BISAILLON'S PARTNER TELLS DIFFERENT STORY

BRIEN'S STORY S NOT SAME S BISAILLON'S

artner of Former Chief Preventive Officer Gives Evidence

ECLARES BISAILLON'S STATEMENTS ARE FALSE

dmits Partnership With Bisaillon in Liquor Business; No Books Kept

OTTAWA, May 20.—Evidence given by J. E. A. Bisaillon, former chief preventive officer at Montreal and later given today by Ludger Brien, ...ice his partner before the customs ...quiry committee failed to coincide ... several particulars. Toward the ...ose of today's sitting C. W. Bell, ...P., one of the committee, con...onted Mr. Brien with statements ...ade by Bisaillon in letters written ... the customs department.

"Brien is a bootlegger and deals ... smuggled goods," wrote Mr. Bisaillon to the department. Again ...Brien has been a very active smug...er in alcohol and automobiles."

Mr. Bell asked if these statements ...ere true.

"No they are false." He qualified ...s denial to the extent of saying ...at he was the operator of a gar...ge and like others dealt in second-...and cars. Two or three of these ...rs which he acquired and sold ... perfectly good faith, turned out ...ot to be "quite O.K."

A statement by Bisaillon that he ...Brien) was trying to arrange to ...ave four cars smuggled across the ...e a month, for him to dispose of, ...as also given absolute denial by ...rien.

Partner in Liquor Firm

Brien and Bisaillon were partners ... the firm of liquor dealers known ... J. E. Belisle. Brien told the com...ittee that he had five-sixths inter...st in the firm and Bisaillon one-...xth. The firm kept no accounts. Mr. Bell expressed surprise at ...is. It was strange that Bisaillon, ...ho believed that the witness was ... smuggler and a bootlegger, did not ...emand an accounting to make sure ...hat he got his full share of the ...rofits.

"I don't want to discuss what he ...hinks of me, and I don't want to ...ay what I think of him," comment...d the witness.

Brien gave the committee his ver...ions of the midnight visit by Of...icer Duval and himself to the barge ...remblay at St. Sulphice. They ...ound the barge already in the hands ...f the Quebec liquor commission. ...ater he said he overheard the two ...Americans, who escaped from the ...arge, laughing at the ease with ...hich they had got away. Witness ...as asked a great many questions ...bout the partnership in the Belisle ...usiness. In answer to a question, ...e denied that a man called Gelinas, ...ho furnished part of the money ...equired to operate the business, was ...ctually a partner.

Belisle's firm did quite a large ...ail-order business, he said.

"We did not smuggle or steal or ...o anything wrong so I thought no ...ne would be interested in the docu...ments," said the witness.

Just before adjournment, G. F. ...Leaver, of the committee's firm of ...auditors was called and stated that ...he had examined the books produced ...today by J. H. Gauthier of the R. ...& G. company, Rock Island, and ...found that those which the commit...tee wanted were still missing. They ...had disappeared between visits of ...the auditors to the firm's plant.

Protection of Public Interests Included in Bill

MELBOURNE, May 20.—The house of representatives today gave first reading to a bill amending the constitution so as to provide protection of public interests in case of threatened interruption of the country's essential services. Premier Bruce described the amendment as being vital, giving the recent general strike in Great Britain as an example of what might occur.

Jap Would Withdraw Charges Against His Pal Who Stabbed Him

NEW WESTMINSTER, May 20.—A strange story of a lifelong love and friendship between two Mission Japanese, marred by a quarrel in which one is alleged to have stabbed the other with a butcher knife, seriously wounding him, was unfolded before Mr. Justice Murphy.

K. Kato, a Jap youth, is charged on three counts with intent to murder, wounding with intent, and unlawfully wounding B. Katshiro at Mission. The defence counsel submitted a letter addressed to the Mission magistrate signed by Katshiro stating that Katshiro desired to have the charge withdrawn as he and Kato had forgiven each other.

POSITION OF PILSUDSKI IS NOT SO GOOD

Fires of Discontent Spread; Secret Agents Sent to Paris Conference

POSEN, May 20.—The smoldering fires of discontent with Marshal Pilsudski's regime are assuming importance, while the leaders of the right parties pour into Posen for conferences. It is learned that secret agents are being dispatched to Paris to confer with the French government.

The secretary, M. Trompczynski, president of the senate, returned from Paris this afternoon. He refused to discuss his mission, although admitting he had gone there.

The military garrison is being strengthened, although the officials in this conservative stronghold, deny that a counter revolution is being planned. Patriotic societies and veterans and students' organizations are feverishly preparing for any emergency.

Quiet Continues

Severe Storm of Tornado Intensity Hits Northern Part Province

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C., May 20.—One death and heavy damage resulted from a severe storm which swept this section of northern central British Columbia adjacent to the headquarters of the Fraser river yesterday and which assumed the proportions of a tornado for 20 minutes in Prince George.

Nels Nelson, pioneer farmer of the Pineview district, near here was almostly instantly killed when pinned beneath a falling tree.

Communication between the outside world and Prince Rupert, on the northern British Columbia coast, was disrupted until today when wires were blown down here. Telephone service was completely disorganized.

Explosion Fires Schooner; Crew Has to Leave in Boats

ROCKLAND, Me., May 20.—A gasoline explosion on the two-masted schooner Quetay caused the captain, the crew and the captain's daughter to take to their boat today. They arrived here on a coast guard patrol boat tonight with the story of their escape.

At last account the schooner, her jib and foresail intact but burning rapidly, was blowing out to sea.

The Quetay, bound from Annapolis, N.S., to Bangor, with a cargo of pulpwood, was off Schoodice Point when the explosion, either in a gasoline tank or in the engine itself, occurred.

SOUTH AFRICAN FLAG QUESTION IS TENSE ONE

Absence of Union Jack in Proposed Flag Causes Agitation

SMUTS DECLARES IT AN ACT OF CONTEMPT

Smuts Says It National Matter, Not Political; Labor Backs Hertzog

CAPETOWN, May 20.—The government's determination to proceed with its bill providing for the adoption of a new national flag for the Union of South Africa produced a tense atmosphere in the assembly today. There is growing agitation over the selection of a flag design from which the Union Jack is completely absent, and notice that the question was to be taken up filled the assembly galleries to overflowing. A party from the government house was present, including Princess Alice, wife of the Earl of Athlone, the governor-general, Sir Charles Cogslan, premier of southern Rhodesia was also an interested auditor. In opening the debate, the former general, Smuts, leader of the South African party, expressed deep regret that the government had introduced the bill so close to the termination of the assembly's session. He declared an act of contempt of public opinion. General Smuts appealed to Premier Hertzog to realize the depth of sentiment in the country, which he warned might soon be in a state of turmoil.

Urges Another Plan

A Labor member interrupted: "You are making it worse," he told the former premier, causing considerable uproar in the house.

General Smuts affirmed that the people would say "this is not our flag; it was forced upon us." He declared that the flag question could be only settled by an agreement reached away from the atmosphere of the house. He called attention to the recent similar position in Canada, where, after a commission of inquiry had reported to the government, the question of a new Canadian flag was left in abeyance.

General Smuts, in an eloquent peroration, declared:

"This is not a political matter, it is a national one. The government even at this stage should pause. They can get the measure through by means of their majority, but the results would be in vain. This suggested emblem would not be a flag to honor but a means of dividing the people of our country."

Following announcement by a Labor member that the government would be supported on the question with the Labor party vote, Sir Drummond Chaplin, of the South African party, delivered an address that aligned him behind General Smuts.

Should Be Approved

"Any national flag should be approved by both peoples in the country," declared Sir Drummond. He warned the Labor members that their supporters would never agree to the omission of the Union Jack from the new flag.

Hon. D. R. Malan, minister of the interior, replying for the government, declared there was nothing in the bill which had not been before the house for months. The essential question of whether the Union Jack should be included had been discussed for two years, he said. Moreover, General Smuts' government had repeatedly urged the necessity of a South African flag. The speaker declared the South African party had indorsed the suggestion that the Union Jack be flown on special occasions and the South African flag on ordinary occasions. The government's proposal was on the same principle.

The minister of the interior pointed out that the old Orange Free State flag was used at Dutch functions and the Union Jack at British functions. The government wanted a flag which would bind together the two sections of the population into a common nationhood.

Leave to introduce the bill was granted.

GERMANS WOULD BAN AIRPLANES AND POISON GAS

Heavy Artillery and Tanks Also Taboo in War if Bernstorff Followed

GENEVA, May 20.—Quick, concrete results in European land disarmament were deemed to be further removed today, when additional states, including Rumania, Poland and Finland, following the leadership of France, verified their conviction that disarmament can come only after the achievement of greater security than now prevails. But many of the delegates found hope in M. Paul Boncour's admission that the Locarno pact and the league covenant had created new security and that "relative security permitted relative disarmament."

Another distinct feature of the day's proceedings of the preparatory disarmament commission was the proposal of Count Von Bernstorff to abolish air warfare by forbidding the use of airplanes, as well as poison gas, heavy artillery and tanks.

A naval conference between Great Britain, the United States and Japan for the discussion of naval disarmament is among the possibilities.

TARIFF UPON FRESH MEATS MADE HIGHER

On Imports From United States Tariff Raised Half a Cent Per Pound

BANANAS ENTER FREE, BRITISH PREFERENCE

Western Members Protest; Will Raise Price in West; Item Passes, However

OTTAWA, May 20. — After spending several hours on one item the house, in committee of ways and means, made considerable progress today on budget resolutions, making changes in the customs tariff. It was an item on fresh meats which aroused chief criticism. The item increases the general tariff which is applicable to imports from the United States from 3 to 3½ cents per pound. Conservatives criticized that the purpose behind the increase was not so much to keep out the American product as to give a better opportunity to the Australians. An amendment was moved to increase the general tariff to 5, but it was ruled out of order, and the item carried unamendment. Discussion came also an imported bananas. Bananas imported by direct shipment to a Canadian port, under the British preference, would enter free.

