Here's What Happens When You Drop a Cup of Coffee

This is what happens when you drop a coffee cup—filled with coffee—to the floor. Shattering fragments caught by a high-speed camera at the moment of impact. Note the jets of coffee spurting from the sides and center of the cup as the broken crockery falls away. This photograph was made with an exposure of approximately 1-100,000th of a second by means of electrical circuit developed by Professor H. E. Edgerton and Kenneth Germeshausen at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass. Marvelous pictures are made with this super-speed photographic equipment.

START SEARCH FOR LOST SHIP

HALIFAX, Oct. 4 (CP).—Through the heaving seas of Labrador's storm swept coast a snub-nosed steamer ploughed tonight in search of the British freighter Millpool, disabled by storm and unreported for two days after sending out frantic SOS calls.

The searching ship—the Wearpool, of the same line as the Millpool—was following the storm's line of drift in a south-easterly direction, hoping to overtake the stricken vessel. The Wearpool's officers hoped the Millpool was drifting before the whistling gale from the northeast.

She was believed tonight to be the only ship now seeking the Millpool and the crew of 26 who manned her when she ran into the howler Tuesday on a voyage from Danzig to Montreal.

HALF OF LOAN IS ALREADY IN

Subscriptions From West Arriving Says Minister

OTTAWA, Oct. 4 (CP).—The half way mark had been passed with a preliminary total of $128,750,000 in subscriptions to the new $250,000,000 Dominion refunding loan, Hon. E. N. Rhodes, minister of finance, announced tonight. The issue went on the market Monday morning.

Assistant receiver-general offices outside of Montreal and Toronto were beginning to show up much better, stated the minister. This was particularly the case in the west where a substantial increase in the number of cash applications was recorded today.

Special gratification at the increase in conversion subscriptions, which were more than double the volume received yesterday, was expressed by the minister. This may have been due in part to the special appeal to convert victory bonds issued earlier today, but probably was indicative of the momentum which the campaign was acquiring. After Saturday, bonds can be turned in only for conversion at par.

BOYS DRIFT AWAY IN OARLESS BOAT

Search by Boat and Plane Is Unsuccessful on Main Lake Erie

CRYSTAL BEACH, Ont., Oct. 4 (CP).—The United States coastguard cutter Dexter tonight continued a vain search for an oarless duckboat and three small boys who went fishing yesterday aboard the tiny craft and drifted out into Lake Erie.

Search by men in eight small boats ended today after they and an airplane pilot had failed to sight the boat. Only the mothers of the lads refused to give up hope and waited distraught for news of their sons.

The boys, Walter McFarland, 10, his six-year-old brother, Lorraine, and William Matthews, 10, put into the bay here and shortly thereafter were sighted drifting toward the open lake. Then they vanished.

EDMONTON GAS MAIN BLOWS UP

Tears Huge Hole in Earth; People Go Without Supper

EDMONTON, Oct. 4 (CP)—Thousands of Edmonton residents tonight ate cold dinners they huddled in sweaters in chilly homes after a section of the main natural gas line leading into the city burst open late today with an explosion described by witnesses "like a heavy calibre shell."

The broken main was replaced quickly, but gas company officials did not turn the gas back into the city mains until radio broadcasts, telephone calls and door-to-door calls were made to notify consumers who might have left gas valves open.

Witnesses said that dirt was thrown 200 feet by the explosion, and the escaping gas kicked up great clouds of dust. Police and firemen roped off the section to keep out smokers and others.

SOUTH IS HIT BY WALKOUTS

Truckers Are Out in Portland; Furniture Workers Strike

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4 (AP)—Strikes and threatened walkouts continued in the convention city and elsewhere on the coast as the American Federation of Labor sat in annual session here today.

Trucking service was virtually at a standstill in Portland, Ore., because of a strike of 500 or more drivers. The strikers said they quit because some trucking companies had been picking up freight at the plant of Swift & Co., where a strike of union killers and semi-killed laborers had been in progress for several weeks.

Five hundred furniture upholsterers walked out here yesterday, adding to the walkout of that craft, which has about 3000 workers on the coast. The upholsterers were on strike in Seattle and Tacoma and those in Los Angeles and Oakland were threatening to go out.

About 400 gold miners on strike in California's Mother Lode district made preparations for a long period of idleness.

Paralysis Victim Lives Artificially

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 4 (AP)—Raymond Rambo, 17-year-old infantile paralysis victim, was successfully transferred back to the Alameda county hospital respirator today "between breaths," in 14 seconds. He has lived in respirators 160 days, said to be a scientific record.

When the hospital respirator broke down a fortnight ago it took 20 seconds to move him to one hastily secured from the children's hospital. The old respirator has been repaired and arranged to permit the patient to read. As a result Rambo was enthusiastic for the change.

"I'll be okeh," he said as doctors and nurses gathered to make the transfer. "It'll be good to get 'home' again."

Baby Born 10 Minutes After Death of Its Mother Is Living and Will Be Normal Tot

Caesarian Operation Performed on Mother After Death in Oakland, Calif.

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 4 (AP)—A baby born ten minutes after the death of her mother, Mrs. Ellen Lewsi, 35, of Oakland, today gave promise of living a normal life span. The unusual birth occurred last Sunday but only became known today. Had Mrs. Lewis lived the baby would have been born in about three weeks' time.

The woman was stricken with a severe headache last Sunday, and Dr. Robert J. McIvor ordered her at once to a hospital. In the hospital, Dr. McIvor began his examination. Before he had finished his diagnosis Mrs. Lewis died and an autopsy disclosed a brain hemorrhage as the cause. For four frantic minutes Dr. McIvor struggled to revive the woman. Then he called for surgical instruments.

The doctor worked quickly, and performed a post mortem Caesarian operation. Six minutes after he began he held an apparently dead 7-pound, 13-ounce baby in his hands. After 20 minutes of artificial respiration the little girl began breathing normally, and hospital attendants said today that she was doing well.

NRA May Ban Price Fixing and Production Control in Favor Old Competitive System

Richberg Outlines Probable Change of Course With Reopening of Codes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP). — Uncovering a probable change of course for NRA, Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator, advised business today to leave the "lopsided guild socialism" of price fixing and production control in favor of "the old competitive system."

He labelled an 'irridescent dream' the belief of some industrialists that permanent prosperity can be obtained through the price fixing, production limiting method. At the same time he asserted that such practices were justified in emergencies to prevent the waste of natural resources.

These statements, coming from the policy committee which is directing the blue eagle's course, were interpreted immediately as pointing away from fixed prices and limited production in NRA codes. The gradual reopening of all major codes on these issues was forecast.

COUNCIL GIVES ROAD VIEWS TO "BRAIN TRUST"

Suggests Improving Existing Highways in South

QUESTION BEFORE BOARD NEXT WEEK

Putnam and District Engineer Asked to Confer

Two angles of road policy were considered by the council of the board of trade Thursday, at a luncheon session lasting over two hours, one being the matter of the answer to be made to the provincial economic council, which has asked practical suggestions as to road policy, and the other being the matter of getting road improvement under way in this riding commensurate with what appears to be going on elsewhere.

Reeve J. B. Leyland, of West Vancouver, a member of the economic council, outlined the information desired by that body, in a letter of September 25, as follows.

"At the last meeting of the economic council, the writer was requested to present a report at a later date as to suggestions of a road policy for this province, which might be related to a relief scheme and the encouragement of tourist traffic.

TOURIST MONEY WANTED

"It is fully realised that the tourist business in the province of British Columbia brings in a tremendous amount of new money which circulates among the business interests, and that any added prosperity as a result of this business will indirectly create more employment. The economic council is desirous of obtaining practical suggestions and more particularly from those areas which are most affected, such as the districts adjacent to ports of entry.

"One realizes that the revenues of the provincial government have been seriously depleted, and that it has been impossible to follow out a continuous road building program in all areas, but there has been some criticism of the condition of the main roads leading from the international boundary and connecting with the larger centers of the province. Your board may wish to submit practical suggestions, and if so, I would be obliged if you would be good enough to forward to me a brief on the basis of which the council might submit recommendations to the government.

"Thanking you to kindly favor me with a reply as soon as possible."

After a wide general discussion, it was decided to send an interim reply to Reeve Leyland embodying the points on which the members of the council were agreed, and which embodied principles the board has frequently endorsed, and to leave it to the full board at next week's meeting to decide what changes in or additions to the reply should be made.

FOUR-POINT REPLY

This reply, as roughed out by Adolph Browne, with J. R. Hunter seconding, will outline the deplorable condition of the roads in this territory, point out that the American roads leading up to points of entry are excellent, and relate that nothing but complaints as to road conditions here are heard from motor tourists; will reaffirm the board's opinion of the desirability of placing all road work under the jurisdiction of a highway commission; will urge that a definite policy be drawn up for permanent improvement of existing main highways; and will endorse the view that the prosperity of the southern portion of the province is intimately linked up with the tourist traffic.

OTHER IDEAS

Among additions that will probably be proposed to the full board, is the proposal of W. R. Grubbe, that 10 miles of hard surfacing should be done in this riding annually for a period of years, and the proposal of Adolph Browne that as soon as provincial finances permit, the general fund of the province, which formerly bore the whole road burden, should be asked to supplement substantially the funds derived from motor traffic. Another suggestion is that the government should be definitely asked to undertake no new main highways until the existing system is in good shape.

It was decided to invite Frank Putnam, M.P.P. for Nelson-Creston, and E. S. Jones of Cranbrook, district engineer to meet the board next Thursday, with other appropriate officials, for a conference on road matters within the Nelson-Creston riding.

In this connection, President R. W. Hinton and J. R. Hunter were named a committee to advise with H. W. Stevens, assistant district engineer for this riding, as to the appropriate procedure.

Restoration of B. C. Grants Costly

Government Would Have to Find $2,500,000 According to Victoria

VICTORIA, Oct. 4 (CP).—With the burning subject of grants to British Columbia municipalities thrown into the limelight by the comments of Hon. A. Wells Gray, minister of municipalities, at the Kamloops convention yesterday the cost to the government of the restoration of grants was given consideration.

Mr. Gray is reported to have said he would strive to get as many grants as possible restored and to eliminate social service charges.

Last winter when the municipalities launched a drive for the restoration of the grants it was roughly estimated that to restore the grants and eliminate the social service charges would call for the government to find an extra $2,500,000. The grants, which at the peak reached over $6,000,000, were gradually cut to $3,500,000 in 1929 and since then have been cut to $1,750,000 and social service costs amounting to around $800,000 added.

"Big League" BOWLING

By AL DEMAREE

There are two distinct types or schools of bowlers. Whether he is a mediocre 150 average bowler or up among the sharks with a 190 or 200 average, he must adopt one of these two styles. The "pin" bowler looks only at the pins and does not look at the foul line or alley. Many of our greatest bowlers of the past and present use this system. The other system of "spot" bowling is used by the majority of good bowlers today. They only glance at the pins and pick a "spot" on the alley a foot or two in front of the foul line to lay their ball. By varying this "spot" to suit their delivery and type of alley, their ball hits the pins in the spot desired. 'Spot" bowlers explain their system by saying that it is easier to lay a ball on a "spot" a few feet away than it is to pick a spot on the pins sixty feet away.

THANKSGIVING IS TO BE QUIET

All Churches Closed; Public Dinners and Sport Banned

Thanksgiving day, a day given over for the expression of appreciation of bountiful harvests, in the churches, and declared a Dominion holiday, will be a quiet one at Nelson, where the infantile paralysis ban will still be in effect.

Churches, which are usually resplendent with the fruits of garden and field for the occasion, and which usually feature special music and observances, will be closed Sunday. Public Thanksgiving dinners will have to be held at a future date and the customary sporting program will be off. After the 9th, however, if there are no further paralysis cases or diphtheria it is likely that a part of the day's observances will be held.

Delegates Battle on Bridge Issue

Fix Up Old New Westminster Bridge and Spend Some Money on Roads Urge

KAMLOOPS, B.C., Oct. 4 (CP).—Closing of free bridges and substitution of toll bridges, especially at New Westminster, were opposed today by Union of British Columbia municipalities in a stormy session. Fathered by Reeve N. Booth, Langley, the resolution finally passed after opposition from Vancouver and New Westminster delegates.

A second resolution sponsored by Reeve C. E. Oliver, Penticton, demanded appointment of a non-political highway commission to administer highways and bridges in the province.

"There is no public urgency for a new bridge at New Westminster The government is hopelessly in debt and yet prepared to spend another $3,500,000 for something which is not greatly needed," said Reeve R. C. MacDonald of Coquitlam.

"Let us spend $1,000,000 on remodeling the present bridge and the remaining $2,500,000 on some hard-surfaced roads," urged Reeve Oliver. Mayor David Leeming, Victoria, and Alderman G. C. Miller, Vancouver, called the issue, "a local matter" and asked the convention to take no action on the question. They were ruled out by a large majority.

