BRIAND OUT; HERRIOT NEW FRENCH PREMIER

SEVENTH FRENCH CABINET FORMED LAST TWO YEARS

Chamber Wouldn't Give Briand Government Power to Save Franc

HERRIOT PLANS A NATIONAL MINISTRY

Public Is Getting Excited; Police Protect the Chamber

PARIS, July 18.—Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber, Radical leader, and former premier, will, at the request of President Doumerge, undertake the task of forming a new ministry, and solving the seventh cabinet crisis which has occurred in France since he first took power a little more than two years ago.

Financial problems which were responsible for the downfall of these governments, reducing the average life of a ministry from nine months to something more than three, have progressively increased the difficulties, until cabinet-making is now generally considered a job for a superman.

Seeks a Union Cabinet

M. Herriot, however, apparently is confident, and his first consultations indicated that he would try to form a union ministry. The general feeling is in favor of a combination, as was before the formation of M. Briand's tenth cabinet, but there is some question as to whether M. Herriot is the man to preside over. There is doubt if such a cabinet could agree.

The Briand-Caillaux cabinet, it is pointed out, fell, not only on the question of "full powers" demanded of parliament, but on the policy of borrowing more money abroad. The solution of the treasury's difficulties regarding the stabilization of the franc is admitted to lie between foreign loans and the financial levy.

The new government's policy, consequently, is regarded as a complication in the formation of a national union cabinet by the president of the chamber. Political experts are widely divergent in their predictions, some of them looking for failure on the part of M. Herriot, to find men and make appointments.

Talk of Poincare

Also, there is talk of a Poincare cabinet, in which Herriot, Painleve and Tardieu would have important portfolios.

The first indication of hostility to M. Herriot as head of a national union ministry came from the national bloc. Louis Marin, the leader of this group, who was more instrumental than Herriot in overthrowing Briand, is an important factor. M. Marin's group, the Republican union, built on the remains of the old National bloc, is second in size in the chamber, numbering 104, as compared with 134 Radicals. Its support is regarded as essential to enable a union cabinet to live.

M. Herriot has the alternative policy of rebuilding the old coalition to the left, but in that case, it is argued, he will be obliged to adopt the social program, with a very slight chance of getting it through the senate.

Crowds Show Hostility

The public, which for two years has watched the passing show of ministerial combinations with passive indifference, has begun to show signs of impatience. The police held close guard over the Rue Du Faubourg Saint Honore in front of Elysee palace today, in consequence of a manifestation last evening hostile to M. Herriot.

Everybody connects the continued downward slide of the franc with the political combinations. Public discussions have become more vigorous lately, and even the guards around the chamber have been reinforced. This precaution is due to the fact that the crowds always waiting before the chamber in the hope of getting a sight of some of the notables, have considerably increased of late, and remarks more or less threatening are frequently overheard.

Every effort will be made to hasten dissolution, so as to forestall its effect on the exchange market. If M. Herriot fails, it is regarded as extremely unlikely that a new government can be formed before Tuesday.

WINDERMERE FIRE OFF TO FRESH START

Saturday Night Winds Set It Off Again; Wardle Creek Center

CALGARY, Alta., July 18.—Roaring into action again after a comparative period of inactivity, forest fires in the vicinity of Wardle creek jumped from the southwest side late Saturday night, and were tearing into the timber lying toward Vermillion crossing on the Banff-Windermere highway. Late Saturday and all today, traffic over the highway was prohibited.

Fires which were three miles south of Vermillion crossing, mostly spot fires, but which for a time were extremely dangerous, were quelled on Saturday, and at that time the fire fighting authorities believed the crisis was passed. During Saturday strong winds blew up, and put the fighters into hurried action in the Wardle vicinity, situated midway between Kootenay and Vermillion crossings.

At Kootenay crossing, the fire is under full control, and most of the men have rushed to Wardle creek. They fought Saturday night and all today as the flames ripped down the mountainsides to the road, and then started to eat toward Vermillion. From a quiet and seemingly small fire, the flames changed within a few hours to a roaring mass.

Efforts are being directed to saving the bridges and roads.

Quebec Village Has Outbreak of Fire, Early Morn

QUEBEC, July 19.—The village of St. Agapit, Lotbiniere county, was threatened with destruction by fire which broke out at 1 o'clock this morning. Two dwellings and three barns have been destroyed. The work of battling the blaze is hampered by lack of water.

At 2:30 this morning the fire was reported to have been controlled, and all menace to the village averted. No estimate of the loss has yet been made.

Washington, Idaho Fires Are Abating; Coeur d'Alene Burns

SPOKANE, Wash., July 18.—Forest fires in the eastern Washington and northern Idaho districts abated a little today, with some progress reported in trenching work in Pend d'Oreille and Kanikusa national forests. One fire in the Coeur d'Alene forest in Idaho was spreading fast, and driving fighters before it.

In Montana the situation was slightly better, with rangers encouraged by headway made against "spot" fires in Glacier national park.

Cascades Contain a 'Frontier Town'; All the Trimmings

SEATTLE, Wash., July 18.—Bootleggers, gamblers and dance hall girls have recently flocked to the small settlement of Tye, 60 miles east of here in the Cascade mountains, according to federal prohibition agents who invaded the place early today. They characterized the activities there as reminiscent of those of an old frontier town.

SASKATCHEWAN PROGS TO KEEP OWN IDENTITY

Will Remain as Third Party but Practice Local Autonomy

LAUNCH VIGOROUS PUBLICITY APPEAL

Every Saskatchewan Prog in Late House Gets an 'O.K.'

SASKATOON, Sask., July 18.—Leaders of the Progressive party in Saskatchewan, after a two-day conference, issued a statement which declares that it was the consensus of opinion of the gathering "that the extent to which the Liberal and Conservative organization sacrificed the country for party advantage, the revelations disclosed in the customs probe, of corrupt administration, and the source of campaign funds of both parties, and their domination by the big financial interests, emphasized clearly the need of retaining the Progressive group at Ottawa."

The meeting was attended by chairmen of constituency committees, members of the house, and candidates defeated at the last election.

The text of the statement follows:

"The chairmen of the constituency committees of the Progressive party of Sasktachewan have been meeting in the city during the past two days. The chairmen in many instances were accompanied by members of their executives, and the gathering, which was presided over by the provincial president, C. E. Little, of Ogema, was thoroughly representative of the party.

Claim Party Needed

"After a full discussion of all the angles of the present situation, it was the consensus of opinion that the extent to which the Liberal and Conservative organization sacrificed the interests of the country for party interests, and the source of campaign funds of both parties and their domination by the big financial interests, emphasized clearly the essential need of retaining the Progressive group at Ottawa.

"Constituency autonomy being one of the cardinal points of the Progressive movement, no resolution was passed dealing with contesting of ridings. Several of the committee men present averred they had every anticipation of carrying their ridings.

"It was announced that the campaign was well under way in a number of ridings, and organization completed in some. C. Wallace Stewart, organizer of the party, stated that he was prepared to attend as many nominating conventions in the province as the dates of these would permit and in any way to assist the local organizations.

"The executive of the party was instructed by resolution to redraft the principles of the party, in pamphlet form, for general distribution. A vigorous publicity campaign to forward the Progressive cause will be undertaken.

Opposites Reconciled

"A great many questions were asked of the late members, and it was the unanimous consensus of opinion that every Saskatchewan member merited the full support and confidence of their constituents, in having acted in all sincerity in a most trying situation. Summed up, Mr. Fansher's position was, he was unable to refrain from voting want of confidence in the King administration after reading the evidence of the customs probe, including the suppressed evidence, which he declared was unfit for publication.

"Mr. Evans took the ground that he was unable to vote for the Stevens amendment to condemn and defeat the King administration, being fully convinced that the Conservative administration would have proved to be no more pure than that of the Liberals.

"Both Mr. Fansher and Mr. Evans emphasized that there was entire unity in the Progressive group throughout the entire session, so far as legislation was concerned. They agreed that the great majority of Liberal and Conservative members were opposed to Progressive legislation."

He said there was evidence tht Venizelist leaders had joined with General Plastiras, who is supposed to have been behind the recent unsuccessful revolutionary movement, with a view to carrying out a new revolt.

It was also announced that in addition to the three former premiers, who are described as "democratic leaders," several other politicians and newspaper men have ben arrested. All are charged with conspiracy.

Twenty-five More Stand on Crater's Edge at Colliery

IS CONSEQUENCE OF A HURRICANE

Massachusetts Is Visited Also; Four Lives Are Lost

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 18. — A subsidence following the hurricane over the Peach orchard colliery at Parsons Friday and Saturday, swallowed up two double houses. Two single houses were standing on the edge of the crater, apparently ready to fall into the hole when the squeeze ceased today.

Twenty-five houses, many of them dwellings, are in the danger zone, and 35 families have been forced to seek quarters elsewhere.

Railway Line Affected

The principal subsidence covers an area of 75 feet at Gore and Wood streets, but the entire surface in an area covering two square miles on three streets is affected. Trees and fences have settled along with the buildings.

The main line of the Delaware & Hudson railroad has been affected by the disturbance, though several hundred feet from its crater. Mining men fear a further collapse of the ground.

In Springfield the 90-foot steeple of the Asbury Methodist church crashed to the ground, the roofs were ripped from several apartments, billboards and trees were swept flat, and tops were blown from automobiles.