Hon. S. F. Tolmie, Conservative, Victoria, said there was danger of mutton and lambs being dumped into Canada. He advocated a larger tariff on wool, mutton and lamb, so as to conserve the home market for the Canadian people.

C. H. Cahan, Conservative, St. Lawrence-St. George, declared he believed the tariff on mutton and lamb from Australia should be raised two and one-half cents and five cents in the general tariff.

J. E. Armstrong, Conservative, Lambton East, asked if the hog cholera prevalent in Ontario was not due to the importation of American pork. If this were so, the tariff against American pork should be raised or an embargo placed against its importation.

Mr. Robb stated that this question was one for the minister of agriculture. He thought that if Mr. Armstrong could convince the minister that hog cholera was due to

EXPLOSION KILLS EIGHT PERSONS

Flames added to the horrors and the firemen and rescuing parties were greatly impeded in their work of aiding those half buried in the ruins.

Miners and Owners Refuse Accept British Government Proposals for Settlement; Prepare for Long Stoppage

LONDON, May 20.—The mining dispute reached a new deadlock today with the refusal of either the miners or mine owners to accept the government plan for a solution of the difficulty. The national conference of miners' delegates, in rejecting the government's proposals adopted a resolution which declared, "We are unable to recommend that the mine workers accept Premier Baldwin's proposals for a reduction of wages."

The owners will not deliver their reply until tomorrow, but it is known to be nonacceptance.

It was reported that the miners were making preparations for a long stoppage, failing some new move on the part of the government.

A cabinet council was held this evening to consider the situation and further conferences between the ministers and interested parties are expected tomorrow.

HUSSEY GETS DIVORCE FROM CALGARY GIRL

St. Louis Man Divorces Miss Dorothy Lougheed, Senator's Daughter

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 20. — Nolan A. Hussey of St. Louis was today granted a divorce from Dorothy Lougheed Hussey, daughter of the late Sir James Lougheed of Calgary. The decree was awarded by Circuit Judge Percy on a desertion charge.

Hussey, secretary of the Hussey Tie company, said on the witness stand that he had married after a 16-months' courtship, and had lived with his wife for a year. They were married in Calgary in November, 1924, he said, and his wife left him in November, 1925. Although he sent many letters and telegrams, Hussey said, she would not return.

Enjoyed High Position

"Her father was a man of wealth and social position," he continued, "and his only daughter enjoyed a high position and lived in the lap of luxury." Although he surrounded her with what he said were the "usual comforts and luxuries of a man of his station," Hussey told the court that "the sharp contrast in her new life with the old caused her to tire of her changed status, and to regret her marriage."

Mrs. Hussey entered an appearance through her attorney, who said no appeal would be taken.

Two character witnesses testified for Hussey.

WHITTEMORE CASE NOW UP TO JURY

Admits Killing of Guard; Did It in Self-Defence, He Claims

BALTIMORE, Md., May 20.—Fifteen years of conflict with the law passed in review before Richard Reese Whittemore today.

Juvenile court, parental school, Maryland school for boys, Portsmouth naval prison, Elmira workhouse in New York state, Maryland penitentiary, burglary, robbery, taking of human life.

Robert H. Holtman, Maryland, penitentiary guard, is dead. Richard Reese Whittemore killed him.

Debonairly the alleged organizer of New York's "million dollar crime trust" admitted it all to 12 men beyond a jury box railing in criminal court.

Whittemore slew Holtman because "if he had got his pistol out, I would not be here today," he told the jury —self defence.

Whittemore slew Holtman in order to escape from prison, the state has told the jury—first degree murder.

Whether prison doors or the gallows will yawn for him, he will know tomorrow. Prosecution and defence rested their cases today.

CROSS-APPEAL AND APPEAL DROPPED

Consider Continued Prosecution Against Jobber-Broker Houses in Canada

OTTAWA, May 20.—The question of continued prosecution of job-owner fruit broker houses in British Columbia following the inquiry into fruit combines, is under consideration, was intimated in the commons today by Hon. J. E. Elliott, minister of labor. Grote Stirling, Yale, had asked if the minister would make a statement.

Mr. Elliott said that the appeal and cross-appeal against the conviction and fine of $2,000 brought in the courts against a number of brokers, had been dropped. There were still several indictments pending, but it is the present intimation these will be dropped.

"Probably, later on," continued the minister, "if it is considered that the jobber-owner houses are carrying on business in a way that is detrimental to the berry growers, these prosecutions may be disposed of."

In the meantime, the case, he said, were being transferred to a sitting of the courts three weeks hence and may be further postponed.

SMELTER WOULD BE AT NELSON IF IS ERECTED

Plans of Porcupine Gold Fields Mining Concern Is for Smelter Here

WOULD ACQUIRE MANY KOOTENAY LAKE MINES

Wish to Secure Florence, United and Bluebell; Have Large Capital at Back

VANCOUVER, May 20.—It was learned today that the likelihood of the Porcupine Goldfields Development and Finance Company, an English concern, establishing a smelter in the Kootenays depends on the number of properties and the quantity of ore secured in the development plan now under way.

As previously announced, the company has allotted $2,500,000 for mining in British Columbia. At present they are operating the Stemwinder and North Star at Kimberley, Goodenough at Ymir, and Alice at Creston. In addition negotiations are under way to secure the Florence, United, Bluebell and several other interior properties not named. If under the development plan these properties and a number of others are satisfactorily secured and operated to produce satisfactory quantity of ores, the company will then decide on its smelter.

It is understood, however, that data secured from Kootenay district already makes it assured that if a smelter is erected, it will be at Nelson, or very close, owing to transportation facilities.

Negotiations for the company are being actually carried out by F. R. Weekes, Charles F. Starr and E. R. Crawford, but a leading part is being taken by O. C. Thompson of Kimberley, the company's engineer controlling the B. C. operations. Mr. Thompson left last night for Kimberley.

FRANC STEPS UP AFTER DROPPING

French Government Evidently Starts Fight Against Further Depreciation of the Money

PARIS, May 20.—The French government's expressed decision to use every possible resource at its command in its fight against further depreciation of the franc had the effect today of improving the financial situation, the dollar dropping from 35.15 to 33.38 francs, and sterling from 170.80 to 162.15.

Confidence appears to have been restored on the part of French bondholders and demands for reimbursement of short term notes due today fell more than a billion francs short of what the treasury expected.

The decision of the council of ministers to adopt stern measures, such as the use of the Morgan loan, which has been feared by speculators since it was floated in March, 1924, and the threat to employ even these gold reserves as protection against further attack on the franc had the desired result.

Miners Are Further Protected by New Explosive Regulation

'GOD STRIKE ME DEAD IF THAT AIN'T THE TRUTH'

Defendant Landis Dramatic in Winlaw's Suit for Damages

CONTRACT'S SCOPE IS THE POINT AT ISSUE

Plaintiff Claims Timber Diverted; Goes Into Second Day

"I never spoke a word about cedar to Mr. Winlaw when he came up to see me. That's the truth, and God Almighty strike me dead where I stand if it ain't!"

So asserted Ira Benjamin Landis, one of the defendants in the action of Winlaw versus Kinney & Landis of Crescent Valley, for $5500 damages for an alleged breach of contract, which was begun before Mr. Justice D. A. McDonald, yesterday at the reopening of the adjourned spring assizes.

The alleged breach was in allowing Doukhobors to remove from the timber limit, which was at Crescent Valley, certain timber that the plaintiff claimed the defendants had sold to him.

The prosecution was in charge of E. P. Dawson, of Brown & Dawson, Nelson, assisted by Douglas Armour, K.C., of Vancouver. James O'Shea, K.C., of O'Shea & Garland, Nelson, conducted the defence.

Six witnesses, all lumbermen, testified for the prosecution. They were John Brown Winlaw, the plaintiff; Andrew Nelson Winlaw, his son; and William Campbell, Martin McDaniel, William A. Verigin, Robert Cunningham, the four latter of Crescent Valley. Only two defence witnesses were heard up to the closing hour last night—Ira Benjamin Landis, a defendant, and John William Sherebinin. The final witnesses for the defence will be heard when court reopens this morning at 10 o'clock.

Eighteen Exhibits

There were 18 exhibits presented to the court, all of them in documentary form. More than half of the exhibits were letters which passed between the plaintiff and the defendant, but a few were contracts between various loggers and pole makers and Kinney & Landis. Mr. Kinney is Joseph Kinney of Nelson.

The court sat from 10 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. to 11 p.m., this being the first night session of the assizes.

Mr. Armour's interpretation of Winlaw's contract with Kinney and Landis, as he outlined it to his lordship, was that it was not intended that timber suitable for making poles should be included in the agreement. The counsel said when Winlaw went in to the limit he found Doukhobors in there making poles which fell within the description of the timber sold to the plaintiff, and Kinney and Landis were responsible.

Winlaw States Control

Mr. Winlaw himself was the first plaintiff's witness, testifying that he gave a contract to some Doukhobors to cut and get out timber on land belonging to Kinney and Landis, knowing at the time the agreement was executed the Doukhobors had a contract with the defendants to get out poles. Kinney and Landis assigned their part of the contract to Winlaw and it was agreed that the latter should take over the Doukhobors' part of the contract.

Mr. Winlaw understood the contractors had finished cutting, and his son was anxious to get them out. Under the agreement of November, 1923, Winlaw had to commence operations on or before September 18, 1924.

