Five Die in Second Farm Family Raid

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — The bodies of a Minnesota farm wife and her four children were found Friday in the ashes of their home. The husband and father, found wounded and bound to a clothespole in the yard, told authorities it was the work of four or five midnight intruders.

The farmer, David Hoskins, 30, was in hospital in St. Cloud with bullet wounds in his right shoulder and side. A .22-calibre rifle was found in the farmhouse ruins.

No weapon was near the pole where Hoskins was found by passing teen-agers, who saw the blaze from a highway.

Hoskins told Sheriff Peter Lahr the family, which had been watching late television, heard a door slam about 1 a.m. Friday.

Hoskins said he went outside and was grabbed by four or five young men who wrapped a towel around his face, shot him and bound him. Hoskins told the sheriff the men then set fire to the premises.

The body of Mrs. Hoskins, 29, was so badly burned authorities could not immediately determine whether she had been shot.

The same was true of the bodies of Julie, 7, Darla, 4, Linda, 1½, and David, six weeks.

EXPECTED TO RECOVER

Doctors reported Hoskins in serious condition, but authorities said they expected him to recover.

It was the second mass family killing in mid-continent within the week. At Shell Lake, Sask., some 1,000 miles to the northwest, nine members of a farm family, the James Petersons, were wiped out Tuesday by still-unexplained gunfire.

The sheriff said the fire at the Hoskins home appeared to have been set deliberately.

A former helicopter pilot in the U.S. Army and a national guardsman, Hoskins is described by neighbors as a quiet-living man, active in the Church of Christ.

Shell Lake Probe "Still Wide Open"

By DON HARVEY

SHELL LAKE, Sask. (CP)—Police departments across western Canada patiently responded Friday to a series of requests from RCMP headquarters here for information about persons who were known to have travelled from northern Saskatchewan early this week.

Almost all of them were innocent transients. But among them could possibly be the slayer or slayers of Mr. and Mrs. James Peterson and seven of their nine children, who were found shot to death early Tuesday in their farm home four miles west of here.

As RCMP requests reached various cities, reports circulated that a definite suspect was being sought. Each was emphatically denied by officers directing the investigation.

"The search is still wide open," said RCMP Staff Sgt. Donald E. Sondergaard. "We are checking every possible lead."

As the routine questioning continued, residents of this community of 250 persons made the final arrangements for the funeral today of Mr. Peterson, 47, his wife Evelyn, 42, and their children, ranging in age from 1 to 17.

The little village, 60 miles west of Prince Albert, opened a trust fund to defray funeral expenses and take care of four-year-old Phyllis Peterson, who escaped the bullets by burrowing under the bedclothes next to her slain brothers and sisters.

TWO GRAVES

The victims will be buried in eight coffins in two large graves. One-year-old Larry, who died in his mother's arms as they vainly sought escape through a window, will be buried with her.

Police revealed a few more details of the apparently motiveless killing Friday.

Sgt. Sondergaard said 27 shots were fired from a .22-calibre weapon, which had been reloaded "at least once."

Some of the victims had been shot more than once and powder burns indicated some of the shots had been at close range.

Despite the widespread inquiries about travellers, police gave no indication of abandoning the search in the immediate area of the crime.

From headquarters in Shell Lake, Inspector Brian Sawyer was directing a 40-man party in a continued search of the isolated neighborhood of the Peterson home, questioning residents and tracking down rumors.

A child psychologist interviewed Phyllis Thursday but Sgt. Songergaard said no new information was obtained. Police have declined to reveal what the child was able to tell them of the shootings.

Only 355 Refugees Return to Homes

ALLENBY BRIDGE, Israel (AP)—Silent and bedraggled, only 355 Arab refugees from the June war crossed from Jordan to Israeli-held Jordanian territory Friday on the first day of repatriation.

At least 1,000 had been expected and Israel and Jordan blamed each other for the slowdown.

Jordan announced that 167,500 of the more than 200,000 refugees had applied to return to their homes. But Israeli officials doubted more than 35,000 could be repatriated before the Aug. 31 deadline Israel has set.

An Israeli interior ministry spokesman said of the day's poor showing:

"The Jordanian organization let us down badly. It is apparently just not equipped to handle a project of this size."

Jordanian officials said the names of those eligible to return to their homes had been given them only Thursday and this was not time enough.

HAVE DAY OFF

Dr. Meir Silverstone, director of the Israeli interior ministry, met with senior Jordanian and International Red Cross officials to discuss how to speed up the crossings. Repatriation will continue Sunday after time out for the Jewish Sabbath today.

Red Cross officials, sweating in the Dead Sea heat, assisted many of the refugees, carrying their belongings and helping old people across the boards of the wrecked Allenby Bridge across the River Jordan. The bridge was knocked out during the June 5-10 war.

Said Brig. Abdullah Rafee, secretary of Jordan's refugee committee:

"It seems the Israelis have selected only the very young and very old and have taken no chances on letting young men return yet."

Before crossing the river, each man, woman and child received $14 from the Jordanian government to help in resettling. Burdened by economic losses resulting from the war, Jordan cannot take care of the thousands of refugees.

Coast Forest Shutdown Hits 5000 Timber Workers

VANCOUVER (CP)—At least 5,000 timber workers were affected today by a major shutdown in the British Columbia forest industry as the result of hot, dry weather and raging forest fires.

Half of the sprawling Vancouver forest district was shut down early today and the other half was partially closed. Completely closed to industry was an area including the southern half of Vancouver Island and parts of the southern mainland as far east as the Cascade Mountains.

In Victoria, a forest service spokesman warned that further closures could follow in other areas if the fire situation doesn't improve.

Until the provincial government ban is lifted, the areas will be closed to all tourists and industrial activity. Under the partial ban affecting parts of Vancouver Island and the mainland, work in the woods is allowed only between midnight and 1 p.m. daily.

Two Vancouver island communities, Tofino and Ucluelet on the west coast, remained cut off from Port Alberni as a 3,000-acre blaze continued to spread out of control.

Dieppe Veterans Visit Battleground

DIEPPE, France (CP)—Canadian survivors of the Dieppe raid searched out old battlegrounds and stirred up harsh memories Friday, then joined in a vigil of remembrance for comrades killed in the Dieppe deathtrap 25 years ago today.

Men of the Prairies and the eastern cities, from Quebec, the Pacific coast and Western Ontario returned to the battle sites for ceremonies marking the anniversary of the disastrous "reconnaissance force" of Aug. 19, 1942, against German-occupied Dieppe.

In the nearby village of Puys —where the Royal Regiment of Canada suffered 95-per-cent casualties—A small group of German veterans prepared a separate ceremony honoring the men killed defending Dieppe.

Richard Schnoyessenberg, 53, who commanded 1,000 German defenders at Puys, and Fritz Mezger, 55, veteran of the German 302nd Division that defended Dieppe, expressed bitter regret that they have been excluded from the official anniversary ceremony.

"Right after the raid, I shook hands with Canadian officers and congratulated them for their Bravery," Schnoyessenberg said. "Except for Canadian official objections, I would be able to renew the acquaintance at the ceremonies this weekend."

Pope Orders Reorganization Of Old Church Government

By JOHN EARLE

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Pope Paul Friday gave the Vatican the equivalents of a foreign ministry, finance ministry and cabinet meetings in a sweeping reform of the four-centuries-old Curia, or central government, of the Roman Catholic Church.

In a 10,000-word Latin "apostolic constitution," he streamlined the church's cumbersome machinery for dealing with its 550,000,000 believers.

The Curia's 12 sacred congregations, roughly equivalent to ministries, were thoroughly reorganized and reduced to nine. Several will have new names, to make their functions more easily understandable.

The reform, which will come into force Jan. 1, struck at Curia cardinals gathering too much power by laying down that key offices should be held for five years instead of indefinitely and that the holders should offer their resignations on the death of a pope.

In the past there has been criticism of aged cardinals, who accumulated posts and influence while proving inefficient or senile in their jobs.

At the same time, the pontiff gave the Curia more effective power by streamlining it on modern lines, establishing new departments and instituting "cabinet meetings" in the form of periodic gatherings of the main departmental heads.

NEW INVOLVEMENT

The reorganized Curia will take more interest in Roman Catholic education and the position of priests throughout the world, said Msgr. Giovanni Pinna, secretary of the special commission which drafted the reform.

