FIRST HEATS TO BE RUN TONIGHT

Four Oar Elimination Races—Crews Picked—Long Program for Dominion Day Regatta

At a meeting of the executive of the Nelson Boat club last night a program was drawn up for the Dominion day sports. It was decided that the first heats in the four-oared races should be pulled of tonight and the finals should take place on Saturday.

The crews were drawn as follows: Guille vs. Robinson, Beeston vs. Patterson, Ladd vs. Carson. The winners of the heats will row off the semi-finals on Saturday morning and the final in the afternoon at the regatta.

Regatta Program

The following program was drawn up for the regatta on July 1, at 3.30 o'clock:

Single scull race, Nelson vs. Vancouver.
Men's single canoe race, 200 yards.
Four oared race, Nelson vs. Vancouver.

Only members will be allowed on the club house and float, but Capt. Gore has lent a large barge which will be tied up so as to afford a good view of all the races. The Rowing club will be especially grateful if all launch owners will keep off the course during the races, as the waves seriously hinder the oarsmen and cause trouble and disputes.

The committees appointed were: Canoe and row boat races, W. B. Farris; swimming, diving, life-saving, tacking and crab and tub races, Forrest, Ladd and David Hartin.

RECIPROCITY IS HOTLY ATTACKED

Bitter Arraignment in United States Senate

FEW MEMBERS LISTEN TO DEBATE

President Usurped Power of Congress. Farmers Betrayed by Republicans

WASHINGTON, June 28.—This was a day of bitter arraignment of the Canadian reciprocity bill in the senate. Beginning with Senator Cummins' attack on the measure as legislation unjust to the agricultural interests of the country and concluding with Senator Borah's denunciation of the bill on behalf of the farming interests, the debate was antagonistic to the agreement and a criticism of the president and his methods. The senate gave but partial attention to the speeches, although they were among the most important that will be made against the bill. Several times a roll call of the senate was demanded.

Moves Adjournment.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota finally proposed that as so little attention was being given to the subject the senate take a rest until November or December. Senator Cummins attacked not only the construction of the reciprocity agreement itself, which he said put the whole burden of free trade upon the farmer without giving him any benefits in the sense of duty on manufactured products, but he criticized the powers exercised by the president to negotiate it and to bring it to the point of a definite agreement between the two countries.

In doing so, said Senator Cummins, the president had usurped the power of congress and exceeded the power lodged in him to deal with foreign nations upon revenue matters. If a reciprocity agreement was to be made with Canada, he said, the original proposal should have come from congress instead of the presidential chair, which had brought the agreement to a point where congress was assured it could not be changed or amended.

"I know that the day has come for the farmer," said Senator Cummins, "to be excluded from the benefits of the protective tariff. The decree has been written; it needs only the official signature to exclude him from the company of manufacturers of the United States."

Protection for Farmer.

Senator Borah's criticism was based on the record of the Republican party as the advocate of the protection of the farmer. He quoted at length from Republican platforms, campaign documents, campaign arguments and definitions of policy to show that the abolishment of the protection of farm products was a reversal of all Republican policy. Senator Borah said both political parties were now striving for the vote of the cities and the press.

"Instead of saying both political parties, you should say the Democratic party and the administration," interrupted Senator Bristow. "I am not willing to concede that President Taft in the crusade in which he is now engaged for free trade in agricultural products represents the Republican party of the nation; he does not represent the majority of the Republican members of the house or of the senate, and I believe he does not represent the sentiments of a majority of the Republicans of the country."

"The administration," said Senator Borah, "came into power to protect the American market for the American farmer. The time was when the farmer was not disputed with in this chamber, that such legislation as this was destructive of his prosperity; then every Republican in the senate was his attorney. Now because he calls in a New York attorney to present his case before the finance committee he is accused of being the friend and companion of the trusts and the big interests."

Senator Borah declared the establishment of free trade in agricultural products was a denial of the principles for which the Republican party had heretofore stood, "a coarse and brutal betrayal of the most loyal constituency the party organization has ever made. No page in the political history can equal this betrayal by the Republican party of this great and loyal constituency," he said.

Senator Borah said he sympathized with the press in its desire for relief from the oppressive combination that is said to control the production of prints here. He objected, however, to the attempt "to settle the trust question at the customs houses." He asserted that action against a paper trust, if it existed, should be by civil and criminal proceedings in the courts.

FIGHT ON VETO BEGINS IN LORDS

Opposition Determined to Press Amendments to Bill

PILGRIMS DINNER TO AMBASSADOR

Distinguished Guests Honor John Hays Hammond—Mr. Balfour Speaks

LONDON, June 28.—The real struggle over the parliament bill dealing with the veto power of the house of lords began this afternoon when the lords entered upon the committee stage with the Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the opposition in the upper chamber, and his followers apparently determined to press the official amendments announced by the marquis at the reassembling of parliament June 26.

The amendments provide for the exclusion from the operation of the measure of bills such as that relating to Irish home rule, for a joint sitting in case of a disagreement between the two houses and a referendum to the country in other cases. Whips were on hand from both parties. Debate on the bill is likely to be prolonged until the end of next week.

Pilgrims Dinner.

LONDON, June 28.—At the dinner of the Pilgrims society given in honor of John Hays Hammond, American representative at the coronation, speeches were given by Arthur Balfour, former prime minister, Mr. Hammond, Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, and Chauncey M. Depew of the United States senate.

Covers were laid for 250. There was a scene of enthusiasm when a message was read that as a result of a conference between Secretary of State Knox and Ambassador Bryce a treaty has been practically arranged for the arbitration of all difficulties between the two countries.

After a felicitious reference to the presence of Mr. Hammond as the representative of the great democracy of the west, Mr. Balfour observed that whatever temporary quarrels had from time to time appeared between England and the United States they could not help being in sympathy with each other. Both countries were enamored of liberty; both had the same ideals, and surely it was predestined that in the world's history of the future they should work together, not by formal alliance but by deep sympathy in aims and ideals for the cause of civilization and progress.

Special Ambassador Hammond in responding to Mr. Balfour's toast expressed on behalf of his countrymen appreciation of the presence of Mr. Balfour and other distinguished British statesmen and complimented the Pilgrim societies of London and New York for giving opportunities for the respective peoples to become better acquainted.

WARM WELCOME TO A. S. GOODEVE

Kootenay Member Addresses Large Audience at Kaslo

ABOLITION OF CHINESE HEAD TAX

Government Hands Over Control of Oriental Immigration to China and Japan

(Special to The Daily News.)

KASLO, B. C., June 28.—Three hours after his friends had greeted him at the boat, A. S. Goodeve, M. P., faced a large and enthusiastic audience in the Eagles' hall, with Mr. Desmond in the chair. No one accepted the invitation to present the case for reciprocity, so after thanking this Conservative stronghold for the hearty support it gave in 1908 Mr. Goodeve took up the discussion of the timber reserve bill, oriental immigration and reciprocity, dealing with each subject with rare eloquence and skill. From the first word the audience was with him and showed it in vociferous applause. In speaking of immigration Mr. Goodeve said the present arrangement with Japan ends in July next and a new arrangement is being forced through the house by a party majority under which Japan will continue to control immigration into Canada and the Japanese will have greater rights than British subjects coming from other British possessions, and Hon. Sydney Fisher had made the startling declaration that the same rights would be accorded China, which means the abolition of the Chinese head tax.

Made Strong Fight.

Mr. Goodeve had made a strong fight against the principle of placing the control of the 2,050 square miles of reserved land and worth upward of $50,000,000 in the hands of the minister in charge and pointed out that this dangerous practice had already led to grave charges in other departments and that friends of the ministers had grown rich very fast under that iniquitous system. Hon. Frank Oliver admitted this but said there was no other way, and this measure also was carried by a party majority.