Says Landis Refused Him Cedar

On that date he sent his son to the limit and the latter started men cutting logs. Winlaw himself went up early in October and met Landis, who told him he could not cut cedar timber. Three men, McDaniels, Cunningham and Campbell were with him, but Landis led him away from them to speak to him. The defendant asked Winlaw if he had received a letter in regard to the timber cutting, and Winlaw asked why he could not have the timber. The reply was that the defendant had men cutting the timber into poles and he could get twice as much for it.

The witness said he was claiming $5500 on 55,000,000 feet of poles at $1 per 1000 feet, which amount was based on the market price at that time. He thought that the pole timber was all out.

That pole timber sometimes was the top of a tree which would yield some saw logs as well as a pole, was stated by Mr. Winlaw, who said the men who were working there at that time were making poles out of too large trees. He was under the impression that Landis told him he could not have the large cedar timber, and his complaint was that the men working under contract to Landis wanted to take trees that he thought he had bought, and so he had thrown up his contract. He did not know who the contractors were except that they were Doukhobors, and they were cutting poles at the time he had contracted for the timber owned by Kinney and Landis. The Doukhobors then stopped hauling out poles, and although there were two months in the spring when it was impossible to haul because of the condition of the roads, there were four months that no poles came out of the bush.

Bought Out Defendants

In the contract with Landis, Winlaw had bought Kinney's and Landis' half interest in the poles, and later had bought the Doukhobors' interest. He believed the Doukhobors had agreed to have the poles out by the first of June, and when they stopped hauling he thought they had thrown up their contract.

In his letters Landis had said Winlaw could have the poles and logs remaining on the land, but when he did not get his price had shut down on him.

Winlaw Jr., Paid Douks

Andrew Nelson Winlaw, son of the plaintiff, stated that the Doukhobors had hauled out nearly 3000 poles, but they would not sort them into the proper classes. They were being paid steadily, but were doing very little work, and Landis wrote to him to stop paying them. He did so, and the men scattered until there was nothing doing at all.

In June he had been asked to meet them, and Mr. Landis was their spokesman, insisting on payment for the poles at the railway siding. He told them that if they would straighten things out he would pay. He got their statement and paid them.

The timber and the buildings on the limit had been insured for $12,000, and Kinney and Landis were to pay half the premium, getting half the insurance if anything happened to the limit.

He said he gave the Doukhobors what he thought was coming to them, and there was no dispute. He also bought the poles they had left in the bush. They had cut large trees and take off the tops for poles. Others had been cut and left lying there because they were unsuitable — he had no idea how many, but there were quite a number.

Mr. Winlaw jr., testified he shipped a load of poles the Doukhobors loaded, and Cherenkoff, who had the contract, sent invoices to both him and Landis. There was some difference of opinion as to what should be paid for the load, but that had been cleared up.

There were not 500 poles left in the bush, but more could be made by cutting large trees and using the tops. Over 300 of the poles which had been hauled out had been turned down by the inspector because of faults in them.

J. B. Winlaw was recalled and explained the specifications regarding salable poles. More than half the timber in the limit was cedar, he said.

Campbell Confirms Statement

William Campbell, a sawyer employed by the Winlaws, stated he had been with the elder Winlaw when he visited Landis, and heard the latter tell Mr. Winlaw he could not have the cedar in the limit. He had gone into the bush and measured some of the poles, finding that some of them were bigger than the specifications called for.

William Verigin, a woodsman, stated he had been employed, together with John Voinon and his brother, to cut poles for Winlaw and had cut nearly 900.

Martin McDaniels had been with Winlaw and Campbell when he went to see Landis, but did not hear what was said.

Robert Cunningham of Crescent Valley had also been with the others, and he estimated the timber on the limit to be about 10,000,000 feet. The poles had been cut off because they were defective, and poor workmanship had spoiled the value of a lot of them.

Defence Say Wrong Men Sued

Mr. O'Shea, stating his defence, said it was a fact that Winlaw had agreed to buy Kinney and Landis' half interest in the poles. They were to receive statements from Winlaw as he shipped the poles. If Cherenkoff had not stayed with the terms of his contract, Winlaw should complain about Cherenkoff, not about Landis and his partner. The witnesses for the prosecution had brought in the conversation between Winlaw and Landis but the letter immediately preceding that conversation refuted what they had said. Kinney and Landis had not done anything that was a breach of their contract nor had they interfered with the operations. As far as they knew, Cherenkoff was not committing a breach of his contract.

Landis' Version

I. B. Landis, one of the defendants, stated he had given contracts to a number of Doukhobor contractors to take out poles and they were working when he made the contract with Winlaw. Winlaw had bought the partners' half interest in the poles, and the defendant had nothing further to do with them. He only got about a third of the market price for his interest, but he thought the sacrifice well worth while because Winlaw was going to clean up the limit.

He saw how the Doukhobors were cutting the poles, and it was in accordance with his understanding of the agreement. As far as he knew they had cut nothing which was not entirely pole timber.

It was impossible to haul either in the spring or the fall on account of the conditions of the roads, so they had to cut in the summer and haul in the winter. Cherenkoff had been making poles all the time until the snow came, and then he started to haul, doing this until the end of February. He was not hauling during March and April but started again in May.

Mr. Landis said that in a letter to Winlaw he stated that, after the Doukhobors finished cutting, Winlaw could cut timber for either logs or poles as he saw fit.

Winlaw Was "Cross"

Winlaw wanted to take all that was not then cut but he did not offer a proper price. He came to visit him and was very "cross." Landis said he never told him he could not cut cedar timber, and Winlaw did not say he had bought the timber. Not a word was spoken about it or the poles.

The contractors who were cutting poles had cut some large trees, but that was a common practice, and they had also cut some trees which were rotten at the top and could not be used for poles. One tree out of 100 would be rotten. The price of poles was such that the Doukhobors could cut almost any size tree and get a 60 foot pole out of it and afford to sacrifice the butt.

Logs From Old Operations

The witness stated he himself had cut a number of poles nearby and had left them there to spoil.

He knew nothing of Cherenkoff's shipment of poles until after they had been loaded, and then he told the contractor to give Winlaw an accounting. He himself received a statement of the shipment.

Loan to Cherenkoff

Mr. Landis gave an account of a loan of $900 he made in the fall of 1924 to Cherenkoff, who said his poles were tied up in the bush and he wanted to get out enough for the winter haul. There were a number of poles piled at the railway siding and he expected payment for them, but until he got it he would need some money to carry on with.

He took a statement from Cherenkoff to show that he had received the money.

The witness counted 388 poles at the siding of which 68 were subsequently paid for. Of the balance, the witness said 75 were still there, some of which were spoiled by sap rot.

He said under a contract of a year before a man named Renwick piled in a meadow a number of poles, and Shearer Brothers hauled those away under Winlaw's orders. He was not aware whether there had been any settlement for those poles.

Winlaw's Letters Got Worse

Under cross-examination by Mr. Armour, Mr. Landis said he had known Mr. Winlaw for some time, and had heard hard things about him but knew nothing himself.

There was nothing in the first letter to take offence at, but the letters got worse. From the time Mr. Winlaw took out the contract he was after the witness trying to make him break it.

Cherenkoff would probably have gone on cutting without the money loaned him, said the witness, but it helped him. He said Cherenkoff and another Doukhobor, John W. Sherbinen, recently drew up another contract for poles and merchantable timber on the limit in question.

Sherbinin Saw Only Spoiled Poles

John Sherbinen testified in October of 1924 he went over the limit at Winlaw's orders with a view to taking out a contract for logging it but did nothing.

He was working on the land now and had seen no piling. There were some rotten trees and a number of butts, but no more than was ordinarily the case where pole makers had been at work.

There were some manufactured poles in the bush, but they were spoiled. Mr. Sherbinen said he considered pole timber anything less than two feet at the butt.

Careful Before Uses Personal Influence, Says

OTTAWA, May 20.—I shall be very careful before I promise to use any personal influence in regard to railway rates, said Hon. C. A. Dunning, minister of railways, in the house today, in answering a request from Dr. O. B. Price, Conservative, Westmoreland, that people in the middle west should be given excursion fares to the maritime provinces on as low a basis as they are carried to the Pacific coast.

The minister explained that railway rates were governed by a method and a rule which could not be influenced, and he, for one, would hesitate to try and interfere with the system.

BOSWELL PROPERTY CHANGES OWNERS

Captain Hyatt and Captain Ellis Dispose of Their Properties

BOSWELL, May 20. — This month has seen a good deal of real estate change hands in Boswell. Capt. P. T. Hyatt was the first to sell his ranch here, the purchaser being A. H. Ascott, who has taken immediate possession. The property consists of 15 acres, of which seven are cleared and five planted to young sweet cherries, pears and apricots, also a large patch of bearing strawberries and blackberries. Water is piped on to the orchard, and there are two lines of overhead irrigation pipes. Mr. Ascott has farmed for a number of years in Saskatchewan, but has spent the last two years in England, and assisted with the C.P.R. exhibit at Wembley. He will shortly be joined by Mrs. Ascott and his young son, who are at present visiting in the east.

Capt. Roland Ellis has also disposed of his property in Boswell, the portion of the estate lying above the local highway comprising some 210 acres, together with two small bungalows and stables, etc., has been purchased by T. J. Jacks, who intends to develop same. The main residence, together with two large greenhouses and about three acres of garden fronting on to the main Kootenay lake, have become the property of E. Home of Cranbrook, who intends to use it as a summer residence.

Liquor shipment ticketed from Pennifield, N.B., to Toronto, valued at $50,000, is held at St. John.

CHAPTER IX

Before Mark had been at home 48 hours he had begun to hate it.

