FIX RULE KOOTENAY CLAIMS

COMMUNITY TO TAKE PART IN ARMISTICE DAY

1000 School Children to Sing at Service at Cenotaph

TWO BANDS TO ACT; MANY BODIES JOIN

Dr. Rose to Preside Over Commemorating of Fallen

Participation in the Armistice Day commemoration ceremonial at the war memorial at 11 o'clock this forenoon under the leadership of the Canadian Legion will be community-wide.

The various schools will attend, with probably 1000 pupils in ranks, and will sing "O Canada."

Vernon street between Ward and Stanley will be closed to vehicular traffic until after the exercises, as the entire street space will be required. As the hour for the ceremony of decorating the war memorial with wreaths approaches the block will be roped off by the police.

Business establishments are expected to respond to the request of Mayor R. D. Barnes, by suspending business for a short time before and after 11 o'clock.

The Canadian Legion and ex-service men will parade from the Legion building, led by the Canadian Legion Bugle band, which will render the musical requiem to the fallen. The City band will be on duty to lead the singing.

I. O. D. E., Order of Eastern Star, and other organizations will attend as units, while the city council, school board, and governmental authorities, and pastors of the city, will form a group.

Dr. W. O. Rose will be chairman for the purposes of the short program, and will make a brief reference to the significance of the commemoration.

As the magnitude of the assembly will make detailed marshalling necessary, it will be desirable for units to arrive around 10:45 o'clock. The fire siren on Baker street will sound at 10:58 o'clock, and will continue until 11, its ceasing being the signal for the two minutes tribute of silence with which the program will open here, in common with the country at large.

In addition to this community commemoration of the fallen, and of the signing of the Armistice of the Great War, there will be two other observances in the evening—the annual banquet of the Canadian Legion membership and their ladies, celebrating the joyous side of the Armistice, and the annual memorial service in St. Saviour's pro-cathedral, held by Ven. Archdeacon Fred H. Graham. At the latter a memorial tablet to the late Major Gilbert Anderson, who commanded "A" company of the 54th Kootenay battalion, will be unveiled.

REACHES ENGLAND

CAPT. F. CHRISTIONSEN

CALSHOT, Eng., Nov. 10—(AP)—The giant German air liner DO-X completed the second leg of her flight to the United States today, landing at Calshot air port at 3:37 p.m. (10:37 a.m. E.S.T.).

The huge passenger ship came down on the waters off Calshot after making a four-hour trip from Amsterdam where it had been waiting for favorable weather conditions for the past week.

MAY HOLD NEXT IMPERIAL MEET IN A DOMINION

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10.—Possibility of the next Imperial conference being held in one of the dominions, was intimated by Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, secretary of state for the dominions in the British government, in a transatlantic wireless telephone conversation with E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific railways.

NEW STORM COMING

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Nov. 10.—A new storm was predicted tonight over the Pacific ocean, which took 18 lives over the wave-lashed week-end, and battered shipping up and down the coast before subsiding under cover of a dense fog.

The weather bureau reported a storm off southeast Alaska was travelling toward Washington and Oregon.

C. P. R. HOTEL FOR LONDON, ENG.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10.—Announcement was made today by E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific railway company, of the acquisition of a site for the hotel proposed to be erected by the company in London, England.

PROCTER TRACK LAYING ABOUT ENDED

Expect Finish by End of Month; Contractors Through

10 MONTHS AHEAD OF THE LIMIT

Fatality List Small During 18 Months of Rock Work

After 18 months of strenuous construction work approximately 35 miles of C. P. R. railway grade has been completed between Procter and Kootenay Landing, 10 months before the contract called for the completion of the link.

In addition to that, track laying being done by the C. P. R. has gone ahead with such rapidity that only about four miles in the middle of the line remain uncompleted. It is expected that track laying will be completed by the end of the month.

Though the 35 miles of heavy rock work necessitated the use of carload after carload of high explosives for blasting, only one man was killed as the direct result of an explosion. Only two other men were killed on construction, and these by falling rock.

Procter link contractors yesterday challenged those on any other similar construction on the continent to produce a better record of work with less fatality than that of the Procter link.

When the construction was started it was hazarded by many that a man would be killed by explosion for every mile of construction.

Procter, which has been a veritable beehive of industry for the past year and a half, is daily showing fewer signs of activity.

YOUTH KILLED AS HE TRIES TO LIFT A 1000-POUND RAIL

SHEO, Sask., Nov. 10—George Odowichuk, 18 tried to lift a 1000 pound rail from a pile today, fell backward when he had lifted an end a few feet and was killed when another rail, dislodged from the pile fell across his throat. A young companion was not strong enough to lift the rail from Odowichuk's neck.

SENATOR TURRIFF IS DEAD

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—Senator J. T. Turriff, 75, of Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, died at his home here this afternoon after lengthy illness.

Senator Turriff had been in poor health for some years but was able to attend to his duties at the special session of parliament this fall. The exertion, however, caused a decline in his health and he failed rapidly after the close of the session.

Born at Little Metis, Quebec, in 1855, Senator Turriff was educated there and in Montreal. He went west in 1878 at the age of 23, locating first at Morden, Man., and later at Carlyle, Sask. He was the first member for the Moose Mountain district in the northwest council and was reelected for the same district to the northwest legisature in 1891.

11 ARE KILLED

BUCHAREST, Nov. 10—Eleven persons were killed and nine were critically injured in a collision of a passenger train and a motorbus at Ploesti tonight. The accident was laid to the neglect of an employee to close the crossing gates along a highway as the train approached.

ECONOMICS IN POWER, AUSTRIA

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 10—The fascist Heimwehr succeeded in gaining eight seats in yesterday's general Austrian elections while the Socialists increased their strength, obtaining 72 mandates. The Christian Social party, previously in control fell from 73 seats to 66 while the national economic block gained the balance of power, with 19 seats.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 10.—Definite protest against the proposed Boston call of the "lady" ships of the Canadian National steamships Canada-West Indies service was placed before Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, at a meeting held in the board of trade rooms here today. It is contended that the Boston call would work serious injury to the port of Halifax and the maritimes generally.

TORONTO, Nov. 10—Public services before cenotaphs throughout the province tomorrow followed by the customary two minutes' silence will mark Ontario's twelfth observance of Armistice Day.

...ETT PAYS TRIBUTE TO THOSE ...O DIED FOR CANADA IN THE WAR

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—(By the Canadian Press.)—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, prime minister, cabled the following Armistice day message from England:

"On this 12th anniversary of the Armistice, I join with my fellow citizens in paying profound and grateful tribute to the memory of those who died for Canada and the Empire. We will not forget them nor will we forget that to us was handed the trust to maintain inviolate the great principles of justice, freedom and fair dealing for which they gave their lives."

WILLINGDON IS PRESENT WHEN CLUB IS BURNED

OTTAWA, Nov. 10—The Royal Ottawa Gold club exclusive country club on the Aylmer road across the river from the capital was burned to the ground this afternoon with a loss estimated at more than $200,000. The building was completely destroyed except for a new wing housing the caddies' quarters. Insurance of $120,000 was carried.

Viscount and Lady Willingdon, Sir George Perley, acting prime minister, Sir Robert Bordon and Sir William Clark were among those at luncheon when the fire broke out in an attic. They were forced to vacate the clubhouse. Most of the members' effects were saved before the blaze got beyond control.

PRINCE OF WALES MAKES AN APPEAL FOR POPPY FUND

LONDON, Nov. 10—(AP)— The crowds which stood this afternoon to watch the parade of the "Lord Mayor's show" paused on the day home to pay their own Armistice day tribute at the cenotaph in Whitehall and late this evening there was still a long line winding toward the shrine of the nation's war dead. Many in the crowd wore the red poppies, forty million of which have been made by blind and maimed veterans for sale tomorrow.

The Prince of Wales tonight broadcast a special appeal in aid of the veterans' fund.

"The war cost us 1,000,000 of our finest lives," he said, "and left us with a responsibility to their survivors which will remain while there is a man or a dependent needing our help."

LIMIT TIME IN RESERVE ARMY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov 10—(AP)—A plan for limiting the period of service of army conscripts was adopted by the League of Nations reparatory disarmament commission today, thus disposing of one of the most difficult articles in the draft convention under consideration. The time limit is to be fixed by the general conference.

After protracted debate over the merits of establishment of a universal top figure for all contracting parties and a proposal that each state fix its own maximum, the commission voted to establish a universal maximum and a maximum for each nation.

The provision that these maximums should apply to land, sea and air forces was incorporated at the insistence of the French delegations.

TUNNEY CASE TO GO JURY TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—One judge and a dozen referees, a strange array indeed for a retired heavyweight champion to face, took over tonight the question of what part of $526,812.42—if any—Gene Tunney owes Tim Mara.

Mara, a Broadway bookmaker, seeks more than one quarter of Tunney's ring fortune of $2,000,000 for alleged breach of contract. Counsel summed up their cases today before Justice Peter A. Hatting in supreme court. Jury will retire to bring in a verdict tomorrow after hearing Justice Hatting's charge.

LIBERAL MAJORITY CUT

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10—With the death today of Senator Turriff the Liberal majority in the senate was cut to three. The vacancy will be the first to be filled by the Bennett government. Senator Turriff styled himself a Progressive but gave fairly consistent support to the Liberals.

SEIBERT IS INJURED

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10.—Babe Seibert, regular left-winger of the National Maroon hockey club, will probably be out of the game when the locals meet the Senators at Ottawa Tuesday night, due to a wrenched back.

FARMER KILLED

NEWDALE, Man., Nov. 10.—Struck by a gravel truck as he walked along the highway a few miles north of here today Meatro Harisimchuk, 35-year-old farmer, was instantly killed. An inquest will be held. B. D. Nichol, driver of the truck, said he did not see Harisimchuk.

MACDONALD HAD TO WATCH OUT FOR BENNETT

So States British Premier, Speaking of Imperial Conference

LONDON, Nov. 10. (CP and AP)—Questioning that the world had learned much since the great war, Premier Ramsay MacDonald pleaded for disarmament in a speech given at the lord mayor's banquet tonight. "The old Adam is still rampant," he said. "Words are used which make us doubt how much the world has learned by the bitter, tragic, experience of 1914 to 1918.

RAMSAY MacDONALD

"Great Britain, while perfectly prepared to lead the way, looks behind at the same time as she looks before her, and wants to know how the other nations are following her, because she cannot allow herself to be isolated in the steps she is taking to secure peace."

He said he had "the most hopeful expectations' of the naval negotiations which have been renewed between France and Italy.

Referring to the work of the British Imperial conference, Mr. MacDonald described the gigantic task which he and the dominion premiers had faced. As to economic deliberation, the premier humorously remarked that his chief trouble had been to see that Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Canadian premier, "didn't run away with too much of the swag." Presumably he referred to Mr. Bennett's fight for Imperial preference and reciprocal tariffs.

The lord mayor's banquet itself was a brilliant affair. Sir Phene Neal, new lord mayor, received the guests. Presence of the dominion premiers gave unusual interest to the occasion.

Other guests were members of the cabinet, army and navy officers, diplomats and prominent figures of British public life.

MEIGHAN TALKS OF WAR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press staff writer).—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former prime minister of Canada, as chief speaker before a good will congress of the World Alliance for International Friendship in unequivocal language tonight expressed his concept of a world imperilled by war.

He said, "Civilization must end war or war will end civilization."

"War has lost its efficacy; it can only bring defeat and despair for both conquered and conquerors."

"The policy of the governments is dominated by fear."

"There has to be found a substitute for armaments, something else that will bring security not only to one but to all."

ATKINSON WILL REPRESENT B. C., OTTAWA MEETING

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 10.—Consideration of a co-ordinated policy on agricultural matters between the federal and provincial departments across Canada will be given at a conference called by Hon. Robert Weir, federal minister of agriculture, to open at Ottawa on November 17. Hon. William Atkinson, provincial minister of agriculture, will leave shortly to attend on behalf of British Columbia.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLS SELF

INDIAN HEAD, Sask., Nov. 10.—Frederick Fenske, of Regina, accidentally shot himself to death while on a duck-hunting expedition near here today. His gun discharged as he sat in the back seat of the automobile in which he and two companions were driving to Strawberry lake.

WILL REPEAL COLONIAL LAW VALIDITY ACT

Act of 1865 To Disappear, Result of Conference

PREMIERS THROUGH WITH SUGGESTIONS

Several Other Alterations Recommended by Premiers

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press staff correspondent).—The prime ministers of the Empire spent today in rounding out the subject of equality of status. Until the early hours of this evening they travelled the perplexing paths of nationality and the other anomalies left over by the Imperial conference of 1926.

The end of the day found the premiers with all their constitutional recommendations completed for the approval of the plenary session of the conference. When they have been thus approved, the recommendations will become formal decisions of the Imperial conference.

Last on the day's list came the issue of appeals to the privy council. But here the premiers made no recommendation, whatever.

Today's decisions confirm, in all essential particulars, the recommendations of the 1929 conference in the operation of the Dominion laws. The colonial laws validity act of 1865 will be repealed and thus no act passed by a dominion parliament will be void on the ground that it is repugnant to the law of England. But to this recommended repeal there is a condition attached. In Canada the criticism has been made that the recommendation of

FERNIE VETS ASK TOLMIE DECLARE A FULL HOLIDAY

Back Up Resolution of the House; Win Civic Holiday

After getting Armistice Day at Fernie declared a full civic holiday, including also a holiday for the schools, the Fernie branch of the Canadian Legion Friday wired Premier Tolmie, urging him to have a provincial holiday declared, according to a letter received here from H. A. Bryant, third vice-president of the provincial command.

The reason the Fernie Legion made this request of the premier was the advanced stand which the legislature took at the last session, in requesting the Dominion authorities to make November 11 a national holiday.

So far as Fernie was concerned, the Legion at first had hopes only of obtaining a three-hour suspension of business, but at the council session Thursday night the council unitedly requested Mayor J. L. Gates to declare Armistice Day a civic holiday, and he acceded.

FLIER AT GOAL

NO CHANGE

LONDON, Nov. 10—Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, the foreign secretary, informed the house of commons today that the British government considers the recent change of government in Brazil in no way affects the diplomatic relations between that country and Great Britain.

170 TONS OF MAIL CARRIED, PLANES SINCE JANUARY

500 Aircraft Flying in Canada; 717 Pilots in Dominion

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—(By the Canadian Press.)—For the three months ending September 30, the aircraft engaged upon the 12 air mail services which now operate in Canada carried 119,301 pounds of mail, bringing the total from the beginning of he current year up to 379,242 pounds, or roughly 170 tons. One half of the services operate out of Montreal.

Two new services are projected, according to the quarterly report of the civil aviation branch of the department of national defence. One will run from Amos to Sisco in Quebec, 42 miles, and the second from the Peace river to North Vermillion in the Northwest Territories. The latter calls for 16 return trips during the winter and will be continued for four years.

The report shows that there are 500 aircraft flying in Canada, while the number of pilots is 717, of whom 403 are commercial pilots. The Dominion has 72 air harbors.

BOY FOUND HANGED

SMITHVILLE, Ont., Nov. 10—Foul play is suspected in connection with the death on his father's farm near here today of 12-year-old Charles R. Lampman, whose body was found hanging from a tree. James L. Lampman, father of the adopted child, and local police claim the boy could not have climbed the tree from which he was found hanging, and say the noose about his neck was knotted by more expert hands than this.