The words used by Mr. Taft, "we are coming to the parting of the ways," proved conclusively that reciprocity could have no other meaning than the annexation of Canada. Are we to set aside those ideals for which during the past 150 years our fathers have struggled? And as we are about to reach the goal are we to turn back from the promised land to the bondage of American fiscal tariff? (Loud cheers.)

Preference Destroyed.

After dealing fully with the lumber and pulp wood question Mr. Goodeve asked: "Are we to become the lumberjack, the market gardener and the vendor of fish for Uncle Sam? Because the eagle is screaming for more and cheaper food are we to sacrifice our nationality and hand over our splendid resources to build up the resources of the United States at the bidding of Hill and Morgan?" Mr. Goodeve quoted Hansard, showing that Mr. Fielding admitted that if the reciprocity pact went into effect Great Britain could not look for further preference from Canada, although in bringing down this measure he had averred that the principle of British preference should remain intact. He proved the much vaunted market of 90,000,000 to be a myth and cited distinguished American authors, statesmen and publicists to show that the Canadian market was worth more to America than theirs to us and that the scheme was hatched and engineered by American trusts for their sole benefit. With an eloquent tribute to Neil McKay's integrity, attainments and work for the district Mr. Goodeve concluded his eloquent peroration and ended amid tremendous applause.

GOSSIP FROM A MOUNTAIN GARDEN.

By Its Mistress.

Like the supervisor of fire wardens I feel like saying "Isn't this beautiful rain." To the gardener a fine rain rarely comes amiss and to me especially these last few days of dull weather have been a perfect boon. The garden has a new path this year and the borders were not very well furnished, so I have been using every minute to transplant some late seedlings of stocks and asters as well as tucking away some seeds along the stone boundaries of the path. If one can get enough damp weather at this time to make sure of the germination of the seeds, such things as sweet alyssum, mignonette, annual gypsophila and portulaca will come on very fast if planted now. Portulaca germinates so quickly that as one writer in Garden Life puts it "Portulaca is almost explosive in its energy, less than two hours being necessary to render the germs visible. This flower is seldom seen in gardens nowadays but I grow it because it is such a useful thing for covering up bare rocks in the summer time and partly because it was a great favorite of my father, a sturdy old Irishman who though he did not take much interest in ordinary flowers, always saw to it that there was a big bed of Portulaca and lots of morning glory vines to clothe all the pillars of a long veranda. Like most old people he was an early riser and took the greatest delight in watching these children of the first sunbeams unfurl their delicate silken petals. What a power of awakening old memories lies in the sight and smell of half forgotten flowers. I sometimes muse over the old garden that surrounded my childhood home in Ontario. There was the big red peony that had held its position as queen of the garden for nearly 50 years, the orange lilies, blue bells of Scotland, old man, ribbon grass and stars of Bethlehem. Then there were the honeysuckle bush, lilacs, white and purple, blue flags, sweet Mary and yellow iris, with sweet briar and cabbage and cinnamon roses. I thought I could recall every corner and every plant but last night in one of the prettiest gardens it has been my lot to visit along Kootenay lake I found a glorified edition of a plant which flourished in that old garden and which I had quite forgotten. One sniff of its peculiar odor and I was instantly transported to my old playhouse, under the tree known as the sour apple, at one side of which flourished a colony of this very plant, but it was not till an hour later that I remembered what we used to call it. "Sweet Home" was the name it went by and I have never heard any other. In this climate it grows much larger and the plumy white blossoms are about six feet high. The clusters of blooms are faint lavender in bud but the effect is quite white when fully opened. I would give a good deal to know the botanical name, though to me no name could supersede its old charming one of "Sweet Home."

Do you know I never realized what a regular procession the flowers kept up until I began to take particular notice of it in writing this weekly gossip. Every week there is something new, some one feature that dominates the garden. This week it is the roses that run riot everywhere—and chief among these is pink climber which covers a summer house and several arches and is beautiful both in bud and blossom.

Two or three neglected bushes of this rose were the only things the garden boasted when we took possession and for a few years I kept cutting these back severely, not knowing it was a climber and never getting a bloom. At last the decree went forth "I'll give that rose just one more chance to make good and if it doesn't bloom this year out it comes." It must have realized it was a case of do or die for that summer it covered itself with its beautiful pink pointed buds and proved its right to survive. On the rose arbor it grows with a tangle of creamy honeysuckle and the contrast with the grey cedar bark of the roof is exquisite. "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good" is an old proverb that is proving itself true among my roses this year. Circumstances prevented my giving my bushes their usual pruning and to my surprise my roses are finer than usual and I conclude that I have heretofore cut back such very vigorous kinds as General Jack, John Hopper, Anna de Diesbach and Ulrich Bremner, much too severely. After all one can only learn to prune intelligently after years of experience of the different varieties and with hardy vigorous sorts such as those I have mentioned I believe it is quite enough to cut out all weak and diseased wood and leave the strong canes almost their full length. Of course this does not apply to the tea roses which in addition to having their weak growth removed should be shortened back to three or four buds. And just here I want to say something about planting the dormant rose bushes sent out by the florists for spring planting. These should always be cut back severely, leaving only two or three buds to start on each strong cane. I passed more than one garden this spring where these roses had been set out just as received from the florist and I was so sure they would not grow that I was tempted to ring the bell and tell the mistress of the house to cut them back at the risk of being considered officious.

It is well to note any good combinations in ones garden and the following list of plants makes one beautiful bit of color just now. A clump of dark red oriental poppies with tall white foxgloves and a white moss rose behind it and a Madame Plantier—a white garden rose—rose bush in the foreground. This might be improved another year by some plants of June daisy and white clove pinks, all these blooming at about the same time and making a lovely scheme of color. The poppies are about over now and it is just as well as their color is rather trying seen with the pink roses. It takes time and patience to eliminate these jarring discords but it can be done in time and the garden converted into a series of pictures. Since writing the above I have come across a different sort of jarring discord that too often, alas, disturbs the harmony of the garden. Going to see how my tiny seedlings were progressing behold about a dozen with their poor heads nipped off by that meanest of garden sneaks, the cutworm. It was some satisfaction to dig around each beheaded plant and find and destroy Mr. Cutworm, but really nothing but sheer profanity can adequately relieve ones feelings at such a time. These pests have been more than usually troublesome this year. Some extra large tomato plants which had well hardened stems they took the trouble to scale until they found a sufficiently tender place to cut through. The best remedy I have found to be a mixture of molasses, bran and Paris green, put about the base of the plants but this is quite an undertaking when one has a lot of seedlings to set out. However, nothing worth having comes without effort and one appreciates keenly the results wrested from a struggle with cutworms, aphis and the other industrious enemies of the garden.

Kootenay Flashes

CRESTON, B. C., June 28.—Harry Leahy, about 50 years old and formerly employed at the Canyon City Lumber company, was run over and fatally injured at 11 o'clock last night by a westbound freight train. The fireman of the freight train saw the man, apparently asleep, on the track but the train could not be brought to a standstill before the victim was under the wheels. The accident occurred about a mile from this city and the injured man was hurried to this place. The C. P. R. ordered a special train from Sirdar to convey the injured man to the hospital at Cranbrook, but before the train could be turned out the doctor said it would be of no avail as the man was in a dying condition then. His hips were badly crushed and his body fearfully bruised. The spot where the accident occurred is in a cut and it was impossible to see the man before the train rounded this and was within a few hundred feet of him. An inquest was held today by Dr. Rose.