BOURASSA SAYS HE'S ADMIRER OF MACKENZIE KING

Beware of Governor-General and Downing Street, He Warns

MONTREAL, July 18.—The opening address in the campaign of Henri Bourassa, former Independent member of parliament for Labelle, was delivered to a huge throng this afternoon at Papineauville, about 70 miles from here, and in it Mr. Bourassa dealt with the various political issues as they presented themselves to him.

Mr. Bourassa applauded Mr. Mackenzie King, terming him a "great Canadian," and a man worthy of going to London for the Imperial conference.

Alberta Rights

He dwelt at length on the Alberta school question, tracing the subject historically. It was for this that he had voted with the Liberals, admiring them for the stand they had made on behalf of the rights of the Catholic French minority of the western province.

Everything was ready, he said, Premier Brownlee and the Alberta legislature had decided that it was right. "Then Mr. Hocken fired the first shot in the Orange Sentinel with the articles, 'Hands Off Alberta.' The Orange element in parliament was up in arms—storming. Mr. Brownlee became afraid. He asked to withdraw the important clause. But in reply the Liberal government unanimously, Protestants as well as Catholics, refused. Do you now realize why I am supporting Mr. King?"

"Beware of tomorrow. If you allow a governor-general to accord or refuse dissolution as he well likes, and he decides which party shall be in and which party shall be out, you will wake up to find that Downing street will be the judge in Canada's political matters," Mr. Bourassa declared, in discussing the constitutional question.

BIG ORE PLANT WIPED OUT IN MIDNIGHT FIRE

SAVE HOUSES AND OTHER BUILDINGS

Loss Is $125,000; Bush Catches but Fire Extinguished

SILVERTON, July 18.—A $125,000 loss was sustained by the Standard Silver Lead Mining company, when its concentrator here burned Friday night and yesterday morning. The losses include the actual mill, the lower tramway terminal, and the ore bins in the mill. A big settling tank, the warehouse and assaying office, which were just across the road from the mill, as well as the employees' houses in the vicinity, were saved. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

Starts on Upper Floor

Although the origin of the fire has not been determined, it is known to have started on the upper floor of the building between 9 and 10 o'clock Friday night. The mill only recently commenced operations, having been closed down since the One Big union strike in 1920. Eight leasers, headed by Harry Kelsall and George Gordon, worked the mine during the winter, and it was their ore which was in the burned ore bins.

Tailings were being milled by the company at the time of the fire, and the leasers were going to put through their winter's ore later. Three shifts have been running the mill day and night since its reopening.

Fight With Buckets

While the fire was at its worst dropping embers started bush fires. Mr. Meade, of the forestry department, kept a crew busy combating these fires, which were not kept under control by bucket brigades.

Flaming embers also started roof fires on near-by houses, but these were handled by hoses from the mill and the city hydrants if near the houses, and by bucket brigades when out of range.

Should the value of the tailings be thought enough to warrant it, a small mill will probably be constructed, stated W. H. North, manager of the Standard Silver Lead Mining company, tonight.

CONSERVATIVES WELCOME ESLING WITH THE BAND

Late Member Describes Closing Days of the Session

SEES DEFEAT OF KING AS IGNOMINY

Traces Events Which Led to the Change of Government

When W. K. Esling, M.P., for West Kootenay in the late house of commons, stepped off the Crow boat Saturday night, on his return from the stirring Ottawa session that saw a change of government, was to hear the city band play him a musical welcome, while the members of the Nelson Conservative executive, and other Conservatives, were waiting to grasp his hand.

A large crowd was at the wharf.

Later, at the Hume, Mr. Esling met many members of his party, for shorter or longer chats.

He left for his home at Rossland on the noon train yesterday.

Discusses King's Defeat

Discussing things political, Mr. Esling emphasized the contrast between the attitude of Mackenzie King, when going to the country last fall, and after the election. Before the event, he was almost unmeasured in his attacks on the Progressives, and declared he would not carry on if he were not given a majority independent of them. After the election he was subservient to them in every way, and did their bidding. Mr. Esling said there were references to "Prime Minister" Forke during the days when the government's life was at stake.

Another instance of inconstancy, Mr. Esling said, was that of several Progressive members, including Miss McPhail, who, at the beginning of the session, announced they had no faith in the government, but in the confidence vote cast their votes to keep it in power.

Describing the events of the last week of parliament, which saw the defeat of the King government, Mr. Esling said:

King's Fall Long Merited

"The King administration fell as a result of the customs probe; and now, in order to divert the electors' attention from scandal and censure, Mr. King and his ministers are questioning and criticizing the governor-general. But Byng of Vimy will ever hold his high place in the affections of the Canadian people, who will thank rather than criticize him for having brought an impossible situation to an end.

"Mackenzie King's government retained office in defiance of the verdict of the electors in October last. But it has now wrecked itself, and the Liberal party will suffer for years to come.

"The government managed to whip the Progressives into line for nearly six months, on the threat of an election, but pressure of public opinion as a result of the customs scandal was too much for Mr. King's followers.

Out to Dodge Censure

"The customs committee brought in its report, which was amended by Mr. Stevens so as to include censure of the minister of customs. To avoid such censure was the one purpose of the Liberals. So Mr. Woodsworth presented an amendment to the Stevens amendment, deleting the censure. This was lost by a vote of 117 nays to 115 yeas. Then came an amendment to the amendment by Mr. Fansher, Progressive, seconded by Mr. Coote, Progressive. It was really taking the Stevens amendment and adding it to the Woodsworth amendment. The Fansher subamendment was declared by the speaker to be out of order. Mr. Meighen appealed from this ruling of the chair, and the speaker's ruling was negatived by a vote of 118 nays to 116 yeas. In this instance the Progressive, Mr. Coote, who had seconded the Fansher amendment, voted with the Liberals who contended it was out of order. The debate on the Fansher amendment continued, during which a motion to adjourn, by Mr. Beaubien, one of Mr. King's consistent Progressive supporters, was voted down by 116 nays to 114 yeas. Again the debate continued, until 5 a.m., when a motion to adjourn by a Liberal member was carried by one vote. Thus there were four divisions during the debate, three of which were won by the Conservatives.

The Ignominious End

"When the house met on Monday, June 28, Mr. King announced that he had advised dissolution, and as the governor-general declined to adopt his advice he had resigned. He then moved the house adjourn. Mr. Meighen reminded him that the end of the session was at hand, and that the question of completing pending legislation and voting supply was of great importance to the country. He thought there should be a conference to this end, but Mr. King did not think the house should discuss anything.

"This was the ignominious end of Mackenzie King's devious and disgraceful struggle, covering a period of eight months, to hold office. For nearly two months, at the opening of parliament, he was prime minister without a seat. The business of the country was not being disposed of, and the end came as a result of the Stevens customs probe, which revealed rascalities, frauds and breaches of trust with the connivance of government officials and the knowledge of the prime minister himself.

"The resignation of Mr. King was a good thing for the country. He now seeks sympathy on the ground that he should have been granted a second dissolution, in the face of the fact that he was granted dissolution 10 months ago with the result that he and eight of his ministers were defeated and his administration was censured.

No Censured Government Ever Got Dissolution

"Accepting this contention that a second dissolution should have been granted, the argument could be followed indefinitely, and he could claim dissolution over and over again, however irresponsible his followers were, and regardless of the welfare of the country. Surely a government found guilty of gross wrongdoing, with three adverse votes in one night, can have no claim upon the people. Never in the history of the British Empire, under any circumstances, was a government granted dissolution in the face of censure.

Meighen Wanted to Finish Business

"Parliament received Mackenzie King's resignation on Monday, June 28, and on Tuesday Sir Henry Drayton, leading the house, announced that the governor-general had sent for Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and had requested him to form a new administration. The leader of the house announced that Mr. Meighen believed it to be the duty of any government he might form to conclude with all dispatch the work of the present session and that such course was preferable to a somewhat prolonged adjournment. Mr. Meighen had therefore decided to constitute and to submit to his excellency a temporary ministry composed of seven members, without portfolio. As Mr. Meighen had accepted the office of prime minister, his seat automatically became vacant.

House Votes Censure

"The house then proceeded with consideration of the notice for concurrence in the report of the customs committee, and on the proposed amendment of Mr. Stevens as amended by Mr. Fansher, the Progressive. In the debate, Mr. Rinfret, Liberal, submitted a further amendment, aimed to free Mackenzie King and his ministers of censure. Sir Henry Drayton contended the amendment was out of order, and on the speaker's ruling that it was in order the latter was sustained by a vote of 115 yeas to 114 yeas. But the Rinfret attempt to eliminate the censure was defeated by 119 nays to 107 years, a majority of 12.

"The main motion to adopt the report of the customs committee, together with the censure amendments, carried by a vote of 119 to 109; and thus was stamped upon the King administration the lack of confidence of a majority of the fifteenth parliament, which, during a long and heated debate, Mr. King had sought to avoid. Yet, in the face of defeat and censure, he continued the claim that the governor-general should have granted him dissolution.

"Mr. King's next move, like a peeved schoolboy, was to obstruct and embarrass Mr. Meighen as much as possible, and to refuse to assist in completing the almost finished legislation. The leader of the house pointed out that the unfinished legislation consisted of the bills brought in by Mr. King himself and of the estimates brought down by Mr. King's own ministers. Sir Henry Drayton said the Conservatives were prepared to render every assistance in disposing of these matters, and if there were likely to be any contentious issues arising out of the legislation and estimates brought down by Mr. King and his ministers he was perfectly willing for the house to sit on the following day, which was a holiday. He considered that with the Montreal harbor bill and the civil servants' superannuation bill there should be little trouble, and after these were out of the way the estimates could be disposed of.

