DEATH TAKES TOLL IN HUGE NOME FIRE

STEVENS WILL CARRY PROBES TO BITTER END

Appeals to People as Business People Not Inclined to Help

DENIES A SPLIT WITH MR. BENNETT

Has No Apologies for Actions; Hits at Tobacco Firm

TORONTO, Sept. 18. (CP)— An appeal to the citizens of Canada instead of business heads because they "would not listen" to him, to help solve the economic difficulties, was laid before a mass meeting here tonight by Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce in the Dominion government.

Speaking in support of T. L. Church, Conservative candidate in the East Ontario by-election, Mr. Stevens went deeply into the causes that brought about the price spread and mass buying probe. He reviewed the trend of economic conditions during the past decade and scored organization—chain stores, packing firms and tobacco companies—that formed corporate mergers to the detriment of the people.

Stevens held definite hope that one result of the probe into mass buying and price spreads would be a remedy to correct the situation and said bluntly he would go on, "whatever happens" to the completion of his task.

LOTTERY BILL OKAY IN N. Y.

Will Raise Up to $39 Million for Needy; New Tax Imposts

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—New York City today turned to gambling—a lottery bill—to help care for its 300,000 needy.

The lottery bill, carefully phrased so that its legality may be upheld, and two measures imposing new taxes on the city's residents were rushed through the city's "legislature"—the board of aldermen and the board of estimate.

Mayor Fiorello H. la Guardia, the first non-Tammany mayor since 1916, was reported ready to sign the three measures, pushed through to raise from $20,000,000 to $39,000,000 to carry on relief work halted when the city's funds were exhausted last Friday.

In addition to the lottery law these two steps were taken by the two boards:

1. A one-tenth of 1 per cent tax on gross earnings of businesses.

2. An income tax equal to 15 per cent of all federal income taxes paid during 1934.

RUNAWAY CAR SMASHES THREE

But Driver Escapes Unturt at Victoria

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 18 (CP).—C. H. Butterfield is safe today after a wild ride down Lonsdale hill in a runaway automobile, but four cars are badly damaged as the result of the accident.

Butterfield was driving his car down the steep incline when he lost control and the vehicle ran wild for more than two blocks, finally coming to rest when it crashed into three other cars parked at an intersection. Butterfield escaped with only slight injuries.

A similar accident, which too, almost claimed the life of a man, occurred on the same hill two years ago.

War Rumbles Increasing Among European Nations

FRANCE CALLS 15,000 TO ITS REGULAR ARMY

Troops Drill on War Time Basis for the First Time

GENEVA WONDERS HOW KEEP PEACE

Italian Move Drill of Youth Puzzler; the Germans Watched

(By the Associated Press)

The League of Nations Tuesday made ready to clasp Soviet Russia to its bosom in the interests of world peace, but Benito Mussolini ordered all Italians between eight and 33 trained for war.

The Fascist leader's move to make Italy "an armed nation" came while 15,000 French reserve forces, called suddenly from pursuits of peace, drilled on a war-time basis for the first time since the Great War.

AUSTRIA A PUZZLER

Talk of war mingled with talk of peace at Geneva, too, as Europe's great powers conferred again as to the best way of offering strife-torn Austria armed assistance should it be needed to preserve her independence.

Meanwhile Nazi Germany—the continent's question mark despite Adolf Hitler's repeated assurances of peace—was mentioned prominently at Washington as senate investigations uncovered evidence indicating that Germany was buying far more airplanes and airplane motors since Hitler came to power.

Europe still rumbled, too, with rumors that attempts would be made to restore the Hapsburg dynasty in Austria or Hungary or both.

ARMED FORCES SEEK NELSON

"Baby Face" Reported in Denver to Grab Gold Shipment

Denver, Sept. 18 (AP)—A picked crew of police sharpshooters was sent out today on a hunt for George (Baby Face) Nelson and John Hamilton, remnants of the Dillinger gang, after Chief of Police Albert T. Clark received a tip that the desperadoes were in Denver to attempt seizure of a mint shipment of $200,000,000 in gold.

"Let them try and get that gold," said Chief of Police Albert T. Clark, "we'll shoot it out with them any time, any place."

The gold shipment is expected tomorrow night from San Francisco mint.

Clark organized a squad of sharpshooters from the detective squad to cruise the city. An informant told him he had seen Nelson and Hamilton in a parked car with California license plates.

Trustees Ask a Standard Form of Teacher Contract

TRUSTEE BODY SUGGESTS NEXT SURVEY PROBE NOURISHMENT

Convention Against Compulsory School Consolidation; Mandatory Nurses, or Money Use Without Consent

Focussing the efforts of the body of school trustees for a more satisfactory contractual relationship between school boards and teachers upon two immediate objectives—a government standardized contract, and combining power of termination with continuing tenure — the British Columbia School Trustees association dealt finally Tuesday with the question of teacher contracts, the outstanding question, aside from the financial one, before the boards today.

In a session that started at 8:20 a.m. and ended at 12:40 p.m., the convention asked the government to adhere to the representative principle in changing the base of school taxation, proposd consideration of under-nourishment in the next school research, approved the idea of an advisory committee on curricula, and rejected the propositions of the government consolidating schools on its own initiative, of accumulated funds being made available for building purposes without voice of the rate-payers, and of employment of school nurses being mandatory when recommended by the health minister.

Apart from dealing with resolutions, the convention heard reports from its branches, and made preliminary nominations for Wednesday's annual election.

Action on the teacher contract problem was reached after several preliminary stages, the resolutions sent in by eight different boards having been referred Monday morning to the resolutions committee for

1500 PUPILS QUIT SCHOOLS

Montreal Scene of a Strike Because of Larger Fees

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (CP)—The old game of hookey was played on the grand scale here today when about 1500 pupils from two schools controlled by the board of Protestant school commissioners, banged their desks shut and staged a walkout as a protest against an increase in fees which went into effect at the opening of the present school term a few weeks ago.

Officials of the board were not perturbed at the turn of events. Their attitude was that if the pupils did not want to learn it was their misfortune. No action would be taken, they said, to have the strikers return to their studies.

Most of the students are said to be members of an organization known as the Students League of Montreal.

MUNITIONS MAKER POWER IN CUBA

Sold War Material to All of Governments U.S. Senate Probe Hears

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—The powerful influence that a United States munition maker wielded in Cuban affairs was told to a senate committee today through documents and the somewhat reluctant testimony of the arms dealer himself—John W. Young of Pittsburgh.

Young is president of Federal Laboratories, Inc., manufacturer of and dealer in gas bombs, submachine guns and other war materials.

The senate munitions committee was told that Young's company has sold to every government that has ruled in Cuba within the past few years. Evidence portrayed Young as advising leaders of the present regime in Cuba a a time when the Grau San Martin government was still ostensibly in power.

ITALIAN BOYS ORDERED BEAR NATION'S ARMS

FASCIST LAND TO BE ARMED NATION

Most Sweeping Peace Time Mobilization in History

By ANDRUE BERDING

ROME, Sept. 18 (AP)— Italy's boys turned tonight from marbles to machine guns as Benito Mussolini ordered compulsory military training for all the nation's males above the age of 8.

The order—intended to make the Fascist land an "armed nation"—prescribed schooling in warfare for every Italian older than 8 and younger than 33, more than half his normal span of life.

Tonight Italy's newspapers hailed with huge headlines this "revival of spirit of the ancient Romans," asserting unanimously that more and better trained material would be provided for the country's high-speed war machine.

Following the decision of the law and legislation committee that the proposed ordination of Miss Lydia Gruchy, Kelvington, Sask., by the Saskatchewan conference, would not be legal, as the constitution of the church recognized only a male ministry, Dr. Oliver spoke at length.

Rain began to fall late in the day, to add to the wan picture of ruins and desolation, but the thermometer mounted to 44 degrees from the freezing point it touched before daybreak.

Every building in town except the government wireless station, one hotel, a hospital, a section of waterfront warehouses and a few residences in the northern part of the municipality lay in smoking ruins.

The appeal was launched against the fines imposed on the newspaper men by Mr. Justice W. C. Ives for alleged contempt of court during the hearing of the civil action against ex-Premier J. E. Brownlee.

The decision to adjourn came after H. H. Parlee, K.C., for the appellants, had asked for and received permission to file notice of motion asking the court to quash the convictions against Campbell and Cowper as "an inherent right of the court."

OTTAWA, Sept. 18 (CP)—Gold produced in July amounted to 245,516 ounces, an increase of 1.2 per cent over the June output of 242,713 ounces, but a decrease of 4.3 per cent from the July, 1933, total of 256,663 ounces, the Dominion bureau of statistics reported today. During the seven months ending July, 1,697,326 ounces of gold were produced as against 1,720,397 ounces in the corresponding months of last year.

Ontario led the provinces in production in July with 171,854 ounces, and Quebec next with 31,007 ounces, while British Columbia was third with 25,578 ounces. Manitoba and Saskatchewan produced 11,124 ounces, the Yukon 5727 ounces of alluvial gold, while Nova Scotia and Alberta produced 426 ounces.

Sir Joseph Flavelle Has Bodyguard With Him When He Walks to His Work

TORONTO, Sept. 18 (CP)—Last spring Sir Joseph Flavelle with his bowler hat and walking stick sallied fourth daily (except Sunday) from his Queen's park residence and walked briskly to his downtown office via the park and University avenue. It was generally about 8:40 a.m. and he was apparently unaccompanied.

Then broke the news of the kidnapping plot against J. C. McLean, Sir Joseph's nephew by marriage. The Labatt coup followed. The walks ceased.

Sir Joseph has now resumed his walks to the office. But right at his heels—or not more than six feet away at any time—there is a stocky business-like individual with his hands casually in his coat pockets. If any other pedestrian—man or woman—gets between him and Sir Joseph, he quickly closes the gap. He takes a good eye-full of any car stalled at the curb en route.

A private detective for Sir Joseph's protection? Possibly. It is noticeable he wears a black braid down his trouser legs, suggesting a member of Sir Joseph's household staff.

At the Flavelle offices it was stated, "Sir Joseph has not inforced us of any precautions for guarding him."

GRAPHS THROW LIGHT SCHOOL COST PROBLEM

Major King Brings Out Surprising Data in Address

COSTS SHOWN AS RELATIVELY DOWN

Explains the Survey; Musical Program Pleases

At the platform session of the British Columbia School Trustees association annual convention, in the junior high school auditorium Tuesday night, the delegates and Nelson citizens enjoyed a delightful musical program, followed by an unusual and highly interesting address by Major H. B. King, technical adviser to the British Columbia commission on school finance. President J. P. Carr presided.

Major King first explained how the general committee that is co-operating with the commission, to which he is adviser, became constituted, with representation from many representative organizations interested either in education or in the taxpayers' problems, and told of how it received representations from many quarters, including its constituent organizations. A revision committee sifted and analyzed the material the general committee received.

Ultimately, Major King said, the commission report to the government, the report would be published and circulated, and the public would be able to read his own contribution to it as part of the Christmas festivities.

Major King contented himself with imparting facts which had been brought out by his studies, and he did this through the medium of tabulations and graphs shown on a large easel.

First showing a graph of general wage level growth since 1913, the speaker suggested that the increase in pay of teachers had only corresponded with thisp henomenon throughout world industry.

ATTENDANCE OUTRUNS COST

Another graph showed two generally ascending lines, one for the increase in total cost of education in British Columbia, and the other for the increase in school attendance, both for the period from 1913 to 1932. While the cost of education rose 24.7 per cent, the attendance rose 53.3 per cent, or 2.16 times as much. This showed a decrease in relative cost, he pointed out, and could be used as a defence to the charge that British Columbia had been extravagant in education.

A remarkable variation in the condition of rural school districts was revealed by Major King's table of total assessable property in such districts. In two districts there was $700,000 worth of assessable property behind each teacher employed; at the other extreme were five districts each of which contained less than $5000 worth of assessable property. His figures showed there were 20 with under $10,000, and 398 under $70,000, while 569 had less than $110,000.

MARGINAL FARMS

He made the deduction that in farm districts with the lower figures, the farmers were living on marginal or sub-marginal lands—that is, lands that could barely support them, or that were failing to do so.

The mill rate in rural school districts was the subject of another table. In the case of 56 districts that made no levy at all, either the large industry concerned paid the total school cost, thus saving the large collection charge or the residents met the expense by passing the hat. Eight districts made levies under one mill, 170 were under three, 379 were under five, and 469 were under six, the median rate being 5.26 mills. At the upper extreme were two districts that levied between 35 and 36 mills.

Incidentally, he exhibited a ratio chart from Victoria, made when the Victoria people were probing their school costs, to see whether they had been wasteful. This showed that expenditure and attendance had about kept pace until recently, when attendance kept on an up-curve, while expenditure was falling.

After paying his respects to the Citizens Research Bureau of Canada, maintained by eastern interests, and whose figures he was unable to substantiate from the bureau of statistics at Ottawa, its general tenor being to credit the west with high costs in all lines, Major King discussed waste for a time.

AVOIDABLE WASTE

One of the channels of waste was wrong selection of teachers—for localism, acquaintance, or any other reason than first rate ability. All the country practised localism, he said, no young person could hope to find a job in a strange locality. He suggested that the appointment of suitable teachers was a highly professional job—just as much professional as that of selecting textbooks for the schools.

Major King was compelled by time to cut short his address when it was most interesting.

ENTERTAINERS

The early part of the evening was consumed by a delightful program that opened with three selections by Mrs. Gladys Webb Foster's violin class at the junior high—Bach's "La Musette," Dvorak's "Largo," and Florindia's "Tarantella." Miss Ruth Craufurd sang richly "Angus McDonald," encoring with the charming "Out of the Dark." Miss Enid Etter and A. J. Cornish gave an enticing rendition of "The Singing Lesson," encoring with "Fishing," and Arthur Stringer gave a ringing baritone solo, "Homing," with "Why Shouldn't I?" as an encore.

POSTAL UNION ROTARY TOPIC

J. R. McLennan Tells of International Achievement

TRAIL, B.C., Sept. 18—The Universal Postal Union" was the subject of an address given to the Trail Rotary club by Rotarian J. R. McLellan at the Tuesday luncheon held in the Palm room of the Crown Point hotel.

"Practically all thinking men today," declared Mr. McLellan, "who study seriously the trend of things in politics and economics, are forced to the conclusion that the various sections of the world are more independent today than ever before and with the lessons of the past 20 years before them, with the realization of not only the horrors and misery but also the futility of war, whether military or merely economic, or both, they are forced to the further conclusion that the most important thing in the world today to rthe progress and happiness of mankind is the fostering of a greater degree of international goodiwill and fellowship, the sixth object of Rotary and the one rightly stressed by the leaders of our organization.

"When we speak of international relations the mind turns naturally to Geneva, the home of the league of nations, where the new ideas are struggling for survival. Most of you have some idea of the work of the league of nations, of its successes and its failures. It is not, however, of Geneva and the league of nations, that I want to speak, but rather of a much older and so far much more successful example of international cooperation. Much of the information that follows is taken from an article quoted in the August number of Readers' Digest, entitled, "When yo uWrite Abroad" by F. R. Bellamy.

MOST SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT

"It is probably not known generally to you all that in another Swiss town, the town of Berne, an office has now been operating about 60 years, the office of the Universay Postal Union, which has been described as man's first completely successful experiment in international cooperation.