The new "foreign ministry" is called the Sacred Council for the Church's Public Affairs. Relations with foreign governments have previously come under the secretariat of state, which now will become a secretariat for the Pope.

Both offices will be headed by the secretary of state, the Pope's chief executive or prime minister, who will also preside at "cabinet meetings."

181 Ships Expected To Be Halted by Strike

By ROSEMARY SPEIRS

MONTREAL (CP) — Only ships' officers and engineers were left to keep watch over a large part of Canada's inland shipping fleet Friday, as vessel after vessel reached port and crews walked off.

At least 60 of the huge lake carriers and freighters were berthed and abandoned by mid-afternoon in the wake of a strike by 5,400 crewmen that began at noon Thursday.

In the downtown headquarters of the Seafarers' International Union, strike director John Royce kept tabs on a flood of reports about the berthings and predicted the number tied up in port could "double" by midnight.

All 181 ships owned by the 32 Great Lakes shipping companies hit by the strike are expected to be paralysed by Monday.

Meanwhile Judge Rene Lippe, chief trustee of the maritime unions and the man who brought both sides together for talks that broke off in a stalemate late Thursday, said he can do little more to help the shippers and seafarers reach an understanding.

Without some kind of push from outside neither the union nor the company appeared likely Friday to make the first move for resumed bargaining.

NO MEETING DUE

"We've got no more meetings scheduled," said Ben Truax, chief negotiator for the companies.

"The union now wants wages and fringe benefits worth about 42 per cent and we just can't support that."

Asked about SIU claims that the talks had broken off because the company would not discuss setting up standards for the number of men required to man ships, Mr. Truax said:

"That's something we don't intend to discuss with anybody right now."

SIU President Leonard McLaughlin replied with a brief "Nope" when asked if he had any plans for meeting company representatives.

"We'll be patient and wait until people realize the Canadian sailor has got to become part of the 20th century," he said.

Seaman's Strike To Isolate Newfoundland

OTTAWA (CP) — A strike deadline of noon Friday, Aug. 25 was fixed Friday for seamen on CNR ferries and coastal boats in Eastern Canada.

William J. Smith, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, authorized the walkout by 1,000 union members following unanimous rejection of a federal conciliation board report on a contract dispute between the CNR and the seamen.

The strike would cut off a major transportation link between Newfoundland and the mainland and cripple coastal supply of many Newfoundland communities.

The seamen staged a wildcat walkout last weekend shortly after the federal conciliation board wound up hearings in Halifax. They had earlier authorized union officers to call a strike in support of wage demands.

The conciliation board report, signed by chairman Judge Nathan Green, and company nominee A. William Cox recommended an across-the-board wage increase of $75 over a 30-month period ending Oct. 31, 1969.

Mr. Smith said the board's recommendation is "completely unacceptable." CBRT members on CN East Coast ships had gone five years without revision of their agreement with the company "and have thus fallen considerably below the wage levels paid to seamen employed by private shipping companies and by the CN istelf on the West Coast."

Johnson Has Authority

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Friday he has ample authority for his conduct of the war in Vietnam and declared that if Congress wants to withdraw its support "the machinery is there."

He referred at a press conference to a joint resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives, adopted Aug. 7, 1964, endorsing and supporting presidential measures to prevent further aggression. He added that the resolution is in fact not necessary to authorize "what we did and what we are doing."

The resolution includes a provision authorizing its withdrawal by concurrent resolution, which would not require Johnson's signature.

Paper Charges Reporter Assaulted by Detectives

WINNIPEG (CP)—Lawyers for the Free Press made a formal complaint to the Winnipeg police commission about the treatment one of its reporters received from two city police detectives.

Reporter Wade Rowland, 23, says he was punched and kicked Wednesday night by two Winnipeg police detectives while seeking an interview for a story series he is doing on the city's hippie population.

In lodging the formal complaint, the Free Press management said it is satisfied with the validity of Mr. Rowland's charge.

"He was carrying out his duties in a proper manner. He in no way hindered, obstructed or attempted to interfere with the actions of the two policemen. He was present simply as an observer to report the facts.

"We recognize that members of the police force in dealwith various juvenile groups may at times, be faced with difficult, frustrating and irritating situations. However, this must not justify irresponsible or illegal actions. There can be no justification for unwarranted bodily assault of any private citizen. It is primarily in support of this important principle that the complaint has been filed," the Free Press said.

Mayor Stephen Juba, chairman of the police commission, promised a full investigation will be made. He said it is normal practice to investigate all charges made against the police department.

Union, Divorce To Be Top Subjects at Anglican Synod

By DAVID DAVIDSON

OTTAWA (CP)—The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada begins sessions in the capital next week and policy on divorce and union with the United Church of Canada are expected to be major subjects of debate.

Most sessions of the 10-day synod will be at Saint Paul University, a Roman Catholic institution formed in 1965 that groups the theology and canon law faculties formerly under the University of Ottawa. A few will be at Christ Church Cathedral.

The synod, in effect the national parliament for the church's 28 dioceses, will not only consider domestic matters but also its missionary program and a proposal for the formation of a regional council comprising Anglican - communion churches in North America and the Caribbean.

President of the approximately 300-member synod is Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, Archbishop of Rupert's Land and Primate of All Canada.

TWO HOUSES SIT

The synod's lower house comprises clergy and lay delegates from the dioceses. Sitting in the upper house are the metropolitans of the four ecclesiastical provinces and the bishops, including those who are retired or are in missionary work on behalf of the Canadian church.

Troops March On Canton

From Reuters-AP

HONG KONG (CP — Troops backing Mao Tse-tung and armed with field artillery were reported Friday to be marching on the main south China city of Canton—said to be close to civil war.

The English-language newspaper South China Morning Post, quoting arrivals from the city, said increased deployment of troops around the city was apparent.

One arrival said an armed column of unknown strength was seen marching towards Canton from its base 60 miles to the east.

The Canton strife coincided with reports of trouble in other sections Nationalist Chinese sources in Formosa said foes of Mao, Communist party chairman, were winning a battle in Chungking.

Moscow radio said armed clashes had broken out in Yunnan, the southwest province, but gave no details.

Both sources also reported the Canton strife. Moscow said 300,000 Chinese fled Canton after Peking sent two battalions from the north. The Nationalists said Canton was in anarchy and more than 1,000 had been killed or wounded.

FIREFIGHTERS HOLD MT. SENTINEL FIRE

Fruitvale Man Dies in Crash

A 22-year-old Fruitvale man died an hour after the car he was driving slammed into a power pole near Fruitvale, Thursday.

Dead is Glen James Forester, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Forester of Fruitvale.

Forester was driving towards Trail about 12:05 a.m. when his vehicle left the road at the intersection of Highway 3A and Bluebird Corner.

The car then hit the pole, shearing it off at its base.

Forester died in Trail Tadanac Hospital at 1:10 a.m.

An inquest has been set by Coroner Dr. R. A. Love for October 3.

Another man died Thursday afternoon about 12 hours after an accident three miles south of Beaverdell.

Robert Sinclair, 24, and his brother Joseph, 25, were taken to Oliver Hospital when their overturned car was noticed by a passerby about 5 a.m.

Midway RCMP said their car failed to make a curve on highway 44 three miles south of Beaverdell.

Robert died about 5:40 p.m. Thursday; Joseph is in good condition at Oliver Hospital with a fractured leg.

Oliver Coroner Dr. N. J. Ball has called an inquest.

Both Robert and his brother were single men, and loggers.

Three people en route to the opening of Duncan Dam Thursday escaped serious injury, when their car fell 25 feet down a bank and landed on its roof near Lardeau.

Driver Ander Anderson of Trail was treated at Kaslo Victorian Hospital for a broken hand.

Passengers were Mrs. Anderson and Victor Tampinella of Kaslo.

RCMP said the Anderson car was "a write off."

NELSON'S KOOTENAY museum was home to the best of B.C.'s amateur artistry this week, when 50 paintings, all entries in the Saanich Art Club Historic Landmark Contest, were on display. Museum director W. A. Fetterley said attendance at the show was good. Mr. Fetterley here examines second prize winner, study with Kootenay area subjects. All themes chosen had to be more than 75 years old. Show is now touring the province.