"THE FINEST CAR I'VE EVER DRIVEN —Bar None!"

A Man's Car That Women Like to Drive FORD V-8

"I've owned a dozen cars in my time and some of them cost a great deal of money. But none of them could match this Ford V-8.

"I tell you — it's perfectly amazing the way this car travels. I couldn't believe it myself until I tried it — had no idea that the V-8 engine would make such a difference. It's so smooth you can hardly hear it. And how it can take the hills!

"It's the only car I've ever had that I really enjoy driving. You just can't compare it with any other car, because there is no other car just like it. You see — no other car under $4000 has a V-8 engine. My wife is even more enthusiastic than I am. She likes the lines and upholstery. Says she never really felt safe in any car until she started driving the Ford V-8.

"With all its power, the Ford V-8 is economical to run. Gives me the best gasoline mileage I've ever had, and I haven't spent a cent for repairs.

"I take off my hat to Henry Ford for a great job. His Ford V-8 is the finest car I've ever driven — bar none!"

AUTUMN BONFIRES

In the other gardens
And all up the vale,
From the Autumn bonfires,
See the smoke trail.

Pleasant summer over,
And all the summer flowers,
The red fire blazes,
The grey smoke towers.

Sing a song of seasons,
Something bright in all,
Flowers in the summer,
Fires in the fall.

LILY ANNE

What could be more run after a painfully quiet week than a good old hoedown, the sort of "rip-snortin" good time for which this annual event is famous. Get your gal and come along and act like a real hayseed, for once. Dig out the old jeans and gingham gowns and get out the old straw hat, for the fun of dressing up puts this party over with a bang. Every hour's a mirthful hour at the GYRO HOEDOWN October 12 in the Eagle Hall.

Tailored dresses seem to be the best bet. Checks in black and gold, green and saffron, the good old classic black and white, rosy red and bright blue are effective combinations that will make the world decidedly brighter. And what the "green" plaids are doing is fashion history.

Like the golden sparkle in a sunbeam, the gleam of metal adds vivacious interest to fashion, —sparkling, —rich, —full of life in the new, strikingly smart or luxuriously luminous "just arrived" frocks at the D. & C. DRESS SHOPPE Choose your gown from these latest styles in the latest colours and in the latest materials, and top it off with a hat to match. It's such an advantage to try them both together. Don't miss them! They're new! They're different.

Belts and fur trimmed neck scarfs are most important contrasts for most of these delightfully vigorous plaids.

Courteous and attentive service with every comfort is the motto of the Savoy Hotel in Nelson, and when I tell you that THE CROWN POINT HOTEL in Trail is under the same personal management, you will have visions of deep-cushioned arm chairs, a cosy fire, luxurious beds and quiet rest, and over all, an atmosphere of dignity and charm that makes this house the best of its kind. Refreshments, too, are to be had right at hand, and special provision has been made for lady guests in a new and beautiful parlor. The latch string hangs outside, for this is your home . . . . . .

It certainly isn't a season for shrinking violets, at least as far as street and sport clothes are concerned. High colors, huge horse blanket plaids, snappy fitted silhouettes, and you have the smartest daytime clothes ever unpacked. If you are adventurous and like to make the spectators pause and turn around, these striking checks are just what the doctor ordered for your fashion condition. You can't sign your name to them, but you'll get credit for knowing a lot.

And so, until next week, Adieu.

Lilly Anne

Pete Lowen Back at Kimberley

KIMBERLEL, B. C., Oct. 4—Pete Lowen has returned from a 10-day trip across the line. He visited his brother in Wilson, Wash., and spent some time in Spokane. He struck cold weather and snow on the way down but the roads and weather were fine, when he motored back.

Mary Richardson is a patient at the McDougall hospital.

WILL SAIL AGAIN AMONG ISLANDS OF INLAND SEA

MIDLAND, Ont., Oct. 4, (CP)—Launched 50 years ago at Kingston as the sidewheel steamboat Maud, for Lake Ontario service; entirely rebuilt some years later and re-christened the steamship America, then in 1920 brought to Midland and re-named for Georgian Bay Routes, the motorship Midland City, which piled up on a reef a few weeks ago, will be running as good as ever when the season opens next year, her owners declare.

As steamboat, steamship and motorship the Midland City has had an interesting career in great lakes navigation.

On Aug. 26 last on account of unusually low water the motorship struck a jagged ledge of rock four miles off this port while returning from a Sunday afternoon excursion with 150 passengers aboard. Despite the hole torn in her bottom and a damaged propeller, the vessel was able to limp across the two miles of intervening water to beach at Midland Point, under the command of Capt. Ed. Mackie. There with all passengers safely removed, her stern settled in 28 feet of water while her prow took a melancholy tilt skyward, till her forefoot was seven feet from the water.

There the Midland City lay for 10 days while divers went down to plug the six-inch by one-foot hole in her hull, and build a cofferdam of planking and canvas round the submerged stern. Then marine pumps were put in place, and a tug nosed alongside to supply the steam power. For 15 hours the pumps worked steadily. The motorship was floated, towed into Midland and put into drydock. There the damage was found to be much less serious than at first thought. Only a few days were required to complete the dry-dock work, although the superstructure is still in course of rebuilding.

Experts said if the vessels' hull had been of steel instead of wood, the reef would have ripped a much larger hole and she would never have reached the shore. It is added if the motorship had not been a stout craft she could not have stood the strain of sitting for 10 days with her prow in the air and only 20 feet of her keel resting on bottom.

The Midland City is now riding serenely at her moorings here, her damaged hull repaired, her broken propeller replaced, and her engines installed two years ago being overhauled. The only visible evidence of her sinking is the broken-down superstructure at the stern, where the waters of the Georgian Bay warped and burst open the wooden partitions of her cabins.

Her owners say the vessel will be in first class condition for the opening of the 1935 season, to again nose her way through the picturesque but tortuous navigation channels among the reputedly 30,000 islands of Georgian Bay.

The vessel was originally called the Maud after the daughter of the late Charles F. Gildersleeve, now Mrs. Rivers, widow of Colonel Victor Rivers of the headquarters staff Ottwa, one time with the Royal Canadian Artillery at Kingston. Mr. Gildersleeve was for some years general manager of the old Richelieu and Ontario Navigation company. Under his direction the company built the present passenger steamboats Toronto and Kingston and other large vessels.

Rice With Cheese Sauce
Apple Sauce Raw Vegetable Salad
Coffee Spice Layer Cake
Coffee

Cook the rice by the method I gave you the other day. Make a rich milk gravy and in it dissolve one cup grated or finely chopped cheese, and cook until the cheese is melted. Pour the sauce over the rice, putting both in a buttered baking dish. Cover with bread crumbs and brown in hot oven. Some of your newly made tomato catsup or relish is nice to eat with the rice.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Coffee Spice Layer Cake—One-third cup shortening, one cup sugar, two eggs, two-thirds cup strong coffee, one teaspoon cinnamon, one fourth teaspoon each of cloves and allspice. Bake in two nine-inch layer cake pans. Spread Mocha icing between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Mocha Icing—Three tablespoons butter, three cups confectionery sugar, five tablespoons cocoa, five tablespoons strong cold coffee, one teaspoon vanilla extract. Cream butter, add sugar and cocoa, mixing well. Add coffee slowly, beating well. Add flavoring. Beat until smooth and creamy.

WIFE PRESERVES

Use wet or buttered scissors when cutting marshmallows, dates or other sticky foods, and they will not stick to the scissors.

UNLESS you use lamps giving the most light for the power used, you are not getting your money's worth of light. Other lamps giving less light use as much power. Frequently power costs are about 90% of your light costs. You save money by using Laco Mazda Lamps. They use no more than their rated wattage and give the maximum of light.

TAXES ARE HOLDING BACK PROSPERITY SAYS BABSON

To Reduce Cost of Living Reduce Taxes, He Says; Practically All Taxes Increase Retail Prices

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Massachusetts, Oct. 4.—This week I want to discuss the subject of taxation. My statements will be wholly impartial I shall speak as an economist and statistician, not as a brain truster or politician. The subject has been very much abused. Taxation is something like the multiplication tables and the Ten Commandments,—there is no excuse for getting it into politics. Taxation is purely a business question and should be handled wholly in a business way.

Theoretically, I am more or less of a single-taxer, believing that Henry George had some sound ideas on the subject. On the other hand, I am willing to take the opinion of tax experts that Henry George's methods are not politically feasible.

At the present time there are 57 varieties of taxation, the most common of which are as follows:

Federal corporation taxes.
Federal income taxes.
Federal excess profits taxes.
Federal inheritance taxes.
State income taxes.
State corporation taxes.
State inheritance taxes.
County taxes.
City taxes.
Automobile licence taxes.
Federal gasoline taxes.
State gasoline taxes.
Federal capital stock taxes.
State capital stock taxes.
Telephone taxes.
Telegraph taxes.
Check taxes..
Taxes for code administration.
Processing taxes.
And a host of other taxes.

REVENUE TAXES

Taxes, in most cases, are passed on to the ultimate consumer. As the tax on a house is raised, the landlord raises the rent. As taxes on corporations are increased the prices of goods which these corporations manufacture are increased proportionately. All normal income taxes are passed on to the ultimate consumer and also a large proportion of the surtaxes and excess property taxes.

With the exception of inheritance taxes, there are no forms of taxes that can be imposed but what raise the price of the ham sandwhcih which the "forgotten man" is forced to buy for his daily lunch. Furthermore, high taxes increase unemployment.

TAXES PASSED ON TO CONSUMER

The various taxes enumerated apply to a person or corporation doing business only in one state. The fact is, however, that most concerns are doing business in several states and hence these taxes accumulate like a rolling snowball. Those who have been administrators of estates know that not only must inheritance taxes be paid the state in which the deceased lived, but also in various other states if he happened to hold stocks or bonds of companies incorporated in these other states. If only one concern in an industry should be taxed, then that one concern would be obliged to pay the taxes. That one concern could not pass on the taxes to the consumer.

When, however, all concerns in the industry are taxed, these taxes will merely be passed on to the ultimate consumer. They are added to the cost of manufacture and hence to the retail price of the goods. This is the real reason why retail prices have gone up faster than wholesale prices, and why wholesale prices have gone up faster than labor and raw materials.

We criticize merchants for their heavy mark-ups, but taxation is one very important reason therefor. The wage worker wonders why the cost of living goes up more rapidly than his wages. The reason is that so many taxes come in between his pay envelope and the goods which he buys from the retail merchant.

POLITICAL TAXES

Please do not think this is any campaign document. I believe in a balanced budget for the federal government, state governments, and municipal governments. So far as taxation is necessary to balance the budget, I am for taxation. On the other hand, I also believe in reducing expenses. There are three ways to balance a budget—first, by reducing expenses, second by borrowing money, and third, by taxation. Probably the Roosevelt administration must resort to all three of these methods, but let the emphasis be put on the first; namely, the reducing of expenses.

Although economists believe in taxation for revenue, they are strongly opposed to taxation for political purposes. Taxes should never be used either for giving special favors to a privileged few or for punishment of an unpopular group. For instance, tariffs for revenue are legitimate and necessary, but tariffs to help any special section of the country to the detriment of other sections are both unjust and uneconomic. Some of the taxes now being proposed against department stores, mail order houses, and especially chain stores, are political taxes. These are not enacted to collect revenue, but rather to put a ball and chain on efficiency. I believe such taxation is unconstitutional, but if the constitution should uphold these proposed political taxes all consumers would ultimately pay the bill.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

William T. Stead, famous publisher of London, once said to me that the prevailing characteristic of the American people is to kid themselves. This is why we like legislation for daylight saving and set the clock back instead of getting up an hour earlier in the morning. This is why we like to pay indirect taxes through tariffs instead of direct taxes in a businesslike manner. This is why some people foolishly propose monetary inflation instead of other measures; on the same principle that they shrink from a surgical operation.

The point of this article is not to pretend that taxes are unnecessary, but rather to make clear that practically every tax (with the possible exception of inheritance and high-bracket income taxes) is finally paid by the ultimate consumer. The rich people collect the taxes, but the plain people pay the taxes. This means that the next step in reducing the cost of living is to reduce taxes. Moreover, this means taxes of all kinds, especially real estate taxes, corporation taxes, and income taxes.

A quet but pretty wedding was solemnized at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, October 1, at the Bethel tabernacle, Nelson, by the Rev. D. Hillary, when Annie Blewitt, only daughter of W. J. Blewitt, Blewitt, B.C., was united in marriage to Harvey P. Martin, only son of P. E. Martin, of Edmonton, Alta. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She was beautifully gowned in white satin and veil and wearing a lovely string of crystals, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a pretty bouquet of pink and white roses.

