Enemy Attacks on French Lines Meet with Repulse

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, July 21.—Some idea of the huge forces now engaged in the battle of the Some in northern France is given in the official statement from Berlin tonight, in which it is stated that more than 200,000 French and British troops attacked the German lines north and south of the Somme Thursday on a front of 27 miles. Today's news from the battlefield which has been contested bitterly since July 1 shows no great change in the relative positions of the Franco-British and German forces.

The British have again pressed forward to the German third line in the Four Eaux wood, northeast of Longueval. This wood is an important strategic point, the capture of which would bring the forces of General Haig to the highest point on the ridge commanding the German positions in the less hilly country behind, which is not so much broken up and not wooded, lending itself not too well to defense. This probably explains the desperate attempts of the Germans to hold the wood, where the heavy fighting continues.

The Associated Press correspondent at the front states the Germans are bringing masses of troops from Verdun and guns from other points, in an endeavor to stem the allied advance. Meantime the indications are that the allies are testing the strength of the German line at other points.

The trench raid by Australian troops in the neighborhood of Armentieres attracts much interest in this connection.

Attacks and Counter Attacks.

The British line north of Bazentin and Longueval has been pushed forward in Four Eaux, the war office announced today. The British drove the Germans from the wood but lost part of this position subsequently.

The Germans in an attack on the British on the northern edge of the Leipsic salient succeeded Friday in occupying British front trenches, but later were driven out, according to the official statement issued at midnight. Elsewhere along the British front comparative calm prevailed.

British Statement.

The statement says:

"Except for local encounters there has been a comparative lull in the main battle area today and there has been no change in the situation since the last report.

"The enemy made a bombing attack on the northern edge of our positions in the Leipsic salient and succeeded at one point in entering our front trenches, but at once was driven out.

"Taking advantage of the fine weather the royal flying corps continued its bombing operations against points of military importance with successful results. The hostile aircraft were inactive until evening when a good deal of fighting took place behind the German lines. One of our offensive patrols encountered 11 German machines, and, as a result, three German machines were shot down, one bursting into flames.

"Another encounter between four of our machines and six of the enemy's lasted 45 minutes. One fokker was then shot down and another badly damaged. The remainder fled.

"During other air combats a fifth German machine was forced to the ground. Our total loss during the day was one machine.

"It has now been established that the enemy's assaults July 18 on the Delville wood area over a front of 2,000 yards was made by at least 13 battalions, drawn from four different divisions. The enemy's losses were correspondingly great."

French Check Attacks.

PARIS, July 21.—Positions captured yesterday by the French south of the Somme were subjected to a vigorous counter-attack during the night. The Germans charged the French line south of Soyecourt, but, the war office announces today, suffered heavy losses and were driven back in disorder. A strong German detachment which advanced to the attack in the Chaulnes region was repulsed with the bayonet.

Contrary to expectation, the Germans have made no attempt to follow up the smashing blow delivered against the northern Verdun defense a week ago. The French counter-attacks, according to the official accounts are gradually winning back the ground gained by the Germans at heavy cost in the vicinity of Thiaumont and Fleury

Paris Statement.

The following official statement was issued tonight:

"There is nothing to add to the statement this morning.

"A German aeroplane this morning threw several bombs on Belfort. The material damage was slight.

Belgian Communications.

On the sectors south of Nieuport and around Dixmude there have been reciprocal artillery actions of slight intensity. The Belgian batteries have opened a destructive fire on the German works at Steenstraete. The fire of these batteries continues."

Berlin Admits Loss.

BERLIN, July 21.—An attack by the British forces against the Germans at Fromelles, north of La Bassee on Wednesday resulted in the loss by the attackers of more than 200 men killed and nearly 500 men taken prisoners, according to a statement issued by the war office today.

The statement admits that the German line along a front of about two miles south of Hardecourt was driven from its first trenches into its second trenches 800 metres in the rear. Enemy forces, the statement says, penetrated into the German salient at the wood of Vermandovillers.

German Statement.

The statement reads:

"An attack by the English in the region of Fromelles Wednesday was executed. We have established two strong divisions. The Bavarian division before whose front the attack took place, counted on the front in front of them more than 2,000 killed, and brought in 481 prisoners, including ten officers and 16 machine guns.

"On both sides of the Somme yesterday the enemy as was expected prepared to deliver a main blow, but it failed. After the strongest preparation over a front of about 270 miles attacks were made from the south of Pozieres to the west of Vermandovillers. More than seven divisions, with 200,000 men participated in the attacks.

"The result for the enemy is that the first line of the German division along a front of three kilometres south of Hardecourt, was pressed back from its foremost trenches into the next trenches, 800 metres behind, and enemy divisions penetrated into the salient of the little wood of Vermandovillers.

"On the entire remaining front the wild onsets broke to pieces against our

BERLIN GIVES OWN VERSION OF LOSSES

Press Bureau Corrects Statement Designed to "Tranquilize People at Home."

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

BERLIN, July 21.—A contradiction of the British official statement of Thursday, sent by the Poldhu wireless station that one battalion of the 119th regiment, consisting of 1100 men, lost 980 men, and two other battalions of the same regiment, each more than half their effective strength, is contained in an official statement.

"With the purpose of stigmatizing such reports and tranquilizing the people at home" the German statement continues, "it may be remarked that its (the regiment's) entire loss in recent weeks, until yesterday, were happily less than 500 men. Therefore, its loss, however deplorable in itself, amounts to only one-quarter of the English allegation."

The British press bureau appends a note to the German communication pointing out with reference to the latter portion, that the Poldhu message mentioned the 190th regiment and not the 119th, which is the Wurttemburg regiment stationed on the Ypres salient, "where it has had no serious fighting during the last four weeks."

"If in that time," the press bureau continues, "it lost 500 men, this is a gratifying result. The losses of the 190th regiment, therefore, remain unchallenged."

ARGUMENT IN KELLY CASE IS CONCLUDED

At Least Week and Probably Longer Will Elapse Before Judgment Is Rendered

WINNIPEG, July 21.—Argument in the Kelly reserve case was concluded today and judgment was reserved.

An application for bail, in the event of a new trial being allowed, was made on behalf of the prisoner by H. H. Dewart, K. C. Chief Justice Howell said he preferred to consider that question after dealing with the general issue.

At least a week and probably longer will elapse before judgment is rendered.

Chief Justice Howell intimated that in his opinion the accused should not have been found guilty of theft and of receiving in connection with the same transaction. He asked what would be the effect on the conviction on four counts, if the fifth count was bad, making the evidence in connection with it inadmissible.

Mr. Craig's opinion was that no harm had been done, provided the evidence put in on the bad count was receivable on the others.

Counsel for the contractor admitted that on this point the discretion of the court was to be invoked.

EXCAVATION WORK TO BEGIN SOON

Rock Pile at Hospital Site Almost Demolished—Digging Will Begin Early Next Week.

Actual excavation work for the foundations of the new Kootenay Lake General hospital will be begun early next week, according to the statement made last night by J. A. Irving, chairman of the board of directors.

Mr. Irving stated that the work of demolishing the huge rock pile at the south end of the new site was sufficiently advanced to permit of work on the excavation being begun within a few days. Much of the rock that has been removed to bring the ground to grade will be utilized in the foundations of the new building. Mr. Irving declared that the directors are well pleased with the progress that has been made and look forward to the structural work being begun at an early date.

BOWSER WELCOMED AT GRAND FORKS

Given Rousing Reception At Big Meeting

BREWSTER IS SEEN AS ENEMY TO LABOR

Liberal Leader's Campaign of Destruction Is Denounced

(Special to The Daily News.)

GRAND FORKS, B. C., July 21.—Premier Bowser was given a rousing reception at the Empress theatre this evening, the structure being filled. He was cheered to the echo as he exposed the action of Mr. Brewster, opposition leader, in his campaign of obstruction and destruction at a time in the history of the province when it was the duty of every patriotic citizen to put forth his best efforts to assist in a return of the era of better financial conditions, the dawn of which was just brightening the sky.

Most spontaneous of all was the unanimous response of the charge of the premier that Mr. Brewster was an enemy to the laboring men in threatening the Workmen's Compensation act by his writ questioning the legality of the legislation passed at the last session, for Grand Forks is a mining district and the miners and smeltermen see in the writ a threat against an enactment which has long been their desire.

"The compensation act," said Mr. Bowser, "was put through the house by the member for Grand Forks, Mr. Miller, who made a masterly support of the measure at its second reading. Mr. Brewster voted for it and Parker Williams said it was the best law I had ever fathered. When I first undertook this compensation act it was charged that I only did it to dangle it before your eyes as a bait for your votes, but it was passed as law. How did Mr. Brewster help in passing that law? He helped by trying to force the dissolution of the house March 14.

Willing to Sacrifice Anything

"If he had been successful in that there would have been no Workmen's Compensation act, as well as several other acts of great importance to you all. Mr. Brewster was willing to sacrifice anything in order to get political advantage. If he honestly wanted you to have that act he would have permitted the extension of the life of parliament. But he did not have the interests of the country at heart. It has been suggested that he is standing in with the accident insurance companies who fought us to the last ditch. It may be that this suggestion is right, so that for political purposes, or to serve some more nefarious scheme, he obstructed the extension of the life of parliament. Do you want that kind of a man to be the leader of a party in charge of the affairs of the country?

"Mr. Brewster says that the act is not legal because the session after the fourteenth of March was not legal, but the session was legal enough for him to draw down his sessional allowance and salary as leader of the opposition amounting to $3100. He says that he was entitled to that money if he only sat three days in the house. How is that for a union scale? He sat for twelve days in what he acknowledges was a legal house and that works out at $250 a day. Do you want a reckless and dangerous man like that who will attempt to tie up all the business of a country as head of the province?

He says that he only issued his writ for the purpose of preventing the Pacific Great Eastern railway work from going on, but if he did not have foresight enough to see that it affected all the legislation it only goes to show that he is unfitte nto handle large affairs."

The Soldiers' Vote.

Regarding Mr. Brewster's charge tha

Regarding Mr. Brewster's chage that the vote of the soldier was to be stolen by the Conservatives, Mr. Bowser stated that the Liberals evidently judged the Conservatives by their own standards. The vote was safeguarded by every device that could be thought of, the ballots being sealed and deposited by the soldiers themselves when they voted in England.

"If," said Mr. Bowser, "the Liberals think that we are going to break the seals and forge the ballots by some of the devious methods that characterize the Yukon brigade of Vancouver, he is mistaken. They charge us with having stolen their platform, but one of the planks we have not stolen is the plugging plank of the Vancouver Liberals.

"I would sooner retire from public life than use such methods."

Mr. Bowser referred to the woman suffrage and expressed the opinion that if the women got the vote it would result in a higher standard of public life and a higher standard of legislation. He referred to his legislation of last session and the creation of the portfolios of mines, of agriculture and the introduction of better business methods.