MOYIE, B. C., June 28.—Fitch & Hazelwood, who have leased the C. P. R. timber lands just west of Moyie, have installed three miles of flume for bringing their lumber to the rails at Aldridge siding, a spur track has been put in for them and they will soon be in a position to fill their contracts for ties and mine timber, of which they have several large ones. They also intend putting in a sawmill in the fall. They are now employing about 70 men and expect to put on a great many more as work advances. A man giving his name as C. Kincade jumped from the second story of the Moyie hotel here Saturday night and escaped uninjured. It happened a crowd of young men were standing directly under his window at the time and upon hearing a warning cry looked up and saw the man about ready to jump. Before they could stop him he leaped from the window and fell into the crowd. When questioned as to the motive for his act the man seemed to be in an intoxicated condition and was unable to advance any. Howard Patriquin and bride arrived in Moyie a few days ago from their honeymoon spent in the west and will take up their residence here. Mr. Patriquin has been employed at Kimberley with the C. M. & S. company of that place and will continue his former duties. His bride was formerly Miss Rider, one of the teachers of the Moyie school.

Stellar. The young couple are well known socially and will leave today for a honeymoon trip via Nelson to eastern points. Upon returning from their trip they will take up their residence in Creston, where Mr. Huber is in business. Mrs. T. C. Phillips, accompanied by her brother Eugene of Bath, N. B., arrived here today after a two months' visit with her parents in the east. F. E. Simonds of Saskatoon and T. McPherson of New Dayton, Alta., are at the Cranbrook today. Mrs. A. KING OTTO OF BAVARIA GROWING WORSE MENTALLY

Though physically as robust as ever, the mental condition of the unhappy King Otto of Bavaria, whose twenty-fifth anniversary as king occurs this month, is declared to be growing worse. Excluded from the outside world in his castle of Fursteinreid, the king's only visitors are the court doctors, who visit him at stated intervals, in order to report to the regent and government. No one else enters the monarch's presence; even his own mother is prevented from seeing him, as any communication from the outside maddens him. He spends hours daily in dreadful melancholy, his eyes fixed on the floor and very seldom uttering a word. On one recent and rare occasion he displayed intelligence and appeared to be searching for something. When a keeper inquired the cause, the king replied slowly and impressively, "I am looking for the past." Then he relapsed into his customary despondency. Formerly some show of court etiquette was observed, but the king's indifference to all his surroundings rendered this a ghastly farce, and it was abandoned.

LAND TROUT AND CHAR ON ONE HOOK

Novel Experience Befalls Kuskanook Men at Hall Creek—Char Attacks Rainbow on Hook.

The voracious appetite of the char for the tender rainbow trout is illustrated by an experience which befell J. T. Cameron, chief engineer of the Kuskanook, and A. Wigg, watchman of that boat, while angling at Hall creek, near Kootenay Landing, during the early part of this week.

It happened in this way. After landing 15 or 16 fine rainbow trout Messrs. Cameron and Wigg felt a strike which seemed to indicate that something approaching a whale in size was gobbling the bait. They played "the big one" for 15 minutes and to their surprise when it had been pulled near the surface of the water saw that they had a small trout to which was clinging by its jaws a char that seemed to be fully eight pounds. But the trout was not securely hooked and the char was enabled to gobble up the rainbow at its leisure.

A few minutes later there was another strike and this time they landed a trout with a five-pound char securely attached to it, though the char was not on the hook, having just clung to the trout.

They caught 20 rainbow trout during the day.

An investigation may follow.

NEW JAM FACTORY NOW IN OPERATION

First Shipment of Strawberries Manufactured—Factory is Fine Substantial Building

With a shipment of beautiful ripe strawberries, diffusing their sweet odor through the building, J. A. McDonald's new jam factory commenced operations yesterday and by night time set out in rows on a long table were some scores of glass jars filled with a preserve which for color, purity and flavor it would be hard to equal outside the Kootenays.

In charge of the factory is J. G. Finlayson, an expert from James Robertson's famous factory at Paisley, Scotland and from the manufacturing works of Sheriff of Toronto, a firm recognized as one of the foremost manufacturers of marmalade and other fruit products in the Dominion.

In the factory are four large copper kettles with a capacity of from one to five tons of jam per day. These are heated by steam supplied by a large tubular boiler in the basement in which wood is used as fuel.

The new building is one of the most substantial in the city and has a solid foundation and first story of cement while the boiler house is built of brick. To ensure an even temperature the walls of the building are of three thicknesses of wood divided by thick paper. The floor of the lower story or basement which will be used by Mr. McDonald as a warehouse, is also of cement and the floor of the jam making room is of the same material.

From the basement goods are conveyed to the upper story by an elevator. The office will be on the west side of the structure, facing on Kootenay street and in addition to the jam making room, various store rooms and packing rooms is a large room with a glass wall through which are seen a great array of candies and other products of Mr. McDonald's factory.

A special room, which is now being fitted up, is devoted to candy making. The building is 50 by 100 feet and adjoins the C.P.R. track on the north.

This property is located on Baker street and is occupied by the Standard Furniture Co. and Eli Sutcliffe. The objection was not sustained by the court.

The assessment of John Linebaugh's livery stable property on Ward street was reduced from $2,500 to $2,100, while the assessment on Helma C. Robb's property, lots 5, 6 and 7, block 44A, was reduced from $900 to $600.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

DR. ARTHUR AND INSPECTOR GORDON'S REPORT

In another column will be found a letter from Dr. E. C. Arthur, secretary of the board of school trustees, replying to the remarks of The Daily News yesterday relative to the failure of Dr. Jones to secure the privilege, which was extended to other trustees of perusing Inspector Gordon's recent report on the Nelson high school. Dr. Arthur says The Daily News "misapprehends the character and purpose of such reports" and proceeding explains that they are given to school boards in confidence. He concludes with the statement that the particular report in question has been returned to Mr. Gordon and that if he wishes Dr. Jones to see it he will return it to her. This is Dr. Arthur's defence for refusing a duly elected member of the school board free access to a document that was intended for perusal by every member of that body.

In reference to Dr. Arthur's statement that The Daily News "misapprehends the character and purpose of such reports," The Daily News begs to submit that it comprehends fully what should be the character and purpose of such reports and to this would add that in its opinion Dr. Arthur's letter in regard to the report in question shows that he misapprehends the position of a trustee and the duties of secretary of the board Who, for example, gave anyone authority to say what members of the school board should see the report in question, or any other document relating to the school board, and what members should not. If Dr. Arthur can show authority for such arrogance of autocratic power by him or by anyone else the other members of the board might just as well resign and let that one manage the affairs of the school board as he sees fit. There is no object in five persons wasting their time on work that one man is authorized and willing to do.

The Daily News has no intention of disputing Dr. Arthur's statement that the reports of inspectors given to school boards in their respective district are intended "to be treated as confidential." What it does say, however, and say without fear of successful contradiction, is that the gist, at least, of these reports is published in the annual report of the minister of education and in this way eventually become public property. Anyone who doubts this may look up these reports and there read what the inspectors have said of the various schools of the province in past years.

Just what Dr. Arthur's statement that "almost every such report contains matter which by any malicious inclined person could be used to the injury of other persons not in a position to defend themselves," has to do with the case at issue it is impossible to see. He should have furnished some explanation of what he meant by this.

As to whether or not such reports have been considered by the board of trustees in previous years there is no one in a position to say but the trustees themselves, for except perhaps on very rare occasions there was no one else present at their meetings. The Daily News, however, would now respectfully ask how the contents of these reports were communicated to the various members of the board in previous years. Was each member of the board allowed to have them for a stated time for perusal, or did the reading of the reports by some one trustee, as they came to hand suffice for all?