Miss Doris Weaver as bridesmaid, and Mrs. Nina Thunberg, as matron of honor, were wearing lovely silk canton crepe gowns, the former blue and the latter pink, and each carrying bouquets of pink and white carnations. Mrs. Ralph Gausdal, matron of honor, was becomingly gowned in blue georgette trimmed with chiffon velvet. The little flower girl, Miss Iris Kraft, was pretty in a pale yellow silk dress and carried a basket of pink and white carnations.

After the ceremony T. Bishop sang "On the Sunny Side of Life."

Immediately after, the party returned to the home of the bride's father, where a buffet supper was served. Mrs. A. Robinson of Blewitt poured tea. Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed by all. MAJOR 'QUAKE FOR PACIFIC

Father Hubbard Says One Due About 1939-40

NANAIMO, B. C., Oct. 4 (CP)—An earthquake of major dimensions, which may take place in California sometime in 1939 or 1940, was forecast last night by Rev. Father Bernard Hubbard, far-famed glacier priest and Alaska's padre of the snows, in an interview here.

Father Hubbard, professor of geology at the University of Santa Clara, made Nanaimo his first port of call after leaving Ketchikan and departed with his party aboard the P. E. Harris cannery tender Amelia today for Victoria.

Father Hubbard bases his assumption of the coming California tembler on the fact the state is situated on San Andreas drift and that, "geologically" speaking, slips, three times a century.

Since the last major earthquake was in 1906, the scientist believes another disturbance will take place late in 1939. He would not set the exact month. "That," he said, "takes quite a bit of calculation and I have been out of touch with things for a few months."

EXPEDITION TO MAKE LAST TRY

FORT ST. JOHN, B. C., Oct. 4 — (CP)—Their horses failing under the days of gruelling travel through an untracted wilderness, the members of the C. E. Bedaux expedition are making one last desperate effort to complete their journey to Telegraph Creek, B. C. Should they fail, the party will turn back to White-water and travel by water to Prince George.

Mountain slides, along which the travellers are making their perilous way, are covered by two feet of snow, letters from the party members brought here Thursday said.

Two More Paralysis Cases at Kelowna

KELOWNA, B. C., Oct. 4 (CP)—Two cases of infantile paralysis in Kelowna during the past week have brought the total number of cases to six since the outbreak started two weeks ago. One of the new cases occurred in a family which already had two children down with the disease and in which the only death during the outbreak occurred.

Schools are still closed and all children remain quarantined within their own yards. Children who have come in contact with known cases have been examined by nurses twice daily.

Four partients are confined to the isolation hospital but all reported recovering.

Instead of using soap on the hands, use a small cup of paste, composed of vinegar and cornmeal and this will keep them in good condition.

"Natural Health Through Natural Living Habits"

ALTHOUGH beginning his career as a lecturer after the age of 70, Robt. G. Jackson, M.D., is recognized as the foremost lecturer in North America in the health lecture field.

Dr. Jackson's present itinerary will cover 12,000 miles and require eight months of continuous travelling, with nightly lectures, and often three in one day, a mighty program for a man one-third his age. Yet Dr. Jackson will never miss an engagement, never have a cold or be sick, and from every platform will defy disease to attack him. This itinerary extends from Quebec to British Columbia in Canada, and from New England to Florida, from Washington to California and points in between in the States—all sorts of climatic conditions, yet never will Dr. Jackson wear an overcoat, vest nor underwear—has worn none for 20 years.

At 50 Dr. Jackson was about to die from a long drawn out combination of diseases. By correcting his living habits he came back to be one of the most vital men in North America, no age barred, and still is at almost 77. His lectures will demonstrate this claim beyond cavil or doubt. Come and see and hear him and be convinced.

Dr. Jackson's lectures are on the general subject of "Natural Health Through Natural Living Habits" leading to a natural immunity from disease. You will be willing to sit for hours under the spell of his convincing argument, delivered in a youthful, vigorous, resonant voice. You will be astonished at his demonstrations of youthful agility and strength. You will be charmed by his perfect diction, intrigued by his agile, erect, athletic, youthful figure and marvel at the snappy brilliance with which he answers questions from the audience at the close of each lecture. But come! Come! And come early or you may fail to get a seat as was the case with hundreds last year in many places. This may be the last opportunity you will have for some time to hear Dr. Jackson as pressure is being brought to bear to have him lecture next season and probably for several seasons in the British Isles. Admission free.

FAVORITES WIN IN GOLF PLAY

Mrs. Hill Provides the Fireworks in Win on 24th Green

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4 (AP)—Staging one of the most amazing recoveries in the history of the United States women's golf championship, Mrs. Opal Hill, 44-year-old Kansas City matron, today defeated Mrs. Leona Cheney, San Gabriel, Calif., on the 24th green in a thrill-packed climax to the quarter-final round of the 38th national tournament.

Their marathon struggle completely overshadowed the other fourth-round 18-hole matches which saw Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Virginia Van Wie, the defending titleholder, and Dorothy Traung, 20-year-old sensation of the early rounds, winning brackets with plenty to spare.

Mrs. Vare defeated Mrs. Burt Weil of Cincinnati, 6 and 5; Miss Van Wie won from Frances Williams of Allentown, Pa., 5 and 4, and Miss Traung defeated Mrs. Carl H. Donner, Short Hills, N. J., 3 and 2.

Mrs. Vare meets Miss Van Wie tomorrow while Miss Traung undertakes to continue her streak at the expense of Mrs. Hill.

With five holes to play, Mrs. Hill was three down. She squared the match on the 17th and ironically carelessly missed a two-footer on the 18th which would have given her the match. For five holes after that they traded stroke for stroke.

The protracted duel was terminated on the 24th hole where Mrs. Cheney's iron third ducked between an iron fence and a shelters, leaving her less than three feet to swing her club. Coming out she caught a trap and the game was over.

IT'S LIVER THAT MAKES YOU FEEL SO WRETCHED

Wake Up Your Liver Bile and Get A New Lease of Life. No Calomel Is Necessary.

For you to feel healthy and happy, your liver must pour two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels, every day of your life.

Without that bile, trouble starts promptly. Your food just won't digest the way it should and your bowels are sluggish. Food decays inside you and your entire system is undermined by this poisonous waste matter. You have Indigestion—the discomfort of gas, bloating, heartburn and sourness. You are prey to headaches. Have a tongue like cotton-wool, a nasty taste in your mouth, bad breath and ugly skin. You haven't anything like the pep a healthy person should have. In fact you are generally wretched.

How can you expect to clear up a condition like this completely by taking mere bowel-movers like salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage? They can't wake up your liver bile!

Avoid calomel (mercury). Buy yourself a box of old reliable Carter's Little Liver Pills. All vegetable, sure, gentle, safe. They'll wake up your liver without upsetting you. Bring back the glad-to-be-alive feeling, once more.

Don't waste your money on substitutes. Be definite. Ask for Carter's by name and get them. Look for the name, Carter's, on the red label. 25c at all druggists. 47

Canary Braves the Stormy Weather; Safe After Month

REGINA, Oct. 4 (CP)—Canada's hardiest canary flew from its cage on a farm 10 miles northeast of Regina over a month ago. Wind blew, snow fell and the mercury dived down almost to zero during that time.

Found sitting on the back of a car at a filling station, a mile north of the city, it was claimed by Miss Edith Anticknap, at the police station, where it was chirping from a cardboard box.

Today it was reported to be thin but still with a chirp or two left and ready to tackle a bit of apple.

To Have Been Witness in Criminal Case

Word has been received by the provincial police of the death at Grand Forks Thursday of Veronica Kuva, Grand Forks girl, who was to have been a crown witness in the prosecution of Mrs. Greta Sundquist of Greenwood on a charge of performing an illegal operation, and of Carl Schwartzenhauer on a charge of conspiring to procure the operating. Their cases were adjourned until September 26 and on that date again remanded to Thursday, owing to the critical state of Miss Kuva. The son alleges that he is living in amity with his wife and asks the court to rule that the codicil is contrary to public morals and intended to induce the son to put away his wife and not support her

SUN BEAMS AS DETROIT WINS

More Than 42,000 Jam Park for Second

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NAVIN FIELD, Detroit, Oct. 4 (AP)—Staking their hopes of a world series comeback on the strong right arm of Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, 22-year-old giant from Eldorado, Ark., Detroit Tigers came out today to fight off the rampant St. Louis Cardinals and seek victory that would put them back on even terms with the National league champions.

A cool breeze swept the field but the sun was out more warmly than the day before and another big crowd, numbering over 42,000 spectators, was on hand for the second game of baseball's championship battle.

Opposing Rowe was the sturdy southpaw veteran of the Cardinals, Bill Hallahan of Binghamton, N. Y., a pitching hero of the 1931 series against the Athletics and one of the best "money hurlers" in the St. Louis ranks.

CARDS HEAVY FAVORITES

The Cardinals took the field as heavy favorites, following their easy victory in the first game, during which the Detroit defense collapsed, but home-town hopes of a big Tiger rally ran high. Rowe promised his mates he would be at his best and would lasso the big Cardinal clouters, including jarring Joe Medwick.

The handling of the crowd appeared to be entirely under control today, with no repetition of yesterday's last-minute jam that caused a 20-minute delay in starting the game. The attendance appeared slightly in excess of that for the opener, based on fewer vacant spots in the extreme corners of the open stands.

The umpires, headed by Bill Klem of the National league as arbiter-in-chief, came out a few minutes before game-time to confer at the plate with Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Tigers and Leo Durocher captain and shortstop of the Cardinals.

Manager Frisch of the Cardinals came out to say a few words toward the close of the confab at the plate but there wasn't much to cause any prolonged debate.

Both pitchers looked good as they finished their warm-ups, Rowe apparently being satisfied with his stuff as he retired to the dugout for a few moments rest before going to the box.

There was finally a delay of two minutes beyond the scheduled starting time before the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," while the players and the crowd stood with bared heads and the flag blew briskly from the center-field staff.

DUST FROM THE WORLD SERIES

By PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT, Oct. 4 (AP)—Rowe started out today like a "schoolboy," but finished like a professor.

Both the "Schoolboy" and Dizzy Dean are making the baseball experts swell their chests. The experts said they were good and drummed up probably the greatest fanfare that ever accompanied any two players into their first world series. Usually, the famous first timers are colossal busts.

Rowe, who watched Medwick hammer out four trips in successive times at bat yesterday, didn't take a chance on "Ducky Wucky" today, holding him to one hit in five chances. Medwick didn't get a real good ball all day.

"Goose" Goslin's throw to the plate to nip Medwick in the third inning was a masterpiece. It was so strong and accurate that it caught Medwick by 10 feet and ultimately saved the game as the run would have been the Cardinals' third.

If the Tigers had lost, Hank Greenberg's face would have been red. The big Detroit first baseman had chance after chance to become the day's hero, only to miss, striking out twice with the tying run on base. He played a sparkling defensive game to make up for it.

Every time Frankie Frisch goes to bat he sets a record. He got one hit today to run his world series mark to 53. Frisch also holds the record for most series games played, now 45, and most times at bat, now 175.

Al Schacht and Joe E. Brown participated in a prize fight within a rope arena near the plate as the fans roared. Joe won by a "knockout" in the second round. Al was counted out by George Raft, who caught a few of the synthetic punches himself.

Venomous Adders on Banana Stem

VANCOUVER, Oct. 4 (CP).—Two venomous Diamond Cobra adders from the American tropics were added today to the growing collection of snake exhibits in possession of George W. Head, superintendent of Ballantyne pier.

Longshoremen handling 6000 stems of bananas off a vessel from Central America shook the two well-chilled serpents from a banana cluster. They were quickly killed. One was more than two feet long, the other slightly smaller, with slender necks and wide, flat, triangular heads.

A similar snake was killed several weeks ago after it had fallen from a banana stem and Mr. Head retained the skin.

CARDS FAVORED TO WIN THE SERIES

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 4 (AP)—Despite their loss of the second world series game, the Cardinals remain the favorites to win the championship, according to revised odds of Tom Kearney, betting commissioner. Here are Kearney's revised odds:

Cardinals to win series, 7 to 10.

Detroit to win series, even money.

NEW MEN SIGN TRAIL SQUAD

Rugby Team Lines Up for Nelson Battle

TRAIL, B.C., Oct. 4.—Augmented by a number of huskies from Rossland and other outside points, the Trail rugger squad has the earmarks of great possibilities for the coming season. Thursday night 14 turned out at the first practice.

Material of many seasons past again appeared on the field, as well as newcomers. The two Zuk boys, Nick and Cas, Jimmie Burrows, Slivers Decimbrini, Bunty Sommen and Chick Bradbury were among the old timers. Gordie MacTier, veteran punter, stated he would join the team if he was needed, but felt he would prefer dropping out for a new man. Brick Balfour is anxious to get going again, but Jim Curtis, who in past years was one of the main cogs in many successful plays, has expressed no intention of turning out.

