAMES R. KEENE'S SUPERMAN AN EASY WINNER

New York, May 20—Through serried lines of cheering thousands Superman, the sturdy 3-year-old son of the great Commander, carrying the colors of Jas. R. Keene, and ridden by jockey Miller, dashed under the wire the winner of the Brooklyn Handicap this afternoon, over a course fetlock deep in mud, at the grand race track. Twenty-five thousand people saw the mud lashed Keene horse held back until the stretch and then run to the front to win in decisive fashion from a field of 11 starters. Beacon Light, ridden by Jockey Lowe, was second, a length behind Superman and Nealon, carrying the colors of C. E. Bonell, was third. Superman covered the course of a mile and a quarter in 2:02. Up and down the course in front of the grand stand the 11 contestants paraded before they cantered away to the starting line. At the start the horses pranced, with the rider in th ering to hold the position until the break, with the crowd waiting for the flash of starter Cassidy's flag, and the big race was on.

Like a shot Superman got away, followed by Okenite and Go-Between, and a flying field in the mire. Not wishing to set the pace, Miller held Superman in place and Okenite rushing up took the lead at the quarter, with Superman runing in steady even stride close behind and the on coming Beacon Light a short distance away. Buttling and Go-Between, the strong favorite for the race, hung back and fought it out with the others in the already hopeless ruck. Okenite had the lead in the flight past the cheering grand stand and jockey Preston carried him at his top speed.

On the first turn the horses went in a storm of flying mud. Okenite was first at the half, with Superman giving way to Nealon and Beacon Light, with the Keene horse never varying his machine like stride and little Miller holding him in tight rein. On they ran, with no relative change in position to the mile. Okenite was followed by Beacon Light, Nealon and Superman.

Into the stretch they came, and then Miller tapped Superman with the whip for the first time, sending the Keene horse out in front. Okenite bravely tried to follow him, but gave it up, while Beacon Light and Nealon, the only possible contenders, were whipped to a final burst of speed. Superman was in no danger and he sped by the judge's stand an easy winner. There were cheers for the horse, for the jockey and the horse's owners and the Brooklyn Handicap, the third in 20 years to be won by a three year old.

TO OPERATE IRON MINES

Seattle Man Will Commence Work Right Away on Texada Island.

Van Anda Miners Will Fight Enforcement of Industrial Disputes Act, Backed by W. F. of M.

(Special to The Daily News)

Vancouver, May 20—After many years of inactivity, the iron mines on the west coast of Texada island will within 60 days begin the shipment of ore. Jas. A. Moore of Seattle, has taken a long lease and is now preparing for development work. The claims embrace five square miles and the ore is magnetic of high grade. As the product is designed for the states' trade the smelting will be done at the Irondale smelter on Puget Sound.

Magistrate Alexander went to Van Anda on Saturday and that night opened the cases against the miners at Marble Bay, charged with breaking the new dominion act by going out on strike before the conciliation board had investigated conditions.

Matt Halliday acted for the miners and asked for an adjournment to secure counsel and witnesses.

Magistrate Alexander offered to try and bring the parties together, but the miners resented his proffer, saying that they would fight the matter out on the lines marked by the mine managers. The case was ultimately adjourned to the 30th. The Western Federation of Miners' head office today notified the local men to employ counsel at its expense and fight the case to a finish. Solicitor Bird was immediately engaged for the miners.

J. W. Haskins, a mining man of Victoria, while en route north to take charge of some mining interests, was taken suddenly ill on the steamer just out of this harbor. The vessel returned immediately but Haskins expired on the wharf from heart failure before an ambulance could arrive.

Robert Telford was today found guilty at the instance of the B. C. medical association, of practising medicine without a license and the light fine of $10 was imposed.

COUNTY COURT

William Stubbs' Action Against Yale-Kootenay Co., Dismissed

The county court sittings before judge Forin opened yesterday morning at 10:30, when the second trial of William Stubbs vs. the Yale-Kootenay Ice, Fruit, Fuel and Poultry company was commenced. The case was tried by a jury made up of the following: Gilbert Stanley (foreman), J. M. Ludwig, A. E. Shipley, W. H. Huston and George Thurman.

The case was heard before judge Forin originally on November 29, when his honor dismissed the case with costs. On January 17 the full court set aside Judge Forin's order and directed a new trial, the plaintiff having abandoned his claim for remuneration for expert instruction and report in April, 1904, claimed at $100.

The plaintiff now claims $200 damages for breach of employ, or the alternative, damages equal to commission of 25 per cent, viz., $100, and the costs of the action.

S. S. Taylor, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff and put Mr. Stubbs in the box as his first witness. Stubbs went all over the case as told last November. He made an arrarngement with Bjerkness, manager of the company, in January, 1904, to supply a number of fruit trees and planted the same at the company's ranch at Mirror Lake. The witness described in detail his bargain with the company, and Mr. Macdonald cross-examined him for the rest of the morning.

After all the evidence was in Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Taylor made brief addresses to the jury and by 6:10 the learned presiding judge had concluded his charge. The jury retired but came back in less than five minutes with a verdict of "no damages," and on motion judgment was given dismissing the action with costs a second time.

Of the other cases on the list that of Docksteader vs. Stoner has been settled out of court and the other two were adjourned, so that the sittings are concluded.

All the applications for naturalization, a list of those applying having already been published, were allowed by the court.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY

Three Men Nearly Succeeded in Entering a City Residence last Night

Nelson is apparently getting some of the undesirable characters that are being run out of Spokane, under that city's reform mayor's regime. Three suspicious characters were noted loafing about west Silica street on Saturday night and last evening shortly before midnight a deliberate atempt was made to burglarize John F. Kilby's residence on West Silica stret. Mrs. Kilby was at a dance in the K. of P. hall and the house was tenanted only by Miss Jean Cameron of The Daily News staff. All the lights were turned on in the lower rooms and just a little before 12 o'clock Miss Cameron heard someone trying to effect an entrance through the kitchen window. When she was certain of the matter she ran out into the street for help and fortunately Fred Irvine was passing with a friend, having just left his brother's house, the police were brought to the scene and Mrs. Kilby was notified. The would be burglars escaped without leaving any clue. The coolness with which the attempt was made and the circumstances surrounding the matter indicate that some undesirable characters at least were roaming the city last night.

KOOTENAY CENTRAL RLY.

