OOLEY PAINTS LIVER DANCING HIS CHAINS

GES POLICIES ON ONSTRUCTIVE LINES

bilize Lumbering; Lower Mine Taxation; Use Game Asset

ICTORIA, Nov. 12.—British Coia's greatest need is for new tal, and, that capital cannot be ined until industry is less vily taxed, according to R. M. ley, new leader of the opposition, made his first speech in the slature today since assuming his office.

onstructive criticism featured his den effort, although he dealt some ghty blows at the government on es more or less political.

Make Taxation Equitable

abilizing timber royalties, taxation he mining industry on a basis of it rather than gross production, lopment of the province's game urces as a productive asset, establment of more creameries in the land to encourage dairying, ation of the absentee ballot, sing of motor car drivers, and ing of the liquor control board political influence, were among concrete suggestions for betterof conditions in the province.

described Premier Oliver as in political chains, dancing to tune of the member for Alberni, until recently had been an hour day tune, but was now to change to a beer tune.

Financial Camouflage

. Pooley charged the finance ster with camouflaging the real s of the provincial balance t. by classing the south Okanagan industrial departments loans as nue producing debt. He said the er account went $639,000 in ar- last year, and the industrial were $100,000 in arrears on in- alone at the last statement.

reply to the governemnts claim the net debt was $46,000,000, Pooley cited the Royal Financial oration's prospectus for a recent sh Columbbia issue giving the net as $68,000,000.

is no fault of this government e life blood has not been sapped of this province," he declared.

Didn't Vote Right

urged greater assistance to the industry, asking the governt to press for restoration at wa of an adequate anti-dumping se to keep American fruit out of prairie market, and criticising administration for not standing by promise of Dr. K. C. MacDonald, a minister, to grant $43,000 to Vernon irrigation district.

"The people did not vote that ay," interjected Mr. Oliver.

"Surely the premier does not ean to say that is the way he ns elections, by buying the ople," retorted the opposition ader.

. Pooley took the premier to task allegedly playing politics with the ht rates case. Had Mr. Oliver y had the interest of the prov- and not the Liberal party, at t, he would have taken up the way campany's offer to abandon Crow's Nest Pass agreement, said Pooley, thus keeping the whole stion of rate adjustment before railway commission, where Sir fred Laurier, creator of the board, intended it should be, instead of viding a handy political football.

Square Deal for Lumbermen

hile not overlooking the necessity safeguarding the interests of the lic treasury, Mr. Pooley declared timber royalties must be ad- ed on a more permanent and table basis, so that investors ld be encouraged to come into the ince.

e urged the minister of mines to y the mining industry more close- claiming that the heavy burden axation on this industry was re- sible for the Consolidated Mining melting company having abandon- postponed its plans to erect one he largest industries of its kind e coast.

. Pooley renewed his suggestion the Game act be administered by parate department, headed by an rt, and urged that proper adver- g of the province's game resources e east would bring hundreds of sands of dollars return to the ince from big game hunters.

Liquor Board Made the Goat

e opposition leader contended that change in the Liquor act was ght about by political interfer- . The former commissioners were given the promised complete con- and were now being made the s for the sins of others. They not controlled purchasing, the g prices, nor prosecutions, he urged that the new commissioner given complete control of pur- ing.

. Pooley contended that the op- ion had opposed the absentee provision of the Elections act ed by Premier Oliver, and said the use of inferior paper had oyed the secrecy of the ballot, he envelopes could be held up e light and their contents de- d.

advocated licensing of motor rs, Mr. Manson announced that l to that effect would be pre- d in a few days.

JUDGE C. G. SNIDER

ALLEGED NELSON CONVICT GIVEN A FIVE-YEAR TERM

Toronto Magistrate Convicts Youth Who Had Been Paroled Previously

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—Following a request by Crown Attorney Armour that there be no more "prisoner coddling" in the case, Magistrate Jones, in the police court here today, sentenced George Lloyd to five years in the penitentiary for breaking into more than one dozen homes in the west end of the city during the past two years and stealing a quantity of valuables. The prisoner had a juvenile court record and had been paroled on a two-year sentence received in Nelson, B.C.

Chief of Police Thomas H. Long, when this dispatch was drawn to his attention last night, looked up his records and found that on October 18, 1922, James Bowker, chief constable at Lethbridge, wrote him stating George Lloyd, alias Gordon Lloyd, was under arrest at Lethbridge on a charge of "breaking and entering," and that it was understood Lloyd has been arrested here on a similar charge.

Neither the city records, nor those of the provincial police, or of the provincial jail, bore out this statement, the chief then discovered, and so advised Lethbridge.

Chief Long also states that no case under another name fits Lloyd's description.

CHONG SING ONCE MORE IDENTIFIED

Vancouver Chinese Picks Him Out as Man Who Shot David Lew

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Chong Sing, alleged slayer of David Lew, Chinese broker, who was shot to death September 24, was again positively identified today, this time by another Chinese, at the prison lineup held at police headquarters.

Entering the corridor where the lineup was held, the witness walked quickly along the line until he stood in front of Chong Sing, pointed to him, and said:

"That's the man."

"What did he do?" asked Inspector Jackson, who was in charge of the lineup.

"Him shoot," said the Chinaman, backing away from the suspect, who was then led back into the cells.

Tax Publicity Aids This Blinded Widow; Doctor Not So Poor

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—A blind woman is offering heartfelt thanks for the government's action in making public income tax returns. Mrs. Fannie London, widow, last week accepted an offer of Dr. George B. Ferguson to settle her $100,000 damage suit, charging that his careless treatment caused her to become permanently blind, for $3500. He pleaded that he was too poor to pay more.

Investigation by Schloss, attorney for the sightless widow, disclosed that his income tax return for 1923 showed a payment of $2453, indicating an income of about $29,000. Schloss will ask to have the suit reopened.

Italian Chamber Reopens Session; Able to Carry On

ROME, Nov. 12.—The Italian chamber of deputies reopened today with the participation of 450 deputies and in the presence of all the leading parliamentarians of the nation.

SAN FRANCISCO INDICTMENTS GET CANADIANS

Eighty - five Smuggling Charges Are Laid Over Seized Quadra

HAD LIQUOR CARGO OF HALF MILLION

Vancouver Men and Concern's Directors Are Named

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—Eighty-five indictments charging violation of liquor laws, including one against Russel Whitelaw of Vancouver, B.C., and 27 against as many men named as directors of the Consolidated Exporters' corporation, a Canadian concern, were returned by the federal grand jury today, in completing investigation of what was termed "the liquor smuggling situation," involving the steamship Quadra, captured near here recently by revenue agents.

The indictments were the outcome of a two months' investigation by federal prohibition forces, which gathered headway with the capture of the Quadra near the Farollone islands with half a million dollar liquor cargo, and the disappearance of the sailing vessel Gilulia, along the Pacific coast.

Both vessels were suspected by federal agents of being actively engaged in liquor running along the coast, and the indictments list the Quadra as belonging to the Consolidated Exporters' corporation.

Include Lawyer

Others named include F. R. Anderson, Vancouver, B.C., attorney who arrived here to defend members of the Quadra's crew; 24 members of the Gilulia crew, and all of the Quadra's crew.

The indictments charge violation of the prohibition law, and violation of the treaty agreement between the United States and Canada relative to the shipping of liquor into this country.

Anderson was arrested here today, and later was released after depositing $5000 bail. He denied being connected with the case in any way except as legal advisor for the Quadra's crew.

In indicting the directors of the Consolidated Exporters' corporation, it was explained that the purpose was to prevent them from ever entering this country.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Russel Whitelaw, reported today to have been indicted in San Francisco in connection with others, on charges of violating the United States prohibition law, is president of the National Canners, limited, of Vancouver.

Prior to the coming into force in British Columbia of prohibition, Mr. Whitelaw was engaged in Vancouver in the liquor business. His stock of liquor, together with that of some 16 other liquor merchants, was absorbed at that time by the Consolidated Exporters.

Mr. Whitelaw, while thus having an interest in the Consolidated Exporters, has taken no active part in its affairs. Since the advent of prohibition, he has devoted himself to the fruit canning business.

Highway Robber of Vancouver Rises to Honors in Brazil

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Word has reached here from Brazil that Joseph Kehoe, convicted here in 1921 of highway robbery and paroled a year later, has distinguished himself as an army officer in that country. He was recently honored at a banquet tendered by the government, and is a captain in the Brazilian army.

Premier Delays Night Sessions; Followers Kick

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—Premier Oliver's threat yesterday to bring on night sessions to speed up the debate on the speech from the throne was not carried out today, a canvass of his supporters having revealed that they did not favor undue hurry at this stage.

Accordingly Premier will answer his opposition critics tomorrow afternoon instead of tonight as intended.

The suit was filed on behalf of Charles Beam, taxicab driver, of Chicago, who charged that the two mutilated him.

P.G.E. REQUIRES AN ADDITIONAL SINKING FUND

Oliver States This in Moving Resolution on Land Bonuses

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—Premier Oliver's resolution asking the lieutenant-governor to transmit a bill authorizing the government to sell the Pacific Great Eastern railway by throwing in land grants is designed to strengthen the hands of the government at the forthcoming conference with the Canadian Pacific railway, Canadian National railways, Dominion and Alberta governments, the premier informed the legislature in moving his resolution today.

H. G. Perry, Fort George, as seconder, will speak to the resolution when the order is next called.

A significant feature of the premier's speech was his declaration that the carrying charges of the Pacific Great Eastern railway were $2,250,000 annually, and that an addition would have to be made to this immediately in order to provide a sinking fund to meet the $20,000,000 bond guarantee when it reaches maturity.

HAYWARD WOULD CUT INDEMNITIES

Also Would Prune Ministers' Salaries, and Make the House Smaller

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—George Hayward, senior member for Victoria, followed up his recent unsuccessful effort to reduce his own salary as mayor of Victoria by advocating in the legislature today that economy be effected by reducing ministers' salaries, members' indemnities and the number of members in the house.

As in the city council, his suggestion met with a noisy protest from other members.

Mr. Hayward advocated abolition in part of the exemption of government property from municipal taxation, limitation on the export of unmanufactured logs, government aid to municipalities by per capita grant instead of proportions of certain provincial revenues and definite provision in the budget for unemployment relief.

He also criticised the administration of mothers' pensions, claiming that the act did not warrant the board's policy of requiring municipalities to supplement pensions to wives of incapacitated husbands.

Ontario Highjackers Annex Stray Bottles From Quebec Trains

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—Highjackers operating on interprovincial trains under the guise of Ontario Temperance act enforcement officers, are the latest problem with which the provincial police have to deal. Reports to the police show that daring souls, brandishing clever imitations of the "O.T.A." officer's badge, have gone through the baggage of adventurous Ontarians coming back from Quebec, and have taken any stray bottles they find.

Varied versions are given concerning the remarks which led to the shooting, which broke out suddenly and unexpectedly during the debate.

FIFTY THOUSAND COST OF INQUIRY

Taylor Asked Twenty-two Thousand; Was Cut Down to Thirteen

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—It cost the people of British Columbia $50,000 to find out that no graft permeated the construction of the Pacific Great Eastern railway. Figures were presented to the legislature showing the cost of the commission of inquiry a year ago, presided over by Mr. Justice Galliher.

Counsel fees accounted for more than half the total bill. S. S. Taylor, K.C., came up from Los Angeles specially to lead the fight in behalf of the government, and put in a bill for $22,500, which included expenses, and this was taxed down to $13,400, which had been paid.

Douglas Armour's bill was $10,500, which was taxed to $5500. Dugald Donaghy's account was $10,373, which was also taxed to $5600.

House Explodes After Occupant Rescues Family

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—An explosion that threw out the four walls in the house, knocked its erstwhile occupant flat on his back in the roadway nearby, and shattered the windows in a house some distance away, was the culminating incident of a fire that left Jack Mowatt, his wife and three small children destitute this morning.

The explosion occurred 15 minutes after Mr. Mowatt rescued the children, aged 6, 8 and 9 years, and his wife from the flames. The explosion is attributed to the bursting of a water tank.