"Before the year 1874, if you wanted to mail a letter to any foreign country you were faced with a most amazing—that is it seems most amazing—state of affairs. You were up against a game in which there were no rules. For instance, if you wanted to send a letter from New York to Berlin it would have cost 90 cents by German steamer or $1.25 by British boat. A letter from London to Mexico arrived $1.45 C.O.D. A letter from Berlin to Rome cost 68 cents through Switzerland and 90 cents through France. Letters to Russia went by 13 different routes, 10 of which imposed varying charges. There were six routes to Australia requiring postage that varied from a few cents up to a dollar. Such was the state of affairs when in 1866 Heinrich von Stephan was appointed the first director of posts for the North German confederation. Stephan at once grappled with this "Alice in Wonderland" situation and he was in a few years in a position to put forward a plan to bring order to the chaos. An international congress was called to consider his proposals. It met in Berne, Switzerland, in 1874, just three years after the Franco-Prussian war, and at the end of 24 days adopted every single one of his ideas. The Universay Postal union came into being as a result of the most amazing one man international agreement ever achieved and toda ythe same basic agreement which Stephan wrote for Europe and the United States serves every country in the world. Consequently you can today send a letter to almost an part of the world confident that it will receive the same swift respectful treatment that in olden times was reserved only for royal messengers of a Caesar or a Genghis Khan. No matter where you are the simple procedure is the same; just affix a five cent stamp—blue in color. Of course, between certain countries, such as between parts of the British Empire or between America and Spain, special 3-cent arrangements are in force.

DELIVER MAIL FREE

Now, you may ask, who gets the five cents. Without exception it goes to the office where you buy the stamp. Who keeps record of the transaction? No one. Every nation delivers free and uncounted within its own borders all the mail it receives direct from any other country. There is a directory showing the location of every one of the world's 265,000 post offices and another bulky volume prescribes exactly the route, by train and steamer, to each of them. Though your mail may have to pass through the postal services of half a dozen countries it is handled unquestionably by each and passed swiftly on toward its destination.

Only once every three years does the subject of money crop up in this cooperative paradise. This is caused by the necessity of carrying mail addressed by one country to another through a third. This is not strictly mutual service and to compensate the third nation for handling such "transit mail" money must change hands. To ascertain how much, four specified weeks are set apart once every three years wherein every bag or piece of mail sent to any country through a third party is checked and weighed. The complete record of all these transactions goes to the Postal Unions Central office in Berne.

ANNUAL CMPUTATION

Once all the statistics are in the charges are computed by the Berne office on an annual basis, giving the annual charge which such country must pay during the next three years to every others country that handles its transit mail. Everything is computed in gold francs and weighed by the metric system and French is the official language.

At the last count Germany emerged as the largest debtor all round, 1,600,000 gold francs. Her foreign mail goes through many countries and on many foreign steamship lines. France was the biggest creditor with nearly 2,000,000 gold francs. She carried more transit mail for the rest of the world than the rest of the world carried for her.

As the result of the uniform five cent stamp all the people of the world exchange a billion and a half first class letters every year—cheaply and with practically no red tape. The United States comes first with 191 million letters, with Britain a good second, followed by France, Germany, Japan, Austria and Italy in the order named. The single city of Singapore in the Straits Settlements mails as many foreign letters as all the Russia, half a million a month. Belgium writes three times as many as Brazil. One thing is noteworthy. The industrially developed countries send much more mail, counting printed matter, than they get. The undeveloped lands and the colonies are the ones which get more than they send.

The Berne office costs $100,000 annually. Since the inception of the postal union eight postal congresses have been held. The present colors of our one, two and five cent stamps, are the outcome of the Washington meeting in 1897 when these colors were made uniform in every postal service in the world.

Within the Union many lesser private agreements have been made, for example the Pan-American and American Spanish agreements by Spain and the countries of the western hemisphere so that the domestic rates now holds sway on this whole continent and transit charges are abolished, and except in the air mail services where accounts are still kept, no money changes hands at all.

The development of the international air mail is the most recent outstanding achievement. Here, by muutal agreement there are no frontiers. The air mail flies inviolate over every land. Where this new air mail service will end no man can say. But one thing is certain: the Universal Postal union is mankind's first completely successful experiment in international cooperation. Stephan died in 1898. The human race appears considerably less crazy because he once lived.

That is a splendid epitaph. Let us hope that in years to come the historian may also be able to say of Rotary international, that the human race appears less crazy because of the increasing difusion of the Rotary spirit and cooperation throughout the world.

Visiting at the luncheon were: George Christie, Calgary Rotarian, who left for his home Tuesday; C. V. Riesterer of Vancouver; and J. V. Reed of the department of exterior affairs, Ottawa.

Mrs. Smith Lauds the Beauty of the Kootenays

URGES REFORM IN EDUCATION

Principal L. V. Rogers Entertains With Flow of Wit

Relaxing from the strenuous activities of the business sessions for a while, delegates to the British Columbia School Trustees association convention, were shown over the district adjacent to Nelson Tuesday afternoon by the members of the Nelson board of trade who put their cars at the disposal of the guests, for trips to Bonnington and up the West Arm to Balfour. In the evening 120 guests, including delegates, school teachers, school board, and city council members, sat down to a banquet in the Hume silver ballroom.

Mrs. Paul Smith, M.P.P., Vancouver, and L. V. Rogers, principal of the Nelson high school, were the speakers of the evening. Mrs. Smith paid tribute to the beauties of the district and propounded her beliefs regarding the future development of educational systems along the lines of training pupils for a set vocation. Mr. Rogers provided the "spice" of the evening with a steady flow of wit and repartee.

Old time music was provided by J. M. Ludwig, base viol; R. E. Stratton, cello; Jack Worthington, violin; F. E. Wheeler, piano, and the gathering entered into the spirit of numbers when Joseph Harwood, Vernon delegate, led community singing.

Mrs. Smith expressed pleasure at having the opportunity of visiting the city and thanked the city council, mayor, school board, board of trade and others, for their hospitality. It was her first visit to the Kootenay country and the scenic beauty had come up to her expectations in every respect, and she eulogized on the color of the hills and freshness of the air.

POCKET BOOK OF B.C.

Down on the coast the Kootenay country was looked upon as the pocket book of British Columbia. The Fraser valley and the Okanagan provided for the table but the Kootenays provided the wherewithall through its mines and industries. As a child, she said that she looked upon the mining booms with interest, today she was looking to mining to provide payrolls to line the pockets of B.C. with gold, silver, and copper.

Turning back to education she stated that it was time to look ahead for future methods of education instead of looking back at the antiquated.

Technology and the machine had taken care of production, so much so that more than the world could use was being produced today, and educationists were now turning to the problem of distribution of produce and of finding occupation.

In looking forward to new lines of thought in educational methods she urged early vocational training. In the past education was handed to a child whether he or she liked it or not and the stronger the protest the better the system was supposed to be.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Training in the future would have to take the form of individual study. The natural abilities and tendencies must be cultivated from early stages and carried through. A record of the child's family environments, physical condition, should be taken and carried on until such time that a greater choice of courses of studies were afforded. Such training would lead to a happier, more profitable life and a steady advancement.

She urged a further step in vocational guidance, a longer period of training, a greater fitness before the student was to find a nich in life and an earlier date of retirement. They should be advised as to the possibilities of each vocation, its remuneration, and physical and mental requirements. She instanced the requirements set for entry into the nursing profession.

Education must not be kept in a vacuum but arrangements should be made to insure satisfaction to each child and a reasonable success in some chosen occupation. The speaker referred her audience to a recent publication of Walter Pitkin, "New Career for Youth," which is said to be one of the best sellers of the month.

In closing she urged a large view and a broader perspective in dealing with educational matters, in an effort to place the people on higher and firmer land.

A fund of amusement was provided by L. V. Rogers, who kept a promise and spoke in the lighter vein. He told of looking across the hills from the Okanagan, wishing to see the convention in action, and said that he had his curiosity amply satisfied in watching the industry around the convention table.

He joined Mrs. Smith in lauding the merits of the Kootenays, and humorously jibed the coast for its "damp," dismal climate. Nelson was a garden of Eden and its contented citizenry enjoyed an abundance of scenery and water. School boards, city councils, teachers, parents and pupils were all the objects of the speaker's repartee.

W. S. M. BOWLEY IS LECTURER

Difficulties of Obtaining Bibles in Olden Days Told

The difficulties in purchasing and maintaining possession of the Bible hundreds of years ago were interestingly described in a lecture delivered by W. S. M. Bowley, representative of the British and Foreign Bible Society of Canada and Newfoundland, in the Bethel Tabernacle here Tuesday night.

Mr. Bowley, who quotes passages from the Bible from memory, opening his lecture with a recital from Isaiah, told the story of the origin of the English Bible from the time of Martin Luther and William Tindale (about 400 years ago). Following the story he delighted the audience with a recital of "The Maid of Solway Firth," the story of Mary Jones, a girl who died at the stake because she owned a Bible. Other incidents from the days of the Scottish covenanters were told by Mr. Bowley.

Buy in Nelson

Boost Your Home Town

Help to Make:

Your Own Business Better

Your Own Income Larger

Your Own District a More Prosperous Place in Which to Live

To the people who intend to remain in Nelson for any length of time, the matter of "Home Buying" is something of vital importance.

Look at it this way: If you had a farm on which you expected to make a living, would you scoop up its best soil and give it away for ship's ballast? Hardly . . . .

This can be directly applied to buying at home. The City you intend to live in represents the soil from which you expect to make your living. Is it not, therefore, in your own interests to contribute to the richness of that soil—if the contribution requires no special effort and costs you nothing?

You are "putting by" a small margin for the future each time you purchase something in your own city and district. True, it may rest in some other person's pocket for the time being; but it cannot remain there indefinitely, and it is a part of the wealth of your own city.

Consider it any way you like. What is good for the city as a whole is profitable to some extent to every individual citizen. You would not give your farm away; so why endanger the future of your own city and your own prospects by sending away something your city needs if it is to grow and prosper—and if you are to prosper with it.

Wiley Post, World Famous Flier, Arrives at Vancouver

Wiley Post, who yesterday arrived at Vancouver, is shown above in the "stratosphere garb" he wore in making the altitude trips referred to in the following dispatch from Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 18 (CP). — Wiley Post, round-the-world flyer whose most recent interest has been an experiment with an airplane that would make commercial flying practicable at altitudes of around 40,000 feet, arrived here today en route to Alaska on a hunting trip. He will sail tonight.

Since he completed his solo flight around the world in the record time of seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes, Post has been working at development of a high altitude ship. He said he believes his machine is capable of sustained flight at around 40,000 feet and will make 350 miles per hour at that altitude. He is certain that high altitude flying will be commercially general before long.

For flights of 300 miles it will be economically better to rise at least to 20,000 feet, Post said, and for longer flights, machines will travel from 40,000 to 50,000 feet above the earth.

He said his Alaska trip "is strictly pleasure" and that he will stay there "until I bag a bear." He arrived here on a regular passenger plane.

Post's trip will be made while other famous aviators are competing ing the London-Melbourne, a flight which the intrepid aviator had planned to enter.

"But I had tough luck," he said. "A supercharger of the Winnie Mae broke and I couldn't get it fixed in time."

The Winnie Mae is the plane used by Post and Harold Gatty when they flew around the world in 1931. The plane was again used in Post's flight in 1933.

In Alaska, Post will "pal up" with Joe Crosson, Alaska flier, at Fairbanks, for his fishing and hunting jaunt.

The number of sheep in New Zealand as shown by the returns on April 30, 1934, was 28,550,770, an increase of 800,000 compared with the corresponding date in 1933.

ROSSLAND HEARS OF OXFORD GROUP

L. Hamilton Speaker at the United Church; E. Daly Also Speaks

ROSSLAND, Sept. 18—Laurie Hamilton, Oxford Group member, who has been spending some time in Nelson in the interests of the movement, visited Rossland, and was speaker at St. Andrew's United church. In simple language, Mr. Hamilton told of the "changing" power of Christ as it had effected his own life, how he had been helped in overcoming temper, irritability and selfishness, and of a transformed home life.

He sketched the hisetory of the movement and the work which, under God, it had accomplished.

Edward Daly of Rossland, told of meeting up with the group in Ontario six months ago, and of coming face to face with God as a reality, until he found himself compelled to accept the challenge and surrender his life.

Two selections were given by a men's quartette, comprised of W. F. McNeil, Louis Freeman, A. Aasland, and A. H. Freeman, and an anthem by the senior choir.

In the morning an attractive rally day service was held by the Sunday school, the program including songs by the various departments, a talk on "A Century and a Half of the Sunday School Movement," by Mrs. Howard Ferguson, one on "Our Sunday School, Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" by W. McKenzie, and a pageant "Sunday School Visitors From Far Places," presented by Miss Eileen Seccombe, Miss Doreen Jamieson, Miss Alli Mermans, Miss Rachel Douglas, Miss Jean Buick, Miss Doris Metzgar, Miss Betha Dupperon, Miss Cleo Nyman and Mrs. Howard Ferguson.

EDITOR FOR 64 YEARS IS DEAD

J. R. Dougall, 93, Dies at Montreal After Long Illness

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (CP)—Doyen of Canadian newspaper editors, John Redpath Dougall, 93, died at his home here today after long months of illness. On the staff of the Montreal Witness since he was graduated from McGill university in 1860, Mr. Dougall had been editor of the paper since 1870.

A strong man who maintained an unswerving allegiance to his principles, J. R. Dougall as an editor embraced the cause of free trade, advocated liberalism, preached uncompromising temperance, upheld the rights of Protestantism, opposed barriers among Christians and steadfastly campaigned for complete civil and religious equality.

Mr. Dougall served his paper 73 years without accepting salary or dividends.

His paper, originally a daily, became a weekly in 1913 after many reversals of fortune. Mr. Dougall espoused no political party and was militantly independent. He clung to his editorial policies despite all opposition and pressure.

In 1870, J. R. Dougall became editor of the paper his father founded in 1860. John Redpath Dougall as an active young journalist interviewed President Abraham Lincoln in the White House, looked down on the streets of Paris as the victorious Prussian troops marched through the city in 1871, and witnessed the tumult in Rome which followed Garibaldi's campaign for the unification of Italy.

Frequently Mr. Dougall found all opposing parties and sects lined up against him at once. His paper suffered financially but was nourished constantly from the Dougall private fortune.

Esling Explains Three New Acts That Help the Farmer

To Aid Those Who Are Financially Involved

THIRD IS THE MARKETING ACT

All Three Are Fully Analyzed by Member

Apropos of the following article, it is announced that W. K. Esling, M.P. for Kootenay West, has been informed by the minister at Ottawa that the new farm legislation will be proclaimed in effect in British Columbia about Nov. 1.

All those engaged in the cultivation of the soil will be particularly interested in the recent federal legislation affecting farmers. This was represented in three acts—one of which is intended to relieve the condition of many who are financially involved, while another act, closely related to it, broadens the scope of the Farm Loan Act. The third act, the Marketing Act, deals more with the production and marketing of primary products on a larger scale. The general purpose of this legislation, together with the methods of applying it, is described by W. K. Esling, member for West Kootenay.

"These three measures," said Mr. Esling, "constitute a more far reaching plan in aid of agriculture than has been attempted by any country in the world, and if a man is not too deeply involved by way of mortgage and personal obligations, the Farm Debt Adjustment Act, helps him to see the way out."

COMPROMISE WITH CREDITORS

"The present indebtedness of many farmers," said Mr. Esling, is beyond their capacity to pay, but they desire to stay on the land, and the Government is equally anxious to have them do so. The Minister of finance wishes to have made clear the legislation designed to effect compromises or extensions between farmers and their creditors so that the farmer may carry on with the hope of eventually getting on his feet again.