STATUTORY ROUTE NEW ROAD IS TO FOLLOW

FROM GOLDEN TO INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY VIA FORT STEELE

Editor The Daily News—You have already published the news that work on the Kootenay Central railway will probably in the future be pushed with greater vigor than during the past year. Hence of course all well wishers to this very necessary enterprise must hope the news will prove to be correct; for the benefits which will be conferred upon the district of East Kootenay by the completion and operation of this road cannot be fully estimated even by those who are in some degree familiar with the great undeveloped resources of the valley. Already in anticipaion of the coming railway old Fort Steele is looking up; vacant houses are filling; real; real estate is changing hands; and general improvements are being prosecuted hopefully.

But in view of the renewed misrepresentation as to the route to be taken by the road and its point of connection with the Crow's Nest line, the people of the central and eastern side of the district would be pleased to have a republication of the route as chartered and as defined by the railway subsidy act, 1903.

Your correspondent was the originator of this now popular scheme; described the route as provided for in its charter, and in face of much sneering at his efforts to secure legislative sanction and recognition for the enterprise by those now so selfishly eager to profit by his efforts and to divert the road from its natural course, has always adhered to the wisdom of the selected route, between the C.P.R. main line and the C.N.R., and has always been able to give good reasons for the faith that was in him.

The charter, then provides that the road shall commence at Fort Steele, running southerly to a connection with the C.N.R. at or near Elko, or some suitable point between Elko and Wardner—which means, of course, neither at Wardner nor Elko. The second section of the road, it was provided, should follow northerly from Fort Steele along either side of the Kootenay and Columbia rivers by way of Windermere to Golden. And in confirmation of this route and by an even more definite description of it, the subsidy act provides for the usual aid to the Kootenay Central railway company for a railway from Golden by way of Windermere and Fort Steele towards the international boundary, and crossing the C.N.R. railway at or near Elko. Is it to be supposed then that the dominion government and parliament which sanctioned and subsidized this enterprise, will consent to any divergence from the original and natural route for any but the best of publicly debated reasons? Or that the railway commission will or can allow of any such variation on ex parte statements and without hearing argument for the original route? Not by any means; such a thing cannot be thought of. They have not done so yet at all events; so that those who are crowing so loudly about a connection not provided for in the charter are crowing (or grunting) too long before daybreak.

Let the matter be argued fairly by both sides—though there should be no two sides in this case—let every fact be brought out; let there be no suppression or perversion of the truth; and may the right win. It may as well be understood though first as last that the people in the center and on the east side of the valley who began and have carried on this fight for railway facilities are not going to give up their contention for what they believe to be the best route in both the railway's own and in the public interest until they find themselves beaten in the court of the highest and last resort—the parliament of the dominion.

The road was projected as a means of promoting the development of the rich agricultural, fruit growing, mineral and timber resources of the district, and not for the selfish advancement of any town or locality to the injury of the general public interests. This is the spirit shown all along by the original promoters; it is the spirit which still actuates them. They contend that the main line of the Kootenay Central should run along the east side of the Kootenay river south, for the development of the mineral and other resources knokn to exist there, but they have always held that if a westerly connection were found to be needed, it might be made by as short and direct a route as possible—grades and curves considered.

I may close by giving a few of the elevations of places to be affected by the building of this new railway: Elko, 3082 feet; Jaffray, 2700; Wardner, 2484; Fort Steele Junction, 2687; Cranbrook, 3014; Marysville, 3125; Kimberley, 3657; Fort Steele town, 2500; Windermere, 2700; Golden 2580. These figures are mostly official and from them any thinking person can easily mark out the best route and the best connection for this at first much sneered at, but now much striven for railway.

STRIKERS ARRESTED

Montreal Employers Turn to Civic Bylaw for Redress.

All Efforts to Settle Dock Strike Have Proved Futile—Prospects Are for Long Struggle.

Montreal, May 20—Several warrants were issued today for the arrest of men employed as stevedores who had season contracts. This action was taken under the civic bylaws concerning breaches of contract and warrants were issued by the recorders.

The Longshoremen's trouble assumed a new phase today, which culminated in the departure for Ottawa of F. A. Acland, the representative of the federal labor department.

On Saturday night the longshoremen's union officially took a hand, but were refused consideration by the shipping federation, which then withdrew all its offers. This morning, through Mr. Acland's influence, negotiations were reopened and the federation renewed its offer to meet half the demands of the dock laborers out, and to submit the other half to arbitration. This offer was refused by the general meeting when the union officials withdrew from all connection with the strike, the president of the union resigning from the position of leader of the strikers. The dock laborers now stand firm for the full demand of five cents and the outlook is for an extended contest. Before leaving, Acland informed both parties that he was ready to return as soon as he could be of any service in the negotiations.

ON TOUR OF THE WORLD

CANADIAN LACROSSE TEAM WILL SOON START ON BIG TRIP

TO LEAVE VANCOUVER FOR AUSTRALIA ON JUNE 21

Montreal, May 20—The trip of the Canadian lacrosse team to Australia is practically assured.

J. C. Miller, the man who is engineering the tour has received 15 round-the-world tickets from Australia, and the team will start next month. It will play in Winnipeg about June 8 and will play several exhibition games en route to the coast. The team is billed to leave Vancouver on June 21 and after playing in Australia will take a trip practically around the world. They will visit all the principal Australian and European cities, coming home by England. This will undountedly be the longest trip on record of any Canadian team or any other sporting organization. Among the players who will be in the party are Frank M. Grace, who is at present in Winnipeg. Grace is an old Arnprior boy, and played with Jimmie Murphy, Weldy Clark and other well known lacrosse men from the home town. He has figured on many teams in the east.

The list of players which the team will be chosen from is as follows: Jack Kearns, Arthur, Bobby Gilbert and Alton; Doc Campbell, A. Coombs and Vic. Graham, Brantford; Arens and Jack Curran, Orillia; Bill Hanley, Stratford; Tommy Doyle, Newmarket; Tom Hanley, Midland; Frank Grace, Arnprior; Short Murton, Tecumsehs; Gordon McDonald, Port Arthur; Leslie Backus, Shelbourne.

PAY DAY AT THE MINES

UPWARDS OF $50,000 DISTRIBUTED AT COAL CREEK AND MICHEL

OLD TIMER SENT DOWN TO NEW WESTMINSTER ASYLUM

(Special to The Daily News)

Fernie, May 20—Saturday was payday at the mines of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company and although the recent walk out of the employees had the effect of materially reducing the amount paid out, nevertheless the sum of about $50,000 was put in circulation in Coal Creek and Michel for April wages.