No Time For Changes.

"I have been touring the country for some weeks," said he, "and in all my travels I find that the people are less interested in politics than they are in business. Business in all lines is getting better. The production of this valley both in mines and agriculture, will be doubled this year. It is important for the country that party affiliations should be cast out and the people put in office who are best fitted to carry on public affairs. This is no time to make experiments. If Mr. Brewster comes into office he will have to spend some time selecting a cabinet and they will have to spend months getting acquainted with the affairs of the administration.

Hon. William Manson, minister of agriculture, Hon. Lorne Camubell, minister of mines, Hon. Ernest Miller, president of council and candidate for Grand Forks, also spoke at the meeting. J. E. Thompson, the Liberal candidate for the riding was invited to speak, but he did not appear.

Ministers Speak.

Hon. William Manson dealt with the matters of his department affecting the district. He referred to the importance of establishing creameries and the value of such industries to a valley like that of which Grand Forks was centre. Hon. Mr. Camubell outlined some things that had been undertaken by the government for the development of the mining section and said that he hoped that some of the services introduced by the department would lead to the discovery of new ore bodies which would ensure the prolongation of the producing life of the Boundary country. He also took up the importance of the production of fruit and vegetables and expressed the opinion that with the railway transportation now available it would not be long before they would have an express rate in force which would give them the coast markets as well as other markets.

Hon. Mr. Miller only spoke a few words expressing thanks for the honor that had been extended to him and leaving the balance of time to the visitors.

In the afternoon Hon. Manson, Hon. Miller and H. B. Thompson with a number of local citizens motored to Cascade where they addressed a meeting which was presided over by William McKay. The party leave in the morning for Rossland.

RUSSIANS ARE STEP NEARER ERZINGAN

Have Captured Town of Gumuskaneh Located About Fifty Miles North of Objective

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, July 1.—In the Caucasus the Russians have taken the town of Gumuskaneh, between Trebizond and Erzingan, the objective of the Russian army on this section of the front.

Announces Capture

PETROGRAD, July 21.—The capture by Russian troops of the town of Gumuskaneh, 45 miles southwest of Trebizond, in Turkish Armenia, was announced today by the war office.

Petrograd Statement

The following official statement was issued today:

"In the region of Djwizlyk we made further progress, taking prisoner an officer and 60 Turks.

"Between Trebizond and Erzingan, after a fight, we took the town of Gumuskaneh. In the region northwest of Kialkitschevtli we made prisoner 30 officers and 40 men and captured important convoys. We repulsed an enemy offensive in the region east of Rivandouha, in the region of Mosul."

The capture of Gumuskaneh marks a notable advance for the Russian forces under Grand Duke Nicholas. Gumuskaneh is 40 miles northwest of Baiburt, the capture of which was reported by the Petrograd war office July 16. It is about 50 miles directly north of Erzingan, the objective of the Russian army which recently took Mamakatun, 50 miles to the west.

Army of von Linsingen Is Forced to Retire

RUSSIANS CAPTURE CROSSINGS OF STYR

Thousands of Prisoners and Much Booty Taken by Muscovites

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

LONDON, July 21.—The flooding of the Dniester river is hindering the operations on a large section of the Russian front to the advantage of the Austro-Germans, but Russia was able to announce two succeesses today. Gen. von Linsingen, commanding Austro-German forces south of Kovel, has been obliged to retire in the face of strong attacks by the forces under Gen. Sakharoff. The Russians also seized the crossings of the river Styr and compelled their opponents to retire from the salient of the Styr and Lipa rivers toward Berestechk, where a battle is now going on.

By this advance Gen. Sakharoff gives greater protection to the operations of the Russian general Kaledines on the Volyhnian line in the region of Brody.

Under pressure of attacks by the Russians, the Austro-Hungarian forces in the region of the Styr and Lipa rivers north of the Galician border, have been forced to withdraw to new positions in the region of Berestechk, says the official statement issued by the war office today.

Berestechk is on the Styr about 28 miles west of Dubno.

Petrograd Statement.

PETROGRAD, July 21.—The following official statement was issued tonight:

"Western theatre: The army of Gen. Sakharoff, having surmounted all the difficulties of crossing the Lipa under the concentrated fire of the enemy Thursday, drove back the enemy, which fled in disorder. Our artillery is shelling the retreating enemy columns which have been driven across the Lipa at several points.

"Wednesday we took about 1000 prisoners and four cannon, three of which were loaded. Prisoners continue to come in. Further information indicates that the prisoners taken in Thursday's battle numbered three officers and 155 men. Four machine guns were also captured. This fighting took place in the region southwest of Kimpolung (southern Bukowina) in the Waleputna region, where the enemy was driven from one height.

"The number of prisoners taken in the battle of July 16 continues to increase, at present numbering 2817 and 75 officers. The booty already listed consists of three guns, 49 machine guns, 36 bomb throwers, 80 cases of grenades and bombs, 60 cases of ammunition, 58 cases of machine gun cartridge belts and three depots containing 35,570 shells, 5230 hand grenades and a huge quantity of rifle cartridges and other war materia'

Battles of Dvina.

"On many sectors of the Dvina front there were violent artillery fights.

"In the region of the Styr, above its confluence with the Lipa, we dealt another stroke at the enemy, ejecting it from the village of Verbene and from fortified works south of that village, and, keeping on the heels of its bewildered rear, seized the crossings of the Styr. The enemy retired toward the heights near the town of Bere-

STRAW BOSS ADMITS HE PADDED PAYROLL

First Incriminating Evidence Given in Case Before Wetmore Commission at Regina

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

REGINA, July 21.—The first direct incriminating evidence in regard to the padding of the Godfrey payrolls was given this afternoon before the Wetmore commission by Arthur Lovell, the last witness called.

He said that while working as a straw boss he padded the time in the payrolls according to instructions from Godfrey, his foreman. Godfrey told him that he had lost a road outfit by fire and that the government would not pay for it, so he proposed to take it from the government by making up fraudulent paysheets and adding time to the actual time the men worked.

When J. N. Fish asked the witness if he had filled out paysheets for work that was never done, the witness replied that he had.

Lovell stated that he had been employed as straw boss, which means a working foreman, on the Watson and Wimmer roads during the time of their construction.

For his part in participating in the frauds he stated that he did not get anything from it at all. He added that he did it to hold his job.

One payroll entire was made up by Lovell in Godfrey's home in Yorkton in November after the road work was completed. The names were all forged on it and the money collected by Godfrey.

FRESH VEGETABLES AT PUBLIC MARKET TODAY

A busy morning is expected at the public market today, a large variety of ranch produce of all kinds having been announced for sale. It is expected that there will be a large supply of new potatoes and carrots as well as hothouse tomatoes and local celery. Raspberries are now coming in in good quantities, but the strawberry season is practically at an end. In addition there will also be a plentiful supply of old potatoes which it is expected will sell at $1 per 100 pound sack. A good showing of poultry is also promised.

INDUCTION MEETING TO BE HELD AT TRAIL

The Presbytery of Kootenay will hold a special meeting in Knox church, Trail, Wednesday, for the purpose of inducting Rev. A. M. O'Donnell, B. A., formerly of Edmonds, B. C., into the pastoral charge of the Trail congregation.

Rev. W. Robertson of Rossland, interim moderator, will preside and induct the new minister and also deliver the address. Rev. C. M. Wright of Nelson will preach and address the minister.

COMMONS TO VOTE $2,250,000,000 CREDIT

LONDON, July 22—The treasury department has issued a supplementary estimate for the vote of credit of $2,250,000,000, which Premier Asquith will ask the commons to vote the government Monday.

The vote is the largest asked by the government since the beginning of the war, and brings the total voted this year to $5,250,000,000 and the total since the beginning of the war to $14,160,000,000.

DR. W. O. ROSE UNANIMOUS CHOICE FOR CANDIDATE

Dr. W. O. Rose was last night unanimously nominated as Conservative candidate for the Nelson riding by a convention of Conservatives which was representative of all walks of life in the city and which expressed its whole hearted approval of the choice by enthusiastic applause and speeches. He was nominated by Mayor J. Malone, seconded by J. A. Irving.

In placing Dr. Rose's name before the meeting Mayor Malone said that he did so with the belief that the great majority of the citizens of Nelson were heartily in sympathy with the proposal. He continued that the Empire, Canada and British Columbia were face to face with the greatest problem that they had had to deal with in their history. British Columbia was doing its part nobly in the struggle but its greatest problem had to be solved after the war. The best men of the province had gone to the front. The great problem would have to be met when they returned. The war, he remarked, had caused a financial upheaval, it had upset industrial and commercial conditions. It had placed every man to a large extent upon his own resources. It was essential that Nelson should be represented in the legislature during the next four or five years by the best talent available, as it was during that period that the reconstruction period which would occur with the return of the soldiers would have to be dealt with. Premier Bowser and his cabinet had demonstrated during the recent session that they could be depended upon to conduct the affairs of the province upon a sound basis and to put into effect a statesmanlike policy to enable British Columbia to solve the problems which would arise after the war and obtain the greatest possible advantages for the returned soldiers and the people as a whole from the new conditions.

Proved Its Fitness.

He pointed out that the Liberals last session had made every effort by three months of investigation and searching of the records to prove that Premier Bowser and his colleagues were unfitted for their positions. The Liberal party had failed completely in its attempt to make good the charges which its leaders at the coast had so freely uttered. oNthing had been found to cast even a shadow on the Conservative leader, Premier Bowser, or his associates. The investigation had done nothing more or less than to prove the integrity of the ministers. The legislation last session and the businesslike administration of provincial affairs

REPORT HOLDS SIR SAM BLAMELESS; HITS ALLISON

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

OTTAWA, July 21.—The feature of the Duff-Meredith report made public today, which probably will excite the most interest is that relating to the commission received by Col. J. W. Allison from Mr. Yoakum. The prediction which has been generally made that Col. Allison would not be exonerated for his action in taking a commission is confirmed by the report of the commission.

After the contract with the American Ammunition company was executed, Yoakum and Allison dealt on the footing that Allison was entitled to receive one-half of Yoakum's share of the commission; and Allison's right to one-half of this, after deducting the legal and incidental expenses that had been incurred by Yoakum, which amounted to $3385 and $30,000 which it was agreed that "Craven should receive in settlement of a claim that he made that he was entitled to a part of Yoakum's share of the commission for having introduced Cadwell to Yoakum and Allison, was recognized by Yoakum."

Allison subsequently gave orders on Yoakum as follows: "To George Washington Stephens, $10,000; to E. E. Lignanti, $50,000; to Col. William McBain, $30,000; and to Miss M. J. Edwards, $105,000.