Complete Guard Around Blaze, Fear Havoc If High Winds Hit

CASTLEGAR — Firefighters are holding the giant Mount Sentinel forest fire "tight by the tail," a B.C. Forest Service official said here Friday.

"At 2 p.m., today, we completed the guard all around the fire," said Castlegar Ranger Hugo Wood, Thursday.

"We have her by the tail and are holding on tight."

Only high winds could destroy the fire guards which have taken fire crews days to erect on the blackened sun baked mountain.

Lardeau Still Hot Spot

The Lardeau continued to be the hot spot of the troubled Kootenay forest fire situation Friday.

"It is pretty grim up here," a forest service spokesman said Friday, "even the ground is burning."

Two of the major fires in Lake Creek and Cascade Creek have joined into a 3000-acre blaze.

Fire fighters in the rugged country are desperately trying to hold the fires in their mountain valleys.

But they are being hampered by the extreme heat and thick smoke.

The smoke grounded a helicopter Thursday and blinded fire lookouts in the area.

"It is so thick I can barely see the other side of the lake from here," said the B.C. Forest Service spokesman at the Lardeau ranger station.

In Nelson, O. J. Kettleson, Nelson Forest District assistant fire protection officer said the Lardeau creek fires had been written off.

"All we will try to do is keep these things from slopping out."

Elsewhere in the 30,000 square mile Nelson Forest District, hundreds of men continued to battle the threatening fires.

"Everyone seems to be a bit more optimistic," said Herbert Couling, Nelson District's fire protection officer, who is directing the fire fighting.

Although the hot dry weather has created harsh conditions for the fire fighters, Mr. Couling said it had helped in one way.

If the weather had remained humid, more electric storms would have swept through the Kootenays.

The last one left 150 fires in its wake.

"If we had more storms, I don't know what we would do," said Mr. Couling.

Only threat with the predicted weather is increasing winds Sunday.

Wind hampered firefighters tackling a blaze at Char Creek southwest of Creston beside the Salmo Creston Skyway Thursday.

But Friday fire fighters made up for lost ground on the 250 acre fire and a "guard is holding," said Mr. Couling.

Also in the Creston area, a combined attack by U.S. Forest Service fire crews and their B.C. counterparts brought the Boundary Lake fire near Priest River under control.

The fire spread over the border Thursday, setting about 40 acres of Canadian timber ablaze.

The two teams of fire fighters worked in close liaison, said Mr. Couling.

"The U.S. Forest Service were very sorry the fire got over to us."

In Idaho, the governor placed the National Guard on standby Friday as forest fires continued to burn in the state.

A large blaze in the Trapper Peak area of North Idaho consumed 3200 acres.

About 900 men battled the blaze.

North in the Revelstoke area, a large crew was having difficulty controlling a 250 acre blaze in Albert Canyon.

Other fires were rapidly being brought under control, although 150 were blazing in the Nelson district Friday.

Because of the demands on supervisory personnel in the area, a group of B.C. Forest Service officers have been drafted to the Nelson District from Prince George.

"All of the men are out on fires now," said Mr. Couling.

A survey shows that the mountain fire burned across 5,500 acres.

Earlier figures of the fire's size had been estimated only roughly, when it was blazing at its peak and gave its size as 4000 acres.

During its height, it threatened a lookout tower, a sawmill and farm buildings.

But for the more than 200 men who have been toiling to stem the fire, the completion of the fire guard doesn't mean the end of work.

"The number won't be reduced for a day or two," said Mr. Wood.

"There is still some burning out to do. But if we can hold this, this is going to be a big thing."

Order Complete Forest Closure

The B.C. Forest Service ordered the complete recreational closure of the Nelson Forest District, Friday, because of the extreme fire hazard.

But logging and other industries in the forests will be allowed to continue operations, a Forest Service spokesman said in Nelson.

"We want the logging operations in the forests," said Herbert Couling, district fire protection officer, Friday.

Logging outfits have provided the Forest Service with strong support in its fire fighting operations.

They have loaned men and equipment for use against the fires in the Nelson District.

But Mr. Couling said Friday: "Some operators are so scared of the fire risk that they have closed down on their own."

Friday's closure order was preceded two weeks ago by a partial recreational closure of the Nelson Forest District.

Herridge Asks ARDA in Area

Herbert W. Herridge, MP for West Kootenay, wants officials of the Agricultural Rural Development Act to visit the West Kootenay municipalities and regional officers.

Mr. Herridge Friday said he asked Maurice Sauve, Minister of Forestry to consider the area for attention from ARDA agents.

Mr. Sauve has replied that he has passed Mr. Herridge's suggestion along to the appropriate officials.

The act allows payment of 50 per cent of development of small industry, highways and recreational and tourist facilities within a designated area.

Before the federal government will give aid under ARDA, however, the provincial government must also demonstrate its interest in the area.

Bill Coleman Sees Bill Coleman

Bill Coleman's centennial project, because he was only six years old the first time, was to get another look at Bill Coleman.

And happily, it was his stepsons, and daughter's centennial project to get another good look at Bill Coleman.

So last month Mr. and Mrs. Coleman boarded a plane at Castlegar and flew . . . and flew . . . and flew.

Once they got that second look at the St. Lawrence, the couple, who live at 302 Union, spent more than a month with relatives in eastern Canada, Tennesee, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Seattle, Quesnel, then home again.

And all the airplane tickets they could use up paid for by their children Dr. G. P. Wilcox of Quesnel, Bernard Wilcox of Saint John, New Brunswick, Mrs. Wayne Hendy of Cranbrook and Mrs. W. J. Tennent of Nelson.

Other relations they visited on their centennial "around North America" special were Mrs. Coleman's mother in Seattle, her brother in Nashville and other relations in the other U.S. states.

While in the Maritimes the couple, after seeing Expo, toured all eastern provinces but Newfoundland.

"Only happens once in a lifetime," said the well-travelled Mr. Coleman this week, after his 32-day journey.

"I bet we took half-a-dozen airlines."

He said the stop he enjoyed most was Nashville where as a country music fan of many years standing, he felt at home.

Mr. Coleman is retired after 39 years of service with B.C. Tel.

He came to Canada at the age of six years from England.

"I never thought I'd see the St. Lawrence again," he said.

Ride Victims Are Improved

Two teen-age girls hurt in the collapse of a ride at Nelson's Centennial Week midway are "both improved."

But a spokesman for Kootenay Lake General Hospital said Friday Kathy Cavalier, 16, and Mart Nadeau, 17, will remain in hospital for a few days yet.

A third girl injured when the "Chair - O - Plane" overbalanced Wednesday evening, Sandra Reese, 17, was not admitted.

The ride was owned by Chris Alson of Pitt Meadows, not by Chris Rosco, of Aldergrove, as was erroneously reported in Friday's News.

Twelve-year-old Graeme Leadbeater, seriously burned when a boat's gas tank blew up in his hands a week ago Thursday is, says the hospital, "coming along very well."

Gerry Tucker, 23, cut in a boating accident the same day is in "satisfactory" condition in the hospital.

Vernon Girls Perform Here

Dancing, marching, and above all piping, the mini-kilted Vernon Girls' McIntosh Pipe Band gave a musical prelude to today's festivities Friday at Civic Centre grounds.

The girls, who are well-known up and down the Pacific coast for their piping proficiency played a half-dozen Scottish airs, ending with "Scotland the Brave."

Later they were guests at a reception and late supper prepared by the Ladies Auxiliary to Kootenay Kilties.

The band will march into today's mammoth parade.

Born and raised at Lampman, Sask., then Meadowlake, he began mine employment at Goldfields, NWT, in 1937. He worked at Sullivan until June of this year.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Anna Gehl at Haney, a brother Lee, Meadowlake, and sisters Mrs. Kelly Turner, Vernon; Mrs. H. W. Miller, Kimberley; Mrs. Irene Dennis, Haney, and Mrs. R. W. Dirks, Whonnock. Prayer service at Kimberley was followed by requiem and burial at Haney.

NOT A ROCK-FILLED DAM — But a giant causeway! Six miles north of Duncan Dam on the east side of the reservoir, this 100-foot-high and 800-foot-long structure will provide access to Cominco's Duncan Lake Mine, which will be on an island when the Duncan reservoir fills. Contractor for this B.C. Hydro project was Cranbrook Construction Company.