PROCEDURE

"Each judicial district has an official receiver. In West Kootenay, it is H. C. Irving of Nelson, who has been receiver in bankruptcy in this district for the past four years. The farmer who faces a debt problem may, without any cost to himself, lay his case before the receiver, who will assist him in preparing a statement of his affairs. A proposal is worked out for a compromise of the farmers' debts, whereby they are scaled down to a point within the capacity of the farmer to pay. Then the creditors are called in and told what is the best settlement the farmer is able to make. The legislation makes available to both sides the opportunity for a fresh investigation of the true situation. It is hoped this will mean a new start for the debtor, a start which will so arrange his obligations that he can face the future with confidence and be no longer in default. The amendments to the Farm Loan Act are designed to assist the debtor to carry out the terms of the compromise.

COURT APPROVAL

"When a proposal has been concurred in by three-quarters of the unsecured creditors and by the secured creditors, it is to be approved by the court and when such proposal has been filed with the official receiver, it acts as a stay of proceedings and no action can be taken against the farmer for a period of sixty days from the date of filing, but from the date of filing, all the property of the farmer is under the authority of the court, pending the final disposition of any proceedings in connection with the proposal.

BOARD OF REVIEW

"In each province there is provision for a Board of Review, which shall consist of a judge of the Superior or Supreme court of the province, who shall be styled the Chief Commissioner and two other commissioners, one representing the debtor and one the creditors. If no approval can be approved by the creditors, the Board of Review shall endeavor, on application by the farmer or any creditor, to formulate a proposal acceptable to both the creditors and the debtor, and if approved by both, it shall be filed in the court and be binding on the debtor and all the creditors, secured and unsecured. The Act says the Board shall base its proposal upon the present and prospective capability of the debtor to perform the obligations prescribed and the productive value of the farm.

"If a proposal is approved by the court or confirmed by the board the Act clearly sets forth that a petition under the Bankruptcy Act as against the farmer who has had such proposal approved or confirmed, can only be made following failure on the part of the farmer to carry out any of the terms of the proposal, and it must further be shown that such failure shall not be deemed an act of bankruptcy, if in the opinion of the court, such failure was due to causes beyond the control of the farmer, such as hail or drought. It is recognized that success in adjusting obligations can be obtained only if all parties concerned get together in a real spirit of compromise.

INTEREST RATE REDUCED

"Another section of the Act is new in the law of Canada. It provides that whenever any rate of interest exceeding seven per cent is stipulated for in the mortgage of farm real estate, if th mortgager tenders to the mortgagee, the full amount owing on the mortgage, with interest to the time of payment, together with three month's further interest in lieu of notice, no interest shall, after the expiry of the three month's period, be chargeable, payable, or recoverable, at any rate in excess of five per centum per annum.

AN EASIER WAY OUT

"Both the Farm Debt Adjustment Act and its companion legislation, the Farm Loan Act, are administered by the Department of Finance, and approximately $30,000,000 of additional funds will be made available under the Farm Loan Act Amendments. The Minister of Finance is anxious that the details and method of operation of each Act shall be made as clear, and as inexpensive as possible, to the farmer. The legislation is designed to bring the benefits of the bankruptcy act into the rural areas, and to do it without subjecting the farmer to what he may feel to be an indignity in going through the bankruptcy court. The term "bankrupt" was originally applied only to fraudulent persons, but it has undergone a transfer of sense, until it now means one who is unable to meet his liabilities. Bankruptcy is not fraudulent when claims are beyond a debtor's capacity to pay. While under the Bankruptcy Act, a farmer cannot be forced into bankruptcy, yet he can voluntarily assign and seek safety under the Act. The difficulty in drafting legislation which would fairly and equitably take care of the rights of both the debtor and the creditor was enhanced by the fact that almost everybody in the position of creditor was also himself in the position of debtor to someone else by virtue of contract or of trust. Parliament, however, regarded as paramount the necessity of retaining the farmers on the land as efficient producers.

FARM LOAN ACT

"Complementary to the Farm Debt Adjustment Act," said Mr. Esling, "are the amendments to the Farm Loan Act, by which it is sought to make funds available to the farmer who has perfected a compromise with his creditors. It is available only, however, where his aggregate indebtedness, after a composition has been effected, is less than two-thirds of the appraised value of his land and improvements. This does no mean the assessed value or what the owner thinks the value is, but what the appraisers of the Farm Loan Board conclude to be a fair value for mortgage purposes. The British Columbia Board has its headquarters at Victoria, with George Sangster as chairman, and to him application should be made. The Board's appraisor has his headquarters in the Okanagan.

EXTENT OF LOANS

"By amendments to the Farm Loan Act, up to 50 per cent of the appraised value of the land, and 20 per cent of the approved value of the improvements may be loaned to an applicant. The Board is permitted to advance money on a second mortgage provided the sum total of the first and second mortgage does not exceed two-thirds of the Board's appraised value.

INTEREST RATE

"Heretofore the interest rate of the Farm Loan Board was 6½ per cent. This represented 5 per cent at which the Board borrowed money by the sale of bonds, and 1½ percent covering the cost of administration. Now the act has been amended so that the borrower will pay not more than 1½ per cent above what the bonds sell for o nthe open market, and they should now sell at a particularly low rate, because they are guaranteed by the Federal Government.

THE MARKETING ACT

"The last and perhaps the most extensive piece of legislation affecting the primary producer," continued Mr. Esling, is the Marketing Act. It is a measure designed to secure for farmers in Canada a more orderly marketing system than at present prevails, one that will operate to their financial advantage without unfairness either to distributors or consumers. It aims to prevent manipulation or exploitation and to provide machinery for regulating the movement of products in such a way as should stabilize prices.

"The bill does not make provision for price-fixing or restricting production. It establishes a Dominion Marketing Board to regulate the marketing of natural products. This board will cooperate with local boards and any marketing board or agency established by a provincial government to regulate the marketing of any natural product.

"A representative number of persons engaged in the production and marketing of a natural product may petition the Dominion Government and submit a scheme to regulate the marketing of such natural product by a local board which will function under the supervision of the Dominion Marketing Board established in Ottawa. The local board will be a creation of those who desire such a Board in a given area and will be administered by them through persons whom they elect. This Board under authority of the Dominion Board may have power to collect charges or tolls from persons engaged in production or marketing of regulated products; to establish a fund for the necessary expenses of the Board and the creation of reserves or the pooling of returns. The Board will also have power to withold a product from the market or to forward it to a specific market, and may pay compensation or loss sustained on an order of the Board, but no compensation shall be paid in the case of a regulated product withheld because the grade is considered unsuitable for a particular market or because of government restrictions applying to that market.

"The Bill also gives the Government power to limit or restrict the importation of a product which is competing with a product subject to regulation by a board, and also power to restrict the export of products from Canada when it is in the interests of producers to impose such a restriction.

PROTECT THE CONSUMER

"Part two of the bill provides for the determination by investigation of what may be termed a fair spread for the marketing of a natural product; and also that persons who charge in excess of such an amount, shall be subject to certain penalties.

"Representations have been received from farmers and their organizations, first in western Canada and later in eastern Canada, stressing the necessity of the Dominion government enacting legislation and the marketing bill is therefore designed to meet their needs. It is evident therefore that the marketing bill is a democratic measure to meet the considered and expressed desire of the farmers throughout Canada.

"During the session," concluded Mr. Esling, "many telegrams were received from growers and cooperative associations urging the passing of this bill. One of the most emphatic of these was a wire received by the prime minister from J. J. Campbell of Nelson which said:

"'As chairman Kootenay Growers' stabilization committee, representing noncooperative and cooperative growers; as managing director of Kootenay and Slocan of Associated Growers; as president of the largest fruit growers association in the district, and having been present when the Nelson board of trade voted unanimously approval of the measure; and having been in touch with executive officers of Associated Boards of Trade, and from general expressions of opinion from all classes and newspaper editorials, I can say that approval of Marketing act has been unanimous.'

"The federal government and the government of each province will cooperate in the administration of this act in British Columbia. To that end a provincial act was passed by the British Columbia legislature at the last session and came into force on July 20," concluded Mr. Esling.

INTERESTING NOTES ON CANADIAN WOOL

Canada uses about four million pounds of wool recovered from rags every year, in addition to her own domestic clip and imported supplies. The wool grown in Canada provides only about one third of the requirements of the Canadian textile industry, so that the Dominion imports annually about eight million pounds of clean raw wool and 12 million pounds of yarns and other semi-manufactures of wool. On the other hand, on an average about one-third of the wool grown in Canada is exported.

Wool combing is a relatively unimportant trade in Canada, and worsted spinners rely very largely on imported tops, on which there is no duty. In 1933 the United Kingdom supplied 8.5 million pounds out of the total import of 9.8 million pounds, the remainder coming from Australia. In previous years, France, Belgium, New Zealand, and the United States all sent appreciable quantities. Judging by the annual sheep figures, Canada's production of wool has decreased slightly since 1930, the estimated output in 1933 being 19 million pounds, greasy basis, as against 21 million pounds in 1930.

MIDWAY MINE NEAR MOYIE IS REOPENED

Shut-Down Since Last Christmas; Small Crew Now

OPERATED BY B.C. CARIBOO

Relief Workers Clean Up Streets of Moyie

MOYIE, B.C., Sept. 18.—After having been shut down and deserted save for the presence of Clive Bateman, the caretaker, since last Christmas, the Midway properties of the B. C. Cariboo Goldfields Ltd., near Moyie are again the scene of activity.

Charlie Clark, who was mine foreman here when the properties were being developed last year, arrived from Vancouver and work was commenced immediately. At present only a small crew sufficient for one shift is being employed and one hundred feet of tunnel is to be driven by contract. It is hoped when this is completed that operations will be continued on a larger scale which of course will naturally depend on the showing made.

This property which was optioned from Magistrate John Leask of Cranbrook by the Cariboo people just over a year ago has had several most favorable reports made upon it during the time it has been shut down and it is hoped that the recommencement of operations will lead to work of considerable magnitude eventually.

At present there are no local men employed, Mr. Clark having brought his own crew from Vancouver.

Mr. Clark and his son Ed visited Moyie Friday evening renewing acquaintanceships of their previous stay here.

Not for a long time has Moyie presented such a neat and trim appearance as now. The men on relief have put in a splendid work on the sidewalks and generally cleaning up the town. All the old sidewalks have either been repaired or replaced by gravel and ashes, and a very opportune couple of wet days thoroughly wet them down and allowed rolling to be done to the greatest advantage. In addition all the streets were gone over, the weeds cut and trimmed up and the debris trucked away. Bob Braiden did a real piece of work on the stone ramp wall fronting the walk opposite the pos office, Malcolm Horle from Cranbrook was in charge of the work and the Works Department were complimented on their efforts to make the town a more pleasant place to live in.

Inspector V. Z. Manning of Cranbrook was a business visitor to the school.

Bunny and Wilf Desaulniers have left by car for the coast for a two weeks vacation. Vic Saunders is in charge at the Pioneer Inn during their absence.

Jessie Jane Whitehead celebrated her 12th birthday Saturday and entertained a number of her friends.

HUNTING SEASON

With the coming of the hunting season rifles and shot guns have been brought out of their resting places and oiled and put in readiness. The government are this year allowing men on relief to put in two days extra work this month in return for a hunting license, and this is largely being taken advantage of by the hunters.

Mr. Geroux of Kitchener is a guest of his son, Omar, here.

R. A. Smith, postmaster, was a Cranbrook visitor Friday visiting his son, Nelson.

Adler St. Louis made a trip to the Lookout to "pack" out Mr. Fox, the fire warden, the season for forest fires now being over. The trip was not too hard but Mr. St. Louis reports nearly a foot of snow at the lookout.

A welcome rain during the past week has not only relieved the town of all danger from fires, but has considerably augmented the supply of water in the Water Works reservoir, a fact which is much appreciated by those who have had to pack water.

Bert Herrington, who is one of the crew working at the Midway mine was a visitor here.

George Whitehead was home from Fort Steele, where he is employed on the new bridge there.

Quite a number of geese were seen flying high over the lake Saturday. This is early for the geese to be flying south, and the old timers say that it denotes a long, early hard winter.

Mr. and Mrs. St. Louis accompanied by Mrs. M. Desaulniers were Cranbrook visitors.

Alex Mennie's garden this year was a good example of what can be done by intensive cultivation. Although no bigger than a good sized table cloth Alex took over 300 pounds of tomatoes from it, besides having a wonderful display of flowers.

Although the fishing in the lake has been poor recently Andy Anderson, who has been, perhaps, the most successful fisherman over the whole season, landed a nice six-pound salmon in the lower lake.

HELPING CANADIAN INDUSTRY

In co-operation with the division of horticulture, the Agricultural Bacteriology division, Dominion Experimental farms, have been studying the preparation of a cider on a semi-commercial scale. Methods for the sterilization of equipment, bottles, and crown seals were investigated and a satisfactory technique developed to insure a bottled product free from contamination. Attention has also been given to the question of the yeast types most suitable for cider.

Fall rye in Canada, as at August 10, 1934, shows a yield of 5,239,000 bushels from 587,100 acres, compared with 3,454,000 bushels from 434,900 bushels in 1933.

MR. AND MRS. A. T. PARK, NELSON RESIDENTS, WED FOR 50 YEARS

Large Number Friends Pay Surprise Visit Upon Sunday

Two Nelson old timers, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Park, who for half a century have taken the ups and downs of life together, were showered with congratulations from all sides Sunday, the golden anniversary of their wedding, and in the late afternoon were surprised by a large number of friends.

Planning a quiet day together at their home, 411 Richards street, they were invited out for a car drive and on their return found some 40 well-wishers assembled. J. B. Gray on behalf of friends present and a number who were unable to attend presented Mr. and Mrs. Park with a floor lamp and Rev. Wallace McClean of The First Presbyterian church proposed a toast to the guests of honor.

Born of hardy Ontario parentage both Mr. and Mrs. Park still enjoy splendid health. Mrs. Park is the daughter of the late Eleanor and William Ballard, who farmed near Seaforth, Ont. Mrs. Park is 71 years of age and her parents lived to 85 and 87 respectively. Mr. Park, who was also born in Ontario, is 78, and his parents, James and Jean Park lived to be 81 and 76 respectively. Mr. Park was born in Perth County.

MOVED TO KOOTENAY

Eight years after their marriage, September 16, 1884, Mr. and Mrs. Parks were caught by the vision of opportunity afforded in the west and came to the Kootenay lake district to take part in its early developments. Mr. Park was employed upon the construction of the Pilot Bay and Hall Mines smelter which have long since ceased to function but which nevertheless had an important role in early shaping of the district.

He was employed at Pilot Bay smelter for two years and in 1905 moved to Nelson to work at the Hall Mines smelter. He held the latter position for nine years and then went into the C.P.R. shipyard service at the yards in Fairview. On July 1, 1927, he was superannulated and with his wife he is now enjoying a retired life at his home on Richards street.

IS GREAT GARDNER

Devoted to gardening Mr. Park has turned his property into a place of beauty and productiveness. Besides a large garden of flowers and vegetables to attend to the Parks also have a number of hives of bees. Mrs. Park enjoys an active life in her home and in the community. They are members of the First Presbyterian church.

Four children have been brought up by Nelson old-timers, Mrs. L. D. Carncross, Moose Jaw; Melvin, Spokane; Norman, Butte, Mont.; and Fergus, Vanderhoof, B.C.

consolidation, a wide debate having followed at Monday night's session, and the resolutions committee finally reporting Tuesday morning and recommending two resolutions to cover the ground.

SEVERED CONTRACTS

In explaining the resolution asking for a standardized form of contract, E. J. Cronk of Alberni stated that many appeals from dismissals had been successful because of technicalities that arose from contracts that were poorly drawn. Irrespective of anything the association should ask to have in the contract, a standardized contract was advisable. President J. P. Carr showed that the council of public instruction had specific power to prescribe a form of contract, and H. P. Coombes of Coldstream said the Coldstream delegation felt that the first step, but not the final one, to better contract conditions was to get a form of contract approved by the government. J. P. Gibb of Penticton said in this resolution the association would be putting forward something to which the teachers could safely and reasonably agree.