DECIDE BASIS PAYING CLAIMS ON ROBERTSON

Mr. Justice Gregory Says Compute Share Value at Assignment

REDUCES TOTAL SUM TO BE PAID

Decision to Guide St. Denis in 160 Cases Three Test Cases

Judgment given at Vancouver Friday by Mr. Justice Gregory of the supreme court, on three test cases appealed from the findings of D. StDenis, trustee in bankruptcy in the case of Hugh W. Robertson, Limited, established the rule that claims against the bankrupt Nelson brokerage house must be computed on the basis of the value that shares claimed for had on the day the assignment took place. The judgment, which was the result of a friendly reference by different counsel concerned, with the concurrence of the trustee, held that the brokerage house was the agent of the purchasers.

E. P. Dawson and E. G. Matthew, who put before the court the various contentions for decision, and Mr. StDenis returned from the coast Saturday night, with the judgment which lays down the lines on which some 160 claims of late customers of the house, nearly all Kootenay residents, will be settled. Mr. Justice Gregory gave the costs against the estate.

Some of the many claimants claimed for all the money they had paid in for the undelivered shares, and others for the value the shares had reached on the date of the assignment, while still others held that they had the option of choice between the two bases. The cases selected as the test ones represented these three classes.

StDENIS EXPLAINS EFFECT

"The judgment given by Mr. Justice Gregory will have the effect of materially reducing the liabilities of Hugh W. Robertson, limited, from what was claimed by the various claimants," said Mr. StDenis yesterday.

"This will of course mean that while there will not be any greater amount of money for distribution among them, the rate of dividend will be increased. But in the majority of instances claimants had purchased these shares, for which they now claim, when prices were

PASSENGERS PACE DECK AS HUGE DO-X MAKES HOP OVER CHANNEL

(Correspondent for the Associated Press who made the flight aboard the DO-X from Amsterdam to Calshot on the second leg of the aeroplane's flight to the United States.)

CALSHOT, Eng., Nov. 10—(AP)—The monster bird "DO-X" hoisted herself by her bootstraps off the Zuyder Zee today for a running jump across nearly 400 miles of North Sea and English channel and let her down here smoothly at the end of the second stretch of its trans-Atlantic flight to New York.

Fifteen men in her crew, 211 passengers, a black cat and Hans, the canary, shared the first sea-going trip this 50-ton giant has made since she flew to Amsterdam from Altenrhein, Switzerland, where she was hatched.

It was an epochal trip, from the time the big ship flirted the last of Holland's sea from her tail only to drop back on the water for a minute, while some minor engine repairs were made. The ship then took off again for Calshot.

Heading across the open water, the scenery got monotonous. There were miles of English channel to starboard and only a hazy outline of continental coast to port. The passengers took to pacing the decks as though on an ordinary steamer.

The feature of life of the upper decks seemed to be a noise like a boiler factory, and the interior of the tremendous wings looked like the nightmare of a sky-scraper steel-worker.

All in all this was an international venture. Among the passengers three of whom were women, were eight Germans, six Hollanders, three Americans, two Italians, one English woman, and one Jugoslav. In the

TWO AIR FORCE PLANES ON WAY

ALERT BAY, B. C., Nov. 10.—(CP)—Two Royal Canadian air force seaplanes, en route from Comox, Vancouver Island, to Prince Rupert, to take part in the hunt for the six airmen lost in northern British Columbia, arrived here late today. They will continue to Prince Rupert tomorrow. Prince Rupert is approximately 200 miles from Albert bay. The planes were to have taken off from Comox yesterday but were delayed by fog until today.

Four airplanes searched the wilderness country in vain today for the missing fliers. Piloted by W. J. Barrows and Harry Blunt, two planes took off from Vancouver, en route to Atlin, while a third piloted by R. L. van der Byl and W. A. Herss hopped from Prince George for Atlin.

$2,500,000 DAGAGE, LIVERPOOL FIRE

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Nov. 10.—(AP — Sudden fire roaring through the dry timbers of a small waterfront warehouse today spread to adjacent buildings including the premises of the British-American Tobacco company, and caused damage estimated at $2,500,000.

Hundreds of firemen fought the blaze for five hours before it was under control. It was the most serious fire on the Merseyside in many years.

H. V. Haight of Montreal Tells of Engineering Features at Plant

KYOTO, Japan., Nov. 10—(CP)—The manner in which Canadian engineering had met the task put upon it by the geography and geology of the country, was outlined here today in an address before the Japanese businessmen by H. V. Haight, of Montreal.

The building of the Intercolonial and Canadian Pacific Railways, and later the group now known as the Canadian National, was described by the speaker.

Mr. Haight dealt with the enormous facilities required by the national ports. In 1928 Montreal delivered 211,000,000 bushels of grain, more than the total delivered by the eight leading United States ports. Vancouver had shipping capacity for loading 14 vessels at once at the rate of 128,000 bushels per hour.

The waterway system consisting of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river, together with its canals and future possibilities was described.

In regard to mining Mr. Haight remarked that Canada came first in the production of nickel and asbestos, producing in each case about four-fifths of the world total. In gold production Canada stood third. South Africa being first and the United States second. But Canada was expected soon to pass the United States.

A notable coal mine was one of the collieries of the Dominion Coal company at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, which extended under the ocean three miles, and yet was the driest of the company's mines.

There were many engineering features of note in the enterprises of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada at Trail, British Columbia. The solution of the problem of separating the various metals in the complex ores of the Sullivan mine of this company, was an outstanding achievement.

FOURTH BILLIARD MATCH UNDER WAY

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., Nov. 10—(C P cable)—With the third match of the international billiards tournament finished on Saturday with Walter Lindrum and Tom Newman the victors over Joe Davies and Clarke McConachy, respectively, the fourth match of the series got under way today.

Lindrum and McConachy are playing here, Davies and Newman at London. As in other matches Lindrum gave the other three players each a 7000-point lead. Today's play closed: Lindrum, 1217; McConachy 8229; Davies, 9085; and Newman 8241.

Scores in the third match were: Lindrum, 29,276; Davies, 24,885; Newman 29,024; McConachy, 20,851.

RAIN PUTS END TO A DRY FORTNIGHT

After a fortnight of dry weather, Nelson suffered a change of fortune Monday, rain falling during the great part of the day, though lightly. The precipitation up to 5 p.m. was .14 inch. On the other hand, the mild temperature prevailed, its extremes for the 24 hours ending at 5 p.m. being 38 and 53 degrees.

almost at their peak, and these claimants must now be only allowed to claim for the value of these shares at the date of assignment, which reduces their claims to a very large extent. Those who purchased shares after the break in prices in November, 1929, would seem to be getting a decided advantage over those who purchased earlier, inasmuch as their shares increased in value by the date of assignment, and they are permitted to claim not only for the monies they had paid in, but also for the difference between what they paid in and the selling value of their shares at the date of the assignment.

"The allowance or disallowance of the various claims will now be proceeded with in accordance with the judgment as rendered."

Mr. Justice Gregory's judgment was as follows:

REASONS FOR JUDGMENT

In the supreme court of British Columbia in bankruptcy, Hugh W. Robertson, limited, (bankrupt) re Mary A. Weatherhead, re Mary A. Vigneux, re Julius P. Gussin. Reasons for the judgment of Hon. Mr. Justice Gregory:

"These are three appeals from a disallowance by the trustee in bankruptcy, of a portion of the 'appellants' claims.

"In all cases the appellants employed the bankrupt stock brokers to purchase certain stocks and shares for them. It is admitted that the shares were duly purchased as required, but that the trustee in bankruptcy has not now got them to deliver. There is no evidence as to what has become of them, and of course no suggestion that the trustee has disposed of them.

"1. Gussin paid for his shares in full, and claimed their value on the date of assignment plus the sum of $37.50 received by the bankrupt as a dividend on the shares while in his possession, making a total of $1807.50 as the shares had appreciated in value at the time of the assignment. He was only allowed the amount Gussin had paid (less the broker's charges) and the dividend of $37.50. The appreciation of $7.50 per share, amounting to $370, was disallowed. This was wrong; his claim should have been allowed in full.

OWNER LOSES DEPRECIATION

"2. Mrs. Vigneux paid $946 for her shares, and she claimed the full amount so paid. Her stocks had depreciated to the extent of $605.25, and she was allowed the sum of $340.75, being the value of her stocks on the day of assignment. This I think was correct. It was claimed on her behalf, on the strength of Re Iveston Ex Parte Gurner, referred to in 4 E. & E. Dig. 313, that she had the option of claiming either the value of the stock at the time of the assignment in bankruptcy, or the return of the money she had paid, whichever was most advantageous. The report of that case, 1 Mont. D. & deGex 497, is not in the library, but it is clear from the digest reference that that was a different case. It was a case of a trustee who sold stock, forming a trust fund, and converted the proceeds to his own use, and it was held that on his bankruptcy the cestui trust had the option of proving for either the amount of the proceeds of the stock, or for its value at the time of bankruptcy.

"3. Mrs. Weatherhead was allowed only the amount of money she had actually paid the bankrupt plus a dividend of $18.75, received by the bankrupt on her shares while in its possession. Her shares had materially increased in value at the time of the bankruptcy. Her claim must be treated in the same way as Mr. Gussin's. The fact that she purchased on margin can, I think, make no difference in principle, as she had the right at any time after the purchase of her behalf to call for a delivery of the shares, upon paying the balance due on them and the interest upon that amount. The bankrupt only had lien upon them for such balance and interest. In making up her account she must, of course, be charged with that interest up to the day of the bankruptcy.

HELD STOCKS AS AGENT

"All three cases are, I think, governed by the same principle.

"The bankrupt was the appellants' agent to buy. It did buy, and thereafter it held the stocks as agent for appellants.

"Appellants have lost their stocks and have a right to prove for their value at the date of the assignment regardless of whether they paid much or little for them.

"Appellants were all represented by one solicitor, and, as I understand, the cases were in reality friendly test cases. The costs will be paid out of the bankrupt's estate."

ARCTIC BOUDOIRS ICILY FURNISHED

But Out of Door Life and Sub-Zero Climate Are Fine for Health

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 10—The simplicity and satisfaction of frozen beans for breakfast, the solid comfort of deerskin covered beds of ice, the Eskimo's joy in the "makings of spring"—these and a score other characteristics of the Arctic combine to give a vivid picture of the white man's life in the north, as conveyed in letters reaching Sydney from Dr. Hugh A. Stuart, who has completed a year of service in the land of midnight sunshine.

Dr. Stuart's communication reached Sydney late last month by the government ship Beothic, on which Dr. Stuart returned to his station at Pangnirtung, Baffin Land, from Pand's inlet, whither he had gone—covering the 950 miles by dog-team in 52 days—in order to examine en route all the native on the east coast of Baffin Land to determine the prevalence of tuberculosis.

Leaving Pangnirtung on February 14, with dog-team and native, Dr. Stuart was forced to return a week later, when his tent was blown to ribbons by a blizzard. For two days and nights he was forced to huddle under the remains. The second trip, however, begun on March 14 and ending on May 15, was uneventful. It was the second time a through run from Pangnirtung to Pond's inlet had been made by a white man.

Dr. Stuart says the weather last winter was "quite good." There were some cold spells—about 45 degrees below zero, but it was clear, for the most part. "The out of door life has suited me splendidly," he continues, "and I have already gained 15 pounds. All year I have been in perfect health and have never had even an ordinary cold. It is one of the remarkable things about this country, that in spite of the extraordinary exposure to cold, no one ever gets pneumonia . . . the climate, despite the rigors is an excellent one for good health."

SMALL AFFAIR

"The house is a small affair of three rooms, consisting of a bedroom, kitchen and dispensary. The floors are of hardwood and they are very well laid, so it is not exactly an igloo.

"Of course, I have slept many times in snow igloos since coming here and I hasten to say that they are very comfortable.

"They are built in a very masterly manner, of snow-blocks and are perfectly wind proof. The sleeping bench made of ice, is well covered with the warm deer-skins and with a large kudlick (seal-oil lamp) burning, it is a pleasure to lie there listening to the wind howling outside.

"When travelling by dog-team with my native I use merely a silk tent at night for sleeping accommodation. Deerskins are placed on the floor under which tanned sealskins to keep the snow from wetting them and on top of this we put our sleeping bags.

"The sleeping bag is a very excellent bit of Arctic equipment—made of heavy khaki stuffed with eider-down. The only indication of cold is that you usually have to break away the ice that ice that has frozen all around the small aperture through which you have been breathing.

"On awakening in the morning the small kerosene pump stove is lighted and with its strong heat the interior of the small tent is oven-like in a few minutes.

"Breakfast usually consists of heated up beans which have been carried, already cooked, frozen in small patties. The beans contain plenty of fat and molasses so they readily heat up. This with black tea and pilot biscuit makes a simple and satisfying basis for the day.

RED RIM

"On December 25 the sun at Pangnirtung just shows as a red rim, and then sinks again. This is the shortest day. However, despite the fact that the sun is below the horizon, there is still enough twilight to enable us to travel for a few hours.

"Conversely, in the summer time on June 25 the sun does not set at all. Here at Pond inlet, which is considerably farther north than is Pangnirtung, the sun did not set from May 20 till July 25—round and round in the sky it travelled in an endless orbit. During the day the sun is quite near and its rays are quite hot. At night, although it still shines, it is on the other side of the earth, so the heat emanating from it is negligible.

"This would be an ideal country for a sun-worshipper. t is a great' sight to see the returning 'friend' in the winter and although it is only a red disc without heat it brings promise of sunnier and warmer days to come.

"The Eskimos have a very apt and impressive terminology for their seasons. They do not jump abruptly from one season to another, but instead intervene a 'makings of a season' in between. The 'makings of spring' is a splendid time of the year—that is when the sun rises higher and higher in the heavens and develops signs of being a centre of heat The young seals are being born in their cosy igloos and the older seals are coming up through their holes in the ice to sun themselves Here and there along the land snow is melting sufficiently wo form small rivulets This is the time of year for travelling, and it is a joy indeed: Dogfeed is plentiful—young seals on the ice—days are long and warm and the bone-runners of the komatik run easily over the snow.

"These days soon lengthen—so that on May 20th (at Pond inlet) a little later at Pangnirtung —the sun no longer sets. However, in the same fashion that the days lengthen in spring, so do they rapidly shorten in the fall and now each day can be seen visibly shorter than the previous one.

LITERATURE LEADS TO LARGER LIFE

Noblest Purpose Not Entertainment Nor Relief Raymond Finds

MONTREAL, Nov. 10. — Not entertainment, not relief or solace, and not escape from the brutalities of real life, but rather a "larger and larger life" was the noblest purpose of literature, said Ernest Raymond, English novelist, essayist and poet, addressing the Canadian Club on the subject "Through Literature to Life."

Life consisted essentially in contact with our environment he began. A larger life meant contact with a larger environment. For example, a tree had life, but was fettered to a very limited environment. A bird was much more alive; it knew what lay beyond the hills. So a man was an instrument alive to countless things. He was en rapport with the universe. And by far the greatest of his means of contact was the written word.

"For what," the speaker asked, "can equal the recorded experience of the grandest souls?" Those who had no love for literature, and did not share in the experience of the greatest and best, were partly dead without knowing it. "Literature," it was stated, "not only makes us feel about more things, but also feel much more about them. It heightens our awareness."

Magistrate Orders Offenders Indoors

CARDIFF, Wales, Nov. 10—(By The Canadian Press)—The curfew instead of the birch is the method adopted by South Wales magistrates in dealing with juvenile offenders. Four boys under 14 years of age were recently ordered by Frank Hodges, magistrate, to be indoors every night before eight o'clock for the next 12 months. They were charged with breaking into a number of premises at Cwamaman.

Two of them stole a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles and other articles from a colliery weigh-bridge, and three of them climbed a 9-foot wall and entered the billiard room of the Cwamaman institute through a window. They tore the cloth of the billiard table, broke a cue, and left the room like a bear-garden. Two other boys, 10 years of age, broke into a tobacconist's shop and stole 40 packets of cigarettes. They smoked a packet each and hid the remainder.