Coming to Dr. Arthur's candid confession that Inspector Gordon's report has been returned to him without its having been seen by Dr. Jones, The Daily News is forced to ask on what grounds can Dr. Arthur attempt to justify or how can he excuse such a course. That report was the property of the board and not of Dr. Arthur or of any other member of the board personally. Dr. Jones is a regularly elected member of the board and as such had just as much right to see and to read that report as had Dr. Arthur or anyone else. It was not for Dr. Arthur or any other person to say that she should see it or that she should not see it.

In connection with the return of this report to Inspector Gordon, there is one question which may be asked with particular fitness and that is when was this report sent back. Was it before Dr. Jones first asked to see it? Was it immediately after her first request for its production? Or, was it only after last Monday evening's meeting of the school board, yesterday for example, that this action was taken.

In conclusion The Daily News desires to reiterate that Dr. Jones or any other member of the board of school trustees had a perfect right to see and to read Inspector Gordon's report and it desires further to say that, notwithstanding any agreement or arrangement which there may be to the contrary, all reports of this kind should be available to the general public as well as to the trustees. The people of Nelson are paying by all odds the greater portion of the cost of the schools of the city, both public and high, and are entitled to all possible information in regard to them. The inspectors should stand between the government and the board of trustees.

But whatever may be the position which the inspectors should occupy, or which they do occupy, this does not affect the manner in which this particular report of Inspector Gordon was disposed of. In the opinion of The Daily News whoever is responsible for the course which has been followed in this matter has not only overstepped the bounds of common courtesy and of fair play, but has also shown a disregard of public opinion such as might have been expected only in a country where autocratic rule prevailed and where representative institutions were unknown.

COMMUNICATIONS

INSPECTOR GORDON'S REPORT

To the Editor of The Daily News.

Sir: Your editorial headed "Inspector Gordon's Report" shows that you entirely misapprehend the character and purpose of such reports.

Some years ago the Provincial Trustees Association asked the inspectors to give to the school boards a copy of the report made to the department of education after every inspection of the schools under the jurisdiction of every board, the same to be treated as confidential. Since that time the inspectors have complied with that request in the case of boards that on their part kept faith and respected the confidence. Almost every such report contains matters which by any maliciously inclined person could be used to the injury of other persons not in a position to defend themselves.

In the case of the Nelson school board no such report has ever been discussed at a board meeting—the members have held that such discussion would be a violation of the inspector's confidence. In view of existing conditions Inspector Gordon's report has been returned to him and if he wishes Trustee Jones to see it he will return it to her. Then all responsibility will be between him and Trustee Jones.

E. C. ARTHUR.

To the Editor of The Daily News.

Sir—In Tuesday's report of the Nelson school board Mr. Seaman's name was mentioned. Any reference I made to Mr. Seaman was only a jest on my part as he smilingly sat before me. No inspectors' report, suppressed or allowed to be read, will make or mar Mr. Seaman's reputation.

FIRST STRAWBERRIES

To the Editor of The Daily News.

Sir: In your issue of the 27th inst. from Slocan City you state that the first local strawberries on the market here came from the Gurney ranch on Saturday, the 24th. I have sold strawberries raised here by me as early as June 13. Hoping you may find space to correct this.

HOPES LIFE MAY BE BROUGHT BACK

Professor Thompson Is Now Experimenting With That End In View.

LYNN, Mass., June 28.—"It may be possible to revive life after electrocution by means of high frequency current, although I cannot as yet state definitely as to that fact. I am experimenting and hope to bring about this result," was the statement of Prof. Elihu Thompson, the millionaire electrical inventor, when questioned as to the possibility of reviving the heart action after death.

In his daily experiments with electricity at the local plant of the General Electric company the professor has very often passed 150,00 volts into his body, and has placed others in a position to receive this amount, without any serious effects. The fact that this feat can be accomplished successfully gives grounds for the professor's opinion that the heart action can be revived.

Continuing, Dr. Thompson said: "High frequency is known to be prefectly harmless even in large amounts and, like some drugs, tends to relax the arterial system when contracted or in a state of spasm which accompany a severe shock.

"There is a feeling that possibly some form of current may serve to neutralize the effect of the shock. I would recommend that experiments along this line be tried upon animals under medical control and supervision."

One Experiment Failed.

Francis Leary, an employee of the General Electric company received a 2,300 volt shock in the local plant of that company recently. At that time Prof Thompson was in the factory and made some experimental efforts to restore the young man to life by means of high frequency current.

Speaking of the experiments made at the time of this accident Prof. Thomson said:

"After all efforts had failed in this case, although persisted in for a long time, someone asked me if we had a high apparatus ready for use. I said no, there was not at the time. The physician present said he had such an appartus used for treatment of patients. We secured this and tried it without success.

"It was feeble in its efforts, representing probably not more than a few per cent of the energy of high frequency currents which I have repeatedly allowed to pass through my body and that of others without even noticing the current.

Might Have Succeeded.

"It is possible that had it been a powerful enough apparatus something might have happened, although I cannot state with any degree of certainty what this happening would have meant. The thing is now in an experimental state.

"Had the current been applied within a few minutes after the accident the result might have been very much different, even with the weak appartus which we used.

The electrodes of the machine were placed on the surface of Leary's skin close to the sensory nerves, which lead most directly to the heart. Then the current was applied.

Prof. Thompson does not state that he is certain that life can be restored to a victim of electrocution, but his many experiments with electricity lead him to believe that it is but a matter of time before this secret will be revealed.

COUNTESS IS ONCE AGAIN IN THE PUBLIC EYE

"La Belle Chiquita" Has Had Many Romantic Adventures During Her Life.

The Viscountess Helene du Nuce, better known as La Belle Chipquita is again in the public eye. Last year she took action against an ironmaster, claiming heavy damages because he deserted her. On that occasion she asserted that it would be impossible for her to live on less than $5,000 a year. During the hearing of the case, a contract between the dancer and the ironmaster was read, which caused great hilarity in court.

Since then "La Belle Chiquita" has had other romantic adventures. Several black coated men entered her dwelling a few days ago and carried off her husband. The dancer herself tells how she came to marry. Two years ago a young man fell madly in love with her. She gave him no encouragement, but he threatened to do something desperate if she sent him away. Her heart was softened, and she and the young man became good friends. Last summer the young man fell into bad health, and was sent to Switzerland, whence he wrote that he was kept a prisoner in a miserable inn. "La Belle Chiquita" went to his aid. She found him installed in luxurious quarters.

Went Through Marriage Form

The couple went to Evian, where, at his request, she went through a form of marriage with him. The marriage was not valid. A few months later the young man went to America to seek his fortune. The dancer joined him, her intention being to make a living by teaching languages. In March of this year the marriage took place in Boston in accordance with the American law. The dancer, however, resided in New York. She received a letter from her husband informing her that two of his cousins, who lived at Boston were ill-using him and keeping him shut up. The dancer found that there was no truth in this story.

The couple now decided to return to France. During the voyage the husband became ill of influenza, and had been attended by doctors since his arrival in Paris. His father, becoming anxious about his health, sent an uncle to visit him. The day following this visit the husband wrote to his parents to the effect that he was kept a prisoner, and asking them to come to his help. The invitation was accepted, and two days ago detectives removed the young man in an ambulance.

It is not stated that the parents intend to take an action to annul the marriage. It may be therefore, that "La Belle Chiquita" will figure in another action, which, like the former, will not lack piquant details.

GREAT CHANGES IN DWELLING HOUSES

Plans of Twenty-five Years Ago Are Impossible Today, Says An Architect.