Embarrassing Turn In Nigerian War

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The war in Nigeria has taken an embarrassing turn, not only for the federal government in Lagos but for the British government in London as well.

When Nigeria's Eastern Region broke away from the federatio and declared itself the Republic of Biafra, London announced a hands-off policy. TThe experts concluded that Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowan, the federal leader in Lagos, would make short work of the secessionists.

Now the British Commonwealth office has acknowledged it allowed a shipment of arms to be sent to Lagos while banning arms to Biafra. Officials maintain Britain has always supplied arms to Nigeria and to cut off shipments suddenly would be tantamount to neutrality in favor of the secessionists.

Of course, the Biafrans don't see it that way, and disclosure of the British shipment goes down hard among the rebels who nevertheless show no signs of giving up.

Contrary to all expectations the little Biafran army has broken out of a siege, outflanked Gowon's better-equipped forces and advanced to capture towns in the neighboring Midwestern region.

These gains are impressive and likely will be a morale-booster for Biafran leader Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu who declared himself ready to die rather than continue under control of northern tribes who dominate Lagos.

These gains are, however, unlikely to lead to a decisive battleground decision. But no quick military settlement is likely now and the Nigerian government faces greater embarrassment and trouble than it anticipated.

About 17 per cent of all Canadian exports are forest products.

Retarded Pupils In Swim Program

CRANBROOK — Twenty-two pupils of the Juniper and Pinewood day schools for the retarded at Cranbrook and Kimberley have participated delightedly in a swimming program this summer. Committees of the Handicapped Children's Society, volunteer drivers, particularly from Cranbrook Baptist congregation, and Cranbrook recreation commission member Mrs. B. K. Taylor made the arrangements.

Chapman Camp community swimming pool, which is heated through the season, is locale for the twice weekly sessions under close supervision, leading to floatboard practice as a new recreation program item for these handicapped.

$325,000 Water Bylaw Gets Council Go-Ahead

CRANBROOK — Preparation of a $325,000 Waterworks Improvement Bylaw has been authorized by city council to implement first steps of the 1964 professional engineering consultant firm recommendations. This would be to augment present Joseph Creek supply with wells and pumping system at a cost of $300,000 and the remainder for improvements to the distribution system.

Temporary measures of restricting outdoor sprinkling to alternate nights have gone into force, with appearance of a delegation from the top street of Gordon Terraces at the southern end of the city to report to council only a trickle from taps late afternoons during the current heat-wave.

Surplus runoff at the reservoir continues fairly satisfatory, indicating the problem is not in supply but in distribution.

Stationary pressure guage is located at the fire hall and is checked daily. Average pressure continues at a little under 100 pounds, but fluctuates during the day recording only 53 pounds one afternoon prior to voluntary sprinkling restrictions.

The entire recommended improvement program was estimated by the engineering firm at $1.8 million, with wells first step, followed as required by a supplementary major supply source when required from the Moyie River.

City council aims for a mid-autumn vote on the $325,000 bylaw to enable operation of the supplementary supply and improvements by next spring, if the expenditure is approved.

Smog Hits New Yorkers

NEW YORK (AP)—A heavy layer of smog which made eyes smart and throats hoarse over much of the eastern seaboard since Wednesday lifted Friday as a hot sun lifted a temperature inversion which trapped pollutants near the ground, the U.S. Weather Bureau said.

The sun warmed up to 86 degrees at noon in New York City, heating the air and allowing pollutants to rise.

Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller lifted the smog alert he issued two days ago for the southeastern part of the state, and New York City ended its air pollution "watch".

LOG BUILDING MOVED TO GOLF COURSE

Fauquier Golf Course Has Beautiful Setting

High above Lower Arrow Lake and on the front doorstep of New Fauquier townsite, 45 acres of land are being cleared to form a nine-hole golf course.

This project is being developed as the joint undertaking of Needles - Edgewood - Fauquier Centennial Committee and B.C. Hydro. New chairman of the Centennial Committee is Don Underwood, succeeding W. G. Millar, who has moved to Vernon.

A large, two storey log building, which served some 30 years as a fruit packing house for the pioneer Boden family, is being moved to the golf course where it will serve as a clubhouse. The axe work on this 22' x 32' log building is of unusually high standard.

"The Bodens were known for their neat axe work," reports Mrs. W. L. Devlin, Fauquier postmistress and a resident of the area sice 1907. Mrs. Mary Edith Boden, who, with her husband, established a pear and apple orchard at Fauquier around 1912, left the property only last year.

"I can remember fruit inspectors who visited the area over the years saying that the Boden orchard, while not the largest, was one of the best in the Arrow Lakes," Mrs. Devlin also recalled.

Intrepid's margin over Eagle was nine minutes, 45 seconds in the 24-mile race. She led from start to finish, with Bus Mosbacher at the helm.

He had worked with Cominco underground at the Sullivan Mine since 1942 after he was transferred here from Goldfield.

From 1931-1937 he had worked on the family farm at Meadowlake, Sask.

A single man, Mr. Gehl is survived by his mother, Mrs. Anna Gehl of Haney, B.C., one brother, Lee, of Meadowlake, and four sisters, Mrs. Tom Kelly of Vernon; Mrs. Harold Miller of Meadowbrook; Mrs. Irene Dennis of Haney and Mrs. Dorothy Dirks of Whonnock.

Castro's "Third" Way

From the start, Fidel Castro intended the conference of the Latin-American Solidarity Organization in Havana to lay the basis for a generally approved "third" way to revolution in Latin America. The other two possible ways are those advocated by Moscow and Peking, both of whom claim — as does Fidel — to be apostles of true Marxism-Leninism. China has, in effect, been absent from the Havana meetings. There were no Latin-American Communists of the Peking persuasion to defend or advocate the strictly Chinese way. But there were Latin-American Communists of the Moscow persuasion, albeit outnumbered, who stood firmly by the Russians' critique of the Castro approach.

Consequently the conference was from the start a confrontation between Moscow and Havana. That this would develop was virtually certain from the moment that the Russians chose the opening of the conference to give wide publicity — in Prague and in a monthly ideological journal — to a defense of the Moscow line and an oblique attack on Fidel Castro's theory of revolution. (The latter, of course, can ve summed up as armed struggle or guerrilla warfare now, with the intention of creating two, three or more Vietnams in Latin America or even farther afield.) And what gave this Russian pronouncement special sting was that Moscow used for it the voice — or more accurately the pen — of Luis Corvalan, leader of the Chilean Communist Party.

Mr. Corvalan has always been loyal to Moscow and has been voluble in advocating what the Russians call the peaceful road to socialism. Within the context of revolution, this is in some ways the antithesis of the Castro approach. Perhaps it could be said that Mr. Corvalan is the epitome of the Communist whom Fidel despises, the man who plans revolution from a comfortable office, wearing a tailor-made business suit. The Castro type of revolutionary — the fighter in shirt-sleeves — was perhaps best symbolized at the Havana gathering by the Venezuelan guerrilla leader, Francisco Prada, who significantly got one of the biggest ovations of all.

Mr. Corvalan invoked Lenin in his Moscow-sponsored article to show where the Russians think Castro is wrong. "Lenin," he wrote, "warned against the danger of adventures which, as a rule, lead to the useless loss of valuable lives of revolutionaries and to a retreat of that movement." But for all the attempts to paper over the cracks, the Havana meeting showed the Russians once again how hard it is to bring Fidel Castro and his romantic, sweaty anti-American partisans to heel.

Fidel still needs Soviet help at home — which presumably he will continue to get. But he is unlikely to get it abroad, where he will continue to plan his "Vietnams" against the United States and against Latin-American Governments with whom Moscow is quite ready to do business.

Vigilance, Not Coercion

The panelists who have been examining the question of whether doctors should screen potential political leaders for physical and mental disorders have had a fascinating wander in and around the subject.

There can be no doubt that men with both physical and mental disabilities have slipped through into political leadership in this and other countries. There can be no doubt that there can be very grave dangers when such men wield the instruments of power. Continuing pain can warp and blur judgment; undisclosed mental disturbances can generate national and international disasters.