Andrew Stewart, D.D., of Winnipeg, addressing the opening session of the convention in celebration of the centennary of the founding of the Methodist Missionary society in Canada here today.

"The two races of people are gradually drawing closer and closer together, and it is not far distant when after a separation of 2000 years," said Dr. Stewart.

GRAND RAPIDS POST OFFICE IS BLOWN TO BITS

Parts of Wreckage Shot Hundred Feet Up; Many Victims

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 12.—Two men were killed, one is dying, and 12 are injured, as the result of a terrific explosion which late today destroyed the loading dock and receiving room at the main Grand Rapids post office, with a property damage of $50,000.

The dead are Ernest A. Roth, aged 30, a truck driver, and Herman Pettersch, aged 47, a clerk, both legs blown off.

The seriously injured is Dale Newshouse, possible skull fracture.

Hurls Truck on Roof

Pettersch, Roth and Newshouse were on the loading platform at the time of the explosion, which sent fragments of the platform 100 feet into the air, hurled a loading truck upon the federal building roof, buried five automobiles and shattered hundreds of windows within a radius of two blocks.

Two theories, that escaping gas collecting beneath the platform was ignited, or that a bomb sent through the mails exploded prematurely, were advanced by postal inspectors and police, following a preliminary investigation.

WINDSOR, N.S., Nov. 12.—Three members of the Windsor volunteer fire department will go before the stipendiary magistrate tomorrow on charges of being drunk and disorderly during the early stages of the disastrous fire that swept this town last Sunday morning.

These charges were laid after the opening session today of the inquiry being conducted by Provincial Fire Marshal J. A. Rudland into the origin of the conflagration.

Evidence was given to the effect that the fire was not properly handled by certain members of the local force, and that there was fighting between them and visiting firemen who came to Windsor in response to pleas for help.

ADJUSTMENT BOARD OPENS WITH NELSON

Workers Inject Life Into Hearing; Creameries; Jam Factories

The presentation of a memorandum from the lumber and box manufacturers of the Kootenay and Okanagan districts, asking exemption under certain sections of the eight-hour law, a healthy argument with employees in the lumber industry, and questions regarding the eight-hour law in respect to creameries, and jam factories, marked the afternoon sessions of the newly appointed board of adjustment, sitting here in regard to the Hours of Work act, 1923. The session was presided over by T. F. Paterson of Vancouver, a member of the board in the absence of the chairman deputy minister of labor, J. D. McNiven, who had missed his train at Spokane. F. V. Foster of Victoria, the third member, took part in the discussions.

In opening the meeting Mr. Paterson stated that the Nelson meeting was the first held since the appointment of the board by the government. It was the intention to visit the interior before going to other portons of the province. Under the Hours of Work act, passed in 1923, and assented to in December 1923, the government was called to appoint a board of three members. The board as appointed was the deputy minister of labor, J. D. McNiven, Frank Foster, of Smithers, who represented the labor industries, and T. F. Paterson, of Vancouver, who represented the manufacturing interests.

On the request of a lumberman in the audience, he read the act, which is to take effect in January 1925.

Duties of the Board

It was the duty of the board, stated Mr. Paterson, to decide as to what steps should be taken in regard to industries desiring changes in the act, and in regard to what persons or industries should be excluded from the act. The board was seeking information from the different parts of the country, from the employer and employee, so that the spirit of the act might be carried out to suit all and hurt none.

On behalf of the lumber industry in the district I. R. Poole, secretary of the Mountain Lumber Manufacturers association, welcomed the board members to the city. The lumber industry, he stated, was chiefly effected by the act. He hoped the board would view the conditions in regard to the industry in a fair and impartial manner.

Hugh Dalton, Vancouver, of the Manufacturer's association, spoke on behalf of the box manufacturers, who he stated, were pleased to meet the board, and who had a memorandum to place before the board.

M. S. Peacock of Penticton, representing the Penticton Sawmills, limited, then presented a lengthy memorandum from box manufacturers, with plants in the interior, catering to the requirements of the fruit and vegetable growing industry, and operating sawmills in conjunction with the box plants. The memorandum was presented by Mr. Peacock, on behalf of 10 concerns operating at Armstrong, Kelowna, Penticton, Summerland, Grand Forks, Chute lake, Creston and Nelson.

Peacock Presents Memorandum

In dealing with the box manufacturing part of the industry, Mr. Peacock's report was as follows:

"In the first place our market is entirely local, our customers all being the fruit and vegetable growers and packers. The fruit and vegetable industry, is an entirely seasonal one, and containers for these products are marketed only in the summer and fall months. As a consequence our box plants are operated not more than five months in the year. Climatic and economic conditions require that lumber production in the interior be carried on in the winter months. It is impracticable to log in the summer months in the first place, owing to the heat and the difficulty of getting the logs out, and secondly, because timber cut from summer felled [illegible] will, owing to the sap being up in the summer, readily take on a blue stain, making it unsuitable and absolutely unsaleable either as lumber or boxes.

THEY LIGHTEN WORK

TELL THE BOARD THEY ARE UNDER FRUIT INDUSTRY

The logs taken out in the winter require to be sawn into lumber in the spring and early summer months, in order that the lumber may be piled and air dried so as to be in a condition suitable for making boxes when required by our customers. It might be explained here that if pine is not thoroughly dried and seasoned before being cut into boxes, it will mildew and discolor, making it absolutely unfit for fruit containers, or for any other purpose. Further, lumber that is cut and piled in the open in March, even under the most favorable weather conditions, will not be suitable for converting into boxes before the first of June.

Quantity Required Unknown

"The fruit growers and packers are unable to state with any degree of certainty what their requirements in containers for tree fruits (these representing the major portion of our output) are going to be until after the June crop, or, as a general rule, until the last week in June. Any orders given us for boxes prior to that date, (with the exception of berry containers, which are required in June) are merely approximate and subject to cancellation, so that we do not get any orders for substantial quantities of boxes until the first part of July. The fruit shipping season, in the case of berries, starts in June, and in the case of tree fruits, in July, so that it is necessary for us to commence making containers about the first of June.

Eight-Hour Law Impossible

"From the foregoing, the board will see that our operations divide themselves into three periods.

1. Logging, in the fall and winter months, commencing about October 1, and continuing as long as it is practicable to take out the logs.
2. The cutting and piling of lumber, carried on from about March 1 until the end of July, and
3. The cutting of boxes, from about June 1 until the end of October.

In regard to the first or these operations, the logging, this work is carried on in the interior by man and horse-power, the logs are cut before and during the time the snow is on the ground, but must be taken out while there is sleighing. The duration of sleighing is very uncertain; for instance, last winter, which was not exceptional, we had only twenty-four days of sleigh hauling, and during this twenty-four days our entire requirements of logs had to be taken out of the bush. We are sure the board will see, without further argument, the impossibility of our accomplishing this if restricted to an eight-hour day of forty-eight hour week.

Must Operate to Limit

"In regard to the second phase of our work, the cutting of the logs into lumber, this work is done, as before stated, in the period from March 1 until the end of July. It is not practicable to start cutting lumber before March 1 on account of the frost in the logs, and also, in some cases, on account of the impossibility of getting water for the mill boilers. In order for the sawmills in our operations to keep pace with the box factories in keeping an adequate supply of seasoned lumber on hand, it is necessary to operate the sawmills to the limit of their capacity, and the sawmilling end of our business would not be able, in the short cutting season available, to turn out a sufficient quantity of lumber for a season's requirements if restricted to an eight-hour day.

To Assist Fruit Growers

"In regard to the third phase of our operations, the box manufacturing, here again we have only a very short season, when many different types of containers are required of us in varying quantities but invariably at short notice, and if the growers and packers do not get containers as, and when they want them, their product is apt, in the case of soft fruits, to spoil, and in the case of tree fruits, if shipments are delayed through inability to obtain containers, the growers are in danger of receiving smaller returns for ther product than they would otherwise, if they are delayed in getting their product into a certain market at a certain time, in addition to which is the fact that the box manufacturers are looked to to assist the growers and packers in moving the fruit with the greatest possible to dispatch in order to avoid congestion in the packing houses.

"The facilities in the various centers for the handling of fruit are such that if each of the several branches of the industry, of which we are one, is functioning properly or as it is expected to do, the fruit can be properly taken care of. To this end it is necessary, not only for the growers and packing houses to work at high pressure and for whatever hours are necessary during the season, but for the box manufacturers to do likewise.

Lumber Consumed Locally

"In regard to the strictly sawmilling part of our business, we would say that such lumber as we manufacture for sale in the form of lumber is mainly for local consumption by the fruit growing industry. This lumber is cut from the logs taken out during the fall and winter months and is cut at the same time as our lumber is cut, it being impossible to disassociate or segregate the operations in the production of the two classes of lumber.

Operations Seasonal

"We submit therefore, that the box manufacturing industry in the interior of this province is a strictly seasonal one in all its phases, just as much so as either fruit and vegetable production in the Okanagan or Creston districts, or wheat raising on the prairies. In horticulture and agriculture there are certain seasons when the framer is obliged to peform certain of his operations. That is to say, there is a time when he must do his plowing, another for seeding, another for harvesting and another for marketing.

In exactly the same way are we obliged to carry on our logging operations during one part of the year, our sawmilling in another, and our box manufacturing in another, and we feel, consequently, that it is no more practicable to endeavor to set an arbitrary working period in our industry than it would be in agriculture or horticulture.

Sections for Claim of Exemption

"This being so, it is our opinion that we should be exempted under the Hours of Work act, 1923, as an integral part of the horticulture industry, which is specified in the interpretative section of the act as one of the exempted industries, or, in the alternative, our industry being a strictly seasonal one in all its phases, that the board should exercise the powers conferred on it under subsection 2a of section 9 of the act, and grant up complete exemption.

"As a precedent for this course, we would take the liberty of citing the policy of the federal government in connection with the sales tax, the Dominion minister of finance having the intimate relationship between the box manufacturing and fruit growing industries and to that end having exempted from all sales tax, containers produced for the use of the fruit and vegetable industry.

Shorter Hours; Higher Prices to Growers

"In the event of the board being unable to grant our industry the exemption suggested, the inevitable result must be to curtail production, which will mean that the manufacturers will be obliged to charge the growers a higher price for containers produced in this province, which will, in turn, not only work a hardship on the growers in connection with such containers as they may purchase from us, but will mean that they will import the balance of their requirements from plants in the province of Alberta and in the state of Washington, in neither of which localities are manufacturers subject to legislative control of hours of labor.

"In conclusion, may we suggest to your honorable body the extreme desirability of a decision date, as at the present moment we are already embarked upon preparations for next season's operations, including the letting of contracts for logging operations and in other ways, and you will readily understand that it is highly important to us and to our customers to know as soon as possible what changes or adjustments, if any, will be entailed under the Hours of Work act, 1923.

"Respectfully submitted, on behalf of the lumber and box manufacturers named hereunder:

Armstrong Sawmill, Armstrong, B.C.; Kelowna Sawmills, Ltd., Kelowna, B.C.; S. M. Simpson, Ltd., Kelowna, B.C.; Crawford Bros., Ltd., Kelowna, B.C.; Penticton Sawmills, Ltd., Penticton, B.C.; Pacific Box company, Summerland, B.C.; Norris Lumber & Box Co., Grand Forks, B.C.; Okanagan Wood Products, Ltd., Chute Lake, B.C.; Chas. O. Rodgers, Creston, B.C.; Western Box & Shingle Mill, Creston, B.C.

Following the presentation of the report some excellent arguements occurred in which several lumber employees took a prominent part and claimed that the eight-hour day was necessary.

Mr. Patterson asked the employers present, if it would be a hardship to work on an eight-hour basis? Mr. Peacock replied that it would not be so in the cutting and swamping branches. The same crews were often used the whole year through in the various branches of the industry. The cutting was generally let by contract. The question was asked by an employer if a contractor must abide by the eight-hour law when fulfilling a contract?

Mr. Paterson replied that that matter was a legal interpretation of the act. An employer was a person directly or indirectly responsible for the payment of salary. He was not able to give a decision. It was a matter for the decision of the attorney-general.