That the present generation has witnessed a greater change in the general architecture of houses and dwellings in Canada than the preceeding two generations, was the recent statement of an architect who has spent 30 years at his profession.

According to this authority, the influence of the rapid development of the country has been much more profound than the average person would think. If an architect who had not followed his profession for the past 25 years were to start again now he would find that his plans would need to be radically changed. He would encounter conditions which, though well known to countries older at that time than Canada, were never met with here. The increase of wealth has been mainly responsible for this.

The change has not been so much in the size of the houses, according to this architect, as in the interior fittings and to an even greater extent in the provision of spaces for purposes which went unprovided for in the old order of things. Very few of the former houses boasted of living rooms, for instance. Kitchens, dining rooms and parlors were the orthodox rooms, and the usual request of men about to build was that the lower floors be kept to those standards with as little waste of area as possible. Nowadays it is a poor house in the middle class which has not a room which is devoted to the objects of the family as in distinction to eating or entertaining. This condition is an outcome of the better circumstances of the average man.

To quote the architect: "The men in these times were chiefly concerned with getting a favorable start in Canada. Now they have the start and their attention is turned partly to the enjoyment of life as well as to its improvement."

Then, too, conservatories were almost an unknown quantity in the former days, save in the houses of the very wealthy. Few architects were obliged to meet demands for them. Now they are common. In the same way sun rooms were rarely included in house plans, for the builders did not undertake the responsibility of adding to plans which would represent the minimum of their requirements.

The architecture in general has also changed, if we may believe the architect. The former houses were built on the one basis of accommodation. Outside beauty received scant attention, and, truth to tell, was more often than not jarringly conspicuous by its absence. The percentage of house cost devoted now to embellishment, while not capable of reduction to exact figures, is undoubtedly much higher. Increased material welfare is again the main cause, although modifications and improvements in methods and materials have contributed to the advance. The appearance of the dwellings of Canada, taken as a sum total, is much above what it was formerly.

Of course the change has been gradual, and this is why it has not been more generally noticed. It has happened though, and as the development of the Dominion is still far from its end, it is reasonable to expect that it will continue. It is encouraging to find that the movement has been upward. In most cases it has meant increased earnings for the architects, but it must be remembered that the money spent represented increased wealth on the part of the citizens.

Turn the gloves wrong side out, press the rent together and coat the edges with automobile gum. Cover with a piece of adhesive plaster. When dry the gloves may be turned and will be found as good as new.

To take the leather stains out of my bright colored hose, I add a tablespoon of borax to the water in which they are washed. This quantity is sufficient for only one or two pairs of hose.

Black-and-white alliances are still favored. The white is cool and the black gives the contrast that makes it possible for women of all ages to wear it.

The combination of broiderie Anglaise with mousseline de soie in colors is one that must not be overlooked when planning lingerie frocks of the dressy type.

Thick colors of satin, linen, silk or cotton are used to form braided designs on bottom of skirts, on collars and cuffs and even on the brims of large fabric hats.

There is a revival of the high stock of taffeta or black taffeta ribbon, and tiny turn-over white linen collars are worn over the top of the stock and relieve their sombreness.

STURDY STOCK OF NORTHERN EUROPE

Immigration From German Ports Falling off at New York—New Economic Conditions.

A pronounced change in the character of future immigration at the port of New York is indicated by preparations which are now being made by the larger steamship companies to develop the Canadian traffic. It seems not unlikely, from the present outlook, that before long Canada will be getting what is called the cream of the European exodus, while New York will have to content itself with the oft-classed less desirable human tide from South Europe.

The Cunard line announces at an early day two notable new 18,000-ton liners, the Franconia and Laconia, for the Liverpool-Boston route. The Thompson line, between London and Canada, it says it will raise the St. Lawrence route to be in keeping with its service to New York and Boston. This is taken in shipping circles to mean an intention to build large new liners for the direct Canadian trade. The Thompson line vessels acquired by the Cunard include the Gerona, now completing. She will be fitted to carry 1,500 emigrants and 200 saloon passengers.

The White Star line, as is known, has gone into the Canadian trade with two very large ships, the Laurentic and the Mergantic, each of almost 15,000 tons. Their port is Liverpool. The Teutonic will go into the Canadian service.

Statistics Prove Falling Off.

In this connection it is significant to note that the emigration to New York from German ports has already fallen off very heavily, as witness the following figures for the first quarter of the last three years:

	1911	1910	1909
From Hamburg	18,726	31,878	29,761
From Bremen	24,548	51,218	52,272
Totals	43,274	83,096	82,033

Thus there are increasing indications from various sources that much of the immigration of the sturdy populations of northern Europe is hereafter to go to the western continent by way of ports that lie north of New York, Boston, Halifax and the St. Lawrence route. It is now well established by the official figures that the English and Canadian governments are rapidly developing the tide of immigration to the Canadian dominion. The Canadian railroads are being pushed to the limit to the north and northwest and far west regions in order to develop the millions of acres of prairie and gentle rolling lands for grain culture.

Definite plans have been made for a railroad from the Manitoba district to Hudson bay, with a summer line of grain and coal carriers across the bay to Europe.

With the sturdy class of European farmers going to Canada leaving the south Europeans to crowd into the United States, it is only a matter of time when the American west will feel the change in the conditions. The north Europeans usually settle for good wheresoever they emigrate. The south Europeans, on the other hand, are largly migratory. They do not take to farming, but they either go by masses, into mining and railroad and public works construction or they herd in the great Atlantic seaboard cities and engage in trade.

American Money Going Abroad.

The World recently showed that at least $336,000,000 a year is annually sent or taken from the United States to Europe by tourists and aliens. Most of the aliens in question are from south Europe. They cause every year a vast drain on the active cash capital of the United States.

The effect of a large diversion and development of Canadian immigration traffic was felt too, by the railroads, especialy in the matter of freight. Much of the agricultural product of Canada now goes to Europe by way of New York and Boston. When the movement gets out through the St. Lawrence, the port of New York, it is likely, will feel it first, and then Boston may get its taste of the altered economic conditions.

The Hamburg-American company is building an oil-engine steamship of some 8,000 tons. It turns out that the two big oil-engin ships under construction in England, and about which so much mystery has been made, are for firms for the continent. The admiralty still hesitates as to an oil-propelled battleship.

The Chinese are raising $16,000,000 capital for a direct steamship line between Chinese ports and London. It will compete with the Japanese line, which has a fleet of 8,000-ton steamers in the trade.

CONSERVATION OF PROVINCES FORESTS

The importance of the great forest resources of British Columbia and the paramount necessity of its protection from fire and its adequate conservation was eloquently outlined recently in an address delivered by Hon. W. R. Ross at North Vancouver, in which address the steps that are being taken to minimize the annual fire loss was sketched in outline and comprehensive conversa- c rda ap,zhc tion measures earnestly urged. The words of the minister who is doing so much and in so thoroughly practical a manner to develop the British Columbia forest protection system on the best and most effective basis makes interesting and instructive reading for all thoughtful and public-spirited citizens. Touching on the large subject of forest protection and conservation, the minister of lands said:

"There is one thing that our patriotic newspeper men never allow us to forget, and that is the tremendous commercial importance of our natural resources of this province. On the commercial side they keep us well informed, and make us realize fully the attraction that our resources are beginning to exert on outside capital, the possibilities of investment in forests, fisheries, mining and land, that exist in such profusion, and the rapid development that is taking place in lumbering and other industries. Our newspapers do all this and do it well—but I have one criticism to offer, it is that not nearly enough interest has been awakened in our natural resources regarded as public property—as an asset of the provincial treasury. I am thinking of the forests in particular; four-fifths of the timber in which belongs to the people of British Columbia. Every British Columbian in his capacity as a citizen is an owner of timber—standing timber, merchantable timber, timber that already pays one-third of his taxes, and every year provides the public treasury with two and a half million dollars for opening up the country, timber that provides one of the most remarkable public endowments that any nation has ever had. My criticism is that the average citizen knows next to nothing about all this; takes little interest in a great property in which he is a shareholder, and that the press do not do enough to arouse his interest. I would like to see more general knowledge and more lively discussion about matters of forest policy, the broad principals of which are so simple and easy to understand—even though unhappy ministers may go grey headed in trying to work them out in practice.