A queer restlessness possessed him—he could not settle to anything. In a vague way he wondered if it could be that he was homesick for Osterway and his life there. If any one had told him a week ago that such a thing was possible, he would have scorned the idea; he would have protested that any spot in the whole world must be preferable to Mrs. Jope and the vicarage. Now he was less sure; distance, and the knowledge that he was never to return to it, lent the quiet little village a dignity and desirability all its own. Now and again he thought of the woods and trees and the green meadows with a sort of angry pain. Though his own home was in the country, it was in a more prim and populated district, and as Mark was known to every one for miles around as his father's son, it seemed almost impossible to escape for a moment from observant eyes. Miss Midian had taken care that most people should share her opinion of Mark, and to Mark's astonishment he realised that he was supposed to be a sort of prodigal son who for his sins had been banished into a far country. This he did not particularly mind—it seemed rather a good joke, but after a day or two its novelty palled, and he grew depressed and irritable.

"When am I going to school again?" he asked his aunt one morning, encountering her in the grapehouse, where she was carefully counting the bunches of ripening fruit to make sure that neither Mark nor either of the gardeners could cut any without her knowledge.

Miss Midian frowned; the question had upset her calculations, and it meant commencing her task all over again.

"Little boys should be seen, and not heard," was her icy response.

"I'm not a little boy," said Mark sulkily.

He lounged away, hands in pockets, and went in search of the head gardener.

Jeffries was carefully syringing his carnations, of which he was inordinately proud.

"They was your mother's favorite flowers, Master Mark," he told Mark, when after a moment the boy asked disparagingly why they were treated with such exaggerated care.

"Get away!" he said; then, with supreme disgust, "You don't remember my mother."

Jeffries smiled, his brown, weather-beaten face wrinkled up like an apple that has been stored in straw all the winter.

"Don't I?" he said indulgently. "Not when I cut all the white flowers for her wedding bouquet—cut 'em all with my own hands, I did, from these very houses!"

Mark sat down on the edge of the rain-water tank and stared at his feet.

"What was she like?" he asked interestedly.

"Very like you, Master Mark," he said at last; "only more so, in a manner of speaking." There was a little silence.

"She died when I was born, didn't she?" said Mark awkwardly.

"She did," said Jeffries. "And then I cut all the white carnations we'd got in the houses to put in her coffin, poor lady."

Mark put the toe of his boot into the water thoughfully.

"Was Aunt Midian here then?" he asked.

Jeffries nodded.

Another silence.

"I'll bet she hated my mother," Mark said energetically, with sudden illumination.

Jeffries looked mildly surprised. "Now why should you think that, Master Mark?"

Mark laughed.

"Because she hates me," he said lugubriously. "Not that I care if she does hate me, hoary old ass!"

Jeffries chuckled.

"Well, people can't live for ever, Master Mark," he said by way of consolation.

"Aunt Midian will, though," Mark declared.

He followed Jeffries from the carnation house. "I shan't live here when I grow up," he said presently in lordly fashion. "I shall live in London—I shall have a flat in the noisiest street I can find, and have dinner parties every night."

"You'll soon get tired of that," said Jeffries emphatically. "You'll soon want your own home to settle down in, and a wife to settle you down, Master Mark."

Mark said "Rot! I hate women!"

Jeffries looked at him tolerantly. "And how many might you have known, now?" he asked, with mild sarcasm.

Mark began to enumerate.

"There's Aunt Midian for one, and Mrs. Jope—and——" He paused. "Oh, lots of others," he added airily. "And they're all the same! I hate 'em!"

Jeffries was carefully stoking the greenhouse stove.

"Well, I've known two good 'uns," he said; "and one of 'em I married when I was 21, and the other one married me when I was 50."

"Have you had two wives?" he asked.

"I have, Master Mark—two good 'uns!"

"And which one did you like best?" Mark inquired.

Jeffries straightened his back and scratched his chin with a horny finger.

"It's hard to say, Master Mark," he said, after due consideration. "When I was 21 I thought there was no one like Annie Elizabeth; pretty as a picture she was, with curly hair, and a way of asking to be kissed that would have melted the heart of a turnip." He paused reminiscently and shook his head. "But now I'm 55—and—well, I always had a weakness for a steak and kidney pudding, and the second Mrs. Jeffries, she's a rare hand at suet crust!"

"She makes topping cakes," Mark agreed.

He picked up a pebble, aimed it at a sparrow and missed.

"What did Annie Elizabeth die of?" he asked interestedly.

Jeffries considered again; it seemed that the memory of Annie Elizabeth had got pushed so far back in his mind that he found it difficult to drag it again into the light of day.

"She caught a chill," he said at last. "She got her feet wet, coming over the fields one November night to meet me from work, and they settled on her lungs."

"Her feet did?" Mark asked, with a grin.

Jeffries looked reproachful.

"I was talking of the chill, Master Mark?" he said, with dignity.

He shut the door of the stove with a snap and moved on, Mark close at his heels.

"I'll bet," Mark said presently—"I'll bet the present Mrs. J. wouldn't risk getting her feet wet, walking over the fields to meet you, would she?"

"No," said Jeffries, with a sort of pride. "She 'ave too much sense, Master Mark. . . . A very sensible woman she is, in all ways; and I hope when your times comes, that you'll choose one as sensible, I'm sure."

Mark thought of Mrs. Jeffries; she could certainly make topping cakes, but she was fat, and she had what Mark called "raked" hair, strained back from a bony forehead and tortured into a tight, tiny knob on top of her head.

Somehow the description of Annie Elizabeth, with her curly hair, and her "way of asking to be kissed," appealed to him much more strongly.

"Bishop says," he remarked presently, with apparent irrelevance, "that a man can have any woman he likes."

"Master Bishop talks without his book," said Jeffries severely. "Let's hope he'll learn sense afore he's much older."

"He knows you don't like him," said Mark.

"Being not the only one neither," Jeffries answered bluntly, "A selfish—greedy——" He broke off, with a sort of intolerant growl.

"Woman always like him, anyway," said Mark, with a sort of pride in being able to admit this fact of his friend. "Mrs. J. liked him better than me at Osterway, and even Aunt Midian was decent to him when he came here last holidays. He told me she gave him a quid when he went away—she's never given me one."

"Which is neither here nor there," Jeffries maintained firmly. "And from what I know of Master Bishop, I should say it's quite likely as he asked her for it!"

Mark chuckled.

"I might ask till I was black in the face and I'd never get it," he said. "Jeffries, what would you do if you were married to a woman like Aunt Midian?"

Jeffries shook his head.

"It's hard to say, Master Mark," he answered diplomatically.

"Is it?" said Mark, with scorn. "I know what I'd jolly well do—I'd throw her to the dogs like they did with what's-her-name, in the Bible."

"Good God, Master Mark!" said Jeffries in horror.

Mark grinned. "I knew you'd say that if I waited long enough," he said complacently.

'Pygmalion' Proves Great Hit in Trail; Theater Is Packed

TRAIL, May 20. — Playing to a packed house here tonight in Liberty theater, the University players scored a well merited success with "Pygmalion." Their interpretation of this romantic comedy was a mirth provoking exhibition all through and genuinely pleased the big Trail audience. They played under the auspices of the I.O.D.E.

Music was supplied by the G.W.V.A. orchestra, who also contributed an appropriate overture, "Galatea."

After the show the cast became the guests of the I.O.D.E. at a reception in Memorial hall. They were received by Mrs. P. W. Bingay, who was assisted by Mesdames E. Kennedy, R. Devitt, A. E. Allison and E. M. Stiles.

Pleads Guilty to Four Charges of Uttering Checks

VANCOUVER, May 20.—Admitting a record since 1910 of passing worthless checks, H. G. Galloway, arraigned before Magistrate H. C. Shaw, today, pleaded guilty to four charges of false pretences involving a total of $200.90 and was remanded until tomorrow for sentence. Galloway was arrested in Lethbridge in February and was brought back to this city Monday last. He told Magistrate Shaw that upon completion of the sentence to be passed on him, he would rejoin his wife in England.

ARTHUR MEETS HALL TONIGHT ON TRAIL MAT

Middleweight Wrestling Title for the Dominion Is at Stake

TRAIL, May 21.—They are both set for tonight's big go, and all Trail's army of mat fans are eagerly awaiting the gong that will set the middleweight wrestling championship of Canada oscillating.

"Fine, couldn't be better," sung out Ernie Arthur, the ex-champ, every time he was queried on his condition and hopes of regaining his laurels today.

"Feel like a million dollars, an' know my man," chortled Frank Hall, the new champ, answering the same oft-propounded query with similar alacrity.

And the fans departed reassured that their own man has already got the title safe in his mit. But they are going to see him strut his stuff tonight just the same. It is not often they get a chance to see a championship bout. To miss it—but there's no chance.

Both in the Pink

Both boys took their last public workout in Memorial hall last night, and were seen to be in the pink. Hall, following his usual regimen, took his half-hour Swedish exercises on his bed, before breakfast, got away with his last and hind quarter of beef, and in hour or so later was running up and down the few hundred steps on Tadanac hill, to "improve his eyesight," as he explained. He then sauntered out to Columbia Gardens and back to get his mail and felt prime for his second meal. Last night he showed the squeamish fans just how to squash a man's head to pulp without disarranging his hair.

Little Ernie amused along similar lines. A truckload of baby silver seemed to him just the thing to play with. He almost cried when they wouldn't let him have it, and shunted him along toward the crane yard to juggle with six-foot pulleys. Then he mauled his partners in the gym so scandalously they quit and told him if he felt like that, to take it out on Frank Hall. Which is what Ernie figures on doing tonight.

It has all been very interesting to the fans. They know all the favorite holds of both men. That is they know every one they have been shown. But when Mister Ernie Arthur and Mister Hall, clawing like hyenas tonight, slip into the holds they really favor—then what?