No Objection to Overtime

Mr. Peacock stated it was almost impossible to keep up a supply of lumber for factory purposes with an eight-hour day. Orders came frequently on short notice. The employees in box factories were the same in all branches of the industry and were mostly residents. It was the endeavor of the employer to keep one crew going all the year around. The employees were glad to work overtime and in his experience he had never had any objections to overtime work.

Mr. Paterson—One of the arguements as put up is that there is a certain class of workmen who like to hog all the work. Are there any employees in or around the country who would be hurt by this one class taking all the work?

W. L. Jones, Kelowna—When the work is on, all industries are busy. It is necessary at times to bring in workmen from outside.

Mr. Peacock—During the summer months there is very little labor available in the smaller communities.

Mr. Paterson—Would it be possible to run two shifts?

Mr. Jones—If we ran two shifts we could cut all the necessary material in two or three months. Now we can keep one crew busy for one season.

Mr. Peacock—To run two shifts would bring in outside labor. There would be a short season, and resident employees would be out of work.

At this juncture a lumber employee in the audience spoke. He stated that the camps in Washington worked nearly all on an eight-hour basis. He knew something of the sawmill business, and thought it could be run on an eight-hour basis.

Nine Hours and Poor Wages

E. J. Stewart; another worker, could see no reason for not having an eight-hour law for both sawmills and box factories. The mills worked eight hours on the other side of the boundary and Canada should have the same hours. He asked any lumber owner to show him any specific reason why eight-hour shifts would not be satisfactory. The employee was forced today to work nine, 10 and longer hours if the owner could make him. Conditions in the camps were deplorable. He stated he was a Canadian, had fought for Canada, and he saw no reason why an eight-hour law should not be enacted. He had followed the lumber game all his life. If an employee got a respectable day's wage he could work a good eight hours. At present with nine hours of work it was necessary to do piece work to earn a decent wage. Conditions were fierce in the lumber camps. Wages were $3.50 per day with $1.25 for board. After 11 day's work in a camp on the Great Northern line this month, he had $12 in his pocket. This was a terrible condition, he stated, for married men working in the camps. Wages across the boundary line were $1.50 more.

Eight Hours More Work

Mr. Peacock—The wages here are approximately the same as across the boundary for the same class of labor. Some parts of Washington pay higher wages. As for the hours of work there in the box factories, some men without option work as many as 16 hours a day. Ten hours is the usual day's work.

Mr. Foster asked a worker in the audience if he thought it possible to have an eight-hour law in all branches of the industry—

Worker—Yes, it is possible. We need an eight-hour day all through the province. It would result in more work from the men.

Mr. Paterson asked the employers about the profits from the industry.

He was answered by Mr. Peacock, who stated that out of 27 mills operating in the Okanagan 15 years ago, there were now only four. The others had failed. The interior was the graveyard for the lumber industry.

His reply was taken up by a worker in the audience. He had been from one end of the Okanagan to the other. The conditions there were ideal for the industry. It was an ideal country to enforce the eight-hour law in. The only trouble there was the operators wishing to grab everything. In these small camps there were two many fellows eating and too few working.

Mr. Paterson—If you are sincere, here is a chance for some of the manufacturers to get some good managers.

Mr. Peacock—I'm willing to give this so-called lumber man a contract for my firm.

"I'm Not a Gypo"

Worker—I am not a gypo. I am not out to break my neck. The sooner British Columbia gets clear of this gypo worker the better. They work overtime and on Sundays.

This country did not call for overtime, he said. Some men were working all the time, and others not at all. The workingmen did not get their side of the story in the papers. To live right a man had to go to a foreign country. Across the line pay was 47 1-2c and in Canada 30c. The big guns were to blame.

He stated that managers for Canadian camps were brought in from across the line. This practice kept good Canadian workmen out of positions. He advocated a fair w to every man—a living wage.

Mr. Paterson—Would you say you had voiced the opinions of average employee in the lu camps?

Worker—Yes.

He stated that the lumber ployers were breaking the law not paying the employees twi month. If a worker asked for check twice a month he usually his time. The eight-hour law w never be got in the camps from legislature. The workmen w have to get it themselves. He p ed out how firms operating c in Canada and the United S worked different hours. In

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidney or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

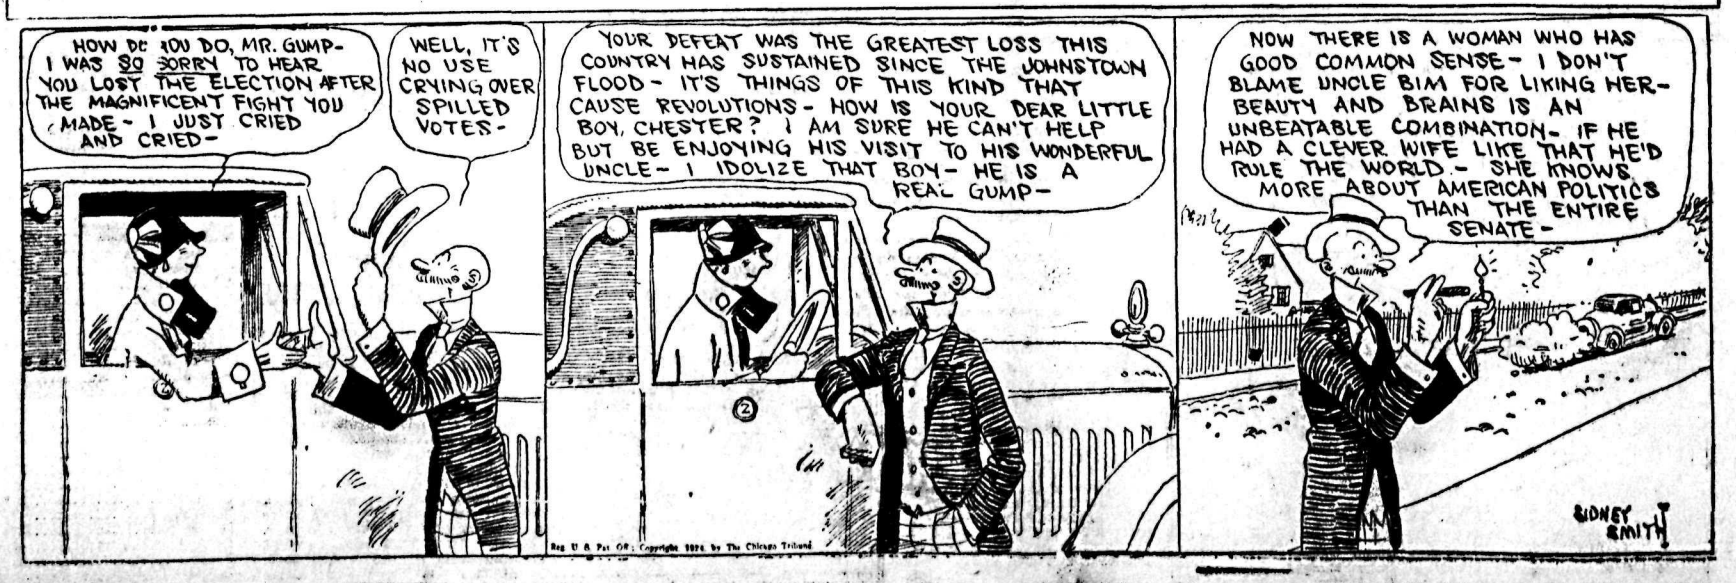
THE GUMPS—KIND WORDS



NORA LEE

Elenore Meherin's Greatest Story

Revealing the Heart and Soul of the 1924 Flapper

CHAPTER XLVI.

FACING THE WORLD ALONE

To be 18 and alone in the world is, perhaps, hazardous enough for a young, fiery girl.

But to be 18, alone and without funds—to be, in addition, pretty and filled with vivid longings; with many imperious hungers; to be all this as one sets out on the precipitous adventure of living is to fling too sheer and insolent a challenge at one's fate.

"In a sense, it will be a magnificent and thrilling experience——" Nora Lee jabbed her pen into the inkwell and wrote with burning speed, but she stopped to read over this sentence; to fling her head back and blink; to swallow hard several times.

If anyone had asked why she was crying she would have flashed some scornful answer. But her handkerchief was rolled in a wet little ball and she now sought a dry corner to wipe her cheeks.

It was 6 o'clock—raining again. The rain had finally forced her home—back to the empty house. The trees were bowing and the wind swept the misty rain before it, lashed the rain off its feet, driving it upward in gusts that then sped along gray and distracted like frightened ghosts.

She frowned because the windows rattled and sometimes the blowing rushed down the chimney, sending puffs of black smoke into the room. Nora Lee sat at Margaret's desk writing a sweeping cancellation of love and hope.

She had before her Dane's picture and the ring with its minute chip was on her finger. Feeling it gave her a sense of warmth; made her close her eyes and smile. Once, noticing the strong line of his chin, the clean-cut sweetness of his mouth, she said aloud: "It will be all right." She meant by this that "something" would happen—that illusive "something" that must happen when one is young; that must come at the high call of youth and save one from blackness, from sorrow or despair; this "something" would reach out like a gallant arm and sweep Nora Lee to happiness; to the fulfillment of all her brilliant dreams.

"I hope that you have been impatient, Dane—that you have walked the floor and torn out your lovely brown hair. I hope that my beautiful face is filing nightly before all your books—"

She laid down the pen and covered her face. He would see through this. He would know that she was not in this light mood. She went on slowly, pressing her hand against her lips—

"But now you must read this quietly. I am not coming—not yet. Of course, I will probably be able to come in a few months, but you see there are many affairs to settle and I am not certain of my finances. I have made some mistakes in calculating. Don't think I am destitute. Not by any means, but it would be reckless for me to come until I know just where I am. You mustn't worry, because I have this house—quite a valuable piece of property—"

Nora Lee saw Dane's eyes growing dark as he read this; saw the boyish, laughing face turn serious. She loved these sudden changes in his expression. It gave her a sense of power to play on his emotions, and now she hoped he would worry . . . fancied him saying: "To the devil with everything!" fancied him rushing out of the house, hatless, swinging to a train—coming to her. Love should do such things.

She picked up his picture, glancing at the speaking lips. Tears rushed into her eyes and this time she didn't hide them . . . selfish thing. She would even want him to do a reckless, mad thing and ruin all their happiness. Wasn't it enough that her ambition had to go?

Why, if she were to give the faintest hint—if she were to let him know how truly frightened and desperate she was, he would come. He wanted to be married now, anyway.

She said aloud: "Yes—and be a craftsman all his life and be eaten with disappointment." She added wisely: "Later he would blame me. He wouldn't forgive it. We hate the people who make us cheat ourselves."

Yet with each of the many pages Nora Lee found the writing harder. Life wasn't fair. Why did people always have to stop and reckon with "Can I?" "Dare I?" Why do they not just leap in and ask all the questions afterwards? That would be the brave, winning attitude. The world would have to come to time! Instead of the human being fitting himself into these death-dealing niches—let the niches be built to fit the person. Yet, if all the young, poor people who loved each other and wanted each other just up and said: "We'll take it!" then the world would have to wag about and make it possible for this to be. Suppose——

But, of course, all the young people would never get together and decide on this; so they just keep on taking orders from a blind, stupid, half-dead, middle-aged old world—a world with its high fires quenched and cowardice making us wisdom.

And love has to wait on money—wait till one is almost thirty with half a foot in the grave—wait these years and in this time love's music dims and its living color fades and it's half vanished before it can be seized.

But what a world it might be if these golden vitalities were given a chance when the flame and song were at their height! Ah—this was the way it ought to be. . . .

Nora Lee sat there dreaming. Yes—she would write a book like More's "Utopia," and bring in mightily the rights of the young and the rights of love——

"But with us, Dane, love is more complete, I believe, than with others. What you said that day on Mount Davidson proves it. It is almost as though we are already married . . . so our love ought to grow stronger. . . ."