A most satisfactory tonnage is now being produced at both the colleries and coke shipments are rapidly approaching the figures they had reached prior to the recent cessation of work. Prospecting work is being pushed at Morrissey and should good seams of coking coal be discovered the ovens at that point will once more soon be in operation and assist in relieving the shortage of coke at the smelters in the Boundary country and Montana.

The anouncement in the press of the intention of the coal company to issue new stock to the extent of $500,000 is welcome here, as the expenditure of a large sum of money in improvements and expansion of existing works means increased prosperity for the whole district.

Richard Critch, an old timer in Fernie, who has recently shown signs of insanity, has been taken to the asylum at New Westminster.

A SPLENDID VOTE

No dissatisfaction can be felt with the vote cast yesterday in favor of the school loan bylaw. In the most emphatic manner Nelson property owners went on record as favoring the erection in this city of a school building suitable to its requirements.

There is room for surprise that thirty nine persons owning property in this city should vote against so obvious a necessity to the city's well being as adequate school accommodation. However, the work of conversion to sound common sense has made excellent progress. Two years ago a bylaw for a new school building, to cost less than the one now erected, was voted down by a substantial majority. Today less than one-fifth of the property owners can be found to declare that Nelson shall not have the best possible school facilities.

Had a public meeting been held and the matter thoroughly discussed, we doubt very much if even thirty-nine property owners would have gone on record as being opposed to so greatly needed an improvement as the new school building.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is somewhat difficult to understand the reason why the C.P.R. should refuse daily mail service to points on Slocan lake when its steamer is running daily between Slocan City and Rosebery, and, as stated by a correspondent, makes daily stops at Silverton.

The sentencing of a Grand Trunk railway conductor to three years' imprisonment for being asleep on duty, has given rise to a good deal of comment in the east. The propriety of the sentence is not questioned, but it is suggested that the "higher up" officials, who connive at trainmen working for excessive hours should come within the meshes of the law. The railway officials are shielded by certain printed rules, which, in many instances, if train crews were to observe, they would find themselves unemployed or earned promotion cut off. Notwithstanding the fact that the trainmen are well organized it is only too true that they tolerate exactions by the railway officials in the matter of excessive hours that are most unfair to themselves and to the travelling public. Judge Riddell, who sentenced the Grand Trunk conductor to a term of imprisonment, has recommended the attorney general of Ontario to investigate further and to ascertain, if possible, the real facts in regard to excessive hours of labor imposed upon trainmen. The investigation, if held, should do good.

Ottawa Free Press: "Lost, stolen or strayed in London, England, one colonial premier. The people of British Columbia would be glad to be advised of the whereabouts of Hon. Richard McBride, who went over to 'attend the imperial conference.' Has anybody heard of him?" The last heard of the premier was at the London Canada club's dinner to sir Wilfrid Laurier on April 30th, at which he was a guest, or at least his name appears among the list of those present on that occasion.

Sir Charles McLaren, bart., M.P., contributes an article on British versus United States engineering to "Canada," a London weekly, in the course of which he seeks to show the reasons why British engineering products are so little used in Canada as compared with those of American make. The worthy baronet ignores the chief reason, or reasons. English engineering firms do not advertise in Canada, neither do they have representatives in the field studying the special requirements of Canada. British Columbia should have been a profitable field for English engineering firms, but, as a matter of fact, goods of English manufacture are chiefly conspicuous by their absence. Judicious expenditure in publicity would have secured for English firms a very large proportion of orders sent to more alert American houses.

SLOCAN MAIL SERVICE

Silverton Rejects Idea of New Denver Being Distributing Point
(Special to The Daily News)

Editor The Daily News—In the letter from New Denver to the postmaster general which appeared in The Daily News of the 18th, the strong plea made for that place being the distributing point for the Slocan is simply absurd.

It is true they have the record office and bank, but the idea of it being the distributing point of the country as far as Silverton is concerned seems very ridiculous, when the boat would have to pass the wharf here on its way to New Denver. There is at least four times the amount of freight handled here that there is at any other point on the lake and the boat has had to call here every day, Sunday not excepted, to handle the freight since the new time table has come into effect. There are at least 150 miners around Silverton, getting their mail from this office, besides the residents and it is ludicrous to suggest that it would improve the service to carry it four miles past the town and send it back on a pack horse; besides the New Denver resident physician is rather a heavy weight, to be handled by mail. A better way would be to call him up on the telephone and have him come down in his launch.

It might be well to reverse the Denverites' suggestion and have the mail distributed from this point as the railway company admits they will likely have to call here every day as usual to load ore and unload freight.

TOBACCO IN OKANAGAN

LIKELY SOON TO BE IMPORTANT AND PROFITABLE CROP

LEWIS HOLMAN TELLS WHAT HAS BEEN, AND WHAT IS DOING

A Vernon News representative recently had a most interesting interview with Lewis Holman, who, with John Collins, deserves the very highest credit for his persistence in insisting upon the now generally admitted fact that tobacco of a very high quality can be grown in Kelowna, and for the energy which is responsible for the long series of experimental crops which have finally established this proposition.

Mr. Holman furnished the News with the following figures as a very careful, and dependable estimate of the cost of producing an acre of good tobacco:

Irrigating	$ 1.80
Planting	5.25
Cultivating	5.50
Topping	.40
Stripping	7.50
Harvesting	15.00
	$35.45

An average crop would be about 1500 pounds, and it is possible to produce 2000 pounds or more. Probably two-thirds of this would be over 17 inches in length, and so worth about 13 cents a pound; one-sixth might be worth 10c a pound, and the remaining one-sixth 6 cents a pound.

As a very conservative estimate, therefore, the individual grower might expect to receive:

1000 lbs. at 13c	$130.00
250 lbs. at 10c	25.00
250 lbs. at 6c	15.00
	$170.00
Net gain	$134.55

Asked as to the number of men required in connection with tobacco growing, Mr. Holman stated that it varied with the season. For 20 acres six men would be necessary for planting, fifteen for harvesting and about ten for stripping.

Mr. Holman gave an interesting account of the methods adopted in growing tocacco. The seed beds are prepared in the fall, by manuring and plowing about six sinches deep. In the spring the fields are disked, and rolled with a heavy roller. The seeds are first sprouted in little woolen sacks and then sown in frames, covered with canvas to modify the direct rays of the sun. Mixing these sprouted seeds (which are very minute in size) with sand, they are scattered over the surface inside the frames, which is then raked over, rolled and watered. In three to eight days, about April 1st the plants come up, and must then be kept moist until about the 26th of May, when they are transplanted and set out in land which has been carefully prepared by irrigation for their reception.