Anti-Protection Bait Doesn't Work

"The leader of the house then moved to go into supply; but with the determination to obstruct business and embarrass the Conservatives, Mr. King's followers reverted to the Conservative policy of protection. They thought a motion in this direction would embarrass those Progressives who were assisting the Conservatives, and so, unwittingly, Mr. King paid tribute to Mr. Meighen's courage, consistency and persistency in preaching and teaching at all times the policy of protection to Canadian farm products and Canadian industries. He said that throughout the general elections Mr. Meighen had said that there was one issue before the country, and one issue only, namely, the fiscal policy as enumerated by him on many occasions. Mr. King said that throughout the present session Mr. Meighen continued to maintain the position taken by him at the time of the general election. He said he did not think that such a policy had the approval of a majority of the members of the house, and he therefore moved an amendment to the effect that Mr. Meighen's fiscal policy would prove detrimental to the country's prosperity and prejudiced to national unity.

"Mr. King made a poor guess, however, because a majority of the members of the house did approve of the Conservative policy, and Mr. King's amendment was defeated by 109 nays to 101 yeas.

"Not Dollar of Supply," Says King

"The debate on the main motion to go into supply then continued, and Mr. King's spirit was shown in his expressed determination to see "if I can effect it, that this parliament shall not be permitted to vote another dollar of supply." He then moved that the chairman leave the chair, and on his own motion received the worst rebuff of the session, 101 members voting against, to 80 in favor of the motion.

"Mr. King made his last attack on Dominion day, when his former finance minister brought in a motion questioning the right of the Meighen ministry to hold office. This motion was carried by a vote of 96 to 95; but when the vote was announced, Mr. Bird, Progressive, of Nelson, Man., stated that he had been paired with a member who was absent but that he had 'inadvertently' voted. Once a vote has been recorded and announced, it cannot be withdrawn. Had Mr. Bird not 'inadvertently' voted, the result would have been a tie, which would have had to be broken by the speaker.

"This defeat of the Meighen government by a vote which was 'inadvertently' cast by a Progressive member who was paired, was heralded with much joy by Mackenzie King and his followers, and Mr. King announced that, in view of the decision as just given on a very important motion, he hoped Mr. Meighen would advise his excellency immediately that the house had declared that the Meighen government had no right to be in existence.

"Having been beaten in all directions, the ex-prime minister is now seeking to confuse the issue by raising a constitutional question as to the attitude of the governor-general.

Smoke Screen Will Dissipate

"He has been harping on his alleged wrongs ever since, in the hopes that his equivocal course of the last few months, in which he has sold principle for office, and that the responsibility of his late administration for the worst scandal in Canadian history, will be concealed behind this smoke screen.

"Smoke, however, has a habit of dissipating, and as election day draws near Mr. King is likely to find the things he had hoped to mask are the chief picture in the public eye."

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

PADS OF PAPER FOR CHILDREN

One Mother Says:

I find that whenever I write, the baby wants to write, too. I keep several pads of scrap paper with a pencil attached. When she wants to write, she is given one of these pads. She is not apt to carry the pencil about, and run the chance of falling with it in her hand, because it is hanging to the pad of paper. The slips of paper from Shredded Wheat and other such packages make good paper with which to fill these pads.

A CONSERVATIVE SYNDICATE BUYS PAPER LA PATRIE

Famous Tarte Journal to Be Conservative, Protectionist

QUEBEC, July 18.—The Montreal French-language daily newspaper, La Patrie, has been purchased by a French-Canadian syndicate, headed by Senator D. O. Lesperance, who is in charge of the Conservative organization. The purchase price is not disclosed.

La Patrie was founded by Honore Beaugrand, 48 years ago, and was purchased by Hon. Joseph Israel Tarte in 1896. Since then it has continued in the ownership of the Tarte family, with L. J. Tarte as president, and his brother, Eugene Tarte, also taking an active part on the management of the journal.

Twenty Years Without Organ

A statement accompanying the announcement of purchase says that "for the last 20 years the French-Canadian Conservatives have been without an organ to advocate their principles in Montreal. It has been said that there would never be a recovery of the prestige of the Liberal-Conservative party in the province of Quebec so long as the French-Canadian press was hostile or indifferent to its aims and ideals."

The statement continued that under the new direction La Patrie will be Conservative and protectionist.

The board of directors will comprise the following: President, Senator D. O. Lesperance; vice-president, J. H. Fortier; director, Philippe Bechand of Montmagny; general manager, L. J. Tarte; advertising manager, Eugene Tarte.

It is announced by Senator Lesperance and Mr. Fortier that the entire stock of the new company which will control La Patrie has been subscribed by French-Canadian capital.

NEILL DECLARES NO PARTY WILL HAVE MAJORITY

He Says Progressives, Independents Will Hold Balance

VICTORIA, July 18.—A. W. Neill, Independent-Liberal, who sat for Comox-Alberni in the last parliament, has returned to his riding, with the assertion that no party will secure a working majority in the next parliament. One party or the other, he said, would have to rely on the support of Progressives and Independents.

Mr. Neill announced that he would run only as an Independent in the coming election.

The date of the Victoria Liberal convention to nominate a candidate in the forthcoming federal election has been fixed tentatively as July 26, it was announced.

Many Hamilton stores have adopted daylight saving time.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy and called his prescription HEM-ROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent and then decided it should be sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside application. Get a package of HEM-ROID from Canada Drug & Book Co. today. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and will do the same for you.

CITY OF TRAIL ADMINISTRATORS HOLD A REVEL

Annual Picnic Occasion of Secret Rites and Gastronomy

TRAIL, July 18.—Today the civic governors of Trail and Tadanac in decorous array made their annual pilgrimage to the shrine of the late Lord Warfield, and there performed the secret rites peculiar to the institution of the municipal picnic. The ceremonies, according to the official announcement, were conducted under the distinguished patronage of His Worship Mayor H. Clarke of Trail and His Highness Reeve F. S. Willis of Tadanac.

Inspected for Tonsilitis

Assembling at 9 o'clock at the southeast angle of Second and Rossland avenues, the zealous band was inspected by Mayor Clarke for tonsilitis. Formed up in silent procession, and chanting, they wended their way to the mystic shrine and, padlocking their chariots, prepared for the "Feast of the Chicken," directed by the high priest, Chef Dominic.

Chief Suspicionist J. Williamson, suffering from the heat, searched for beer and, it is said, found none. Meanwhile, two fakirs, "the peerless potato peelers," H. Palmer and J. J. Fingland, demonstrated how to remove the eyes without injury to the flesh, and the great surgeon, Bruno Lerose, showed how he fixes broilers and flappers. At this juncture there was another epidemic of tonsilitis and calls for iodine.

Alderman Attempts Feat

After the feast, a period of 15 minutes' silence was attempted by Alderman J. A. MacKinnon, while F. Chapman percolated stories current in civic circles and some others.

The ancient game of barnyard golf received its quota of adherents, as did also a novel square dance.

Entertaining vocal selections were given by E. F. Dockerill, "Oil and the Feather," and H. B. Fuller, of course, with "Show Me the Way to Go Home."

The invited guests were: Trail city council—Mayor Herbert Clarke; Aldermen A. A. Milligan, chairman of board of no works; J. Williams, chairman of water extinguishers; F. W. Wyatt, chairman of the empty pocketbook; A. G. Harvey, chairman of mumps and measles board; A. A. Saunders, chairman of the evening pleasure grounds; J. A. MacKinnon, counselor to the fire department.

Tadanac district council—Reeve F. S. Willis; Councillors J. W. McKay, J. M. Young, H. B. Fuller and E. W. Whittemore.

Trail-Tadanac school board—H. J. Palmer, chairman, and Trustees J. J. Fingland, A. L. McCallum, A. Balfour, R. B. Warden and J. W. Brady.

Other invited guests were H. F. Piedje, consulting engineer, Trail-Tadanac; G. F. Chapman, landscape artist for the parks board; E. M. Stiles, engineer for Tadanac; S. S. McDiarmid, Trail engineer; R. C. Crowe, legal advisor to Tadanac; R. J. Clegg, illegal advisor to Trail; George E. Murray, "Mussolini" of the parks board; W. E. B. Monypenny, city clerk for Trail; W. J. C. Cleave, C. W. Guillaume and L. H. Maddison, auditors; W. Forrest, Annabelle school board; F. E. Dockerill, ex-mayor; B. Lerose and F. Lauriente, ex-aldermen, and D. Daloise, leading lady.

TWO TRAIL MEN ARE LOCKED UP FOR AN ASSAULT

Are Charged With Beating Up Chinese Cafe Proprietor

TRAIL, July 18.—Ole Gundar of local pugilistic fame and Carl Wattum, son of A. Wattum of Trail, are both lodged in the city jail, as a result of an alleged assault on Charlie Loucy, Chinese proprietor of Spokane cafe, late Saturday night.

According to the Chinaman, Dunbar, who rooms in the Spokane building, entered the cafe at about 12:15 and charged him with stealing some articles missing from his room. Louey vehemently denied it. Gundar insisted. The argument became heated and punctuated with personalities. Gundar clinched it with a wicked left that temporarily closed Louey's right eye and turned surrounding tissue several shades darker; and this while Carl Wattum held the Chinaman by the wrist.