Achievements of Policy.

"Now there are three achievements in forest policy upon which the present government may pride itself they are these: Firstly, by favorable legislation the government helped powerfully to build up a flourishing lumber industry; secondly the government has refused to alienate the people's forests; thirdly, it has contrived to make the uncut forest yield revenue. The system of timber license under which all this was done was a really great and statesmanlike one. Under it our loggers and sawmill men are given the opportunity of securing a supply of standing timber without having to pay cash for it—payment being by small instalments year by year; an advantageous arrangement that gave a great lift to lumbering in this province. Shrewd investors who foresaw the future were attracted by the chance of securing an interest in standing timber before the coming shortage on this continent had made its price prohibitive. These men brought millions of outside capital into British Columbia—and once interested here, one business matter leading to another—they have helped in many a different ways to build up the province. Look at Vancouver, and think how great a change has taken place there within the last few years and how much that change has been caused directly or indirectly, by the busy prosperity of the lumbering industry and the heavy investments in timber that have been made possible by the forest policy of the provincial government.

"Now there is one side of the question—the commercial side—that is discussed very fully in the press, and that our citizens know all about. I want to touch on the other side of the question—the national side.

Belong to the People.

"Four-fifths of the provincial forests, as I have already said, belong to us—the people. A small proportion of this public timber is under 21-year leases, a considerable amount is in reserve, and the bulk of it (say over 110 billion feet of some of the choicest timber in the world) remains unalienated, but under special license. In this licensed timber, the public and the licensees have gone into partnership—the public owns it, the licensees cut it, and together they share the profits. When profits are low so are both their shares—when profits rise, the share of each party increases; the people of British Columbia in other words, have retained their hand upon the rise in value of standing timber which is already becoming prominent as one of the inevitable results of modern civilization. Of course it is directly against the interests of the people to make demands that would hurt the prosperity of the lumbering industry, and that fact shows how very sound this timber license legislation is, and how it provides an automatic check against abuse. Only, as I have said, this and the many formidable problems put to the government by the forestry commission, take a great deal of working out and watching by grey haired persons at Victoria.

"Well, here is your forest property, citizens, bringing you in two and a half millions of dollars a year already, and going to do much better than that in years to come. And these forests of yours are needed besides—for the prosperity of your agricultural sections, to steady your stream flow and give you irrigation, to improve your climate and to bring and support the population that makes your cities grow, and makes your merchants prosperous. And what are you doing to protect your forests? What has anybody done in the past? The answer is just this—nothing was done in the past, and in spite of our efforts as a government, you, as citizens, are doing very little now. Forest property has been treated and is still treated, with shameful and hardly believable neglect.

Careless Campers.

"We are now in June, gentlemen, and the annual burning up of British Columbia's forests and prosperity is about to begin. Careless campers will light fires in the bush, and leave them to spread and devastate stretches of our choicest timber. Conflagrations will be sown broadcast by defective locomotives, and logging engines, in spite of every effort of the government to detect, and punish the persons responsible. Tenderfeet ranchers will "take chances" and be virtuously astonished when the putting out of their fires cost thousands of dollars of public money. Quite a few lumbermen will look upon the spreading of fresh traps for fire as a necessary part of their daily business, and will have another summer's gambling with the god of fire—staking their plant and timber against many a lighted match and butt end of a cigarette. Many an honest citizen will conceal what he knows about the cause of a bad forest fire, for fear of making an enemy of the man who started it, or in order "to let the poor fellow down easy." People will stand looking on at forest fires, wondering when the warden will arrive to fight them, or try to hold him up for fancy wages when he askes their help. By the end of the season, gentlemen, careless citizens of this province will have shot several million dollars' worth of our national resources out of existence, into smoke.

Rank Carelessness.

"All this will happen, gentlemen, and the reason for it will be —carelessness —just rank carelessness. This is our great weakness as a people—we are careless about our great inheritance of timber and we tolerate each other's carelessness. Public opinion is all-important in the prevention of forest fire. Orators may thump the drum of eloquence; governments may strive to do their utmost—as the present government is doing—to save the forests, but in the long run success depends on a very commonplace matter—the amount of care the average citizen can be induced to excercise when using fire near the woods; care with matches and tobacco and cigarettes, care with camp and clearing fires, care with donkey engins and locomotives. Every man, woman and child in the province can do a little to help protect the forests.

"And while we are talking of carefulness, I want to ask my friends of the newspapers to be a little more careful in the news they print about forest fires. In the lands department we usually make allowances for the exaggeration that inevitably creeps into every account of a forest fire sent in by an excited local correspondent. But the continual publication of alarmist news items will surely give investors at a distance the idea that the whole country is burning up, and that standing timber is an especially unsafe investment in British Columbia, instead of being, as it is in fact, a great deal safer than elsewhere on this continent. My department itself gets caught sometimes by these news items they print about forest fires, in sending men to examine some perfectly harmless permitted fire.

Methods of Protection.

"And now I want to say something, gentlemen, about what the government is doing to protect the forests. The government has had to face a very serious situtation. The great increase, of which we are all proud, in the number of our settlers, of railway traffic, in lumbering operations, and in all the various kinds of work that take men near the woods, has caused a corresponding increase in the risk of forest fires. In British Columbia, moreover, the lumbermen and timber owners have not organized themselves into voluntary fire protective associations as the lumbermen of Washington and Idaho have so successfully. The provincial government has had to step in and shoulder the entire responsibility for fire protection for the time being, and it has had to do this more or less in a hurry, to prevent as far as possible further damage to one of the greatest assets of the province. The government has had to employ a large force of men, and cover the timber districts with a network of patrols and expend a very large sum of money both this year and last, and it has had to do this under great difficulties. I am glad to say that the difficulties caused by the overlapping of provincial and dominion jurisdiction have to some extent been overcome. In the matter of the inspection of railway locomotives, and the clearing of the right-of-way, I have been able to come to an arrangement with the dominion commission. Moreover the railways have began to realize the enormous destruction they have caused, and are now willing to co-operate with us in the prevention of fire. But we have other troubles in abundance. I will mention only one; it is this: there still lingers here and there in the province, a remnant of the old vicious belief that there is nothing morally wrong in attempting to make the government the victim of all kinds of exortion and petty fraud. Well, everyone will admit that the present government has done a great deal to raise the standard of public service. Both as a citizen like yourselves and as a minister, I see no reason, gentlemen, why a public department should not be expected to conduct its affairs with the same clearcut efficiency as a private business corporation, and as this matter of fire protection comes within my department, I am determined, gentlemen, to see that it is run on sound business lines.

"Organize, organize, organize, here is the motto for public service. Study and plan and do aggressive work! and see that the expenditure of each dollar of public money produces the greatest amount of public benefit."

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

FOUR MILLION FOR ELEVEN MONTHS

Metals Produced at Trail Smelter Exceed This Sum—Higher Gold Percentage in May

During May the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. received 26,186 tons of ore and smelted 29,000 tons. The total output for the month was $387,400 and of this sum 63 per cent of the values were in gold.