By unanimous vote the convention adopted the resolution as follows:

"Whereas the conditions governing employment of teachers by school boards as at present enjoined by school laws have, for various reasons, proved to be unsatisfactory;

"Resolved that this convention of school trustees assembled recommend that, as provided for in subsection (n) of section 12, the council of public instruction prepare a form of contract to be used between teachers and school boards."

SOMETHING FOR EACH

On the matter of the contract basis, Mr. Gibb said in drafting something to govern between the boards and the teachers, the boards must offer something that would be acceptable to the teachers. The principle of continuity of engagement gave the teachers security, besides having a community value, while an annual contract would offer them no security. The teachers, he said, should not be asked to sign something that would not comport with self-respect.

This resolution, which proposes to clearly incorporate the power of dismissal, which the school boards want, with security to the teacher, also passed unanimously. It reads as follows:

"Whereas it would appear from the Public Schools act that in teachers' contracts liberty of action to terminate such contract is not equally apportioned between boards and teachers;

"Resolved that such contract be a continuing contract, subject to cancellation by the unanimous vote of the board or by the teacher by giving 30 days notice prior to the end of any school year, and that the School act be amended accordingly."

VOTING QUALIFICATION

An animated debate on the voting qualification in school elections arose on a resolution fathered by J. P. Dickson, Burnaby, past president, which in view of expected changes in taxation, particularly affecting non-property-owners, urged a wider enfranchisement, and a broader trustee qualification. Mr. Dickson was not present, but R. H. Neelands of Vancouver read a letter from him, which suggested an inequality in the present voting privileges, inasmuch as they were lost in nonpayment of taxes, pointed out that some districts—now administered by commissioners—were disqualified, and argued that school management ought not to be dependent in any way on the municipal council.

E. J. Cronk suggested that Mr. Dickson's resolution fitted only such districts as his own, and held that in municipal school diaricts there was no franchise discrimination whatever against school voting. Those not qualified to vote on property could qualify as householders, and the only widening possible would be to take in minors. Secretary G. A. Grant pointed out that the ratepayer in rural districts did not suffer loss of franchise when his taxes were not paid. H. Manning of Revelstoke said the wish to make Japanese and other foreigners contribute something toward the schools which they helped to fill was the actual genesis of the income tax movement for schools.

To avoid the points in the Dickson resolution that had drawn criticism, Secretary Grant drafted a shorter and more general one, which was adopted unanimously in the following form:

"Resolved that in the event of taxation for school purposes being changed by the provincial government, the government be asked by the department of education to ensure that voting powers in educational matters be in conformity with the principle of representation following taxation."

CONSOLIDATION BY GOVERNMENT

Another proposal from Mr. Dickson, "That the minister of education be asked to consider the whole question of school districts in the province, with a view to consolidating many districts where geographically and advantageously such change can be made," provoked an active debate on school consolidation, its tenor being against the compulsion that the resolution seemed to propose.

An objection by R. G. Wilton of the Okanagan branch, that consolidation would not always be advantageous, was met by the point it was only proposed where advantageous, and F. A. Busby of Nanaimo gave the main argument for the proposal in a letter from Mr. Dickson, which emphasized the points of abler trustees and greater efficiency. Against this, H. P. Coombes stressed the extremely varied conditions obtaining in the country parts, and proposed to amend the resolution to limit it to sections "where all parties are in agreement." President Carr replied to this, that substantially this was the present force of the act, which permitted consolidation where the school boards were in agreement.

COMPULSION DEFEATED

Mrs. B. Skeet of Coquitlam mentioned a case where Burnaby and Coquitlam had schools across the road from each other, but because an arrangement could not be worked out, some Coquitlam pupils had to walk 4½ miles to school. J. P. Gibb said the line of demarcation should not be the school district, but the advantage of the pupil. That consolidation would be a heavy burden on small districts was stressed by Mrs. Anne Carwithen of Comox Valley. A. G. Perry of North Vancouver city said consolidation was dealt with in the association's brief on finance, and argued that it wouldn't hurt to endorse the proposal in principle, as many wealthy sections adjoined poor districts that could be benefitted. Thomas F. Burnley of Dewdney thought a larger board would handle a consolidated school district to advantage.

In opposition to the proposal, however, E. J. Cronk argued strongly that it was unnecessary, as districts now had all the necessary power to arange joint schools where they adjoined, or to amalgamate with other districts, and Thomas Davison of Maple Ridge pointed out that in Mission pupils from other districts were habitually taken, and that there was no difficulty in arranging matters for schools that were contiguous.

This was evidently the argument that weighed with the delegates, and the resolution for government initiative in the matter of school consolidation was defeated by a vote of 35-26.

UNDER-NOURISHMENT SURVEY

School hygiene was discussed when Miss Annie M. Jamieson of Vancouver substituted for a Greater Vancouver and New Westminster resolution proposing a survey of how to lessen the handicapped type of school child, a new one that specifically stressed under-nourishment. Miss Jamieson and Prof. F. E. Buck carried the torch in this crusade, which led to a general discussion of medical examination in the schools. Prof. Buck mentioned that he went through his school days suffering from myopia because his teachers had on training in hygiene.

While H. Manning deprecated recommending a socialistic thing to the government while still under a competitive system, and suggested that the result of such a course would in the end be to turn the child over to a socialistic state, most of the speakers spoke from a practical rather than a theoretical angle, Mrs. S. D. Threadfold of Kelowna, for instance, asserting that school hygiene was up to the medical man and the nurse, with the mothers to check them, and that the government should not be overloaded. Creating a laugh by saying that in Surrey they had lost the art of having all children born the same weight, Clyde Stewart said the family physician was restricted by medical ethics and could not advise regarding what should be done for individual children. H. E. White of Penticton objected that according to the resolution the children were diseased because of economic conditions.

Thomas Davison of Maple Ridge said his board was not permitted by the municipality to have a medical health officer. Such an officer was compulsory for districts having over 1500 people, President Carr pointed out.

HOW KOOTENAY DOES IT

A picture of the model way in which medical examinations are carried out in the rural sections around Nelson was given by Inspector P. H. Sheffield, who stated that the parents were notified of the impending visit, and each child was examined in the presence of the parent. In every case of defective eyesight in rural areas, and in the cities of Nelson and Trail, glasses were supplied, if not by the parents, then by the I. O. D. E. or service clubs, the optometrists giving their services, citizens opening their homes to the children while coming to be fitted, and the Canadian Optical association arranging for the supply of glasses at $3 per pair.

He mentioned that in areas on relief, children's tonsils were removed by the family doctor at the charge of the health department.

After a recess to break the long session, the debate was resumed, W. C. Moresby, K.C., of Victoria, claiming the resolution's aim was clear and obvious, and that it should be passed forthwith. Miss Jamieson added the association could do a tremendous thing for the province by sponsoring this proposal.

It carried by an overwhelming vote, in the following terms:

"Whereas the subject of undernourishment of school children is receiving a great deal of study by research bodies, both medical and educational, and these bodies have singled out two factors as main causes: Namely, first, lack of regular and sufficient sleep; and second, lack of proper and sufficient food;

"Resolved that in the event of any committee on curricula or other kindred topics is appointed by the department of education, this committee be asked to give special attention to the subject of undernourishment among school children."

HARD TO COLLECT

Troubles of the rural school districts in trying to collect special taxes were recounted, in connection with a resolution from Comox Valley and Mid-Island branches proposing "that section 121B of the Schools act should be amended to place the duty of collection on the duly authorized provincial collector in like manner as the poll tax is collected; the school board in each district being required to furnish the collector with a list of those liable to taxation, and the authorized rate of taxation."

Mrs. M. E. Christie of Royston described the effort to collect these taxes as difficult and creating trouble with neighbors, and Fred Cursons of Slocan Park described it as almost impossible, especally where there was a large foreign element.

President Carr asked how many rural districts had succeeded in making collections, and after Mrs. Anne Carwithen added the testimoney of Comox Valey, remarked that they had had about the same success as the municipalities, the special taxes on non-property owners being practically uncollectible.

No conclusion was reached on this matter, and after hearing the experience of North Vancouver with Chemainus, whose transient population defied the tax collector, though paying poll tax at the mill office, the convention left the resolution over for consideration Wednesday.

HANDS OFF RESERVE

The convention strongly turned down a Maple Ridge resolution proposing to dispense with the ratepayers' vote as to use of funds accumulated for building purposes, a vote difficult to court in times of stringency. The resolution was "That we request that section 63 of the Public Schools act, which provides for a special fund being set aside for new buildings, be so amended that the school board, with the consent of the municipal council, will have power to use any sum so accumulated, without an appeal to the electors where the sum involved does not exceed $10,000."

Thomas Davison, who sponsored it, said some municipalities accumulate building funds by annual additions, but that in times like these it was difficult to obtain consent of the ratepayers to spend them, however necessary. To a suggestion from President Carr that a mill percentage ought to be mentioned rather than a flat $10,000 for all districts alike, Mr. Davison demurred, saying the proposal was for the benefit of outlying districts.

J. E. McKenzie of Courtenay said the object of the extra mill levy annually was to have the money ready when really needed, but if the proposed change were made, it could be spent at any time.

H. P. Coombes held that the limitation in the law was very wise. The accumulation of funds was to provide money without having recourse to loan, and the money was trust money belonging to the ratepayers, and ought not to be spent without their consent. A. G. Perry related the early history of this mill provision, which was finally cancelled when the late minister believed it was not being used. If all had paid as they went, he believed some municipalities would not be in their present difficulties. J. P. Gibb declared the necessity for building did not arise overnight, and once a year there was opportunity to consult the electors. Opposing this view, Clyde Stewart said that Surrey had to build two unforeseen additions in one year.

The resolution though receiving quite a vote, was emphatically rejected.

MANDATORY NURSES DEBATED

One of the most extended debates of the convention was on the question of mandatory school nurses, evoked by a resolution from the Greater Vancouver and New Westminster branch, which read:

"Whereas the appointment of a public health nurse is optional with school boards and whereas the service of such persons has proven to be of economic and definite advantage both to the children and to the community where employed:

"Resolved that when and where recommended by the minister of health, such appointments be made mandatory."

A. E. McDonald of West Vancouver said the history of public nursing was that wherever such a move was introduced, there was invariably initial opposition, which quickly turned to strong support. There was a direct economic benefit, while the indirect benefits were immeasurable.

PRAISES SUNG

There was no dispute whatever as to the merits of the public health nurse or the school nurse among the delegates, E. P. Dawson of Nelson, R. G. Wilton of Penticton, A. G. Perry of North Vancouver city, W. F. Brett of Armstrong, Thomas Davison of Maple Ridge, F. H. Barbaree of New Westminster and other delegates from communities that have such nurses uniting in singing their praises, and declaring that no citizen would voluntarily go back to the old order.

The objection to the mandatory idea, which was strongly opposed by Clyde Stewart of Surrey, Mrs. M. E. Christie of Royston and Fred Cursons of Slocan Park, the latter two speakers declaring that rural districts could not accord the move. Mr. Cursons suggested that this was "going too war with paternalism." Mrs. Christie said the question was not one of whether the rural districts appreciated the work of these nurses, but of finance. H. Manning was against compulsion, and Brechin Ross pointed out that six districts near Nanaimo had all voted down the nurse proposition, and asked why they should be overridden. A final objection was by William Winstanley of Crescent Valley, who argued that the rural districts were inadequately represented at the convention, and that nothing against their interests ought to be done.

The proposal for mandatory power was badly defeated.

THE "534"

We are told that several of the closely-guarded secrets of the giant Cunarder, No. 534, have now been disclosed. For example, unlike any other ship in the world, the "534" will have three different sized funnels. The reason for this is to allow the smoke from each funnel to blow clearly away. If funnels are of identical size, says a technical expert, the blending fumes from them all tend to creat a mass or pall of smoke that may descend to the decks. It appears that experiments were made with thirty models of funnels before this scheme, with the tallest funnel seventy feet high, was decided upon.

Special interest, however, seems to center on the revelations about the great vessel's "whistle." She will be equipped with the deepest bass voice that has ever rumbled over the seas. It will pierce for ten miles into the darkness. It is three-throated, and instead of being upright, as other ships' sirens are, its "mouths" will stand out like eight-feet long guns in all directions from the funnels. In fact, by touching an electric switch the engineer will turn on a treble peal of thunder. The tone of the "whistle" resembles the note "A" on the paino — two octaves below middle "A." This voice was decided upon, not by seamen, but by professors of music and acoustic experts experimenting with horns and other musical instruments.

It appears that the remarkable thing about the voice is that, although its gentlest whisper will carry so far, its mellow depth is such that the passengers on the ship will not be disturbed by it. Of all notes on the piano this one was found to be the ideal one for nerve comfort. No sudden, shrill shrieks will make the passengers fall out of their berths with fright. Instead, the designers of this "voice" say, "they will become so attuned to it that they will hardly hear this wave of sound. Perfect 'control' of its voice will be possessed by '534,' and it will not always sing with the full majesty of its three 'throats' at once. Sometimes just a ten-mile 'murmur' from one 'throat' will be all that is necessary."

All this is very interesting in this day and age of wonder creations. Those who are hoping that Britain, with "534," will recapture the blue riband of the Atlantic, held by the Mauretania for so many years, and now sported by Germany, will hope also that her owners will be able to make her pay her way.

A NEW NATIONAL FUEL

The tremendous increase in the demand for oils for burning purposes has led to some unexpected and unique development of new productions and the use of by-products of numerous types "arriving" almost daily.

Spain as a grape producer has long been world-famed and her sunny wines are in good demand. Not satisfied with spirits of this type alone, the juice of the grape is to be put to a new use. The Spanish government has ordered the "official" petroleum monopoly company to acquire annually 200,000 hectolitres of alcohol made from the distillation of wine residues and molasses."

The mixture so compounded is to be used in the preparation of a "national fuel."

Some wag has remarked that the effect of the fumes on passers-by may have some surprising results!

In any case this recent development of petrol from grapes may be to the future advanatge of all those countries which are large producers of grapes.

A new day, a new way!

MAKING THE NIGHT QUIET

So successful has been London's "anti-honking" order during sleeping hours that the ministry of transport has announced its intention of extending the prohibition to all built-up areas in Great Britain. Mr. Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's minister of transport, after a tour of London's silence area made the following pronouncement:

We have made the great and important discovery that it is not necessary to drive with a motor horn. Moreover, the added caution which motorists display when they no longer have recourse to the "hooter" is a contribution to measures we are taking to increase public safety.

The thought that not a motor horn may be heard in any city, town or village in Great Britain between the hours of 11:30 p.m. and 7 a.m. will arouse the envy of more than one light sleeper in Nelson who has been aroused by a violent blast on "hooter" sometime after midnight. It is not so much the passing motor car that disturbs residential areas here, either, but the inexcusable tooting of some driver who is calling for wife or sweetheart and is too lazy to get out of the car and walk to the doorbell.

Now that London has proved that it is possible for night traffic in a great city to move along without blowing of horns, other and lesser centers may decide that they, too, can very easily dispense with this needless noise during sleeping hours. Britain, however, is not going to stop at the suppression of the motor horn. A recent despatch states that Sir Henry Fowler, the eminent engineer, is to preside over a committee of scientists and automobile manufacturers which, at the request of the government, will consider what steps can be taken to reduce the noise of mechanically propelled vehicles. The full resources of the national physical laboratory at Teddington will be at the disposal of the committee.