SELLING SKYLINE AT 50 CENTS PER LOOK, NEW YORK

Has Developed Into Big Business During the Past 18 Years

MANY TOWERS NOW OFFER ATTRACTION

One, Atop Woolworth Building, Draws 3000 During Holidays

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Selling Manhattan's skyline at 50 cents a look has developed into a big business in the financial capital of the world. It got its start 18 years ago when Leopold Jonas sold his theater ticket agency, leased the tower of the new Woolworth Building and began charging thrill-seekers for the view. It reached a new peak recently when 12,000 persons paid half a dollar apiece to travel in express elevators up 71 stories to the observatory of the Chrysler Building and gaze out over New York and its environs from a point 783 feet above Forty-Second Street.

In the same week between 700 and 1,000 persons a day visited the Woolworth Tower, a little more than 730 feet up, and some hundreds more ascended the crest of the Chanin Tower, 650 feet above the pavement, or to the tiny glass-enclosed gallery of the Manhatten Company building, 860 feet over Wall Street.

Leopold Jonas is the biggest figure in the skyview business. The Souvenir-Shop-in-the-Clouds Corporation, of which his son is president, leases the Woolworth Tower, and he himself is president of the Metropolitan Vistas Corporation which holds the lease on the Manhattan Company tower. In addition his unusual Photograph Reproduction Company holds the franchise for the distribution in North America of five-cent picture postcards of New York views, sold in all the towers. In the Woolworth Building one tourist has been known to buy a hundred postcards.

2500 to 3000 ON HOLIDAY

The Chrysler Building, has challenged the Woolworth Tower's 18-year supremacy in the vista industry, a supremacy which has brought to the Woolworth pinnacle since 1912 almost three million paying visitors. "On a holiday it is not unusual for 2500 or 3000 persons to visit the Woolworth Tower," an official of Mr. Jonas companies said.

The owners of the Chanin Building operate its tower more for the advertising than as a money maker, but even so, the Chanin Tower will bring in about $10,000 a year in 50 cent pieces, its owners say.

The Chrysler observatory is operated by a subsidiary of the Chrysler Building Corporation. It tops midtown New York and when Walter P. Chrysler goes up there he can see his country home, out at Great Neck, Long Island. The Manhattan Company building has a commanding view of the harbor, bringing the Statue of Liberty right at one's feet. The Paramount Building, over at Forty-Third and Broadway, is supreme in Times Square. Its observation tower is only 445 feet above the street, so it charges but 25 cents for the view.

Mr. Jonas, now 78, is regarded as an expert in the skyline business, and is often consulted by persons about to open observation towers on top of skyscrapers in other cities.

"We find," said one of his associates, "that foreigners are interested in our skyscrapers but that American tourists get their big thrill out of the harbor. Most of them have never seen the ocean before."

TOLD IN RIME

ARMISTICE DAY

'Tis but twelve years ago today
Since bells peeled far and wide,
And sirens shrieked, and whistles blew
O'er all the countryside,
To proclaim the glorious victory won
By the boys across the sea
Who struggled through the fight to gain
Liberty, for you and me.

Then don't forget the brave and true
Who at King and country's call,
Joined in that mighty conflict
And sacrificed their all.
As they stood beside those murderous guns
While the shells flew high and low,
Suffering great agony and pain
That we shall never know.

So let us all this Armistice Day
As we in silence stand,
Give honor to the men who fought
And died to save our land.
Their deeds shall never be forgot
While they sleep where poppies bloom,
Then, when the heavenly bugle calls,
We'll all meet beyond the tomb.

—Mrs. Les Pickard,
504 Mill street, Nelson.

WEIRD HEALTH THEORY TO RECEIVE LENGTHY TEST IN SWISS COMMUNITY

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—A Swiss villa, has been selected and plans have been completed for a practical test of a theory to lengthen life held by Park G. Hammer, wealthy, retired paint manufacturer of St. Louis, it was announced by Hammer.

The retired manufacturer expounded his long-life theories in a book published more than a year ago, predicting the expectancy of life could be strengthened by ten active years or more if people did not walk erect, absorbed sun-rays at many periods during the day, subsisted on a vegtable diet, and lived in the nude.

Hammer has just returned from Paris, where he aroused much comment by advertising for Russian emigres to enter a colony for his proposed experiments in diet, posture and exercise as a means of rebuilding the body and prolonging life. Paris and London newspapers dubbed him "Mr. Methuselah".

He says he had taken as his collaborator and co-subject with himself in the experiment, Dr. Paul Gregorievitch Kouchakoff, a Russian bacteriologist now employed in a laboratory at Nice.

Dr. Kouchakoff's wife, formerly Miss Daisy MacGregor Murray, daughter of the late Sir Robert and Lady Murray of Scotland, and her sister, Miss Helen Mary Murray, will also take the body rebuilding course, Hammer said. Hammer will be 67 next Christmas, Dr. Kauchakoff is 49 and the women are younger.

Hammer explained he has leased a villa at Montreux, Switzerland, on the shores of Lake Leman, known also as Lake Geneva. A course of preliminary laboratory experiments will precede the start of the experiment itself. Hammer, long a student of diet and physiology, had no medical or scientific degree. Hammer said he thought the actual test would get under way within a year.

The St. Louisan said he interviewed more than 100 Russians, men and women who answered his advertisements for volunteers in an experimental colony. Most of them, he said he believed, would have carried out his program and followed his orders if he had engaged them, but now Dr. Kouchakoff will direct the experiment and handle details.

The plan set forth in Hammer's book was for a tropical colony where the candidates for rejuvenation would sleep face downward on a log, eat in the same position, and swim in the turf from 70 minutes daily, at the beginning, to 12 hours daily at the end. The course would last 192 days. No clothing would be worn, no visitors received and the entire time would be devoted to the course. Fresh cocoanut and assorted fruits were to be the diet with the ratio of coccanut decreasing until it should become the sole food.

Changes have been made in the plan as a result of Dr. Kouchakoff's association with the experiment, Hammer said.

"Dr. Kouchakoff has convinced me the Swiss lake region, in the matter of air and sunshine, is to be preferred to the seashore; instead of swimming, the application of ultra-violet rays to the body while face downward on a log, or artificial bolster, will serve the same purpose. Dr. Kouchakoff thinks, as I do, that uncooked vegetables and fruits will be the best food."

How One Woman Lost 47 Pounds of Fat

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it."—Mrs. S. A. Solomon.

"P.S.—You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

SUSPENDED FOR LIFE

Arnold Morrison, the young Ottawa, Ont. athlete, who was suspended for life last year by the football authorities for striking a referee in the Rideau-St. Thomas game, and for whose reinstatement there has been widespread agitation. Morrison is only 21 now, and last winter in hockey received a shield as "the most efficient and cleanest player."

FLOODS, FAMINE OLD TERRORS OF NORTHERN CHINA; MANY DOOMED FOR YEARS BY RECURRING OF TRAGEDIES

SHANGHAI, Nov. 10—(CP)—A still suffering under a serious famine, says Mr. Pao. Since 1927 tragic picture, eloquent in its simple presentation of the bare facts, of North China's flood and famine stricken millions, is presented by C. A. Pao in the Chinese Nation, Chinese review. He gives three reasons for the conditions, geographical, economical and political. And he adds that although the constant famines and floods have their geographical and economic background, "the unscrupulous militarists and corrupt officials have to share half the responsibility for the deplorable plight of the suffering masses in the north."

Both China and India have been historically known as the lands of famine. Of late India has been fairly well developed in both irrigation and transportation thus greatly reducing that catastrophe, while China has seen only a little improvement in her famine prevention system and is still struggling under periodical famines and droughts, causing appalling suffering to the population. The most frequent catastrophes visiting China are floods, droughts and locusts. Sometimes a prolonged drought is immediately followed by a flood and at other times locusts descend upon the harvest simultaneously with a drought, resulting in a disastrous famine in the affected districts. Earthquakes are not infrequent in the north-western provinces, which also has a very damaging effect on the agricultural enterprises in the affected regions.

SERIOUS FAMINE

The northwestern provinces are droughts and locusts frequently visited the north, until now nearly all northern provinces are affected, especially Shansi, Honan and Kansu. According to reports from famine relief associations, the affected northern provinces are Honan, Shensi, Kansu, Shantung, Hopei, Shansi, Suivan and Chahar. In Honan one half of the province is in the grip of famine; Shensi is suffering as a whole; and Kansu has 65 districts out of a total of 78 districts affected, while Shantung and Hopei are undergoing a famine as well as a disastrous flood as a result of the over-flowing of the Yellow river in Shantung and the Tachingo and Yungtingho in Hopei.

Kansu has a total population of 10,000,000, half of which are victims of famine, the same report states. About 300,000 people died last year of banditry, exposure and starvation, while an average of 2000 people are reported to be dying daily in the affected regions. More than 1,000,000 people are reported to be in a destitute condition and they are compelled to feed on barks and grass roots. In Antinghsien alone, which used to be a city of 60,000 people, the population has dwindled to 3000. Shensi has a total population of 10,000,000 people, of which 7,150,00 are now affected by famine. Of this number 780,000 have fled from the province, while 200,000 have died of starvation. These two provinces are worthy of special mention, since they are the worst famine-stricken areas in the north.

Mayor Harry Cater was re-elected to his 14th term as chief executive of Brandon Tuesday, defeating a lone opponent, F. R. Longworth, former alderman, by 2445 votes to 1573.

Gift of $150,000 for endowment of librarianship of Oberline college has been received from Carnegie Corp. of New York.

DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND COMMERCE

OTTAWA, CANADA

November 8th, 1930.

To Canadian Manufacturers,
In Every Line of Business.

Remember the Golden Rule!

For some weeks now I have been urging consumers in every part of Canada to buy your products in preference to imported products. I have tried to make it quite clear to them that, in their own interest, it's the common sense thing to do.

Now if it is sound common sense that your fellow Canadians should support you, in your efforts to increase and to improve your production, isn't it also sound common sense that you, in the purchase of your materials, should support other Canadian producers who are trying to increase and to improve their production?

It's a poor rule that won't work both ways! When others wrench themselves out of life-long habits to do something that will help you, don't you agree that it's up to you to reciprocate in whatever way you can?

So let me ask you very frankly—are you co-operating in this campaign as fully as you might co-operate? When you buy materials and supplies, do you always make a conscientious effort to find some Canadian producer who can give you what will fill the bill? Conceding for the sake of argument that there are certain things you must import, because they cannot be produced in Canada, are your reasons for importing other things that do not fall within that category such that you would have no hesitation in making them public?

No fair-minded person is ever going to reproach you for buying imported materials and supplies when you can advance perfectly valid reasons for doing so. For example, if, after making diligent search, you were unable to find a single Canadian producer who could make delivery in the quality, and in the quantity, and within the time necessary to meet your requirements, and at a price you could afford to pay, that would be sufficient reason for your giving your order to a foreign producer.

And yet it hardly seems like playing the game, does it? It's equivalent to saying to the small Canadian producer—"To qualify for my business, you've got to show me that you can meet your big foreign competitor on every point—quality, quantity, time and price—otherwise you don't get it!"

If every Canadian consumer had always taken that stand, and stuck to it, many a man who is a successful Canadian manufacturer to-day would have lost his entire stake without ever having made a sale! But despite the competition he was up against, and the handicaps under which he had to labour, he made sales because there were enough Canadian consumers willing to see to it that he got his start.

So I ask you, aren't there times when you could well afford to show some Canadian producer just that little extra consideration that would be the means of starting him on his way to bigger and better business? If he cannot give you the quantity you want, within the time you want it, the reason probably is that you and other Canadian manufacturers have never given him enough business to warrant him enlarging the modest little plant he began with. If he cannot deliver you out of stock the exact quality you want, might he not soon be able to do so with the patronage that you and others might give him, by enabling him to keep pace with his big foreign competitor in bidding for skilled labour, in trying out new processes, and equipping himself with new devices as they are brought out? And if his price is a little high, just ask yourself if the preservation of your business makes it absolutely necessary for you to buy in the cheapest market!

As I write this I have before me two competitive articles, both produced in Canada. They sell to the same class of people, at the same price, and are apparently on a parity so far as quality is concerned. Both are made from the same kind of material, but whereas the material in one is 100 per cent Canadian, the material in the other is 100 per cent imported. The producer of the article made from Canadian material admits that he could make a little more profit for himself by using imported material, but he won't do it—he says he doesn't need to! The producer of the article made from imported material, while contending that the exigencies of his business make it necessary for him to buy in the cheapest market, only uses that as an excuse to swell his profits!

If you want the "Produced in Canada" movement to be a real success—to bear abundant fruit—remember the Golden Rule, and do unto others as you would have others do unto you! Don't assume that a thing is not now procurable in Canada, just because it wasn't when you first started importing it! Why not take us into your confidence regarding all your importations, and see if we cannot help you to locate suitable Canadian sources of supply?

Very sincerely yours,

H. H. Stevens

Minister of Trade and Commerce.

MRS. W. L. TAYLOR DIES HERE; WAS ILL LONG TIME

Spent Great Part of Life in Africa; Mother of Mrs. Dunnett

Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, wife of William Longfellow Taylor, a resident of Nelson, for the past nine years, died on Sunday night here after an illnesss of several years' duration.

Mrs. Taylor who had been active in the work of St. Paul's church, was 77 years of age and spent the greater portion of her life in Africa. She is the mother of Mrs. A. J. Dunnett of this city.

Mrs. Taylor came with her husband, to reside in Nelson from Vancouver. Previous to that she spent 28 years in Africa. Mr. Taylor was a mining engineer for British interests, and when he went to the gold coast Mrs. Taylor accompanied him and was the first white woman in those regions. She was at first a curiosity to the natives but became popular among them as she was quite active as a nurse and was credited by them with the saving of many lives among the native miners.

Leaving Africa Mr. and Mrs. Taylor retired and took up residence here to be close to their daughter. Ever since being in Nelson Mr. Taylor has taken an interest in St. Paul's church and served a term on the board of managers.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. A. J. Dunnett, Mrs. Taylor is survived by a married daughter in Portugese East Africa, a married son in Santa Monica and a married son in Vancouver. This latter son will come to Nelson for the funeral which will take place on Wednesday.

LUCKY GIRL

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

"It's very lovely," Cathie murmured, and tried to interest him in Enid's black pearl, but he would hardly glance at it, coming back every time to the star sapphire.

"Catherine appreciates it. She knows its value!" Farnsworth cut in, rather testily, at last.

GROWS SARCASTIC

Chester paused to light a cigarette. The flare of the match showed his sallow face distorted with malice. "I dare say. She has learned very quickly," he drawled. "For a girl raised without any of the advantages she does very well. Very well, indeed. I don't suppose that my own wife, accustomed as she has been to every luxury, could spend money faster, or make better use of the Canary diamonds, or the star sapphire than our Catherine!"

Cathie clutched at the sapphire on its slender cord around her neck, looked appealingly at her husband. But no help came from him. He was eating plum pudding, his eyes on his plate, and if he heard, he gave no sign.

Snap. The thin black cord broke under her frenzied fingers. "Here!" She was sliding it across the damask cloth to Chester's place. "Take it! I don't want it. I don't want to take it from Enid. She can have the diamonds too, for all of me. I don't want anything. Anything but peace!" Her voice was breaking. They were all staring at her.

"Catherine!" Mr. Farnsworth quavered.

"FAMILY BRAWL"

Chester, still smiling maliciously, picked up the jewel. "I really wouldn't throw it if I were you," he advised. "It's very delicate."

Enid stood up. "If you're going to have a family brawl you'll have to excuse me. My nerves aren't equal to it," she said.