Howard Rayner, well-known Rossland grappler, will referee this bout. An interesting card of preliminaries, wrestling and boxing has been arranged. Ed Girard and Ernie Payne, are on for a best-two-out-of-three.

Harry Leckie, 140-pounder wrestles a tough looking recruit, who is modest about his name.

Eric Olsen and Bob Adams, welters, are on for a to the best two.

Red Weir is on to knock the freckles off Koyo Pop, another white hope, in a three-round go with the leather amongst others.

Men Not Reengaged Not Nearly as Many as Those Working

LONDON, May 20.—Just before adjournment until June first was moved in the house of commons, Arthur Henderson called attention of the government to alleged cases of victimization of men returning to work since the strike.

Ronald F. McNeil, financial secretary, declared the government had departed from the premier's lead. Large numbers of men had not been reengaged.

The cases mentioned by Mr. Henderson, it was said, were insignificant compared with the numbers who had been taken back.

Seek Tariff Change for Epsom Salt; Board Sits Next Thursday

OTTAWA, May 20.—On Thursday, May 27, at 1:30 a.m. the advisory board on the tariff and taxation will sit to consider an application by the Basque Chemical Production company, for tariff adjustment of epsom salt. This hearing will be open and any interested parties are invited to attend and to present their views upon the application.

NO SETBACK TO LABOR, HE STATES

LONDON, May 20.—Those who imagine that the Labor movement suffered a setback in the recent general strike are greatly mistaken, says a manifesto issued here today by the Independent-Labor party. The manifesto declared that whatever disappointment is at present aroused the recent remarkable demonstration of comradeship of the workers cannot fail to influence the whole future Labor movement.

SPECIAL TRAINS TO BE ASKED FOR

Carroll vs. Hilt Biggest Event of Big Sport Program

Convention and entertaining programs for the big mining convention to be held in Nelson on July 5, 6 and 7 were planned at a joint committee meeting of Rotarians, Gyros, Elks, board of trade, chamber of mines, and the Prospectors' protective association in the board of trade rooms last night.

Two Specials Probable

Probably two special trains will be run to Nelson during the convention. It was stated there was talk of Rossland prospectors running a special train during one of the three days. George Horstead, manager of the convention, stated that July 5 being Americans' Day, he would apply to the Great Northern railway for a special train from Spokane to be run to Nelson on Sunday, July 4, returning July 5. He said a special train would bring in a lot more people, and there were many who wanted to attend the convention.

Ask Convention Rates

Mr. Horstead stated he has written to both the Canadian Pacific and Great Northern railways asking for special convention rates during these three days.

Permission has been granted to the convention for the use of the Recreation grounds and the fair building during the convention.

A big attraction has been lined up for the first night of the convention. It is the long awaited fight, Jimmie Cottrell of Spokane versus Frank Hilt of Trail, promoted by R. E. Kirby, local fight promoter. This fight will bring many fans from Spokane and Trail. It will be the main attraction in the boxing card.

Trip to Blue Bell

On Tuesday afternoon the visitors and Nelsonites will be taken on a steamer excursion up to the Blue Bell mine at Riondel, and will be shown the mine in operation. Entertainment will be plentiful during the trip on the boat.

A huge smoker is being arranged to follow the fight on the first night, a convention dance for the second night, and a banquet for the third and last night.

Three Bands in Parade

The newly organized Canadian Legend Bugle Band has promised to do its share in the big parade during the afternoon of the opening day. The Nelson City band will be kept busy during the three afternoons and evenings. C. Dicker, Elks' representative, stated the Trail Elks' band has promised to stage concerts or parades in Nelson free of charge, and he would ask them to take part in the parade. It is a 35-piece silver band.

A real old-time miners' and prospectors' parade will be held on the first afternoon, accompanied by the bands. Prizes will be given for the most original prospectors' makeup. From some of the stories heard at the meeting some real good costumes will be on hand. Prizes will also be given for the best float, and it is hoped there will be many entries.

On Wednesday afternoon, the third day, the Nelson ball nine will play against an outside team. Arrangements are being made to bring in a team from the United States.

Fire Brigades to Compete

Manager Horstead has written to the fire chiefs of both Rossland and Trail asking if they could enter a team in the hub-and-hub race. The Nelson fire department will be represented by an auto. This will be an interesting race, the reels being pulled by teams of six men to a fire hydrant, the hose attached, and the water turned on.

The Northwest Mining association of Spokane will take full charge of the opening day. During the morning session Spokane speakers will talk on mining matters. Similar talks are being arranged by the convention committee for the second and final morning session.

Minerals exhibits from all over the district will be on display in the fair building during the three days.

A letter has been written to Hon. William Sloan, minister of mines, asking him to come to Nelson to open the convention, but as yet no word has been received from him. Mayor J. A. McDonald will also give an opening address.

Many Prospectors' Competitions

Prospectors' competitions will be staged during the three afternoons, and big money is offered for prizes. The events arranged are: Single jack drilling contest, bannock baking contest, 100-yard prospectors' race, endurance race, obstacle race, packing contest, tug-of-war between prospectors and city of Nelson employees, double drilling contest, hub-and-hub, and wet test.

An 18-Carat Canadian

"Although I am not a Canadian by birth or heritage, I am an 18-carat Canadian by affection. I don't believe there is a Canadian who loves Canada more than I do."

The sincerity of Lord Byng, in his utterance quoted above, made in his farewell to Victoria at a Canadian club gathering, cannot be questioned. From a full heart, the gallant British soldier made this confession, in an informal aside and prelude to his prepared address.

It is safe to say, it is the part of his remarks that will be remembered by Victorians, and will live.

How many native born Canadians, and how many Canadians by adoption can say with sincerity of heart that they are 18-carat Canadians by affection?

Let us hope the great majority can.

But the Canadian who cannot believe in the future of his country, who sees other countries on this continent as lands of opportunity, but not his own, who ridicules Canadian history and traditions, who flouts Canadian laws, is a weak alloy, and there is a good deal of base metal in him.

We all know Canadians who are hoping to get away from Canada, or at least talk that way, whose vision of their country, that spans the continent, is of village-size, who can't imagine that in a generation from now Canada's population might double or double twice, or cannot conceive of their country being economically independent.

We also know Canadians to whom Canada means their own province or their own industry or their own interest.

The knocking-Canadians, the wanting-to-get-away Canadians, and the little-Canadians all have something to learn from our departing governor-general, whose acquaintance with Canadian men started in the fall of 1916 under stern conditions, and whose acquaintance with Canada has been of only five years' duration.

"I leave Canada a bloated optimist about your country," was the way he introduced the affectionate expressions first above quoted.

We should all be "bloated optimists," we should all be "sold" on our country!

Eventually a Settlement Organization—Why Not Now?

Are the Kootenay communities interested in securing settlement?

Are they at some time going to consider concerted action?

Within a month the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia will be in session at Nelson. As The Daily News pointed out some time ago, the delegates to this convention could well be delegates also to a Kootenay gathering to consider formation of an organization whose sole preoccupation would be a systematic and continuous campaign for settlement.

Any public body that is willing to sponsor a proposal for such a gathering should act quickly.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Turning the Mind Outward

The man or woman who thinks constantly of what and what not to eat, who gives careful attention to every little symptom, who constantly "examines his interior when he should be listening to the birds," is in a bad plight. He bids fair to become a nervous or, to use the modern term, an emotional dyspeptic.

The above is from a handbook, "Byways to Health," and tries to tell us once more that the nervous individual should have his eyes turned toward the outer world, toward Nature, if he would enjoy health.

This business of counting the calories, getting the absolutely correct number of each of the different types of food, was only meant for the sick or those recovering from illness.

The first necessity for real digestion and absorption of food is to have a mind absolutely free from worries and cares, particularly free from any questionings as to just what or what not to eat.

If you sit down and find that there is too much meat, not enough butter, too much bread, not enough vegetables to fulfill your ideas as to your needs, then you begin to "pick" a little of this and that, and food becomes a sort of mental instead of a physical repast.

If you are a "picky" eater, spread your meals apart, get outdoors for a while before you eat, and remember that you should think of your daily food needs as covering three meals, and thus you will surely get the variety necessary.

The idea behind the opening statement above is that if the mind is occupied during meals, particularly with cares, or questions as to the food being suitable as to nourishment and ease of digestion, then the most valuable part of digestion is going to be lost.

I pointed out once before that our research men have been able to demonstrate that ease of mind, the enticing appearance of well-cooked food, pleasant surroundings, all had a most remarkable effect upon the brain, and the brain in turn sent down strong impulses to the stomach walls and stomach juice, with the result that the stomach walls worked vigorously, and the juice poured out abundantly, and the food thus got a flying start in the digestive process. But where the mind is not at ease, and the food arouses doubts, then these impulses from the brain are much less numerous and vigorous, and food that should be out of the stomach in two or three hours may lie there twice as long.

So when you sit down to eat, try to remember the suggestions of our research men.

It will repay you mentally and physically.

Only China Can Save China, States Returned Missionary From Honan

VANCOUVER, May 20. — "China's cup of bitterness is not yet full," declared Rev. Arthur Lochead, of Honan, China, in an address here today before the Kiwanis club. "The whole country is utterly undisciplined, and it is not ready to submit to order of any kind."

Rev. Mr. Lochead is returning to Ottawa after 22 years' service as a Presbyterian missionary in China.

On the outline of condtions in China, the minister said there was no central authority and had not been for 15 years.

"Only China can save China," he declared. "It is for us to watch, to sympathize, to try to understand, and to cooperate in any way possible. Interference would be deeply resented."

CRESTON BOARD NAMES DELEGATES

Will Attend Associated Boards Meeting Here; Roadwork Discussed

CRESTON, May 20. — Vice-President James Adlard occupied the chair at the May meeting of Creston board of trade, Tuesday night, which was slimly attended and at which little other than routine business was discussed.