Between You and Me

By J. B. C.

DID YOU GET A THRILL?

Jimmy McLarnin, the Vancouver boxing master, and T. O. M. Sopwith, the British yacht racer, will go down in history. These two Britishers combined to give the United States of America a real black eye on Monday. Probably no two events have been talked about to such an extent as the victories of these two heroes of spot. Of course news of the Endeavour's victory was late news by the time Jimmy stepped into the ring to take the crown back from Mr. Ross in the welterweight title event, but the ship's victory could not bring the thrill that a McLarnin fan must have obtained as he listened to the round by round account from the editorial rooms of this paper.

WELL I DID

I know I got a thrill and I had to maintain a calm attitude and pass it on to the hundreds standing outside the office waiting. To hear that McLarnin had won the decision after it looked lige he had lost the battle was news enough to excite the most staid of persons. However, it's all over now. The bout will go down in history as one of the toughest ever fought for the crown and probably as the longest bout ever getting started. It was postponed for over a week. How I would have enjoyed myself ,were I in Vancouver, McLarnin's home town, Monday night when the glad tiding arrived.

THE POWERFUL TUMULT

I mentioned the other day that September brought the oyster back into prominence. I have since learned that September has issued in another luxury. With September comes the introduction of hot rums. Now don't get me wrong on this issue for hot rums do not interest me particularly at this time of year. November 11 is soon enough to indulge for that matter. Then you are not alone in your glory. But talking of rum. How many can tell anything about the famed drink that made pirates bold and John Silver bolder? Rum is rightly named for it got its cognomen from the word "rumbullion" which means "a great tumult." Now if you can find a greater tumult than about five fellows propelled by numerous hot rums, you let me know.

A WASTE OF GOOD FRUIT

Another sign that summer has departed can be found if one takes the trouble to visit local wholesale houses or Jim McDonald's jam plant. Two months ago the boys were head over heels in work with fresh fruits. Strawberries, raspberries and other fruits were piling in. Jam pots were boiling. Fresh fruits were arriving from the south. It was bedlam. Today all that fruit has disappeared. It has entered jam tins and probably a lot of it has been shipped to distant parts of Canada. Instead of floors heaped with fresh berries we find pails laden with plums and apples. Peaches, grapes, oranges and bananas have taken their places. In a few weeks' time fresh fruit will be hard to get. But at that it is a shame to see the number of apples, pears, etc., that are going to waste and rot on the ground in Nelson and district orchards.

BARNEY ROSS AND BARNEY GUSSIN

Here and there—Guss Matthew discussing the McLarnin-Ross fight —He says anyone who claims the fight was a frameup must be crazy —For McLarnin got a decision, and anytime a Canadian gets such a break in New York there is no huey about it—And then Gus started in on his afternoon meal that Dempsey dished up—And thing of it—Chief Alex. Stewart telephoned late at night—to find out if it was really true that Jimmie had won—Dr. W. Laishley had the right dope I believe—I think I understood him to say that McLarnin won because when he piled up points he piled them good and high each round he won—and that the rounds won by Ross were won on close margins—Sounds reasonable to me—Noticed they are reroofing the plant operated by T. E. Levasseur down wholesale row—and the boys are also reroofing a building in the provincial jail yard—They have stopped work on the Wood Vallance building, but the stand they have piled up for cement work would give all the kiddies in Nelson hundreds of sand castles—From the taint in the air I judged George Dvorjetz' veneer plant is still operating—Charlie Sindell had a carload of pears—which sounds like preserves, chutney and pear marmalade to me—Watched the boys pouring cement on the High street road improvements and motorists can rest assured the improvement will be first class—Tommy Bishop was kidding some of the boys—And I stopped for a time to admire the son and heir of Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Gussin—Little boy blue looks quite husky thank you—But I was told on good authority that the doctor is trying hard to spoil the five-month old lad — Which leads me to believe he was born sometime around the time the Quintuplets came into the world down in Canada's east—And then they call him Barney I believe—Well, lets hope he's as good a scrapper as Barney Ross.

FATAL

A western hotel entertained a missionary guest from the julep country. Espying some mint in a nearby bed, the guest showed the hotelkeeper the gentle art of mixing his favorite beverage. He liked it, and nature took its course. Later on the missionary had a chance to inquire about his friend and pupil. The news was sad. "Do you know," said an informant, "some fellow came to our town once and showed that man how to put weeds in whisky, and the weeds killed him?"—Baltimore Sun.

SCIENCE SIMPLIFIED

An Accidental Planet

Uranus Is Cold, Dark World Spinning Around the Sun Far Out in Space

Uranus as Compared With the Earth

By RICHARD BAYLIS
Central Press Canadian

Uranus might be called the accidental planet.

For, although it is a giant as compared with the earth, it was discovered accidently in 1781 by Sir William Herschel. He happened to be looking through his telescope on an evening of that year with nothing else in mind than to find something interesting and as a matter of fact he first thought that the object he had observed was a comet.

After several months of observation, however, it was established that what Herschel had discovered was a hitherto unknown world spinning on its own orbit around the sun far outside the orbit of the planet Saturn.

A GIANT

Uranus has a diameter of 31,000 miles being approximately four miles being approximately four times as large as the earth, and is 1,782,300,000 miles distant from the sun. As a consequence it receives very little light and heat from that body. Life, as we know it, would be impossible for its temperature is believed to be somewhere in the neighborhood of 170 degress centigrade. It receives less than 1-360 the amount of light received on earth from the sun and science can think of it as only a vast spinning world, far out in the outer cold and darkness of space.

Uranus, owing to its high reflecting power, is just visible to the naked eye under the best of atmospheric conditions. In the telescope, a powerful one it appears as a greenish, slightly flattened disc. Some astronomers have observed faint bands or belts, although these have not always been drawn in the same direction. Its atmosphere is believed to be somewhat dense and its period of rotation somewhere near 10 hours.

THE FOUR MOONS

Uranus, of course, describes an immense orbit around the sun, taking 84 years to complete one revolution.

Four moons of Uraus have been discovered and still more are suspected. These moons are among the faintest objects known to us in the solar system and are, in order of distance from the planet, Ariel, Umbriel, Titania and Oberon. They appear as mere points of light in the largest of telescopes.

GOITRE

BY JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

You are hearing and reading a great deal about the thyroid gland, situated in the front of the neck.

It is known as a ductless gland as it hasn't any duct or tube carrying its juice into the blood, whereas the liver and pancreatic gland have ducts which carry their digestive juices—bile and pancreatic juice— into the small intestine to help digest the food and prepare it to be absorbed into the blood.

As the thyroid has no duct the blood simply gathers up the juice of the thyroid as it passes through it.

Now if there is not enough of this juice or if there is too much of it, the individual will look an act differently from one who has the normal amount of juice.

For instance if there is not enough thyroid juice in a youngster, the bones do not develop properly, and in severe cases the youngster is a dwarf, and often an idiot.

Where there is not enough thyroid juice in adults the brain is not alert and there is loss of memory while the body may become quite fat.

On the other hand where there is too much thyroid juice being made the individual is bright, over-alert, nervous, heart beats rapidly and there is frequently indigestion.

It has been learned that the particular substance in the thyroid juice that affects individuals is the lack of, or too much of, iodine.

Generally speaking there are three types of goitre, that is disease of the thyroid gland.

(1) Conditions due to not enough iodine.

(2) Simple goitre, in which the thyroid gland is enlarged but no apparent symptoms. This is very common.

(3) Toxic or poisonous goitres. These goitres produce symptoms due to the fact that too much iodine is manufactured and taken up by the blood. A special type of this form of goitre is known as exothalmic goitre because of the bulging eyes which is one of the symptoms.

In simple goitre no treatment is necessary as a rule; in a few cases a little rest and iodine is all that is needed.

In the severe type of goitre where rest and iodine fail to give results, the use of the X-ray, radium, and the removal of part of the glands are forms of treatment that have proved successful.

Then during the two months in question, it was worse than ever. He claims there was an implied contract by which the city undertook to provide lighting, and that the contract was broken by the city when the service provided was utterly inadequate. TACKLE UNEMPLOYMENT —AT BOTH ENDS

The sharp rise in unemployment figures coincides with the entrance of thousands of children who have just left school into the labor market. This is one serious irritant to the unemployment situation; but there is another, and perhaps graver, irritant which, like the problem of the school children, is easily within the power of the government to alleviate. Mr. Isidore Ostrer came forward with a proposal to reduce the pensionable age. His arguments, based on sound economics and humanitarian considerations, have created widespread interest and brought a solution of the unemployment problem before the public.—London Sunday Referee.

"RADDIO"

By GERALD S. REES

Now that the evenings are drawing in, and one has adequate excuse for shirking the garden-work: now that the children have gone back to school heavily laden with new text-books that put a crimp in the month's salary, and the first snow is already in evidence on the mountain tops, one can seasonably offer some further recondite observations about the "raddio," now a recognized piece of furniture in all self-respecting homes. Though we have had our own radio since it was a uni-cell, I know as little about its interior mechanism as when paying the first—or the last—instalment on it. Its dimly-lighted interior remains a cavern of mystery, and though mechanically inclined, I have never felt any urge to tinker with the many gadgets that abound even in the less modern and more modest sets. The general impression seems to be that for some time now, the quality of the radio offerings is nothing to write home about, with a few notable exceptions.

We are still compelled to have Cornflakes with our concerts, jellies with our jazz, and furniture with our Fugues, and it is too evident that the air-ways are still buffeted with so called entertainment that has been thinned down to the consistency of cheap slush, and that much of the grist of the alleged "raddio" offerings falls entirely within the range of from bad to worse!

Of course, the programs cannot be planned to please all listeners in every detail and all the time. Radio's attempted development as an amusement enterprise was predicted on competition with the press. Radio undertook to wax fat on advertising. Its novelty was attractive bait, and it is possible that in the heyday of that novelty, the more extravagant advertisers, one hazards a guess, are now back to the newspapers, if they are advertising at all. This may perhaps account for the failing quality of the programs. As you may know, programs are sold by the quarter of an hour, half hour or hour, and when the time is up, the turn is faded out, no matter if a very famous singer is in the middle of a song, or a prominent speaker is half way through a word. There has been quite a curtailment of these advertising programs, and you have probably noticed it when plugging in your "raddio," on which, by this time surely, you must have made the last payment (A promise down, and a dollar a week till sun shall set no more!)

There is not nearly so much of this sort of thing nowadays— "Station P-U-N-K. Have you tried Banana Ointment for slippery fingers? No matter how easily money slips through your hands, some is sure to stick if you use Banana Ointment—Banana Blues—played by the Banana we will now have a selection—The Grove Orchestra in the beautiful ballroom of the Blah-Blah . . ."

There is less importunity for us to test the extradordinary merits of Umptyump Gasoline—"Do not cheat your motor—Give it a trial, and watch it grow—If fed Umptyump, ultimately your car will start—Fill up today . . ." Ad lib, ad naseam. Still when one considers that these programs are given without cost to the consumer (meaning you) we should be thankful for anything we can get, and not look upon the radio set as one of life's great disappointments. Lately, electioneering politicians across the line have been cluttering up the air with campaign speeches. Loud talks (and how loud they can talk) long talks, talk short, sweet and sour. One thinks that any American citizen who gleans as much sense from them all as he could from a couple of short paragraphs in print may forever boast of special perspicacity. How they mouth their high-sounding phrases, and address their invisible listeners (if any) as if they were fine upstanding boys and girls in Junior High, or as intelligent adults nine or ten years old!

As I write these lines, a crooner is crooning. He wants me with him for some occult reason "To face the world together." Try to think of a voice like a very mushy melon, sweetish and slushish. That is a crooner, he who has discovered that love rhymes with dove, and that these two—oh! happy day— rhyme with above. Anthropologists who have not yet heard a crooner would do well to buy a radio and listen to one of these strange creatures, and determine its Paleozic history.

Not being an enthusiast for the Fresh Air Taxicab proprietors, it causes me no grief that Amos and Andy are no longer on the air, but the lack of these everlasting jumbling serials by the pseudo-Etheopians must be a sore trial to those who enjoy them and know their misadventures better than the text of the Bible or the Best-seller of the year.

The radio entertainer (?) who annoys me more than a little is the lady broadcaster who calls us "folks," and tells us her first name (a real folksy name too).

She sometimes tells us all about her life in an engaging little song, and it seems that in spite of her smiling ways and wholesome character, life has not been perfect with her. She has lost something or other, and the moon, even in June, is out of tune. But why bore you even as she bores me till I can reach to the dial and twist her into the outer dark of unfathomable space.

According to those who are supposed to know all about it, radio dial-twisters are scheduled to have just grounds for using strong language during the next decade, for swirling electrons going across the sun will materially increase the difficulty of clear reception of broadcasts, and catlike wails will become resounding roars like a menagerie before feeding time. Then the swirls will start disappearing, and we are promised that the year 1944 should be excellent for reception. Oh well, our home radio deserves a rest, so maybe some evening ten years hence, we will gather together in the living room of our hill-side hacienda, and turn on the radio once more, perhaps only to discover that four out of five tubes have passed into the outer darkness, and we shall have to go to bed without discovering if the scientific johnnies were right or wrong.

Zoo Animals Would Not Attack

What would happen if a zoo's entire collection of wild animals were suddenly set free in the midst of a metropolitan city?

Except for the hysterical frenzy of the population when the news became current, nothing much would happen, according to Edmund Heller, director of the Milwaukee Washington Park zoo. The great man-eating tigers and lions would be the first to make for the bushes and trees. Unless they were cornered, they would probably not attack human beings. Even wild lions, he explained, have to be run down by hunters on horseback before they will give battle. Lions which have been in a zoo are certainly even more cautious.

If they were annoyed or cornered, of course, they would be the most dangerous of adversaries, but the instinct of caution, without which they would have long ago been exterminated, would prevent them from seeking out as prey a creature whose killing power they have long had good reason to fear. The beasts always prefer escape and hiding to combat.

ANIMALS IN CAPTIVITY UNUSED TO SCAVENGING

The fact that the animals have become accustomed to being fed by their keepers, according to the zoo director, would make it improbable that they would seek out any living prey for food. Those animals raised from infancy in the zoo would be almost too stupid for this, and would be more likely to wander around until they ran into a butcher shop.

If the time of the year were October or November, suggested Mr. Heller, buck deer and buffalo might very well be dangerous. That time of the year is their breeding season. Male elephants also are dangerous during the breeding season. They kill from sheer affection, Mr. Heller asserted. That is why circuses no longer carry male elephants.

But the rest of the animals would be quite harmless. This is not an absolute guarantee, however, Mr. Heller emphasized, since animals, like people, are subject to moods.

WHAT THE PRESS IS SAYING

WHEN JAPAN WILL FIGHT

"Sticks and stones may break your bones, but names will never hurt you." This adage, fed on demagogy, frequently means a good deal less than it says. The Russians are rude, but they don't want war. They are clamouring to get into the League of Nations, however, just in case it comes. Then they may hope to pick up a few allies against the high-handed Japanese who walked out of Geneva, slamming the door. The Japanese don't want war either, if they can help it. But they mean to go ahead with their colonization of Old China, and if they are put to it, they will fight for that enterprise against Russia or others.—London Daily Express.

FROM THE MANCHESTER SCHOOL

Textiles seem fated to be the rock on which the Ottawa agreements founder. The experience of the British woollen industry before the Canadian tariff board showed, by common testimony, that the much-advertised clause allowing British industries to receive a hearing by an impartial board was worth nothing. Now the British cotton industry has discovered that this wonderful clause, so much lauded by British ministers at the time, means—in Australia—higher, not lower, tariffs. The increases just announced cannot in any way be squared with the Commonwealth government's undertakings at Ottawa.—Manchester Guardian.