Lyle Jestley, graduate of the University of Alberta, was out with the boys doing the coaching. Harry Stirzaker and Al Woods, who have appeared on Nelson lineups, will be wearing the orange and black colors.

With the Rossland contribution, which was called in so that a team could be completed, comes some talented players. Cecil Holmes, who last year played with the Calgary Altomahs, Walmsley, of the Rossland hockey team, and DeBrisay, who has figured in a number of coast tilts, will bolster the list considerably. "Pills" Purcello, Joe McDonell and Woods of Rossland, were also out at the practice. Howard Parker, formerly of Slocan, but now teaching at the Trail Central school, is another newcomer.

The boys have planned a number of stiff workouts for next week as they have accepted the invitation of the Nelson team to play the first game of the West Kootenay league at Nelson on October 14. Another practice will be held Friday.

PATTULLO IS ALL FOR THE P.G.E.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 4 (CP). — "What libels the Pacific Great Eastern Railways has had to survive!" exclaimed Premier T. D. Pattullo today folowing a trip over the line from Squamish to Bridge River.

Mining development in the Bridge River district, the premier noted, has turned the P.G.E. into an asset to the province.

"The P.G.E. today is serving a territory teeming with activity," said the premier, "and its scenic attractions are not surpassed anywhere throughout our superlatively beautiful province.

"I went especially to see the mining activity in the Bridge River country," Mr. Pattullo continued. "Vancouver ought to be of good cheer, for it has producing mines right at its door, while the country is stupendously magnificent."

Friday W. J. Brodie, driver of the city truck that is doing the collecting, will call at all Kootenay river points, from Robson and Castlegar up, to collect the donations promised by the people of the Kootenay river communities.

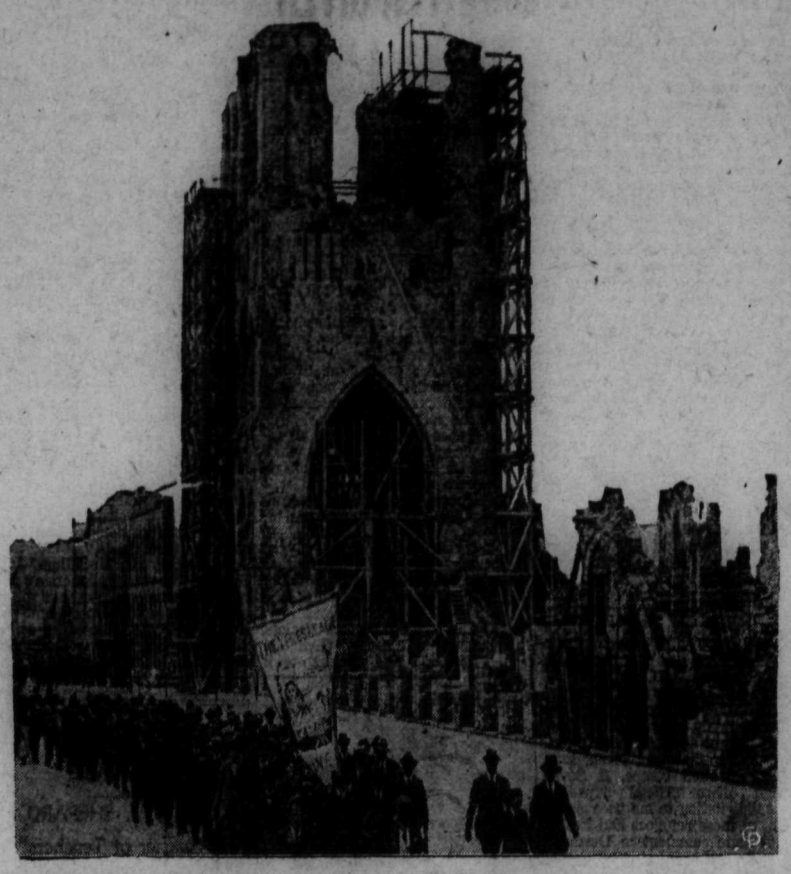
MONUMENT TO WAR



Ruins of the great Cloth Hall of Ypres after months and months of bombardment by huge artillery had plowed the old city until nothing but a heap of crumbling debris remained of the once beautiful buildings. This picture shows a pilgrimage to the ground fought over so bitterly, long after the cessation of hostilities, but the ruined skeleton of the hall is still unrepaired.

Visit to Battlefields in Ypres Area Would Cure Urge for War Says Writer

Rats Still Swarm and Grow Fat Where Sappers Worked in Icy Mud

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

YPRES, Oct. 4—In the old Salient, around Zillebeke and Hell-fire corner, where tens of thousands of men lost their lives in order to prevent the useless dust-heap that was Ypres from falling into German hands, the peasants have turned the old concrete pill-boxes into chicken coops. I slithered through a rain-sodden plowed-up field to have a look at an observation post and found it swarming with pigeons. Another concrete shelter housed an enormous family of pigs who, mistaking me for the man with the fodder, first grunted with delight, but when they got nothing from me, turned to a kind of grouching which sounded an awful lot like the arguments our ancestors used to put up when they stood around a cursing-stone.

Hill 60 looks much more like war than Vimy. Plenty of rusted Lewis guns still lying around—and cartridge belts and rifles and munition boxes—and this in spite of the fact that tens of thousands of souvenir hunters have gone over these fields 15 years long. Before the war Hill 60 had another name, a Flemish name. I think I had better not give the translation here. It was a sort of lovers' rendezvous for the farm lads and girls hereabouts. Next to Dead Man's Hill, near Verdun, Hill 60 is perhaps the most ghastly reminder of the war on the old western front.

STOPPED SOUVENIR HUNTERS

On Dead Man's Hill, where the bodies of 50,000 unburied Frenchmen and the bodies of another 50,000 unburied Germans, executed a week's long dance of death—arms, legs, trunks, heads flying in the air—as the two opposing artilleries played their barrage into that mass of flesh and bones, the sight of which furnished a trainload of howling insane men each day to each combatant army, around that hill the French had to put up a fence a few years ago. Why? Every day caravans of sightseers used to come there to pick up skulls and human bones. They dumped them into their automobiles and took them home. Today they stand grinning on mantel shelves, bureaus and book planks all over the world, especially in America. I was out there when the skull craze was at its height and reported the matter in a New York newspaper, upon which the French authorities put a stop to it.

On Hill 60 they have custodians around to see that nothing is carried away. To this place they ought to run excursions for those young men who consider that life is drab and monotonous and who hanker for a great liberating event, such as their fathers had. They can see here the tunnels and trenches where the British and German sappers were at work for months, standing up to their waists in ice-cold, oozing mud. No bands played here. No flags were waving. No girls came to hang wreaths of flowers around the tips of bayonets. And no politicians ventured down into those dark stinking holes to tell the boys: "The country is proud of you." The "great adventure" around here consisted in getting a piece of shrapnel to carry off a kneecap or a machine-gun bullet through the shoulder, anything to get away from "the field of glory."

REMEMBERED TOO LATE

The kids would soon lose their appetite for that great liberating event if they heard one of the custodians say: "Rats? Holy smokes. This place swarms with them. They are still eating themselves fat around here!" That's war. That's the great adventure. Quite different from standing on the sidewalk and seeing the veterans march by the the rumble of drums and the bands playing: "Steadily shoulder to shoulder!" Or in front of the cenotaph with all the people singing: "For all the saints who from their labors rest!"

Those mass memorial services are touching. They are impressive and very fine and the fuss that is being made over the unknown soldiers here and there is highly patriotic. But those unknown soldiers, if they could look down, no doubt wished that a little more fuss had been made over them when they were still known, that is to say, alive. In Paris every visiting movie actress has to be photographed in the act of placing a wreath on the unknown's tomb under the Arch of Triumph, but people who want to go to the same place to swear "Never again war!" are chased off by the police as unpatriotic rebels, disloyal elements and Red propagandists!

GENERAL MERCER'S GRAVE

Everywhere in the fields around Flemish peasant whom I met, "if it is only that way we'll never have war again. Kristus wil geen oorlog," he added. "Christ doesn't want war."

At the bottom of the column appear these words by the distinguished poet-priest Cyriel Verschaave:

"Hier liggen hun lijken als zaden in 't zand Hoop op den oogst, o, Vlaandrenland"

which I translated as:

"Here lie their bodies like seeds in the sand
Hope for the harvest, O Flandersland."

The harvest is to be that world in which there shall be no war.

WEATHER FORECASTING

The old style weather prophet has not entirely disappeared. But science intends that he shall be extinct.

An ancient fisherman and nature student of Fort Erie, in "his annual long distance forecast" a few days ago, announced that Ontario is in for a long, cold winter. He is said to base his prophecy on the facts that "butterflies are already turning into cocoons instead of waiting until late in October; squirrels are gathering and storing nuts with extra heavy shells, and melts of pigs are heavy on top and bottom."

The local sage declared that with mild winters comings, pigs' melts—the pancreas, to be scientific—are light on top, but this year "they are heavy all around." He also claims husks of corn are unusually thick.

In contrast to this typically curious pronouncement is the news from Wellington, New Zealand, that an unidentified scientific society is prepared to spend $10,000,000 during the next 10 years in an effort to make it possible to forecast the world's climates.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, noted explorer, did not disclose the name of the organization, but intimated the scheme was dependent upon the financial cooperation of the governments of South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and the South American countries.

The plan outlined by Wilkins calls for the establishment of 12 observation stations in the Antarctic. By a correlation of all temperatures, he believes it will be possible to forecast the world's climates.

Sir Hubert's idea of forecasting is a little more ambitious than that of the Fort Erie prophet, who confines himself to one province. And like most modern scientists, his ideas of financing involve considerably more expense than the neglibible cost of examining butterflies' cocoons and pigs' melts.

COURT BAN ON GUM SEEMS RIGHT AND PROPER

Few will be found to protest against the judicial ruling which forbids chewing of gum in court. By a singular coincidence it was issued on the same day by judges as far apart as Chicago and Vancouver, and it may be taken to represent the opinion of the bench in all decently regulated courts on a subject that is scarcely to be debated.

As far as is known, the judge in Vancouver did not have to weight his decree with a penalty for a particlular offender. His brother in Chicago had to give 10 days in jail to a witness who, in reply to the first admonition, merely stopped masticating and shifted his wad enough to let him reply, "There's no law against chewing gum." The quick punishment convinced him that, while there might be no law directed specifically against the chewing of gum, there was a law framed to deal with the contempt of court, tacit or spoken.

Many eupeptic and other virtues are claimed for chewing gum, and there is no reason to dispute the claim here. The point is that there is a time and place for everything and if the promotion of digestion requires the mastication of gum it is quite easy for a witness to find a time and place in which he will not degrade the dignity of a courtroom for the benefit of his sluggish interior. Another point is that there is probably no action known to man by which tacit insolence can be expressed more clearly than by ceaseless motion of the jaws, accompanied by a defiant look in the eye. A third point, brought out in the Chicago case, is that mastication, in some mouths, is noisy, and that while justice is expected to be blind there is no reason why she should be expected to be deaf. A fourth point, if a fourth is needed, is that the usual sequel to chewing is parking, and no decent witness, grasping the rail of the witness box in his pardonable nervousness, would wish to have his fingers come in contact with the inexpressibly disgusting leavings of one of the vast army of masticators. There is no need of a fifth point; the case for the judges seems to be complete.

STATESMEN'S MEMOIRS

Writing was Briand's profession before he went into politics, and it was not Lloyd George's. This may partly explain why the one declined to write his memoirs and the other is publishing his at great length. But the French statesman gave another reason for not undertaking the task. He said that when a public man did so he separated events into two classes. On the one side he put those that turned out well and proved he was responsible for these. On the other he put those that turned out ill and showed that he had nothing to do with them. So the whole procedure looked to Briand like "a silly game."

This, however, is altogether too sweeping. The task of historians would be made much easier through the setting down of the recollections of those who have played large parts in the stupendous events of recent years, and it is a great pity that an outstanding figure like Briand left no record of his own of his varied activities, except what is to be found in his state papers.

Lloyd George has left himself very much open to the charge of doing what his French contemporary affected to believe was a universal practice. But, even if he is unduly inclined to make a hero of himself and to be unfair to others, he is being answered fully by those who take exception to what he writes, and, as a result of it all, the truth will probably be easier to establish in the end. One of the most popular of present-day historians and biographers, Andre Maurois, has lately been telling in a Paris paper how difficult it is to get at the facts. People with first-hand knowledge of quite recent incidents, he says, give the most contradictory accounts of them with evident honesty. But this, he quite properly holds, is no reason for giving up the search for historical truth, adding that "an imperfect knowledge of the past is better than total ignorance."