Official notice of the 1926 session of the associated boards of trade at Nelson next month was read. The treasurer was authorized to pay the usual affiliation fee, and President Mallandaine, C. O. Rodgers and C. W. Allan were chosen to represent Creston board at the gathering.

A letter from a gentleman now at Herbert, Sask., wishing to locate 17 families on the land, wrote the board asking what land was available for farming in the Creston district. The secretary was instructed to write him pointing out the possibilities in horticulture on the land within the proposed Arrow creek irrigation district.

Discuss Roads

For the committee on transportation C. F. Hayes reported on an interview had with P. Philip, deputy minister of public works, who was here earlier in the month, at which he had been able to secure favorable consideration of having next year's highway appropriation take care of needed improvements on the roads between Goatfell and Kuskanook — this work, if necessary, to take precedence over the Kuskanook-Gray creek road. So far Mr. Philip has had no word of the final link of the Idaho highway from Copeland to Porthill being gone on with this year. The board will write Mr. Philip and Engineer William Ramsay calling attention to the need of a coating of oil on the rock road from the Constable ranch east.

The necessary motion prevailed that custody of the war souvenir machine guns that have been located in front of the R.C.M.P. barracks for the past few years be turned over to the village council, and be reerected at the town hall site.

MANY AUTO LICENCES OUT IN CRESTON

CRESTON, May 20. — Up till May 15, 170 auto licences have been issued by Provincial Police Officer H. McLaren, out of a prospective total of 200. Mr. McLaren reports that the 10 cents a head bounty on crows does not appear to be enough, as in six weeks he has paid out less than $1 in this connection.

WILLOW POINTERS STAGE A SURPRISE

Adam Cruickshank in Fairview Home Is Honored by Surprise Party

WILLOW POINT, May 20. — One of the most satisfactory and pleasant surprise parties held in these parts was organized by Willow Pointers, and staged at the home of Adam Cruikshank, in Fairview, last night. For several days plans had been carefully laid, and cars enlisted to move Willow Point into Nelson, but Adam was blissfully ignorant of all that was brewing until his home was invaded last night by about 20 old friends.

The event of the evening was the presentation by D. L. Doyle, to Adam, of a handsome club bag on behalf of all his old Willow Point patrons. Mr. Doyle said that it had been felt by those whom Adam had served so cheerfully and so faithfully, that they would like to make him a little present in remembrance of all he had done for them. He said that Adam had been so long on the road between Nelson and Willow Point that it was almost impossible to believe that he had decided to leave it. This was followed by the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and three cheers for Adam, who made a neat little speech in reply. During the evening Adam sang "Loch Lomond" and "My Ain Folk." Edward T. Applewhaite sang, and Mrs. E. H. Applewhaite contributed a recitation. Several of the guests played cards. Dainty, but substantial, refreshments were served, and when the party boarded their cars for Willow Point it was felt that a really successful evening had been held.

Those Attending

Among those who attended were Mrs. I. C. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. C. Shannon, Mrs. H. Middleton, D. L. Doyle, Mrs. J. D. Macdonell, Mrs. D. Heddle, Mrs. E. H. Applewhaite, Edward T. Applewhaite, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wilbur, Rege. E. Hall, Miss Irene Denny, Gilbert Palmer, Miss Louise Palmer, J. Gilroy, Mr. and Mrs. J. Learmonth, Miss Mary Webster, Miss Nissie McRobb, Mrs. A. Cruikshank and Adam Cruikshank.

Adam Cruikshank, in company with his father, the late A. Cruikshank, operated the first regular stage on the Willow Point-Nelson road, starting shortly after the ferry was installed. They used a team for some years, but later a small truck, gradually increasing until the present heavy bus was built. During all these years they never missed a run, "whatever the weather, or however bad the roads might be, Adam always got there," as someone was overheard saying last night.

LARDO MILL HAS REPAIRS COMPLETED

LARDO, May 20. — The Newcomen sawmill has undergone extensive improvements under the supervision of J. Hueston, and sawing is expected to commence about June 1. Mr. Hueston has chosen a full crew.

Among the arrivals during the past week were F. B. Scott and J. Foy of the C.P.R. telegraph, R. C. St. Clair, J. B. Conway, G. Palethorpe of the forest department, Mr. Oughtred, mining engineer.

Father McIntyre is visiting his parishioners in this locality.

PROCTER LADIES HAVE LAST GUILD MEETING

PROCTER, May 20. — The ladies of the United Church guild held their last meeting at the home of Mrs. M. McKinnon on Thursday afternoon. The sale for the end of the month was discussed and all work finished. Mrs. McKinnon served delightful refreshments. Those present were Mrs. G. Kinney, Miss T. Parkinson, Mrs. H. Severn, Mrs. W. Donaldson, Miss J. McLean, Mrs. G. Edgcumbe, Miss R. Bennett, Mrs. R. A. Heighton, Mrs. Muirhead, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. J. Sewell, Miss Helen Sewell, Mrs. H. A. McCarthy, Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. A. G. Gallup and Mrs. M. McKinnon.

HUMAN STORAGE BATTERY BEING PUZZLED OUT

Electric Fish Studied for Light May Throw on Subject

NEW YORK, May 20.—Dunces of today may become the 'bright boys" of tomorrow and thinkers of the future may think bigger and better thoughts when modern science masters the electrical design of the human body.

Long baffled by the secret, today scientists here and abroad are beginning to piece out the puzzle of the human storage battery. In one laboratory the current of a nerve of the body has been caught on a wireless receiving apparatus, according to scientific data just made public.

Elsewhere the "cells" of the body's battery have been shown to be "dead" unless surrounded by a suitable current carrier.

Every day has become fish day in another laboratory, where electric fish are studied for the light they may throw on the human society.

Through the new knowledge scientists say it may be ultimately possible to cure or relieve types of mental disorder which are today incurable. Mental fatigue in normal people may be greatly reduced, and mental classifications may be raised.

Dr. E. D. Adrian, fellow of the Royal society, in London, has reported the analysis of the electrical impulse from a single nerve fiber with wireless receiving apparatus.

Oxygen Theory

Shiro Tashiro, a Japanese scientist at the University of Cincinnati, has demonstrated that the nerve will not conduct unless surrounded by a medium containing an ample supply of oxygen. This suggests a reason why some persons think and react more rapidly than others, whose blood supply might be deficient in oxygen.

For some time it has been clear that every impulse passing along a nerve fiber is accompanied by electrical changes not unlike the passage of an electrif current along a wire. Unlike the wire current, however, the nerve current does not appear to lose in intensity between the source of the impulse and the nerve end.

Scientists suspect that the nerve, carrier of the commands of the brain to the muscles which execute them, may have a way of regenerating the current analogous to the vacuum cup amplifiers of the inanimate long distance telephone.

Although the nerve impulse travels more slowly than the commercial current, the slogan "Don't write—Telegraph" still carries weight in matters of brain-to-muscle transmission. In some of the human nerves the rate is as high as 100 meters a second. In the nerves of the sympathetic nervous system, however, the rate is from 10 to 100 times slower.

Better Studied in Fishes

This might mean, the scientists say, that if it were not for time lost in execution, we should be able voluntarily to move a hand faster than we would involuntarily snatch it from a hot stove.

The origin of nerve currents is being studied in electrical fishes by Dr. Ulrich Dahlgren, professor of biology at Princeton university. In these fish of "electric personality," the organs which produce the electric charges, capable of giving severe shocks, consist of membranes upon each side of which are chemicals of different composition. Through the membrane there is an exchange of ions, or electrically charged particles of the molecules.

The net result is that on one side of the membrane ions bearing negative charges of electricity accumulate. When the signal is given by the central nervous system of the fish, this negative charge of electricity is discharged over a nerve thickly insulated so that practically none of the charge will be lost in transmission.

Work being done in a number of laboratories seeks to learn whether the sense organs of the human system produce similar charges, through which the brain is signalled when the organ is irritated.

Not long ago a prominent scientist placed himself on record among the poets by stating that a kiss carried an electrical charge, transmitted in the moisture of the lips.

S. in England, the organization for the maintenance of supplies, which assisted the government organization to keep essential services moving when a general strike was called. Ball Players Are Carefree and Humorous

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher, N. Y. Giants)

Professional ball players have to be serious only about three hours a day, and plenty of leisure time combined with youth makes them as carefree as a bunch of college freshmen.

A favorite diversion, that shows ball players have their own sense of humor, is dropping a laundry bag filled with several gallons of water from the fourth or fifth-story window of a hotel on the unsuspecting bean of fellow players or others. Sherwood McGee pulled this on Eppa Rixey several years ago and it took five minutes to pry Eppa's straw hat off of his ears.

When a player is reading a newspaper in the lobby of the hotel and gloating over his base-hits in the box score, one of his teammates will set fire to his paper.

Sammy Bohne pulled this on Jakie May of the Reds. Jakie calmly dropped the paper on the rug and walked away, leaving it burning. The hotel manager was horrified. Stamping out the fire, he read the riot act to May.

Jake invited him outside to fight. "Are you going out?" he yelled at the hotelman.

"No, but you are," he answered.

Jack Hendricks, the team's manager, had an awful time placating him and keeping him from running the whole club out of the hotel.

CONCENTRATOR BEATS WYCLIFFE STALWARTS

KIMBERLEY, May 20.—The Concentrator added another victory to their string Tuesday night, when they stepped out and outslugged the fast Wycliffe aggregation, to gain a 10-4 victory. Both Dunlop and Musser, who divided the pitching for the locals, were in rare form, errors figured in three of the four runs.