But she wasn't quick enough. Cathie had already rushed from the room.

After Chester and his wife were gone Alfred Farnsworth tiptoed into Cathie's room. He had the sapphire, on its broken cord, in his hand. "Chester is so sorry he hurt you," he said gently. "The boy doesn't mean to be cutting. I wish you two would try to be better friends." He sighed.

Cathie came over and hid her face against his shoulder. "I'm sorry," she whispered. "I'm so ashamed of myself. Losing my temper like that. And on Christmas day. Oh what will become of me? What will become of me!"

He stroked her ruffled honey-colored hair. "There, there," he soothed. "You mustn't cry so! It's nothing. We all lose our tempers sometimes. You mustn't worry."

"But I'm such a failure—after all you've done for me!"

"Catherine, you'll really make yourself sick. Try to calm yourself. For my sake!"

PROMISE UNKEPT

For his sake she tried. The sobs died into small, strangled whimpers. She lifted her head, and managed to smile through wet lashes. "I won't do it again," she promised, "I won't turn into one of these crying wives!"

He went on holding her in his arms, "Too much family," he said. "that's it. I tell you, we'll go on a New Year's party to one of the big hotels, just you and me. Would you like that!"

She didn't care really. She didn't care if she ever went anywhere again. But she nodded and kissed him, and when New Year's eve came and he did not mention it she was surprised at her own disappointment. It would have been fun to go. To dress up, and listen to the music. She thought of reminding him, but he looked tired, and he had been complaining of pains in his head lately . . . perhaps she had better not . . . .

Towards 10 o'clock he fell asleep in his chair by the library fire and Cathie read one of the Christmas novels, and nibbled milk chocolates, trying not to care.

When the sirens blew at midnight, proclaiming the new year, she opened one of the long French windows and stood out on the little balcony until she was chilled, picturing the crowds, the laughter, the lights of the celebration down town. Ma and Ruth would be having a hot egg-nog in the kitchen about now. They always had egg-nog and fruit-cake at midnight on New Year's eve. Last year Frank Prout was there, too, and Eddie, and Eddie's friend with the yellow hair . . . was his name Sargent? And little Jean . . . and maybe Ruth's friend Mr. Browning this year . . . .

"HAPPY NEW YEAR"

She came in and shut the window.

"Come, dear, it's late" Cathie wakened her sleeping husband, gently.

He said, "I must have dropped off. Happy New Year, Catherine!"

"The same to you, dear!"

And so to bed, but not to sleep.

* * *

Insomnia laid grizzly fingers on Cathie. It wasn't only the sleeplessness she dreaded. It was the dark, creaky house, at night. Sometimes, lying awake in the early morning hours when the sky was still black and the whole world seemed hushed and brooding, waiting for the dawn, her fear mounted almost to terror.

Creak. Sigh. Tap. Whisper. Whisper. She would lie, tense and listening, while the darkness pressed on her eyeballs, and the thud of her heart almost shook the bed. If there was just someone she could call, someone she could talk to . . .

Marguerite? But that wouldn't be dignified. She couldn't do that. And her husband, worn after strenuous days at the office, was always weary at night. She could not waken him to tell him she was frightened. It wouldn't be right.

AFRAID OF DARK

Tonight, after what seemed an eternity of sleeplessness, she slipped on a dressing gown, and padded down the dim hall to his room. She wasn't going to wake him. She could curl up on the chaise lounge at the foot of the bed, and be comforted just being near him, even if he was asleep.

It was cold in the hall. Jheong must have turned off the heat. Maybe she had better go back to her room and get a blanket. She started and then stopped suddenly. . . . There it was again. That creaking. Could hear that someone was coming up the stairs!

Silence again. Absolute silence. Cathie's teeth were chattering. She pressed her cold hands over her thudding heart and waited . . . This was nonsense. A grown woman, afraid of the dark. What would ma say is she knew? What would anybody say?

She snubbed the desire to run. She'd go back quietly, and get the blanket, and then . . .

"Oh, God! Help he!" The words tore themselves out of her contracted throat.

A little circle of pale light was bobbing steadily upward, just above the stairs.

PALATE PATTER

Ham and bacon should both be cooked slowly for success. Bacon will burn if cooked rapidly and ham will toughen.

Serve coffee ice cream in sherbet glasses, topped with whipped cream and garnished with a maraschino cherry, for an easy dessert.

Cakes will come out of their baking pans easily if allowed to stand after baking for five minutes on a cloth wrung out of cold water. Then remove with a spatula.

SALMON SOUFFLE AND ASPARAGUS TIPS

Cook together 1 cup scalded milk, ¾ cup soft breadcrumbs, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika for 3 minutes. Then add 1½ cups flaked salmon, ½ cup drained asparagus tips and when partly cooled, fold in the stiffly whipped whites of 2 eggs. Turn into a buttered souffle dish and bake in a moderate oven until well risen and brown.

RED CABBAGE SALAD

Remove the outer leaves from a small red cabbage, cut out all the hard heart and slice the remainder thin with a cutter. Add 1 chopped Spanish onion and mix together. Now add French dressing to moisten and 1 teaspoon of pickled capers and mix well. Chill before serving.

CHILLED CANDLES

If you keep candles in the ice box until you are ready to light them, they will stand straighter and burn more slowly.

The Festival of the Cedar Waxwings

By VIRGINIA MacDONALD CUMMINGS

To the kiddies the Thanksgiving season suggests pumpkin-pie and frivolity.

To adults it spells feasting and family reunions.

To me in my sunny mountain window it gives a keener thrill than either for it always brings with it the Festival of the Cedar Waxwings.

Humans are not the only ones who give themselves over to feasting at this season. Our friends the cedar waxwings hold an annual celebration that seems to equal our Hallowe'en, Harvest Home and Thanksgiving rolled into one. Their banqueting hall is the great outdoors; their table is a mountain-ash tree; and their food the berries with which its boughs are bent to the ground.

The first real cover of snow can always be relied upon to bring them. Not the cover which ushers in our Indian Summer, but the one which extinguishes it. Indeed the very next morning after the snowfall they make their appearance.

The waxwing is a large bird though not as large as a robin. He has an olive-brown body, quite yellowish in the front, with a band of pure yellow and one of white on his tail. He has other touches of black, white and yellow. He has a perky little crest like an inverted goatee. Then, typically, he has the peculiar feature from which he gets his name. When he spreads his wing the shorter feathers are seen to be tipped with red flakes like drops of scarlet sealing wax. In the Rocky mountain area of Southern British Columbia this characteristic is not so outstanding, and the red may be more noticeable on the underneath part of the tail.

These beautiful birds settle on the rowan trees by the hundreds and proceed to denude them of their colorful crop. They swoop down in a body these dainty buccaneers, then with a whirr they all fly away together. They perch on the trees and take two or three berries in their mouth and one in their bill—a scarlet echo of their sealing-wax markings— then whirr away to the highest point available where they can sit and digest their plunder in peace.

As soon as they have finished the first course they come back, en masse, to partake of the next one, and so, over and over again, they go through the same maneuvres. They give a very good imitation of people dining and dancing in a cabaret. They devote themselves to their food for awhile. Then with one accord they all jump up, take a whirl around, and presently settle down to eating again.

Unlike many banqueters, they refrain from making after-dinner screeches, and compared to the Canada Jay or are similar species, they are extraordinarily silent birds. They do however converse with each other, in a timid, lisping "chee-chee."

Cedar Waxwings are unusally tame birds, and quickly become domesticated if confined to a cage. They are birds which for many years excited great interest on account of them being so irregular in the habits, whether as to their visitations or their summering and wintering preferences. They used to come in countless hordes to the whole of central and some parts of Southern Europe. In olden times they were looked upon as harbingers of war, plague or death. While people admired their harmonious coloration and graceful movements, curiosity was rife as to why they were so erratic in their habits.

For a long time they were looked upon as birds of mystery because their birthplace defied detection. All in vain the explorers searched for the retreat.

In 1856 John Wolley organized a search party in Lapland, which at last succeeded in running the secret to earth. Then in 1856 H. E. Dresser found a small settlement of the species on an island in the Baltic near Uleaborg and was even able to take a nest with his own hands.

These birds follow the same strange habits in America as in the old land. They breed every year in some parts of northern Europe yet are to be found also in Nebraska by the millions.

These birds follow the same strange habits in America as in the old land. They breed every year in some parts of northern Europe yet as to be found also in Nebraska by the millions.

They also breed on the Yukon and on the Anderson rivers.

They live on insects and that is why, on the very next morning after the ground is rendered impenetrable with frost or snow we find them seeking food from the mountain ash, cedar or other trees that bear fruit in the fall.

The rowan trees shed their leaves later than any others in this country. Then after their ladder-like leaves are piled in sere and yellow droves on the ground, the berries still hang in scarlet clusters all over the bare boughs, as if in defiance of blight. It is then that the cedar waxwings drape their fluttering forms over the graceful branches, giving them back for the moment their autumn hues of yellow, green and brown, with a touch of scarlet.

Beside such brilliancy the much-vaunted snowy-egret tree must pale into insignificance.

This year the procedure has been slightly different. The weather has been so consistently bright and mild that the leaves of the mountain ash have scarcely changed more than to take on a reddish-bronze cast. The snow that had spread like a blanket in the night had disappeared by noon. Yet the waxwings took the hint and immediately fell upon their last reserves to devour them before departing for the south.

Once thought to be the heralds of plague and evil, these birds are harbingers of nothing worse than the death of summer. It is said that all weather signs fail in the mountains, but there is one sign that never fails.

When the last red berry is gone from the rowan trees. When the last cedar waxwing is nothing but a little dark throb in the sky. Then we know that summer is routed, and the late fall is upon us!

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

Do you know that by pinching the tissues of the cheeks you can grow roses in them? Pick up the tiniest particle of skin between the thumb and first finger, pinch lightly, pulling the flesh outward and letting it snap back like a rubber band. What happens is that the capillaries are shaken out of a state of lethargy and sent to work. Be careful not to roll the tissues. That process dissolves adipose cells that are necessary for the soft, youthful contour of the face. Follow with ironing with ice. Lave with witch hazel.

Reducing weight can be accomplished if the will is strong enough. It is a matter of giving muscles more work to do, so they will shake off the fat cells, and to cut down on those foods that produce adipose padding. Potatoes, white bread, sweets and fat foods are the enemies of the girl who shivers the scales to the breaking point. She can eat less meat, eggs, fish, poultry, green vegetables, salads and fruits.

Mental and emotional fatigue are more wearing than muscle fatigue. A fit of anger brings on chemical changes in the body, throws the nervous system into a panic, slows up digestion, affects the heart beats depletes tissues. Mental poise is an insurance against wrinkles. A lemonated disposition will wreck good looks. Strange why the grumps and the grouchers the whiners and the bawlers don't know it.

To slenderize bulky legs, stand erect, hands on hips and kick out first one foot and then the other. Lie on the back and pretend to peddle a bicycle. Take lessons in dancing. Go in for gym work. Every night have an alcohol rub and pummel the backs of the legs, picking up the flesh, rolling and pinching it.

One can no longer recommend a certain flower odor. Fashionable perfumes are bouquets, blends of flower oils and synthetic products that impart a lasting quality.

Sent Him Novelty Cards

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 16 years old and am a junior in high school. During the summer I met a boy I liked very much. He "rushed" me at first and then I went on a three weeks vacation and since I came home he has never come around again. But he always speaks to me and asks how I am. He has a sister-in-law and I think she has told him some untrue things about me, as she is a very deceiving woman. He thinks the world of her; naturally he believes her. She always did think I was a "wild" girl but I am not. The boy is 21 and is a clerk in a bank in my home town. He knows I care for him because I have sent him novelty cards with sayings on them that let him know I care.

BLUE EYES

I wonder if the novelty cards with their printed admissions of affection could have had anything to do with the young man's change of attitude. I've known men to be scared out of their wits by Christmas cards that, under the holly and mistletoe sentiments, seemed to be loading the dice. You see, my dear, men like to think that pursuit and choice is up to them, even if that's not quite the whole story. And when they drop "rushing," isn't it after all better to accept and try and interest yourself in someone else than to put yourself in a position where you can be flatly turned down? I'd drop the novelty cards, and if you honestly think there has been some misunderstanding, write a short not and invite him to call.

She Called Him a Telephone Hound

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I go to a night class in which there are both girls and boys—and I fell in love with one of the former. I am 20, she is 18. She just wouldn't look at me—treated me as if I were a zephr. I found out where she lived, 'phoned and asked if I could take her to a movie. She pretended not to know who I was, said she thought I'd made a mistake. Then I saw her eating her supper in a drug store and I sat on the next stool and began to talk. She answered in a rather reserved manner; still she did talk some. Twice more I called her on the 'phone and she handed out the some backward line. I called her up again and asked if she would go out for a motor ride. She was so airy that I said, "I don't believe you know who this is?" "O yes," she said, "It's the class telephone hound. When do you get time to study?" I rang off and haven't looked at her since. Would you call it a day and quit?

STUDENT

I believed I'd call it a day. And the next time you fall in love don't rush the girl off her feet. Some girls succumb to storming tactics, but not the type. I imagine this girl to be. She's probably studious and is trying to fit herself for some work or profession. Her jibe about: "When do you get time to study?" leads me to believe your own class work is not above reproach. To make a good impression with that type, good scholarship would rate higher than constant 'phone calls.

KIMBERLEY, B. C., Nov. 10.—On Saturday night a number of Knights and Pythian Sisters motored to Cranbrook to attend a lecture given by Judge Kuykendall of Spokane. Grand Chancellor Manly had arranged the gathering. Judge Kuykendall gave a most interesting address on the idea and progress of Pythianism. All the Kimberley members expressed themselves as delighted with the helpful address. Members also came from Michel.

UNITED CHURCH IN KIMBERLEY HAS SERVICES

KIMBERLEY, B. C., Nov. 10.—The harvest home and Thanksgiving services held in United church on Sunday were exceptionally well attended, large crowds assembling both morning and evening. Special music was rendered by the junior choir in the morning, anthem entitled "O Come Let Us Worship" and "Wonderful Love," and a solo by R. L. Jones, "Teach Me To Pray."

In the evening the senior choir sang two appropriate anthems under the leadership of R. Dicken.

On Monday evening the Thanksgiving and harvest home services were continued by lantern slides on views of Canada given by Rev. R. N. Matheson. The choirs again sang and a sale of the garden and fruit products brought in on Saturday was made. George Davis arranged the decorations for Sunday in his usual capable way.

BROILED LAMB CHOPS

When you are having a particularly nice luncheon it is nice to have the butcher cut the lamb chops double thickness, remove bone and skewer the chop into shape. One chop is sufficient for a service. Broil on a greased broiler until both sides are browned well and the fat is crisp. Garnish with sprigs of parsley or water cress.

PYTHIAN SISTERS STAGE DANCE HERE

Square Dances, Circles and Other Old-Time Dances Are Enjoyed

Square dances, circles and other old time dances held sway at a dance staged by the Pythian Sisters in Knights of Pythias hall Monday evening, to celebrate Thanksgiving Day.

A large number of dancers attended and were supplied with lively music. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Frank Goucher and Mrs. Dave Wade were in charge of the dancing and Miss Grace Laughton and Mrs. Goucher in charge of the refreshments. David Laughton was cashier.

A Candle Board for the Cake

At a home dinner in one of the few remaining old houses in which a home atmosphere is retained, there was one feature of the meal that greatly impressed the three guests who were present and who were surprised to learn that, instead of being a new fad, it was an old one—a family custom for generations. When the salad course was finished and the table cleared for dessert, the maid brought in a snowy looking cake on a round mahogany board. Surrounding the cake were two rows of candles, in two different sizes and colors, and all lighted. This, it seems, was a candle board, and in this case, a prized heirloom. The board with its burden was deposited in front of the hostess. She extinguished the flames with old silver snuffers, then proceeded to cut the cake and the maid to pass it.