"Stephens and Allison," the report states, "appear to have had an arrangement for sharing commissions, and the $10,000 which Stephens was to receive was his share of the commission out of which Allison authorized the payment to be made. The payment to Lignanti was in pursuance of an agreement with Allison that Lignanti would receive a proportion of the money which Allison was to receive from Yoakum, in respect of 'deals' in which they were both interested. The $30,000 order in favor of McBain was given in settlement of a claim which he had against Allison, not connected with the contracts.

"The order in favor of Miss M. J. Edwards was a voluntary gift to her by Allison. She is his sister-in-law and had been from infancy a member of the Allison family and for 13 years Allison's secretary, and the gift was made in recognition of this and as a provision for her.

Reviews Allison's Acts

"According to the testimony of Cadwell, he did not know that Allison was entitled to any share of interest in the commission and the evidence establishes that neither Gen. Hughes, Gen. Bertram, Col. Carnegie nor any member of the shell committee had any knowledge of the arrangement between Yoakum and Allison as to commission, or suspected that Allison expected to receive any commission or reward on account of or in connection with the contract or the negotiations which led up to the making of it. On the contrary, Allison gave Gen. Hughes to understand that, in all that he had done or would do in the matter, he was actuated solely by his friendship for Gen. Hughes and that under no circumstances would he take any reward or commission for his services.

"Allison's position, as stated by him to Col. Carnegie, was that of a personal friend of Gen. Hughes, anxious on account of that friendship to render any assistance he could to the shell committee, and neither Col. Carnegie nor Gen. Bertram knew or suspected that in what Allison was asked to do and was doing in connection with the fuse contracts, he was acting with a view to any profit or remuneration to himself from any contract that was contemplated or might be entered into.

"The evidence establishes beyond question that after Allison had introduced the Cadwell group and their experts to Gen. Bertram and Col. Carnegie, his participation in the matter, so far as they knew, came to an end and all negotiations between the shell committee and the Cadwell group that led up to the making of the contract with the American Ammunition and in the settlement of the terms of the contract.

Had No Part in Contract

"Allison at no time appeared or took any part, and so far as Gen. Bertram or Col. Carnegie knew or suspected, Allison had no part in the negotiations or in the making of the contract.

"According to the testimony of Yoakum and Cadwell, Allison had nothing to do with the arrangements of negotiations between them and Bassick, and had no part in settling the terms of the contract, and testimony to the same effect was given by Allison himself.

"In view of all the circumstances and the subsequent conduct of Allison when, as he said, he first learned that provision had been made for a commission to Yoakum, it is difficult to accept his statement that throughout the transactions in connection with the contract with the American Ammunition company, he had no thought of a commission or of the possibility of Yoakum receiving a commission in which he would be entitled to share and that he supposed he had learned otherwise after the contract had been entered in that Bassick, Cadwell and Yoakum would unite in providing the necessary capital and themselves undertake the production of fuses, either as coadventurers or through a company which they would organize, and of which they would be the shareholders.

"After having given the matter our greatest consideration we are compelled to the conclusion that Allison's explanation cannot be accepted and to find that while professing to be acting as the field agent of Gen. Hughes and to be doing what he did solely out of friendship for him and without any expectation or intention of receiving any remuneration for his service, Allison was instrumental in bringing about a contract in which, through his agreement with Yoakum of February, 1915, he was pecuniarily interested, with the knowledge that he would be entitled to share equally with Yoakum in any benefit that Yoakum would receive, either by way of commission or otherwise.

Action Not Justified

"We have only to add that if we had come to a different conclusion and had accepted Allison's statement, we would have been bound to say that his conduct in taking the benefit of the agreement as to the commission and accepting a right to share in it equally with Yoakum, without informing Gen. Hughes, and the shell committee and obtaining their consent, could not be either justified or excused.

"What we have said to Allison's receiving this commission and the absence of knowledge on the part of Gen. Hughes, Col. Carnegie and the other members of the shell committee, that Allison was to be paid any commission or other reward or remuneration, applies also to the order for cartridge cases that was given to the Edwards Valve company and the commission which Allison would have been entitled to if the company had made deliveries of the cases according to the terms of the order."

Dealing with the alleged discrimination of the shell committee against manufacturers, the Meredith-Duff report says:

"Col. Carnegie was undoubtedly anxious that all munitions of war that the shell committee desired to obtain which could be produced in Canada, should be made in Canada, and he made considerable effort to bring about the manufacture of time fuses in Canada and it was owing to his persuasion that the war office was induced to consent to the shell committee placing the experimental order for the manufacture in Canada of 20,000 time fuses.

"He ultimately came to the conclusion that it would be impossible to insure the production by Canadian manufacturers of such fuses, at all events with the despatch that was necessary. Such knowledge as he had of the conditions of the manufacturing industries of Canada and the facilities which Canadian manufacturers possessed for entering upon the work of manufacturing time fuses convinced him that they had not then and could not obtain the machinery, tools and trained experts that in his judgment were essential to enable them to produce the loaded fuses with the despatch that he considered necessary.

"It is plain that the difficulty the shell committee found itself in, after the receipt of the cable of May 28, would have been avoided if, before Col. Carnegie and Gen. Bertram took steps which they considered had the effect of committing them to purchase 5,000,000 fuses, the instructions from the war office in the cables of April 17, which explicitly required at least one-third of the complete rounds to be supplied with graze fuses, had been examined with care. And we think it regrettable, especially in view of Col. Watts' letter of June 4 that before finally concluding the contracts of June 19, 1915, Col. Carnegie did not inform the other members of the shell committee, and Col. Watts in particular of the fact that these contracts provided for the making of 1,666,666 fuses of a kind which could be produced in Canada with due expedition. We do not doubt that, in the actual circumstances in which he found himself on May 28, Col. Carnegie was actuated by what he rightly deemed to be the urgency of the case."

Took Right Course.

'We are not, we think, called upon to express an opinion as to whether the view that was taken by Col. Carnegie and the shell committee was a sound view; but the decision of the commission is not fairly open to adverse criticism and there can be no doubt that it was honestly arrived at; and it is equally clear, when all the circumstances are considered, that it cannot be said to have been unreasonable. In our judgment, the members of the shell committee would have assumed a grave responsibility and would have exposed themselves to severe criticism if the opinion of their expert advisers which ultimately carried their judgment, had been disregarded and the contracts had been given to Canadian manufacturers and their efforts to produce the fuses had resulted in failure.

"It is gratifying to know that the efforts that have been made by the imperial munitions board have demonstrated the possibility of successfully producing time fuses in Canada by Canadian manufacturers and producing them with a rapidity at least equal to that of any production elsewhere. The success that has attended the efforts of the board is, no doubt, largely due to its having established an assembling and loading plant of its own, under the superintendency of Mr. Hathaway of the Northern Electric company which has patriotically placed part of its staff at the disposal of the imperial munitions board.

"It would have been mere folly for the shell committee, organized as it was to have attempted in May, 1915, the establishment of an assembling and loading plant of its own. It had not been authorized by the war office to provide one, and if it had been, the whole weight would have fallen upon Col. Carnegie, and he was already overburdened with the details of transactions, the burden of which ought not to have been cast upon the shoulders of the committee's technical adviser. It is quite evident that at that time the work of the committee had increased enormously and that the committee's organization was not adequate to deal with it, and the attempt to do so, with the organization it had,, what the imperial munitions board had been able to accomplish in the establishment of its assembling and loading plant, would probably have ended in failure.

Concerning Graze Fuses.

"What we have said as to the time fuses does not apply to the graze fuses. It is undoubted that types of the fuse could have been demonstrated by what they, especially the Russell Motor company, have since done.

"The explanation of Col. Carnegie for giving to the American Ammunition company the contract for the manufacture of 1,666,666 of these fuses which were required by the war office and the shell committee was authorized to obtain, were that the shell committee, by letter of May 21 to Bassick, and the negotiations with him and his associates, had committed itself to give him a contract for 2,500,000 time fuses.

Gen. Bertram appears to have been of the same opinion as Col. Carnegie as to the binding effect of the negotiations with Bassick and his associates and of the letter to Bassick of May 21. Col, Carnegie's view as to what was his duty may account for his failure to consider the placing of the contract for the graze fuses with Canadian manufacturers or with the International Arms & Fuse company which might otherwise be inexplicable.

"Fully recognizing as we do the imperative duty of persons in the position in which Col. Carnegie found himself, to deal honorably with those with whom they are negotiating and to carry out promises they have given, though not legally binding on them, even if loss may be suffered in doing it, we feel bound to say that we do not think a high minded business man with Col. Carnegie's responsibilities and experience in affairs, would have come to the conclusion to which Col. Carnegie came as to the obligation the committee was under, or that he would have hesitated to make what arrangements the new conditions called for, regardless of the fact that the persons with whom he was negotiating might be disappointed, or even suffer loss.

"It is plain that the difficulty the shell committee found itself in, after the receipt of the cable of May 28, would have been avoided if, before Col. Carnegie and Gen. Bertram took steps which they considered had the effect of committing them to purchase 5,000,000 fuses, the instructions from the war office in the cables of April 17, which explicitly required at least one-third of the complete rounds to be supplied with graze fuses, had been examined with care. And we think it regrettable, especially in view of Col. Watts' letter of June 4 that before finally concluding the contracts of June 19, 1915, Col. Carnegie did not inform the other members of the shell committee, and Col. Watts in particular of the fact that these contracts provided for the making of 1,666,666 fuses of a kind which could be produced in Canada with due expedition. We do not doubt that, in the actual circumstances in which he found himself on May 28, Col. Carnegie was actuated by what he rightly deemed to be the urgency of the case."

"On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report. The artillery and mining activity south of La Bassee canal and northwest of Lens, as well as in the Argonne and on both sides of the Meuse was increased at intervals. Austrian Statement.

VIENNA, July 21.—The following official statement was issued tonight:

"In the sector to the south of Lipa the enemy attacked after artillery preparation which lasted several days. Its advance by way of Werben was arrested. Nevertheless, we withdrew our salient positions before a new threatening surrounding movement in the region of Berestechk."

Berlin Statement.

BERLIN, July 21.—"Eastern theatre: South of Riga the enemy made only a weak attack, which was nipped in the bud Russian attempts to cross the Dvina on both sides of Friedrichstadt were prevented. North of Deventon a small detachment reached the west bank.

"Northwest of Smorgen our advance guards gave way before superior hostile attacks.

Army group of Gen von Linsingen: After Russian attacks between Werben and Korson had been brought to a standstill the curve jutting out toward Werben was withdrawing in the fact of an expected enveloping attack.

"Army group of Gen. von Bothmer: Apart from small advance guard encounters there is nothing to report."

FRENCH OUTWIT GERMANS

Says a British writer at the front: "I saw a most ingenious 'Boche-trap' (piege a boches), the nature of which must be left a mystery; but the essential element is a machine gun so placed that though it has been there for several weeks, in the course of which there has hardly been a day when it has not been used, the enemy has not the smallest notion where it is, nor is he ever likely to find out. The officer who invented it takes great pleasure in his 'piege,' as the Germans certainly do not.