Mystery surrounds the reason of Wattum's act. One lady diner there today, who appeared to be reliably informed, sought to explain it. She said that Wattum, fearing his friend Ole would be "cleaned up" by the Chinaman in the scrap, obviously impending, grasped Louey's wrist to prevent the assault on his friend. Following Ole's stinger, Louey called the police, who took Gundar and Wattum in hand.

CHAPTER LIX

"Taylor," said Mark, "I am going to be married."

"Sir!"

Taylor dropped the coat he had been brushing and swung around as if he had been shot.

Mark did not raise his eyes from the papers he was sorting as he repeated irritably—

"You heard what I said: I am going to be married."

He waited, but as no further comment was forthcoming, he raised his eyes.

"Well?" he said sharply.

Taylor stooped mechanically to recover the coat, his face was red with distress.

"I'm sure—I hope you'll be happy, sir—very happy," he faltered.

"You're a liar ,Taylor!" Mark answered coolly. "There's no such thing as happiness in this damned world, and you know it; however, we'll let it pass, seeing that I'm going to be married by special licence this afternoon at 3 o'clock."

"Sir!" Taylor no longer tried to conceal his agitation. He stared at Mark with wide-open mouth and something very like tears in his eyes.

"At 3 o'clock precisely," Mark repeated unemotionally. "I shall want you to come along and be a witness; and afterthat—as I am going away for a few days—you can stay on here and look after the place till I decide what's the best thing to be done."

He straightened his back and looked around the room critically. "No room for a lady here, eh, Taylor?"

"No, sir."

Taylor was almost crying, the sudden announcement had come as a great shock to him, though for the last four days he had realized that a subtle change had come over his master. He had not been at home at all till late at night, and was then nearly always the worse for drink.

Once he had brought Miriam home with him. Taylor hated Miriam, and could not understand Mark mixing with her.

From his room across the passage one night he had heard Mark tipsily trying to persuade her to stay, and her own determined refusal.

"Flying for higher game," Taylor had told himself bitterly, being somewhat versed in the ways of women of Miriam's class, seeing that his previous master had been a dissolute baronet who had twice gone through the breach of promise court, and still maintained a penchant for the stage door.

But had never believed that Mark would pay the high price of marriage, and, apart from his own undoubted affection for his master, Taylor felt such a liaison to be a great loss of prestige to himself.

Mark seemed to guess something of the man's thoughts, for his face flushed dully, and he bundled the rest of the papers back into a drawer without looking through them.

"If you don't like the idea of it, you can go," he said abruptly.

Taylor said, "Yes, sir; thank you, sir." But without the least intention of taking advantage of the offer, for Mark was always a generous and, as a rule, a considerate master.

He hung Mark's coat carefully away in the wardrobe, and looked back at him from across the room.

"You'll be wanting your morning coat, sir, then, and silk hat?"

Mark's face flamed; he answered at random.

"No—yes! Oh, anything will do. I'll get the things myself."

"Yes, sir." Taylor went away quietly, shutting the door, and Mark walked over to the window. April sunshine filled the streets, and the London sparrows were twittering gaily to one another. Mark stood there with blank eyes; he knew it was his wedding day, but why, or what chain of events had led up to it, he could not remember.

He knew that for four days he had been almost continuously under the influence of drink, and he knew that he had spent most of the time in Miriam's company.

She had been kind and amusing, and she had certainly succeeded in drugging his memory, so that now he could think of Mary Silver with nothing more than hard bitterness.

He felt that she had done him a great injury; in his fuddled brain he blamed her for everything that had happened to him.

Not that he cared for her any longer; he believed cynically that he no longer had the power to care for anyone. In future he was going to live his life in the way in which Miriam had shown him: "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die."

He was going to live it with her; without thought for others, without thought for the future.

Her kisses would bring him forgetfulness, and that being so, the price of marriage which she had exacted would not be too great. He was alone in the world, and she was alone in the world, and fate had taken a hand and finished the game.

As General Odlum and the Vancouver Star See Them

Tariff policy first, customs scandal second, "other real concerns of the voter" next, and the constitutional question last, is the way the Vancouver Star, the newspaper of General Odlum, Liberal M.P.P., rates what it regards as the issues in this campaign.

And the constitutional question it has in mind is not at all the silly stuff about whether the governor-general acted constitutionally, whether Premier Meighen is in office constitutionally, and whether the house was dissolved constitutionally. It dismisses those major contentions of Premier King. Its modest "constitutional" issue is whether a premier should have the right to permit prorogation without having the royal assent given to such measures as were complete but for that formality, an issue it could also have raised regarding Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his 1911 dissolution.

Here are the Star's views on these points;

"Hon. Charles Dunning, arriving in Regina the other day, issued a statement in which he declared that 'the people must settle by their ballots once and for all that we are a free people and that the Meighen dictatorship will not be tolerated in this country.' Mr. Dunning based the allegation of dictatorship on the fact that the Meighen administration was in office in direct opposition to the will of parliament.

"But no matter what government was in power, the same thing would be true of it. Had Mr. King obtained a dissolution he would have continued to carry on 'in direct opposition to the will of parliament,' if the recent parliament can be said to have had any ascertainable will at all.

"Mr. Dunning chose more solid ground when he charged Mr. Meighen with an autocratic act in having parliament dissolved and the members sent home without giving the governor-general an opportunity of assenting to the measures that had been passed. This is the real constitutional issue of the campaign, and if it is, after all, of secondary importance, it is only because much greater matters, unconnected with the constitutional questions, await the decision of the electorate.

"The people of Canada have before them, to begin with, the tariff problem. They must choose between two fundamentally different policies, and as they choose, so will the future of the Dominion shape itself for years to come.

"Then there is the cleansing of the department of customs, the need for which the electors are by no means overlooking.

"Due attention having been paid to these, and the other real concerns of the voter, it will be in order to consider the constitutional aspects of Mr. Meighen's acts during the first few days of his administration."

Note that, with the Star, this very modest constitutional question does not even come third, which place is accorded to "the other real concerns of the voter." As it uses the plural, there is to the Star more than one other real concern. Thus, the highest that issue can stand with it is fifth or lower—and it is perhaps ninth or tenth, according as the Star deems there are many or few "real concerns" of the voter. At all events, it is at the absolute bottom of the list.

When Hon. J. H. King goes to the coast to open the Mackenzie King campaign in this province, which he has publicly stated would be based on the "constitutional issue," it is very evident he will have to start with some stern missionary work with General Odlum and the new Liberal daily.

Defeating the People's Desires

It appears that the Liberal Edmonton Bulletin has been daring enough to criticize the use of the proportional representation method in the Alberta cities in the late Alberta provincial election, and the Liberal Calgary Albertan comes back with a hot one.

The Bulletin made this indictment: "Proportional representation enabled the government to count in an attorney-general in Edmonton whom it could not have elected on the one-man-one-vote system."

Commenting that the Bulletin "has never learned the meaning either of P. R. or the transferable vote," the Albertan makes this rejoinder: "But for P. R. the Liberals would not have one Liberal member of parliament, but on the other hand the Bulletin would now be witnessing the spectacle of five Conservative members for that city."

Summarized, this interesting information, from Alberta Liberal sources, is to this effect:

A Farmer attorney-general elected on other than first-choice votes.

The entire Liberal delegation in the Alberta house elected on other than first-choice votes.

Edmonton's desire for five Conservatives defeated by the device of allowing the full Conservative strength to be polled only for the Conservative first choice.

But to defeat the wishes of the majority is exactly the function of the proportional representation plan.

The Lighter Side

Cake Apple Betty—Crumble four large white sugar cookies into a baking dish measuring seven inches across the top, five inches across the bottom with sides three inches high, then cut four pared apples into the dish (discarding cores), and sprinkle generously with ground cinnamon (using one teaspoonful in all). Stir in one cup of brown sugar, wet all with one and one-half cups of cold water, and slip the dish into a fairly hot oven to bake for 30 minutes, or till the apples are tender. Serve hot with a hard sauce made by creaming one cup of confectioner's sugar with one tablespoon of butter, then stirring in two tablespoons of cold water and flavoring the mixture with a drop or two of vanilla.

Italian Soup—The Sunday night supper menu will call for this hearty soup—a meal in itself. To make it, simmer one-fourth cup of the raw uncoated rice (brown rice) in one pint of canned tomato mixed with one quart of meat stock, till the rice is tender. Then add one cupful of cooked lima or kidney beans, one-half cup of cooked diced carrots, one-fourth cup of chopped (peeled) partly-cooked onions, and one-half cup of cooked and chopped cabbage. Let simmer for a few minutes, then season to suit your individual taste with salt and pepper. Serve with or without grated Parmesan cheese. If you wish, you may use a small can of red kidney beans instead of soaking and boiling the dried variety. The imported Parmesan cheese is expensive, yet if one expects a guest for supper one is justified in providing this delicacy. This is a thick soup and when it is served for supper or lunch, it needs few accompanying dishes—merely a salad, hot biscuits, berries and cake. (Bouillon cubes may be dissolved to make the meat stock, for this recipe).

Inexpensive Ice Cream—In the top of your double boiler cook till thick and smooth, one pint of sweet milk, one-half cup of flour, one cup of sugar and two beaten eggs. Cool the mixture then add to it one quart of cold, sweet milk, one smallest-size can of evaporated milk, one additional cup of granulated sugar, a pinch of salt and one cup of thick cream. Flavor with one tablespoon of vanilla extract (or any desired flavoring) and freeze in three parts of ice to one part of salt till stiff (about 15 or 20 minutes with the ordinary hand-freezer). Then remove dasher, cork hole, and pack in four parts of ice to one of salt, cover with newspapers, and let stand at least one hour to ripen before serving.