Last month the percentage of gold values was 45 per cent, giving an increase in the value of gold ores smelted of 18 per cent.

Since June 30, 1910 the company has produced $4,095,000 value of metals.

QUEEN WINZE IS ALL IN ORE

Strike on Kootenay Belle—W. B. Poole Tells of Activity at Sheep Creek Gold Camp

"The fact that the winze which has now been sunk for 125 feet on the main ore shoot on the lowest level of the Queen mine is all in ore is a particularly important matter to those interested in Sheep creek," said W. B. Poole last night.

"This winze, I am told, is in splendid ore which increases in value as every additional foot is gained. We certainly need not have any fears now as to whether the ore runs to depth at the Salmon river gold camp."

Mr. Poole mentioned that the new strike on the Kootenay Belle mine was proving a big thing for the camp. This strike was the result of drifting on the main lead and a crosscut. He stated that the vein opened up was 15 feet wide and that the hanging wall was not yet reached.

The machinery for the Mother Lode mill, tramway and buildings is being rapidly conveyed to the mine and the machinery for W. Fenney's sawmill on Little Sheep creek is also en route.

"Sheep creek is certainly humming these days," said Mr. Poole. "Everybody is busy and shots are to be heard from all points of the compass. The noise of the blasting would give a casual visitor the impression that he was in the vicinity of a pitched battle between two regiments armed with modern rifles."

KING HAS LEGAL RIGHT TO ALL GOLD IN EMPIRE

The coronation in London, with its mediaeval pomp and the relics of the ceremonies of by-gone ages, brings to mind an old mining statute which is still among the laws of the United Kingdom, but which has not been enforced for hundreds of years past, says the American Mining Journal. According to this statute, in the realms over which the king of England is sovereign, all gold mines belong to the crown, as does also the gold produced from other mines.

Accordingly, there is in circulation today $264,286,000 of gold mined in the British dominions in 1910, to which King George is legally empowered to lay claim. Correspondingly, too, he is entitled to several billions of dollars of gold mined in British South Africa and West Africa, Australia, India, British East Indies and Guiana, Canada etc., in the past hundred years or more, during which time the crown has neglected to assert its statutory rights.

It seems safe to assume that never in the future will these statutory rights be assured. The upheaval of the British empire would be almost certain. The opposition of the colonies would be enormous as well as concerted, for manifest reasons; nor would the opposition in England itself be less pronounced, considering that hundreds of millions of dollars of coal and iron, machinery, food products and clothing are shipped annually to British mining colonies, and that this trade would be deleteriously affected.

The statute is a relic of medieval ages It was in those days considered that the possession of the sources of gold in any other hands than those of the sovereign would be a continual and threatening source of danger to the king, and to the safety of the nation. Today, the greatest source of danger to any nation would lie in concentrating in the hands of its executive a yearly output of gold as great as is that of the British dominions, amounting, indeed, in 1910, to 58 per cent of the gold output of the entire world.

THE MINE THAT NEVER WAS

Will the fabled Blue Bucket mine ever become more than legend of eastern Oregon? Will the fabulous wealth it is said to hold ever be unearthed?

This question is half a century old, and more, yet prospectors are still trying to answer it. The Blue Bucket mine was one never found, never located, and yet more people are said to have hunted for it than went in quest of the Holy Grail.

Railroads are building into central Oregon, taking thousands of settlers into the new territory, adding to the number of visionary prospectors who hope to find it. They will chase this will-o'-the-wisp as long as the story is told of the wealth of the Blue Bucket, the mine that never was.

Briefly, this is what the newcomer heard around the campfires and at the farm house tables of Grant county. In the late '40's and early '50's, when people were going through central Oregon to California and southern Oregon, it is said that one outfit passed that had a blue bucket tied to the rear axle of the wagon. It was used by the party to dip up water, and the children took it to gather pebbles in their play along the way.

When the outfit reached its destination in California and untied the bucket, it was partly filled with nuggets that were nearly pure gold. Where had they been picked up? It was finally decided that the children had last used the bucket in the Grant county section, and that the nuggets had been gathered on Canyon and Dixie creek or some nearby stream, or perhaps in crossing the John Day river. That party and other parties and individual prospectors without end have ever since been trying to locate the Blue Bucket mine.

Fortunes have been lost, murders committed, reputations shattered, families separated, hopes blighted, death has taken a heavy toll of the thousands who have gone forth in search of this phantom——this will-o-the-wisp, this something that never was, and may never be.

And the search still goes on, Many persons maintain they are absolutely sure they know where to find the mother lode from which came these fabled nuggets. More than one has lost a fortune in outfitting and hunting. Another, a woman, has gone crazy over the same subject, and in the prisons, poor houses and asylums are those who joined at one time or another the horde of seekers for the treasure.

Will it ever be found? Did it ever exist? Who knows?

The placers of the Canyon creek section have turned out over $35,000,000 since the early gold discoveries in that section. The John Day valley was first settled by people brought there by the lure of gold, and many acres of land are covered by boulders, remnants of the old placer days when every foot of earth was washed away down to bedrock to glean the yellow particles from the soil and gravel hiding it.

The mother lode, where supposedly all this placer gold came from originally, has never been found in the placer ground of Canyon creek and other creeks the outcropping of the phontom Blue Bucket. Did these children at play really stumble upon an El Dorado, since lost. that was the richest gold deposit of the northwest country?

Thousands of people are sure this is true and that they will find it tomorrow, ever tomorrow.

NO DEFINITE OFFER

TORONTO, June 28.—Secretary Fred Thompson of the Toronto lacrosse club, interviewed regarding a report that Gordon Spring of New Westminster had turned down an offer of $5,000 from the Torontos, stated that he had wired Spring last Sunday to learn his terms, but that he had not offered Spring $5,000 or any other definite sum.

BEARISH WEATHER REPORTS DEPRESS WHEAT PRICES

WINNIPEG, June 28.—The market today was purely and simply a weather one. Some news of heavy rains in both Dakotas and other adjoining states lowered the American markets considerably and the Winnipeg market fell in sympathy. Winnipeg July opened one-quarter lower than on Tuesday, rose to 97⅞, but could not remain at the figure and fell to 96¼ split, at which price it closed, having had a range of 1c. October closed 1⅛c lower and December 1c lower than yesterday. Minneapolis July closed at 94⅜c, or 2⅝c lower than Tuesday. September was even harder hit and fell 2¼c, while December closed 2⅛c lower. Chicago was not so heavily affected by the bearish weather news and closed from 1½c to 1⅝ lower. The reports had their effect on the corn market, Chicago closing from ½c to 1c lower.

Oats also fell on the morning's trading. There was a good demand for Nos. 4, 5 and 6, and a fair export trade was done in wheat at Winnipeg. The weather map of the west showed local showers had taken place at three points and that temperatures were moderate.

South African Warrants were the predominating feature of this morning's market, both future and present deliveries advancing to 730-740. Six sale at 730 were made, one being for future delivery. A general advance in other stocks was noticeable although few sales were made.

STOCK PRICES IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, June 28.—Transactions in stocks were marked today by the same degree of irregularity which has prevailed most of the time for the last fortnight. Public participation in the market has fallen to a low point, leaving the bulk of trading to the professional operators. There was noticeable a continued effort to depress prices, particularly United States Steel. London prices for Americans were for the most part higher before the opening here, but the gains were not transferred to this market, where a vigorous selling movement was instituted at the opening. After a series of fluctuations the market became decidedly weaker and closed with losses of a point or more for the active stocks. Harriman stocks were unusually heavy following the unfavorable reports of these roads for May. United States Steel, which made a smart advance in London and opened here strong, speedily declined on heavy offerings emanating from a prominent commission house. Erie declined a point after it was announced that the company had sold 6,000,000 equipment certificates. Foreign securities showed pronounced firmness today, advancing in a more decided manner than for several weeks. The movement was ascribed to the purchase of remittances in connection with the semi-annual payments abroad.