"The German has shown himself ingenious enough in this war, but in the constant struggle of wits which goes on along the front line trenches he is no match for the Frenchman. The French have reduced the displaying of poste containing disconcerting news to the enemy to a fine art. Not very far away from the 'Boche-trap' mentioned there is a piece of trench, which, the French discovered the enemy only occupied in the night time, presumably because it was too exposed. So the French took to occupying it for the other 24 hours. The need of using it has passed now, but while the game went on the position—merely because the Germans never thought of it only as part of their own line—has conspicuous usefulness.

PECIAL ISSUES GO TO HIGHER LEVELS

all Street Market Largely Repetition of Recent Sessions—Marines Are Stronger.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, July 21.—In its chief sentials today's market was largely repetition of the sessions immediely preceding. Special stocks, main- in munitions, industrial equipments d motors were elevated to variable gher levels, partly as a result of ac- vity by pools and cliques and metals sponded to more favorable news re- arding foreign trade conditions.

The only striking exception to yes- rday's irregular trend was offered shipping shares. Marines gained uch of the loss which followed the nouncement of the heavy British r tax, with further activity in Unit- Fruit and Atlantic, Gulf & West dies, the latter coming within a all fraction of its high quotation. ails once more moved contrary to neral trend, ruling inactive and ostly heavy. Suggestions of addi- onal foreign liquidation of these is- es, inspired to an extent by heavy ceipts from London, had a restrain- g influence. Coalers and eastern unk lines yielded moderate fractions d international issues, including the acifics, registered similar declines on all offerings.

United States Steel was subordinate activity to shipping stocks; Crucible eel and Baldwin Locomotive hover- a slight fraction above or under sterday's close.

Wall street, or at least the specula- ve element, is of the opinion that no xtra dividend disbursement will be eclared for the second quarter, not- ithstanding extraordinary earnings. otal sales of stocks, 420,000 shares.

Indications point to a further cash crease by local banks for the week, though forecasts differ widely as to e extent of expansion.

In addition to the continuous inflow foreign gold, New York institutions ve received fairly large sums from terior sources. This condition was flected in another reduction of time oney rates from the abnormally high vels of last week.

More firmness in francs and a slight ading of marks, both on nominal erations, were the only changes in tes for European markets.

Bonds were irregular, international sues following the course of stocks. otal sales, par value, $1,760,000. Unit- States bonds unchanged on call.

PEACE TALK OFFSETS CROP DAMAGE REPORT

Cables Swing Traders Who Were Influenced by Rust Developments to Selling Side.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, Ill., July 21.—Peace rumors virtually offset today the effect of increasing reports of crop damage in the northwest. Prices closed unsettled at $1.15¼ for September and $1.18⅛ for December, with the market as a whole fractionally higher as compared with yesterday's close.

Oats closed unchanged and provisions varied from 12½ decline to a rise of 20c.

Assertions that the Bulgarian premier had summond the sobranje to discuss the situation, gave the peace rumors some degree of definiteness, and although confirmation was lacking many buyers turned quickly to the selling side. During the rest of the session a majority of dealers paid little attention to the black rust developments which earlier in the day had completely monopolized attention. The most pronounced damage report came from South Dakota, but predictions were current that the injury in North Dakota would in due time become equally apparent.

Pork and ribs were higher as a result of speculative buying.

WINNIPEG GRAIN CLOSE.

(By Daily News Leased Wire.)

WINNIPEG, July 21.—Wheat: July, $1.17½; Oct., $1.15; Dec., $1.13⅝.

Oats: July, 44¼; Oct., 42.

Flax: July, $1.73¼; Oct., $1.75½; Nov., $1.74½.

MONTREAL STOCKS SHOW TENDENCY TO RALLY

MONTREAL, July 21.—Local stocks developed a strong tone today when a scattered demand in the industrials revealed the fact that offerings were in scant supply. The paper stocks were the chief feature, Laurentide rising 6⅝ points to 188⅝, with that price bid at the close, while Wayagamack rose 3 to 58 and closed 58½ bid. The volume of business in each case was small; 600 shares in the former and 300 in the latter.

Munitions stocks also displayed rallying tendencies. Canadian Car, a weak feature Thursday, sold up to 67½ and closed at 67, with a net gain of 2, while the preferred sold 3 higher at 85.

Other features of the business included a demand for Ames-Holden preferred, which advanced 3¼ to 58, and after a long interval of neglect Lyall appeared in the active list. Opening sales in the stock were down 13 points from last week's sales, but the price immediately rallied to 75 and 75⅝ was bid at the close.

Canadian war loan bonds sold off ⅝ to 98½ under an offering of $50,000. Total business 4430 shares and $68,700 bonds.

SOUTH AFRICA EAGER TO TRADE WITH INDIA

CALCUTTA, India—A little more than two years ago India and South Africa were hardly on speaking terms. Now South Africa, it appears, is eager to do business with India—more eager indeed than is India, in this connection. A short while since the representative of an important firm of manufacturers' agents in Johannesburg paid a visit to the commercial museum recently established in Calcutta, and expressed himself as greatly impressed with the exhibits, which he said, would command a wide sale, if judiciously advertised, and if delivery could be relied upon. He, personally, was prepared to place very large orders for textiles, as there was a great demand in South Africa for ready-made clothes. A number of trial orders were given and the curator of the museum was informed that if the goods were found to be saleable in South Africa substantial repeat orders would be given, and a big business would eventually result with the East Indian manufacturers.

By an interesting coincidence an inquiry for textiles was received by the Calcutta museum almost simultaneously from a firm in Buluwayo, the particular articles required being white and khaki drills and twills and cotton blankets. These symptoms indicate the readiness of South Africa to take a considerable quantity of Indian textiles, but the authorities are agreed that before such inquiries can lead to any great developments, East Indian manufacturers will require to "wake up," to use the advice imparted to British manufacturers more than a decade ago by His Majesty the King. At present the makers of really valuable articles are utterly lacking in enterprise. There is, for example, a complete absence, in many trades, of samples. Travelers call and ask for specimens of Indian work, but are unable to obtain them.

The following instance is typical of many: A gentleman representing large interests called at the commercial museum recently, and took a note of the name of an Indian carpet manufacturer whose exhibit attracted him. He called upon the man, but the latter showed no keenness to book a large order, and the result was that, after further search, another manufacturer was unearthed and the business placed with him.

The small East Indian manufacturer is too often living in the leisurely thought of the middle ages, and is quite content to let business pass him rather than deviate by a hand-breadth from the "noiseless tenor of his way."

It is generally agreed, however, that the present is an excellent time for the pushing of Indian manufacturers. All that is required is a little energy, enterprise and capital. All the big mills are full up with orders. There is abundant evidence that home and foreign firms are willing to take up agencies in Indian manufactures, particularly soaps, carpets and durries (a strong cheap carpet without any pile,) but the great drawback is that at present it is impossible to depend upon anything like regular deliveries.

BRITISH PROGRESS IN EAST AFRICA

LONDON—The war office recently issued for publication the first despatch by Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. J. C. Smuts, commander in chief of the East African force, on the operations in German East Africa. He mentions that at the commencement of 1916 the German forces in German East Africa were estimated at some 16,000 men, of whom 2000 were white, with 60 guns and 80 machine guns. They were organized in companies varying from 150 to 200 strong, with 10 per cent of whites and an average of two machine guns per company. The enemy occupied a considerable tract of British territory.

I cannot speak too highly, Gen. Smuts says, of all the preliminary work done by Gen. Tighe in the direction of organization and preparation for offensive measures. This left me free on arrival to devote my whole energies to active operations, and I take this opportunity of placing on record my appreciation of the fact that the success of those operations is in a large measure due to Gen. Tighe's foresight and energy in paving the way for the expected reinforcements.

Early in February the 2nd South African infantry brigade arrived and on the 12th of that month Gen. Tighe directed the second division to make a reconnaissance in force of Salaita and if possible to occupy that position. Gen. Malleson carried out this operation. The Salaita position is one of considerable natural strength and had been carefully entrenched. The enemy was found to be in force and counter-attacked vigorously. Gen. Malleson was compelled to withdraw to Serengeti, but much useful information had been gained and the South African infantry had learned some valuable lessons in bush fighting and also had an opportunity to estimate the fighting qualities of their opponents.

This brings the operations up to the date on which I arrived in East Africa and decided that the occupation of the Kilimanparo area before the rainy season was a feasible operation.

The original plan devised by Gen. Tighe had been to occupy the Kilimanjaro area by making a converging advance from Longido and Mbuyuni with the first and second divisions respectively, with Kahe as the point toward which the movement was to be directed. To this main plan I adhered but I decided that some alterations of dispositions was necessary in order to avoid frontal attacks against entrenched positions of the enemy in the dense brush and to secure the rapidity of advance which appeared to me essential to the success of the operation in the short time at our disposal before the commencement of the rains, which might be expected toward the end of March.

Accordingly I issued orders that the 1st South African mounted brigade, under the command of Brig.-Gen. Van Deventer should be transferred from the first division to Mbuyuni and act from there directly under my orders in a turning movement to the north of Taveta and Salaita.

Recapitulating his plan, Gen. Smuts says:

The task of the first division was to cross the 35 miles of waterless bush which lay between Longido and the Engare Uanjuki river, occupy the latter and then advance between Meru and Kilimanjaro to Boma Jangombe. My intention was thereafter to direct this division on Kahe, and cut the enemy's line of communication by the Usamabara railway.

The task of the 1st South African mounted brigade and of the second division was to advance through the gap between Kilimanjaro and the Pare hills against the enemy's main force, which was reported to be concentrated in the neighborhood of Taveta, with strong detachments at the headofLake Jipe, in the bush east of the river Lumi and at Salaita. The total force with which the enemy could oppose our advance into the Kilimanjaro area was estimated at 6000 rifles, with 37 machine guns and 16 guns. These movements demanded the greatest energy and decision on the part of the commanders concerned.

The initial movements were carried out successfully and with very slight resistance on the part of our opponents. The first division succeeded in crossing the waterless belt safely and by the afternoon of March 6 had its advanced troops established on the small hill Nagasseni, just east of the river Nanjuki. By 2 p.m on the 7th the whole division was concentrated at this point and on the 8th moved to Gerarague.

On the evening of March 7 Gen. Van Deventer's column started on its march across the Serengeti plain for Chala. At 6 a.m. on March 8 the 1st South African mounted brigade reached the Lumi river, near the southern end of the Ziwana swamp, and the 3rd South African infantry brigade simultaneously arrived on the river east of Lake Chala. Gen. Van Deventer at once proceeded to make good the high ground lying between Lake Chala and Rombo mission. He then made a converging movement on the Chala position from the east and northwest, sending the brigade scouts to threaten the enemy's lines of retreat to the south. Chala was only lightly held by the enemy and these dispositions soon caused him to withdraw on Taveta. Gen. Van Deventer occupied Chala and pursued towards Taveta a portion of which position was occupied by the 2nd South African horse. As, however, the enemy in Taveta was in considerable strength, Gen. Van Deventer considered it wise to concentrate on the Chala position before dark.