Then everyone wanted to know more about the candle board. To make one, a board—white pine takes the stain if you want it mahogany-toned—about a foot and a half in diameter, or, of course, any size you please. That will carry three dozen candles. Then you paint the edge, or gild or silver it. Any carpenter will cut the board for you to required measurements. The candles are set into candle cups, and these are made of sheet lead. Cut the lead in the shape of four little petals and drive a long tack into the center of each and thereby tack firmly to the board, equi-distant from each other all the way around in two rows. When the little petal cups are in, turn them into cups and thereby they are ready to hold the candles. The candle cups must not, of course, be allowed to take up too much of the center space between it and the first candle row. It isn't necessarily left bare, however, this space.

One young woman at the dinner suggested that an ordinary tin funnel might be stained to look "old" and do service as a snuffer, and another thought that a brass rim or even a hoop of wood laid close around the board would be a help in keeping the flower decorations in place.

CREAMED TURNIPS

The turnip is rather a neglected vegetable, and yet when daintily prepared proves a tasty change. Pare and cut turnips into small cubes. Cook in salted water until tender. Drain and pour over them the following sauce: Two tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons chopped pimentoes. Blend butter and flour and add milk, stirring constantly. Season and pour over turnips.

K. P. LODGE AT TRAIL LEARNS BASIC IDEALS

Judge Kuykendall, Past Grand Chancellor From Washington, Speaker

TRAIL, B. C., Nov. 10.—Judge Kuykendall, past grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, of Washington, addressed the Trail lodge here tonight outlining friendship, charity and benevolence as the basic ideals of the Pythian order.

He thought the ancient doctrine purified by the doctrine of Christ and mixed with the chivalry of the knights of old was the personification belief.

Orchestral numbers were heard during the program in addition to the recitations given by R. Barrett.

Thanks of the lodge were tendered the speaker by Grand Chancellor Manly of Grand Forks and Charles Nelson, past grand chancellor of New Denver.

Noble Binns was in the chair.

FIRE ON HIGH SEAS CLAIMED MANY LIVES

Sailor-Author Tells Grim Tales of Panic and Heroism

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., Nov. 10.—(CP)—Few people living today can recall the wreck of the R. M. S. P. company's steam-sailing ship Amazon. It was on January 2, 1852, that the Amazon, then the "crack" ship of the Royal Mail Steam Packet company, sailed from Southampton with cargo and mails for the West Indies.

She was a novelty in those days; a timber-fashioned "sailing-steam" ship, reputed to be the biggest sailing vessel out of any British port. Her gross burthen was 2,356 tons. She was 300 feet in length and 41 feet in the beam—scarcely larger than a modern coaster.

Steam was in its infancy in 1852, and the Amazon was one of those cumbersome craft fitted with huge paddle wheels and steam engines, of some 80 horsepower. In addition to a crew of 110 officers and men, she carried 50 passengers. From the first the Amazon experienced bad weather; and the full strength of the 80 horse-power engines was needed to push her against the head winds and seas.

ENGINEERS MERE MECHANICS

Engineers of those days were little more than mechanics. Very soon the bearings of the engines became heated, and the hose pipe was constantly employed to cool them. And this in the Bay of Biscay. But the master refused to turn back, and pushed his ship into the gale. Then, at night, the second officer "saw the thing that caused his heart to quicken its beat and a lump to rise awkwardly in his gulping throat. There were flames evident, issuing from the super-structure in the neighborhood of the much-criticized engine-rom."

All attempts to smother the engine and stop the fire failed, and soon all hope of conquering the flames died. The passengers burst open the doors that had kept them below, and swarmed on deck.

Women fell on their knees to pray, they were jostled to the bulwarks and crushed and trampled, heavy blows were struck as the maniac horror of feet gnawed into men's souls.

"Only one hope of salvation now remained —the boats. But these were aft; and the men who should have handled them were forward."

UNABLE LAND BOATS

The ship carried nine boats, but to launch them was next to impossible. To try to drop a boat over the side was to court disaster. Those boats that could be reached were made ready until such time as the engines "stopped of their own accord", since no man could enter the engine-room.

The master of the Amazon knew very little of steam. That the boilers would burst when depleted of water never entered his head. Finally, with the ship a mass of flames and still plunging before the gale, the captain determined to launch the boats, but to add to the horror, those forward were on fire.

Immediately there was further panic and a wild stampede to reach aft the boats, which were not burning.

"Captain Symons, a desperate man, sickened to death by what he had seen, went aft to the quarter deck, took the wheel from the steersman's hands, and said: "Save yourself, lad; I stand by the ship. There, for all evidence to the contrary, the captain died—a lonely man at the post of a duty."

Those left aboard the ship perished as she blew up. The 42 survivors, drifting in their battered boats without food or water, were rescued by Dutch galliots and a British brig.

Fire also claimed the Cospatrick, a wooden ship of 1,200 tons which sailed from London for New Zealand on Sept. 11, 1874, with a crew of 44 and 429 emigrants. Panic broke out, and the boats were smashed or capsized in the launching. Two boats alone floated after the ship sank—two boats 400 miles from land, and in them were huddled 71 survivors.

There was neither food nor drink, and one boat had neither mast nor oars. Before the Cospatrick sank the captain lost control of himself. His last act was to throw his wife overboard, and authorities blamed her presence on board for the "colossal quality of the catastrophe.

A man in control of such a situation needs to have a clear brain; if the best of the brain is occupied with apprehension for a dear one, he cannot do justice to himself or to the situation."

Of the two boats that put off one was never seen again. Bad weather overtook the other. And then came the biggest horror of all; white men turned cannibal. Eight days after the Cospatrick sank there were left only eight men, and three of these were only raving lunatics.

Two more days passed and the number in the boat was reduced to five—five men in rags, as weak as babies. A ship appeared and took them on board, but only three lived.

WHITE RUSSIANS STILL CARRY ON PLANS IN PARIS

PARIS, Nov. 10.—When General Alexandre Koutiepoff disappeared mysteriously from the street near his home on January 28, 1930, remnants of General Wrangel's White Army and other former officers and soldiers in the service of the Czar, looked to General Eugene de Miller as their leader. While it was generally supposed that Koutipoff had met with the machinations of Soviet secret police, General Miller did not hesitate openly to declare himself ready to assume his former master's position as commander of the Russian "White Army."

Since then, his life has been in the hand of two men; his single staff officer and his chaffeur. His headquarters are in Paris and everything he does, he assumes is known to the secret police as were the actions of General Koutiepoff. He does one thing which his predecessor did not do; he never goes into the street without his two strong-arm men.

LONG CAREER

A long career as a Czarist officer preceded his command of the mythical "White Army" several thousand ex-officers and soldiers dispersed throughout the world, working in "civies" as mechanics or whatever they can find to do. Even though this "army" is not an army, General Miller considers that he is still in the service of the Czar and that his military career has never been interrupted.

The "army" of which General Miller is the commander, is nothing more than a world organization of former soldiers, the union of associations of former Russians soldiers. It is this group which is referred to constantly as "the White Army." It has no uniforms and what is more important, it has no arms. It has only plans for the purchase of arms, if needed, and a vague programme of mobilization should the time every arrive when the Soviet state crumbles.

His appearance has changed from the old days, for now he goes about in an untailored suit suitable for an emigre and his once well-kept moustache has a tendency to reach too far toward his ears. Were it not for his bright face and sparkling eyes, he would be considered on first sight as just another of the unfortunate Russians of whom are so many in Paris.

NEEDS NO PITY

But talk with him soon dissipates pity. He has the mind of a big business executive who can turn from one question to another the while keeping a cystal clear mind. The interviewer is led to believe that the man has merely retired from power in order to prepare a severe blow to his enemies in a come-back.

The general of the army has his headquarters in his dining room. Among crusts of bread, jars of jam and sandwich meats in tin cans are filed which tell the secret of the "army." Here he works with his aides, discusses strategy and looks at maps; reads reports emanating from Russia, interviews travelers who have just let there and sends out letters asking for money to aid rebellious farmers. His apartment is in a modest quarter, near the city hall. It is sufficiently large for his wife and two children and a small baby adopted from a tubercular family.

In this army headquarters much grief is told, for the families of ex-service men look to General Miller for help in time of need. One-fourth of the General's time is spent dispensing charity hunting money to bury a former comrade or student in the cavalry school, asking alms for some other unfortunate.

The general is often asked where he, a Russian, got the name Miller. His great-great-grandfather emigrated from what is now the Bas-Rhin Department of France. It was then Dutch and this ancestor was of that nationality. He is 63 years old.

And Memories Come Back

Citizens of Nelson and district will today respect Armistice day not as a duty so much as a privilege. A privilege to pay honor to those who fell in the Great War which ended triumphantly for the allies just 12 years ago but at such a cost of precious life.

It is fitting that the wheels of the nation should halt for two minutes this morning at the eleventh hour on the eleventh day of the eleventh month as an act out of respect for those who fell and lie across the seas.

It is a day of solemnity. There will be sadness in many homes—for no matter how many years pass by—memories of those passed on will live fresh to those to whom they were so dear.

It is a privilege for every citizen to take part in today's services. Let us not forget. Let us as true Canadians pay tribute to thise to whom the making of the supreme sacrifice was looked upon as their duty to their country.

Game in the Kootenays

Ever since this district first became inhabited it has been known as a country of abundant game. It has attracted numerous hunters from all portions of the province. In the successive years of hunting some of our game has become depleted but this has been the case mostly among the game birds. Grouse are becoming less plentiful year after year. There are several causes for this but the chief reasons are no doubt the heavy forest fire seasons of the past and the inroads upon the favorite spots inhabited by the grouse, by huntsmen using automobiles.

Now and then there are reports that big game is dwindling in the district which may or may not be true. However, if one has been reading the local press in the past few weeks one can find ample proof of abundance of game. And many huntsmen have not had far to go to get a bag.

Over in the Christina lake district a hunter bagged a deer in his back yard. Another bagged two fine bucks along the highway. Up in Vallican, in the Slocan district, a lady shot a fine black bear in her back yard. That this district attracts outsiders is proven in the number of Washington hunters who come into this territory. A few weeks ago Washington's lady champion shot went into the Boundary and took out her limit of big game in a brief time.

Sometimes huntsmen are unlucky but the majority who have been out this year have had excellent luck and they report abundance of deer.

Get That Odd Job Done Now

Help the unemployed is a common expression used now-a-days. On all sides we hear of men being out of work. Governments have come to their aid and what looked like a black winter for many now looks much brighter.

While governments are aiding the workless we as private individuals might help mankind in these uneasy times. Citizens having any little odd jobs around their homes, such as cleaning-up or repairing, should take advantage of the seasonal out-of-work condition. Why not have it attended to at once? Men can be secured to do the odd jobs and are only too glad to get something at which to turn their hands. Employment, if only for a few hours, would likely help some unfortunate individual. How much better to do this than to contribute a free meal or perhaps part with some cash and get nothing in return. A little give and take would do away with a lot of begging that is going on on our streets today.

A feeling of buoyancy in the millinery trade was occasioned in a western town when the local hospital reported 35 births during the year to date, 33 being girls.

George Bernard Shaw, when asked to name the ten greatest men in the world's history, selected only eight. Presumably he left the other two places for himself.

Mr. Winston Churchill has become converted to the benefit of protective policies. Stranger things than his elevation to the Conservative leadership have happened.

Many cities appear to solve the unemployment problem by continuously tearing up pavements to put in pipes overlooked in the first instance.

Speaking of myths, the oldest oyster-opener in the hotels of New York has been on the job 42 years and never found a pearl.

South American repubilcs which have not yet started their revolutions are keeping the rest of the world in suspense.

Many a deer hunter, like many a stock market investor, is finding out that the wolves have been busy.

In church at collection time the still small voice should forbid use of the lively big nickel.

Playing football under the floodlights is bound to make a big hit with the moths, at least.

What the Press Is Saying

NARROW ESCAPE

It is repored from Cambridge that the Harvard authorities have refused to make exceptions to the copyrights on various Harvard songs so that Rudy Vallee might croon them on the radio, making "Fair Harvard" and "Up the Street" as popular as the Maine "Stein Song," as Rudy is said to have promised.

Let those who are tempted to think that Harvard is being up stage pause and consider. Let them ask themselves what their first thought is confronted with reference to the University of Maine. If it isn't a mental picture of Rudy Valle crooning and millions of hushed damsels swooning, the Harvard is wrong. But if it is true that Rudy Vallee has made the Maine tune into something to hum, Harvard is right to take no chances.

After all, the Cambridge institution has too much to live down as things are now. —Baltimore Sun.

TOLD IN RIME

THEY ARE NOT DEAD!

By Their Glorious Deeds Shall We Remember Them!

They are not dead, those heroes we have given;
From out the void they converse with our hearts;
Spirit with spirit communes, nor is life riven
So far asunder, divested of all parts,
What is that throb which starts so deep within us?
It is not fear that wakes our thoughts so swift!
But spirit intercourse; we fearless answer thus
In swift-wing'd joy as through a tempest drift.

They had no dreams of peril, nor dark fate,
In that spasmodic clutch that grips the soul;
Fate played her cards 'neath breath's uncertain state,
Their sacrifice of life beyond control.
They went their way, each heart charged with desire,
So full of hope, some noble deed to do;
To win or fall, nor shun the despot's fire;
Pinning their faith on "Right to help them through.

Thus can we feel, as all the world looks on,
Now past its wondering, knowing truth at last;
Knowing that something infinite hath won!
Thereby, within us, Faith hath crime o'ercast.
They who made war, our homes sought to destroy,
Crush out our lives, and devastate our land,
And leave us nought to cherish and enjoy,
Have been repelled by our heroic band.

These have, thro' strife, become of dearer worth;
They stood to tread the menaced terror down;
Transfigur'd now from would of common earth,
Cleansed through death's tempest each a crown hath won,
Shining beyond earth's bar they stand divined!
By dullard clouds no longer wrapt obscure;
By deeds infinite they shall rest entwined!
Life's sacrificing fire hath cleansed them pure.

We watched the sea of joyous faces pass,
All radiant, full lof life, and love, and youth,
As mirrored in life's secret, chequered glass,
Faith bouyed them on where none could guess the truth,
Now, we who linger, count the cost so great,
In surging strife, and blood, and mental care,
Those heroes' shining deeds should seal their fate
That we might breathe in peace our native air.

Children! Our hearts now kindle to the core,
To know and feel thou wer't our very own!
To know the bravest sons on earth we bore,
With British spirit in you. Not outgrown!
Our home is dearer, and our silent pride—
Enhanced! Made glorious! Yet thro' grievous cost,
Yet, we can live and say that they have died
To bring us Peace. We live by that they lost.

"Lest We Forget"

In Flanders fields, the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky,
The larks, still bravely sing, fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foes
To you, from failing hands, we throw
The torch. Be yours to lift it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

—Lieut.-Col. John McCrae.

Armistice Day 1930

(By Gerald S. Rees)

"They were a wall unto us by night and day."

Today, a silence will be kept, a bugle will call; how quickly it comes the eleventh day of the eleventh month, twelve years since the battle scarred armies halted in the torn and broken places to draw the breath of a great hopefulness, to breathe a prayer of gratitude. Time, as we know is , has not lost ts old aptitude for going on.

For twice sixty seconds, past and present are merged in our thoughts of all people who suffered and lost someone or something. . Wounds heal; scars remain.