The poor pen faltered. Suppose their love didn't grow stronger? And all this she was writing was a lie anyhow. He would know that she was almost insane with loneliness; that she was afraid to be here alone; that she would die if Sallie didn't come as she promised; that weeks, perhaps months more here alone would simply drive her to a madhouse; that she sat now listening to the log crackle on the fire and was half frightened to turn and survey the long, shadowed room.

"Oh you must study ten times harder—don't you dare to stop loving, and neither will I. I will keep all the promises I made. Perhaps it is better for us to be tested. They say young love doesn't last, though I don't want any other kind but young love—

"Of course, the term is already opened so I won't enter the university now. I am going to business college to fill in the time while waiting to see just what my assets are. I think it would be exciting to take a position, anyway. Business may prove a magnificent and thrilling adventure—"

It was at this sentence that Nora Lee's fluency balked. She pushed the pages under the blotter.

For it was not a magnificent and thrilling adventure to have less than $100 to her name . . . to be forced to stay on living here because she dared not spend money for a room elsewhere . . . and further than this to know that she might not even take a business course; that at best her funds would last only weeks.

In the middle of the afternoon she had tried at three banks to get a mortgage on the house. They refused flatly. They were calling in loans, not advancing them.

But she had called at the business college where Tessie Wright, one of the girls from high school, was now entered. The fee was $20 a month; the books for the course would cost her another $15 and it would cost her another $20 at least for her living expenses. At the end of one month she would have about $19 left.

Yet she decided that she would enter the school—at the end of a month if this magical "something" hadn't happened she would sell the piano and in this way she would gradually be fitted for self-support . . .

It was a dismal substitute for the plans of a few days ago. Then she had money—she had pictured sadly enough—yet with a sigh of yearning joyfulness, the little place she and Dane would have. She would buy it. In the mornings each of them would start off to spend the day in study. They would meet on the evening, do their shopping together—come home to a bright little kitchen and cook chops and fry potatoes . . . There would be long evenings when they would attend concerts; when they would read together—or walk under a yellow spring moon.

She suddenly remembered why all this was lost. She went over and knelt before the fire. One by one, looking only long enough to make sure she had not been tricked, she took out the letters Andrew had written to her mother, and tossed them on the logs. Like burning some sweet and beautiful spirit . . . Andrew's letters would be like that. She remembered the morning they returned after that frantic yet wondrous night in the orchard—how princely Andrew had been to Dane—how fine his understanding—

As she leaned down she fancied Margaret and Andrew walking through some heavenly lane of trees—their faces white with sorrow—grieving because they knew the thing that happened . . .

And she had really been begrudging it to her mother—else why all that storming as she wrote the letter . . . She went back and added ardent—trusting lines—the world was a kind, happy place . . . oh, all would come out right . . .

She addressed the envelope and, grabbing up an umbrella, went flying down to the corner to put it in a postbox.

She stood there peering into the hole and wondering: "What will he do?"

LUMBERJACKS GIVE VIEWS ON EIGHT-HOUR DAY

Deny Alleged Difficulty in Securing Millhands in Harvesting

SAY COMMISSIONERS SHOULD SEE CAMPS

Claim Twice a Month Payments Not Observed in Many Cases

"Are you I.W.W.s" asked J. D. McNiven, deputy minister of labor for British Columbia and chairman of the board of adjustment in connection with the eight-hour day, of E. Hanrahan and E. J. Stewart, lumberjacks, at last night's session of the board.

"Yes, we are, and proud of it," was the simultaneous answer.

"Do you think, when this eight-hour law goes into force, it will engender better feeling between the employer and employee, and that it will mean a fair day's work for a fair day's pay?" asked F. F. Patterson, representing the employers of labor on the board.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Stewart. "If I get fair treatment, I give a fair day's work."

A long discussion followed on working hours in camps in the interior and the time spent in going to and from work, in which Stewart and Hanrahan, and Dales, another lumberjack, who had run a camp for over four months on the Arrow lakes, and the members of the board, took part.

When the discussion was on the question of getting logs out of the woods after snow went, M. S. Peacock of Penticton took a prominent part. He thought it was sometimes necessary in order to get out the logs to work long hours.

Like Dugouts in France

E. J. Stewart hoped that the members of the commission would visit some of the lumber camps, to see conditions for themselves, not such places as Lumberton, where, he stated conditions were splendid, but "some of those on the sides of the hills no better than the dugouts we had in France."

He also spoke of the twice-a-month payday not being observed in many camps.

Other lumberjacks said that the statutes on the books regarding health and sanitary conditions were not observed in many camps.

The chairman asked the men to notify him when they found any such infringements, when the matter would certainly be taken up and dealt with by the department.

In connection with the question of two or three shifts, Mr. McNiven asked:

"Is it not a fact that millmen have difficulty in getting one shift let alone two or three, when harvesting is on?"

The lumberjacks denied this.

The question of whether an employer paying his men 50 cents an hour could produce enough and get high enough prices to earn a living was discussed, with the lumberjacks stating that he could.

Outcome of Treaty of Versailles

Thomas Halsey, who stated that he had worked in lumber camps but was more properly a miner, was in favor of no exemptions to the eight-hour day.

In reply to his question, the chairman said that the eight-hour day was the outcome of the Treaty of Versailles.

Mr. McNiven also stated that at the international labor conference at Washington the delegates from every province of Canada had indorsed this but that the province of British Columbia had been the only one with courage to put it on its books.

The members of the commission announced that they were not sitting to consider the lumber business only but all industries coming within the scope of the act which would go into force on January 1, 1925.

No representatives of other industries asked for consideration, so the commission, thanking those present for appearing, closed about 10 o'clock.

Just before doing so Mr. McNiven said that it was in the power of the board to grant a whole district an exemption, or one employer or two or more.

CROP ESTIMATE DOWN A LITTLE

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—A crop report issued by the bureau of statistics today estimates the wheat crop at 271,622,000 bushels. This is 20,000,000 less than the last estimate. The final estimate for last year was 474,199,000 bushels.

StDENIS VERSUS CALDER MONDAY

Three Naturalizations Are Granted by Judge Forin in the County Court

When the county court was held by Judge J. A. Forin for the first time since his return from England on Tuesday, three applications for naturalization came up before him. These were from Sarkis Terzian, an American, Adolph Raukus, a Pole, and A. N. S. Kritikas, a Greek, and all three were approved.

The cases of Harrington versus Calder and Long versus Buchanan were adjourned till next court, with settlement pending in the latter one. The case of StDenis versus Calder is to come up before Judge Forin Monday morning.

The evidence of the plaintiff was taken in the cases of Broster versus the Florence Silver Mining company, and Scott versus the same.

In supreme court applications, H. Clifford Irving of the firm of O'Shea & Irving, applied for probate in the matter of the estate of Patrick John Henry, deceased, of New Denver, on behalf of Mary Ann Henry. The application was granted.

A Healthy Appetite

Breakfast is the finest meal of the day—if you've an appetite for it.

Some people, of course, crawl into the breakfast-room with leaden feet, nibble half-heartedly at a bit of toast, glance mournfully at the paper and wonder why on earth they were born.

Others are ready for breakfast even before breakfast is ready for them. The fragrance of sizzling eggs and bacon is heaven in their nostrils. For what they are about to receive they are truly thankful.

A healthy appetite comes from a healthy body. That is why people who religiously keep up the Kruschen habit — the habit of the "little daily dimeful"—tackle their breakfast just as heartily as any other meal.

Not One Salt but Six

If Kruschen is the secret of a healthy appetite, what is the secret of Kruschen? The answer lies in the analysis, which shows it to be a blend of six different salts. There are some people who imagine there is little difference between Kruschen Salts and Epsom or Glauber. Actually there is all the difference in the world, because Epsom and Glauber contain each but a single salt, and therefore perform but a single function. They are aperients — and nothing more, they can't give you that famous "Kruschen feeling."

But Kruschen, with its six salts, not only clears the body of all clogging waste matter and purifies the blood; it has also a most valuable tonic action on the whole system, thrilling every fibre of you with a delightful sense of vitality and well-being.

After taking a few "little daily dimefuls" — tasteless in your breakfast cup of coffee or tea — you begin to feel a different person. Gone is that early-morning feeling of depression, of disinclination for food. Gone, too, are your headaches, your "nerves," your tiredness, and your internal troubles. You are healthier and happier in every way.

Remember — it's the little daily dimeful that does it. Start right away by getting a 75c bottle at your druggist's, begin the healthy Kruschen habit tomorrow morning, and you'll soon wonder how you ever existed in the days before you discovered this royal road to happiness.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it

Passports a Useless Nuisance

A war legacy which few defend and none enjoys is the passport business. The American Bankers' association has taken the lead in urging the abolition of this relic of espionage, and Canadian bankers and boards of trade should back up the movement.

Prior to the world war, the American passport control bureau was a comparatively insignificant institution. A staff of six employees did the work. Now, the passport work is a costly one, and the vise nuisance is a necessary adjunct of every trip abroad. The same condition applies at Ottawa. A big staff is employed on passport business, and all sorts of barriers are placed in the way of travel overseas.

Persons living on the border between the United States and Canada realize the silliness of a passport regulation. It is recognized that the travel of residents of one country within the bounds of another is a great inspiration to trade. Mutual understanding is one of the strongest safeguards to lasting peace between the peoples of different nations. Yet the countries of the world hold to the annoying red tape of passports. European countries should abolish the passport plan.

Babylon's Ancient Code

The code of Hammurabi, king of ancient Babylon, is the oldest known body of law in the world. Justice in Babylon was essentially a respecter of persons. Hammurabi held the view that when a patrician committed a crime his punishment should be heavier than that of a plebeian.

Rights of women were owned and safeguarded with minute care; the weak, the widow and the orphan were fully protected, and women were placed in a position of freedom and independence of their husbands. And the husband didn't get the worst of everything, either. One of the provisions for the punishment of women, under certain conditions was that if she had not been a careful mistress, had gadded about, had neglected her home, and had belittled her husband, she should be thrown into the water.

I have noticed in the shops, lately, many articles decorated with ribbon glued on. The housewife can easily make these dainty things, two of which I shall describe:

Bonbon Boxes—Everybody has one of the tin candy boxes, in which to keep sweet chocolates, mints, or other dainties which one might need in one's room at night when unable to sleep. But the bare tin cover may be much improved by being entirely covered with colored picot-edged ribbon to match the color scheme of the bedroom. To make this covering, draw the picot thread on one side of the ribbon, along the selvedge, so as to gather the ribbon slightly; lay it around the edge of the cover (on top) and cut it off after forming a complete circle of it, which reaches all around the cover edge. Glue the gathered edge to the box, then proceed as before, gathering the ribbon again, forming another circle (but this circle will be smaller, as it goes inside the first and outer circle), cutting off, and glueing in place. The third circle will even be smaller; and if your ribbon is very narrow you may possibly need a fourth circle to cover the very center of the lid. Finish with a little cluster of silk flowers in the middle. The entire box—that is, sides of lid and lower portion of box—may be covered if desired with this ribbon laid on straight and ungathered.

Ribbon-Decorated Wall Mirror—A pretty boudoir mirror can be made by glueing a fairly small, square, looking glass to a square piece of heavy cardboard which is large enough to leave a two-inch border all around the mirror. Cover the top of this border with two-inch wide (perhaps wider) ribbon glued on flat; decorate this plain strip with a row of colored silk flowers in center. Now place a similar flat strip over the bottom cardboard border and decorate in the same way. The cardboard borders on either side of mirror are covered with ribbon glued on in loops, one loop covering the glued portion of the last and the top loop hiding its glued ends under a strip of gold braid. From under the lowest loop on each side, hangs a long gold tassel. Gold cording, attached to the cardboard border from upper corner to upper corner, and slipped over a glass thumb tack on the wall, hangs the mirror.

BRITISH LIBERALS GRINNED—BEFORE ELECTION

SIR ALFRED MOND AND LLOYD GEORGE

Despite the predictions that the Liberal party would lose ground in the general election in Britain, the principal leaders of the party seemed in no way downhearted. Sir Alfred Mond, on the left, and ex-Premier Lloyd George are seen above looking out the window of their railroad compartment on a train at Euston station just before leaving to campaign in Carmarthen and Carnarvon, their constituencies. Both were elected by huge majorities, though elsewhere the voters slaughtered the Liberals.