That Body of Yours

Orange Juice

One of the interesting sights in some schools and factories is to see a number of children or adults stop at a certain time morning and afternoon and drink a pint or a quart of milk. That this has been of great benefit in increasing weight and warding off fatigue, has been proven by research men.

However, there are many children and adults who do not like milk. Or if they do not dislike it at first, grow very tired of it as a daily article of diet.

With others milk does not seem to agree, causing in some diarrhoea, and constipation in even a greater number.

To supply the nourishment and vitamins to those who could not take milk, some research men have been experimenting with orange juice as a substitute for the milk, in some Chicago school children.

The increase in weight was far greater than could be accounted for by the food value of the orange juice, which was given in amounts of about a pint a day of the unstrained juice.

How did they account for this?

Simply that the orange juice seemed to affect the other foods taken, so that the very valuable mineral salts in the food were absorbed in larger quantities into the blood, and all the tissues of the body were thus better nourished.

Hence the increase in weight and strength.

This effect is attributed to vitamins, and orange juice contains the three best known vitamins A, B, and C.

These Chicago research men suggest that these vitamins in orange juice promote the economical use of elements already present but not efficiently used. In other words the orange juice is a sort of "efficiency expert" that makes the other elements in the food do better or more complete work.

Further that the orange juice stimulates the flow of digestive juice in the stomach to a greater extent, and thus these valuable mineral salts are quickly absorbed into the blood on leaving the stomach.

The idea then is not that oranges should replace milk, but that where milk cannot be used to advantage, orange juice, for the reasons mentioned above, might well be substituted.

CUSTOMS RING'S DEBAUCHERY IS DOOM OF KING

People Will Punish Late Administration, Says Senator Green

'CONSTITUTION' IS ONLY DISTRACTION

Enormity of Disclosures Will Soon Sink Into Public Mind

That the Dominion has lost in revenues anywhere from $100,000,000 to $400,000,000 a year in the last two or three years through the debauching smuggling ring, which flourished because the King government would not take any action, parliament having finally to initiate the inquiry, was the belief expressed Saturday by Senator R. F. Green, when in Nelson. The facts of the case, with most specific charges against the chief preventive officer, who was in the ring, were laid before Mackenzie King 18 months before the charges made by the Conservatives in parliament finally forced an inquiry, Senator Green pointed out.

He declared that the customs scandal, even if no other factor entered into the case against the late Mackenzie King administration, would have meant its emphatic downfall, and predicted that the Meighen government that was called to office to succeed the censured administration would be returned by the country.

King Blocked Public Works

"The situation today is an unprecedented one," stated Senator Green. "Mackenzie King, on being defeated, took the attitude that he didn't propose to let Mr. Meighen finish the business of the session, and refused to consult with him on completing the business in hand and granting what supplies were admitted by both parties to be necessary.

"As a consequence, the house was dissolved without any supplies being voted except the interim supply already authorized. This necessitated governor-general's warrants being issued even for such obligations as the salaries of the civil service. The governor-general will only issue his warrants for such obligations as salaries, and in special cases, as for absolutely necessary public works actually in the course of construction. No new public works in Canada can be undertaken until the house meets again. Mr. King, by thus making impossible the carrying on of this part of the country's business, has certainly demonstrated that he is looking after himself and the advantage of the party he represents rather than the interests of the country generally.

To Sidetrack the Scandal

"As far as the constitutional question Mr. King raised is concerned, there is no doubt on my part that he raised it for the purpose of sidetracking the real question before the country, which is consideration of the customs scandal under the administration of the party recently in office, which led to the sensational customs probe and its disclosures.

"The disclosures in the inquiry, as far as it went, were much more damaging than the general public yet realizes, as the evidence, or at least the portion of it made public, has not yet had time to sink into the minds of the people. There is no doubt, however, that as the campaign progresses the people will find themselves more fully informed on these points.

"In addition to what was made public, a portion of the Duncan report was suppressed by the committee, both sides agreeing that the part omitted was too vile to be broadcast through the length and breadth of the land in the press. However, this particular part was finally laid on the table of the house in the last days of the session, and can therefore be seen by those interested in looking up that phase.

Greatest Scandal in History

"The great question of the election centers in this scandal, one of the greatest, if not itself the greatest, ever exposed among government officials, and indeed some of the minsters were apparently stuck in up to their necks.

"I am firmly convinced that the people of Canada, when they realize the facts, and realize the vast volume of the money being stolen from the treasury, will arouse to action, and send back to parliament the party that stands for good, clean, honest administration of public affairs, and with a substantial majority."

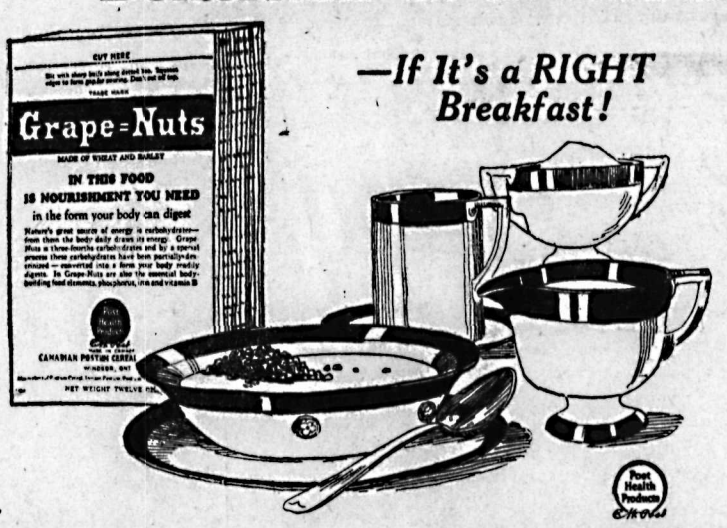
NO Meal Can Be So Beneficial as Breakfast

—If It's a RIGHT Breakfast!



NOTHING to eat all night—the body ready and waiting to extract the maximum amount of nourishment from food, nourishment which will supply all its varied needs — surely breakfast should receive the most careful thought of any meal of the day. Yet, too many people today eat a skimpy, hurried breakfast — a breakfast which is frequently deficient in some of the vital elements of nutrition.

Don't think this means that everyone should eat a large breakfast. Just eat as much as your appetite dictates. But make sure that what you do eat contains the proper varied nourishment. And so that you can do this—so that you can receive from a large or small breakfast, the five essential food elements,—an expert in food values created Grape-Nuts.

Grape-Nuts Gives the Body Exactly What it Needs

Grape-Nuts is made from whole wheat and malted barley, prepared by special milling and baking processes. It has a delightful nut-like flavor all its own. It is remarkably easy to digest. And a single serving — four teaspoonfuls — eaten with milk or cream, gives your body an abundance of varied and balanced nourishment.

Grape-Nuts furnishes dextrins, maltose and other carbohydrates for heat and energy; iron for the blood; phosphorus for teeth and bones; protein for muscle and body-building; and the essential vitamin-B.

And Grape-Nuts is crisp! It encourages the thorough chewing which is necessary for perfect digestion and for the health of teeth and gums.

Make the tempting, nutritious — less than one cent—single serving of Grape-Nuts a daily breakfast habit. Your grocer has Grape-Nuts in wax-wrapped packages ready to eat as it comes from the package—or you may wish to accept the offer below.

COOLER WEATHER HELPS CONQUER PROVINCE FIRES

Some Large Blazes Still at the Coast; Winds Predicted

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 18. — Cooler weather experienced over the week-end in most of the districts of British Columbia where serious forest fires were burning during the past week, has aided in their subjection, it was said here tonight. The situation remains critical, with three or four large blazes not yet under control, and strong winds and continued dry weather forecast by weather bureau officials.

The fires still burning in the coast district are at Fanny bay and Stillwater, adjacent to extensive lumbering plants, and in the Sooke district on Vancouver island, west of Victoria. This last blaze is reported to be endangering that city's watershed timber. It assumed serious proportions on Saturday, and spread into new territory today.

At the local provincial forestry office, it was stated that approximately 200 fires were reported either extinguished or brought under control last week.

Canadian ale worth $100,000, bootleg rate, was seized in East New York freight yards of Long Island railway.

HALT MOVE TO PUT LEAD, ZINC ON FREE LIST

Starkey Says Some Buyers in East Launching Campaign

WANT TO ADMIT EUROPE METALS

Associated Boards Will Stand for Kootenay Producers

"Because the lead and zinc mining industry of the Kootenay, and the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company of Canada, after a long and hard struggle, are enjoying prosperity with the rise of the metals, a propaganda is being started by some large metal consumers in the east to remove the slight protection on lead and zinc, which in Canada are chiefly Kootenay products, and throw open the Canadian market to the lead and zinc of the world," stated Fred A. Starkey, commissioner of the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia, Saturday.

"It behooves the Kootenay, and British Columbia, to stand on guard against this move, which is put forward for the benefit of some industries that enjoy protection on their products, but now see a chance to introduce raw material from Europe. The matter will be immediately taken up by the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern British Columbia, and representations will be made to the Dominion government, as to the importance to the lead and zinc producers, of the small protection these metals have hitherto been allowed."