Meanwhile the 3rd South African infantry brigade and the force reserve halted astride the Lumi to guard the crossing. While the bulk of my forces were engaged in making good the Chala position and the Lumi crossing, the second division, under Major-Gen. Tighe, carried out, on the 8th of March an artillery bombardment of Salaita and the infantry of the 1st East African brigade advanced and dug themselves in, in readiness for an attack on the 9th.

At dawn of the 9th Gen Van Deventer sent his mounted troops to get astride the Moschi road west of Taveta, which place the enemy evacuated in the course of the day. He also sent the 12th South African infantry to make good Ndui Ya Warombo hill and the Lumi bridge east of Taveta. The second division continued to bombard Salaita and at 2 p.m. the infantry advanced to the attack only to find that the bombardment coupled with the turning movement via Chala, had compelled the enemy to evacuate, just in time to avoid two squadrons of the 4th South African horse sent to intercept their retreat.

Early on the 10th a regiment of South African Horse despatched from Chala to make good Taveta were able to seize the position before a large body of the enemy, who had obviously been sent back to occupy it. After a brief fight the enemy withdrew toward the Latema-Reata nek, hotly pursued by mounted troops and field artillery. The enemy fought a stubborn rearguard action, and eventually was left in position on the nek. On the same date the second division advanced to Taveta, detaching garrisons at Serengeti and Salaita.

After describing further developments General Smuts says:

It was now clear that the adversary had withdrawn from Taveta in two directions, along the Taveta-Moschi road toward the west and along the Taveta-Kahe road between Reata and Latema hills toward the southwest, but the exact line of retirement of his main forces was uncertain. The Fourth South African Horse were in touch with what appeared to be merely a rear guard on the Moschi road, and a hostile force of unknown strength was in position on the Latema-Reata nek. It was essential to determine whether this was only a covering force, or whether the opposing force was in such strength as to threaten a counter-attack toward Taveta. In either case it was necessary to drive him from the nek before I could advance beyond Taveta.

DR. ROSE THE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE.

In Dr. W. O. Rose, the Conservatives of Nelson electoral district have selected as candidate for the legislature a man of proved ability whose election is pretty generally conceded even by his political opponents. He is popular, a good speaker, known personlly to practically to every man, woman and child in the riding and possessed of intellectual qualities and a good address which will make him a source of strength to the government in the legislature and a worthy representative of this constituency.

That his supporters will bnd all their energies to ensuring that his majority will be a sweeping one was the promise of last night's enthusiastic convention at which he received the unanimous nomination. The mistake of over-confidence must be guarded against, not onl yin Nelson, but in other ridings in thep rovince. However strong a candidate may be, however powerful the sentiment may be in favor of the government, the issues at stake are of too much importance to the welfare of the people of the province to justify any relaxation in teh work to elect the Conservative candidates.

IGNORANCE A WEAK DEFENSE FOR BREWSTER WRIT.

If H. C. Brewster and his advisers had the welfare of the province, instead of what they mistakenly believe to be the welfare of the Liberal party, at heart they would never have issued the Brewster writ.

It is futile for them to claim that they intended no evil; they cannot expect that the public will believe that they did not know that the writ would kill virtually all last session's legislation if it were approved by the courts. Moses Cotsworth might plead successfully that he did not know it was against th law to use "O.H.M.S." on private communications for the purpose of unlawfully franking them through the mails, but the public does not believe Mr. Brewster and his associates to be as ignorant as to have believed that a writ which asks for an injunction to hold up last session's legislation and to prevent the government from carrying on the public affairs of the province did not mean what it said.

The writ was intended to embarrass the government and to bring political advantage to the Liberals by invalidating the Workmen's Compensation act and the rest of the government's legislatiev program. That is the whole sum and substance of the matter.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The tributes which were paid last night to W. R. Maclean, the late member for Nelson riding, were well deserved. He has worked hard and faithfully in the interests of the constituency. He has never lacked energy or determination in furthering proposals for the benefit of the city and district which have been advanced.

Mere Newspapers.

The high contempt of public men and political candidates for the newspapers is well illustrated in the Associated Press account of Mr. Hughes' visit to New York. "He went directly to his hotel," reads the Chronicle, "and after ordering copies of all the morning newspapers, retired to his room."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Subscribers, Not Contributors, Wanted

We must have a society for the daily replenishment of flowers on poetry editors' desks.—New York Sun.

No More German Trade Murder.

The Germans had the free use of our markets before the war, and if they had been content with picking our pockets they might have continued to grow rich at our expense. But they tried to cut our throats as well. They used their commercial power in the most treacherous way. Their merchants were spies; their agents were mostly enrolled in the vast secret service organization which overruns the world. To give them again the run of Great Britain and the Empire would mean ruin—and more, it would outrage the sentiment of the army and the people. —London Daily Mail.

DR. W. O. ROSE IS UNANIMOUS CHOICE

which the Conservative government was giving proved its fitness to administer the business of the province.

There were two main reasons for the nomination of Dr. Rose, continued the mayor. The first was that he possessed splendid qualifications for the position and the second was that his victory at the polls was assured and through the election of Dr. Rose the business administration of provincial affairs would be strengthened.

Liberal Leaders Not Competent.

Mayor Malone continued that it was fully proved last session that the leaders of the Liberal party were not men who could be depended upon to handle efficiently the affairs of the province during the next four or five years. He was confident that if every business man and every citizen of the province whose welfare depended upon British Columbia's prosperity and the good management of its affairs would give the matter thorough consideration they would find it absolutely impossible to support the Liberals. Before their first session in the legislature after the byelections had come to a conclusion the records of H. C. Brewster and M. A. Macdonald had been marred and their weakness exposed by their own conduct. If the Liberal party in the Dominion, which was a great party, desired to do its duty by British Columbia it would see that the leadership of Liberals in this province was placed in different hands.

It was the duty of Nelson in its own interests and the interests of the province, he concluded, to elect Dr. Rose to support Premier Bowser's administration. By doing that it would accomplish all it could accomplish toward ensuring good administration of provincial affairs.

Possesses the Qualifications.

Dr. Rose, said Mr. Irving, in seconding the nomination, was a man of good address and splendid ability. He possessed all the qualities required to fulfil the office for which it was proposed he should be nominated.

Nelson would need a strong man at Victoria as it was to be anticipated, although the government's return was assured, that opposition members would be elected and a good man would be required to take his part in combating it.

Dr. Rose had not only made a great success of his own profession, but he had invested money in many enterprises that were of benefit to the city. He was public spirited and knew the needs of the riding thoroughly. Mr. Irving expressed every confidence that Dr. Rose would be returned.

Regarding the Vancouver byelection Mr. Irving recalled that it had been proved that cards in the names of 5000 absentee voters who were to be personated for the Liberal candidate

REALIZING RUSSIAN "RUIN"

German scepticism regarding the Russian claims of success over the Austrians still attempts something of the familiar curt tone of assmuption that everybody lies but Berlin, and that all military observers are fools except the German. After the belated admission of German losses in the North sea withheld for military reasons, Berlin's say-so has lost much of its force, and the infallibility of the German military experts has long ago vanished.

More than once the capable Major Moraht resolved the Russian army into an incoherent mob, eliminating the resourcefulness and energy of the Russian commanders, and, above all, proved that Russia's supposedly limitless resources are a mere myth. Today Moraht is compelled to recognize in the Russian offensive on a front of 250 miles "an extraordinary energy," and he urges his readers to remember "that populous Russia produces at least 2,000,000 young men annually whom she has so far been able to turn into soldiers." This is quite a revision of an earlier Moraht statement that Russia's losses in officers during the campaign of last summer were so enormous that she has not the instructors to drill her recruits, in short, everything predicted a year ago for Russia—loss of confidence, loss of energy, lack of leadership, no recruits, no officers, no munitions, financial bankruptcy, internal disorder—has so far been belied.—New York Evening Post.

THE LLOYD GEORGE MIRACLE

In a few words the Hamilton Herald "sizes up" the wonder of Lloyd George's career, pointing out that the man who came close to death for opposing what he considered an unnecessary war with the Boers is today the leader of Britain in the greatest war ever waged. It adds: "Now he has as his understrapper the Earl of Derby, head of one of the greatest noble houses of England. Two or three years ago he was distrusted and hated by the upper classes as a dangerous iconoclast; now he is regarded by all as one of the chief pillars of the state."

Lloyd George came of humble stock, and as a child, like the two-fisted Roosevelt, was sickly. In fact it has been said of the great Welsh lawyer that his family physician once debated the question as to whether so "poorly" a child should be left to struggle and suffer in the world. Yet what genius, what might for democracy lay in the feeble frame, what a mighty conflagration of spiritual enthusiasm in the flickering flame.

There are many Lloyd Georges in the world. Unknown, their feet enter the quiet paths in the deep forest of obscurity. We all know or knew some blacksmith at his forge who is a philosopher; we have met men who have the keenest perception in the transaction of their wee, small affairs. Would they not adapt this ability to the larger task? Certainly brains are not necessarily handed out with silver spoons. The common people do not have the same chance for success as the noble-born or the middle class. Often they cannot use their talent. But in a new country like Canada any man with determination can place the feet of his children upon the path that leads to achievement. Two generations usually take a family out of shirt sleeves.—London Advertiser.

THE NORTH SEA FIGHT.

Frank H. Simonds, in the American Review of Reviews: The naval battle in the North sea, spectacular as it was and doubtless the greatest sea fight of modern times, left the two sea-powers where they stood before it. It was a victory for the British or the Germans as you choose to believe British or German statements. The latter, to be sure, were badly shaken by the German confession that they had falsified their report at the outset. A decisive victory for the German press agent there was, because he got his report in first and the British report was one more testimonial to the utter failure of the British to understand the handling of anything that might give them prestige in neutral countries.

Thanks to the fashion in which the British reported their fight, the great majority of Americans believe that the British fleet met with a great disaster and the Germans won a remarkable victory. Nothing that could be said now would change this, but of course, the fact is that the battle was without importance in the decisive sense and that there is a fair chance that the British came off a shade the better, regard being had for the comparative tonnage of the two navies. Certainly the German boast that the British no longer control the sea is empty.