Mr. Holman has found it necessary to devote particular attention to the irrigating feature. He states that either too much or too little water may make the greatest difference in the results obtained. The plan he has found best is to plow up the field into squares enclosed by furrow ridges. Into these receptacles water is turned for a few hours and allowed to soak into the ground. This one irrigation before the plants are set out is all that is found necessary for producing the best tobacco.

The planting is done with a most ingenious machine, pulled by a team of horses and operated by three men, one to drive and two to drop the plants into the holes ready for them. An important feature of the planter is a large tank of water, which automatically squirts a drop of water into each hole as soon as the plant is deposited.

A sharp lookout must now be kept for cut-worms, which may destroy all the result of so much care. Mr. Holman states that when he first started his experiments in tobacco growing, his whole field was cleaned out three times by cut-worms, and re-planting became necessary. He now uses a mixture of bran, molasses and Paris green, with the result that scarcely 1 per cent of the plants receive any damage.

The field must then be cultivated at least once a week till the size of the plants renders this impossible. Topping usually takes place at the end of July, but sometimes as early as June 15th.

In 21 days after topping, the leaf is ripe. After cutting off the suckers, harvesting begins. The plants are cut down with hatchets (15 men and two teams will do nearly two acres a day), and strung on laths, about six to a lath, by mens of an adjustable spear-head which splits the aperture in the stalk. They are then hung up to dry for two and a half months, or longer.

After this period they are usually fit for stripping, which consists in separating the leaf from the blade. This must be done in fairly damp weather. The leaves are then done up in 20-pound bundles, ready for sorting. At this point the work of the grower properly ceases, and it is at this stage that the International Tobacco company, when operating, would probably purchase the tobacco from the individual grower.

The manufacturer would then take charge of the sorting and grading, which consists in classifying the miscellaneous leaves according to size and quality, as binders, fillers, wrappers, etc. After sorting, the tobacco is placed in the sweating house, where it is subjected to a moist heat of 100 degrees for about three months. It is then kept for six months to cool off and age, when it is ready to be made into cigars.

Questioned as to the opinion expressed of Kelowna tobacco by eastern experts, Mr. Holman stated that, seven years ago, he had gone to Montreal with samples of his product. He had met Fortier and other large cigar manufacturers there, and had submitted his samples to their experts with the most gratifying results. The expert declared that one variety of his tobacco was as good as any grown in Canada, while he refused to believe that his sample of Havana leaf was a Canadian product at all, and offered to bet $50 that it was actually produced in Cuba. Some samples shown to New York tobacco men had also been pronounced excellent. As he believed that even better results could be secured by operation on a large scale under competent supervision, Mr. Holman expressed his confidence that there was a very bright future in store for the tobacco industry in the Okanagan. He looked forward to the day when the whole valley would be more or less engaged in tobacco growing, and expected that it would add a great deal to the prosperity of the district.

He very obligingly showed the News representative over his plant, and a very interesting forenoon was spent in looking over the drying and sweat houses, sorting rooms, etc.

Kelowna is thoroughly alive to the possibilities of the new industry started in her midst; many of the ranchers of the neighborhood have already produced small crops that have not been unprofitable; many more are looking forward to the near future, when the operations of the new company will assure them a ready market for all they can grow, and there is little doubt but that other sections of the valley will follow the good example set and add a second important industry to that of fruit growing, already so firmly established.

RELIEF FOR RHEUMATIC PAINS

"I suffered with rheumatism for over two years," says Mr. Rolland Curry, a patrolman of Key West. "Somtimes it settled in my knees and lamed so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet and hands so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain and lame from it my wife went to the drug store here and came back with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I was rubbed with it and found the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept on using it for a little more than two weeks and found that it drove the pain away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months. For sale by all druggists and dealers.

Buy Burton City Fruit Lands

AND GET THE BEST IN THE KOOTENAYS

This land is level and free from stone, located along the shore of the beautiful Arrow Lake and only one mile from Burton City. I have 1250 acres which I will sell wholesale or subdivide. It will pay you to see this before you buy.

The large C. P. R. steamers call twice a day. Good neighbors. Close to fine orchards. The Arrow Lakes are 350 feet lower than Kootenay Lakes, which insures permanent success in growing fruit and in no part of the Kootenay is there such opportunities for hunting large game. Only 14 miles from Burton City, on Goat mountain, is located one of the largest herds of mountain goat known to the sportsmen of B. C., while on the opposite mountain deer can be seen at any season of the year and one of the streams running through Burton Valley is called Trout Creek on account of the quantity of fish caught there. Burton Valley is the home for wild fruit. Wild cherries, wild crab apples, raspberries and wild strawberries, are fast being replaced by cultivated orchards.

INDIVIDUALISM VERSUS SOCIALISM

An Address by Banker Henry Clews, of New York

In order that I may present a clear understanding of my view of the subject, it is only fair, in the first place, to state that the system of individualism which I shall endeavor to uphold is worthy and commendable. I hold it to be superior in every sense to any of the various plans of socialism offered by its advocates. By this I do not mean individualism in the extreme sense of the term, for, as we all know, in no civilized country and under no form of government whatsoever, does, or can, extreme individualism exist.

In the world of economics individualism has a distinct meaning, as given to the theory of government which favors the non-interference of the state in the affairs of individuals. It has also been well defined, as the private ownership of the means of production and distribuion, where competition is possible; leaving to public ownership those means of production and distribution in which competition is practically impossible.

It will, then, be at once apparent that in the consideration of the forces helpful and necessary to society, the individualist believes that competition which encourages merit and develops skill should remain paramount. And right here the issue is made, between individualism and socialism, the socialist denying that competition is beneficial to society, but contending rather that it is a deleterious and harmful force.

Upon this issue, so joined, I stand firmly in favor of the principle of competition, and that system of individualism which guards, protects and encourages competition. It is that system of government under which we live today—a government of the people, by the people and for the people—the United States of America—a free system of government, in the best and broadest sense of the term.