Between You and Me

By J. B. C.

DIZZY DEAN THE GREAT "I AM"

I lost a lot of sleep yesterday. Got up early to listen to the world series game between Detroit and St. Louis. I wanted to see if Schoolboy Rowe would go a well as was predicted. He seemed to weather the storm all right and end up as strong in the 12th inning as in the earlier frames. I wondered how many Kootenay fans were pulling for him like I was. I could not help but think about Dizzy Dean after the 12th when Goslin's single scored Gehringer to win the game for the Tigers. It was just the night before on the radio that Dizzy was giving a lot of his "I am the guy" stuff over the air for the benefit of the Admiral Byrd Antarctic party. Dizzy said hello and then started to deride the Tiger team. He apologized because the Tigers got three runs off his offerings and declared he had pitched a "lousy" game.

* * *

I LIKE ME

"Why," said Dizzy, "the Tigers haven't a chance."

It would be a four straight series for the Cardinals. He declared he could take four teams out of the National league and beat the Tiger outfit. In other words the Tigers were a bunch of hams and they didn't even stand a chance. Rowe was just another pitcher for Card batters to hammer around. In fact so enthusiastic was Dean about his own ability that he declared he could go in and pitch the three following games and win every one of them. Dean seems to be full of his own ego. Anyway I wonder what he said after yesterday's game. Dean had it lined up that he was through hurling in this world series. He figured "Wild Bill" Hallahan would win Thursday and the Brother Paul Dean would go in Friday and win easily and then Walker, a left-hander, would come in on Saturday and end the series.

DIZZY ALL DIZZY

Well, Dizzy was certainly dizzy in his predictions. No doubt he'll have to go in there again now. Hallahan didn't do so well and Walker as a relief pitcher did worse. However, I think Dean, one of the greatest of twirlers, is just a big clown. His dope on the series and his cockiness about his own ability was just so much hooey to get the goats of a disorganized Tiger team after the first game. If the "iron man" infield bent a little in the first game, it certainly straightened out in the second to play errorless ball while three strokes were charged against the Cards. The Tiger win is popular here and puts added pep into the series. Wish I were sitting in on them in the press box—would I be sitting still—well you esk me?

EDGEWOOD LAND OF HONEY

Ran into B. Lockwood of Edgewood the other day. He was in for the Liberal nominating convention that was rained out by the medical authorities. I was asking him about his bees. He says he still has them, but the season has been a bad one. Early indications were for a bumper crop in the Inonoaklin valley but rains came at the wrong time. However, Mr. Lockwood is not disgruntled or anything. You have to take things as they come, he declares. But despite a bad year I still believe Edgewood district is one of the best honey producing centers in the Kootenays. Ever try it? Well, you should.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON JOCK RYAN

This is the week for the baseball fan and I suggest anyone with business to do in a hurry keep out of sight of red-hot fans. They will talk about the game from A to Z. They will tell you how it all happened. Mind you, they may be miles away from the scene of action but that doesn't matter. They will go back years and dig up history about world series that you and I have forgotten long ago. They can't help it for baseball is their hobby. Well, you can't blame a red-hot fan for getting het up over a ball game. But watch out for Jack Ryan, he's full of it this week.

MAYBE IT WAS A TIGER LILY

A tiger had escaped from the circus. With ropes, iron bars, and guns, they sought him all over the place.

As they ran down a typical suburban road of pretty red-brick houses with neatly kept gardens, they met a little man, evidently on the way home from his office.

"Tiger escaped," they shouted to him. "Can't find it! Sarched everywhere!"

"Eh!" said the small man. "Come this way." He led the searchers to a well-kept villa. "This way," he said, as he opened the door leading to the back garden and walked straight out onto the lawn.

"There it is," he said bitterly. "I knew it would be lying on one of my plants."

NEW AND OLD RUB ELBOWS AND WEST MEETS EAST IN SOVIET

Applies to Customs as Well as Institutions and Buildings, Declares Writer

By WILLIAM HENRY CHAMBERLIN
(From the Christian Science Monitor)

Russia today is a land of amazing contrasts. Old Russian habits and new Soviet theories, modern industrial plants and eastern filth and slovenliness, advanced European ideas and administrative practices of old-fashioned ruthlessness—all jostle each other in a bewildering medley. This adds to the fascination of the Soviet Union, it also adds to the difficulty of understanding and interpreting its way of development. In this patchwork quilt of old and new, what is permanent and significant, what is transitory and superficial?

What is new in Russia is easier to grasp at first sight than what is old. The casual visitor in Moscow is immediately impressed by the evidence of new building and by the great changes in the physical aspect of the city which have taken place during the last few years. Prospectively the greatest and most symbolic of these changes will be the erection of a gigantic Palace of Soviets on a commanding height overlooking the Moscow river where the golden-domed Cathedral of the Saviour, built to commemorate Russia's victory over Napoleon, once stood.

So far only the destructive part of this change has been carried out; the cathedral has been torn down, but the building of the Palace has not yet begun. When it is completed it will be one of the tallest buildings in the world, crowned by a gigantic statue of Lenin, the apostle of Russia's new faith. The statue alone will be almost 300 feet high.

The final design of the Palace adopted after years of strenuous competition among Soviet architects, is in a massive, conventional style, with suggestions of the Castle of Angelo in Rome and the Leipzig Battle Memorial. The Palace is to serve the new faith of Communism as the Cathedral served the old; all important congresses will be held in it—its largest auditorium is to have a seating capacity of 20,000—it will be the central point of the ceremonial parades on May 1 and November 7.

The Palace of Soviets is still a castle in the air; but old landmarks are vanishing and new ones are springing up in Moscow very rapidly. Scores of the picturesque little churches which formerly brightened Moscow's maze of old winding streets have been demolished. Gone is the Chapel of the Iberian Virgin, outside the Red Square. One misses many old memorials of medieval Moscow, such as the Red Gates; and the high Sukharevka tower is also doomed to fall a victim to the demands of increasing traffic congestion.

In place of the things which have been destroyed, Soviet Moscow has built a number of public buildings and office buildings, hotels and workers' clubs, along with large blocks of flats in the vicinity of factories on the outskirts of the city. In order to save building materials, a number of houses have tacked on extra storeys. As the Emperor Augustus boasted that he found Rome a city of brick and left it a city of marble, the Soviets might claim that they found most of the Moscow streets paved with rough cobble and have now relaid them with smooth asphalt.

CHANGES FROM TRAIN WINDOW

Equally striking changes are visible, even from train windows, if one travels through the country. The little strips of land, separated from each other by ditches, which marked peasant private ownership have largely given way to rolling unbroken stretches of collective farm land. In many industrial towns huge brick tenements, often shoddily built and sometimes in an incomplete stage of construction, rise side by side with the little pre-war log and frame houses.

Along with this material change goes a great change in living habits. The leisurely pace of old Russian life tends to become swift, tense, nervous. Not that protracted bureaucratic delay is not a familiar feature of Soviet life; but one is conscious of a strained effort to overcome this delay.

The language itself, changes and becomes interspersed with all sorts of new words and old words in new connotation which express changed conditions. "Nagruzka" (load), for instance, which was formerly reserved for beasts of burden, is now taken to mean the sum of tasks or duties which a man may have to perform.

A new attitude toward labor is certainly reflected in the marking with plates of almost all the good seats at the Moscow opera; reserved for udarnik (literally shock-brigade worker, a term which is used for efficient service) of such and such a factory, office or institution.

The idea that woman's place is in the home finds no support with the Soviet rulers, who are doing everything in their power to drive woman out of the home and into the office or factory. In some provincial places women who do not work outside the home are not given bread cards.

About a third of the total number of Soviet workers and employees are women. And with this wholesale pushing of women into activity outside the home goes a great extension of communal, as against the traditional home living; babies are cared for in public creches and older children in kindergartens; meals are taken in public dining rooms, etc.

Another important factor in breaking up the old-fashioned family is the Soviet law under which a marriage may be dissolved immediately at the desire of either party. General statistics for marriage and divorce in the whole Soviet Union are impossible to obtain; but local figures for the textile town of Ivanovo, which are probably typical for the Soviet cities, show a proportion of five divorces to 17 marriages.

If the Bolshevik revolution has smashed many old features of Russian life it has also perpetuated, under new forms and new names, many of the most characteristic administrative practices of the autocracy. One point on which Stalin could well agree with any Romanoff tsar is that the individual has no rights which the state is bound to respect.

A few illustrations may serve to show how strong are the sinister links between the Soviet Union, devoted to the greater glory of Socialism, and the former Russian empire, which existed for the greater glory of the tsars.

GERMANS IN RUSSIA SUFFER

In the autumn of 1929 thousands of German colonists in Siberia, who as industrious and capable farmers with strong religious convictions had suffered especially from the Soviet drive against the well-to-do peasants and against religion, flocked in to Moscow, asking permission to go abroad.

The Soviet authorities let out a few of them; but forcibly deported the remainder, some to their abandoned homes, where food prospects were, to say the least, bleak, some to concentration camps. A Soviet foreign office official expressed great indignation to me because the plight of these refugees had excited sympathetic comment in Germany.

"They are our citizens, aren't they? We can do what we like with them," he said.

The irony of this attitude lay in the fact that this man had lived abroad on account of his political convictions, under Tsarist regime. In those days he had doubtless done everything in his power to enlighten foreign opinion about the ruthless features of Tsarist administration.

Now, himself a part of the revolutionary ruling system, he fell into the same formula with which a Tsarist official would doubtless have dismissed foreign protests against pogroms and other atrocities:

"Our citizens. We can do what we like with them."

The whole machinery of arbitrary arrest and administrative banishment without trial which unenviably distinguished Tsarist Russia from west European countries has been taken over unchanged, except, in some details, for the worse. The number of people sent to hard labor without open trial is much greater than in Tsarist times; the treatment of these prisoners, in so far as they are not ordinary criminals, is more inhuman than in pre-war days.

DUE TO VARIOUS FACTORS

This is partly because of the general food shortage of the country, partly because the Soviet government is not restrained by two factors which exercised a slight mitigating influence on the ruthless measures of the Tsarist authorities; regard for foreign opinion and the existence in Russia of a liberal and radical educated class with some means of making its influence felt through the press and the Duma.

The spirit of the pre-war pogrom lives again in the "liquidation of the kulaks"; the one was a race atrocity, the other a class atrocity. The liquidation of the kulaks unquestionably took far more victims. And the Tsarist prosecutors who worked up fantastic ritual murder charges against the Jews have their worthy successors in the Gay-Pay-Oo examining magistrates who manufacture sabotage charges, which are just about on a par with ritual murder, so far as intrinsic credibility is concerned.

Only recently I was struck by the following passage in Stephen Graham's "Boris Godunov":

"He believed he could overcome rumor by silence. He believed he could hide self-evident truths by national pretense. The famine brought beggary and misery upon his reign and the injury to his good name as sovereign mortified him much more than the famine itself. He feared lest the catastrophe be noised abroad. So he organized prosperity parades before the foreign ambassadors in Moscow to make them think things were not nearly so bad as they had been told. At the beginning of 1603 it was forbidden for anyone to appear in rags in the streets. Conversation with foreigners was forbidden, lest someone should tell them of the ruin that had befallen Russia."

This passage was written of a Tsar's efforts to suppress news of a famine that occurred in 1602-1603. It is also a very accurate description of the Soviet government's effort to hide from the outside world the truth about the famine of 1932-1933.

If Russia today offers to the observer much that is new and untried in economic and social life it also furnishes abundant evidence of the wisdom of the French proverb: "The more it changes, the more it remains the same."

MORE THAN A KNOWLEDGE OF FOOD IS NECESSARY TO CORRECTLY PRESCRIBE DIETS

BY JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

While some food "faddists" are trying to get the public to eat special kinds of food because they are manufacturing or selling these particular foods, there are many others who are unselfishly interested in special foods or diets and wish to help the public by their use.

Consequently with these various food fads being pushed forward daily by newspaper or radio, Dr. L. Jean Bogert in "Nutrition and Physical Fitness", points out competent and sane advice about food has been greatly discredited, since the average person does not appear to decide between those who know what they are talking about and those who do not. A great many people therefore attach themselves to one of the followng groups:

(1) Those who pooh-pooh all advice about diet and eat whatever they want with indifference or defiance;

(2) Those who become overanxious concerning food and often believe too much about certain food theories, so that they try all the advice they can get either at one time or in a series, ending up in a sad state of confusion;

(3) Those who become zealots, adopting some particular food fad and sticking to it with a perseverance that would be admirable in a better cause.

Now, if you are in good health, enjoying your meals, have regular intestinal movements, and don't feel weak from lack of food, or lazy from too much food, why get your mind upset about food? Your particular body can handle all the different foods and all the various combinations of foods without trouble.