Yet to insist that any politician suffering from serious physical or mental illness be scratched from leadership would have cost the world's public community Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte and Martin Luther, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy. Who could weigh the losses against the gains? And who is to judge the judges?

The fact is that there is no method, compatible with a democracy or even compatible with common sense, whereby those who are to lead can be vetted for their leadership qualities by anybody other than the public. Doctors, as doctors freely admit, can err; but even if they were above error and above corruption, they could still not be depended upon to select the leaders whom the people want and the people should have.

For one thing, leadership itself, as the panel agreed, is often the product of conflict, of what the clinic might diagnose as disturbance. For another thing, normality is not perfect stability, absolute maturity; it is disturbance and tension and anxiety, and moments of happiness and hours of insecurity. There is a little madman in every man.

Compulsory medical and psychiatric examinations would be an intolerable invasion of privacy to which free men could not submit; and by and large we prefer our leaders to be free men.

But it is still true that the health of its leaders is of vital concern to the community. And perhaps the best approach is that taken by Britain's Lord Moran when, to the horror of his protesting colleagues, he disclosed the medical history of his late patient, Sir Winston Churchill, and thereby also disclosed that a political party had cynically propped a sick old man in public office for political gain.

Perhaps it is just such post mortems that can serve society best, as the inquest serves it in another area. The politicians are warned. The public is alerted. The opposition is reminded to keep an eye on those in government seats and make itself troublesome. Arbitrary measures do not belong and when alertness fails it can be because the public sometimes prefers a touch of irrationality, and wishes it to fail.—Globe & Mail.

World's Most Coveted Decoration

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

More than 110 years and thousands of miles separate an Irish sailor named Charles Lucas and an Australian soldier named Kevin Wheatley. But together they span the history of the world's most coveted decoration, the Victoria Cross.

Their names are the first and last on the current list of 1,345 men whose bravery in battle has been recognized by the award of the Victoria Cross.

The VC winners have come from many races and countries. Together, living and dead, they form one of the great companies of mankind —linked by the recognition of personal courage which has earned the highest commendation their fellow men can give.

For the living, it is a dwindling company. Only 210 VCs were known to be alive early this year. And the number will undoubtedly fall steadily unless the Commonwealth again becomes engaged in a major war.

The Victoria Cross was first conceived during the Crimean War when Queen Victoria became concerned because there was no real way of recognizing exceptional bravery among the common soldiers of her armed forces.

She decided to institute the Victoria Cross which, she wrote, "we are desirous should be highly prized and eagerly sought after by the officers and men of our naval and military services."

The first VCs were distributed in 1856 by the Queen at a special ceremony in Hyde Park, London, to 62 men for brave deeds in the Crimea during the previous two years.

FROM RUSSIAN GUNS

Compared with the glittering stars and bejewelled decorations of other honors, the VC was and remains an unspectacular-looking award. Cast in bronze from Russian guns captured at the Battle of Sebastopol, it is a small cross bearing a crown, a rampant lion and the words For Valour. On the back is the name of the winner and the date of his award. It is suspended from a brass bar and maroon ribbon.

In the years since 1856, other decorations have been instituted to honor outstanding acts of bravery. But the Victoria Cross remains the ultimate honor.

Several factors have tended to shorten the lists of living VCs.

For one, the Commonwealth has enjoyed a period of relative peace during the last 20 years. Only six men have won the Victoria Cross since 1945 while dozens of former winners have died in the same period of age, wounds or illness.

In addition, modern warfare has involved an increasing reliance on long-distance weapons, reducing the number of occasions when conspicuous bravery "in the presence of the enemy" is likely to be necessary.

And not least of all, there has been a growing tendency in this century to award the VC for heroism which has resulted in the death of the hero.

The stories of the first and last VCs, Lucas and Wheatley, are clear illustrations of the prowess required for a Victoria Cross.

Lucas was the 20-year-old mate of the British warship Hecla on June 21, 1854, when a shell from a Russian shore battery fell on the deck of his ship in an early engagement of the Crimean War. Lucas picked up the shell and tossed it overboard, where it exploded harmlessly.

For his bravery, he was promoted to lieutenant the same day. Two years later, after the Queen had inaugurated the decoration, Lucas became the first to be awarded a VC. He eventually rose through the ranks to become a rear-admiral and died in 1914 at the age of 80.

In contrast, Wheatley did not live to learn of the honor conferred on him.

A warrant officer with one of the Australian training teams attached to the South Vietnamese Army, he was killed Nov. 13, 1965, when he and a wounded companion he insisted on helping were overtaken by a Viet Cong force.

Wheatley refused to retreat to safety when enemy fire started and remained to help his wounded fellow Australian before both were overrun and shot after a brave defence by Wheatley.

Although women have always been eligible to win the VC, all of the winners so far have been men.

The list includes four civilians—all Indians recognized for bravery in 19th century battles who might not have been honored under the conditions which now apply to the award. Similarly, six men were given the VC in its early years for bravery when the enemy was not at hand.

Three men have won the VC twice, an incredible feat in view of the rigorous standards for the award. And on three occasions, the sons of VC winners have themselves received a Victoria Cross. In addition, there are four sets of brothers who have won the honor.

The most stunning record probably belongs to Britain's Gough family. Charles and his brother Hugh won VCs in separate engagements during the Indian Mutiny of 1857-59 and Charles's son James received a VC in Somaliland in 1903.

The list of awards is headed by members of the British Army, whose total is 823. The Indian Army and its predecessor, the Honorable East India Company, count 153, including 101 earned in the turbulent years before 1914. British naval forces have 118 VC winners in their rolls and the RAF 31.

Australia counts 88 VCs. Canadians serving in Canadian uniform have won 79, not including one for pre-Confederation Newfoundland. The award also has gone to 23 Canadians serving with the British armed forces. New Zealand forces have won 21 VCs and South Africans 28. One each has gone to Fiji and African forces.

In some cases, awards went to men from other countries who had enlisted in Commonwealth forces. One of these is America's Unknown Soldier buried in Westminster Abbey here after the First World War.

In the years from 1856 to 1914, a total of 522 VCs were awarded, of which only 14 were posthumous. The First World War brought 634 awards, including 188 posthumously. Four were awarded in the years between world wars.

In the Second World War there were 182 VCs. Nearly half of those honored—87—were killed in action before they could receive their medal.

Canada's Next Chief Justice

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—A gentle-voiced jurist with a penchant for Chesterton and a reputation among lawyers as a champion of individual rights is to become the next chief justice of Canada.

John Robert Cartwright, still bright of eye and sharp of wit at 72, will take over as head of the Supreme Court of Canada Sept. 1. He was named Tuesday by Prime Minister Pearson to succeed Chief Justice Robert Taschereau, 70, who is retiring due to poor health.

The chief justice-designate has served on the nine-member Supreme Court since 1949, the year in which Parliament designated it as Canada's final court of appeal and wiped out the traditional avenue of appeal to the British Privy Council.

In the 18 years since, the quiet and scholarly judge has won the respect and admiration of lawyers across the country for his gentle but penetrating courtroom manner and his clearly-written judgments.

Mr. Justice Cartwright himself refuses to be drawn into a discussion of judicial principles or aims.

"I believe the bench, like the navy, should be a silent service," he said Tuesday after his appointment was announced. Judges should be read, not heard.

CONCERNED WITH RIGHTS

But close observers of the court say they have long noted his special interest in cases involving individual rights and freedoms. In recent years he appeared to have a particularly sympathetic attitude towards appeals involving persons convicted as habitual criminals and faced with a lifetime behind bars.

They say he leans to the view that the courts at all levels should pay very careful, even unusual, attention towards cases in which a person may lose his liberty forever.

A slight man with greying hair and moustache, has a deceptive grandfatherly appearance behind his horn-rimmed glasses. More than one lawyer has been jolted to see the head raise from study of a brief and stop him in mid-sentence with a polite but shattering query.

The judge is only three years from the automatic retirement age of 75 when he will have to relinquish his $35,000-a-year post, a level $5,000 above that of the other members of the court.

Born in Toronto of a distinguished family descended from United Empire Loyalists, he left law studies at the outbreak of the First World War to join the machine-gun section of the 3rd Toronto Battalion as a private.