THE BRIEF LIFE IN BASEBALL

According to a fresh estimate by a baseball expert, the average "life" of a player in the big leagues is about five years. Only the particularly brilliant star becomes an "old master" like Mathewson, a pillar of the game like Wagner, or a perennial slugger like Cobb. The lesser lights shine briefly. Then, if they continue to play they drop back to the minor leagues. Speed, "the pace," has much but perhaps not all to do with this retrogression. Over-confidence and that brand of vanity covered by the term "swelled head" have a part in the process. Persistent followers of big league baseball are aware of a certain manner attaching to many of its players. They approach the day's performance more with the air of the highly paid attache than with that of the athletic contestant. They saunter to the plate with the large dignity inbat with the elaboration of cinema actors. Having been hired to furnish ginger to the sport, they provide attitudes instead. Thus they invite the dull thud. One remembers in grateful contrast the lasting ardor of purely amateur players—such enthusiasm as leads the cricketer even in middle age to bowl the game of his life for his English county. The minor leagues are curiously affected, as the expert does not note, by the come and go of baseball. They bring out bright new material for the bidding of the major managers. They receive back to their ranks later, the transient stars whose brief day is done. Thus, as it were, they play both ends of the game against the great middle field of smaller city diversion.—New York World.

A FAMOUS VICTORY.

It was a summer evening,
Old Bethmann's beer was done,.
And he, before the sandy shore,
Was sitting in the sun,
Instructing—for the hundredth time—
His grandson Fritz von Hoggenheim.

"'Twas where the German ocean rears
Its crests of snowy foam,
We met and beat the British fleet,
And then retreated home.
"We bolted like the deuce," said he,
"After that famous victory.

"When things were looking very blue
A shoreward course we shaped;
We lost about a score of ships,
But all the rest escaped,
And, in unconquerable pride,
Made for a port in which to hide.

"A world of human pity filled
Our noble admiral's mind,
And so he broke the action off
And left the foe behind.
We always act like that," said he
"After a famous victory.

"In our communiques we made
No indiscreet remark,
For we had cautiously resolved
To keep our losses dark;
A course invariably applied
By people on the winning side.

"And after that the beaten foe
Blocaded all our ports,
And ran us short of meat and bread,
And goods of various sorts.
Such things as this must always be
After a famous victory."

"But why did you allow them to?"
The artless Fritz inquired,
"Because they had so strong a fleet
They did as they desired.
Such cruel things must always be,
While brutal Britain rules the sea."

"But, grandpapa," said little Fritz,
"If we had really won,
Why did not Prussia rule the sea,
As Britain once had done?"
"Oh, shut your silly mouth," said he,
"It was a famous victory."

"I can't repeat it," replied Mr. Penwiggle. "But I will say that in his choice of language he took every advantage of the fact that his words were not intended for print."

"What code is that?"

"The one which makes it all right to take a man's last dollar, but a breach of etiquette to take his last cigarette."

Harry and James, brothers, were in their playroom for a little recreation after supper. Harry hit James with a stick. An argument followed and in the midst of it the nurse happened in with the news that it was time to retire. James was put to bed first. The nurse said:

"You must forgive your brother before you go to bed. You might die in the night."

After a few minutes elapsed, James replied:

"Well, I'll forgive him tonight. But if I don't die he'd better look out in the morning."

EXPEDITION STUDIES AMAZON INDIANS

Farrabee Spends Three Years in South America for University of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Dr. William C. Farrabee of the university museum has returned to this country after an absence of three years in South America, having accomplished all and more than he expected when he set out. Dr. Farrabee brings with him many ethnological, archaeological and other collections, and on his trip took many photographs, including some of people and places never before seen by white men, so far as is known. His story, in his own words, is as follows:

"The expedition reached Para, at the mouth of the Amazon river, June 23, 1913, and established headquarters in the American consulate. Several voyages were made up the main stream and side rivers of the Amazon and into the interior regions between the rivers.

"The first trip was made to the tribes in the campo, or great grassy highlands, in north Brazil and southern British Guiana. The party traveled by steamship and launch up the Amazon, Negro and Branco rivers to Boa Vista, the center of the cattle industry. From there they continued the journey by canoe up the Uraricuera, Majuri and Maraca rivers and visited representatives of the Macusi, Wapisiana, Poropoto Zapara and Azumara Indians, making collections measuresments, photographs and vocabularies. An attempt was made to see the tribes near the Venezuelan border but was unsuccessful on account of rapids and low water. After reaching a higher point on the Maraca than had previously been attained, they returned and ascended the Takutu river to British Guiana.

"Here some weeks were spent among the Macusi tribes living about the foot of the Kanuki and Pakaraima mountains and the usual material secured. While on the journey the party very fortunately met Mr. Melville, magistrate and protector of Indians, who persuaded them to visit his cattle ranch at Dadanawa, on the Rupununie river, where an opportunity was afforded to study the Wapisianas and the remnant of the Ataroids. The Wapisianas, under the direct care of Mr. Melville, are the most intelligent, wide awake and progressive Indians met with on the whole expedition. They have been taught to work for wages and to know the value of money and labor. They are allowed to retain their former culture and dress.

"At Dadanawa, John Ogilvie joined the expedition and proved invaluable because of his knowledge of Indians and methods of forest and river travel. From this point the party continued on foot south to the Cuduwine river, thence by canoe down this river and up the Essequibo, to its source, passing on the way some villages of the Tarunias. Crossing into Brazilian territory again they continued south almost to the equator, then east and north, on foot and by bark canoe over numerous head streams of the Tronbetas, and finally passed over the divide to the Courantyne and descended that river to its mouth.

"En route several tribes and remnants of tribes were visited and studied, some of whom had never before

Tan, Red or Freckled Skin Is Easily Shed

To free your summer-soiled skin of its muddiness, freckles, blotches or tan, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which can be had at any drug store. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending surface skin begins to come off in fine powder-like particles. Gradually the entire cuticle is absorbed, without pain or inconvenience. The second layer of skin now in evidence presents a spotless whiteness and sparkling beauty obtainable in no other way.

If the heat tends to loosen and wrinkle your skin, there's an effective and harmless remedy you can readily make at home. Just let an ounce of powdered saxolite dissolve in a half-pint witch hazel and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and smooths out the lines, making you look years younger.

A Splendid Way to Reduce One's Weight

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figure "gives us away."

The cause of this over stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of postal note or money order for $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., box 1240, Montreal, Canada.

Motor license revenue in Ontario this year is expected to reach $550,000.

"KOOTENAI" BROWN, OLD-TIME MOUNTAIN GUIDE PASSES AWAY

John George (Kootenai) Brown, of the Waterton Lakes, one of the oldest old-timers and one of the most picturesque figures of Southern Alberta, in fact of the whole west, died recently at Waterton Lakes, west of Cardston at the age of 76 years.

Thus has passed one of the landmarks of the west. Kootenai Brown typified the early "wild and wooly" days perhaps as much as any of the old-timers left. He is understood to have been a graduate of one of the British universities, and an extremely well educated man, who loved the adventurous life, and came to Canada very early in his youth.

He crossed the Rocky Mountains from the Pacific coast in 1863, after which he spent some years in the American army fighting the Indians of the west. When he returned to Alberta, which was in the early 80's, he settled at Waterton Lakes as a hunter, trapper and guide, and he has lived there ever since. His familiar figure is known to many, many western people, especially of the south. He was chief packer of the mounted police when that body of soldiers was busy in the mountain passes in the earlier years.

Kootenai Brown married an Indian woman who died some time ago. The funeral of the old-timer is being held in Cardston tomorrow afternoon.

When the Dominion government some time ago set aside Waterton Lake reserve as a park, Kootenai was selected as superintendent which position he held until 1912. He has conducted many notable parties through the mountain passes.—Lethbridge Herald.

GRAIN MAN TALKS AT PENTICTON MEETING

Says Alberta Wheat Men Want Closer Relationship With British Columbia Growers.

(Special to The Daily News.)

PENTICTON, B. C., July 21.—"It is our desire to establish a closer relationship between British Columbia growers' organizations and the grain growers' organizations of our own and other prairie provinces. We recognize the benefits to be derived from a closer trade arrangement. We buy your fruit; you buy our grain and other products. I have come here to get acquainted with you and to get into touch with conditions at first hand. I may add that this sentiment is shared by our president, Rice Jones, in particular perhaps more than some other prairie grain leaders, principally because Mr. Jones has made a study of your conditions. I thank you for the opportunity of going through your orchards, getting at conditions on the ground and the kindly spirit shown to me during my visit here."

This was the statement made by J. H. Turnbull of Calgary, representing the Alberta Farmers' Elevator company of Alberta in a brief address at the Dominion experimental farm at Trout Creek this afternoon. After tours spent riding through magnificent orchards, sampling the fine cherries that the Okanagan now produces in large quantities and travelling through the provincial government small fruits and vegetable station, the delegates to the fruit growers convention arrived at the experimental farm early in the evening where tea was served.

Mr. Turnbull's remarks were heartily applauded and it is hoped that his visit may have the effect of bringing the consumer of the prairie provinces into closer touch with the fruit producers in British Columbia.

From figures given out here today it was shown that in spite of the new fruit duty the figures quoted on apples are less than quoted at the same period last year.

CHILD LABOR IN ENGLAND OPPOSED

LANCASTER, England.—The question of child labor in war time was discussed by the co-operative congress lately at Lancaster. Mr. Upson moved:

"That this congress protests against the employment of children of school age in agricultural and industrial districts, and demands:

"(a) The raising of the school age at once to an irreducible minimum of 14 for all children;

"(b) The further raising of the school age to 15 at the close of the war; and

"(c) As a necessary corollary free secondary education for all."

On January 31 last 8,000 children between 11 and 12 years were employed on the land, Mr. Upson declared, and since then the number doubtless had considerably increased. There was also a growing demand in industrial districts for the same facilities for the employment of child labor as had been granted to the agricultural districts. But in this matter it was the worker's child who was in danger. It always would be so unless they said at once that young children should not be made the remedy for social, financial and national ills.

Mr. Moss, who seconded, described the child life of the nation as the national reserve, and said they should give a mandate that it should not be used as it was being used now. Child labor was desired because it was cheaper and led to fabulous profits.

The resolution was carried with three dissentients.

In addition to J. H. Hawthornwaite, ex-M. P. P., it is regarded as certain that two other Socialists, representing the Social Democratic party, will run in Victoria at the B. C. general election.

The Monarch Knitting company will build a $50,000 hosiery factory to employ 200 hands at St. Thomas, Ont.

SELLS "SLIDERS" ON SUNDAY.

Pleads Seventeenth Century Act of Charles II. in Defense.

LONDON.—The man who has just failed to convince three judges that an ice-cream wafer is a "dressed meat," and that therefore he ought not to have been fined half a crown by the Aberavon magistrates for breaking the Sabbath, pleaded in his defense a seventeenth century act of parliament which allowed meat to be dressed and sold on Sunday.

The English Puritans, less strict than some of the Puritans of Scotland, held fast to the Englishman's right to a hot Sunday dinner and so, when they passed an act forbidding Sunday labor, they put in a proviso that "it shall not extend to prohibit dressing meat in private families." It was an act of Charles II's reign which went so far as to allow dressed meat to be put on sale on the Sababth. One feels fairly confident, however, that neither Cavalier nor Puritan had ice-cream wafers—is not "sliders" the correct term?—in mind when framing their statutes. Though Charles II. would probably have liked them.