ERADICATION OF GANGSTERS

Criminal gangsters and their depredations, says Frederick P. Wensley, former chief constable of the criminal investigation department, New Scotland Yard, "can only be met by determined police action, backed by magistrates and judges equally resolute to protect the community. Gangs breed and increase their activities only when the administration of the law, for whatever reason, is ineffective." Mr. Wensley's judgment ought to be good, for his notable career covered 42 years' active service with what is generally regarded as the most efficient police organization in the world. —San Francisco Argonaut.

ATTRACTIVE JURY ROOMS

A small group of New York business and professional men, spurred by the challenge of the gangster, are quietly bringing about a radical improvement in the administration of justice in America's metropolis. One of the group, Charles Larned Robinson, tells in the current Rotarian Magazine how it was done.

Whereas formerly prospective jurors were herded into a room by surly attendants and compelled to wait for hours "thinking of unanswered correspondence and neglected business appointments," they now await their turn in a room where they sit in easy chairs, chat, smoke, or even keep in touch with their offices by telephone. And in one court, instead of calling 1500 jurors, only 600—the number actually required—are impanelled.

These and other changes, sponsored by interested laymen, have resulted in a saving of $300,000 in three years, and the willing service of a high type of business and professional men as jurors.—The Rotarian Magazine.

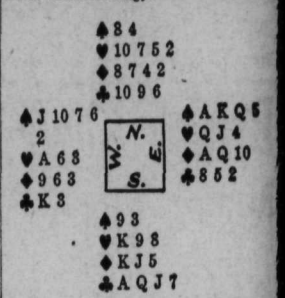
PLAYING SAFE

A careful player determines the most dangerous situation, to play that with particular care, just as the declarer of the hand shown today was obliged to do, in order to go game on a very generous contract. East's and South's play afford excellent examples of sound strategy.



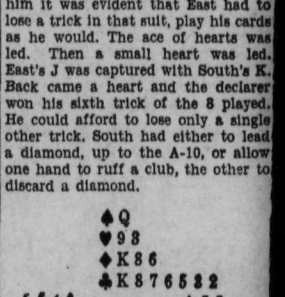
It was the second hand. North having made 4-diamonds on the first hand only 20 points were required for game by his side. Bidding went: South, 1-club; East, 1-spade; South, 2-clubs; West, 3-spades; East, 4-spades, which South doubled.

Not wanting to lead away from the tenaces in miner suits, nor from the K of hearts, South's opening lead was his top spade, telling the declarer just about what South held.

The 2 of spades was retained in dummy, for possible future use, and East's Q won. It was quite clear that South held the major tenace in clubs, with both missing kinks. Perhaps he also held the J of diamonds. In which case East must lose 2 tricks in that suit, as well as a club and a heart trick, unless the declarer played with great care.

A club was led through South. The ace won the first defensive trick. Dummy's K of clubs won the third trick. The 7 of spades was over-taken with the K. Dummy used the 10 of spades to ruff declarer's last club.

With the K-10-8 of hearts against him it was evident that East had to lose a trick in that suit, play his cards as he would. The ace of hearts was led. Then a small heart was led. East's J was captured with South's K. Back came a heart and the declarer won his sixth trick of the 8 played. He could afford to lose only a single other trick. South had either to lead a diamond, up to the A-10, or allow one hand to ruff a club, the other to discard a diamond.



Spades are trumps. The opening lead is the Q of diamonds. How many tricks can be made against any subsequent play? The answer wil appear tomorrow.

British Challenger Sets New Record in Second Win

Two More Victories Will Give England the Trophy for the First Time in History

By ANDREW MERKEL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

NEWPORT, R.I., Sept. 18 (CP).—T. O. M. Sopwith made it two straight today for Endeavour and the Royal Yacht squadron in the epic battle now being waged off Brenton's reef with Harold Vanderbilt, the white-hulled defending Rainbow and the New York club, for possession of the America's cup.

T. O. M. SOPWITH

If Sopwith wins but two more races he will take the 100 guineas cup back to Cowes in the Isle of Wight for the first time in 83 years. Indications tonight were he would succeed where 14 British challengers, including two Canadians, had failed.

Undoubtedly Charles Nicholson, England's foremost designer, has provided him with a slightly faster boat than the United States has produced to date. Today's race over a triangular course, providing two broad reaches of 10 miles each and a thresh to windward of 10 miles, sailed in a smooth sea and moderate breeze, amply demonstrated this fact.

Because Endeavour established a new record for the triangular course as well as a new record for the windward leg in a cup series, it follows that she is the fastest, sweetest sloop afloat in the weather of today.

ENDEAVOUR

Sopwith won his second race at the start, when he, or more precisely Mrs. Sopwith, timed the starting signal more accurately than Vanderbilt. The latter, in his eagerness to get the weather berth, jibed for the line a trifle too soon. He succeeded in establishing himself in the weather berth, but in doing so he was forced to kill his way. Endeavour crossed the line like a thing alive, forging through the lee of the more slowly moving Rainbow.

With Genoa jib and staysail fully drawing against Rainbow's single Genoa, Endeavour began immediately to open up a lead. Vanderbilt tried all the tricks of the game, but was obliged to content himself with a view of the gradually receding lines of the challenger's after overhang. At the first mark he was trailing Sopwith by 16 seconds. Finally he adopted Sopwith's headsail plan and seemed to do better.

51-SECOND LEAD

At the end, however, the big blue-hulled Britisher had a lead of 51 seconds over her striving rival, Times for the 30-mile run were:

Endeavour 3:09:01; Rainbow 3:09: 52.

Both crews had trouble taking in their Genoas when preparing to come on the wind at the second mark. Endeavour had torn her's at the clew, when setting it at the start. She tore it again at the first mark and for a time it was trailing in the water. Rainbow's crew, too, seemed slow in getting in the sail.

On the broad reach to the finish line Sopwith was unable to reset his torn Genoa jib, and was forced to use what is known on this side as a ballooner. Vanderbilt with his Genoa drawing splendidly, drew up on Sopwith, who was unable to get as much out of what he termed his bowsprit spinnaker. But at that he drove his challenger over the finish lines with the comfortable lead of 51 seconds over the Rainbow.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. MORRISON

It's hard to keep public property from being defaced.

In a way, the putting greens on a golf course are public property. A large number of people use them.

However, golf is a gentleman's game. The sort of person who would cut his initials in a park bench or tree trunk is seldom found on the golf course. Yet the putting surfaces, that part of the course which must be given the greatest care, kept almost flawless, are too often marred by players who carelessly cut them either with a club or their shoes.

Any kind of a mark on the green may cost some other player his match. Think of this when you're on the putting surface.

If you must lift your ball and mark the spot use a coin or small pin but don't cut the turf with your club.

TWO WESTERN GOLFERS ARE ON WIN SIDE

Mrs. Ford, Vancouver, and Mrs. Horne of Edmonton Win

BRITISH STARS FARE VERY WELL

Ada MacKenzie Goes on but Margery Kirkham Loses

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB, Toronto, Sept. 18 (CP)—The crushing hand of disappointment lay heavily tonight on the shoulders of 16 title aspirants who fought courageously, but failed to halt the challenge of charging opponents in the opening round of match play in the Canadian ladies' open golf championship.

Western Canada has two of her hopefuls still in the running to cheer along. Mrs. Roy H. Horne, Edmonton, holder of the Alberta title, caught the usually steady Mrs. R. W. Gouinlock, Toronto, in the throes of a shattered game. The local player carded an eight, two sevens and a six on the out trip to give Miss Horne a one up advantage at the halfway mark. But the Alberta champion proved that her triumph was earned on merit by cruising the six holes played on the homeward journey with a birdie and four pars. The only hole on which she dropped a stroke to perfect figures, the 13th, was halved in sixes, Mrs. Horne won 3 and 2.

MRS. FORD ADVANCES

Mrs. Vera Ford, of Vancouver, also accounted for a Torontonian, Mrs. S. G. Bennett. The Pacific coast star's margin of victory was 4 and 2, but she might have made it even more decisive except for occasional lapses on the greens, which enabled her opponent to halve several holes. Mrs. Ford, however, was lashing out tremendous tee shots, and had her iron plays always under control.

In all but one duel, the Britons gained their triumphs by decisive margins. And not since 1922 when Mrs. W. A. Gavin took the crown with her to England, has the title been in such danger of journeying abroad.

BRITISH STARS WIN

Miss Diana Plumpton, runner-up in the British open in 1933, eliminated T. J. Agar, Toronto, 8 and 7. Miss Molly Gourlay, present champion of Surrey, accounted for another Torontonian, Miss Maude Smith, by a 7 and 5 margin. Yet another Toronto contender, Mrs. S. Jones, fell before the brilliant play of Miss Doris Chambers, captain of the British team and former holder of the British open title. Mrs. J. B. Walker, Irish internationalist, continued the devastating route, with a 5 and 4 decision over Mrs. R. K. Beairsto, Winnipeg. The final British victory was gained by Mrs. Alec Gold who won 2 and 2 over Mrs. H. W. Soper of Montreal.

Mrs. A. B. Darling of Montreal waged one of the greatest up-hill struggles of the daye to eke out a verdict over Mrs. George Coats, member of the Curtis cup team, on the last green.

ADA IS VICTOR

The defending champion and medallist, Miss Ada MacKenzie of Toronto, was steadiness personified in sending one of the two United States challengers, Mrs. John Arends, of Detroit, into the discard by a 5 and 3 count.

It was a player from the United States, however, who brought about one of the greatest upsets of the day.

Unheralded and unsung, Mrs. M. B. Harbaugh of Willoughby, Ohio, crashed into the championship picture with a vengeance by writing finis to the hopes of Margery Kirkham, Montreal's sterling tournament ace. Mrs. Harbaugh won by 3 and 1.

Mrs. Joseph Dagenais of Montreal was unable to cope with the onward march of Miss Mary Hunter of Hamilton.

Hamilton's other representative, Mrs. C. H. Shuttleworth, bowed herself out of the competition to Mrs. W. G. Fraser, Ottawa, 4 and 3.

Joining her club-mate in the second brackets was Miss Evelyn Mills, but her victory automatically called for the elimination of another capital city entrant, Miss Lorna Blackburn, who dropped a 3 and 1 decision.

FIRST SOFTBALL PLAYOFF TODAY

Bluebirds and Aces to Clash at Junior High Grounds

Due to rugby activities at the Recreation grounds, the first game of the ladies' softball playoffs will be switched to the junior high school grounds this evening at 5:10 o'clock. The Bluebirds and Aces will play a best two out of three game series for the right to meet the Red Sox for the city title.

Little is known of the Aces' lineup as they are reported to have lost the services of Eva Smith and Isabel Dawson, but with such players as Arla Saare, Clara Talberg, Elvera Matheson, Wilma Milne, Peggy Donaldson and Almeda Graves, they will make the Bluebirds step their best if they wish to enter the finals.

Elaine Beeston has returned to Nelson and will hold down second base for the Bluebirds. The rest of the team will probably be as follows: Jean Patterson, c; Dorothy Wheeler, p; Brownie Schupe, 1b; Hazel Spiers, ss; Mary Long 3b. The outfield will be chosen from Gladness Horstead, Alice Dunn, Elvina Arit, Mazie Grimes, Lena Rollick, Edna Bush, Shirley Donaldson, Mary Vance and Sadie McCreight.

HAMMOND AGAIN LEADS THE REGULAR CRICKET BATSMEN

Has Better Average Than Last Year; Paine Is Best of the Bowlers as the English Season Ends

LONDON, Sept. 18 (CP cable).—Walter Hammond, the master batsman from Gloucestershire, strengthened his position as the leading regular English batsman in the cricket season which ended today. A year ago Hammond led the averages with 67.81 runs an inning but this season scored 2366 runs for an average of 76.32.

Hammond's average was topped by the Nawab of Patsudi, but the dusky star played in less than half as many matches as Hammond.

George Paine of Warwickshire improved vastly to head the bowlers with an average of 17.07 runs a wicket. Last season he was well down in the list with Hedley Verity on top. Tonight's final averages showed Verity only a fraction of a run behind Paine and Harold Larwood, the redoubtable fast bowler.

The standing averages follow:

Batsmen	Innings	N.O.	Runs	Best	Average
Nawab of Pataudi	15	3	945	215 N.O.	78.75
Walter Hammond	35	4	366	302 N.O.	76.32
Ernest Tyldesley	51	8	2487	239	57.83
Leslie Ames	43	6	2113	202 N.O.	57.10
John O'Connor	49	7	2350	248	55.95
Thomas Cook	45	6	2132	220	54.66

Herbert Sutcliffe, the great Yorkshire batsman, was steady as usual. He placed 14th compared to 15th last season, scoring 2023 runs in 44 innings for an average of 49.34.

Bowlers	Overs	Maidens	Runs	Wkts.	Avrge.
George Paine	1285.5	463	2664	165	17.07
Harold Larwood	512.2	103	1413	82	17.25
Hedley Verity	1282.1	500	2645	150	17.63

William Copson	697.2	169	1648	91	18.10
Jim Smith	1398	346	3248	172	18.88

Bill Bowes, the fast bowler from Derby, placed ninth with 147 wickets for 19.45 runs, and Bill Voce, the Notts fast bowler, was 17th, with 128 wickets for 22.04.

ENDEAVOR WON AGAINST ODDS

Accident Forced Use of "Balloon" Jib

By TOM HORGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 18 (AP)—T.O.M. Sopwith, British challenger for the America's cup, tonight modestly concealed his elation over Endeavour's second straight victory over the United States defender, Harold S. Vanderbilt's Rainbow.

That Endeavour was able to win in spite of an accident to her Genoa jib just before the start was a matter of apparent satisfaction to him.

"We split the sail just above the clew," he said, "when it caught in a hank on the forestay. We couldn't set it again on the last leg of the race because it ripped a bit more when we were getting it in before rounding the first mark. We were forced to set a light balloon jib on the way home, and there was a good bit of wind for such light canvas. For that reason we were unable to sheet it in as close as we wished."

Permission has been granted by the New York Yacht club for the removal of a portion of Endeavour's interior fittings, Sopwith said, to bring them down to the weight of the fittings in the defender. A small amount of weight has been removed.

"Our fittings still come to more than Rainbow's," Sopwith said, "but we don't intend to take out any more."

VANDERBILT NOT SO HAPPY NOW

NEWPORT, R.I., Sept. 18 (AP)—Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, skipper of the America's cup defender, Rainbow, leaned on the rail of his big yacht Vara this evening, peering into the dark settling over Newport harbor while he tried not to appear down-hearted. He didn't succeed very well.

"I'm not discouraged over Rainbow's two defeats," he said. "The British challenger, as I've remarked before, is a very fast boat. We're hoping for light weather."

McLarnin-Ross Fight Still Being Fought by the Fans

50c Cigars Cured Evans' Habit

Umpires have their peculiarities as well as ball players. Billy Evans, when he was umpiring, always presented a batter with a cigar when he figured he might have missed a strike and put the hitter in the hole. "I was working in Detroit years ago," said Billy, "and called two strikes on Sam Crawford, and he held up two fingers, meaning I had missed them, and owed him two cigars. I was out of cigars, but told him that I would buy him two after the game. I always carried two-for-a-quarter cigars to pay off my missed strikes but had left them at the hotel. Sam walked to the hotel after the game, buttonholed me and steered me up to the cigar counter and ordered two fifty-cent cigars. That cured me. I never gave any cigars away after that no matter how many I called wrong."

Answer to yesterday's question: Tris Speaker made eleven hits in a row in 1920.

Today's question: Who was the last major league regular player to hit .400? Answer tomorrow.