Styles

BY LENORE

No failure is more distressing than the evening dress which turns out unbecomingly. To look forward with eager anticipation to being a belle of the evening in some stunning new frock only to find that the sorcery of night light has transformed the color into a shade which gives one's face a sickly pallor—who is there so lacking in imagination as to deny that such an experience deserves a place among the major tragedies of life?

For example, greens in the lighter shades may take on a bluish cast which tends to bring out the sallow tones of the skin. Incidentally, for that very reason, brilliant complexions may wear green at night when the clearer green of daylight would emphasize their color to floridness.

Yellows, so important for brunets, may be chosen in stronger tones to insure against losing the desired value at night. Yellows become more subtle and elusive at night, and in a very light tone may become a mere ghost of itself.

Orange-yellow will be more orange. Orange will take on a reddish cast. Peacock blue will look more greenish.

Royal blue and brilliant reds will be graciously subdued, and certain shades of red will give a hint of orange in the evening.

Pastel shades should be deep enough to avoid being insipid.

Violet and fuchsia tones, so fashionable just now, should be chosen with particular care. They gray down a lot in artificial light, and may take on a muddy, unflattering look.

Colors vary so greatly in their different shades, however, that it is impossible to accurately predict their changes. Whatever is said must be regarded more in the nature of a "stop, look and examine" warning rather than as definite advice. The important thing to remember is that artificial light does decidedly influence a color scheme, and may modify the whole or part of a dress in such a way as to ruin its effect and make it hostile to good looks. Therefore, the wisest plan is to decide on your evening colors only after carefully studying them under artificial light.

Diagonal scalloped tiers are a charmingly individual feature of the geranium georget frock, shown in the sketch. It is one of those styles which favor the normal waistline, and there is a narrow panel at one side in the back which gives a graceful trailing effect without quite growing into a train.

That Body of Yours

Overexertion and the Heart

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

I often think of how uncanny almost is the wisdom shown by the trainers of track athletes, boxers, oarsmen; in fact, of any athlete. A French committee of three medical men have discovered that if an athlete who has more than one competition in any afternoon or evening will lie down between his events that his heart condition after the day's exertion will come back to a normal condition in a much shorter time than if he were to sit around and perhaps watch the other athletes as they did their part in the competitions.

Now trainers for years have done this very thing.

After the heat of a race or a preliminary boxing bout the athlete is taken into the dressing room, the door is locked, and the trainer, as he rubs his man down, talks quietly and briefly to him about the event just finished and then covers him with a blanket and tells him to doze off for a little while.

This habit of absolute relaxation gives the heart and blood system just the rest it needs to prevent trouble.

I had the privilege of examining the hearts of a championship basketball team nearly 20 years ago. There was but one other team in America that played faster basketball.

Not one of these athletes examined had a normal heart.

However, those watching this game and realizing that it was perhaps the most popular indoor game in the world have given the matter serious attention.

How have they helped the game and the players?

By introducing a series of "rest periods" during the game, which can be demanded by either captain.

The players usually lie down on the floor, completely relaxed, for the short period of two or three minutes at a time.

This has made basketball a safe game now. The rules under which most women and girls play call for certain areas out of which a player is not allowed to move. This makes the game quite safe from a heart standpoint.

And my point?

That in health or illness the short rest periods, when you are taking a walk, playing golf, tennis, bowling or anything else, will not only "train" or develop your heart to stand more and thus become stronger, but you will prevent any chance of injury to that precious organ.

THE hardest part of wash-day, rubbing, rubbing, rubbing, has given way to the new method of soaking the clothes clean with Rinso.

This wonderful new soap gently loosens the dirt and a thorough rinsing leaves things white and glistening as you never could get them before.

Only spots where the dirt is ground-in, such as neck bands, cuff edges, and the like need a light rubbing, and a little dry Rinso rubbed on these spots quickly makes the dirt disappear.

Rinso is sold by all grocers and department stores

United States eight-hour shifts were worked, while the same concerns in Canada worked their men 10 and 12 hours.

Mr. Paterson declared that he had allowed a pretty free discussion and he asked Mr. Peacock if he had ever had trouble with his men.

The answer was that he had not. Much of this discussion in regard to wages had nothing to do with the eight-hour law. Economic conditions largely applied to the wage scale.

Growers in Bad Shape

Everyone, he stated, knew of the different situation in which the fruit growers were. The policy of manufacturers was to reduce the prices for the boxes, etc., to afford relief to the growers. Two years ago 90 per cent of the growers were in debt, "red ink" had prevailed. To pay a higher scale of wages in the factories and mills would make a more expensive box which the growers would be unable to pay for. The lumber industry was not a prosperous thing in the interior. There were no large overhead staffs. All the principals turned in a good day's work with the employees.

A voice from the audience—We don't run around in big cars. Where are the lumber operators? Why are they absent? Are they afraid we will jump them?

Mr. Paterson at this point stated that wages had nothing to do with the question at present, and he asked employees to submit a statement, either at the nigh session, or in writing.

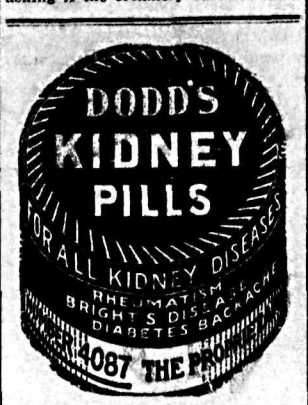
D. D. Townshend of the Curlew Creameries appeared before the board asking if the creamery business came under the exemption clause in the act as did the dairy business?

He was informed that a ruling to this effect would be given.

J. A. McDonald of the McDonald Jam company asked what consideration was given the canning industry in the rush season. Mr. Paterson stated that in his opinion this was a horicultural matter. He, too, would get a ruling on that industry.

Among those members of the manufacturing industry who were present at the sitting were:

Hugh Dalton, Vancouver, of the Canadian Manufacturer's association; M. S. Peacock of Penticton, of the Penticton Sawmills, limited; W. Lloyd Jones of Kelowna, of the Kelowna Saw Mill company, limited; Ben Norris of Grand Forks, of the Norris Lumber & Box company, limited; Charles O. Rogers of Creston; R. S. Moe, of the S. M. Simpson, limited, of Kelowna; W. Gerbracht, of the Western Box & Shingle Mills, Nelson, and I. R. Poole, secretary of the Mountain Lumber Manufacturers' association, Nelson.



Don't Squeeze Black-Heads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin, and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of peroxine powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off, and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.

M'KEOWN SORRY RAILWAYS HAVE NOT FULL CASE

McGeer Presses for Judgment by Default for the Province

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Vigorously asserting before the railway commission here today, that George Stephens of the Canadian Pacific railway has admitted that operating and construction costs have no bearing upon railway rates, G. G. McGeer, K.C., councel for British Columbia, pressed for an immediate decision in favor of his plea for equalization of grain rates.

Hon. H. A. McKeown, chief of the commissioners, indicated that he was disappointed with the railways for failing to have their case fully prepared for presentation in Vancouver, and that he did not favor the suggestion for an adjournment to Ottawa or Montreal.

May Give Ruling Today

Commissioners McKeown and Oliver, the members of the board now in Vancouver, will sit here again Thursday morning, and it is probable they will then give an answer, one way or another, to Mr. Greer's claim that British Columbia is entitled to a win, by default of the railways to defend the case, and that if any adjournment be made, it should be on the terms that grain rates to Vancouver be equalized with those eastbound, and that the domestic grain rates be brought down to the export rate level.

Mr. Greer will also speak to the question of general freight rates equalization, and the express rate cases before the commission, in behalf of British Columbia, asking early action on each. He will not attempt to present evidence on either case.

INTENT TO MAIM, IS VERDICT OF WINNIPEG JURY

Nineteen-Year-Old Desperado, who Shot Detectives, Pleads "Accident"

WINNIPEG, Nov. 12.—While a white-haired mother sat silent in the spectators' section of the court room a jury deliberated for two hours on the verdict to be brought against her son, Percy Moggy, 19-year-old gunman and alleged leader of a youthful band of desperadoes, charged with shooting and wounding and "attempted murder of two Winnipeg detectives on July 10 when he was accosted at a local bank trying to exchange stolen foreign currency.

The verdict was "guilty with intent to maim" but "not guilty of attempted murder." He will be sentenced at the close of the assizes.

Moggy, who has a lengthy police record of petty crimes and of escaping from the Dauphin jail, today related his version of the shooting.

"It was accidental. I had no intention of wounding either of them," he said. In both instances, he said, his revolver had gone off during struggles with the detectives.

Terrific Gun Battle

Moggy and the detectives, Robert Frayne and George Batho, waged a terrific gun battle in the bank and the street, and he was finally captured in a lane. All three were wounded.

It was disclosed today by the local police that members of the "Moggy gang" had planned his escape from the provincial jail, but the plot was frustrated by an informer.

CANYON CONTRACT IS CUT INTO TWO

Tierney & Co., Get One Section; Palmer & Co., Get the Other Two

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—Contract for the construction of the Hope-Spences Bridge section of the trans-provincial highway will be let to A. B. Palmer & Co., and W. T. Tierney & Co. The Palmer company was approximately $100,000 lower in its bid on the entire project than the nearest competitor. Seven tenders were submitted. The Tierney company was within a few hundred dollars of the low tender on one section of the contract, which was divided into three parts.

The section from Yale north to the site of the new steel bridge across the Fraser at Spuzzum, will cost a little more than $140,000, and will be handled by the Tierney firm.

The second section north from the bridge crossing to Lytton will cost in the neighborhood of $375,000, and will be undertaken by the Palmer company.

The section from Lytton to Spences bridge will not be finished until after the other sections are completed. It will cost about $200,000 and will be done by the Palmer company.

STREET EVANGELIST AGREES TO BE GOOD

Vancouver Preacher Promises Not to Further Interfere With Elks' Dance Hall

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—"I had no idea a dance could be legalized in Canada," said A. F. Wilby, evangelist, when he appeared before Mr. Justice McDonald, charged with interfering with the business of A. J. Boxall, owner of the Elks' hall, South Vancouver, by holding open air meetings outside that building when dances and entertainments were in progress.

Mr. Wilby admitted that he was technically guilty, and was ready to sign a judgment by which he promised to refrain from such action in the future.

"I am sorry I broke the law, but I am glad for the publicity it has given to our cause," said the defendant, who is an enthusiastic open air preacher.

A short time ago Wilby appeared in court charged with interfering with people going into the hall, whom he stated were going straight to a warmer place, and was warned.

A Stroudsburg, Pa., woman, convicted of shoplifting, was given suspended sentence on condition she take her three children to church and Sunday school regularly for two years.

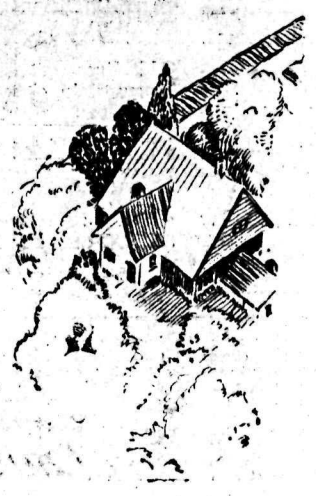
ONE FOR ALL AND ALL FOR ONE



EVERYWHERE people are coming to realize more and more how inter-dependent we are upon each other. The only individual who is self-sufficient is a hermit.

The keynote---the foundation of civilization---is the family. We all concede that. And we're rapidly coming to realize that our own home town---is a home town family---simply the family unit a little bit extended through neighborly cordiality, friendship and pleasant social intercourse.

Common good will and recognition of our human obligation is a deeper currency than any money system ever invented. But it is also to our advantage on the material side of life--it redound in better practices, living conditions, more generous impulses. It makes Nelson a better place to live.

Let's make our home town unit closer knit. Let's be generous with our good will---realizing that the prosperity of the individual is directly reflected in an added prosperity to our community. Your home industries and merchants have adopted this creed. Will you co-operate?