Under this free system of government, whereby individuals are free to get a living or to pursue wealth as each chooses, the usual result is competition. Obviously, then, competition really means industrial freedom. Thus, anyone may choose his own trade or profession, or, if he does not like it, he may change. He is free to work hard or not; he may make his own bargains and set his price upon his labor or his products. He is free to acquire property to any extent, or to part with it. By dint of greater effort or superior skill, or by intelligence, if he can make better wages, he is free to live better, just as his neighbor is free to follow his example and learn to excel him in turn. If anyone has a genius for making and managing money, he is free to exercise his genius, just as another is free to handle his tools.

In this primary outline of the free system of individualism, it is well also to consider the good side of freedom or individualism. It is an axiom, well esablished, that the freer men are to choose their work and to use and enjoy its results, the more work they are willing to do. Their energy and enterprise are called out, their wits sharpened, their hopes stirred. If anyone wins unusual success, others are encouraged to try better methods. If an individual enjoys his money, gained by energy and successful effort, his neighbors are urged to work the harder, that they and their children may have the same enjoyment.

Thus, everyone accomplishes more in a condition of freedom or individualism and the whole nation is richer than if custom or a socialist community fettered and restricted men, and compelled them to work according to rule. With matured individuals, this is on the same principle that children enjoy their sports better when left to themselves than if a parent or teacher were to meddle and make rules for them.

I believe that it can be stated as an established fact, that whenever men are, as individuals, free to work, to earn and to save and use their earnings as they deem fit, the capable, the industrious, the temperate and the intelligent everywhere tend to rise to prosperity. The skilful are always in demand at good wages. And remember that a day's wages never purchased so much in supplies as it does in the United States, where we use the individual or competitive system of work, because, high as prices are, wages are still higher.

As a further part of this summary of individualism and competition, let us also add the moral side, for it is a considerable and important item. When men labor, earn or save with perfect freedom, they develop many moral qualities, such as patience, self-reliance, self-sacrifice, venturesomeness, integrity, generosity and respect for others' rights.

If a socialistic committee of the wisest men could manage and make rules for the rest, and provide for everyone's necessities, men would not acquire or exhibit these sterling qualities of manhood, as well as they would by being thrown upon their own resources.

We know this, also, from the fact that the strongest characters have been worked out in brave and patient competition and conflict, often under difficult circumstances; whereas the men who have never been thrown upon their own resources rarely amount to anything.

After this preliminary description of the worth and salient influence of individualism, under which our country has grown to be the greatest nation of the world, let us now turn to socialism—a system which, if adopted, would call a halt to our progress, tear down our established institutions, and turn our great prosperity into ruin and decay.

It is difficult to tell just what is meant by socialism in the more modern sense of the term.

It has appeared in the United States under five different and almost wholly disconnected forms. It has appeared as a movement towards the establishment of socialistic communities or communisms; it has appeared as Fourierism, as German or international socialism, as nihilism and Christian socialism.

Prof. Mallock, the eminent English writer, in his lectures in New York, made a careful analysis of socialism and exposed its plausible sophistries, some of which, socialists boast, are grounded on our defined principles of political economy, which the learned writer asserts are rather incomplete. It may be admitted that this is so, and that fuller and clearer distinctions could well be added to our text books on the subject. But, joining the issue in a clean-cut way, between individualism and socialism, obviates all necessity at this time of further considering such distinctions, and clarifies our respective positions in this debate.

It was noticeable that, during the delivery of these lectures, hints and remonstrances were freely thrown out that the structure that Dr. Mallock was attacking was not socialism at all, in the modern acceptation of the term, but something else that had long ago been abandoned.

Now, while I have no unfriendliness whatever with the honest socialist (mistaken, deluded and sadly out of place in this grand republic as he may be), I do say that this position is but too often wily subterfuge, sought to be taken advantage of by the insincere agitator or pretended reformer, when he sees that he is beaten. His invariable answer to an irrefutable argument is: "Oh, that which you talked about is not modern socialism!"

For the purpose of this discussion, however, we can agree that, as contradistinguished from individualism, socialism opposes and denounces competition as an injurious and unnecessary force in society, and advocates the collective ownership, through the state, of all the means of production and distribution.

Socialists would, in other words, fence up the great field of free opportunity, deaden all incentive or inspiration for great achievement and not only curtail, but wholly remove, the right to compete and excel, and make it impossible to write "success" as the result of individual effort.

Just think of it! Why, the very thing that the socialists attack as untenable and wrong in government—individual competition—has done more than anything else to make us what we are as a nation today; has kept alive the precious fires of liberty and freedom and has preserved the institutions of our country. Take away the spirit of individualism from the people, and you at once eliminate the American spirit—the love of freedom—of free industry—free and unfettered opportunity—you take away freedom itself!

And right here I take the position and shall ever contend, that the United States (of all countries in the world) is no place for socialism. Let us never forget that it was founded by the wisdom and patriotism of the fathers of the revolution, and that it is blessed with a constitution, framed by men who loved individual freedom and national liberty, and who risked their lives and sacrificed their property in the struggle to overthrow injustice and oppression and achieve independence and individual equality. Let us not forget its past 130 years of eventful history, replete as they are with many chapters of severe trial, over all of which it has ever risen superior. This splendid history has placed our system of government beyond the line of experiment, and raised it to such an elevation of recognition and respect, that it now ranks among the highest of all the nations of the earth.

Born of the spirit of resistence to oppression, with the broadest and freest constitution that the world has ever known—a land of freedom and equality in the best and most liberal sense of the term, it would seem that the sincere lover of liberty and equality could ask no better home than this democracy of ours—whose glorious flag floats over eighty-four millions of prosperous and enlightened people.

To further add the term "contented people" might, perhaps, not be a strictly true assertion, and neither would it, in my opinion, be a desirable one to use; for to the spirit of discontent and ambition, so predominant in the American character, are due largely the grand achievements and the remarkable progress and advancement of our nation, in all things that make for greatness, strength and public welfare. However, we must be careful to draw a plain line of contradistinction between that discontent which is really the mainspring of human activity; and which, appreciating the solidity and soundness of our foundation, aspires to build thereon to the highest ideals of perfection and success—and that misguided or malicious discontent of socialism, which arrays itself as an enemy of all civilized forms of government and seeks their utter destruction.

We can well understand and appreciate how, in a country ruled by a despot, whose heel of oppression and tyranny is ever on the necks of downtrodden people, the feeling of the masses, who, desiring some measure of free action and equality, would revolt against such conditions, and seek a reorganization of society. They would, naturally, look as far away as they could from such a government of despotism—the only one they had ever known—to the other extreme—a country where the state should own all the land and capital, employ all the people and divide everything, share and share alike, among the community.