Rev. Alfred Brown, who finishes his pastorate at Sydenham street Methodist church, Kingston,, next June has been invited by the Picton First Methodist church congregation to become their pastor.

seen white men and were unacquainted with matches, guns, clothing, etc. From the vocabularies it seems that dialects of both the Carib and the Arawak languages are spoken in this region. Wars have almost annihilated some of the tribes. In the order encountered the names are as follows: Wairwai, Parikutu, Mapidian, Waiwe, Chikena, Katawian, Toneyan, Diau, Kumayena and Urukuana. The Waiwais are the lightest in color of all the tribes visited during the three years. The Mapidians appear to be very nearly related to the Atarroides. This trip was interesting also because it located for the first time astronomically the southern boundary of Guiana.

"The scond journey was made up the Amazon some 3000 miles into Peru, and large collections were made among the Conebo, Shipbo, Cocama and Yahua tribes. The Conebos are the noted pottery makers of the Amazon. The Yahuas, although they have been in contact with the whites for generations, continue to dress in grass—no one is seen in white man's clothing.

"The third journey was up the Purus and Yacu river and studies were made among the Catyanas, Jamamadis, Ipurinas, Nawisima and Cachiuna tribes. This is the great fine rubber region and the Indians have been in contact with the rubber men long enough to lose much of their former culture, but their languages and sights are interesting.

"The fourth journey was up the Tapajos river to the frontier of the state of Matto Grosso. The Mundurucus, the largest tribe in Northern Brazil, occupy the Cururu and other smaller eastern branches of the Tapajos and the Xingu. Many of their villages were visited—the most remote one for the first time—and much valuable material secured, particularly with reference to their language and mythology. This material, it is hoped, will settle definitely their relation to the Tupi.

"They are the so-called "head hunters of the Amazon." Their traditional enemies now live far away, with Brazilian rubber gatherers between. And, besides, they are beginning to cut rubber themselves and are developing the arts of peace at home. They are a valuable addition to the scant labor supply in that region.

"The few remaining Alpacas live near the mouth of the Juruena in Matto Grosso and have given up their former ferocity.

"In the interior, west of the lower Tapajos, are still living the peaceful Maues, who continue as in traditional times to collect and to trade with the Mundurucus.

"The last journey to the Indians was to the Apallaii, on the Paru and Jary, and the Paikipirangas, on the upper Maraca. These are on the north side of the lower Amazon. Some splendid featherwork is still done by the Apallaii.

"Besides this most valuable ethnological work among some 30 tribes, many of whom were heretofore known only by name, important archaeological excavations were carried out in many places along the Amazon and on the islands near its mouth. Several village sites were explored in the highlands back of Santarem, on the south side of the river and 400 miles up. Near the river Maraca urns in the form of man were found in the clefts of rocks. Among clumps of trees in the high camps of Mazagoa were found urns resting on top of the ground. So also on the Ilha do Para urns, in the form of four-legged animals with a tail and often a human head, had been left standing side by side on the ground in the forest.

"Marajo, the large island in the mouth of the Amazon, has many ancient mounds. Several were excavated, the largest of which was 20 feet high and 600 feet long. A great quantity of pottery was found, but no metal or flint implements and only a few implements of stone. This was to be expected, as there are no suitable stones in the valley. The most interesting things were the 'tangas', the small incised plates and cups and the very large, beautifully painted urns, some of which were three feet high and three feet across.

Makes Old Razors Shave Like New 50¢

No Safety-razor can equal the good old-fashioned razor for easy shaving, if it is kept in good condition by regular honing—stropping alone is not enough. An expert barber has invented a hone that makes honing easy. It prevents "wire-edge" caused by OVER-honing. You can take your dullest old razor and sharpen it on this Perforated Hone.

THE HONE WITH THE HOLES

Just like you would sharpen your pocket-knife—back and forth, or round and round—any way you like so long as you keep it flat to the stone. No skill is needed; you simply can't go wrong. Those little round holes in the hone trim off the roughness or "wire-edge," and leave a keen smooth edge that is a wonder even to barbers.

WHAT MEN SAY ABOUT IT

It made new razors out of my old discarded ones. Shaving is now a pleasure for me."—Milton H. Douglas, Bath, Maine. "I had an old razor I had laid aside. I could not get it sharp. Now it shaves as well as a new razor."—Rev. H. W. McArthur, Gainesville, Ga. "I have fixed up some old razors that 'wouldn't cut soft butter' and they shave fine."—Robert Laking, Kearney, Ont. Thousands say the same.

TRY ONE 30-DAYS

Then, if you don't get the finest shaves you ever had, if it doesn't make your old razor shave like new, we gladly refund price, 50 cents (Large Size $1.00). At your dealer's, or by mail, prepaid. Write for Booklet "Honing Made Easy."

Questions for the Electors

B.C. Prohibition Act

Will It Control?

READ THIS "WIDE OPEN" CLAUSE OF THE ACT

Section 57, Par. 2: "Nothing in this Act shall be construed to interfere

"(a) With the right of any person to import from without the Province liquor for bona fide use in his private dwelling house."

DOES NOT THIS CLAUSE TAKE OUT OF THE HANDS OF THE PROVINCIAL AUTHORITIES ALL THE POWER OF REGULATION AND CONTROL OF THE LIQUOR BUSINESS WHICH IT NOW EXERCISES TO THE PUBLIC ADVANTAGE THROUGH THE EXISTING LICENSE SYSTEM?

IS NOT THE SALE OF LIQUOR UNDER STRICT GOVERNMENT REGULATION AND CONTROL MORE IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST THAN THE UNREGULATED, UNLIMITED AND UNRESTRICTED IMPORTATION ALLOWED BY THE PROPOSED PROHIBITION ACT?

AS FAIR MINDED MEN, THE ELECTORS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA ARE ASKED TO CAREFULLY CONSIDER THE TERMS OF THE PROHIBITION ACT.

BRITISH SAILOR ON NORTH SEA BATTLE

LONDON, England.—The following is a copy of a letter written by a member of the crew of H.M.S. King George V. and forwarded by the recipient to the European office of the Christian Science Monitor. H. M. S. King George V. was one of the British dreadnoughts engaged in the recent North sea battle. While no information of any importance from a technical point of view is given, the letter shows clearly the enthusiasm with which the sailors looked forward to the engagement.

H. M. S. King George V.
June 5, 1916.

Aren't I just the luckiest kid in the world? Not up here six weeks and yet have been through a big naval action. Think as I will, I cannot find words to describe it. Oh, it was just grand! Splendid and tragic!

Little did we think when we suddenly got under way that in a short time we should have our long wish gratified. We had done just the same so many times before. Put to sea at a moment's notice, taking all precautions and going through the same exercises, always on the "qui vive" and yet always finishing up with "no luck."

The morning and first part of the afternoon of May 31 was no different to any other day at sea. In the afternoon I tried to get some sleep. At 3:05 I was wakened by "action stations." That was nothing new either, and we went to our stations thinking it just "practise." Then "buzzers" began to come in but we were so used to them and had been so near and yet so far before, that we could not realize that anything was going to happen. The fleet surgeon told us to get everything from the sick bay and get the battle stations fitted up. Even that was "practise" to us. Then came better news. The battle cruisers and a few battleships had engaged the enemy and were driving them toward us. I managed to get on deck and, jove, it was absolutely wonderful to see the fellows. Not a sign of panic or fear. One or two were walking up and down with a look of contentment on their faces. The past 18 months' strain and continual waiting with the privations the North sea means, had vanished, and one could see behind the mask of pent-up excitement and happiness at the prospects of a fight. There was no brag about it.

The prospects were weighed up in quite a cool, calm and collected manner. I don't think we really expected a fight even then, for we thought only a few Germans would be out and that our cruisers would put them out of mess before we picked them up. Still our hopes ran as high as ever before, and we soon had Jacks and Ensigns floating from every possible show place of the ship. Their firing would have to be some firing to knock our flag down. Now everything was ready and we just had to wait. We were going along at a great speed, leading the line. Gun fire was heard on our starboard bow coming our way. We were packed off to our stations. As the firing came nearer we could not possibly resist the temptation of getting on deck. It was great, and a sight one who was fortunate to see it would never forget.

I must not tell you of our tactics or all I saw, but jove, it was great to see our squadrons open fire. The noise, of course, was intense. During the night I saw a torpedo attack. It was by far the best firework display I have ever seen. I had two hours that night on deck and you can imagine how much sleep I obtained. We were about at daybreak expecting to have another shot at them, but luck was against us, as it was on the previous day. The weather was not bad, but we had to fire at them in a haze.

After seaching for them with no result we came here where we knew that we should have an engagement, if only with a large collier and storeship. We were ready for sea again the same evening. "Some navy!" I guess the first news of the fight must have given the people a nasty shock. Eh? They must thank the Germans for not stating their losses. We have had to find out ourselves, as the heaviest firing took place late in the evening and our night attacks were so successful. Even now the story is not nearly told, and the doubt which I think must exist owing to the news to hand being one-sided will give way to satisfaction at the way the navy upheld her traditions, and came up, almost, if not quite, to the expectations of the people.

I have had a jolly good laugh over the German brag. We cannot come down to their level to argue on the subject. We are content to wait and let them prove how great their "glorious victory" over the "mighty British fleet" is, by their actions. If, as they say, they have crippled us and are masters with "freedom ringing from ocean to ocean," then they surely will start their merchant service again. They would most certainly come out and give vent to the great hatred they have for us by bombarding English towns and landing forces. They will be able to get all the food they require Surely a crippled fleet could show very little opposition to them. On the other hand if they stop in their harbors, as they did after the last setback they had, surely it will spell a victory for us. We know that it is not necessary to prove our victory.

Unfortunately we had heavy losses but such a shadow must always overhang a victory. I think that outsiders must think that, in the excitement of victory we forget those who have given their all, and those who are left behind. That is not so. I only wish the main German fleet had remained to make a fight of it. I feel it would have brought the end of the war much nearer, and so put an end to all this bloodshed. There again, running away is hardly the action of a fleet that is getting so much the better of the fight! Sure "He who fights and runs away," etc. So here's to the day when he fights again and may it be soon! Don't I just wish I could shout what I know all over England. I am sure there would be no "all is lost" crowd.

Write soon and tell me the news, and don't forget to congratulate us on our "great victory" for it is one.

VANCOUVER DOCTOR SOLD LIFE DEARLY

Capt. Haight Accounted for Several Germans in Ypres Attack Before He Was Bayoneted.