Propaganda Starting

Mr. Starkey said items were beginning to appear in eastern papers to the effect that the duty of a cent a pound on these metals was "an entirely unnecessary gift to the Consolidated," it being overlooked that the company passed on the duty and other favorable factors to the lead and zinc producers in the shape of low treatment rates, rates that were so low that they were as important a factor as the high price of metals in developing the production of this territory. On the present price of metals, the duty worked out at 10 or 12 per cent, a pretty low duty to be called protective.

That a few of the big consumers of pig lead are behind the movement, is the belief of Commissioner Starkey.

"Such an extraordinary move would be to their advantage, but to the disadvantage of the producers of Canadian lead, who almost entirely are operating in British Columbia," he pointed out. "Their motive is purely selfish, as the fabricators of pig lead enjoy a very high tariff protection and are making large profits. Apparently they would gladly place their orders for pig lead in Europe, if removal of the slight duty made it to their advantage to do so.

Smaller Producers Overlooked

"The theory is that because the Consolidated, after having spent millions of dollars and not paid its shareholders any dividends for some years, is temporarily making a lot of money, the tariff on lead and zinc should therefore be wiped out. The position of the hundreds of small producers of lead ores is entirely lost sight of. The fact that only through the very large production is the Consolidated enabled to give present low rates of treatment is not thought of.

"In contrast with the Canadian tariff, the United States tariff places duties of 2¼ cents a pound on lead and 1 7-8 cents a pound on zinc, an adequate deterrent to raw materials going in from Europe.

Cheap European Labor

"If lead and zinc were placed on the Canadian free list, it would not be so much the American competition that would be offered to our Kootenay products, but competition from continental Europe, where wage scales and living conditions are very much below what they are in this country. The wage scale in Polish Silesia, where large quantities of lead and zinc are produced, for instance, is only 70 cents per day, and that in Spain, where further large quantities are produced, is seven francs per day, which at the present value of the franc works out at a daily wage of under 25 cents."

It was up to British Columbia, and particularly the Kootenay, to resist this proposal to penalize lead and zinc mining the instant conditions had taken a favorable turn, Mr. Starkey declared.

CLAIM STAKING RECORD FOR SIX MONTHS BROKEN

To End of June, 189 Mineral Claims Recorded in Nelson Division

LARGEST NUMBER FOR MANY YEARS

Greatest Activity Is in the Salmon Valley Area

There have been 189 mineral claims staked in the Nelson mining district since January 1, the largest number known to have been located in six months for a number of years.

Most of the locations have been in the Salmon valley. A few were on Kootenay lake shores and there were some in the Arrow lakes district.

There have been 37 mineral claims staked out on the Salmon river, the greatest number in any one locality. With 16 locations to its credit, Lost creek comes second on the list. There were 12 locations made on the Pend d'Oreille river and between the Salmon and Pend d'Oreille river mouths 15 claims were staked.

HALL FIRE NOW CLOSE TO APEX; BURNING SLOWLY

High Wind Saturday Night Imperilled Golden Age, Wiley's Spur

EXPECT TO CORRAL HALL FIRE TODAY

Flames Now Down to the Track; Heat Can Be Felt on Highway

Fanned by a high wind Saturday night the Hall fire raced at a great speed in all directions, but last night Forest Ranger Jack StDenis reported the fire fairly well under control, and burning slowly toward Apex, a small logging siding six miles from Nelson. It now extends from a point a mile from Apex south to a point about a mile past Hall Siding, a distance of about five miles long and from one to two miles deep, or approximately 10 square miles. Some time during its race over Hall mountain the fire is thought to have taken the Lost Cabin mine buildings, owned by a Spokane man. Although the burning of the buildings is not certain, such is the belief, for the mine was in the path of the flames. Crews are unable to get in that location at present.

Practically from Wiley's Spur to Hawkins' Spur the fire is either down to the Great Northern railway tracks fire is a quarter of a mile from them. For a time Saturday night the Golden Age mine, including the new stamp mill, several houses, and Wiley's Spur loading siding were threatened by the raging flames. Hawkins' spur is threatened, but the fire is yet a quarer of a mile from it yet. Every effort was put forth to save the situation, and large crews and two automatic pumps fought the flames all night before getting them under control.

Mile From No. 2 Camp

A large crew is stationed at Wiley's No. 1 camp in the Clearwater, and has the situation well guarded. The fire is yet about a mile from the camp, and at times almost crossed the fire guard.

Another strong crew is stationed at Wiley's spur yard aided with a water pump. The fire at this point is in a half fan fashion, and close to the lumber piles. The wind had died down considerably last night, and the crew is taking every advantage in corralling the fire at that section.

Expect to Reach Head at Apex Today

The Apex end of the blaze looked good last night, and was well under control. It was slowly burning through brush and unless a strong wind, has arisen during the night the fighters expect to reach the head of it early this morning.

Heat from the fire can be felt from the Nelson-Spokane highway, which is only a few feet above the railway tracks. Early Saturday morning the smoke was so thick in the valley that motorists were unable to see more than 100 feet ahead of them along the road.

Deer and rabbits are being frightened from the hills and are numerous along the highway.

Over 150 Men Now Engaged

An extra crew of 20 men were sent from Nelson at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon to the Apex end of the fire. They were not needed then, and were sent to the Pend d'Oreille fire, but the situation looked well there too, and the crew arrived back at Apex last night. Another crew of 28 men was sent out last night, and more men will be dispatched today. About 130 firefighters are at present working on the Hall fire, not counting the crew which will go out today.

Forest Ranger StDenis stated the Hall fire has yet burned very little valuable timber, although it has practically cleaned the Hall mountain of timber. Where the fire is now burning in the Clearwater district, all the timber is valuable, and this the fire started to plow through. Saturday night.

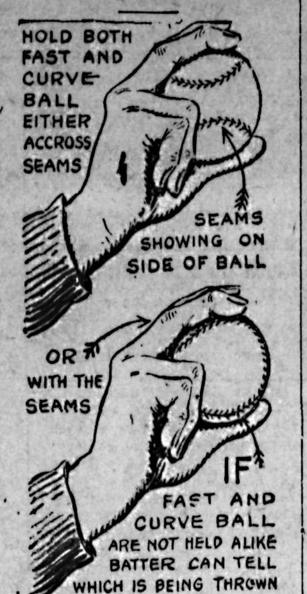
Hurlers Tip Off Pitch by Manner of Grasping Ball



By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher, New York Giants)

Many pitchers betray by some subconscious little mannerism or way they grasp the horsehide for their fast ball, curve or change of pace just what they are going to deliver to the batter.

More batters are tipped off by this on just what type of ball is coming than by signs that are stolen from the catcher by coachers and other methods.

Some pitchers grasp their fast ball across the seams and their curve ball with the seams. A smart coacher like "Chief Bender" of the White Sox can tip off the batter on every ball pitched.

Bender at one time used a word sign to signal the batter. Any sentence including "crack it" denoted a fast ball was being delivered.

If he shouted, "make it be good," the batter knew a curve was coming, and was set for it.

And he could tell when a saliva artist was throwing his "spitter" by watching the vibration of the peak of his cap when he was applying the saliva.

Playing Two-Day Match With a 'Western' Aggregation

GLASGOW, July 18.—Having practically established their conquest over England, the touring Australian cricketers at the week-end turned their attention to Scotland, and invaded that country. That it was little more than a courtesy call is generally conceded, for, while the Scots hold their own well in games of a more rugged character, they have never taken kindly to the national of the sassenach.

They were no match for the Australians. An eleven drawn from the West of Scotland, captained by H. F. Maguire of West of Scotland Cricket club and including representatives from Glasgow High School Cricket club, Glasgow Academicals and other college organizations, opened a two-day game with the Australians at Partick.

The day's play resulted in the West being dismissed for 163 runs, while the Australians, in an expositionary spirit, rang up 259 for three wickets.

Wonderfully Delicious Known the World Over

To healthful, carbonated water is added the juice of luscious oranges—the delicate flavor of their peel—the zestful tang of the fruit acid found in oranges, lemons and limes—a pure food color, such as you use in your cakes and candies—pure cane sugar. Nutritious, wholesome—a delightful thirst puencher!

No matter where you are, always identify the genuine by the Orange-CRUSH Label.

Call up your nearest dealer. Tell him to send you a case of Orange-CRUSH today.

A Bold Buccaneer---
For a Fraction of a Cent!

WHO wants to be "gypped" by the dealer who, when asked for Orange-CRUSH, boldly and plainly, without comment, hands out an inferior imitation, or with an argument, when forced? This type of buccaneer is willing to hand you a substitute of poorer quality for the sake of a fraction of a cent more profit per bottle. What would he do for ten cents?

Patronize the dealer who hands you Orange-CRUSH when you ask for it. Orange-CRUSH costs him more than drinks of inferior quality. But most dealers know that Orange-CRUSH is more profitable to handle, because it brings them a greater volume of sales—brings the customer back to the counter again and again.

QUIET STRENGTH IN STOCK MARKET

Quotations Hold Recent Level; Trade Mixed in Character

NEW YORK, July 18.—Quiet strength prevailed in most groups on the curb exchange yesterday with quotations in the main list holding around the level reached on yesterday's rally.

The industrials division was featured by strength in the motor shares. Ford of Canada opened up 5½ points and Stutz rose fractionally to 25⅜.

Oil shares held steady within narrow range.

A mixed character of trade was recorded for curb securities through the last several days, attributed largely to the fact that there has been considerable switching of accounts and profit-taking for one reason or another. Few sessions of the last week produced much in the line of consistent animation, the market being dull and active by turns. Price changes were irregular and in the ultimate little difference from the preceding week was recorded. Strong spots were uncovered only to have gains lost through selling for purposes of liquidation.