But the spirit of revolt which, in that case may be patriotism, becomes ridiculous and open to the charge of insincerity, when the tenets of its doctrine are transplanted and cultivated upon American soil by our foreign population.

With further reason, also must we question the sincerity of the socialist, who, leaving oppression behind, emigrates to this country, where tryanny and despotism are unknown, and, yet, who continues to echo that war cry of destruction, wrung from his heart by the cruelty of his old-time oppressors.

He comes here from a land of want and thraldom, to a land of plenty and freedom. He may come without name, fame or property, and he is received with open arms. After a brief residence he is entitled to full citizenship and is then a part of the government; enjoying all the rights and privileges of the native born. Besides the active or public equality—the equality possessed by all, the right to share in the government such as the electoral franchise and eligibility to public office—he has the rights of public equality. He is possesssed of legal equality—the equal possession of private civil rights, enjoyed by all citizens. Then there is the equality of material conditions—that is, the right to acquire wealth and all that wealth implies.

Every opportunity to achieve success and happiness abounds on every hand, and every incentive to industry and accomplishment awaits him, and, if he is energetic and skilful, there is nothing to hinder him from becoming prosperous, or, in other words, successful in whatever vocation in life he may pursue. With qualities that commend themselves to his fellowmen, there is no limit to the possibilities of his achievements, and very soon (as has been very often the case) he may become a leader of men. If, therefore, he is sincere, surely he must agree that in view of these conditions, this is no place for the socialist. And does it not sound like a paradox to hear this cry of socialism still rending the air—while every avenue of fortune lies open to everyone?

Socialism is self-contradictory and opposed to deep rooted and ineradicable human instincts. Its origin is, of course, purely selfish; but there are two kinds of selfishness—the enlightened and unenlightened. Unfortunately, socialism belongs chiefly to the latter. It is often overlooked that the identical love of gain which seeks to equalize the distribution of wealth will not be satisfied with equality. A desire for gain will still remain and seek to acquire. The most commendable object in socialism is the uplifting of the downtrodden and poor. Yet that great commoner and tribune of the people, William Jennings Bryan, tells us that under individualism we have seen a constant increase in altruism. That the fact that the individual can select the object of his benevolence and devote his means to the causes that appeal to him has given an additional stimulus to his endeavors. And Mr. Bryan asks the question: "Would this stimulus be as great under socialism?" Let it not be forgotten that by means of present tendencies and existing economic laws the poor are constantly growing richer. They were never so prosperous as today. Labor has made great strides and the uplift in the lower walks of life in all Christendom during the past 20 years has been beyond precedent. Give us wise and just legislation and complaints about the inequitable distribution of wealth will quickly disappear.

The state of society that the socialists seek to establish may be beneficial to a class, which, under any conditions, lacks frugality, thrift and self-reliance; but just where the general mass of humanity is to be bettered or elevated, socially, morally or politically, is a point not satisfactorily explained. A society in which all human beings do right, for the simple reason that it is right, cannot exist, unless human nature is recast and reconstructed. Human nature must be treated as it is found in the general makeup of man, and, therefore, a society in which all special desires, all ambition and all self-esteem have been eliminated, precludes development and progress. It reduces everything to utter shiftlessness and stagnation. In such a society there can be no incentive to great achievements in art, literature, mechanics and invention. If all are to be placed on an equal footing, the ignorant with the educated, the dullard with the genius, and the profligate with the provident, what encouragement is there for special effort

If you render accessible to each and every member of the human family the achievements and benefits of civilization, holding "property in common," why should a man rack his brain or strain his muscles in producing something which he expects to prove remunerative to himself in some way, but which, under the socialistic state, would go to the equal financial benefit of all?

Just for a moment stop to think of bringing all men as near to a dead level as possible, for I recognize that not even socialism would secure the equality which it seeks. If one physician is more skilful than another, who would insist that he receive no better reward than the less skilful, when many would be willing to offer it? Or how else could he avoid having all the patients in the community upon his hands except by charging more for his services than an inferior physician? If one lawyer shows greater ability than another, is he not entitled to a larger fee for his talent? And how else is he to protect himself from taking all the business from the lawyer of less ability? Again, if the skill of the cabinet maker is higher and rarer an dworth more than that of the carpenter, how can the latter expect the same compensation as the former? To put both on the same plane would be unjust and would lead to one being compelled to work beyond his strength, while the less skilful would probably be insufficiently occupied. Socialism, you thus see, would often place a premium upon laziness and inefficiency.

Socialism would benefit the shiftless and lazy at the expense of the thrifty and industrious. Is that a good system to advocate and follow Which of you would be willing to share your hard-won provision for your own family with another family, the head of which you knew to be lazy, incapable and dissipated? What incentive to struggle would remain if the results of that struggle were to be taken away from you and given to others who sat idly by? What would be the effect upon the United States of throttling ambition to achieve? Take the necessity of struggle out of life and we should quickly weaken human nature. True, the competitive system works harshly upon the weak and incompetent. This, however, opens a channel for development of benevolence, kindness and patience, without which human nature would be exceedingly one-sided and forbidding. The indigent, unfortunate and weak will always be a charge upon the stronger, whether in the family, the municipality or the state. It is folly to think that life can be lived without struggle; and that is one of the chief delusions of socialism, whcih would quickly impair our national manhood and endurance. Trouble and pain have their part in the plan of nature.

The socialist is usually an unfortunate or misled individual. He has probably suffered from reverses or unfortunate environment. He has perhaps been roughly or cruelly handled. Perhaps he cannot get on satisfactorily, or his ambitions have been disappointed. He is then in a condition of discontent ready to swallow socialistic—or any other—sophistries which hold out the delusive promise of relief.

Socialism attaches too little importance to the fact that men are made with an infinite variety of tastes, abilities and capacities. No two are precisely alike, and it is utter folly for poor, weak man to undertake to equalize these differences. All progress in history has been made through struggle and sacrifice; and socialism, no matter how beneficent its intentions, cannot change the inscrutable laws of nature or humanity. All natural laws have their reverse side. Gravitation, which keeps us firm on our feet so long as we are on solid ground, knocks us to pieces if we attempt to walk off a housetop or over the opening of a pit. It is not the natural law, but the attempt to ignore it, that gives us trouble.

I most emphatically assert that we cannot get rid of competition, any more than the law of gravitation.