A graphic description of the heavy fighting this month in which the Canadian troops bore the brunt of several attacks is contained in a letter from a Toronto officer to Colonel Henry Brock. The communication reads:

"We were ordered to take over a new part of the line—a very historical area well watered by the blood of our own brave fellows—and that of the Huns. It was necessary for me to familiarize myself with the trenches, which were very complicated, in order to put my men at the best points. We had just become accustomed to our new quarters ——. I wish I could tell you the layout of the ground for it is exceptionally interesting, having been fought over many times during the past eighteen months. Suffice it to say that I was very comfortably situated 300 yards behind the front trenches. The third day we were in the shown began at nine o'clock in the morning with a terrific bombardment of the front, support and reserve lines of trenches with 3-inch, 4-inch and 5.9-inch high explosive shells. At the same time the batteries in our rear were treated to a storm of heavy howitzer shells to prevent troops moving. This bombardment was kept up steadily until 3:05 p.m., exactly (by my watch), when the enemy guns lengthened their range and concentrated their fire on a point about half a mile behind our front line. This formed an effectual barrage.

Enemy Attacked

"At the same time the enemy left his trenches and attacked. Of course we could not tell at what point the attack was to be made as the whole line had been treated the same way to shell fire. Our men were "standing to" ready to receive the enemy but, fortunately for us, he chose to attack 190 yards to our left.

The first intimation we had was to observe the signals, white and green rockets, on our left, and then to hear the deadly rattle of machine guns. In spite of the hot reception they received, the enemy kept on, one battalion coming behind the leading battalion in close formation. It was a wonderful sight, though awful. We who were standing at the door of our dugouts could see the evidence of the Huns' advance, and also the terrific bombardment of our own guns (God bless them.) You can have no idea what a delightful sound it was and how cheering to all of us to hear the screech of our own shell—becoming louder and louder as more and more passed over our heads toward the enemy lines. After the terrible punishment the Huns' artillery had given us, we revelled in joy to know that he was getting the same.

"If the munition worker at home could know just what it means to the man in the trenches to have the support of unlimited artillery fire, there would be no need for Lloyd-George to appeal to them to give up the Whitsuntide holidays.

"For about two hours the fighting continued. The severest bombardment that the British front had yet experienced had literally smashed our front and support trenches to pieces and therefore the enemy were able to advance rapidly for the first 50 yards. Desperate hand-to-hand encounters took place. General Mercer, who with General Victor Williams, had been inspecting the front line, was wounded and was carried back to battalion headquarters.

"Captain Haight, who is medical officer to the—Battalion, was dressing wounded soldiers in the dressing station, when the Hung swept up to the station, entered and bayoneted the sergeant and men who were assisting them.

"Infuriated Capt. Haight grabbed his Colt revolver, backed up into a corner and accounted for several Huns before his revolver was empty. Then he fell, pierced by the bayonets of the cowardly assassins.

"At five o'clock the tumult quieted down but our splendid artillery kept up their glorious work.

"At 8:05 p.m., our counter-attack was made and it was at this time that two of our battalions who have several times before distinguished themselves, covered themselves with glory. In the face of a withering fire from artillery and machine guns they jumped over the parapet and attacked. Driving the dastardly Huns before them they succeeded in regaining a large part of the lost ground which was literally strewn with German corpses.

Awful, But Magnificent.

"The deafening roar from the hundreds of shell, accompanied by the brilliant illumination of bursting shrapnel, white flares and variegated rockets formed something which I never hope to see gain. It was awful but magnificent. Expecting every moment to be attacked, we awaited with nerves steeled for the encounter.

"Our men have fought magnificently and every one is a hero. Considering the storm of shell to which our battalion was subjected. Our casualties were miraculously light. One could hardly believe that so many shell could be fired with such little loss of life. Every man stuck to his post without flinching. The stretcher bearers, several of whom were wounded, did great work, dressing and carrying out men under heavy fire and returning immediately for more."

The gate receipts at the Edmonton fair this year totalled $23,937, an increase over last year.

Captain Austin L. Saunders of Winnipeg, son of Edward Saunders, managing director of the Canada Land Investment Co., Toronto, was killed in action.

A dollar bill that probably told a tale of high living was encountered by City Treasurer Corwin of Paterson, N. J., while he was making out the city payroll. On its face was written: "The last of $100,000."

At Fiske, Sask., John McLeod Stirling and William Colwell Stirling, aged 9 and 7, sons of William C. Stirling, postmaster at Hanna, Alta., were drowned in a well.

THE POWER OF WILL AND DRUNKENNESS

Will Power Alone Will Not Stop the Excessive Use of Liquor.

The temperance advocate and total abstainer are strong in their declaration that drunkenness is a mean, low and disgraceful habit, from which any ordinary person can free himself by the exercise of his will power alone.

Medical men, by patient research, have demonstrated that drunkenness is a poisoning and that the drunkard is one in need of medical attention.

The disease of alcoholism can surely be cured, thanks to the Neal treatment, which has demonstrated that it is an infallible remedy striking at once at the roots of the trouble. There has always been a demand for the treatment for habitual drunkenness which can be administered internally, without the use of dangerous hypodermic injections.

Experience has taught that no institute extant other than the Neal Institute in Cranbrook, B. C., has ever been successful in treating drunkenness in less than four weeks' time. It makes no difference how long a man has been drinking, how much or how little he drinks, or what he drinks, the Neal treatment has never failed to cure in three days' time, and without the use of that devilish little tormentor of the flesh, the hypodermic syringe. Just bear in mind that there is no such thing as a "secret cure" for drunkenness, and you are taking great risk in administering these remedies.

had been prepared. It had also been proved that the pluggers had voted from two to eight times each.

Independents Support Government.

Touching upon the manner in which the independent electorate of the province was going to the support of the Conservative government, Mr. Irving mentioned the appointment of Mayor Alex Stewart of Victoria as finance minister. Hon. Mr. Stewart had been for long known as a Liberal, but he had seen that the interests of the province demanded the return to power of the government.

Mr. Bowser was going to the country with a strong cabinet behind him. Dr. Rose would be elected and he could be relied upon to give a good account of himself at Victoria, Mr. Irving concluded.

Eagle hall rang with applause when a motion by Donald Guthrie and I. G. Nelson that nominations close, after the chairman had asked if there were any further names to be placed before the convention, was passed.

Expressing his thanks for the nomination and for the unanimous support which had been given him Dr. Rose remarked that his selection as Conservative nominee had not been of his own choosing. In fact, from a business point of view it would have been very much better for him to have refused to accept the honor. W. R. Maclean had been nominated last year and it was only when a large number of the members of the party had urged him to run that he had consented to be a candidate. He paid a warm tribute to Mr. Maclean, who had retired. "Mr. Maclean has acted in a very gentlemanly manner throughout. He has done everything possible to make it easy for men and he will be with us heart and soul in the election," said Dr. Rose amid cheers from all parts of the hall.

Mr. Maclean, he continued, had worked very hard at Victoria and he had been very much misrepresented by newspapers at the coast.

"I feel that with the supoprt of my friends my election is assured and I believe that when I go to Victoria next winter, I will be able to show you that your confidence has not been misplaced," he said.

Will Work for Highways.

Dr. Rose remarked that he had lived in Nelson 17 years and that he knew the needs of the city and district. Nelson was the commercial as well as the geographical centre of one of the richest districts in British Columbia in mineral, forest and agricultural resources, but if Nelson were to gain the benefits it was entitled to by its position it must have better means of communication. That was one of the things which must be impressed upon the government. The government had done a great deal in the past but there was still much to be done in this direction. He mentioned a cut-off between Thrums and Brilliant, a road between Nelson and Ymir and a road from Queen's Bay to Mirror Lake, to give access to Kaslo, as being necessary. He would make an earnest endeavor to secure their construction.

The Conservatives had been in power for 13 years, first under Sir Richard McBride and then under Hon. W. J. Bowser, Dr. Rose continued. They had taken office after a succession of unstable governments that had had meteoric careers which had brought the province almost to bankruptcy. Some lasted a few months, some one or two years and this period culminated in the fiasco of Hon. Joseph Martin's administration.

Charges Fall to the Ground.

The improvement which has been wrought in conditions, the development which had been carried out during the past 13 years, was marvelous. Ninety million dollars had been raised and expended in public works to enable the resources of British Columbia to be developed. And the Liberal opposition, after making all kinds of charges and insinuations, could not find a single instance of corruption when every facility was granted to them in the investigations which were carried out. "A better tribute to the government could not be found than the fact that Messrs. Brewster and Macdonald could not substantiate a single charge against its integrity," said Dr. Rose.

Dr. Rose warned his suporters against over-confidence. If they got out the vote he was sure that he would head the poll. As far as he was concerned he said there would be no personalities in this campaign.

Fred C. Moffatt remarked that in the course of his business he was in close touch with the attorney-general's department and that Mr. Bowser as a public man had won his admiration by the close attention he paid to the business of the department. The premier had to do an imense amount of work and had much important business to but he invariably found time to give personal attention to matters affecting Nelson or other questions brought before him. The manner in which he attended to the details of the department showed how he dealt with all business which came before him.

Harold Selous drew applause by congratulating Dr. Rose on his election on September 14 next.

Supports Stable Government.

Ald. Alex Leith emphasized the value to the province of the stability of the present government. Before he came to British Columbia it was a standing joke in Ontario that there were two things no one ever knew until he read the morning paper—they were the state of the weather and who was in office on that day in British Columbia. At that time everyone knew of the potential wealth of British Columbia and the opportunities it offered, but the uncertainty as to government until the Conservatives took office kept the people in the east from taking much practical interest in this province.

The McBride government and the Bowser administration had provided and maintained stability in the province, potentially the richest in the Dominion.

He continued that Nelson could not live within itself. No city was stronger than the country at the back of it. To secure the full benefits from the rich surounding territory he agreed with Dr. Rose that an extension of the road system was necessary. He was confident that Dr. Rose, who had mentioned several roads of vital importance, would work effectively to bring about their construction. He suggested that the best method of securing the construction of the Ymir road was not to ask for its completion out of one year's estimate, but to have it built during several years.

At the suggestion of George Motion, president of the Nelson Conservative association, Ald. A. S. Horswill, president of the Fairview Conservative association, whose territory is now in Nelson riding, was elected tothechair. Mr. Motion in making the suggestion referred to the enlarged riding and to the future cooperative work of the city and suburban associations for the benefit of Greater Nelson.

Pte. Arthur Varyard, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, now at the Royal Military College, Kingston, has received word that his brother, Pte. William Varyard, has been awarded the D. C. M.

It was the first case ever tried in Stony Gulch and the jury had sat for hours arguing and disputing. At last they straggled back and the foreman, a tall mountaineer, expressed the general opinion: "We don't think he did it," he said, slowly, "for we allow he wa'nt there; but we think he would ef he'd had the chanst".

London has been chosen for the site of a Canadian branch factory of another large American industry, the New Jersey firm of H. S. Hall, manufacturers of silk gloves.