AMATEUR BODY ADJOURNS TILL TUESDAY NEXT

Report From Track Meet Heard; Murray Invited to Meeting

The annual meeting of the Nelson Amateur Athletic association was held last night, but little business was done owing to a slim turnout. The meeting was adjourned until next Tuesday night. George Murray, representative of the association, in the British Columbia Amateur Athletic association will be invited, if possible, to attend this meeting, and to give his report of the annual parent body meeting held in Vancouver last week.

A. E. Allison, president of the Field and Track association, gave his report of the recent indoor meets in Trail and Nelson, at which local athletes competed. This year the local meet ended in a deficit of $20. The association, however, is still within its allotment from the Amateur association.

Receipts amounted to $299.50, and disbursments $319.50. This year unlike last year the association paid expenses of athletes to the Trail meet, which amounted to $110.70. This item was not in the expenditures of last year when a handsome balance was recorded.

Mr. Allison stated that Nelson, although beaten at Trail, had carried off the honors locally. Next year it is hoped to stage the Nelson indoor meet earlier than in the past.

Matters of interest in regard to the hockey situation were discussed, and these will be further discussed at the next meeting on Tuesday, when it is hoped that Mr. Murray will be in attendance to give latest reports from hockey headquarters for the province.

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 12.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—Six collieries at Newcastle have ceased work as a result of the strike of stevedores and dock laborers at a number of the Australian ports. The outcome of the cessation of work at the collieries is that 3500 men are now idle.

The commonwealth shipping board has decided to tie up the commonwealth liner Moretown Bay, because of the strike.

Two Years of Agony

Weak Stomach Made Life a Burden for Victoria Lady but Dreco is Rapidly Helping to Restore Her to Health.

"For over two years I had suffered terribly from stomach trouble and constipation," says Mrs A. F. McLellan, of Point Ellis, Victoria, B.C. "Gas formed on my stomach after eating and it would bloat me up in an awful way. I would get severe spells of heartburn and my liver was sluggish too, so that I had frequent dizzy spells and spots floated before my eyes. My appetite was very poor and I had to constantly take strong laxatives. I tried many medicines, but kept getting worse and worse and when I first read about Dreco I had very little faith in it, thinking it would be like all the rest.

"Anyway, I decided to give it a trial and you would hardly believe me, but two bottles of this wonderful medicine have done marvels for me. I cannot remember when I felt so good as I do now. I haven't been bothered with gas since the first bottle and can eat and enjoy most anything now. My liver is active and so are my bowels and I no longer have dizzy spells or spots before my eyes."

Master your digestive system before it masters you. Take Dreco and let its pure, natural herbal juices tone and regulate the vital digestive organs and induce their healthy activity. Dreco contains no mercury, drash or habit-forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Nelson by The Poole Drug & Book Co. It is also sold as follows:

Trail—E. W. Kaslewood.

Kimberly—Kimberly Drug & Book Co.

Roseland—J. C. Urquhart.

Cranbrook—Scotts Cranbrook Drug & Book Company.

WEINERT SHOWS FULL MASTERY OF LUIS FIRPO

In Twelve Rounds Decidedly Shades the Argentine Giant

FOILS FAMOUS RIGHT THAT ONCE BEAT HIM

South American Is Slower Than Ever; Has Not Improved

NEWARK, N.J., Nov. 12.—Charlie Weinert of Newark, heavyweight, outpointed Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, in a 12-round, no-decision bout tonight, in the opinion by newspaper men at the ringside.

Firpo attempted to box with Weinert, but his awkwardness was no match for Weinert's skill, and, although the Newarker was fast tiring toward the close of the match, there was no question among the ringside experts but that his shade was decisive. There were no knockdowns.

Frantically Firpo endeavored to counter with the terrific right which once beat Weinert in two rounds in Philadelphia, before Firpo's fight with Jack Dempsey, but Weinert evaded any issue with that right and tied up the Argentine at every lead in which that blow was involved.

Weinert gained confidence as the fight progressed, when he saw how his style confused Firpo.

Both Badly Punished

Although Weinert's margin was wide, he absorbed considerable punishment himself, both fighters bleeding profusely when the final gong had sounded. Firpo's face was badly cut, both eyes being cut, while blood streamed from his nose and mouth.

Firpo weighed 222 and Weinert 184.

The Argentine fighter appeared slower than ever, and seemed to have made no improvement since his defeat by Harry Wills.

In a thrilling semi-final match Miguel Ferrara of Argentina, Firpo's heavyweight sparring partner, knocked out Jack Showers, Elizabeth, N.J., negro, in the first round of a scheduled 10-round affair.

The preliminaries, with a lone exception, proved to be a series of knockouts. Joe Lewis, New York, outpointed Harold Mays of Bayonne, N.J., in a 10-round, no-decision bout, in the opinion of newspaper critics at the ringside.

Billy Prestige of England knocked out Jack Townsend of Pittsburgh in the second round of a six-round match.

THE HOLE IN ONE

(Dedicated to "Hole in One" Allison, Nelson Golf and Country Club.)

A Vancouver correspondent of The Daily News, a former resident of Nelson, has been inspired to verse by news of A. E. Allison's "hole in one" at the Nelson golf links. "Don't imagine for a minute that we doubt the genuineness of the card, for we don't; we only confess to an irresistible impulse," says the poet.

We take off our hats,
And send our regards,
To the man who can "hole out"
At three hundred yards.

A wallop like this,
Is no slouch of a feat,
When the ground is all baked,
By the mid-summer heat.

But to get this result,
So late in the fall,
Speaks volumes, we'll say,
For the man and the ball.

Nor is it our wish,
To cause any bereavement,
By casting a doubt,
On this goodly achievement.

'Tis only a curious wish,
That is meant,
When we ask you to tell us
About this event.

For knowing the spots,
Where the ball might alight,
We'd like much to follow,
The course of its flight.

We heard of a case,
Where a ball (so 'tis told)
Found a gopher asleep,
On the spot where it rolled.

Which, rudely awakened,
Just grabbed up the pill,
And scampered away with it,
Over the hill.

Nor stopped in its flight,
'Till it came to the green,
Where right in the middle,
A hole could be seen.

And thinking the cup
A good place for a cache,
It dropped the ball in,
And was off like a flash.

In that case the rodent,
Was caught in the act,
So we know that the whole thing
Occurred, for a fact.

But not for a minute
Would we dare infer,
That in Nelson
A similar thing could occur.

We merely relate this,
As something we found,
To show what can happen
With gophers around.

Moral

Don't get downhearted,
Because they're one up,
There's many a slip,
'Twixt the "Tee" and the "Cup,"

ARGUE BARNARD NOT IN ONTARIO JURISDICTION

Bank Director Montrealer; Also Away on Date of Report

CROWN CLAIMS HIS NEGLIGENCE PROVEN

Judgment Reserved; Stewart, Third Director, Comes Up Today

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—With the argument completed in connection with the case of C. A. Barnard, Montreal, director of the Home bank, who is charged with making false returns to the federal minister of finance in the annual report of the bank, judgment was reserved today by Judge Contesworth until November 25.

The Home bank cases will be continued tomorrow morning, when the crown will open its prosecution of J. F. M. Stewart, another of the directors, who is facing a similar charge.

The newest development of the case during the day was to be found in the argument of R. S. Robertson counsel for Barnard, who contended that since Barnard was a Montreal man the Ontario court had no jurisdiction for his trial, and that accordingly no case could be made against him.

It was further argued that Mr. Barnard was not in Ontario on the date when the report to the government was prepared.

Presence Immaterial

In reply to that contention, D. L. McCarthy, crown prosecutor, declared that the physical presence of Barnard in Ontario or anywhere else on June 26, the date of the annual report which was sent to the department of finance, had no bearing whatever upon the case. The crown, he pointed out, was not interested in the whereabouts of Barnard on that date, and, further, no evidence had been submitted by the defence to show that the accused was not in Ontario.

Continuing, Mr. McCarthy said:

"The point of importance is that certain false statements were made to the department of finance, and Mr. Barnard, as one of the directors, concurred in these statements. If he neglected to learn whether or not these statements were correct or false, then that constitutes negligence, and the chief point which remains is to decide whether or not that negligence was willful.

Up to Director to Be Certain

"The think which counts is that false statements were made to the department, and Barnard, as one of the directors, indorsed them.

"There is a place where it is a man's duty to speak out. If I, as a private citizen, see one man picking the pocket of another, there is no duty upon me to speak out; but, if I, as an elected and trusted official of a bank, see that statements of the bank's affairs are being made which are prejudicial to the interests of the shareholders, then it is my duty to speak. And, if I do not inform myself whether these statements are true or false, I am negligent."

REDDICK PLEADS TO BE REINSTATED

Says He Did Not Know of His Manager's Dating Till Too Late

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—Jack Reddick, the Canadian middle and light-heavyweight champion, who arrived back from his trip to New York and the southern states yesterday, appeared before the Ontario athletic commission this afternoon to explain the breaking of the contract made by his manager, Jack Jarvis, for him to appear here September 19 and box Vic McLoughlin of New York, for the Queensbury club; for which he was suspended by the Ontario body.

Reddick asked to be reinstated.

Jarvis contracted for Reddick's appearance here, but at the same time Reddick, who was down in New York, had, on his own behalf, signed up to meet Paul Berlenbach.

"The whole thing is just an unfortunate mixup," said Reddick today. "I signed for the New York bout, and did not know anything about the bout here until it was too late for me to back out of the bout with Berlenbach."

Reddick says he will remain in Torono for this winter if the Ontario Athletic club will raise his suspension.

The commission has not yet announced a decision.

LOCAL REVENUE SHOWS SURPLUS

On Six Months Nearly Two Millions Ahead; Income Taxes Explain It

VICTORIA, Nov. 12.—A surplus of revenue over expenditure amounting to $1,671,288.21 is shown by the financial statement for the first six months of the current fiscal year which was presented to the legislature this afternoon Hon. J. D. MacLean, minister of finance. The minister states there is every reason to believe that the estimated income for the 12 months will be realized if not exceeded.

The revenue for the six months ended September 30 last was $10,528,237.

An outstanding feature of the returns is that income and personal property taxes have brought in $442,497 more than was anticipated for the full year.

VANCOUVER OFFICER TAXES PRISONER OVER

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—Detective Sunstrum of the Vancouver police force arrived in Ottawa today to take charge of the prisoner, Henry Towers, who was arrested on suspicion by Ottawa police two weeks ago and who under questioning broke down and confessed to the theft of $2000 worth of jewelry from actors in the Empress theater October 28.

VENDOR OF ACCORDIONS BUYS PAINTINGS

JOHN KOSTO

Rumanian, the proprietor of a Toronto music store which specializes in the sale of accordions, has a remarkable collection of paintings above his store. Collarless, and attired in khaki trousers and flannel shirt, he recently walked into one of the best-known art stores on Yonge street, and paid $3500 in cash for several pictures. Among his collection he believes he has an original Rubens, depicting the birth of Christ. Above, Kosto is shown with one of the gems of his gallery.

GROOM MARX FOR GERMAN PRESIDENCY

Ebert Is Billed for Chancellorship, Say Political Prophets

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—President Ebert succeeding Dr. Wilhelm Marx as chancellor and the latter's election to the presidency of Germany is now being reckoned with in political circles as not an improbable sequel to the forthcoming reichstag elections.

With government leaders off on prolonged stumping tours, and all the major parties engaged in drafting platforms, the campaign ending December 7 may be said to be well under way.

The present predictions reckon with a heavy reduction in the number of newly elected deputies, and various party headquarters assume that the final count will reveal a redistribution of about 50 mandates. The Socialists are credited with the recovery of at least 30 from the Communists. The remainder are allotted to the Clericals and Democrats.

Finish Program First

Present calculations assume that the Marx-Stresemann cabinet will continue in office uptil the government's compulsory program of tax and social legislation will have slipped through the reichstag.