July disbursements of interest and dividends on railroads, industrial and corporation securities, banks and trust companies, the national government and New York city are estimated at $233,733,000, an increase of $20,867,000 over last July. In spite of these unusually heavy demands upon the market, however, it is regarded as unlikely that there will be an appreciable hardening in rates on account of the extraordinary ease of money which has prevailed for months. Bonds were regular. Total sales, par value, $4,040,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

GOOD PROGRESS TOWARD SEATTLE'S GOLDEN POTLATCH

SEATTLE, June 28.—A report made by the newspapers of Seattle of a careful investigation of the work done towards providing a great entertainment in Seattle for the first Golden Potlatch, July 17 to 22, shows considerable work done, contracts signed and general arrangements made that proved a big surprise to the newspaper men and business concerns of Seattle generally.

Contracts signed and carrying bond provisions absolutely insuring their performance include those of Glenn H. Curtiss for airship contests and exhibition flights. They provide for flights daily with three Curtiss machines, including the hydroplane, and the contracts provide for flights by aviators of known ability and national reputation, such as Curtiss himself and Eugene Ely.

The contracts signed also include those with Ellery's and Wagner's bands and other musical organizations, including two juvenile bands. They include contracts with the North Pacific Indians who will from Vancouver to participate in the canoe races, other aquatic sports and Potlatch Indian fetes.

The report made shows contracts awarded for an abundant supply of fireworks for special displays in the harbor and for spectacular illuminations of land and water pageants are announced in the program issued.

In the land pageantry division the report shows 16 of 20 handsome floats for the historical parade completed, and the four others under construction. It shows eight out of the thirty floats agreed upon for the industrial parade under construction, and shows also that considerably more than 30 floats will finally appear in this parade, as indicated by letters of inquiry and tentative agreements made.

Five thousand children are being trained for parades and field exercises. Boy Scouts and pony cavalry are in training. Six hundred children are being trained for the unique play festival.

NONAGENARIAN ACTIVE ENTERTAINER

Oldest and Youngest of Four Living Generations Meet for First Time In North Yakima

SPOKANE, Wash., June 28.—When J. Lewis of Ottawa, Ont., went to North Yakima, Wash., east of here, a few days ago to visit his great-grandfather, T. D. Lewis, he met for the first time his forebear, who, despite his 93 years, piloted the visitor around in an active way for an hour and a half without the least fatigue.

The elder Lewis left Ottawa about 30 years ago, but he has kept posted on conditions in the province of Ontario and throughout the Dominion of Canada, and talks entertainingly of the country a half century ago, of the Hudson Bay company with which he was at one time interested, of leading public men, some of whom helped make history, who have gone to their reward. Forty years ago Mr. Lewis and Lord Dufferin were neighbors, when the latter was governor-general of Canada and before he had made his reputation as an ambassador and diplomat.

The Messrs. Lewis are the oldest and the youngest of four living generations, but when the younger man was a child there were representatives of five generations living. Capt. L. L. Boles of the National Guard of Washington, and commanding company E of North Yakima, is a representative of the third generation.

The younger Lewis was delighted and surprised to find his great-grandfather such an active man as he is, and commented on the fact that he had come near to being walked off his feet on his first day in the city. While he has been west before he has never been south of British Columbia, and this is his first experience with Washington.

E. JACOBS RETURNS

(Special to The Daily News.)

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 28.—E. Jacobs of Victoria is here after seven weeks spent in West Kootenay, Boundary and Similkameen districts. Of mining in the several districts he visited he speaks hopefully. Much important development work is being done, and in several parts production is on a comparatively large scale with, in some instances, profitable results. Two days were occupied visiting Tulameen, where Mr. Jacobs had the advantage of a conversation with Charles Camsell of the Canada geological survey. Mr. Camsell has spent five or six seasons in field work in the Similkameen country and is especially well informed concerning its geology and its mineral resources. The survey party was arranging to wash Tulameen gravels to try to find diamonds in the wash, it being thought probable that as diamonds are known to occur in the solid rock of the vicinity there may be some found in the river gravel. He left for Victoria tonight to prepare for the publication of details of the mass of information gathered.

FEAT NOT REPEATED

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., June 28—Lincoln Beachey, the aviator today did not attempt to repeat his sensational flight of flying over the cataract and under the upper steel bridge, but made a series of circles over the falls and sailed down the river almost to Lewiston, at a height of 2,000 feet in the face of a 10 mile breeze.

CHARGE AGAINST MAYOR

BEMIDJI, Minn., June 28.—Although Pinkerton detectives are said to have supplied the state fire marshal's office with evidence connecting Dr. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, with a series of crimes including arson and safe cracking, there was no one to present the evidence when Court Commissioner H. A. Simons called the case for preliminary hearing today and as a result it went over until 9 a. m. tomorrow.

ARCHBISHOP WILL VETO

WINNIPEG, June 28.—His grace Archbishop Matheson, at the synod of Rupertsland today declared emphatically that he would veto the plan to divide the diocese, on the grounds that the consolidation of the diocese, the extension work and the endowment of other works would make it impossible to endow a new diocese. A discussion was wanted and it will be threshed out.

LUNATIC DIVES THROUGH WINDOW OF TRAIN

MONTREAL, June 28—With his legs shackled and arms strapped to his sides George S. Kepla, a lunatic took a head-long dive through the window of the C.P.R. train near Coteau last night. Although the train was travelling at 25 miles an hour, the man was picked up conscious, suffering only from a deep scalp wound. Kelpa was one of the five undesirables being taken from the asylum at Seattle for deportation to Germany from Montreal.

WAS NOT MURDERED

WINNIPEG, June 28.—The post mortem on James Reive, who was thought to have been murdered at the foot of Water street showed no fracture of the skull, but that drowning caused death, and that the man was subject to lumbago, and the theory is offered by the police that he was seized with an attack, fell back, striking his head on a plank and lay unable to rise with his head under water till he was drowned.

WEDDINGS

Also Wedding Anniversaries

All weddings are happy events, and always rendered more so by numerous beautiful and useful gifts. Why should the anniversary be overlooked. Indeed it is not. For our experience proves to us that the best pieces of ornamental jewels are bought by married men. Why? Because the prize they won on the first anniversary is worth more than they bargained for—and so most men are men. They want to square up and indeed the best is none too good.

Our stock is especially adapted for these cases and most happy results have been obtained.

It's a treat—come in.

Reliable Rheumatic Prescription

At this season many people suffer with rheumatism, which is likely to assume a chronic form unless carefully treated. The following prescription possesses great virtue and has been known to relieve and cure many of the most hopeless cases. Any good druggist can fill it. The true ingredients and pure, must be used to insure success:

Iodide of Potassium	2 drams
Sodium Salicylate	4 drams
Wine of Colchicum	½ oz
Comp. Ess. Cardiol	1 oz
Comp. Fld. Balmwort	1 oz
Comp. Syrup Sarsaparilla	5 oss

Mix in a half pint bottle and begin by taking one teaspoonful after each meal, and one at bedtime; after the first week gradually increase the dose to two teaspoonfuls. While somewhat more expen*sive than ordinary patent medicines, it is* really to be desired if the results are the goal.