CAMBRIDGE HAS AUSTRALIANS GUESSING NOW

Light Blue Captain Runs Up Ninety-three Runs for Team

CAMBRIDGE, May 20.—Eight thousand spectators assembled to watch the second day's play of the fixture between the visiting Australian cricketers and Cambridge university today, were rewarded by a magnificent exposition of the fine points of the game. They saw H. J. Enthoven, the light blue captain, register 93 runs, the highest score that has yet been recorded against the visitors in their present tour.

The day's play yesterday ended with Cambridge at bat with Enthoven standing at 34 and R. W. V. Robbins at 4.

Five wickets had fallen and the collegians total was 134.

Enthoven staged a heroic battle today when the wickets of his colleagues were tumbling around him. After adding five more runs to yesterday's total, Robbins succumbed.

R. J. O. Meyer followed, and was caught, and bowled Richardson when he had attained four. From then on the run getting was left almost entirely to the Cambridge captain. Enthoven, by sheer determination, forced the score higher and higher.

Machin fell to Woodfull with a couple of runs, Ryder delivering the ball. Jagger yielded to a fast one from Ryder when he had made two runs. It was shortly after this that Enthoven's citadel capitulated in the only wicket that Macartney took when the Cambridge skipper was dismissed leg-before-wicket. Enthoven had batted for three hours and a half and had slammed over eight boundaries.

Aussies Try Hard

Facing the task of acquiring 212 runs, the Australians sent in their captain and vice-captain, Collins and Bardsley. Collins' stumps were crashed by Meyer, when the Australian had made eight runs. The heavy-hitting Macartney followed, but Bardsley went under from a catch by Irvine off Enthoven. It was then that the redoubtable Woodfull assumed the bat and scoring became more rapid. Macartney succumbed to Lowe off Meyer, and Ponsford began playing. Matters took on a dull look for the visitors when Ponsford was retired leg-before-wicket, just when he had broken over the double figures. The situation demanded caution, and when Andrews started in partnership with Woodfull, they themselves set to solve Cambridge's bowling. They played carefully and gradually the Australian's score forged ahead. When time was called Woodfull was standing his ground at 64, not out, and Andrews with 25. These players will resume for the visitors tomorrow.

ATHLETES HERE FOR INTERCITY TRACK HONORS

Eight Forks Athletes Here; Trail Coming in Morning

Athletes of the Nelson Central and Hume school performed at the Recreation grounds all through the week, getting into shape for the big first Nelson intercity public schools track meet, which takes place here today. Three towns have entered teams in the meet to compete for athletic honors, Nelson, Trail and Grand Forks.

Four girls, and four boys compose the Grand Forks team. They arrived in Nelson on the Kettle Valley train last night. The Trail team will arrive in the city this morning.

G. E. Sparkes, principal of the Hume school, stated last night he had had no word as to whether Rossland will be entering a team in the meet or not. However, he said if a team arrives this morning it will be allowed to compete for school honors.

The sports start at 9 o'clock this morning and will be going steadily all day, as there are 53 events.

HUGE TURNOVER IN HUDSON MOTORS

Close Is Four Points Higher; Sales Nearly Quarter of Day's Total

NEW YORK, May 20. — An enormous turnover in Hudson Motors, which closed 4 points higher, at 63¾, on total transactions of 303,100 shares or nearly one-fourth of the day's total business, overshadowed all other developments in today's stock market.

Wild fluctuations took place in Hudson as a result of the publication on financial tickers of an erroneous report that the directors had declared only the regular dividend, which was corrected 20 minutes later by the announcement that the regular cash dividend had been raised.

Rails also gave an impression of strength in response to the publication of excellent traffic and earning reports. Buying was spread over a broad list, among the score or so issues to show net advances of 1 to nearly 3½ points being Atchison, New York, Lackawanna, C. P., Chicago & Northwestern, Erie first pfd., Missouri Pacific, Texas & Pacific, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific and New Haven.

Trading in the oil shares was enlivened by a jump of 5¾ points in Atlantic Refining at 123¾, a new high for the year.

Call money renewed at 3½, but advanced to 4 when banks called about $30,000,000 in loans, presumably to strengthen the reserve positions.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Total sales—1,229,700 shares.

Business Facts

AN ESTATE MAY DWINDLE RAPIDLY IF POORLY MANAGED

Proper provision for a widow is not just a large amount of capital.

A man who has safeguarded the future of his family in the event of his death by providing a good sized estate for them, has not finished his job unless he has provided for the administration of that estate.

Capital left by a man may rapidly dwindle through mismanagement. The widow may not know how to handle her money, or it may be inconvenient for her to do so. It is far wiser to leave the estate in the care of a trust company or trusted administrator who will take the burden of management from her shoulders.

The man whose estate is composed largely of life insurance can provide for its disposal so that the insurance company acts in the capacity of administrator. Various plans of insurance payments are offered, which will provide the widow with a monthly life income or with portions of the policy's value at definite periods. One of these plans should be selected in order to negate the chance of the insurance money being wasted through the lack of knowledge of the widow.

COMPLETION OF BAY ROAD URGED BY GARDINER

Saskatchewan Premier Indorses Expenditure; Tells of Tariff Cuts

WINNIPEG, May 20.—Heartily indorsing the declaration of the Dominion government to spend $3,000,000 on the Hudson Bay railway this year, Hon. James G. Gardiner, premier of Saskatchewan, declared this was practically all that could be expended in that time, when addressing the Young Liberal club here tonight.

Premier Gardiner discussed two important questions, the tariff and transportation, and made a rousing appeal for unity on the part of Liberals, under one leader, in the interests of the fundamental policies, especially the principle of Canadian unity.

Tracing the history of the tariff question, Premier Gardiner spoke of the reductions which had been made by Liberal governments, and stated that from 1893 to 1911, the Liberals had actually succeeded in cutting the tariff in two on farm implements. Now the government had made a reduction on automobiles. They had been criticized, but he predicted their wisdom would be demonstrated.

On the transportation question, he urged the completion of the Hudson Bay railway and development of the Canadian National.

As for the feasibility of the Hudson bay route, there was no need for anyone to be concerned about that. If millions of dollars worth of material for construction of the works at Port Nelson could be shipped through the straits, then millions of dollars worth of produce could be shipped out.

TARIFF UPON FRESH MEATS MADE HIGHER

American pork, Mr. Motherwell would be the first to take action.

Mr. Sutherland moved an amendment to strike out three and one-half cents and insert five cents.

Mr. Robb interjected that the amendment was out of order.

Forke Raises Sheep

Robert Forke, Progressive leader, said that much had been said about the ruined sheep industry. He himself raised sheep, and no part of his farm today was as profitable as the sheep. Last year he had received $10.50 apiece for lambs and the cost of maintenance had been only a trifle.

Hon. R. J. Manion, Conservative, Fort William, said that protection would have given Mr. Forke a better price for his lambs.

Mr. Robb said that those who criticized the Australian treaty might not have the opportunity to do so for very long. If the tactics being pursued were continued, Australia might take action and cancel the agreement.

Dr. Manion replied that no man inside or outside of the house had ever heard him attack the Australian treaty.

Mr. Sutherland then entered into a discussion of the Australian treaty. Deputy Speaker Duff stated the treaty was not under consideration and Mr. Sutherland was out of order.

The house then arose for dinner recess.

Four Items Pass

After the dinner recess, the house, in committee of ways and means, passed four items within 20 minutes. These were the items affecting fresh meats, cocoa butter, cocoa powder and cocoa and chocolate preparations.

The last three will give effect to some items in the treaty between Canada and the West Indies, which has not yet been ratified on both sides.

An item admitting green coffee to Canada free under the British preference was passed without opposition. Ginger and spices (unground) are also admitted free under the British preference, as well as unground nutmegs and mace. A British preference duty of ½c per pound on "arrowroot" is removed under another item adopted, and that product admitted free under the British preference. The duty of 1½ cents on the general and intermediate tariff remains.

A new item in the tariff scheduled was passed, that of tree seeds for reforestation purposes only. These seeds are to be admitted free of all duty.

Increase Tariff

The general tariff on cocoa beans, not roasted, crushed or ground, per 100 pounds, is increased from $1.50 to $2. It remains free on the British preference.

The majority of these changes, which quickly passed the committee, were to conform to the terms of the West Indies treaty.

J. E. Armstrong, Conservative, East Lambton, made a plea on behalf of Canadian growers of celery. There was an embargo against Canadian celery in the United States, he said.

Mr. Robb said he had not been aware of this. He promised to look into the matter.

The tariff item which provides for free entry of bananas under the British preference and a duty of 50 cents under the intermediate tariffs aroused a protest from British Columbia members.

Western Members Protest

J. A. Fraser, Conservative, Cariboo, protested against the duty of 50 cents on bananas entering Canada via the United States. Nearly all came into Canada via New Orleans. The duty would add to the cost of bananas for the consumer. Freight rates made it practically impossible to bring bananas from eastern Canadian ports to the west and sell them at a reasonable rate.

Mr. Robb said that the department had been informed that the Fiji Islands could satisfy the western Canadian demand.

Gen. J. A. Clark, Conservative, Vancouver-Burrard, asked how the house was to know that there was a steamship service between the Fiji Islands and Canada whereby the bananas could reach the Canadian market. He declared that the proposal was to provide a tariff to protect the producers of bananas in the West Indies. Bananas in the West Indies were grown and picked by colored labor.

Item Carries

Mr. Robb said that he would not like to be drawn into a commitment to supply bananas to any part of Canada. The question of supply would have to be worked out by the trade. He reminded British Columbia members that their province would derive benefits under the treaty.

The items affecting bananas then carried, as did the others.

Fred Davis, Conservative, East Calgary, said that if Canada would produce her own sugar from home grown sugar beets it would mean the cultivation of 300,000 acres and the employment of 100,000 people. But before this industry could succeed it would need protection. He asked for a kindly hearing to the requests of the sugar beet growers.