The American inventor, mechanic, farmer, merchant and financier, and the worker in every profession, are, every one of them—proud, respectively, of their skill, knowledge and ability. Their ambition is to excel—to produce the most and best. Experience, enterprise and courage create opportunities and conditions most favorable to the state and nation and to themselves. Each vies with his fellow man in producing the best results, and is always willing to tackle any obstacle—no matter how formidable—that stands in the way of success. In his whole compendium and entire makeup there is no such word as fail. He aids, by his untiring an dindividual energy and effort, in making his country the greatest in the whole agricultural, industrial and financial world. He reaps the reward of industry and accomplishment and his home is blessed with bounty; and he knows that his children have equal opportunity with himself to learn and to achieve.

Shall he be asked to tolerate, or consider the sacrifice of all these things, so dear to him, for socialism?

Shall he be led to believe in a foreign plan or system of government that degrades skill, eliminates acquisition and thrift, and ignores genius? I cannot think so.

These are the very qualities and attributes that he prizes so highly, as essential to the prosperity of the home and nation. He knows (or should know) that to do so would be to deaden and relinquish those God-given qualities of heart and brain that have helped to make him and his country what they are today.

He knows (what the nations of the world concede) that the American people are the most prosperous of all on the face of the globe—and that this high and commanding position has been attained under existing conditions, and through the operation of our admirable system of government.

Whatever, therefore, may be the pretexts used to make him dissatisfied with his lot, his own experience tells him every day that the constitution under which he lives is a glorious one; and so implanted in the hearts of the American people as to be impregnable against the assaults of socialism.

At the same time, he is appreciative of the fact that it is not in the nature of things to expect in this world blessings pure and unmixed, but he is thankful for the superior good that he enjoys under our beneficent democratic form of government.

A state of socialism in the United states would tend to drive all our men of superior ability, skill and power out of the country. The strong would quickly seek other fields where the qualities which they possess would have a free chance and an open field. They would promptly desert a country that offered nothing better than a dismal dead level, with no means of achievement in sight, and the nation would quickly fall into a state of miserable inertia or decay. Our forefathers came to this country to establish religious freedom; they next fought for political freedom; afterwards they sacrificed a million lives for race freedom, and now we, their successors, with such glorious traditions behind us, must stand for industrial and social freedom. For, in the final analysis, socialism can stop at nothing short of industrial slavery and political bondage. Great achievements would be impossible under it.

MONORAIL ONLY A TOY

NO PRACTICAL VALUE IN LOUIS BRENNAN'S INVENTION

VIEW OF SIR HIRAM MAXIM, AN AUTHORITY ON GYROSCOPE

Sir Hiram Maxim sees no practical value in Louis Brennan's monorail railroad system, which the inventor recently explained to the Royal society in London. Like everybody else, sir Hiram admits that Mr. Brennan has perfected a charming and highly scientific toy, using the idea of the spinning top to balance his cars, but he does not believe it practicable to construct and operate a railway according to Mr. Brennan's plans. The inventor himself may think he has discovered a use for the gyroscope that will revolutionize railroad construction, but that is not sir Hiram's opinion, and I may add that no scientific man, so far as I know, expects that a gyroscopic railway will ever be constructed for commercial purposes.

Sir Hiram speaks with authority on the gyroscope. Lord Kelvin recently said that sir Hiram was one of only three men in the world who really understood it.

"Mr. Brennan's proposal to construct a monorail system," said sir Hiram, differs from other such systems in that the rail is placed below the centre of gravity instead of above it. I think his plan to keep the carriages from tipping by the action of the gyroscope will be beset with a great many difficult problems, so difficult, in fact, as to make the whole scheme absolutely impracticable. It is quite safe to say that if Mr. Brennan's train was running east or west, and there was a strong wind from the north, the wind would exert considerable force on the train in the same direction, and I think under those conditions the plane of the gyroscope would gradually yield, capsizing the train.

"Nothing in the world is so much of a paradox as the gyroscope. Perhaps I can best illustrate gyroscopic action by recalling the construction 30 years ago by sir Henry Bessemer of a ship to take passengers across the British channel, which he proposed to keep in a horizontal position by the use of large gyroscopes. Sir Henry had thought of the gyroscope the same as other engineers, but there was one engineer and mathematician of that time who really understood the gyroscope. That was professor MacFarland Grey, who wrote in the scientific press that the gyroscopes in sir Henry's ship would not work. He was attacked for this by a large number of engineers. However, when the ship was tried it behaved just as professor Grey predicted. The gyroscopes had no effect at all in steadying the craft, and as the gyroscope failed to meet sir Henry's expectations, so, without doubt, it will fail to meet Mr. Brennan's if he ever undertakes to steady a full-sized car on a monorail road."

Sir William White, lately chief constructor of the British navy, says: "Mr. Brennan has undoubtedly very ingeniously solved the question of making a truck stand upon one rail. His original idea was to provide an improved means of transport for the army in time of war, as the trouble and cost of laying one rail would be so much smaller than two. Brennan had solved the problem of how to make a long truck travel on one rail up and down steep gradients, around sharp curves and at great speed. Whether a new invention is going to revolutionize railway traction is a matter for railway engineers to decide."

CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY

There is probably no medicine made that is relied upon with more implicit confidence than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. During the third of a century in which it has been in use, people have learned that it is the one remedy that never fails. When reduced with water and sweetened, it is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists and dealers.

JUDGE MORSON'S DECISION

Restaurant Keepers of Ontario Have Wide Privileges.

Whether the public may or may not legally buy on Sundays such edibles as candies, peanuts, ice cream and sundry other forms of refreshment in Ontario has been decided by a judgment delivered by Judge Morson. From his honor's decision there is no appeal, as parliament in its wisdom has vested the sole authority to interpret the meaning of the Lord's Day Act, passed last session at Ottawa, in the hands of the division court judge.

Judge Morson rules that the public may legally buy any kind of food that any individual members may fancy, as the Lord's Day Act does not include a statutory bill of fare. The only purveyor of things good to eat that the public may patronize on Sundays is, however, the resaurant keeper. To buy from any other supplier is to bring oneself, or, at least, to bring the supplier, within the meshes of the law. Whether the articles bought are consumed on the premises or not, Judge Morson holds to be immaterial, his honor looking on the suggestion that a restaurateur should be compelled to engage a staff of attendants to see that his customers eat what they bought before they left the establishment as absurd. He also repudiates the claim that the removal of the articles bought converts the restaurant into a shop.