But if you are not in good health, have "indigestion", bloating or belching of gas, constipation or diarrhoea, then it would be only good sense to talk over your food intake with your physician because, after all, there is nothing more important to health than food.

The food faddist may be sincere in his efforts to help suffering humanity, and the food faddist may have made such an extensive and intelligent study of foods, but unless he has studied the individual's mental and physical condition, he is not in a position to advise him as to his food needs.

Remember, Dr. McCollum, Johns Hopkins University, America's foremost food expert, says that the average diet with either some raw fruit or raw vegetable added daily is all that is necessary from the food standpoint to keep us well.

AMBITIOUS OR RECKLESS?

Ambition may either be an inordinate desire for results or distinction for its own sake, or eagerness to achieve a worthy purpose. Recklessness is foolish disregard for danger. For South to bid game at no trumps was worthy ambition. For him to attempt a small slam seemed a desire to show off. North's support of diamonds was proper, but his willingness to carry the call to a slam at no trumps appeared reckless. Here are the holdings:

	♠A Q J 6 2 ♥Q ♦Q 5 3 2 ♣8 4 3
♠K 10 9 5 ♥J 9 8 4 3 ♦9 8 6 ♣10	N. W. E. S.	♠8 4 3 ♥K 6 5 2 ♦10 7 ♣K 6 5 2
	♠7 ♥A 10 7 ♦A K J 4 ♣A Q J 9 7

Bidding went: South, 1-club; North 1-spade; South 2-diamonds; North 2-spades; South 2-no trumps; North 3-diamonds; all of which was reasonable; South 4-no trumps, when a less ambitious bidder would have ended at 3-no trumps; North 5 no trumps, ending the bidding without a double.

The opening lead was the 4 of hearts. Dummy's Q, East's K and declarer's ace fell in a heap. South took his ace and K of diamonds. As all followed suit it was evident that the suit would break, allowing two entries to dummy, with the Q to overtake declarer's J, and the 5 to overtake his 4. Dummy was put in the lead with the 5 of diamonds. The 8 of clubs held the seventh trick. The ace of clubs picked up East's last club, and the Q of clubs won the tenth straight trick.

Both West and Dummy had been discarding during the long run of club tricks. At the end of the ninth trick the holdings about the table were as shown. The last club was led. What shall West let go? Dummy will let go the 6 of spades. East is not shown, as he has no hope of winning a trick.

Dummy—
♠A Q J 6
West—
♠K 10 9 ♥J
Declarer—
♠7 ♥10-7

If West lets go one of his 3 spades dummy will win the last 3 tricks. If West lets go his winning heart South's 10 of hearts will win the eleventh trick, and dummy's A-Q of spades will win the last 2 tricks. West is squeezed. As the cards are the defenders cannot avoid a grand slam, or one trick over the small slam contract. South played the hand exceedingly well.

FRUIT

By GRETCHEN GIBSON

Autumn once more! A tang in the air—morning mists rising from the lake—fresh snow on the burnished mountains and fruit—fruit everywhere—on trees—on the ground, in shop windows, little boys munching apples along the streets,—little girls reveling in pears,—elders vainly declaring they will not eat another plum, appetizing aromas in the air, kitchen tables proudly displaying a baffling variety of beautiful preserves — and so on almost endlessly.

Since the first welcomed cherry ripened fruit has been a stirring issue in our midst—a dramatic issue with its elements of suspense, surprise, satisfaction and disappointment. For some fruit has meant experience — employment. Girls and boys all over the country, picking and packing, have learned, perhaps for the first time, the value of a penny—and how much painstaking labor sometimes goes into the earning of ten cents.

It would be interesting to follow the adventures involved in picking, packing, shipping and marketing a box of fruit—from tree to consumer. For instance a volume might be filled with events leading up to and including the intimate history of an apple from orchard in Longbeach, B.C., to pie in London, England. We would no doubt be surprised to learn how much the eating of a Kootenay peach in Regina, a pear in Moose Jaw or a cherry in Winnipeg has contributed to the world's industries, or how widespreading in effect has been the crisis of fixing prices and deciphering profits.

Though so abundant at present how precious fresh fruit will be a few months hence and what a pity so much now seems to go to waste! But when one considers that all the great forces of our universe have aided in bringing our fruit to its delectable perfection it cannot be that nature actually wastes any of it.

The shipping of surplus fruit to stricken prairie districts seems an excellent undertaking. If the boys and girls of those districts enjoy the fruit as much as the young volunteers seem to enjoy the fun of picking and packing it the philanthropic ranchers who donate it should feel well repaid, and in coin which "rust doth not corrupt."

The attempt of Soviet Russia to abolish Sunday was a failure. The authorities themselves admit that. The idea was not only to do away with the religious aspect of the day, but to so arrange matters that there would be no let-up in operations, but a continuous effort to fulfil successive five-year plans. Chaos resulted from the fact that the "free" day, which was th substitute for the Sabbath, was allotted on differing dates.—Hamilton Spectator.

Fall Cleanup Keeps Garden Healthy

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Central Press Garden Expert

Cleaning up all the old plants and rubbish in the garden in the fall, and destroying it, is an aid in preventing diseases in the garden next year. The fungi and bacteria which cause plant diseases live over winter on old plants, in the soil and on seed.

Fall cleanups are especially important in perennial beds. Hollyhock rust, iris leaf spot, delphinium blight, peony blight, and many other diseases of perennial flowers, live over winter on the old leaves and stems of this year's plants.

The tops of such plants should all be cut off close to the crowns and burned. Rose black spot and mildew winter over entirely on the old fallen leaves. Thoroughly raking up the leaves late this fall and burning them will make it much easier to control these diseases in the rose garden next year.

Root rot organisms live over mostly in the soil. In beds where such diseases have been troublesome, it will pay to sterilize the soil with formaldehyde this fall. Spade the soil well so that it is loose. Then apply a solution of one part of formaldehyde to 50 parts of water at about the rate of one gallon per square foot of soil. Then cover the bed with burlap, canvas or boards for 12 hours.

The Cardinals clustered around Walker but there was no move to take him out of the box. Goslin up. Goslin singled through center and Gehringer scored the winning run. Orsatti's throw was wild and there was no play at the plate.

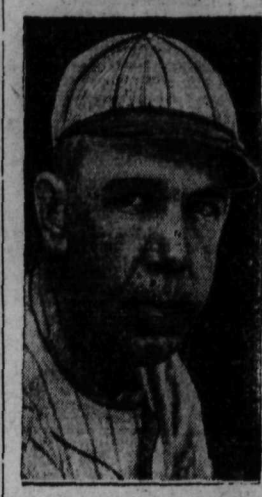
Wild Bill



"Wild Bill" Hallahan, Cardinal twirler, stuck it out until the ninth when Walker lined a single to center, scoring Fox to tie up the count Manager Frisch pulled him in favor of Bill Walker, another southpaw, who instead of pitching to the batter, kept the ball going to first until finally the Tiger Walker was caught in a "hot box" and put out. He then struck Cochrane out to send the game into overtime.

RANGERS ARE RATED TO WIN

Go to Airdrieonians Tomorrow in the Scottish

GLASGOW, Oct. 4 (CP cable)—Unless the unexpected happens Glasgow Rangers, champions of the Scottish Football league and holders of the Scottish cup, will still be leading the race following Saturday's program.

At present running a half game ahead of Clyde and St. Johnstone, the Rangers go to Airdrieonians grounds Saturday while the runners-up are both drawn away against tough opponents. St. Johnstone go to Dundee and Clyde to Fir Park, where Motherwell need a couple of points to put them up near the top.

Hamilton and Hearts, bracketed a game and a half behind the leaders, likewise play away games. Hamilton meet Partick and Hearts St. Mirren, and both the home sides are in desperate mood with only two wins out of 10 matches.

Third Lanark, demoted this year and still leading the second division will be at home to Stenhousemuir.

Schoolboy Pitches Superb 12-Inning Game; Tiger Hit Ties Score in Ninth Frame

Pinch-Hitter Walker Saves Day and Goslin's Hit Wins Game in Twelfth; Cardinals Have Costly Errors Marked Up

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Goslin

Gehringer

DETROIT, Oct. 4 (AP)—Surging back into the world series fight behind the superb pitching of Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, 22-year-old pitching giant from Eldorado, Arkansas, Detroit Tigers came from behind today to capture a 12-inning baseball melodrama from St. Louis Cardinals and serve notice that it's going to be a knock-down-and-drag-out battle for the championship of 1934.

Trailing by one run in a dazzling duel between Rowe and Lefty Bill Hallahan of the Cardinals, the American league champions tied the score in the ninth on Pinch-Hiter Gerald Walker's single and triumphed in the 12th, off another southpaw, Bill Walker, as Goose Goslin's rousing basehit to center brought Charley Gehringer home with the winning run and clinched a 3-2 decision for the celebrated Schoolboy.

SPECTACULAR GAME

Rowe signalized his debut under world series fire by hurling one of the most spectacular games in championship history. Belted for six hits and a pair of runs inside the first three innings, as the Cardinals got away with a characteristic spurt, the youthful giant steadied down and simply overpowered the National league champions the rest of the way.

Rowe yielded only one hit in the last nine innings, a long double by Pepper Martin in the 11th. From the fourth to the 11th, the Tiger thunderbolt was absolutely invincible as he retired 22 batsmen in order with a bewildering assotment of speed, curves and a change of pace.

GOSLIN A HERO

Rowe was the big hero for a howling crowd of 43,451 cash customers, a slightly bigger turnout than for the opening game, but he shared the Tiger laurels with Goslin, Walker and Ervine (Pete) Fox, the light-hitting outfielder who drove in the first Tiger run in the fourth with a double and scored the tying run in the ninth.

Goslin, besides driving home the winning run, helped save the game in the third when his great throw to Mickey Cochrane, after Jim Collins' single, cut down Medwick at the plate and halted the last Cardinal attack.

Where they had piled up no less than five errors in the first game and performed miserably, the Tigers played errorless ball today.

PAUL DEAN AND BRIDGES NEXT

As a result of their thrilling conquest, the series stands one-all and it's anybody's baseball war now as the contending forces headed tonight for St. Louis and the third game tomorrow on the home ground of the National league champions. Paul Dean, younger of the Cardinal pitching brothers, will be assigned the task of picking up the family job where Dizzy Dean left off with an 8-3 decision yesterday. The Tigers will rely on their slim fastball right-hander, Tommy Bridges.

The Cardinals still look to have the pitching edge on the whole, with the Deans yet to taste defeat and Hallahan the victim only of a super-finish today but they will need all their resources from now on to check the charge of the Tigers.

HALLAHAN HOLDS THEM

Until their spirited rally it looked very much as though Rowe's gathering mastery was going to be wasted. Repeatedly with men on bases the Tigers were impotent before the fast ball and sharp-breaking curve of Hallahan.

After a pair of useful but somewhat flukey two-baggers by Billy Rogell and Fox had produced the first Tiger run, in the fourth, the big guns of the Detroit attack were consistently spiked. Hank Greenberg twice fanned with men on bases Rowe fanned three times before he came through, in the ninth, with a sacrifice bunt that sent Pete Fox, who had singled, scurrying to second base.

PINCH-HITTER TIES GAME

At this critical juncture Cochrane decided to substitute right-handed Gerald Walker for Jo-Jo White, lead-off man. The pinch-hitter lifted the ball on a line to center-field, sending Fox home with the tying run. The blow also knocked Hallahan from the box. Another Cardinal southpaw, Bill Walker, promptly came to the rescue, trapped Harold Walker off first base and then struck out Cochrane, sending the battle into extra innings.

Bill Walker was the direct cause of his own undoing in the 12th. He set the stage for Goslin's winning wallop by walking Gehringer and Greenberg in succession, with two out, in the last frame. The Cardinal southpaw's control was slipping so fast he got only one strike across in 10 successive pitches to these Tiger hitters.

THE WINNING HIT

The count was one ball on the Goose when the former Washington slugger connected and smashed the ball on a line to deep center that scored the deciding run. The home players were fairly mobbed by enthusiastic rooters and it took a detail of police to help them fight their way through the jubilant throng to the dressing room.

It was as tough a ball game for the Cardinals to lose as it was thrilling to Tiger partisans and deserving to Rowe, whose 12-inning performance on the whole ranks among the finest in world series annals.

HOOLEY SMITH ON DOTTED LINE

MONTREAL, Oct. 4 (CP)—Captain Hooley Smith today affixed his signature to a renewed contract with Montreal Maroons in the National Hockey league, setting at rest rumors he might be a holdout and bringing to five the number of players who have either signed or come to terms with the club.

Manager Tommy Gordon announced today only 14 men will be carried this year, so six players will go to the minors after the pre-season training at Winnipeg.