WON MC

Twice wounded and twice returned to action, he was commissioned in the field, won the Military Cross for gallantry, served in later years on the staff of three generals and finished the war a captain. On the side, he acquired fluency in French.

Back in Toronto, he crammed his remaining three years of law study into one and graduated from Osgoode Hall with honors and a silver medal.

For the next 29 years he built up a sound law practice in Toronto devoted mainly to courtroom work in civil actions.

In 1946 he was selected as one of the special prosecutors in the espionage trials arising from Igor Gouzenko's revelations about the existence of a Soviet spy apparatus.

Mr. Justice Cartwright's chief relaxation is reading the works of the English poets with an occasional departure into quality detective fiction, particularly G. K. Chesterton.

On a wall in his office is a small watercolor by his first wife, who died last year, and an oil painting by their only child, Mrs. John D. Leitch of Toronto.

The judge two months ago married the former Mabel Ethelwyn Parmelee of Quebec City, widow of Brig. Arthur Tremaine.

Ireland's Contingent to Peace

By DAVE McINTOSH

KOKKINA, Cyprus (CP)—Perhaps it is their country's fearful experience with famine, perhaps their open-heartedness or perhaps just their love of swapping stories with anybody handy.

Whatever it is, Ireland's contingent in the United Nations force in Cyprus operates on a principle of compassion and humanitarianism seldom seen in the world's soldiery.

The traditional Irish greeting "you're welcome" and a hot glass of Gaelic coffee seem to help take the steam out of Greek and Turkish fighter alike.

Kokkina is a small Turkish enclave on the northwest coast of Cyprus where probably the bitterest inter-communal fighting of the Cypriot civil war took place in 1964. The Turkish air force had to raid the Greek villages overlooking barren Kokkina in August, 1964, to keep the Turks from being pushed into the sea.

There's no shooting now.

Somehow, with little food and living in appalling conditions, the 1,030 Turks here manage to hang on to their rocky perch beside the sea. Half of them live in tents, still an improvement over the caves they had to occupy for six months.

FOOD COMES IN CONVOY

The Turks had to give up nearby Mansoura, where the bullet-riddled stone houses now stare at passersby from empty window-frames, and two other villages as the Greeks tightened the noose around the enclave.

The Irish man seven observation posts on the heights around the villages and have marked the ceasefire line with white stones wandering through the sun-scorched hills.

Barefoot children run across the hot, sharp stones. Pitiful laundry hangs on the guy ropes of canvas tents. Chickens and goats wander among the mud-and-straw houses.

*Food arrives by road con*voy every Friday through the Greek lines It is supplied by the Red Cross. It is Kokkina's only way of staying alive. The Irish suspect arms arrive by submarine from Turkey.

The worst thing about Kokkina is that there is nothing for the adults or most of the children to do. The women sit in the tents all day long. Most of the men gather in the cafes to play cards. There is a school of sorts for children six to 11.

Here is the Cyprus tragedy in all its stark simplicity. The stubborn Turks who are trapped won't give in. The equally stubborn Greeks won't let them go.

"If your children acted this way, you'd spank them," said an Irish officer.

WORK MEANS PEACE

Each time a person in Kokkina needs hospital care, special arrangements have to be made by the UN to evacuate him by helicopter, jeep or taxi.

The Irish do things no UN force should have to do.

Some of the copper workings of the Cyprus Mining Corp. at Xeros, where the Irish have their headquarters, are beginning to run out and by the end of the year about 500 Turks employed there may be laid off.

The Irish have persuaded the company to explore for new deposits so that the Turks can keep working.

"We'll explore for copper ourselves if we have to," an Irishman said. "The more work, the less trouble there is."

In the six-day Israeli-Arab war, Commandant Thomas Wickham, an Irish officer serving with the UN truce supervisory organization, was shot in the back and killed by a Syrian.

The Moslem villagers of Kokkina made a wreath and sent it to Dublin for the funeral, not because Wickham had ever served in Cyprus but because he was an Irishman.

Right Winger Raps de Gaulle

PARIS (Reuters) — The leader of the right wing among President de Gaulle's supporters in Parliament attacked de Gaulle Thursday for his controversial support for French-speaking Canadians.

Valery Giscard d'Estaing, whose Independent Republican party provides 44 seats toward the Gaullists' thin majority in the National Assembly, also issued a strongly worded appeal to de Gaulle to reform his methods of government.

He said in a statement that de Gaulle's support in Quebec for the French-speaking Canadians was "contrary to one of the principles on which Gen. de Gaulle founded the recovery of France's prestige and influence —a refusal to interfere in the internal affairs of states."

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Aug. 19, 1967 . . .

Canadians paid a heavy toll 25 years ago today—in 1942—when units of the 2nd Division raided the French town of Dieppe during the Second World War. Of the nearly 5,000 men who crossed the English Channel, 3,369 were killed, wounded or captured. The main body of attackers was stalled on the beaches and only a handful of troops managed to fight their way into the down. Despite the losses the attack was regarded by military strategists as an invaluable lesson for future seaborne landings. VCs were awarded to Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt and Rev. John W. Foote.

1809—The first Canadian steamship was launched at Montreal.

1953—Mohammed Mossadegh was ousted from Iran.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1917, Italian troops attacked along a 30-mile front and took Austrian positions from Plava to the sea; *French troops captured im*portant German positions along an 11-mile front near Verdun and held the western heights of Aisne.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—troops landed at Dieppe the biggest raid until then of the war; the Russians abandoned Krasnodar in the Caucasus; Allied planes attacked Japanese warships in the northern Solomons.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1917—Marshall Petain with 16 divisions made the last big attack at Verdun after a six-day bombardment, the Austrian line in front of Monte Hermada.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today, in 1942 — Winston Churchill conferred in Cairo with Viscount Gort, governor of Malta; Russian forces repulsed a German drive on Stalingrad at Kletskaya; three German submarines were reported sunk in a week off the Brazilian coast.

Cranbrook Woman Wins Quilt Prize

A Cranbrook woman captured second prize in the British Columbia quilt-making contest.

Mrs. Victor Pingitore, 327 Cranbrook Street North, Cranbrook, was second to Mrs. Eldra Robertson of Clinton, L. J. Wallace, provincial centennial committee chairman, announced.

Third prize went to Mrs. Augusta Schuetze of Penticton.

Mr. Wallace is to present the prizes at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver, Aug. 23.

The quilt competition was a project of the Women's Activities Sub-Committee of the British Columbia Centennial Committee. Rules called for an applique quilt, on which the design is imposed and sewn on the hand-quilted quilt. Design required was of a centennial or historical theme relative to British Columbia or Canada.

Preliminary judging took place in 17 districts, and a total of 33 quilts reached the PNE for final judging. Judges were Miss Charlotte Black, Mrs. Penny Gouldstone and Miss Margaret Lewis.

Mrs. Pearl Steen, chairman of the sub-committee, said, "The winning quilt was awarded 98 points out of a possible 100, and was praised by the judges as conceived, subtle color scheme, with inventive use of applique."

Under contest rules, the winning quilt becomes the property of the British Columbia Centennial Committee, and will be presented to the Provincial Museum and Archives in Victoria.

Along with others among the finalists, it will be on display in the Home Art Building during the PNE.

"Singing Nun" Tries Night Club

MONTREAL (CP)—Luc Dominique, the Singing Nun from Belgium, is testing her appeal in the highly-competitive nightclub business in Quebec.

Then the blue-eyed blonde, who plays a guitar and whose recorded composition of Dominique three years ago topped the hit parade, will decide whether to continue performing before live audiences in Belgium.

"I was quite nervous about my appearance in front of a live audience," the ex-nun said after a recent nightclub show in Montreal. A six-week engagement in Quebec City will take up most of this summer.

"Whether I accept other nightclub engagements on my return to Belgium will depend largely on my success here."

For four years the public has known Miss Dominique only as a voice and a photograph on an album cover.

Her fans on two continents call her the Singing Nun, but she prefers to be called Luc Dominique, the name she chose on leaving the Dominican convent at Fishermont, near Brussels, last year.

"I belonged to a missionary order and have continued the missionary work outside the convent through my songs," she says.

THEMES TOPICAL

Running through most of her songs are religious and social themes about Christians in a modern world—from moral values to protests against the inequality of women.