SILENCE . . BEFORE WINDS MADE . . OR EARTH RECEIVED FROM

Almost a lost art that of Silence—the ancients were its master; we can learn from the ageless immemorial East the art of silence meditation and of soul-stock taking. Another year has gone with the earth in its march around the sun, today is Poppy Day, Vetcraft poppies made by broken soldiers whose marching days are over. The poppy is now a symbol that stirs the heart as no other in the history save its central emblem—the Cross; it teaches us a new interpretation of the old saying "All that a man hath will he give for his life." The symbol of oblivion has become the flower of a great remembrance.

"Tall green candles stand the stems Lighted by flames of red."

The glint of a red poppy makes one think most of the spirit of the men who loved life but faced death, who hated the job, but stuck it out, who kept sane against all odds that tore at men's nerves and stormed against their souls. Each had a longing for the homely things so dear to him, for the home people, who were dearer still, and for the one that was dearest of all. Today we think of Lincoln's words "The better angels of our natures are touched by othe mystic chord of memory extending from every battlefield and every grave to every living heart and hearthstone."

A LOST GENERATION

The war generation becomes obscured and mixed up with an adult generation grown up post war; The young man of today is bored with its any mention "let the war lie in history books with all other dull old wars." Not being an actual experience, it is impossible for him to sympathize adequately with those who went through it, and still suffer. Three years ago, the writer saw a regimental parade in London of the Grenadier Guards; hardly one had a war service ribbon; the stalwarts were children then, and if they are led into war, they will not blame the old men who made the war till it is all over—and then it will be too late

Men who should know better still babble of war's nobility and the cleansing fire of physical combat —Trial by combat is a medieval grotesquerie—Guns aimed by men fed with poisonous propaganda cannot be fit instruments for dispensing justice. Some day, we shall echo the cockney warrior's sentiment.

"I 'ate the likes of all them kind
"Who'll shoot at you from any 'ummick.
"They're surely madmen, to the mind
"Suffring from cordite on the stummick.

"I blank refuse to take up arms
"Against my principles—I 'ate it
"Let them as worships war's alarms
"Go to a sergeant quick, and state it.

War is joining the limbo of obsolete and forgotten customs, though bellicose talkers remain, old men spin diplomatic webs to "ensnare golden winged youth" in a heedless fratricide and superpatriots talk provocatively — but allow others to fight a war which sustains a cant of blind discipline, loyalty and a paraphernalia of flags, uniforms and parades that shelter a host of war makers, but not war fighters; war places the lives of the young—not the old—at the mercy of trained blockheads.

"A FINE DAY TOMORROW"

Adequate peace machinery has been set up, ways of settling disputes formulated. Men of good will work earnestly and prayerfully to perfect the equipment. The leaven works—it must. It is all so obvious. The fight is long. Human slavery has been terminated, now the destructive spirit of war must follow duels between nations must become a quaint diversion of the misty past.

The great central truth, the universal Fatherhood of God and the common brotherhood of man will be recognized and for ever end all armed combat. These can be no excuse of any kind today for warmongering; the penalty is written in every home and on every heart.

Remember that the guaranty of national and international peace lies in the establishment of peace, based on the verities, in the consciousness of the individual. If you think it fun to thrust a bayonet into another man's vitals, or sink a hospital ship, the war will be fun for you, will remain a good joke till your own vitals are pierced, or your own head is covered by the waves. Individual consciousness is the only criterion of truth about war.

TOO MUCH "WE BRITISH"?

Pride of family, pride of place, pride of race—these three, but the greatest of these is pride of race. Perhaps, however, this last when too much insisted on becomes a super patriotism which may be productive of danger to the peace of the world; true, patriotism is a virtue of valor, but in these world-widening days, we must needs remember, with Nurse Cavell, that "patriotism is not enough".

SALL OF THE MENIN GATE

Since the consecration of the Menin Gate memorial that cuts into the fleecy twilight above the vivid red roofs of the new Ypres, surrounded by the Gardens of the Unforgotten, every night in the tawny glow of a remembering sunset, there rings out across that tragic triangle of meadowland where youth and chivalry sleep—it is known in history as the Old Salient —the memory stirring notes of the Last Post. "Youth's flower drooped upon a broken stem, and died undreaming. . ." From the eastern ramparts by the still waters of the moat, the call is sounded by a bugler of the British army; all traffic is stopped, every head is bared, as the requiem is nightly sounded beneath the arches of the Gate. At that moment, an ex-imperial Contemptible, owner of a nearby estaminet, faces the Memorial and stands rigidly at the salute.

"When the long night shadows creep
"O'er silent hills where nameless heroes sleep."

Unknown to Man but Known to God—nearly sixty thousand alone in the old salient, with their names inscribed in letters of gold on the Memorial; it is a great monument of any time and any land—a shrine of Empire. I have on another occasion quoted the inscription at its base, but its repetition here carries an additional significance. "To the armies of the British Empire who stood here from 1914 to 1918, and to those of their dead, who have no known grave." I wonder if the old warrior, standing in reverent salute, ever sees anything, ever hears anything! Dim shapes of marching men, the fainter melody of singing voices—"Oh you beautiful doll"—"Who were you with last night?" . . Walking wounded, stretchers carried shoulder high with maimed bodies, long queues of men, mud and blood plastered, blind some of them, stumbling along the C. C. S.; ambulances forcing their way linewards, roads jammed with guns—daubed in the fantastic colors of Harlequin—and gun fodder, steel and flesh and blood, all going into a flaming hell along the Menin Road—The Road of Poplars—past Glencourse wood and Inverness Copse, past slashed tree trunks swamps and shell craters filled with a poisonous metallic slime in which dead bodies float. . . Journey's End indeed.

"GRAVE-SET PLAINS OF FLANDERS

The deathways of yesterday are boulevards for visitors and pilgrims now; efficient but anxious chauffeurs in high peaked caps chivvy them with well schooled interpreters on the Grand Tour of the battlefields. Everything guaranteed, "Messieurs et 'Dames", with ten minutes stops at Suicide and Hell Fire Corners, Death Valley and "Moo Cow" farm; one did not loiter for ten minutes in the old days. Oft-times, from the mysterious resources of the mind, there comes a flash, a click, and we are able to link past with present, command what has gone to re-appear Doubtless many ex-service men will vividly recall the long ago as the Last Post, solemn, slow and mystical, is sounded today. . .

A LAND OF GHOSTLY BIVOUACS

Gripping hands at zero hours in sodden fields, beneath the scourge of "trommel feuer"; Indian horsemen riding shoulder to shoulder through the poppies at dawn at Bazentin . . Anzacs in the frozen slime of Passchendaele—a human Calvary; South Africans in the pounding gassing, raving hades of Delville wood. Canada of the "Patches", a fighting machine of undying fame, breasting the ridge at Vimy in its Easter desolation of 1917. Men of the Imperials from the blue haze of the English countryside wrestling with death at the Canal du Nord, khaki-killed town lads of Glascie and Auld Reekie strutting their stuff under shell fire in the streets of ancient Amiens—Scotland forever! Old contemptibles, silent and dour, sucking at older pipes, amazed at the raw enthusiasm of the teen-age levies from the green fields of home. ("Are we downhearted? No, but you blankety-blank soon will be!") Poor lads, butchered for a Roman holiday!

OLD SOLDIERS NEVER DIE

Ten to one when your old soldier says "The old war wasn't so bad", his inward eye is filled, not with the mud and blood obscenities of warfare, not with Verey lights, fire steps, smoky tea and bully beef "cutlets", not even with the bath, pyjamas and the chocolate bar of the Red Cross hospitals, but with the memory of brown good natured men, who marched with him to and from the training camps whistling gay tunes or singing silly snatches of song; of an infantry battalion in full marching order route—marching on a summer's day—a gallant sight surely—swinging along the rolling roads of the Homeland through old world villages where Time moves on velvet wings—or along the paves of the war areas with Time afoot on leaden feet—with the rhythm of the march constant in every swinging limb.

"STAND BY YOUR GLASSES, STEADY!"

His inward ear is attuned, not to ties, or the chatter of the "Emma Gees", but to the indomitable spirit of 1914-1918, and a thousand men, dead now or irrevocably changed, singing "Here we are again" or "Hold your hand out, naughty boy", innocent then of the Somme, Messines and Cambrai, and all their calamitous fate undisclosed and unsuspected, but fully aware they were embarked on the greatest earthly adventure any man can have. They called themselves Fred Karno's army, and sang that deathless ribald chant of undefeated souls right into the front line—and beyond. For one generation at least, that innocence will not return, neither can it be forgotten.

* * *

We who desire peace, and who does not, must write it in the hearts of the children; eventually a new race will arise to whom the way of peace will not be a lesson derived from the dread and agony of war, but an hereditary posession, bred in their blood and their spirit. May we long reverence Armistice Day, to help us all

"Remember in what hours they gave
"All that mankind may give
"That we may live."

The Lighter Side

"I don't see why jokes about our race being so close are continually being published," remarked a young Scotsman. "We are no close, just thrifty."

"I think it's a shame," agreed the Irishman with whom he was walking.

They proceeded in silence until they came to a tobacconist's.

"Come in and have a cigar," invited the Irishman.

They stepped inside. The Irishman put his hand in his pocket, then withdraw it with an exclamation.

"By Jove," said he, "I left my money at home."

"Well, the day's young," commented the Scot. "I don't mind walking back with you to get it."

At a fancy-dress dance for children a policeman stationed at the door was instructed not to admit any adult.

An excited woman came running up to the door and demanded admission.

"I'm sorry, ma'am," replied the policeman, "but I cant let anyone in but children."

"But my child is in there as a butterfly," exclaimed the woman, "and has forgotten her wings!"

"Cant help it," replied the policeman; "orders is orders. You'll have to let her represent a caterpillar!"

That Body of Yours

By JAS. W. BARTON, M. D.

BREAD IS GOOD FOOD

A baker in a certain large city has been advertising his bread as the "staff of life." It would seem from the number of individuals who are doing without bread, or using very little of it, that they have decided to throw away the staff and get along on something else, some other kinds of food.

I believe this is a mistake, not that I am trying to help out the farmers by having my readers eat more bread. As a matter of fact, one writer tells us that if every man woman and child would eat two more bushels of wheat during the year that there would be no surplus to be sent to other countries.

But bread is really the staff of life for many nations, and it is only because we can command such a variety of foods from the markets of the world that we are turning away to some extent from bread.

Now bread is not a perfect food; in fact there is no perfect food except perhaps milk for little children. However bread does contain that rich food—starch—which is our most important food in producing energy.

Also it is always a "safe" food in that if chewed properly, fresh or stale, it will never cause any intestinal trouble.

Now I have no objection to the use of special foods because when foods are "tasty" they stimulate the digestive juices in the mouth, stomach, and intestine, and they are thus more easily digested.

However there is just the danger that in eating various other foods that they will not contain the starch and vitamins of bread and thus the benefit of this real food bread may be lost.

Now bread is bread whether you eat the whole wheat or the white bread. Although the whole wheat contains the whole wheat including the roughage-bran it is not as generally liked especially by children as the white bread, and thus the digestive juices do not pour out as readily. Also less of it would be eaten. Whole wheat bread while of use in preventing constipation in many individuals, is too coarse for others and actually scrapes or scratches the stomach or intestine too vigorously.

Eat whole wheat bread if you like it. If you like white bread best eat lettuce, spinach, cabbage, or fruits for roughage.

But in any case eat some bread at each meal.

Hope of Empire Trade Lies in Ballot Box Not in Conference

Overseas delegates are at the Imperial conference to reconstruct the business relationships between themselves and with the mother country. They will get no help from the Ramsay MacDonald government. Their only hope is that the electorate of Great Britain will soon prove themselves awake to present-day conditions and put in power a government able to think in the terms of modern economic thoughts.

Premier MacDonald and Chancellor Snowden are a pair of political druids. To them it is little short of blasphemy that any overseas delegate should touch the moss upon their aged doctrines. Very little can come of a conference to exchange ideas with two politicians who are bigotedly devoted to ideas which have already been discarded.

Under the leadership of Hon. R. B. Bennett the representatives of the dominions are laying a plan of Empire trade nominally before Messrs. Snowden and MacDonald but actually before the people of Great Britain. Their voice will answer the question whether the united kingdom does or does not want a system of Imperial preferences. The mission of the overseas delegates is to see that, when pronouncing judgment on that policy the electors of the motherland are truly acquainted with the facts. They cannot convert the MacDonald ministry and it is a waste of time to try. But every effort to waste time will be made by Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in order to con- en his followers into a belief that he is actually trying to accomplish something, beyond his own continuance in office.—Toronto Telegram

Ben Lomond for Sale

A tragic tale of legislative exaction lies behind the announcement that some of the most famous ground in Scoland, including Ben Lomond at the Trossachs, is in the market.

The Duke of Montrose, unable to meet the heavy demands made by death duties, offered these lands to the chancellor of the exchequer as national possessions in lieu of payment, but evidenaly Mr. Snowden is more in need of cash and and nothing has come of the offer.

All that is left to the Duke is to raise the money by the sale of lands which have been in the family for 400 yars, and it is difficult to imagine anyone purchasing these far-famed beauty spots to allow them to remain in their unremunerative wilderness and beauty.

One trembles to think what might happen were they to be acquired by a commercial alien with a desire to turn them to financial account as show ground.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

ROUGH RIDERS WILL OPPOSE COAST CHAMPS

Regina Squad Wins 9-6 Over Calgary Tigers, Prairie Final

BATTLE MERALOMAS THURSDAY, SATURDAY

Stellar Punting Gives Rough Riders Wonderful Victory

CALGARY, Nov. 10—Before an enthusiastic crowd numbering between five and six thousand, Regina Rough Riders, despite the fact that they failed to cross their opponents' line for a major point eked out a 9-6 victory over Calgary Tigers at Hillhurst park Thanksgiving afternoon to retain the prairie title for the fifth straight time and qualify to oppose Meralomas of Vancouver, British Columbia Big Four representatives, in the western Canada rugby championship series to be contested at the coast metropolis on Thursday and Saturday, November 13 and 15.

Rough Riders through their superior line plunging and the breaks that came their way, won the game, clearly and distinctly, and the majority of the record crowd will give them credit for being the better gridiron machine, but it is certain in the history of this fascinating pastime in western Canada, there has never been a more gallant fight made by a losing team nor a greater rising to the heights by a winning team.

Here and there the football played during the holiday afternoon measured up to the mechanical percision of two finalists that had played such sterling rugby all season in order to make their clash possible. It is doubtful if any two teams in the entire Dominion ever played with more stubborn, surging courage than these two did on Monday. Tigers lost because Rough Riders were a bit the better team. Rough Riders won by a margin of three points, being forced to come from behind in the third quarter to tie the count at 6-6 and add the points that gave them their advantage in the final session. It was by far the hardest fought grid battle that has ever been staged in this city, a tribute to the winners for their gallant comeback and a tough loss for the Tigers who were compelled to enter the final minus Fritz Sandstorm and Fred Hess, two outstanding stars who watched the game among the spectators due to injuries received early in the season.

As a machine the Rough Riders were better balanced, but the brilliant playing of several Tigers, particularly Johnston, Jenkins, McKinnon, Gideon, Ferguson and Vokes kept the Bengal squad in the picture most of the time.

The only major points of the gruelling, but interesting clash went to the Calgary team, when Ralph Johnston caught Hall's onside kick and went over for a touchdown, which the same player converted.

Regina scored all their points through stellar punting, six rouges, five of them due to kicks, and a placement kick that was cleverly executed by Grubb. The other rouge was a gift when Bloomfield kicked off and McKinnon fell on the ball behind his own line, when he had plenty of time to run it out.