SOMEONE TO LOVE

SYNOPSIS

After Kay Bishop's high-powered roadster crashes into June Varick's cope on Pilot Knob in the Ozarks, both girls return to conciousness in June's home in the town of Rolla, where they are cared for by June's father, Dr. Varick. Kay's arm is broken and June's leg is in splints. Under her mother's will, Kay will inherit a large fortune if she does not marry against the wishes of her brother Bruce, who is five years older. She will soon be 21. Kay warns June not to fall for Bruce when he arrives, as he has no use for girls. Bruce does not approve of Ramon Iovieno, an impoverished young Italian count, whom Kay met abroad. She wires him secretly and he hurries to Rolla, but leaves after seeing her twice in Bruce's absence. When Kay's arm mends and she and the tall and handsome Bruce are about to leave, he will not admit even to himself that he is in love but he asks June if he may come to see her, and June is thrilled when he kisses her goodbye. June is lame when the splints are removed. Dr. Varick dies suddenly as he is about to take her to New York to the famous Dr. Henderson, his classmate. In a few days June writes Bruce she is coming to New York but does not mention her lameness. When he sees porters assisting her at the station, he gathers her in his arms and kisses her. He suggests that she use his limousine to go to Dr. Henderson's and her hotel, and have the chauffeur phone so he can join her for the evening. Dr. Henderson assures her he can cure her lameness.

INSTALMENT 5.

Out on Park avenue, the icy wind whipping about her, June thought of Bruce again with a little heap of gratitude. It was wonderful to only cross the pavement and find the shelter of his luxurious car. She was going to see him tonight, dine with him. She hugged the thought to her in sheer delight. Then she remembered that she had nothing to wear, and told Jenks to take her to one of Fifth avenue's famous department stores.

This was her first shopping venture in the big city, and she reveled in it. Back at the hotel, she felt almost happy, the first time since trouble descended so cruelly upon her. Shaking out the soft folds of the black velvet dinner dress she had bought, and the wrap that accompanied it, June thrilled as every girl does to the joy of smart, new clothes.

Bruce's surprise and delight were scarcely concealed when she met him at the elevator downstairs. Wherever he had thought of taking her, he changed his mind, and they went to one of the most fashionable restaurants in the city. June felt self-conscious because of her lameness, but he overruled her objections. She was so lovely that his masculine pride urged him to display his possession.

The softly lighted restaurant was filled with handsomely gowned women who were hard and brittle beside June's unsophisticated beauty. People spoke to Bruce. Women gave him their sweetest, archest smiles. When they were seated, two men came up to their table. They stared at June, unminded of being rude, until Bruce yielded and introduced them.

June was entirely at her ease, for she had been surrounded with young men all her life, it seemed; actually, since she was fifteen.

Bruce's manner was cool. "We might as well take ourselves off," one of the young men said. "The refrigerator is working well. You wouldn't be kind and tell a boy scout where you're stopping, would you, Miss Varick? We'll never get it out of Bruce."

June remembered his name afterwards. It was Sylvester—Brownie Sylvester—and he was an extremely likable young man. But Bruce said: "That was a good idea about taking yourself off, Brownie. We are going to the theater, and we've just about time to order. Kay is going to give a party for Miss Varick, so if you can wangle an invitation out of her, you won't need to bother about telephone numbers."

"Really, is she—I mean, is Kay going to give me a party?" June asked, when they were alone again.

"She said she would, but I suppose you'll have to wait until you are out of the hospital. I think you are wise to go immediately. I can hardly stand it to have you this way, knowing that Kay was to blame. . . don't protest; I know you won't admit it, but it is true, nevertheless."

They went to see "Show Boat"—the pathos, the swaying melodies, in a revival which June did not know surpassed the original. Nor did she realize the fine tact, the sure understanding which which Bruce had planned the evening, selected this show.

After the theatre, Bruce was reluctant to leave June, and to prolong the time a little he said, "Take us for a run in the park Jenks."

They rolled through the ghostly beauty of snow-laden shrubbery and trees, lights dimmned with the thickly falling flakes, the first snow of the season.

"It's beautiful!" June exclaimed. In the dim recesses of the car, she glowed, shattering his barriers of cynicism.

"June", he said, and his arm fell about her shoulders, "you are the most wonderful girl I've ever seen. You almost make me doubt myself . . . .perhaps I've been wrong about love. . . ."

"But, Bruce, of course you've been wrong!" June's voice was gentle, perplexed.

"When I am with you I can believe that. Then, when I mingle with my own crowd, as I'll do when I leave you in a little while, the doubts all come back—the futility of everything, except work, possibly. But I'm coming along with that. I'm learning the business; and I'm really absorbed, though I find I'm pretty dumb about most of it. If I can put this money to some good use, that's more important than my personal happiness, more real. Do you know you are the first girl that ever made me feel that it might be real, too, if one could only hang on to it, once it was acqured. But that's the trouble no one does."

"I think they do, Bruce. Your views are distorted. . . ."

June went to bed that night, her heart a melee of hopes and fears. In Rolla, young men did not talk about how to find personal happiness. They told her she was the prettiest and the sweetest girl they'd ever met, and proposed very soon and often.

* * *

Bruce was devoted during those first trying days at the hospital. No blood kin could have guarded her welfare more assiduously, nor ordered more extravagant services. June was a little disturbed about this. Bruce had all her meals sent in from a high-class restaurant. And there were fresh flowers daily. Every night, there was an orchid on her dinner tray.

Kay come to see her. A subtly different Kay. Not so restless, perhaps, but more bitter against Bruce. He was still unyielding. She was seeing Ramon, in stolen moments, at odd trysting places. Then one day she came in weeping, and poured out a story of desolation.

"Ramon has gone home—back to Italy. He had to do it—he lost his job here, and there was nothing for him to do. I tried to make him take some money from me, and he wouldn't do it. We quarreled terribly."

"What is he going to do at home?"

"Oh, he has some absolutely wild scheme—I say wild scheme because he hasn't enough money to put it through. If I could get hold of some of my capital and lend it to him, he'd make good, I'm sure. But this way I can't see that he has a chance, unless some man he knows in England helps him out. There's a chance of that—he is going to stop in London. June, I feel like doing something desperate. My life doesn't mean a thing without Ramon—honestly, it doesn't.. I'm simply mad about the man. It's not an infatuation, as Bruce thinks. Won't you try to make him see he's wrong? He seems to think everything you say or do is right. . . ."

"I told him before he left Rolla that I thought he was wrong. But you know how he freezes up when the subject arises."

June was in the hospital for Thanksgiving. Bruce, as lover-like as she could ask, outwardly, came to sit with her all afternoon. Her room was aglow with huge yellow chrysanthemums, and long stemmed red roses. Dinner was sent in for them—a festive meal, on which Bruce had expended much thought. Making June happy was becoming an obsession with him. She was the only girl he'd ever known who really appreciated the things he did for her. They were having dessert when Kay, on a strange impulse, brought a half dozen of her friends to call. They had been attending a cocktail party and were on their way to dinner.

"So this is where you were!" Kay said to Bruce. 'We were looking for you—you promsed to come to Shirley's, and is she off you!"

"And do I look as if I were worried?"

"No, you look to me as if you were in love — hard-boiled Bruce, in love!"

"Be still," he commanded, "I don't want these asses to hear you. What did you bring Brownie here for, of all places?" Bruce's eyes were angry as he regarded Brownie Sylvester leaning over June, so close that the fumes of his liquor-laden breath must nauseate her, he thought.

"You don't like to share your pet, do you, darling?" Kay said, mockingly. "Well, I'll tell you in advance. I'm going to introduce her to all the eligible boys I know, as soon as she is out of here. You may have to take a little of your own medicine you see—you are in love with her, if you won't admit it, even to yourself—and if someone takes her away from you, it will serve you right."

"Listen, I wish you'd get out of here—no one asked you to come. . ."

* * *

Kay went to Lake Placid the middle of December, to stay until after Christmas. Then, a sudden business trip took Bruce to California. He would be back by Christmas, he was sure. In the meantime June was lonely. She had not realized until now how irrevocably in love with him she was. Did he love her? Sometimes she was sure he did, and then again, she was tormented by doubts.

She was able to be up now for a little while each day. Her operation had been a success, and it was only a question of complete convalescence. Would Bruce suggest the yacht trip, as he had when he first met her? She could visualize long, lazy days, cruising beneath a southern moon with the man she loved. Her breath came fast, in a sudden ecstasy of emotion—he might propose—they might have their honeymoon. . . .

Without warning, June was dismissed from the hospital on the afternoon of Christmas Eve. Dr. Henderson telephoned from his country place in Westchester. He meant to do June a kindness. A lovely girl like that would hate to be in a hospital on Christmas—she would want to be with her friends.

June could hardly keep back the tears as she went to the cashier's cage downstairs to pay her bill.

"There is still a balance," she was told.

"A balance?" She was mystified.

"Yes. Mr. Bishop deposited a sum to cover your expenses—he said his sister injured you, and he was paying all the bills."

June turned away. Bruce was wonderful.. She was helped into a cab, her eyes blinded with tears. "The Gilmore," she said. She had left her trunk there, so she must go back, she told herself. Actually, though, it was because she was lonely, and the place had the merit of not being wholly strange.

That hour on Christmas Eve, between six and seven, was one June hoped she would never live through again. Huddled in a chair in her small room on the twenty-sixth floor, she did not cry, but sat in stony, aching silence.

Then, the clamor of the telephone bell came like the boom of a gun! A great leap of hope spun her senses. She reached for the instrument.

"June, this is Bruce. . . ."

His deep, vibrant voice came to her like a lifeline to the drowning. Her desolate hour was flooded with happiness. It was hard to command her voice, welcome him home, the relief was so great.

"I'm so glad you're back," she managed to say through the choke in her voice.

"I had no idea they'd let you leave the hospital. . . ."

"I have to go back every day for treatments, but Dr. Henderson said I could leave. . . . I'm so lonesome, Bruce. . . ."

"Of course you are, you poor little darling. Now, we will have dinner together. How soon can you be ready?"

Dressing slowly, because she was still weak, but exuberant with relief, she hummed little snatches of song. Nothing to wear but the black velvet. Still, it was lovely. Her arms and throat rose out of it in rounded beauty.

Bruce called from downstairs, and she went to meet him, proud that she was straight again. Always handsome, he was unusually so in his dinner clothes. June thrilled as he hurried to meet her in the lobby.

"You look wonderful!" Bruce's hand clasped hers almost fiercely. She could feel the little thrills of gladness that surged from him to her.

MILL OF SUPERIOR GOLD TAKES FORM RAPIDLY—TO HANDLE BIG DUMP OF THE PROVIDENCE MINE

City Sells Ground at Nominal Sum; to Help Comeback

By Staff Correspondent

GREENWOOD, B.C., Oct. 4—The Providence mine of Greenwood, which has produced an immense fortune in its day, has now started its comeback. The large ore dump, which has been the most prominent feature of the mine in recent years, will soon be reduced to a mere nothing, and in the process of reduction will play an important part in the recovery of Greenwood city. This ore which was too low grade for shipment in earlier days will be yielding a profit under more modern methods of mining. The labor which this dump represents will be justified and it is hoped well rewarded, for close at hand there is the skeleton of a 50-ton mill being erected by Superior Gold Mines, Ltd.

Only a few weeks since, there was nothing but the ore dump and a few wrecked buildings on the property. Now there is lumber and machinery strewn about the ground, and a buzz of industry in the air. There are men working everywhere, some digging trenches some working roads, foremen with their plans, painters, carpenters, and a large number of them are centering their attention on the mill. This activity is being sponsored by the Superior Gold Mines, Ltd.

The Superior mill when completed will be a credit both to its owners and to Greenwood. The mill nestles against the hillside and the raises in the floor level are protected with strong retaining walls of concrete, The timbers are of 12-12 new lumber and are set on concrete blocks with an iron pin to keep them from slipping. The roof of the mill is first covered with shiplap then paper and finished with corrugated iron rooofing. The 200-ton ore bin is exceptionally strong and beneath it there is room for a secondary crusher, the jaw crusher and grizzly being placed at the top bin.

THE BALL MILL

In the left hand half of the top step of the mill the ball mill rests on concrete blocks set on a foundation which goes down some three feet below the floor. There are 26 yards of cement in this block. The Hardinge ball mill is equipped with Falk reduction gears. The capacity to start with will be 50 tons but the mill is constructed so that it can be stepped up to 200 tons if necessary. Installation of the Dorr classifier is completed and the six-cell union flotation unit is on the property waiting to be installed.

The floors of the mill will be of concrete. An old boiler is being converted into a heating and drying plant, and considering the construction of the mill should make the building comfortable for the men to work in. Power to run the mill will be obtained from the West Kootenay Power & Light company, Ltd., line which runs near the site, a 50 horse power motor being put in service. The power is so handy that seven poles will carry the lines to the mill.