"My native country is often guilty of unequal treatment of women," she says.

One song she has written, Le Temps des Femmes, is addressed to men. It says women are not objects but intelligent beings.

The 33-year-old singer began her career when girls on retreat at the convent wanted souvenirs of her songs and asked her to record some.

Her songs do not always deal with religious themes. "Even at the convent I sang songs I had learned as a guide and now my performance includes every kind."

All the songs Miss Dominique sings are her own compositions. She learned to play guitar through the help of a friend before she entered the convent.

Make the Classified Way Pay

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I went to a yard party and found the most unique idea I have ever seen.

Know what they did?

The hostess used aluminum colanders, sprayed on the outside with a flat paint, to cover the light bulbs strung across the patio. The colanders, placed under the bulbs, were tied onto the light cord with pieces of string.

The point is, that as most colanders come with a design like stars, etc., it made the lights twinkle and took away the glare.

Wasn't that cute? They were a real hit!

Anne Newman

Now this is what I call perfectly fantabulous! I wonder why someone hasn't thought of it before? Get busy, gals . . . this gives you a clever idea for your next backyard get-together.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

We have four girls and I sew most of their clothes. After I make a dress that has buttons, I sew the extra buttons to a matching scrap of material and this scrap goes into my button can.

When it is necessary to replace a button, I simply match the material. This is much easier than trying to locate the button. It also keeps me from using my extra buttons on another garment.

Joan Miller

DEAR HELOISE:

Nothing cleans out the lint, etc., from the bottom of your purse faster and better than the nozzle of your vacuum cleaner. Try it!

C. C.

I did—and it does! Just be sure you have everything out of your purse that you don't want to see disappear up that vacuum hose.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's another use for your nylon net that I discovered by accident.

While cleaning the clothes dryer of accumulated lint, we found the long corrugated pipe to the outside vent almost plugged. Ours is a good eight or ten feet long. How to clean it?

We used a plumber's snake tool with a big gob of net fastened to one end, dropped the other end through the pipe and pulled it through a couple of times.

It cleaned it out slick as a whistle.

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

When I get disgusted and tired doing the dishes I glance at the following little verse I have hanging in my kitchen:

Thank God for dirty dishes,
they have a tale to tell,
While others may go hungry,
we're eating very well,
With home and happiness,
I shouldn't fuss,
By the stack of evidence,
God's been very good to us.

Mrs. B. Robinson

DEAR HELOISE:

Does your little girl have that very slippery straight hair in which no bobby pins, barrettes or ribbons will stay put for five minutes? Mine does!

After I decided to let her bangs grow and fix her hair to the side, I tried everything to keep it from hanging over her eyes.

Finally I found the simple solution! I just wound small rubber bands round and round the under part of her barrettes and eureka! Now they don't slip and she looks like a pretty little doll again.

Margaret Hamilton

DEAR HELOISE:

I do not like the way the regular pastry brushes become stiff and wiry from repeated use. No amount of washing seems to soften them.

So I bought a man's shaving brush, boiled it good in water and use it instead.

It is much nicer as it is always soft and pliable.

Farewell Tea Enjoyed

SILVERTON — A farewell tea for Mrs. Alma Richards was given at the home of Mrs. Sybil Tarnowski.

Delicious refreshments were served on the lawn by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Daisy Welch and Mrs. Alma Wright. The tea table was centered beautifully with a lovely vase of calendulas. Mrs. Tarnowski presented Mrs. Richards with two lovely pictures of Slocan Lake and a card signed by all present and those who could not attend.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Richards have been residing in Silverton for the past 11 years and Mrs. Richards will be leaving shortly for Vancouver where she will join her husband and where they will make their new home.

Among provisions imported by the Russians for their Moskva restaurant at Expo 67 were six tons of caviar.

More Than Memories

CALGARY (CP)—Parasols, petticoats and picture hats are more than memories in Mrs. Karl Kraemer's basement.

The costumes that hang in her workroom are the result of 20 years' research and sewing on five centuries of women's fashions. They range from sumptuous gowns of the Elizabethan era to the skimpy, high-shouldered dresses of the early 1940s.

Mrs. Kraemer collects and reproduces dress designs of the past, not for a business but as a hobby. She can copy dress from an old magazine picture and she combs auction sales and rummage tables for authentic trimmings and accessories.

More than 70 replicas fill a dress rack in her basement and overflow to a garden rake suspended from the ceiling. Against one wall are 15 apple baskets filled with patterns, and two chests of drawers hold material, Mrs. Kraemer says is enough to make 70 more costumes.

Hanging shelves are filled with hats; cardboard boxes hold lace, purses, gloves and jewelry. Tacked up to form a partition is a bedspread on which Mrs. Kraemer pins pictures and ideas so they won't be hidden away and forgotten.

"I've been collecting for 20 years for Centennial," she said. "I had so much fun. There are so many things more I want to do, they all go through my mind at night and I can't sleep.

"I used to do the odd bit of dressmaking. When I got paid for anything, I'd go right out and buy more material."

Fabrics range from cotton to silk and brocade. Although all the dresses are of new cloth, one black satin model has a beaded front made 75 years ago and many are trimmed with lace older still.

When she can't get old lace, Mrs. Kraemer uses lace curtain material for an authentic look.

She said she finds real treasures at auction sales. Recently she came home from one at Three Hills, Alta., with several boxes bought at 50 cents each.

"I didn't know what I had until I got home."

Inside were hand-made trimmings and cord 75 or 100 years old, white kid gloves dated 1867, gold hooks and eyes and old curtain draw-cords which she gave to her grandchildren for skipping ropes.

After 20 years of collecting clothing, Mrs. Kraemer is showing her fashions for the first time this year in centennial events.

The present collection is not the complete product of her work. A few years ago she had so many costumes that she sold some to a masquerade store and started all over again.

Canada POWs Still Suffer

MONTREAL (CP) — Although more than 20 years have passed, ex-prisoners of war from Japanese camps may still be suffering from "a chronic depressive state, masked by tension and anxiety," a study by a Montreal research team shows.

Details of the findings of Drs. V. A. Kral, L. H. Pazder and B. T. Wigdor, who examined veterans now living in Montreal, Ottawa and the Eastern Townships of Quebec, appear in the Canadian Psychiatric Journal.

The 20 veterans examined were among the survivors of the Japanese attack on Hong Kong on Christmas Day, 1941.

In their subsequent imprisonment in Japan for nearly four years they suffered starvation, serious disease and hard labor with severe beatings and constant humiliation, the two doctors and one psychologist report.

The "control" group in the study comprised brothers of the former prisoners who also had seen service in the Second World War. There was little difference between the two groups in age, education or marital status.

COMPLAIN OF TENSION

The report says they complain about "nervous tension, anxiety, feeling depressed, fatigue, slowness, sleep disturbance, and some also about diminished sexual interest and potency. . . ."

Your Individual Horoscope

For Sunday, August 20, 1967

MARCH 21 to APRIL 20 (Aries)—Some patterns changing, but you can prevent the worthwhile from being diluted with froth. Inattentiveness prevalent. And some high-spirited notions to direct carefully!

APRIL 21 to MAY 21 (Taurus) Venus, favorable, urges all your best instincts and sympathies to help this day get off to a bright beginning, and remain on course. Speak or be silent, as discretion dictates.

MAY 22 to JUNE 21 (Gemini) An active type of day. Surely you should enjoy this! If you wish to rest, do so, but try to get some exercise. Continue rapport with associates.

JUNE 22 to JULY 23 (Cancer) It may seem monotonous to you to have to re-check, review to offset small hazards and keep things running nicely. But aspects suggest that you stay on guard, alerted, and composed.

JULY 24 to AUGUST 23 (Leo) Look to the things of the mind and soul to prevail in difficult or tedious hours. A combination of pluck, strength of purpose and feeling of adventure should make this a good day.

AUGUST 24 to SEPTEMBER 23 (Virgo)—Favorable Mercury influences stimulate enterprise, perception. You can gain through thoughtful communications and the acquisition of more knowledge.

SEPTEMBER 24 to OCTOBER 23 (Libra)—A hint of dynamics, restlessness in the air. Also plenty of chance for you who wield a sober arm and judicious word. Note methods that can save time, increase competence.