The case before his honor was that of John Devins, a restaurant keeper at Sunnyside Crossing, who was convicted by Magistrate Kingsford and fined $20 for selling candies on Sunday. Mr. Devins appealed on the ground that the selling of candies was a part of his ordinary calling as a restaurant keeper. Jmes Haverson, K.C., appeared for the defendant and Mr. Johnston for the prosecution. Staff Inspector Archibald, also in connection with Mr. Johnston, argued that the offense was created by the consumption of the candies outside the restaurant premises, an operation which changed the character of the establishment.

Fooled the Doctors and Got Well

GIN PILLS CURE RHEUMATISM

They certainly were a surprised lot of doctors out Tyneside way. They had been treating Mrs. Harris for years. Gave her about everything that was ever heard of for Rheumatism—and then told her the disease was chronic.

A friend told Mrs. Harris about GIN PILLS. Just to oblige her friend, Mrs. Harris took a box. When that was gone, she dismissed the doctors and bought another box of GIN PILLS. By the time these were gone, she was so much better that she bought the third box and laughed every time she saw a doctor.

Tyneside P. O., Aug. 6, 1906.

I received your sample box of Gin Pills, but as there was only enough for a trial I got a box from our druggist, and now I am taking the third box. The pain across my back and kidneys has almost entirely gone, and I am better than I have been for years. I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism, but it has all left me.

Mrs. T. Harris.

The doctors can't explain it. They don't try to. They said Mrs. Harris could not be cured. GIN PILLS cured her. Proof beats explanation all to pieces. Do YOU want proof? Write, mentioning this paper, for a free sample of Gin Pills and try them yourself. Then you will see what Gin Pills will do for YOU. Write now to the Bole Drug Co., Winnipeg, for a free sample.

Sold by dealers everywhere. 50c a box—6 for $2.50. 99

Chicago of Canadian West

In a recent interview, N. T. Macleod, secretary of the new town of Coleridge, Alta., said:

"The natural gas that was tapped at this town a short time ago is today flowing in such large quantities as to give power, light and heat for a million people. The C. P. R. has decided to make Coleridge a divisional point for their Crow's Nest line.

"Pursuant to making this town a divisional point, the C. P. R. is building a six-stall roundhouse and is laying out very extensive yards, Coleridge being situated at the junction of the main line of the C. P. R. and the Crow's Nest railway. The company also has a $16,000 rig boring for oil, which they hope to strike in very large quantities a few hundred feet below the gas pockets.

"The whole country seems to be awakening to the fact that Coleridge will be the Chicago of the Canadian west; situated at the junction of two great railways and in the very heart of perhaps the most prolific agricultural area of the Canadian west with such unlimited volumes of power owned by the town, which power will be sold for merely nothing.

"Today the town of Coleridge offers the investor, the merchant and the manufacturer a field unequalled by any new town in Canada.

"We want elevators, flour mills, canning factories, brick and tile manufactures, glass factory, fire clay works, lumber merchants and general merchants. Inducements in the form of cheap power and sites will be offered those who mean business and will communicate with me.

"The climate is very mild, there being very little or no winter, while the Cypress hills, that tower to the south of the city, supply an abundance of the purest of water."

CHRONIC CONSTIPATION

BILEANS A CERTAIN CURE

"I had chronic constipation for five years," says Mrs. M. O'Byrne, of Agnes St., Toronto. "It brought on headaches and dizzy bouts, and robbed me of health and vitality. I spent a lot of money in trying various useless remedies. At last I tried the right one—Bileans—and they cured me."

One of the finest scientific papers in the world (Science Siftings) says of Bileans in this connection: "They cure constipation without causing griping, and do not cause after-constipation, as other purgatives do."

Piles, debility, anemia, indigestion, biliousness, heartburn, headache and female ailments all disappear before a short course of Bileans. All druggists and stores at 50 cents or Bilean Co., Toronto, for price.

NELSON'S NEWS OF THE DAY

There are letters for "H.O.," "K.S.," "H.H." and "T.E.M." at this office.

Jacob Green, auctioneer, has gone to Spokane to visit his son, who is seriously ill. He will remain in Spokane for a week or ten days.

The regular meeting of Queen City Rebekah lodge No. 16 I.O.O.F. will be held this evening in Fraternity hall at 8 o'clock sharp. Nomination of officers and other business will be dealt with and a full attendance is requested.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Albert William Blakey, the five weeks old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Blakey. The funeral will take place today from the family residence, Hall Mines road at 2 p.m. Rev. F. H. Graham will officiate.

The executive of the 20,000 club will meet in the city hall this evening at 8:30. This will be the first meeting under the recently adopted constitution and bylaws of the club and it is expected that every member of the committee will be in attendance.

"A trip through Europe in 20 minutes" and a mammoth collection of moving pictures, interspersed throughout with illustrated songs, will be given at Sherman's opera house this and tomorrow evening. The exhibition is said to be a thoroughly artistic one.

A special general meeting of the Nelson launch club has been called for 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the city hall. A captain is to be elected for the season and the question of filling out a racing program will also be considered. A full turn out is particularly requested.

Some of the timbers in the Baker street bridge, which have been in place for a long time, gave way yesterday, making the bridge unsafe for the car traffic. The smaller car was run out in the afternoon and ran from the east side of Ward street to Bogustown. Some planks and heavy timbers were brought up under the city engineer's directions and the work of repairing the structure was commenced.

Edward Daly of Montreal, father of Patrick Daly, the well known mine owner of Ymir, died at his son's residence in Ymir yesterday. The remains will be brought here for interment and the funeral will take place from the church of Mary Immaculate tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock. Mr. Daly was over 90 years of age, and with his wife and his son Edward, arrived in the city a few days ago to visit his son at Ymir.

W. A. Ward of the Nelson hotel, brought home the best catch made at the Pool this season, on Sunday last. He had two rainbows that went three pounds each or a little better, a two and a half pounder, besides a basket of smaller trout. A local fisherman landed a fine salmon at Procter on Sunday and the fish were taken off to the creek to be made ready for the table. The fish proved to be a slippery customer and, sad to relate, slipped out of the cleaner's hands into the creek and was seen no more.

Men's Shoes for Street Wear

With Welted Soles That Ensure Comfort

KEEP OUR FEET COMFORTABLE

By wearing a pair of Walk-Overs, Oak Tan Shoes. They are heavy but flexible, thus conforming to the shape of the foot. They wear much better than ordinary leather, because they are better tanned, and every part of Walk-Over Shoes is as good as its sole.

Quality, a step forward. Cost, a step backward. We are painstaking in shoe fitting.