JOCKEY ESCAPES INJURY IN SPILL

Jockeys are made of tough stuff. They have to be. Here's Jockey W. Collins just before his mount, Toreador II, reversed positions and rolled over him after stumbling at the fourteenth jump in the Conover steeplechase at Woodbine, Toronto, Ont. Jockey Collins was not hurt a whit. His only complaint was that a perfectly good race had been lost when his horse appeared to be in a position to score.

FIRST HOCKEY PRACTICE OF SEASON HELD

Six Members Hume Hotel Team Motor to Ice Near Salmo

The first hockey practice of the season to be held by a Nelson team was staged Sunday near Salmo by six members of the newly formed Hume Hotel Sporting club.

Those numbered among the six players were: Bill McEwan, Teddy Romano, Johnny Aurella, Pete Defoe, Mike DeLe, Clarence McDougall.

These players found a strip of ice about 10 feet wide and 50 feet long on which to hold their practice. They reported that the ice was excellent and that there was no snow in the vicinity of the ice.

ACADEMICALS WIN

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 10—Edinburgh Academicals defeated Oxford university 15 to 0 in a rugby game today.

NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE SCHEDULE STARTS TONIGHT

Philadelphia-N. Y. Rangers; Boston-Americans; Maroons-Ottawa

A new national hockey league season will open tomorrow bringing perhaps more changes than any year since the 1926-27 season.

The first new club since then, Philadelphia Quakers, will make its bow in one of the three opening-night games. The Quakers, who replaced Pittsburgh Pirates and took over most of the playing talent from that club, open at home against New York Rangers. At Boston, the Bruins, runners up for the world championship last spring meet the recamped New York Americans and Montreal Maroons play at Ottawa.

The new Philadelphia team merely brings a change of Benny Leonard's hitherto unprofitable franchise to a new location where Leonard has hopes of producing a championship contender. Cooper Smeaton, former referee in chief of the league has been engaged as manager. Another change is the name of the Detroit club from the Cougars to the more easily pronounced title, the Falcons.

New players will be seen on nearly every team as the managers and magnates spent a busy summer rounding up new talent. Most of the outstanding minor league and amateur stars of last season will be seen in new uniforms. A good many of the old familiar faces will be missing.

The rule makers have made fewer changes this year than in recent seasons. The only notable innovation in the line is that of the delayed penalty. The rule makes it impossible for a team to have fewer than four men on the ice. When penalties would reduce a team's man power below that mark a substitute is permitted until one or more of the penalized players returns to the ice.

The penalties for rough play have been made more severe, notably by the ruling that a player who cuts another about the head, whether intentionally or not is given a 10 minute penalty.

Of the four teams which do not get into action the first night, Toronto and Detroit play Thursday, entertaining the Americans and Rangers respectively. The Montreal Canadiens open against Ottawa Saturday and Chicago meets Rangers Sunday night.

BOSTON WINS

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10—The Boston Tigers opened the Canadian-American Hockey league season here with a 2 to 1 victory over the New Haven Eagles.

McNeal and Burke each scored for the Tigers in the third period after Boucher had scored in the first period to give New Haven an early lead.

QUINN, SCHANG, RELEASED

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10—Unconditional release of Jack Quinn, veteran pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Wally Schang, veteran catcher, was announced today by Connie Mack. Athletics have obtained from the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league Robert L. Johnston, outfield; Hank McDonald, pitcher, and Joe Palmisano, catcher.

NEW PARACHUTE RECORD

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 10.—Charlie Dalyn, 19, established a new Canadian parachute jump record here today when he leaped from a plane piloted by Captain Earl Hand of the Toronto Flying club, from an altitude of 14,950 fet.

LEAD BIKE RACE

CHICAGO, Ills., Nov. 10.—Freddie Spencer and Norman Hill, United States men, pedalled into a tie for first place with Alfred Letourneur and Marcel Guimbretiere, French sters, at the end of the first day's racing in Chicago's 24th international six-day bicycle race.

KITCHENER WINS

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 10.—Scoring three goals near the finish of the game, Kitchener's Flying Dutchmen of the Canpro hockey league, trounced the Syracuse Stars of the international hockey league, six to five, in an exhibition tilt here tonight.

MANITOBA FAILS WIN A GAME

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 10.—(CP)—Another winless rugby season closed for University of Manitoba here today when they dropped the final game of the Western Intercollegiate union schedule to Alberta, 18 to 6. It was Alberta's second win over Jack Little's youthful team and gave the Edmonton students an even break on their two-game prairie sally. Saturday they were beaten 10 to 4 by the titled Saskatchewan squad at Saskatoon.

ROAD ON STILTS GETS AUTO TEST AT HIGH SPEED

New York's Second-Story Highway Opened; Allow Speed Fifty Miles

NEW YOR, Nov. 10—The first section of Manhattan's $18,000,000 elevated express highway was opened Oct. 27 when a caravan of automobiles, speeding at 60 miles an hour over its granite block pavement, swept from Canal to Twenty-Second street, 25 feet above the tangled traffic on the West Side waterfront.

The mile and one-half link traversed by motor cars for the first time will not be ready for general traffic for another three weeks. There remain to be completed the refinements—lights, street markers, decorated guide posts and several blocks of paving. On November 13, the highway on stilts will be dedicated to the public and turned over to the taxi drivers.

HIGH SPEED ALLOWED

Headed by Borough President Julius Miller and other city officials the inspection party in eight automobiles entered the "second-story" speedway at Canal street and rolled northward at a breath-taking clip untroubled by cross streets or red lights. A steel girder in the center divides the elevated structure into two great roadways along which six cars may be elevated structure into two great roadways along which six cars may move abreast, three northward and three southward.

The running time for the mile-and-one-half trip today was eight minutes because of stops and detours around uncompleted stretches. When the highway is officially opened the running time will be two minutes, according to Mr. Miller.

COSTS HALF A MILLION

The express highway from Canal to Twenty-second street is costing the city $500,000. Work was begun May 29, 1929. The remaining three sections will be completed within two years, work having already begun on the link between Sixtieth and Seventy-second streets. When completed the highway will provide a rapid-transit route from Canal street to Riverside Drive along the Hudson River and is expected to be a great aid in relieving a traffic situation that was almost intolerable.

Engineers estimate 5000 vehicles an hour can move in either direction over the 70-foot roadway. This doubles the capacity of Fifth Avenue. A 50-mile-an-hour speed will be permitted at all points. There will be no cross roads entrance to the highway being by ramps.

GOT THROUGH FORTUNE

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(By the Canadian Press)—A once rich woman, Ada Clements, 64, who was found sleeping on a public seat, with only one farthing in her possession, was sentenced to one day's imprisonment at Wokingham, Berkshire, on a charge of wandering without visible means of subsistence. She was bound over on a charge of obstructing the police.

It was stated that she and her husband had got through a fortune of $225,000.

M. A. A. A. WINS

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10.—Montreal Amateur Athletic association, local big four entry, won a 13-3 victory over University of Toronto in a Thanksgiving exhibition rugby game here today.

In 1929 the lobster fishery of the Atlantic coast was second among the fisheries of Canada in point of marketed value of production. The salmon fisheries of British Columbia came first (about $14,000,000) and the lobster production amounted to nearly $5,700,000. The cod fisheries was third—$5,395,000.

GERARD HAS HARD TIME SHAPING UP TEAM, NEW YORK

Must Make a Fighting Machine Out of Tail End Americans

PURCHASE OF RED DUTTON BIG DEAL

Sale of Conacher to Montreal Maroons Also Ranks High

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Eddy Gerard, who once piloted the Montreal Maroons to the world's hockey championship, faces a big task this season in making a team that will be in the thick of the Stanley cup fight out of the last-place New York Americans.

At least two things, however, are in favor of the new American manager. Toward the end of last season, the Americans showed that they were quite capable of winning hockey games and had the basis of a good team. And Owner Bill Dwyer has given Gerard a free hand in any player deals he believes necessary to build up the team.

So far, Gerard has taken the stand that every member of the big squad that went to Galt, Ont., for training, has an equal chance of winning a place on the team. More than 50 players, drawn from Dwyer's New Haven Eagles, from last year's American squad and from various other sources of material, came under the managerial scrutiny.

The big deals so far have been the acquisition of "Red" Dutton, powerful and experienced defense man from the Montreal Maroons and the later sale of another defense star, Lionel Conacher, who served as playing-manager of the Americans last year, to the same team.

Of the large squad of amateur candidates, few seem likely to get jobs. Jack Keating and Gordon Kuhn, wingmen, Eddie Convey, center, Angradi and Vernon Ayres, defencemen, have been sent to New Haven. With them went Roy Murmister who was with the Americans part of last season. Bill Holmes, another reserve forward, has been released.

Billy Burch, veteran center star, appears to be the keyman of Gerard's offensive plays. Burch, minus a lot of excess weight, appears ready for the big season. Playing with him are Mormie Himes, center of the 1929 "Midget" line, and George Patterson, who showed great form toward the end of last season. The other little fellows, Rabbit McVeigh and Johnny Sheppard, probably will appear among the reserves.

New York also have purchased a fine young forward line intact, Mike Neville, center, and Frank Carson and Happy Ems, wing, stars of the Windsor International league team, were bought from the Maroons and probably will form the second American set of forwards.

On the defense, the Americans again have their star goalie, Roy Worters, with young Jack Murray of Brockville, Ont., as a possible understudy. A pair of battle-scarred veterans, "Bullet Joe" Simpson and Bill Brydge, are the starting defense pair with Dutton and Ellis Pringle, formerly of the Toronto Marlboros, held in reserve.

RUGBY OFFICERS ELECTED, CALGARY

CALGARY, Alta., Nov. 10. — (By the Canadian Press) — Dr. Emmet McCusker, of Regina, today was elected president of the Western Canada Rugby Football Union, succeeding W. L. (Squib) Ross, Calgary, at the annual meeting here. Other officers are: Karl Wintemute, Winnipeg, first vice-president; Moe Lieberman, Edmonton, second vice-president; Sax Crossely, Vancouver, third vice-president; Arnold Dowd, Winnipeg, secretary; Andy Naismith, Calgary, A. E. Tomlinson, Moose Jaw, Barne Bayne, Winnipeg, and Del Finlay, vancouver, executive.

To the annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby football union. Past President Ross will carry east the proposal for a change in rules. Delegates approved the suggestion that if a kicked ball goes over the defending team's deadline without touching the ground or a player, it be regarded as no score and the defending side be given possession of the ball on its own 10-yard line.

Proposals that the age limit in junior be lowered from 21 to 20 years and that the residence rule be changed from September 1, as at present, to June or July 1, were defeated.

"Big League" BOWLING

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

Select a lightweight ball for your first trials.

Don't grip the ball too tight.

Don't use a ball with sharpedged holes.

Don't throw the ball roll it just as you would if the pins were 20 feet away.

Don't start your delivery with a jump.

Don't think it necessary to be a Hercules to bowl well. A woman can become almost as proficient as a man in bowling. Floretta McCutcheon of Pueblo, Colo., probably the world's greatest woman bowler, once defeated Jimmy Smith himself in a three-game series 704 to 687 at Denver, Colorado, Dec. 18, 1927 and has also bowled three 300 games.

Al Demaree has prepared an illustrated bowling leaflet on "Improving Your Delivery" which he will gladly send to any reader requesting it. Address Al Demaree in care of this paper and be sure to enclose a self-addressed,stamped envelope.

U. B. C. LOSES BY 13 TO 12 SCORE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 10.—On a field made soggy and slippery by several days of steady rain, Meralomas of Vancouver proved their right to the provincial senior rugby crown by defeating University of British Columbia, 13 to 12, in a "big four" fixture at Athletic park today. Meralomas next meet Regina Roughriders, prairie champions, in a two out of three game series for the western Canada championship. The first contest of the titular series is scheduled here on Thursday night, with the second game Saturday.

Meralomas wound up their season undefeated, while the students, with two losses, finished in second position.

QUEBEC HOLDS TITLE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 10.—Quebec retained the interprovincial English football championship when they defeated a team representing the province of Ontario 11 to 3, today.

CHOCOLATE WILL MEET BATTALINO IN TITLE BOUT

15-Round Go Set for December 12 for Christmas Fund Show

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(AP)—Bat Battalino, of Hartford, Conn, will defend his world's featherweight championship against Kid Chocolate, Cuban flash, in a 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden, December 12. The bout will top the card for the New York American's annual Christmas fund show.

Battalino has held the 126-pound title since 1929, when he outpointed the champion, Andre Routis. Chocolate lost to Fidel La Barba in his last start.

The Garden announced that La Barba has been signed to meet Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., body puncher, in a 10-rounder at the Garden November 28.

BALMY BEACH IS WINNER, TORONTO

Defeats Hamilton Cubs for Championship of Ontario

TORONTO, Nov. 10—Balmy Beach, of Toronto, won the championship of the senior Ontario Rugby Football union here today, defeating Hamilton Cubs, western group champions, 18-6, in a game which was featured by many strange happenings.

Not counting the frequent bobbles there were moments of great football. The game brought out a beautiful aerial duel between Ab Box of the Beachers, and Jack Tierney of the Cubs. Box had the edge, if any, for the first half, Hamilton played rings around the Beach, even though they were outscored slightly. It was not until Hendry went over for a touchdown in the third that the game seemed on ice. But early in the fourth, Teddy Reeve, giant Beach middle, made it absolutely certain by blocking a Tierney kick and then hopping over the line for a touchdown. Both major scores were converted by Harris.

William Abbott, 70 years of age, son of the late Sir John Abbott, a former premier of Canada, died at Montreal.

CANADIANS WIN AT HORSE SHOW

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(CP)—Miss Ruth Cowans, Montreal, romped off with another big triumph at the fourth day of the national horse show at Madison Square Garden today, easily taking the cup presented by the United Hunts Racing association for a team of three hunters from one hunt in the star event of the afternoon session. She rode Lucifer.

In the $1000 international military stake, Major R. S. Timmis of the Canadian army won the sixth award mounted upon Pericles.

WARDNER PLANS HOCKEY TEAMS FOR ITS BOYS

Will Fix Up Skating Rink and Suitable Dressing Rooms

WARDNER, B. C., Nov. 10—A meeting of the Athletic Association was held Tuesday evening. It was decided to have a skating rink again this winter, the labor on it to be voluntary. Two boys' hockey teams will be formed under the supervision, V. Lundbom, Frank Moore and Murray Sinclair. Another building will be fixed up so that there will be a room for men and boys and one also for the ladies and girls.

SEVEN TEAMS FOR AMERICAN LEAGUE

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 10.—The American hockey league will be a seven-team circuit instead of an eight-club affair, it was announced here Monday with the New York membership being moved to Minneapolis.

Difficulties in getting a financial backer and inability of the New York entry to find a suitable rink brought about a change in the make-up of the American league, William F. Grant of Kansas City, president and secretary, said.

Nip Dwan, formerly of the New York Americans of the National league., will be coach and manager. Forty-eight games will be played by each club, 24 in each city. Western teams, instead of playing three games in the east, now will play four, and vice versa.

CRESTON WILL SECURE MORE ELECTRICITY

Additional Engine Being Installed by Creston Power & Light

CRESTON, B. C., Nov. 10—L. M. Simpson of Spokane, president of the Creston Power & Light Company, Limited, is spending a few days here superintending the final freatures of the work of installing a 60 h. p. Deisel engine at the company's power plant. Up till now the original 75 h. p. engine was able to carry the load but the steady increase for more light and power has necessitated putting in another engine to help carry the peak load which is assuming heavy proportions now the shorter days are here. Up to the present there is no word as to whom the license to develop Goat river canyon power has been awarded. A hearing in the matter was held here at least two months ago at which the claims of the South Kootenay Power Water Power Company and Creston Power & Light Company, Limited, were heard, along with claims and land owners who asked that consideration be given their claim to a water supply for irrigation.