Business Facts

THE CAPITAL WILL NEVER INCREASE IF THE INTEREST IS NOT REINVESTED.

Reinvestment of earned interest is the secret of increasing your capital.

* * *

There is no magic formula by which capital can be made to increase. The only way to build up your investment fund is by the steady and consistent reinvestment of interest earned.

The investor often feels the temptation to spend his dividends for current needs. The money that he has saved has earned him more money—it seems almost like a gift to him, and he wishes to enjoy it. But if he does this he can never build up even a modest fortune.

With the reinvestment of earnings, however, the investment fund is increased. In turn, more interest is earned, and the subsequent addition to the capital is a greater one. This process continues so that the total investment fund will grow with surprising rapidity through the reinvestment of the income it produces.

NAKUSP'S FIRES CONVERGE INTO ONE HUGE ONE

Several Times Fire Has Jumped Guard; Men Flee

MANY OTHER FIRES ON ARROW LAKES

Altogether 300 Men Fight Fires at Present in That Area

NAKUSP, July 18.—Six fires northeast of Nakusp and above the Hot Springs were today converged into one huge fire, covering five miles in length along the creek and adjacent mountains within one mile of the springs. Over 100 men are employed fighting it, under Forest Ranger E. F. Frost.

In this section the flames have several times jumped the fire guard prepared, and necessitated men having to run for their lives. In their effort to escape the flames and falling trees today, Leslie Whittaker, son of Rev. C. Whittaker, fell on the blade of an axe, cutting a deep gash in his leg, while George Creswell also fell and has a nasty cut from an axe on his head. Both received treatment at the camp.

Wilson Creek Out of Control

Several fires are burning near Nakusp. At Wilson lake, seven miles east of here, a huge fire is burning out of control, and has 80 men fighting it. At Halcyon a smaller fire is under control, but in the Arrowhead district Ranger A. G. Fowler has some 70 men between there and Gerrard with no particulars of progress available.

Forest fires in the Nakusp and Arrow lakes division have huge proportions, and are burning up the valuable timber which has been held for many years in anticipation of its manufacturing. Mill and other industries closed down, and the employees have gone to fight the flames in an effort to save timber on the Koofkalus creek, which enters into the Arrow lake north of Nakusp.

Trucks Are Busy

Trucks, cars and pack horses are kept busy carrying men and provisions as far as they could travel toward the fires.

The big fires are all spreading, with the humidity in Nakusp today at 33, which indicates that conditions are at the worst for spreading. Over 300 men are now engaged in fighting fires in this district.

Texas Baptist Pastor Has a Congregation of 6000

FORT WORTH, Texas, July 18.—Charged with murder for the killing yesterday of W. Chipps, Fort Worth lumberman, Rev. J. Frank Norris today preached his regular Sunday morning sermon from the text, "There is no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus."

Standing within 50 feet of the church study, where Chipps was killed, when called to protest against certain utterances of the widely known fundamentalist, Dr. Norris told one of the largest Sunday audiences he has ever commanded that his faith was stronger than ever.

The First Baptist church auditorium, which seats 6000, was filled to the doors.

Threats of Death

According to the preacher's version of the shooting, given last night, Chipps called at Dr. Norris' study and threatened to kill him.

He demanded, according to the pastor's statement, that the latter desist from attacks on certain of Chipp's friends.

Dr. Norris said he tried to induce Chipps to leave his study, and he escorted the visitor to the door. The latter, however, returned with a threat, and was apparently about to attack him, when Dr. Norris, according to his statement, took a watchman's pistol from a drawer and fired at Chipps.

Chipps was shot three times. He died in an ambulance.

MEIGHEN OPENING SPEECH TOMORROW

Announcement of Election Date May Be Made Then

OTTAWA, July 18. — Political interest will be focused this week on Premier Meighen's opening speech of his campaign. He will fire the first gun in his coast-to-coast campaign here on Tuesday night.

Announcement of the date of the election, unless it is made in the interim, and no official intimation is forthcoming tonight, will probably be one of the features of his inauguration speech. The addition to his cabinet of two further representatives from the province of Quebec may also be announced. There is, however, nothing official on this later point.

Former Premier King is not likely to deliver the initial speech until next week. Mr. King is spending the week-end at his summer home, only shortly removed from Ottawa. In the course of the day, and again tonight, the former premier is understood to have conferred with several of his close political followers.

Neither of the two leaders had yet completed his itinerary, although this work is said to be well advanced. Their respective campaigns, it is said, will cover all provinces.

WRIGHT DEFEATS BANET OF CUBA, TIES THE SCORE

Canada and Cuba Two-All Now in Davis Cup Series

HAVANA, July 18.—Canada and Cuba stood two-all in the second round of the Davis cup tennis matches when rain stopped further play this afternoon.

Crocker and Rogello Paris, who were playing when the storm broke, will resume tommorow, with the score of the first set 4 to 3 in the Cuban's favor.

After losing the doubles yesterday in a desperate struggle, in which Crocker and Jack Wright carried Paris and Chacon to five sets, the Canadian team retrieved its fortune in the first match this afternoon, when Wright downed Vincente Banet, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2.

The Canadian champion had little difficulty with his opponent. A good sized gallery turned out to watch the Wright-Banet match.

Interest in the tournament increased with the announcement that the matches were now tied, and the gallery was largely augmented as Crocker and the Cuban champion took the court. The sun had come out, and the day was a broiler. Crocker's chances were not considered any too good by the wiseacres.

The fact that he was able to take three out of seven games from the cautious and clever Paris came therefore as a surprise to the gallery, and with great pleasure to the Canadian supporters.

After yesterday's match, Crocker, who had netted the last point, was carried off the court by his friends. Dr. Vincente Banet attended the Canadian, and said that he merely suffered from exhaustion.

GROW FAVORITES IN QUANTITIES; A MASS EFFECT

Mrs. Rutherford Imagines Every Garden Showing Solid Colors

REDSTARTS NEST IN HER ORCHARD

She Makes Plea for Good Entries for Flower Show

I have decided to rechristen all my members of the daisy family and call them by the comprehensive name of "charity," for truly they cover a multitude of sins. In June the June Marguerites come along, and with their appealing faces turn the garden borders into a fairyland of starry blossoms, and now in that disagreeable interim between the summer and autumn blooming things, the Shasta daisies that have insinuated themselves into every available nook and corner come nobly to the rescue. With these, and the billowy masses of Gypsophilas, my garden is not quite a wilderness, though other flowers are conspicuous by their absence. However, phloxes and hollyhocks are coming along, and Heleniums appear.

Massed Hollyhocks

Speaking of hollyhocks, I wonder if you have noticed the beautiful effect of hollyhocks grown in a thick border on either side of a walk in a Stanley street garden? It is one more proof, if any were needed, that the right way to grow all these things is in big groups or masses instead of dotted here and there. Hollyhocks do not do very well with me, they revel in a rich heavy soil, but an effect such as that garden boasts is an achievement worth while. Wouldn't it be wonderful if every householder would strive for something as striking by growing his favorite flower in quantity. As Ruggles would say, "It would never do for me," for I am a greedy person, and must have as many different flowers as possible, but for those who like to specialize it would be a fine scheme. Another pretty garden opposite the Hume school has some magnificent clumps of double hollyhocks in various colors grown along a screening fence.

Monarda, bee balm, or bergamot, is a blaze of color just now, the variety Cambridge Scarlet being very fine, and continuing in bloom for a long season. This plant needs to be grown in full sun, and is better grown where it can be given room to establish itself, as it looks far better in a big group. I've had it for years, but was trying to grow it in shade, and never realized what a fine thing it was till I moved some of it into a warm sunny place.

Adenophora, or the grand bellflower, has been making a fine show with its graceful spikes of purple bells. Some roots planted in an old cold frame which I did not get time to transplant have spread until they have preempted the whole space, and have been a mass of bloom. These are valuable as coming along when the other bellflowers, such as Campanula Media and C. Persicifolia, are finished blooming.

Carry on Succession

I am mentioning all these things because they help to bridge the gap between foxgloves, Canterbury Bells and Delphiniums, and the phloxes and later autumn flowers. There are not many perennials that bloom at that particular time, but those I have mentioned, and some of the spireas and Astilbe's will help amazingly to carry on an unbroken succession of bloom right through the season.

I should also mention the Coreopsis, Lanceolata, Gaillardias and the Scabiosa Caucasica, which I wrote about last week. These have never done so well for me as this season. Evidently the hot dry weather suits them, and they are larger and bluer than ever before. There is a yellow daisylike flower, Anthenus, which I am very fond of, though it is apt to degenerate and become a weed, but, kept within bounds, is very pretty, both in the garden, and for cutting, and Galium or ladies' bed straw—don't you love those quaint old-fashioned names?—is just now opening its mistlike blossoms. It is even daintier and more airy looking than Gypsophila, and instead of the hard cold while of the gyp, is of a warm creamy color, and is especially lovely with the blue scabious. It is easily grown, and if cut back, will throw out new branches and furnish bloom for late in the season, a thing Gypsophila refuses to do.

Plant That Changed Its Habit

It is interesting to note what plants will do when grown under different conditions. A case in point is that of Campanula Carpatica, a dwarf bellflower which is very useful for edgings and on the rock garden. I have two colors, white and blue, and grown in their favorite sunny position, they form fat clumps about eight inches high covered with starry blossoms. A stray seed of the blue variety sowed itself in a box of ferns on the veranda, and for two years has thrown out trailing branches as long as my arm, with many blossoms of a paler shade of blue, so that this plant becomes a trailer when grown without sunlight.