After that, it is expected that the cabinet will give way to a brand-new coalition, comprising the Socialists, Clericals, Democrats, Bavarian Peoples' party, and several unattached groups, whose total representation in the newly elected reichstage will ensure the new government a comfortable working majority.

A New Coalition

It is in this connection that the political prophets now contemplate the formation next spring of a coalition government headed by Ebert, whose term expires, as president, June, 1925. As Marx has already been groomed for the presidency, it is assumed that a party lineup resulting from the balloting on December 7 will be so constituted that the Socialists will command the traditional privilege of nominating the chancellor, and that they will propose Ebert, who will be supported by other coalition parties, in return for the Socialists' approval of Marx as a presidential candidate.

VANCOUVER LOTS TO BE SOLD FOR TAXES

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—A civic tax sale will offer 1700 lots next week.

ALL DRESSED UP NO PLACE TO GO

Chinese Not Wanted in Mexico Can't Cross Line for China

CALEXICO, Nov. 10.—Four Chinese, deported from Mexico last August, have just been brought back here from San Francisco and returned across the Mexican line to Mexicali. They are wanted neither in Mexico nor the United States, but the necessary procedure seems to be lacking that would get rid of them.

Lim Sin Faum, Chi Guon Kon, Chin Buon and Son Kim were arrested by Mexicali police and charged with tong war activities. Their case was reported to Mexico City and finally President Obregon ordered their deportation to China. It was proposed to send the Chinese under bond to San Francisco, thence by steamer to Hongkong.

Inspector Nelson, in charge of the United States immigration station here, refused to permit the orients to come across the line according to any such plan. He advised Mexican officials that a deportation order from Mexico is ineffective in this country, and said he would arrest the Chinese for illegal entry if they came across the line.

Mexican officials then escorted the Chinese to Tijuana and they were allowed to leave the port of San Diego for San Francisco. Their case was referred to the immigration commissioner at Washington, and that official finally ordered the Chinese back to Mexicali. In the meantime, the order of President Obregon was suspended.

Now the Chinese are at Mexicali under arrest awaiting further official action. They were asserted to have been involved in tong battles at Mexicali last June and July which resulted in the deaths of eleven of their countrymen, the wounding of several others and the mysterious disappearance of three prominent merchants who are believed to have fled for their lives.

Vancouver to Appeal Win for Squatters Within Stanley Park

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12.—Efforts to drive from Stanley park five Indian squatter families who have lived there for generations and were there long before the park was established, are to be renewed by the city. The recent judgment in favor of the defendants will be appealed to the supreme court of Canada.

MOOSE AND BEAR FALL TO HUNTERS

Major and Mrs. Gooch Return From Sport in Cassiar Mountains

INCLEMENT WEATHER DOES NOT HELP ANY

Two Grizzlies Fall on East Side—Trip of the Hunt

Maj. J. S. Gooch and Mrs. Gooch of Crawford Bay, perhaps the foremost big game hunters of the Kootenay district, returned recently from the coast, having completed another of their interesting hunting expeditions. Mrs. Gooch accompanied the hunters throughout the entire expedition.

This year Major Gooch selected the site for his trip to the north of Atlin, in the Cassiar mountains. He reported a wet season but an exceptionally good trip, full of incidents, in which moose and grizzlies fell before his gun.

Following is a complete story of the trip in the north, as compiled by Major Gooch:

Eleven Days to Atlin

It took us 11 days to get to Atlin, B.C., the base of our operations. To get there one starts in British Columbia, goes through part of Alaska and the Yukon and back again into British Columbia.

Bryan Williams, our guide, we met in Vancouver, and he traveled up with us. It is useful having somebody with one who knows the ropes, as the change from British Columbia to the United States and back again to Canada entails a fair amount of red tape and checking and rechecking of baggage, etc.

Skagway, where we landed, has Ichabod written all over it, only about half the houses and stores being occupied. Ketchikan and Juneau, both of which places we landed at, seem very flourishing and on the increase. The boat was crowded with tourists, and there were two other hunting parties who were ging in by Telegraph creek.

On arriving at Atlin we were greeted by the news that our horses had lit out and had not been seen for a week. However, they were located next day and brought in. They all had to be shod, which lost us 24 hours. The morning before we started, Bryan Williams got badly smashed up by a horse rearing and falling on him. He had to be taken to hospital, and the doctor said he would be three months on his back. He handed over the whole show to Jack Noland, who had been out with him as his assistant on several previous trips and who, he said, was as good a guide and hunter as he himself. The outfit consisted of seven pack and five riding horses, Noland as guide, Miller as cook and Toobs as horse wrangler. They started on August 24, the day before us, and we did the first 30 miles in a car, the road lying mostly alongside the Atlin lake. The horses were all big work horses, cayuses being unobtainable in those parts.

We started marching as soon as we caught them up, and then the weather began! We had not been going half an hour when a heavy drizzle started, and from there on, until we returned to the same spot on October 11, we only once had continuous fine weather for 36 hours on end—every other day it either rained or snowed. The trail, like the curate's egg, was good in parts, but the other parts were very bad, and some days consisted mostly of muskeg and thick willow bush.

Made Good Time

In spite of the weather we made good time, thanks to a small pack train, and our second camp was beyond Mr. Eastman's fourth camp of the year before; but then he had 37 pack horses. Our second march was more full of incident than almost any other one. First of all, a five-yards-broad stream with steep banks proved too much for old Tom, who subsided in the middle, and in struggling to right himself, got so badly cut that he had to be left behind. We found him again on our return a month or more later, and he had recovered sufficiently to join the train, but was not up to carrying a load. Then Fussy, who carried the cook stove—which he took a fiendish delight in banging against every rock and tree that he passed—delayed us nearly an hour before we could make him cross; and later on he sat down in the middle of a bad bit of corduroy and had to be unloaded before we could get him out. After that day the horses on the whole behaved well. If anything did go wrong, it was sure to be Fussy's fault.

Vile Weather Every Trip

Our final objective was the White Swan river, where we hoped to get our moose and caribou. On the way we did two or three side-trips after goat and sheep, Noland and ourselves and a couple of pack horses leaving the main camp and making our own train, for two or more nights at a time. On every one of these side-trips we had vile weather, either heavy rain or deep snow, and our hunting was almost completely spoilt, as hardly any game showed up in the open. By the time we reached our furthest point the bag was only one goat, and that took two days to get, as it fell in a place only accessible by ropes and had to be fetched in the following morning.

Moose Fifteen Yards Away

The day we reached the moose country, in the vicinity of Table mountain, we saw a large number of them, mostly cows and calves and young bulls. Noland brought us to within 15 yards of two of them—and they stood looking at us for about 20 seconds, offering the most tempting shots—especially tempting as we were short of meat—but we resisted, and virtue was rewarded, for next day one of us got quite a fair head and all the meat we wanted. It was the first moose either of us had shot, and we were astonished at the height of the animal. A horse standing 16 hands (64 inches) is a fairly big one. The two moose we shot stood 18 and 19 hands respectively—72 and 76 inches at the withers. The caribou who usually frequent that district in large numbers had decamped a fortnight earlier than usual.

Retreat From Moscow

We made one side-trip from here, which resulted in one good head. This trip we called the "Retreat from Moscow," as nearly the whole march was across an open plateau, with the snow driving horizontally into our faces and a bitterly cold wind. The next day was beautiful—not a cloud in the sky in the morning—and the one whose turn it was to hunt got the above-mentioned head, 36 points. It began snowing again at 4 p.m. and continued all night and up to midday next day, and Noland thought it advisable to beat a retreat back to our main camp in the White Swan valley, which was considerably lower. Even there the snow was deep. We tried one more hunt from there, but the snow and icy wind drove everything into the timber, so we started on our return journey, Noland being anxious to get our 11 heavy horses over Moose mountain whilst it was still possible to do so.

A Second Moose Falls

Our next halt for hunting was three or four days later, and that night we had to make camp in a heavy snowstorm; but by this time—I think it was the 25th time we had made camp—everybody knew exactly what to do, and in an hour we were quite cosy with three huge bonfires going. One thing we never lacked was dry wood.

It was here we got our other moose, a rather bigger one than the first; not a very big spread, but good palms and fronts. It was getting dusk when it was shot, so the skinning and decapitating had to be done next morning, as it lay 2½ hours' walk from the camp.

Drop Two Grizzlies

On our last side-trip, when after black bear, and three days before again hitting the place where we left the car, we encountered the only bit of real luck we had. One of us left camp with Noland at 7 a.m. and returned at 9.

"Well, what luck?"

"Only two."

"What—two black bear?"

"Black bear! (with scorn). No; two grizzlies."

They had been most accommodating and walked to within 75 yards of us, and each had fallen at the first shot and lay within six feet of each other when we got up to them. They were a fair size and their pelts in perfect condition. There was joy and "cocoa royal" in camp that night!

Of small game we saw countless ptarmigan, both of the rock and willow varieties, and had no difficulty in shooting all we wanted for the pot. In many places they got up in clouds. There were very few grouse, the young broods having been killed off by a very cold spring.

Beautiful Country

The scenery—when we could see it, which was not often—was beautiful; range after range of grass-topped hills right away to the horizon, sometimes intersected by deep canyons, but more often with grassy, lake-dotted valleys, and the slopes of the hills above the timber line a brilliant red with the birch brush and wine berry taking on their fall coloring. The leaves were all off on our return journey and the hills covered with deep snow.

The last night before our final march to meet the car, the sun set in all its glory—not a cloud in the sky, and a nearly full moon which almost turned night into day.

"Well, at any rate, we will have a fine day for our last trek," we said—and woke up at 5:30 to find it snowing heavily! Those last 18 miles were almost the worst we had in the whole trip.

Guide Able to Return

On our return to Atlin we were very pleased to find Bryan Williams fit enough to hobble about with two sticks, and able to come "out" with us when we sailed from Skagway on October 15.

It had been a great disappointment to us, having to start the hunting trip without him, but we were very lucky in getting the services of Jack Noland: he knew every inch of the country, and was an A-1 hunter. No work was too hard for him, and however vile the weather and whatever difficulties cropped up, he was always bright and cheery, and here, there and everywhere lending a hand to everybody. I believe he had eyes at the back of his head, as many times, when the brush was so thick that we could only see one horse ahead, he would turn back from the lead and readjust a pack three or four horses behind him.

Excepting for the accident to Tom, he brought every horse back to Atlin as fat and fit as they started and never had the slightest sign of a sore back.

Everybody we met, including Indians, said it was the wettest fall they had ever known. Had it not been for the vile weather, I have little doubt we could have got our sheep and goat and our limit of two caribou each.

EMMA GOLDMAN EXCORIATES THE SOVIET REGIME

Former American Anarchist Says Masses Offered As Never Before

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Emma Goldman, who was deported from the United States in 1919 as an undesirable alien and now seeks asylum in England, was welcomed by 300 Britons to their country at a dinner given in her honor tonight. Miss Goldman spent a considerable part of her exile in Russia, and tonight she excoriated Russia's Soviet government.

The oppressed masses in Russia, she said, were being silenced as they never were under the czar, and all ideals had been discredited by the ruling forces in that country. Bolshevism she characterized as an international disease, and promised to fight hereafter, wherever she might be, for the principles of liberty, which were the most essential things in human life.

Undermines All the Best

"To call the present Soviet government a workers' experiment is the most preposterous lie ever told" Miss Goldman told her audience. "The party in power has emasculated the revolution; it is slowly undermining all that is best in Russia.

"The time has come when silence on the Russian situation makes you a party to the crimes which are being committed there. Unless you understand the mistakes of Russia in the past seven years, it is likely there will be repetitions elsewhere.

"One hears remarks that the Communist party is so small in Great Britain. Remember it does not require many people to destroy things, but it takes a great many people to build things up"

The United States public debt was reduced $861,441,000 in the past year and now stands at $20,841,424,959.