A pump is being installed on Boundary creek and will be good for a 200-foot head. Hydrants and pipe lines are being laid around the property for fire protection.

Besides the mill building the company is building offices and garages, a blac

PLAN GOLD CUP RACES

Beautiful Shield Has Had Its Day; Hope for New Interest

Next year members of the Kootenay Launch club will initiate a drive for gold cup races on the silvery Kootenay. Gold cup races have been a big attraction in the speed-boat world and by putting up a new cup with a good cash prize, the club hopes to attract some 60-mile an hour boats from across the line and from the coast. This year the last plate on the magnificent Patenaude shield was inscribed with the name of its present owner, L. F. Gilbert. Gilbert has won the shield eight times and lost it only three times. Club members are now of the belief that it has served its purpose and it is not likely that it will be competed for again. They are looking for a gold cup to replace it.

BAYONNE

No mining operation is contemplated for another six months at least, Mr. Harris, who drove over Wednesday night from Penticton with W. G. Wilkins, stated at the Hume Thursday.

THREE ROAD CAMPS

A powerful tractor with 35 h.p. oil engine, and a bulldozer, unloaded at Tye siding, are being used by Contractor Hatfield in conjunction with a crew of 45 men, which shortly will be 50, camps having been established at Ten-Mile on Cultus creek, on the upper course of Canyon creek, and at a small lake 1½ miles from the Bayonne mine. The Cultus creek road from Tye to Ten-Mile, with a grade eight feet wide, has been repaired, and from Ten-Mile to the Bayonne mine the contract calls for a caterpillar road, which will be sufficient for immediate purposes, though probably it will be improved next season to a motor grade.

If the road connection is finished this fall, Mr. Harris stated, a camp will be built, and the caterpillar, which has been bought for the mine, will plow the road during the winter, and will haul up to the mine building material and mining and milling machinery, and the spring will see a pilot mill built, of 30 tons treating and 50 tons crushing capacity. If the road work is interrupted by winter, the completion of the program will simply go over to the spring, Mr. Harris intimated.

25,000 TONS OPENED

Work under various operators during the past 30 years has all been by hand drilling, and 4000 feet of work, in three tunnels, has been done on the three-foot Bayonne vein, approximately 25,000 tons of ore having been developed.

In the early days, the Bayonne mine was reached by Summit creek, which the old Dewdney trail followed. The recent Gerrard operation received its supplies by way of the pass from Sheep creek. All ore developed by various operations has been left in the mine, awaiting transportion facilities.

With provision of road facilities, power equipment for drilling purposes and for ore handling, and milling plant, the Bayonne mine, under the new operation will for the first time in its history be an active producer.

Of the 1,016,000 pople living in Rome, Italy, approximately 969,700 are Catholics.

wasn't what it should have been. Hallahan pitched a wonderful game but the team that got the break won it."

ALL WATCHED IT

Frisch, no doubt, was referring to the incident in the ninth inning when Gerald Walker, pinch-hitting for Jo-Jo Whiten, Tiger centerfielder, popped a high fly along the first base foul line and both Delancey, the Cardinals' catcher, and Rip Collins, first baseman, through a mix-up, allowed it to fall without either making an attempt to catch it. Two seconds later Walker singled, scoring Fox with the tying run.

"I don't care what anybody says, I still love to win," Frisch yelled, "breaks or no breaks. I came near tossing the game away myself. Nobody is perfect and we all make mistakes but I think we booted away today's game."

The Cardinals, red-necked and fighting mad, tossed their baseball equipment around the room in an expression of their anger.

PAUL DEAN NEXT

Frisch will send Paul Dean against the Tigers in St. Louis tomorrow, figuring that the other half of the Dean brothers is ready to knock the Tigers back on their heels.

Over in the Tiger dressing room all was hilarity with Goose Goslin, whose single drove in the winning run, and Schoolboy Rowe, coming in for tremendous back-slapping and handshaking.

When the players stormed through the door, they surrounded Goslin, pounded him on the back, grasped him by the hand or kicked him in the pants.

Manager Mickey Cochrane said he felt his Tigers were on their way to victory and ready to start hitting.

He will start Tommy Bridges, the slim, 155-pounder against the Cardinals tomorrow.

MASS OF DETAIL

"There has been such a mass of detail to be sifted that in the short time at our disposal it is difficult to prepare for trial. We are seeking to delay the case only in the interest of justice."

The trial is docketed for next Thursday.

Foley said the maps were found in a trunk at the Hauptmann home. Nine English-German dictionaries also were found.

District Attorney Foley attached equal importance to the discovery of the maps and the dictionaries. From the outset it has been the theory of investigators that the writer of the ransom notes—and these have been identified by experts as of Hauptmann's handwriting—used a dictionary for the spelling of the long English words. In the notes, the longer words generally were correctly spelled. The shorter ones, quite frequently, were misspelled.

NEW FACES IN THE ENGLISH

Chelsea Bolsters Up With a New Right Winger

LONDON, Oct. 4 (CP cable)—Fresh faces will be seen on a number of teams as the clubs of the English Football league resume warfare Saturday. Plenty of activity in the transfer market has occurred during the week, the majority of teams attempting to remedy weak spots while the season is yet young.

Chelsea, which has lost six games out of eight and finds the fans screaming for more power on the attack, today secured the services of R. Spence, Barnsley's clever outside right. Spence will be on the field when the Pensioners meet Everton.

Manchester City cuphelders entertain Blackburn Rovers, at present near the bottom of the first division table. Sunderland, half a game behind in second place, also have an easy fixture with Middlesbrough.

The Arsenal, league champions, go to Stoke City, whose eleven is only a point behind the Arsenal and travelling fast. Preston is at home to the battling Derby County outfit.

Bastin, their international, is a doubtful starter for Arsenal.

Mrs. Bermilyea's screams were heard by people across the street and they reported seeing the man flee down the street. These witnesses described the man as 35 or 40 years of age, wearing a grey coat and carrying what was believed to be a hatchet.

CANNOT LIVE

Dr. T. H. Stobie was summoned and he placed the aged woman in hospital. Following an examination of the head wounds and the slashed wrist the doctor said Mrs. Bermilyea could not live.

Police launched an intensive search for the woman's assailant. The district was combed thoroughly by the officers. It was pointed out that Mrs. Bermilyea's purse had not been touched by the man, so apparently robbery was not the motive of the crime.

CONSERVATIVES

Amid scenes of unparalleled excitement, the party split down the middle over the policy for India laid down by the government in the form of a white paper which for more than a year has been under study by a select joint parliamentary committee, prejude to discussion in parliament itself. In a ballot of more than a thousand votes cast on India the "die-hards" were defeated by a majority of only 23.

DIE-HARDS GAIN HONORS

It was the culmination of revolt against the government's policy which has bubbled through the Conservative ranks for months.

And even though their motion attacking the government's policy was nullified, the die-hards gained all the honors.

For the vote was on an amendment which, instead of approving the government's policy, merely stated that no stand should be taken until the select committee had reported its findings. The white paper policy proposed a measure of responsible government with safeguards for a federated India, including the provinces and the native states.

INADEQUATE DEFENSE

Before the battle of India, defence and the house of lords problems were disposed of decisively. With a majority to overwhelming as to virtually constitute unanimity, the conference passed a resolution by Lord Lloyd, one of the foremost die-hards, recording its "grave anxiety over the inadequacy of provisions made for imperial defence."

The debate on the defence resolution brought out an important statement by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, which was open to many interpretations. In effect he declared that the government, in face of the fact that other nations had not followed its lead in disarmament, had reached certain decision which could not of course be made public. He explained that the open action taken to substantially increase the air force was because attack from the air was in a class by itself, affecting every portion of the population.

DEFENCES ARE LOW

"It is not to be denied," said the government spokesman, "but on the contrary it has been asserted over and over again by members of the government that the present defences of this country have reached a dangerously low level.

"That is not due to any action of the present government. It is due to the deliberate policy of the present government. It is due to the deliberate policy of successive governments for the last eight and a half years. During all these years expenditure on national defence has been continually reduced in pursuance of the idea that this country should give a lead to the rest of the world in the matter of disarmament.

EXAMPLE NOT FOLLOWED

"No one can say that we have failed to give that lead not only by precept but by example."

Other countries had not followed the british example because of fear and anxiety, and until that feeling was removed there was not much hope that Britain would get any serious amount of disarmament, he said.

"It is quite incompatible with the government's duty to the country to leave defences in their present condition. We have spent many months, assisted by those who could speak with the greatest authority on behalf of the various services, in examining the whole situation, and in formulating what we believe to be adequate plans to deal with the situation.

STRIKE A BALANCE

"We have not made public the details of our plans, and indeed they may have to be modified in one direction or another as conditions change. But we believe we have struck the balance between undue, excessive and panicky haste on the one hand; and apathy which may lead to the most dangerous consequences on the other.

"We have indeed made a definite announcement about the air service. We feel that the air service is different from others, in this respect: That an attack from the air is one which will affect personally any man, woman or child in the country. That does not apply to the same extent to attack by armies and navies."

NAVAL POSITION BAD

Lord Lloyd had charged that the mastery of the seas had been "cozened" out of Britain at successive conferences. He said Britain's naval position was worse now than even a year ago. "We want no London treaty nor any other treaty which precludes our power to defend ourselves," he declared.

Lord Lloyd accepted the amendment by Mr. Chamberlain, in which the conference "assures the chancellor of the exchequer that heavy as are its burdens, it prefers the security and safety of our native land above all other benefits."

The house of lords resolution was debated to the echoes of the Labor party conference at Southport, where, although extreme leftwing resolutions were defeated, the executives promised the convention that th next labor government would be very different from the last.

STRENGTHEN THE LORDS

The entire tenor of the speeches was that the house of lords must be strengthened as a bulwark against extreme legislation. Lord Wolmer, moving the resolution which called for "rescuing the constitution from its present dangerous position before dissolution (of parliament) takes place," declared the monarchy and the nation were in an impossible position. He pointed out that Labor intended to abolish the upper chamber, using the royal prerogative if necessary to appoint sufficient new members to swamp the existing majority.

"It is our duty to see that he law is such that no fundamental change may be made unless the will of the people really demands it," he said. It was the duty of the government to give the second chamber an effective voice. Successive speakers declared that Britain was on the brink of a Socialistic volcano.

Less than a dozen votes were forthcoming for an amedment which urged that it was better for the peers themselves to submit their own proposals for reform.

END OF PARTNERSHIP

Sir Henry Page-Croft led the attack on the Indian policy. The policy laid down in the white paper, he said, "means the end of partnership of Britons and Indians in the internal government of India."

The conference indeed gathered in the atmosphere of a political campaign. Posters attacking the white paper adorned Bristol's billboards. "Safeguards are not protection," said one in red, white and blue colors. "Remember Ireland?" must India take the same road?" said another.

Page-Croft opened the battle with a motion declaring that the conference, "while prepared to support a greater measure of self-government in the provinces of India step by step in accordance with the Government of India act, records its emphatic opinion that the partnership of Britain and India in the central government of the Indian empire must not be dissolved, and urged the government to assent to no proposals which would imperil the future of India within the empire, or impair the confidence and unity of the Conservative party in view of the menace of Socialism."

To this, Alderman John Inskip of Bristol moved an amendment that in view of the decisions of the conference last year, it should not come to a final decision on proposals for a new constitution for India until the joint select committee had made its recommendations.

It was not in the interests of the party, said this amendment, "that this conference should pass any resolution on the subject, particularly as it has been decided that a special meeting of the council of the national union (of Conservative associations) should be held to take counsel with the leader of the party when the report of the joint select committee is published."

On a show of hands, the amendment was carried but the vote was obviously close, and a ballot was demanded. Page-Croft declared he would not be "muzzled" by any amendment. The result was 543 votes for the Inskip amendment, and 520 against. Thus, with the die-hards cheering for Page-Croft, the amendment was declared carried by this narrow margin.

Page-Croft described the amendment as "asking us to put our consciences in the hands of the select committee." The whole white paper policy was opposed to the instinct, the faith and the traditions of the Conservative party, he said. Nobody wanted it. The Indian princes dreaded it. It risked the future of Lancashire's exports in the Indian market.

In view of the closeness of the vote, the Inskip amendment will be resubmitted tomorrow as an independent resolution.

Only Quality Apparel

Gives Lasting Satisfaction

TAKE a look at your wardrobe. That suit you bought last year . . . those ties . . . that hat . . . those shirts . . . are they still shapely, sightly, satisfactory? Or were they "exceptional bargains" that looked nice enough then, but now make you wish you had your money back! If so, you doubtless fully realize just how costly and wasteful "cheap" clothing really is. Buy fewer clothes if you must, but choose them with the utmost care for quality, style and service.

A noteworthy example of the splendid values we offer can now be seen in our new collection of FALL CLOTHES.