Ross Shows Up in Dark Glasses to Hide "Shiner"

JIMMY HAS A DIM OPTIC OF HIS OWN

He Goes to Country for Some Golf and "Relaxation"

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—The big question along Broadway and Cauliflower row today was who won the Jimmy McLarnin-Barney Ross welterweight championship fight.

In pubs, cigar stores and pool rooms, the fight faithful gathered to agree or disagree with the decision that cost Ross his title and once again placed the Vancouver Irishman in the glare of the fistic spotlight.

The pay-off was on McLarnin, but a number of fight writers at the ringside thought Ross should have had a draw.

While the arguments raged the battered principals in the 15 rounds of furious milling did quick fade outs.

Ross, surrounded by relatives and handlers, flew by airplane to Chicago to spend the Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur, beginning at midnight. The new champion, so the manager of his hotel volunteered, ate five pounds of grapes for breakfast and then went to nearby Westchester for two days of golf and relaxation.

Each carried away something to remember the other by. McLarnin's left eye was almost closed, which will not be so good for his putting, and Ross sported a nifty shiner, partly concealed by a pair of dark glasses, and a badly cut lip.

Art Winch and Sam Pian, match domos of the Ross camp, remained in town to collect their end of the purse and start the ball rolling for a return match.

"We're all burned up over that decision," Pian said, "and we're demanding another go at McLarnin the minutes Pop Foster will let him fight. We obliged Jimmy with a quick return bout and we expect the same treatment."

Manager Foster was a bit wary in committing himself on a return bout, although Jimmy said immediately after the fight that he is willing to accommodate Ross whenever a bout can be arranged. Foster would say nothing of a Chicago report that Mickey Farr, matchmaker for the Chicago stadium, had wired a bid for an immediate return engagement in Ross' home town.

THE REST WINS IN CRICKET

KING COBRA

By MARK CHANNING

Who has lived for twenty-one years in the country that he so graphically describes.

CHAPTER 34

"Why doesn't The Cobra kill this Veiled Man and seize all this treasure? It's not like him to let one man's life stand in the way of something he wants," Diana Lindsay asked the Swastika sadhu.

"Because, at the first signs of treachery, the Veiled Man, who can foresee it even as I can and who possesses certain powers of life and death, would destroy that incarnation of evil called The Cobra."

"What powers?" she questioned innocently.

The lips of the ascetic curved into a faint smile.

"Powers that lie under the earth, and above it, are controlled by him."

Fearful of being overheard by the guard, whose footsteps were clearly audible as they paced up and down, Diana crept a little nearer.

"There is one who is a prisoner—" she breathed.

"I know him," answered the sadhu. The grave face was lit by a kindly smile. "And I will be with him when the time comes—not I, as you see me, but the power which is mine to strike from afar . . . The eternal All-Good is on our side. . . ."

These and many other things which need not be written here Diana heard from the sadhu. Almost before she knew it, the hour was up.

"Dilkoosh, thou imp of Satan, where art thou?" It was the voice of the Nubian woman. And twice again came the signal.

Diana rose to her knees, listening. A light tap-tapping on the sun-baked earth up the path outside had attracted her attention. She had not noticed that the sadhu had left her.

There was a sound of running feet, and the light of a bobbing lantern flickered down the pathway . . . came nearer . . . nearer . . . shone redly in the mouth of the grotto, and fell upon a slim form in Hillman's dress.

"Come out, thou!" exclaimed the guard, a lanky Afridi youth. And, his gaze fixed warily on the frightened sea-green eyes staring into his, he set down the lantern and unslung his rifle, barring the exit.

Driven by a blind instinct of self-preservation, Diana fumbled for the phial of poison. But it slipped from her trembling fingers, and falling upon the floor was shattered into a thousand pieces.

"Ho, Brothers!" shouted the young guard. "Come quickly! I have caught a robber!"

"A robber! A robber!" . . . Someone fired a rifle. The cry was taken up by the other patrols and in the twinkling of an eye the enclosure swarmed with armed men. . . .

A small, squat man was now lashing Diana's hands behind her back, nudging her as he tied the rope. She looked down, wearily, but her heart missed a beat when she saw it was Limbu, Gray's Ghurka orderly. He had managed to get himself enrolled under The Cobra's banner, in spite of being a Hindu.

"I have come to find him!" he whispered.

Then the other guards closed round her.

"What means all this tamasha?" boomed The Cobra's voice. "Bring hither the robber ye have caught!" He was standing on the balcony outside Shireen's apartments, the Persian by his side. In the room behind, lit by heavy silver lamps burning perfumed oil, was a huddled crowd of musicians and dancers. The alarm had caused the nautch to be hurriedly abandoned.

Shireen's fear filled eyes were burning in the pale oval of her face like brown fires. . . .

Seizing The Cobra's hand, the Persian fell upon her knees.

"It is the Inglis girl, lord! Harm her not— for my sake! Give her to me! I love her. I swear by Allah that I die unless thou givest her to me!

She threw herself at his feet.

The Cobra was strangely moved. Never before had he seen Shireen so distraught. After all, pondered the gigantic Hillman, why should this Inglis girl be killed? She might still be useful to him.

"Free her!" he commanded.

Shireen seized The Cobra's hand and covered it with kisses. "I love thee, I love thee—thou great-hearted one!" she cried.

"Hold her! Or ye die—all of ye!" rang out a harsh voice. From the Tower of the Mirror, a black-veiled figure was looking down at the actors in this minor drama.

"Hand her over to the Keeper of the Beasts," went on the Veiled Man rasping. "Tomorow she dies in the Place of Fights!"

The Cobra's eyes blazed with impotent fury. He had been publicly derided—and with impunity! He who had slain more than one man for the incautious curling of a lip! His authority had been set at naught! He had been humiliated before his own men, and his honor shattered! . . . But such was his superstitious dread of the Veiled Man's power that he did not dare to reply.

Thrusting the Persian brutally from him with his foot, he strode into the palace, striking the marble pillars with his bare fist as he passed between them.

In the moment of silence before the stupefied guards took her away, Diana could hear Shireen weeping.

LIMBU'S STORY

The story of Limbu's adventures after his return to Labak with Risaldar Sher Singh began again a day later, at midnight, on the Maha Gunj pass.

"I wait until dawn, Mother Karl," he muttered, half in prayer. "And if, then, thou showest me not the beans that mark the way to my sahib surely I will knock off thy stone head when I get back!"

With the rising of the sun came joy; for after hours of searching Limbu found the trail of black beans that had dropped from the sacks which Firoz Khan had tied on to the back of Diana's saddle.

As he followed it, bent almost double and half running, the sharp report of a rifle and a spurt of dust two feet away from him brought back a realization of the danger he was in—for the life and property of any Hindu who ventures alone into the hills is, by hill law, legitimate prey.

Someone, and a good shot at that, was sniping him.

Eighteen times in five hours his single pursuer fired at him, each time missing him by inches and eighteen times Limbu forbore to attempt retaliation. Time was too precious to allow of luxuries.

At length he reached the cluster of boulders at the foot of the cliff, behind one of which was the tunnel through which Diana and The Cobra had passed. There the trail ended. And there his casting round in search of a possible continuance of it very nearly cost him his life, for a bullet from his unseen pursuer grazed his shoulder.

Swearing between his clenched teeth, Limbu took cover behind one of the great masses of rock, and straining his eyes till they ached again searched the hillside for his enemy. But though there was still no one to be seen, his keen eyes observed something else—something far more important than the mere sighting of a relentless pursuer. There were unmistakable indications all round him of a large body of horsemen having halted there.

The problem which now faced him was to discover where they had gone—for a careful search failed to reveal any sign of a continued march.

Thoughtfully his eyes studied the cliff and the boulders.

Something shining among the pebbles near the base of the largest of them caught his eye.

Swiftly he ran out towards it, took a bullet through the fleshy part of his thigh as he did so, and picked up what he had seen.

It was a gold bracelet, on the inside of which were engraved the letters, "D.L. from J.L." Diana's.

Enemy or no enemy, this was a clue that was going to be followed up!

FATAL TO DROP NATIVE ACCENT

LONDON, (CP)—Just the tone of voice of British radio announcers is so greatly admired that they received proposals of marriage by mail. This was revealed by Lord Ponsonby, formerly Foreign Under-Secretary in the Labor Ministry, when he gave an address on the radio upon accents and dialects.

Nevertheless Lord Ponsonby objected to the tendency which he asserted was visible amongst people to copy the tone of the announcers. "People are instructing their children to drop their Suffolk or Gloucester accents," he said. "If this is really going on it will be fatal. The accent which is cultivated or copied and is not natural means a mincing speech, which is the most objectionable form that exists. There is a worse danger, and that is the talking films. If people try to initiate that low sonorous metallic American it will be nothing short of a catastrophe. My plea is that everyone should talk as they have been brought up to talk, however broad the accent may be."

Lord Ponsonby said his two favorite accents were from opposite ends of the country, from Northumberland and Devonshire.

It is worth noting that a body of persons who value the variety in English speech are already making gramaphone records of dialects for future reference. While the Broadcasting Corporation has prescribed for its announcers a standardized form of speech it couples with this a lively interest in the preservation of dialects by means of special items passed through the regional stations.

St. Martin's Sees Its Radio Folks

LONDON, (CP)—Fashionably dressed men and women from Mayfair mingled with poor people from the East End at one of the strangest "at-homes" ever held in London. It was at St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Trafalgar Square, and its object was to enable those who know the church through wireless programs only to see it for themselves.

There were refreshment counters, amusements for young and old, a Punch and Judy show, a concert of plantation and negro songs in the church, and an orchestra in the churchyard. Later a pick-up cricket match was played.

After an address by Dr. Sheppard the church was floodlit, and to the strains of a modern dance band there was dancing in the church-yard until midnight.

Plans Completed for Farm School

FREDERICTON, N.B., (CP)—Plans for the 12th annual short course at the New Brunswick Agricultural school have been completed, according to O. C. Hicks, superintendent of soils and crops division of the New Brunswick department of Agriculture, who will again act as principle this year. "The course," said Mr. Hicks, "is designed to train the student to apply the fact of agricultural science to common practice on the farm. It is of the most practical character and is suited in every way to the boy who cannot be spared for a longer period from the farm."

The training will take place from November 2 to December 8 at the Dominion Experimental Station here, and classes will be held in both English and French. The prospectus calls for instruction in nine of the following subjects: animal husbandry, veterinary science, dairying, bee-keeping, poultry raising, horticulture, field husbandry, economic entomology, plant physiology and pathology. Classes in English composition and practical commercial law will also be given.

OVERNMENT NOT FORCING DEFAULT

States Answer to Bond Dealers' Advertisement

CTORIA, Sept. 18 (CP)— The sh Columbia government replied y to an advertisement published Vancouver paper of last week over signature of the B.C. Bond Dealers ciation alleging the "government kens trust funds."

he advertisement, an outcome of ntly announced refunding plans three defaulting municipalities, ied the names of several well- wn financial houses.

on. John Hart, minister of finance, ed the following statement on subject:

The finance department has re- ed wires from some of the finan- houses in Toronto whose names e in the advertisement stating r names were attached without r knowledge.

The statements in the advertise- t were not correct. The govern- t is not forcing all municipalities default. The government has not ocated default," he said.

n the letter reference Mr. Hart was ling with statements in the adver- ement that "the present govern- t now appears to be trying to ce default and repudiation by all inicipalities before government ants will be allowed to them" and at many home owners "will become blic charges if bond interest is faulted as advocated by the govern- ent." There was no truth in these tements, the minister said.

PICKING GRAVENSTEINS

Very interesting data with reference to the time of picking Gravenstein apples in relation to spot scald disease are reported in a recent issue of Scientific Agriculture, as a result of investigations by pathologists of the Dominion laboratory of Plant Pathology at Kentville. For example, they observed that Gravensteins, picked at the time when most of the starch had disappeared from the center of the apple and there was still an appreciable amount in the flesh, developed the least amount of spot scald. The amount of sucrose and total sugars present in the fruit had little or no effect on the prevalence of the disease, but harvesting the apples when most of the starch had disappeared from the core area gave fruit of larger size, deeper color and better keeping quality han earlier picked apples of the same variety.

WALL STREET IN QUIET DAY

Only 541,000 Shares Traded as Members Play Checkers

By FREDERICK GARDNER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (CP). — Stocks and U.S. government securities displayed symptoms of convalescence today but elsewhere the financial markets continued a dull routine. News of a stimulating character was scarce.

In the day's lethargic proceedings only 541,000 shares changed hands. Instead of the one-time mart of excitement and rapid-fire dealings, a federal securities commission visiting the exchange, found members passing the time playing checkers and working cross word puzzles.

Among few relatively lively shares Paramount was a leader with an advance of ⅝ of a point. Other amusement stocks, such as Fox, Lowes and Warner Bros. also improved.

A rally of more than 2 points in U.S. Steel pfd. helped brighten the market picture considerably.

RELICS UNCOVER SOLDIER HISTORY

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. — (CP)—Old Niagara camp on the Canadian side of the Niagara river is giving up its treasures of historical relics as though it too would participate more intimately in the festivities at Fort Niagara, where restoration and peace celebrations are being held Sept. 3-6.

These relics, discovered by the falling of plaster from the ceiling of Butlers Barracks, perhaps bring modern occurrences nearer to the affairs of 100 to 150 years ago when Imperial soldiers guarded Upper Canada. The barracks is used at the present time as a store-room for the Ordnance Corps of which Sergeant-Major Jennings is in charge. He decided to pull the rest of the plaster from the great oak beams and a shower of old coins, buttons and cartridges greeted him.

The collection on investigation was found to hold at least one memento from each regiment ever stationed at the old war sone. An old, oddly-shaped knife; an old button stick; musket balls, the size of marbles; a one-pound cannon ball; a unique key; a Hindostan Peninsula helmet; a flat-tend old lead bullet and a number of old helmet facings and fittings.

Among the coins which are mostly copper and vary in dates from 1744 to 1844 are a number of George II and George III mintage. There is also a small Spanish piece, the size of a small five-cent piece, inscribed 1798, Carlos 4; a copper halfpenny coin inscribed "Commemorate Battle of Waterloo 1812-13-14," a copper coin with the words "Colonies and Commerce Wellington," on it; and one which is probably the most unique, a copper coin inscribed "1813 Trade and Navigation Preferable to Paper." This has a ship on one side.

The regimental buttons are some of those used on uniforms worn by soldiers of the 15th Foot (East Yorkshire) 37th, 70th (Surrey), 68th Shropshire Infantry, 70th, 66th, the King's Dragoon Guards, 76th, Duke of Wellington West Riding Yorkshire.

The building was one of the first built in military occupation days at Niagara, and dates back to 1790. It was moved probably back from the brow of the hill near St. George, after the burning of Niagara by the American army. As a barracks it has not been used since 1865, when it was occupied by the Queen's Own Regiment, during the Fenian Invasion.

It is thought the relics had fallen from the pockets of soldiers bunking on the upper floor and become lodged in the wide cracks of the floor. The old oaken beams under the plaster were found to be in a perfect state of preservation. They are all hand-hewn.

CROP TESTING PLAN

During the past three years the cereal division of the Dominion Experimental farms has been interesting itself in a scheme which is known as a "Crop Testing Plan." The main objective of this plan thus far has been to "step up" the general quality of the wheat in the prairie provinces by growing in small lots samples collected by elevator agents from farmers' wagons at country elevators with a view, first, to ascertaining the names of those farmers who would be well advised to secure better seed stock, and, second, to obtain for these farmers information as to the nearest points at which such stock may be obained. In 1933 the wheat grown by over 5,000 farmers was checked according to this plan and it was found that over 40 per cent of these farmers were growing grain which they should not use for seed. This testing plan is being extended on a comprehensive scale in the west this year and is being tried out in certain districts in the east.