INVERMERE GETS FOUR REGISTERED CALVES AND RAM

INVERMERE, B. C., Nov. 10—The live stock branch of the Dominion government experimental station at Windermere has been enriched by the arrival of four registered Ayrshire calves, the gift of Captain Dunwaters of Fintry, British Columbia. Captain Dunwaters secured these calves at the recent draft sale of Ayrshire as held by the University of British Columbia. Their names are: Auchendrane Minstrel's Famie, Muncraig Vallentine's Polly, Notherhall Lovely Mendella and E. Nethercraig Majestic Beauty, all of them were imported in dam and are of exceptionally good breeding.

In addition to the above there has also come to their herd a four year old Rocky Mountain ram and three ewes sent at the request of J. B. Harkins, Dominion parks commissioner, from their homes near Banff. These are still in captivity but as soon as proper fencing facilities have been arranged and quarters established they will be turned into the grounds prepared for them. The experiment is to see if these animals can in any way be domesticated for commercial use as their own species or if they could be made use of later by crossing with domestic sheep.

Rev. M. Harkness Is Speaker Before Rossland Audience

ROSSLAND, B. C., Nov. 10—More Bibles were sold last year than in any similar period in the 126 years during which the British and Foreign Bible society has been doing business, stated Rev. N. A. Harkness of Vancouver, speaking in the church at St. George the Martyr last evening. The output of 1929 consisted of 36,000,000 copies of Holy Writ, of which 6,000,000 were in various Chinese dialects. In British Columbia 30,000 copies were sold and these were printed in 45 different languages throughout Canada, the Bibles sold were printed in 110 languages and dialects, which is 10 more tongues than are spoken within the confines of the United States. To date the Bible has been translated in 630 languages, and new translations are being made at the rate of one every month. Mr. Harkness illustrated his talk with a number of colored slides.

Market and Mining News

RYE LOWEST AT CHICAGO SINCE 1898; WHEAT LOWEST SINCE 1902

(By John P. Boughan, Associated Press Market Editor)

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 10. — Big selling and sharp breaks in values today tumbled wheat down to the lowest price level since 1902, with rye outdoing any bottom since 1898. Oats, too, reached new depth records.

Much of the selling deluge that swamped the wheat pit and pulled down other cereals come from houses with stock market connections. Corn kept up better than other grain, many corn traders holding off to await the government crop report, which however when issued after the day's business was complete, proved to be bearish.

Wheat closed semi-demoralized at almost the day's minimum prices, 1¼-1½c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Corn closed ¼-2c off, oats 1¼ to 1¾c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 20c.

ESTIMATE OF CORN CROP IS UP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—The preliminary estimate of this year's corn corp was placed today at 2,094,481,000 bushels by the department of agriculture. A month ago 2,046,716,000 bushels were forecast. Last year production totalled 2,614,307,000 bushels.

HUGE TURNOVER AS PRICES GO DOWN, NEW YORK

Volume Largest in Month; Market Averages Three Points Lower

(By John L. Cooley, Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—With the largest turnover in a month, stocks extended their declines today.

The market averaged nearly three points lower at the close. Sales totalled 4,426,250 shares, heaviest volume since the 6,000,000-share day on October 10. Most of the turnover was in the first three hours.

Most of the high priced rails sold 6 to 10 points lower before the declines were reduced. Utility stocks like North American Water Works and Public Service of New Jersey retained three to four points of larger extreme losses. American Telephone made a new low at 184⅜, where it was off more than three points, and closed 1¾ down.

U. S. Steel, after touching 138, closed at 140, a loss of only half a point. General Electric, General Motors and Westinghouse were off a point or less at the finish, but National Biscuit, Liggett & Myers and American Tobacco "B" showed losses of three to five. American Can, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott, and Cocoa Cola closed moderately higher. Specialities were mostly weak.

STERILIZATION, FEEBLE MINDED, IS A BENEFIT

Such Is Statement of J. E. Brownlee Premier of Alberta

TORONTO, Nov. 10. (CP)—Sterilization of the feeble-minded in Alberta is working beneficially, and is stirring no critical protest, declared J. E. Brownlee, premier of Alberta, when asked to comment on the proposal of the public welfare commission, in its recent report to Premier Ferguson, that sterilization be introduced into Ontario.

Premier Brownlee of Alberta would neither advise against nor urge adoption of the plan, believing that it was Ontario's own problem to be solved by the province without outside advice. He did vouchsafe the information, however, that in his province the system of destroying the reproductive capacities of the feeble-minded by a simple operation had within the past two years produced excellent social results. Premier Brownlee explained that all cases are selected by the superintendents of mental hospitals and institutions for the criminally insane and that all cases are thoroughly investigated with regard to all the pertinent facts by a board of inquiry, including doctors, psychiatrists and laymen. In addition the consent of parents and relatives must be obtained.

"We have proceeded very cautiously, very conservatively," said the premier, "both because of public opinion regarding the matter and because of the obvious dangers in the system. And as far as I know there have so far been no tragedies. The plan not only benefits the community by reducing the number of children born feeble-minded, crippled or with criminal or immoral tendencies, but has been of benefit to numbers of the feeble-minded persons themselves. There are many imbeciles and mental cases who would be perfectly safe and more or less normal if kept at home, if it were not for the danger of their feeble-mindedness leading them into parenthood. Ordinarily such people have to be confined to an institution, but with this operation it is perfectly safe for them to return home. This is particularly true of feeble-minded girls."

SHOT AT THREE HUNDRED TIMES; DIES, AGED 67

No Feud Like a Kentucky Mountain Feud; Killings Come Fast

There is no feud like a Kentucky mountain feud, says the Toronto Telegram. The other day there died in a hospital in Baltimore, Maryland, William Anderson (Cap) Hatfield, last of the warring generation of the family that fought for years with the McCoy family. For a long time he had defied the forests of two states seeking to arrest him for a series of killings charged to his account. He was 67.

"Cap" Hatfield was one of 13 children of "Devil Anse." He was seventeen when the feud began, in 1880, and through the fiercest of the fighting he was a leader. Yet he was unique among his family. Late in his life his wife taught him to read. He studied by himself. Walking in the woods, with a rifle on his shoulder, ready to fire at sight of a McCoy, he carried a book with him. He took a correspondence course in law and was actually admitted to the bar but never practiced. He encouraged his children to acquire the formal education he never had.

THE SPARK

The McCoys lived on the Kentucky side of the Tug River, and the Hatfields on the West Virginia side. The most common story of the spark that kindled the first flame of battle is that Floyd Hatfield drove into his pen a herd of pigs he found in the woods. Randolph McCoy claimed ownership and sued Hatfield. The case was tried in a Logan County court, before a magistrate whose name was Hatfield, with the room filled with Hatfields and firearms. The Hatfields won.

Then no Hatfield or McCoy ventured abroad unarmed. On an election day morning in 1882 both factions went to the polls armed. There were words, blows, a stone that caught a McCoy in the abdomen, and in the fusillade that followed Ellison Hatfield was wounded and the feud which was to claim more than 70 lives was begun.

MANY KILLINGS

The town constable, a Hatfield, seized three McCoys. Led by "Devil Anse," a party spirited the prisoners deep into Hatfield territory and trussed them up in a schoolhouse. Leaving a guard, "Devil Anse" went back to town. He told the McCoys that if Ellison Hatfield died so would they. Late at night Ellison died and "Devil Anse" carried word to the schoolhouse. The three McCoys were taken out and shot to death.

Across the river, in Pike County, 23 Hatfields were indicated by a Kentucky jury for the murders. Then "Cap" went into action for the first time. With his father he crossed into Kentucky and set fire to the cabin of old Randolph McCoy.

While the old man labored to extinguish the fire with a churn of buttermilk his wife ran from the blazing house, to be knocked senseless by a Hatfield. His daughter was shot on the doorstep. His son charged into the ring of Hatfields surrounding the clearing and was killed. Finally the old man himself, a repeating rifle blazing in front of him, shot his way to safety.

TWO MCCOYS KILLED

Aother election day "Cap" Hatfield and a young relative killed two McCoys in a duel. A posse took them as they slept later beside a mountain trail, "Cap" broke jail and fled into the heart of the Hatfield country. Odd Randolph McCoy led the army of McCoys to bring him back to justice. With him came Kentucky sheriffs—the first time law and order allied with either family in a flight.

At the foot of the Devil's Backbone, a huge crag rising from the riverbed, the pursuers corned "Cap" and his men. Behind rocks and trees the Hatfields repelled every assault. Two sheriffs were killed and seven wounded on the first day. The forces of the law sought dynamite. A charge was laid under cover of darkness and in the early morning light the crag was demolished. Several of the Hatfields were captured but "Cap" escaped.

Some of the Hatfields became leaders in law enforcement. "Cap" himself served as a deputy sheriff for several years. A member of the Hatfield family was elected a delegate to a Sunday school convention. There he found a McCoy, also a delegate, and the two became good friends. In 1912 when Senator Hatfield was nominated for governor Jim McCoy, then the patriarch of the family, sent a telegram: "Congratulations from a McCoy."

"Cap" Hatfield was a tall, heavy man of picturesque appearance "Cap" said he had been a target for bullets at least 300 times and was wounded only once.

Will Allow People to Smoke in Giant New British Plane

LONDON, Nov. 10. (CP)—Indicative of the recognized safety in flight of modern British aircraft is the application addressed to the Air Ministry by Imperial Airways that smoking should be permitted in the new Handley Page 40 seater biplanes ordered by Imperial Airways for the operation of their European and empire routes. The design of these new air giants, which are the largest liners ever built, provides for a specially fire-proofed smoking room to seat 20 people, separated by a fully equipped refreshment buffet and far from a saloon of equal size for non-smoking travellers. Smoking has never previously been allowed on British air liners but the size of the new craft and the efficient provisions made for the safe storage of fuel apparently justify the application.

British to Show Airplane Engines at Big Paris Show

PARIS, Nov. 10. (CP)—Aircraft, air engines and flying accessories will represent the British industry at the Paris Aero Show in November and December this year. Military aircraft, air cooled and water-cooled engines, light aeroplanes, metal construction, aerodrome and airways lighting, and a variety of accessory equipment will be found on British stands.

The successful water-cooled supercharged motors of approximately 500 horsepower which have enabled the British aircraft constructor to produce the fastest military aircraft in the world will be exhibited by way of contrast and comparison the expert visitor will be able to study on another British stand then astonishing Townsend Ring device which promises the radical air-cooled motor yet another chance in speed competition with the water-cooled unit by reducing markedly the resistance to movement through the air offered by the wide spread of the radial.

Interesting among the proposed lighting exhibits is the ceiling light, evolved for measuring the height of the clouds. This consists mainly of a 12-inch searchlight and a graduated clinometer.

VOCATION

THE spinning-wheel, whirring far into the night, provided the accompaniment to our grandmother's lullaby, for her work never ceased. In those days, people were born to work or they were born to play, and the dividing line was seldom crossed.

The new household servant—electricity—by performing much of the housework that was formerly done by the housewife, has made it possible for her to devote more and more hours of the day or night to social duties and even to political affairs. Nowadays, it is not only the Duchess who is a leader of community thought and activity—modern society is benefitting from the rich experience of individuals from all walks of life.

Certainly, to-day, woman's vocation is to wield an influence not only in her primary field, which is the home, but also in national and civic affairs. There she has the opportunity to weave into our social fabric those designs and patterns which benefit ourselves and our children.

In the railway yards snorting yard engines run up and down all day long making up trains of contractors' equipment, which is being shipped to new jobs. These cars contain everything from horses to steam shovels.

Periodically, to add to the bedlam in the railway yards, a long train of empties rolls east through Procter to the borrow pit at Harrop, to return in a short time loaded with the gravel-sand ballast for the grade of the new line.

BARGAIN HUNTERS PRESENT

Throughout the day persons drift into the camp who wish to purchase used contractors' equipment or food supplies that have been left over and will not keep until the next job.

Contractors or their representatives who have stayed at the camp and take care of these customers find that a large portion of the persons who are looking for bargains are Doukhobors. The hard bargains that the Doukhobors strive for have become well known in the Procter camp.

A Doukhobor came into camp yesterday wanting to buy a horse. After considerable haggling the price of $10 appeared to be satisfactory to the contractor.

The prospective purchaser looked the horse over critically, and then finally asked, "Where's the harness?"

Other persons have bought camp buildings as they stand, intending to take them down in sections and move them at their leisure.

Much contractors' equipment is being stored in the vacant camp buildings until such time as it can be sold or moved to new contracts.

PASSENGERS PACE DECK AS PLANE HOPS CHANNEL

crew were Germans, Swiss and Americans.

The black cat belonged to Lady Grace Drummond-Hay. She tied it to a porthole to prevent hostilities with the canary.

The big ship roared along with less vibration than a railroad train. From the cabin portholes the outboard engines on either side looked like twin silver locomotives racing along the main line of the ship. They were half a block away from the cabin windows.

While the Belgian coast was passing in review, Dr. Claude Dornier, inventor and builder of the big plane strolled up and down the 150-foot passenger deck and chuckled at the enthusiasm the spacious quarters evoked.

"Oh, it's all right for a starter," he said. "But give us five or six years and we'll have these ships so they'll really mean something to world commerce."

The coast of England rose out of the haze ahead as the ship circles over Southampton. Soon the DO-X bounced down to a perfect landing in the harbor at Calshot, where passengers disembarked.

The crew jerked on their leather coats and began crooning to their engines. Already they were looking forward to the next hop to Havre, whence the DO-X heads for Lisbon, then out across the ocean for the Azores and the United States.

Do you know how important it is to have your wheels protected by paint? Wheels endure many hardships during the cold, wet weather, and in the spring, if the paint is gone, they become saturated with water and the wood swells. When the dryer weather comes they dry out and shrink, leaving the felloes and hubs loose, and it costs a lot more to have this repaired than it would have to have had the wheels painted in the first place. So let us do your wheels now. Our work and equipment is all up to the mark, and satisfaction is guaranteed you.

the commission which studied the operation of Dominion laws went further than this repeal and, by inference, might be interpreted as giving the Dominion parliament powers to amend the British North America act.

CONSULT PROVINCES

Premier Taschereau of Quebec and Premier Ferguson of Ontario held the provinces should have been consulted before the commission made such an implication. Before the sankey constitutional committee of the Imperial conference, Hon. Maurice Dupre, solicitor-general of Canada, supported their view. The Empire premiers today concurred and ruled the provinces should be consulted.

The repealing bill will not now be presented to the British parliament until the resolutions requesting it are passed by the provincial parliaments of the dominions. It is suggested these resolutions should be reported to the United Kingdom government before, at the latest, August 1, 1931.

When today's further recommendations are made fully effective the net result will be:

Each dominion will have full legislative powers over all ships in its territorial waters engaged in its coasting trade and over its own ships both intra-territorially and extra-territorially.

Any alteration in the law touching the succession of the throne will be made only by consent of all seven parliaments of the British commonwealth.

The right of each dominion to designate its own nationals, as has already been done by Canada, is recognized.

The Empire premiers recommend, however, that there should be no alteration in the status of common British citizenship except after consultation and agreement between the different members of the commonwealth.

NATIONALITY LAW

The premiers today favored legislation to provide that, if the national law of a wife causes her to lose her nationality on her marriage with an alien, the loss of nationality shall be conditional upon her acquiring her husband's new nationality. Legislation would also provide that the naturalization of a husband shall not involve a change in the nationality of a wife except with her consent.

These recommendations are in line with certain provisions of the report of the Hague conference. But the Empire premiers are not prepared to recommend that a British woman, on her marriage, should be permitted to retain her British nationality indefinitely.