CENOTAPH TO GLORIOUS DEAD IS DESCRIBED

Mrs. Forin Tells Daughters of Empire of Some Memories of London

TROOPING OF COLORS BRILLIANT AFFAIR

Entertainment by the Lord Mayor, Two Governor-Generals and Royalty

At Tuesday's afternoon's anniversary meeting of Kokanee Chapter, Imperial Order of Daughters of Empire, one of the most interesting items on the program was an address by Mrs. J. A. Forin, on "A Few Memories of London." In addition to reading her prepared paper, Mrs. Forin gave many details of ceremonies, and gorgeous costumes worn by Chinese or Indian women at such affairs as the Buckingham palace garden party. She also commented on the great beauty of some of the women from India.

Mrs. Forin said that she would try to picture some of the things that were of special interest to her and her family in London.

"A central point with which we became familiar was Trafalgar square where Nelson's monument stands," she said. "Surrounding this are several prominent buildings, two of them the new Canadian building, and the Canadian Pacific railway, flying the Canadian flag, which looked very familiar to us.

"From there we often went down Whitehall, which is one of the most historic streets in London, en route passing the Whitehall museum from a window of which Charles I., was beheaded.

Cenotaph to Glorious Dead

"Further on we came to the Cenotaph. It is a most imposing sight, standing majestically amidst the rush and bustle of the busy thoroughfares. It is a broad shaft of granite on a simple base with three broad steps. On its face is the date and inscription "The Glorious Dead." It is severe, grave and beautiful. How deeply it touched the heart of the nation was immediately shown, for within the first week after the soul stirring unveiling ceremony upward of one million people paid homage at this shrine. It stands for all time a sacred record of the deep veneration of a grateful people. It is banked with beautiful flowers, with renewals every morning. The thousands of men who pass on foot and by vehicle, as a rule, uncover their heads in tribute to the silent dead.

Scene of Bar Association Meetings

"A short distance from this one of the wonder views of the world breaks upon us. To the left is Westminster bridge and the houses of parliament with the ancient Westminster hall of William Rufus, where the courts of law were held for centuries and where last summer the Canadian and English bar received in glorious state their American brethren. We wend our way past St. Margaret's church to Westminster Abbey and amidst the memorable and glorious names and monuments, we proceed to the west door of the nave, and there, surrounded by a protecting barrier in the form of a large silk cord, is the grave of the unknown warrior, amidst tributes from Royalty, regiments and the people, renewed every morning, lies this center of the Empire's sacrifice. Nearby are the tombs of David Livingstone, Bonar Law and a great multitude of names immortal in the Empire's history.

Trooping of the Color

"Another occasion of interest was the army's ceremony for its King; the birthday trooping of the color, which was spoken of as the most brilliant ceremony of the year. Never before has the world-renowned ceremony attracted such a crowd of spectators as it did this year when it was carried out on the Household Guards parade grounds in honor of the King's birthday, visitors from the Dominions and from the United States were there in thousands, and seemed more eager to see this old ceremony than almost anything else in London. The trooping of the color is the finest piece of historical romance left in the army. It is really a guard-mounting ceremony dating back from the 18th century, and is the cream of British military spectacles. It is ceremonial and military dignity carried to the point of perfection. One may see the efficiency of the guards in moving with a machine-like procision.

"The color to be trooped this year was the King's color of the Second battalion, Grenadier guards. The scene for the arrival of the King with his brilliant cavalcade was set for 10 o'clock. The Queen, the Duchess of York and Princess Arthur of Connaught watched the ceremony from the balcony of the Horse Guards, the sun shone and there was not a breath of wind to blur the music, or the sharp sound of the 2000 rifles that moved as one. The guards were in their bright prewar uniforms, scarlet tunics, towering bearskins, blue trousers evenly creased, equipment bright and shining.

King Arrives With Escort

"Flags hung from every window, and around the great square was gathered an illustrious crowd of spectators, consisting of visitors from the dominions, the colonies, and the home people. The King in guard's uniform arrived, and was followed by his three sons; behind them again came the King's cousin, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and his son-in-law, Viscount Lascelles, with generals, equerries, aides de camp and the military attaches of foreign powers jingling behind.

"After His Majesty had inspected the troops he took up his position in front of the Horse Guards arch, and the real ceremony of trooping the color began. There was a flash of bayonets to the left of the line, and the escort for the color moved out and halted opposite. It was then taken over by the ensign. The band played "God Save the King," and the flag, now on the far side of the parade, was dipped to the ground. Slowly and majestically the escort marched around the ranks of the guards on parade, finally taking its original place at the left of the line. Then came the march past of His Majesty and all the troops, first in slow time, and then quickly, to the strains of "The British Grenadiers" and "Highland Laddie."

"Then the climax of all—the King riding back down the Mall at the head of his bodyguard, followed by the Household troops in column of division.

"It was a spectacle of military glory, and cheers rang out from the crowds lining the Mall. It ended with the ceremony of relieving the guard at Buckingham palace. The balance of the troops marched past the King and returned to the barracks."

"Then the massed bands played a program of music in the court of Buckingham Palace, a brilliant end to a brilliant affair.

Lord Roberts' New Statue

"Another occasion of interest was the unveiling of Lord Roberts' memorial, this also taking place on the Horse Guards parade. The bronze statue is one of the famous Bob seated on his favorite horse; it is very realistic and impressive and was unveiled by the Duke of Connaught, representing the King.

"London, as you know, was crowded with overseas visitors this summer. The special attraction was Wembley; this was, of course, an Empire exhibition and was a wonderful display of Empire products, and industries. We were especially proud of the Canadian building, it was acknowledged to be the finest of all. The fruit exhibit attracted a great deal of attention. One end of the building was given over to it, and the other to the mining exhibit, in both of which British Columbia is largely interested.

"There was a very attractive model bungalow, made out of British Columbia wood, grates in the rooms and the whole building lighted with electricity. This was the suggestion of Mr. Wade, the British Columbia agent who has just died, and whose active and zealous services for our province will be missed.

"Another point of interest was a replica of the Prince of Wales' ranch made in butter, carved by a Canadian, showing his house and a figure of the prince standing beside his horse.

"The prince said at the Dominion day luncheon: "I congratulate the Dominion government on its splendid contribution toward the success of the British Empire exhibition. The high standard and the effective organization of the Canadian pavilion at Wembley has won the admiration of all its visitors. I have been there only once, but there is a personal reason why I am certainly going again; it is to see how I have fared during this hot spell. I have the greatest possible faith in everything that is Canadian, including butter; I hope I am not inclining to a dangerous angle and that I and my horse are not going over at the knees."

"There were mineral, agricultural and scenic displays, describing British Columbia fruit, Saskatchewan farms and Jasper park, in front of all of which there were always crowds.

"It is impossible in the time I have to describe all there was to see but the extent of it made one realize the vastness of the Empire. The purpose of the exhibition was to show what could be produced within the Empire, and this was accomplished in a very entertaining and sometimes rather unique way."

Here Mrs. Forin spoke for a few minutes on the system of transportation used, and of the industries displayed.

Many Entertainments

"The social events for overseas visitors were numerous and attractive. One of the most interesting of these was the reception and ball given by the lord mayor and the corporation of London at the historic Guildhall. The Guildhall is a collection of spacious rooms and chambers containing a noted art gallery, a great library at which Ramsey MacDonald carried on most of his reading after leaving Scotland, the Crypt and the Museum, the city council chamber and the lord mayor's court room beside the great hall, where there was dancing. The whole of the historic building was thrown open to the guests who, to the number of 2000, were received in the library where the scene was in keeping with the tradition of the corporation of London. The lady mayoress was stately and resplendant with jewels. The lord mayor must be a man of a large private income as his expenses, largely for entertaining, are much beyond his salary.

"Another event of interest to Canadians was a reception on Dominion day given by Mr. Larkin, Canadian high commissioner, when his daughter received with him. It was a huge affair held in the Ritz Carlton. Both Mr. and Mrs. Larkin were very hospitable to Canadian visitors. Mrs. Larkin received every week with her daughter for them.

"Distinguished men and women vied with each other in entertaining overseas visitors. The Duke of Connaught and the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, two of our former governor-generals, both held receptions. Lord and Lady Beaverbrook gave a dinner at which we were privileged to meet Lloyd George, and there were numerous other events, including a luncheon given by the ladies and wives of the English judges and bar to wives of Canadian and American bars. Miss Haldane presided."

Mrs. Forin concluded by giving a vivid description of a Buckingham palace garden party, describing the procedure, and the gorgeous gowns worn.

HYDRO JUDGE EXCLUDES NEW BECK CHARGE

Contractor Alleged Sir Adam Seemed Partner in Contract

NOT IN SETTELL LETTER; RULED OUT

Counsel Alleges He Had Grudge Against Commission

TORONTO, Nov. 12.—After it had seemed that a new series of investigations was to be entered upon, the inquiry into the Settell charges against the Ontario hydroelectric administration reached its conclusion today at the parliament buildings, in the ruling of Judge Snider, which banned as beyond the scope of his commission the charge that Sir Adam Beck had considered himself a partner in the successful tender of the Niagara power line contract.

The allegation was an eleventh hour one, preferred by H. M. McGuigan, the contractor, who had the work, and it was made after Sir Adam had finished defending himself against the charges of the Settell letter.

Because the matter had not been included in the Settell letter, to the investigation of which he was limited by his commission, Judge Snider declared that he could not hear evidence upon it.

Says Contract "Forced"

McGuigan, speaking relative to Settell's charge that his tender had been "forced" upon the hydro commission by Sir Adam Beck, told of negotiations which he had had in securing the contract. He declared that the late C. B. Smith, who had been a hydro commissioner, had come to him and asked:

"Where does the chairman (Sir Adam Beck) get off in this?"

Repetition of the statement that Sir Adam seemed to regard himself as a partner in the contract was as far as the witness was allowed to go.

J. B. Lusac, councel for the hydro commission, sought to show by a series of questions that Mr. McGuigan had a grievance against the hydro commission.

The remainder of the day's evidence traveled the wide ground covered by the charges against Sir Adam Beck.

The C. B. Smith mentioned above was Cecil B. Smith, the hydro-electric consulting engineer, who designed the extension to the city of Nelson power plant at Bonnington. Mr. Smith also designed Winnipeg city's huge power development at Point du Bois on Winnipeg river.

SKOOKUM TILLICUMS SEE MINSTREL SHOW

Dill's Group Provide Amusing Entertainment for Weekly Meeting

Group 1, under the leadership of R. Dill, provided the program for last night's weekly meeting of the Skookum Tillicum club, held in the church parlors of St. Paul's Presbyterian church. One of the most amusing items was a minstrel show led by Charlie Hoare as Ziegfeld.

During this the song "The Long Boy" was given by Ted McVicar as Esmeralda, and Charlie Hoare sang "The Sheik of Alabam." Other songs were "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo'," by Stuart Smillie as Hiram Walker, and "Barney Google," by Harold Jolfs and Art Scott as Barney Google and Spark Plug. Barney Archibald, as a sailor, sang "A Capital Ship."

Another item was an S. T. song, composed by Ted McVicar and Stuart Smillie, sung by the composers.

This was followed by a chorus of the following performers and Jack Sims, of "You Can Take Me Away From Dixie." Bob Waldie was the accompanist for the minstrel show.

Miss Genevieve Proudfoot sang "Everybody Slips a Little," and Mrs. Margaret Leard, "Pipes of Pan." This last song followed a reading by Miss Josephine Eldsdon of "The History of the Pipes of Pan."

Community singing of "Doodle-Doo-Doo," by the whole club, followed. In the musical tag game opening the evening, Miss A. Oliver won the first prize and Miss E. McKenzie the booby.

In a musical contest later in the evening Miss Hamson and Bill Blair and Miss Beake and Bert Peebles were the winners.

During the evening there were selections by the S. T. orchestra, and at the close supper followed by a business meeting.

CONSTABLES AND THEIR CAPTURES

Armed men were arrested by county constables at Newmarket, Ont., while alleged to be attempting to break into a safe. Left to right: Constable Kirk, Harry Little and Walter Brown, Detroit, and Constable Kennedy. It was Kennedy who, while patroling his beat, heard noises in an office and, investigating, says he found the two men. Both prisoners had been traveling all over the country, and the Toronto police took their pictures and record and they will be sent to all cities in Canada and the United States.