All the sugar items passed, and the committee took up the reduction from $10 to $5 per gallon on angostura bitters. The items passed.

Auto Duties Held

The items affecting reduction in automobile duties came next, but the minister suggested that as there would be a good deal of discussion, these items might stand over for tonight. Sir Henry Drayton asked if the ministers had any disclosures to make on the subject, and Mr. Robb replied that he had not.

Machinery used on the farms was then taken up. Pasteurizers for dairying purposes, and equipment for generating electric power for farm purposes only are added under the item to the farm machinery on which the tariff is 5 per cent. British preference, 10 per cent intermediate, and 15 per cent general. The item carried.

MICKEY WALKER LOSES WELTER CROWN, LATZO

Scranton Battler Pounds Way to Decision Over World's Champion

HAS BEST OF BATTLE IN MOST OF ROUNDS

Walker Leads at Infighting; Veteran Seems to Have Lost Pep

SCRANTON, May 20.—Pete Latzo of Scranton, Pa., won the world's welterweight championship tonight when he won the judges' decision in a 10-round match with Mickey Walker, the title-holder for the past four years.

A crowd of 12,000 home town fans went wild as Latzo's hand was lifted in victory after a sensational, slashing battle. The challenger received the unanimous decision of the two judges after a battle that was bitterly fought all the way. Latzo's aggressiveness and ability to trade blows with Walker at every turn gave him the verdict. The result was one of the most sensational upsets in ring history. Walker had decisively beaten Latzo two years ago and was a two to one favorite when they entered the ring tonight. The challenger weighed 146 and Walker 144.

Margin Close

Latzo's margin of triumph, in the opinion of a majority of ringside critics, was close and gained chiefly through a determined, two-fisted attack, that refused to give ground at any stage, coupled with a deadly overhand right that frequently jarred the champion. These sweeping smashes, several of which sent Walker flying back to the ropes, counted heavily in his favor and offset, apparently, the advantages gained by Walker at close quarters.

A majority of ringside critics gave five of the 10 rounds to Latzo, registered three for Walker and scored the other two even.

Latzo's whirlwind finish figured heavily in his victory to overcome Walker's early advantage, gained through the champion's superiority at boxing and infighting, and forced Mickey back repeatedly, with smashing rights to the head and body.

Closing Rally Wins

This closing rally by the challenger roused the big crowd in Colonel Wales' Armory to wild enthusiasm. Sensing that Latzo was punching his way to triumph, the crowd stood on chairs and cheered him on. With this to spur him on, he redoubled his efforts.

It was the first world's title bout Scranton ever witnessed and to have it end in the crowning of a native and favorite son as the new titleholder, was a thrilling climax.

To the experts it was a stunning blow, for Walker had beaten Latzo decisively once before but the challenger was a different fighter tonight—equally as rugged, more aggressive than before, and capable of outpointing the champion, who unmistakably lacked the fiery qualities that carried him to the hope of the 147 pound division.

Latzo, although only 23 years of age, has been in the boxing game for seven years and figured in about 100 battles. He climbed up the welterweight scale in the past three years although he was abruptly checked in his rise in 1923 by Walker, then holder of the title, only a few months. Latzo kept after the top notchers. He met defeat from Frankie School and William Harmon in 1924, from Morrie Schaffer and Billy Wells in 1925, but in each case the Scranton boy came back to turn the tables against them. In defeating Walker tonight, he maintains his usual record of squaring accounts with men who have beaten him.

Won From Britton

Walker won the title in 1922 from the veteran Jack Britton winning the judges' decision in a 15-round match in New York.

Preliminaries—In the three six-round preliminaries Solly Castellini, Newark, 130 3-4, gained the judges' decision over Joe Bush, of Shenandoah, Pa., 129 3-4.

Buck Boyle of Allentown, Pa., 135 1-4, won the decision from Pep O'Brien, 135.

Ty Coleman, Scranton, outpointed Willie Woods of Scotland in six rounds of wild slugging.

PRAIRIE CITIES PLAN HOCKEY LOOP

Pro Circuit Will Embrace Several Centers; Will Play Off for Stanley Mug

MOOSE JAW, May 20. — Lloyd Turner, Calgary hockey magnate, tonight made application for a franchise for the Calgary Tigers in the proposed five-team prairie professional hockey loop, and Col. W. E. Seaborn, president of the loop, said this action assured the success of the circuit. He announced that Deacon White and Barney Stanley have both sent in applications for a franchise for the Edmonton and the Moose Jaw teams. The Saskatoon Sheiks and the Regina Capitols have already secured franchises.

Colonel Seaborn stated the clubs in the prairie circut wil be recognized and players protected from contract jumping offers and that the winner of the circuit would be eligible for the Stanley playoffs. Colonel Seaborn said that while the applications of the Edmonton and Calgary teams were subject to approval by the league executive, that he had no doubt that they would be granted.

It is expected that the recruiting of new players for the new circuit will commence immediately.

Realizes Fumes in Car, Drives Self and Friend to Hospital; Revived

WINNIPEG, May 20.—Nearly overcome by monoxide gas fumes while driving his closed car, Paul Gaspared today saved himself and a companion from death by doggedly clinging to the steering wheel until he had reached the gates of the St. Boniface hospital.

He succeeded in opening the door of the car and dragging out his unconscious friend. He managed to crawl to the hospital doors, where he swoomed. Attendants came to the aid of the pair and succeeded in reviving them after several hours' treatment.

SIR JOHN SIMON MAY LEAD THE LIBERALS

Much Dissension in Liberal Ranks Over Lloyd George's Strike Attitude

LONDON, May 20.—The attitude of former Premier Lloyd George toward the general strike has thrown the same sort of dissensions into his party, the Liberals, as did his famous land policy, but the dissensions have not reached a stage where his position as chairman of the party is threatened and he certainly does not at the present time contemplate resigning.

Lloyd George resented the haste of Lords Oxford and Grey in publishing manifestos on the strike without previously consulting him and other Liberal leaders; consequently, when a meeting of the Liberal leaders was called on May 10 to discuss the policy of the party with relation to the strike, he refused to attend, giving as his reason that a meeting was useless since Lords Oxford and Grey had already committed the party to the policy outlined in their pronouncements.

There is also gossip of a bid being made for the leadership of the party in opposition to Mr. Lloyd George by Sir John Simon, whose striking parliamentary speech declaring the general strike illegal brought him great prestige.

Alberta United Churches Raise Large Sums Money

EDMONTON, May 20. — Out of the total of $160,000 allotted to Alberta as its share of the $4,000,000 budget of the United church at large, there has been actually contributed $118,253 during the financial year recently closed. The givings were 50 per cent more than had ever been raised before by both churches in Alberta for missionary and benevolent work, according to the report of the maintenance and extension fund as presented by Rev. M. Wilson today at the conference of the United church in Alberta.

The allocation was set at $135,000 for the coming year and the conference enthusiastically undertook to work for its realization.

Urges Thanksgiving

Rev. Dr. J. H. Arnup, representing the executive officers in Toronto, announced that the latest figures of the whole church show a total subscription of $3,745,000 on the $4,000,000 aimed at. Certain readjustments in the denominational work had made it possible with this aggregate fund to pay off all deficits and claims on the church to March 31, and as of that date the United church is entirely out of debt.

The observance of Sunday, June 6, as a day of thanksgiving throughout the Dominion, in view of this great success, was being urged, said Dr. Arnup, and he suggested that the Alberta churches adopt the plan.

WINNIPEG, May 20. — Serving an extensive area in Saskatchewan, eminently suitable for wheat raising, a new railway to the Hudson Bay, running along the height of land between the Saskatchewan and Churchill rivers, and having its terminal at Fort Churchill, is foreseen by Hon. ALBERTA WILL SETTLE CLAIM OF ROYAL BANK

Two Offers Made, States Premier as Legislature Again Opens

EDMONTON, May 20. — At the opening of the adjourned session of the Alberta legislature today, Premier Brownlee announced that the Alberta government had decided to settle the claim of the Royal bank in connection with the northern railways on a basis of one of two offers as follows: One million three hundred thousand dollars payable $300,000 in five years, $500,000 in seven years, and $500,000 in 10 years, or in the alternative $1,275,000 in cash. This arrangement had been decided upon after lengthy consultations with eminent legal counsel, including Eugene Lefleur of Montreal.

An agreement in accordance is now being drawn up.

"We are now awaiting the consideration of the new offers, and the reply from Hon. Mr. Dunning," said Mr. Brownlee.

"When these are in hand, we will be in a position to decide whether we shall sell, continue to lease, or operate as a provincial government railway."

Has New Offer

Since returning last week from Ottawa, where he conducted negotiations on railways, Premier Brownlee said he had received a new offer from the C.P.R. for the Dunvegan & Canada Central lines, which he believed would show that the province had not lost anything by delay.

The premier, however, said that an offer from one railway should not be revealed until the other had submitted theirs, and for this reason he did not feel he should yet make public the offer at the present time.

More recently, said the premier, he had written Ottawa again, stating that offers had again been asked of the railways and inquiring if the government had any further proposals, following announcements which had been made by Premier King regarding development of the Peace river.

Replies to these letters had not yet been received.

Tariff War Is On Over the World, Says Fortier at Halifax

HALIFAX, May 20. — "A tariff war is on in the whole world, and we have to adapt ourselves to the conditions created by that course of events," J. H. Fortier, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' association, said today in an address before the Canadian club.

"All things being equal," he proceeded, "I would be inclined to favor free trade and with a scientific exploitation of our natural resources, I dare say that Canada would not be afraid to compete with the best traders on the seven seas and the five continents.

"But free trade is being abandoned everywhere," he said.