SWALLOWS CANE IN INITIATION RITES

BRISBANE, Australia, (CP).—Members of a newly-discovered tribe in New Guinea swallow a piece of bent cane about five or six feet long as part of the initiation ceremony of the tribe, W. P. Chinnery, government anthropologist, reported here when on his way to Geneva to attend a meeting of the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations as the accredited Australian representative.

Witch doctors bend the cane until the ends meet and force it down the lad's throat until only the ends remain projecting out of the mouth, he said. He considers the cane-swallowing as the most astounding act he has ever witnessed.

"Discovery of the tribe," Dr. Chinnery said, "followed the opening during the past 12 months of 4,000 square miles in the heart of New Guinea by officers of the district service. The natives lived on a vast plateau, 5,000 feet above sea level. They possessed a good physique, and were more intelligent than the average New Guinea native."

The 1934 European wheat crop, says the Monthly Review, will fall short of the abnormal out-turn of 1933. The point of major interest is the probable reduction in production in France, Germany and Italy. These countries constitute the most important element in determining import requirements to Continental Europe. In 1933 production in these three countries was so large that imports during the past crop year were abnormally small.

Twenty Years Ago They Were in Ranks; Today They Lead

BENITO MUSSOLINI — ADOLF HITLER — JOSEF V. STALIN

Twenty years ago last August when war and rumors of war were just beginning to set the world afire these three men were rather obscure figures in their respective countries. Today they are the dictators upon whom attention of the world is fastened. Mussolini was then the editor of a radical newspaper; Hitler an undistinguished corporal in the Austrian army, and Stalin of Russia was in exile in Siberia. Photos show them as they looked in 1914 and today.

VIDETTE TAKES MONASHEE MINE

VANCOUVER, Sept. 18 (CP)—Acquisition of a 60 per cent interest under option in the Monashee mine by Vidette Gold Mines, Ltd., has been announced by Vidette officials. The deal will give Vidette full control of the Monashee.

The present Monashee property was idle until the fall of 1933 when it was examined by Dr. Victor Dolmake, and by Gordon F. Dickson, managing-director of the Vidette company. Upon their recommendations, the Monashee syndicate entered upon its present program of development, it was reported.

ROCHESTER IN BALL FINALS

Beat Albany 3-1 to Meet Toronto in the Finals

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 18 (AP)—Rochester moved into the finals of the international baseball league playoffs tonight as they defeated Albany 3-1 to win the series four games to one.

Pete Appleton pitched the Wings to their victory tonight. He allowed eight hits, issued no bases on balls and struck out 11 men.

The Wings brought about the retirement of Cy Blanton, Albany starting pitcher, in the fourth inning when four hits after two more out produced two runs and broke a 1-1 tie. Bill Harris, who replaced him, allowed only two hits during the rest of the game.

Rochester will meet Toronto at Toronto tomorrow night in the finals. The second game will be played Thursday and then the teams will move to Rochester.

PERRY COASTS ON TO VICTORY

Kirby Also Advances but Wilde Is Out in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18 (CP).—Fred Perry and his South African travelling companion, Vernon Kirby, coasted into the third round of the Pacific southwest tennis tournament today while Frank Wilde, the other British competitor in men's singles, was eliminated.

Perry defeated Bill Seward of Stanford university, 6-1, 6-2, Kirby won from Leonard Patterson, local player, 8-6, 12-10, while Wilde lost to Alan Herrington, an old-timer, 9-11, 6-1, 6-1.

Another California collegiate star of limited fame, Jess Millman of Southern California, rose up to shunt Wilmer Allison out of the contest.

The trojan player duplicated the feat of a Stanford star, John Law, who eliminated Roderick Menzel of Czechoslovakia yesterday. The defeat of Allison, finalist in the national singles this year, came in the second round, 8-10, 8-6, 6-4.

Allison, perhaps the world's greatest master of volleying, was beaten because of his inability to get the ball in the court.

Vernon Kirby, South Africa, had some trouble vanquishing Leonard Patterson of California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, 8-6, 12-10.

Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, eliminated Jack Knemeyer, Inglewood, Calif., 6-4, 6-1. George Lott, Chicago, had a bit more difficulty in stopping Ben Dey of Stanford, 6-3, 6-3.

Lott and Stoefen returned to the court later for some unfinished business in the men's doubles, third round, defeating Phil Hanna, Los Angeles, and John Sisson, Alhambra, 6-4, 6-1.

At sundown last night, Hanna and Sisson had them at set all, Lott and Stofen winning the first 14-12, and dropping the second, 6-8.

BOSTON FAILS TO GET A RINK

BOSTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—Efforts of Boston Bruins National hockey team to effect a satisfactory lease with Boston garden for the coming season proved fruitless today.

Frank Calder, president of the N.H.L., made an unexpected visit here and with Art Ross, Bruins boss, conferred with George V. Brown, manager of the garden.

The Bruins, the Boston Globe said tonight, were believed to have proposed that they pay 25 per cent of the gross, and bonuses above a certain figure. The garden, the Globe added, demanded a flat guarantee of $80,000 which is $8000 below the average rental of the last five years.

than the necessary majority of two-thirds. Three votes were against—Switzerland, Portugal and Holland. Seven did not vote. On the next vote, to grant Russia a permanent seat on the league council, 40 voted in favor and 10 abstained.

CORDIAL WELCOME

President Richard Sandler then, with cordial words of welcome, invited Russia's delegation to take their seats. There was some cheering and hand-clapping as Litvinoff mounted the tribune, and began Russia's first speech in the league assembly. He spoke of the early history of the Soviet union, of how foreign powers attempted to destroy it. From this arose Russia's early hostility to the league, he said.

"The Soviet union," declared Litvinoff, "is entering the league today as representative of a new social and economic system, not renouncing any of its special features, and like other nations represented in the league, preserving its individuality."

WILL TO PEACE

He stressed Russia's will to peace. Nations were not becalmed by assurances of peaceful intention, especially in those places which were accustomed to expect aggression.

"We should establish that any state is entitled to demand from its neighbors guarantees for its security, and such a demand should not be regarded as an expression of distrust.

"From now on, the will to peace of the Soviet union with its 170,000,000 inhabitants—peace for itself and for other States—will make itself felt as a powerful factor."

In a brief preceding debate President Eamon de Valera of the Irish Free State again raised the question of religious persecution in Russia. Hundreds of millions of Christians, he said, believed that to deprive a man of his religion was to deprive life of its meaning.

Litvinoff had not arrived when De Valera spoke, and in his speech the Russian made no reference to De Valera's plea.

The flashlights flared as Litvinoff concluded his own address, and cameras again clicked as the Russian stepped into a waiting car. The great day was over.

ITALIAN BOYS

"The functions of the citizen and the soldier are indivisible in the Fascist state," Il duce and his cabinet proclaimed as they decreed what was believed to be the most sweeping peacetime mobilization in history.

THREE CATEGORIES

Three categories of compulsory military training were created in the new order. They are:

1. Preliminary, beginning at the age of 8 years:
2. Military, starting at the age of 21 years.
3. Post-military, continuing for 10 years after the military phase ends.

The balilla—the young Fasciti—may not shirk their military schoolwork, students cannot be promoted to higher classes or receive decrees without having followed the military courses "with profit," the decree set forth.

As to the youth of Italy, the cabinet promlaimed: "Boys from the time they are 8 years old until they are called to arms at 21 will be prepared spiritually, physically and military by the civil organization of the Fascist balilla and by the Fascist youths of combat.

"Thus, when they enter the armed forces, they can dedicate themselves exclusively to warlike professional and specialized training in arms."

"Rusty" Peden and Partner Victors

TORONTO, Sept. 19 (CP). — "Rusty" Peden of Victoria, brother of Torchy Peden of six-day bike fame, teamed with Russ Hunt of Toronto to win the 25-mile bicycle race here today. Some bad spills marred the long grind which went to Peden and Hunt in the time of one hour, two minutes and fiv seconds.

Bob McLeod, British Empire champion, lost his partner, Gordon Hodges, who suffered a broken collar bone in a spill on the 11th mile, but young Bob joined with Gus Hayhen of Hamilton to take second place. A. Heaton and Peat Leslie of Toronto were third.

Tom Melville suffered a four-inch gash on the head in the upset on the 18th mile. Both Melville and Hodges were taken to hospital.

H. H. STEVENS

retail tobacco"; he scored "another dictating to farmers the price of beef on the market," and told his hearers that when conditions existed such as were found in Ottawa where prosecutions against chain stores were launched and "unjust scales" uncovered, the housewife-buyer was "gyped."

Mr. Stevens singled out specifically the Imperial Tobacco company, asking by what process of reason, "what justification there was," in taking great profits and cutting the price of tobacco to the grower from 33 to 19 cents.

TALKING TO PUBLIC

"I am condemned," he said, "for seeking to know too much. I am considered to be a 'busy-body'. Some of my friends of the so-called 'large interests' would scarcely look at me. They hold up their hands in holy horror. I am an Ishmaelite. Well, it does not worry me ery much. I have been criticized for talking too much to the public. I am talking to the public, as I have already intimated for the simple reason that I found after talking to business organizations for two or three years there were no results."

Mr. Stevens declared Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, Liberal leader has "introduced into this campaign the propriety or the right of myself to discuss matters which have been referred to in the price spreads committee."

NO APOLOGIES

"I am apologizing to no one," said the minister, "for what I have done or what I have said. I notice Mr. King said this to the electors in Kenora: 'It is a choice between Bennett and Stevens.'

"When has it become Mr. King's prerogative to speak for the Conservative party? This anxiety of Mr. King—and Mr. Hepburn (Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario) by the way — this solicitude for the imagined and concocted difference between the prime minister and myself really is most touching. The question one naturally asks is: When did Mr. King become so concerned about what might happen in the Conservative party? I am certain of this, that if he were assured there was something wrong in the ranks of the Conservative party nothing would please him more."

Mr. Stevens thought the answer lay in the introduction and motion of the price spread and massed buying resolution by Premier Bennett, its adoption and Mr. Stevens' appointment as chairman.

The minister charged that during the Liberal tenure of office, between 1922 and 1929, 120 mergers involving "some 550 firms" had been formed.

"There have been four come into being since we took office," he said, "and yet the suggestion is made that sweatshops are caused by monopolies. There is Mr. King's statement. If it is Mr. King's reasoning that the government raised tariffs, the tariffs create monopolies and sweatshops arise out of monopolies . . . Then I say there are 120 causes of sweatshop conditions which arose during his own reign."

BLAMED FOR DISCORD

Mr. King would denounce none of them, he declared. Because Mr. Stevens had made reference to the list in the budget debate and had named some of the firms in an address to members of parliament, "I have been attacked most viciously as one who is causing discord in the country."

The practice of certain financial firms, developed particularly from 1934 to 1929, said Mr. Stevens in combining a group of well managed and prosperous individual concerns into one and financing the group by an issue of bonds to the public, or unloading, "had let to grave losses and to very, very serious trouble and damage to the working class who are engaged in those monopolies.

The practice "wrecked many a splendid institution" and the result was a "soulless corporation."

"What I am working for and what I have sought to point out to the business men of this country," said Mr. Stevens, "is this: That if a group of business men or one or two groups of business men choose to bring together a personal concern and put it into one whole impersonal concern, hen they must take the responsibility of the welfare of the workers that are in those plants when they take them into the larger concern."

20,000 MORE ARE STRIKERS

100,000 More Will Be Called Out Monday in Textile Row

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (AP)—A 20,000 increase in the army of strike idle, despite, an unremitting drive to reopen southern textile mills, was revealed by an independent survey today as labor leaders arranged to expand the great walkout to all branches of the industry within a week.

The central strike committee of the United textile workers was voted authority by that organization's executive counsel to call out at its discretion some 100,000 workers in hitherto unaffected textile divisions. Leaders declared they would do so by Monday at the latest.

Meanwhile, a manufacturer of machine-guns and tear gas and nausea bombs told the United States senate committee investigating the sale of munitions that his business had jumped between five and 10 per cent since the strike began. All shipments had the approval of local authorities, he said, and none went to strikers.

Figures gathered by the Associated Press through member papers and staff correspondents indicated a total of 421,000 out of the mills today.

KING SAYS R.B. IS BLIND, DEAF

Government Betraying People He Charges; Manion a Hitler

MARKHAM, Ont., Sept. 18 (CP)—Before a great crowd here tonight, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King charged the Bennett government with betraying the people.

"The government obtained power from the people," he asserted. "The government has now betrayed the people, and it proposes to go on betraying them for another year if the people will let them."

The people laughed and cheered, the Liberal leader, charged Mr. Bennett with being blind and deaf to the demands for an election.

"Mr. Bennett says he doesn't hear or see a demand for a general election," he said. "I say to him that is only because his hearing and sight are not as good as mine—and they're not as good as yours."

He declared warmly that in every public place the government was denounced.

"Do you hear any endorsation of the government?" he questioned.

"No," shouted persons in the crowd.

Mr. King attributed Hon. R. J. Manion the dictatorial attitude of a Hitler. The railway minister, he said, had asserted defeat of the government in the five by-elections would not affect the term of this administration.

MORE ABOUT

Washington, D.C., telegraphed that federal public works funds might be available. Two freighters in Seattle were made ready to rush foodstuffs and building materials to the sister city in the north. Red Cross supplies in other Alaska cities were offered for relief purposes.

TOLL IS TWO LIVES

The death toll from the first still stood at two tonight. The victims were Eskimos, trapped in a basement by the wind-fanned flames. Many persons were treated for minor injuries in the hospital, which miraculously escaped the holocaust.

10 BLOCKS BY THREE

An area 10 blocks long by three wide was laid low in the fire, the frame buildings burning so fiercely that the entire population of Nome was powerless to check the destruction. Dynamiting, resorted to after the fire department's equipment was put out of commission, did not stop the raging blast.

Through the fire, which began early yesterday afternoon and raged until night, the four operators of the United States army signal corps station just outside the city labored like heroes to maintain communication with the outside world.

SIGNALERS DO FINE WORK

Led by Technical Sergeant Leon F. Harper, the signal corps operators built their own power line when flames cut off their electric source. Thousands of messages were handled—inquiries from anxious relatives and government officials outside, reassuring messages from Nome that their loved ones were safe.

Appalled by the destruction but bravely facing the future, civic leaders of Nome took care of the homeless, finding sleeping and eating places, making plans for rebuilding.

Early this morning temporary restaurants and stores were set up to care for the needs of citizens, many of whom lost all their belongings. The fire had been completley extinguished.

FATE OF RECORDS UNCERTAIN

The fate of court house records was uncertain, as smoke was arising from the cault, but bank records were believed safe although the outside of the bank vault was still too hot to permit investigation.

Work of cleaning up the debris in streets and building sites already was begun. Court was held in temporary quarters.

Once before, in 1905, Nome was ravaged by fire, although the damage was not so extensive then as now. Nineteen years ago a tidal storm destroyed much waterfront property.

Founded by a group of adventurers who settled on the beach in 1898, Nome first was called Anvil City. After the strike had brought 20,000 gold seekers to the scene the name was changed to avoid confusion with the nearby settlement of Anvik. The population dwindled to 1200 in 1932, but higher gold prices had swelled it to about 1500 at the time of the fire.

It was pointed out that, in addition to the approximately 1500 persons who live in Nome the year around, there are more than 5000 others, in Sashmareff, Dearing, Teller, Keewalik, Candle, Baldwin, Kotzebue and a great area populated by miners and prospectors, who are dependent on Nome for their supplies.