My pretty borders of corn flowers have been neglected in the stress of work that is the lot of the rancher in the fruit season, and have gone to seed, and the birds are reaping a great harvest and, incidentally, sowing a fine crop for next season.

Mr. Redstart Appears

I wonder if any of you have noticed a new bird visitor this summer, a most elegant gentleman, with the most brilliant coloring I have ever seen. At first I thought he was the Baltimore Oriole, but am pretty sure of him now as he answers identically the description of the redstart given in the National Geographic "Book of Birds." I cannot do better than quote part of the description of this bird of fiery plumage: "Its beauty of form and plumage and its graceful motions place this dainty bird at the head of our list of wood warblers—a place of distinction indeed. The bird appears to be the incarnation of animated motion, and fairly dances its way through the forest—Spanish imagination has coined a suggestive and fitting name for the redstart, Candelita, "the little torchbearer." The full appropriateness of the name appears as the graceful creature flits through the greenery displaying the salmon colored—I should call it flame colored—"body and the bright tail and wing patches." "Ornamental as the redstart is, it possesses other claims on our gratitude, for it is a most active and untiring hunter of insects; such as spittle insects, tree hoppers and leaf hoppers, and both orchard and forest trees are benefitted by the unceasing warfare it wages."

A pair of these beautiful birds evidently have a nest in some of our trees, for the other evening, when Biddy, the cat, happened to stroll across the lawn, they both came down on the branches of the tree as closely as possible, scolding at the tops of their voices, flying down threateningly and generally making a great fuss.

They are the liveliest creatures I ever saw. It is almost impossible to get a good look at them, so lively are their motions, even though they seem perfectly tame, and sometimes alight on the verandah railing while we sit at meals. They are certainly most beautiful birds, and I hope and pray that they will increase and multiply in my garden, where their favorite food abounds, worse luck!

There are many other members of the great warbler family flitting busily about and filling the air with their sweet calls and flutings. It is comforting to watch these little garden assistants, as a sort of antidote to the exasperation engendered by the depredations of the robins, western tangers, and catbirds in the cherry trees. It almost takes away one's appetite to have to eat one's meals in full view of a dozen fat rascals of birds stealing cherries. However, one has only to think of the thousands of cut worms, slugs and other harmful creatures that they also need and eat for a balanced ration, to be reconciled to their weakness for the very finest cherries.

I hope all my gardener friends have made their entries for the flower show, and that they are entering in every class possible. If every one would take an interest in the flower show, we should soon be known far and wide as a city of flowers. Unfortunately, too many people say, "Oh, I have nothing worth showing," before the show, and then, after the show, one hears the same people saying, "Why, I had far better flowers in my own garden than the ones that took first prize!"

Give Show Flowers a Drink

Perhaps it would not be amiss to give a few pointers on how to exhibit flowers to the best advantage. My experience of many years is that it is best to cut one's flowers the evening before the show, and let them stand all night in water in a cool place and stage them early in the morning. Unfortunately, I myself have never been able to do this, because of being out of town, so my flowers are usually cut either the night before, or early in the morning of the day before the show, but even so, they are in much better shape for staging than if they had been freshly cut and taken to the exhibition building without first being given a drink.

Before making your entries, be sure to read the rules governing the exhibition, and, if you are wise, read them again before staging. It is so easy to trip up on some trifle and disqualify your exhibit.

Sweet Peas a la Nature

I am hoping some one, or rather a number of people, will enter the sweet pea competitions this year for sweet peas grown in the old-fashioned way, without disbudding or pruning. The president of the Horticultural society has many a good-natured tilt with the members who grow sweet peas for exhibition, and I must say they are very good-natured when I level the most biting sarcasms I can command at their long legged sweet peas. There may be some advantage in growing them in this way, but they certainly add no beauty to the garden, and it is still doubtful when one considers decorative value, perfume, daintiness and purity of color, whether the exhibition grown have any advantage over those given good culture and allowed to grow naturally.

In any case, I was willing to back my opinion by offering a silver basket for annual competition for the best exhibit of sweet peas grown naturally, and I do hope there will be a lot of entries in that competition.

SAVE LINDSLEY'S SIDING BUT LOSE ANCIENT CAMPS

Meadows-Erie Fire Close to Shingle Camp No. 2

RED BIRD MINE LOST ONLY POWDER HOUSE

Pend d'Oreille Fire Is Fought by Soldiers Across Line

Backfiring the timber when the wind was blowing the opposite way saved the Lindsley Bros. Canadian company's loading siding, which contains thousands of posts and poles, at Meadows, in the Salmon valley.

The fire now consists of several spot fires on the top of the mountain. Two old camps of the Lindsley company's, which had not been used for some time, No. 2 and No. 3, were burned out during the last three days. The Kootenay Shingle company's No. 2 camp, threatened for three days, still stands, but the fire is on the ridge of the camp, protected by a wide guard.

Quite a high wind blew up the mountain side early last night, and the fire gained some distance. The fire was so smoky last night that the length of the front could not be estimated, although Saturday it was about seven miles long, but it is not known how far back it had gone. J. T. Price, forest ranger, has about 52 men engaged in battling the fire by digging trenches, cutting guards and backfiring at every possible chance.

Four Fire Will Cross Creek

It is feared that the fire will jump the Cariboo creek, and the crews are being taken from the top of the fire and placed below, near the creek. Should the fire jump the river, it will race through valuable timber on the other mountain.

Of the several spot fires started during wind storms when pieces of bark were carried some distances in the air, only one or two of them are very large. The original fire, just above Lindsley's loading siding, started Monday night last by the lightning, has extended almost over the summit of the mountain, and is slowly creeping down the other side. The situation at that point is too dangerous to place men at work on it.

Hope For Rain in Pend d'Oreille

Rain is being hoped for on both sides of the international boundary. On the Canadian side the south side of Pend d'Oreille river is dotted with fires, several of which are large ones, and burning strongly through valuable timber. The forest fire, which was started by lightning a week ago, is about five miles long, and its width is unknown. It is thought the flames are over on the American side of the line, but the smoke is so dense at that point that the men are not taking too many chances in fighting the blaze, and no crew will be put there until the smoke has somewhat cleared.

Red Bird Mine Houses Safe

The Red Bird mine buildings, which were reported Wednesday as being totally destroyed when the fire swept through that section, nearly all still stand. Only one building was burned, that being the powder house, but the powder had been transferred in to the tunnel when the fire threatened. The fire raced past the mouth of the tunnel, burned props on an ore truck, and the track ties, but did not burn a paper mailing tag tied to the truck. This occurrence still has the fire fighters puzzled.

Little can be done to the spot fires, for the timber is so thick there that the wind fans them almost continuously, and they are gradually creeping together, and burning toward the summit of the mountain. Over 132 men are engaged in battling them. The fires are all far from a creek or river except one, and the fighters there are helped by the use of an automatic pump. These fires last night were reported as fairly well under control, and burning slowly.

A small fire on the north side of the Pend d'Oreille river, which burned for three days, was extinguished Friday.

Fires on American Side

Several large fires are burning on the American side of the border line, one of which is almost ready to cross the summit of the mountain and into Canada. Metaline Falls is filled with smoke from the fires, which also were started from the electrical storm which struck the Kootenay and Boundary districts. Soldiers, numbering 65, from Fort Wright training camp, near Spokane, were taken to this fire Saturday, owing to the scarcity of men around Metaline. Practically all lumber mills are closed and the employees fighting the fires.

So scarce are men there that a huge fire on the top of the mountain, near Slate creek, a mile south of the border line, has burned thousands of acres of good timber, but no crew has yet been able to fight it.

AIRPLANE FINDS A LOST PROSPECTOR

Found on Shores of Lake; Wandered Two Days and Nights

PINE RIDGE, Ont., July 18.—The report of how an airplane patrol succeeded in rescuing Harry Jones, mining prospector of British Columbia, after he had wandered aimlessly for two nights and days in the thick forest surrounding Narrow lake, has just been made here.

Jones lost his way on the morning of July 11, while he and a partner were out staking claims. Search parties scoured the brush by day, and at night huge bonfires were set in an effort to lead the wandering prospector to safety, but after two days no sign of him had been discovered. It was in the late afternoon of July 13 that Capt. A. Oaks, pilot of an airways company plane, sighted Jones wandering about of the shore of the lake.

On being rescued the man showed no signs of his privation, and declared he had suffered no hardships.

PREMIER BALDWIN NOT SO HOPEFUL

Blames Both Sides for Stand; Men Throw Away Chances

LONDON, July 18.—Premier Baldwin himself seems to have very small hope of an early settlement of the coal strike. Speaking on this subject at a political demonstration at Norwich, he admitted he had no idea how long the dispute would last.

He blamed the owners and miners equally for their refusal to face the facts, and was rather ironic concerning the attempts of the bishops and church leaders to reconcile the conflicting parties, remarking:

"I hope they will succeed. I shall welcome a solution from any quarter, however unlikely."

The premier has agreed to receive a deputation from the Anglican and Free churches Monday evening. In a letter to the bishop of Lichfield, he made it clear that the government could not assent to any further coal subsidy.

Maintaining that the miners' leaders had thrown away more than one chance of obtaining a fair settlement, he failed to see their motive, unless they supposed they could force the government to subsidize the mining industry at the expense of the country.