OCTOBER 24 to NOVEMBER 22 (Scorpio)—A better-than-average day — one which encourages your best efforts. Stretch the imagination without overplaying it. Concentrate on new mehods, ideas.

NOVEMBER 23 to DECEMBER 21 (Sagittarius) — Auspicious for just about anything that strengthens the link between men of good will and counteracts indiscretion, hotheadedness and the dangers of blind thrusting ahead.

DECEMBER 22 to JANUARY 20 (Capricorn)—You can coast on your laurels if you do not actually waste time or dissipate talents. The restful day is also useful, indulged with proper purpose. Do a favor if you can.

JANUARY 21 to FEBRUARY 19 (Aquarius) — A fine Uranus aspect encourages your especial know-how, sensitivity to situations and reasoning powers. These are winners wherever your intuition and common-sense are really at work. Shun excitability.

FEBRUARY 20 to MARCH 20 (Pisces)—Some situations complicated. Be sure you have all the facts before making decisions. Whether day is for recreation or you have strenuous tasks, remain serene.

YOU BORN TODAY are quick to judge and act; generous; usually go about with a smile, but can be annoyed at dull or inefficient people. You grasp situations and can take just the right step to capture the prize offering at the strategic hour. The Leoite rises to great heights once he (or she) gets on the right path and stays on it. Direct your industriousness into useful channels; finish what is underway without getting off on other tacks. You are a magnanimous, outgoing, lovable, and very capable person, with few faults. But curb those few, or they will overshadow your better side! Curb impetuousness, excessive pride, a tendency to domineer. Twenty-Three Were Killed In Worst Mass Murder

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The worst mass murder in Canadian history was Sept. 9, 1949, when J. Albert Guay, a 33-year-old Quebec jeweller with a wife insured for $10,000 and a girl friend, blew up a Canadian Pacific airliner with his unwanted wife and 22 others aboard.

Three people were hanged for their part in the first murder-by-planeload. Guay was hanged along with Mrs. Arthur Pitre, who put a time-bomb made by Generoux Ruest on board the plane. Ruest was also hanged.

First mass murder in Canada was the infamous "Dr. H. H. Holmes", born Herman Mudgett, who killed for insurance. He is estimated to have killed 10 people—mostly secretaries and nurses—before being caught in Toronto in 1894 when he was hanged.

Earle Nelson was hanged at Winnipeg Jan. 13, 1928, after he had strangled 21 women and a baby on a 7,000-mile trail from San Francisco to Winnipeg.

Raymond Cook, 22, escaped from Ponoka mental hospital, 24 miles north of Red Deer in July, 1959, while awaiting court appearance on a murder charge. The bodies of his father, stepmother and their five children were found at the family home in Stettler, 190 miles southeast of Edmonton.

Cook was convicted of shooting his father and sentenced to be hanged, but appealed. He lost the appeal and was hanged.

A former Social Credit MLA, John Clark, shot his wife, four children, hired man and a visitor in 1956 on the family farm near Erskine, 50 miles east of Red Deer, and then committed suicide.

Andrew Creighton, 22, attempted suicide after shooting his wife, her two pre-school children and her mother, near Brocket, 45 miles southwest of Lethbridge in 1960.

Texans Drop Opener 14-2 to Sarnia Nine

SASKATOON (CP) — Strong relief pitching and a heavy hitting attack sparked the Sarnia, Ont., Drawbridge Inn to an easy 14-2 victory over Nelson Texans of British Columbia Friday in Canadian Junior Baseball Championship action.

The victory moved sarnia to the semi-finals on the winner's side of the draw, while Nelson will compete in the losers' section of the modified double-knockout tournament.

Two other games were being played Friday. Fredericton Vikings, the New Brunswick entry, were to meet North Battleford, Sask. Edmonton Blue Willows were scheduled to play Manitoma's Brandon Parklanes.

In the opening game, Randy Mair of Sarnia took over from starting hurler Rick Gamble in the fifth inning when Gamble left the mound with arm trouble.

Mair went on to pitch 4 2/3 innings, allowing only one hit and fanning seven. He allowed only three walks.

Third baseman Craig Cameron had a perfect day with a pair of doubles, and a single in three trips to the plate. Centre fielder Jim Rodrigues hit a two-run homer over the left field fence in the fourth inning.

Steve Loveless, the first of two Nelson pitchers, was tagged with the loss. He was relieved by Reg Chernenko in the fourth.

Benefit Game for Tucker

Queens' Error Opens Door, Giving Markins Semi-Finals

A seventh-inning error allowed Tim Horkoff to race home with the winning run, giving Markin Equipment a 4-3 victory over Queens Hotel and the right to meet Nelson Hotel in the Nelson Fastball League finals.

Markins won the semi-final series aginst the Queens two games to one.

The seventh-inning run resulted from Horkoff's single, Kay Savinkoff's sacrifice and a two-out error that allowed Andy Ozeroff to reach base, and Horkoff to race home.

Markins scored one run in the second inning and added a pair in the third, while Queens picked up all three of their's in the third.

The first game of the best-of-five finals gets underway Monday night in Nelson with Nelson Hotel hosting Markins in a benefit game for Gerry Tucker. Tucker, a member of the Nelson club, was injured in a boating accident last week and remains in hospital.

A former member of the RCMP and a former sportscaster for radio CKLN in Nelson, Tucker fell from a boat, getting cut by the propellor for a total of 80 stitches, 40 of them in the face. He was in satisfactory condition in Kootenay Lake General Hospital Friday night.

Monday's game will be a benefit contest for Tucker with all proceeds going to the injured player.

Fred Jmaeff, pitching his third consecutive game of the series, limited Markins to only five hits, four of them singles, but suffered the loss. He walked only three and struck out one.

Jack Markin started for Markins, giving way to Mike Matorkoff who took credit for the victory. The two combined for a six-hitter, striking out three and not issuing a walk.

Markins got their first run in the second inning when Art Ozeroff walked, Andy Ozeroff singled and W. Keriaff's sacrifice sent Ozeroff home. In the third, an error started things off. Horkoff was safe on an error and one out later, Jack Voykin was hit by a pitch. Andy Ozeroff's long single scored two runs.

Four singles gave Qnueens their runs in the third.

Syl Benedetti led off with a single and Frank Hufty was safe on an error. One out later, Bob Plager singled, driving in the first run. With two out, Don Segur slammed a run-scoring single and the third run scored on Bill Burdenie's single.

The Queens failed to threaten in any other inning, but Markins, threatened only in the first without scoring.

Yanks Stop Twins

By THE ASSOCIATED P)RESS

New York Yankees just missed handing the first-place Minnesota Twins a disastrous double defeat in their twi-night bargain bill Friday night.

The Yankees snapped the seven-game winning streak of the American League leaders by taking the opener 1-0 on Steve Barber's six-hitter and Joe Pepitone's RBI single with the bases loaded in the first inning.

The Twins trailed 3-2 going into the ninth inning of the second game, but they salvaged a split by winning 4-3 on a two-run homer by pinch hitter Rich Reese.

A two-run homer by Pete Ward in the sixth inning gave Chicago White Sox a 3-1 victory over Baltimore Orioles and pulled the sox within one game of the Twins in the tight AL race.

The start of the game, the first of a scheduled twi-night doubleheader, was delayed more than two hours by rain.

SINGLES IN RUN

Eddie Mathews, traded to Detroit Tigers by Houston Astros Thursday night, singled home one run and helped the third-place Tigers blank Cleveland Indians 4-0. The game was called with one out in the last of the fifth because of a downpour.

Gary Bell pitched the fourth-place Boston Red Sox to a 3-2 victory over California Angels with a four-hitter. Slugger Tony Conigliaro of the Sox suffered a cracked cheek bone when hit by a pitched ball in the fourth inning and will be out for at least three weeks.

Tim Cullen's three-run homer in the ninth gave Washington Senators a 7-6 victory over Kansas City Athletics in the other AL game.

The first-place St. Louis Cardinals continued to pad their big lead in the National League by defeating Houston 5-3 for their seventh straight. Mike Shannon and Julian Javier each drove in two runs to lead the Cards.

Slocan Ball Teams Play Semis Sunday

The league champions, New Denver - Silverton Combines will host the Slocan Park at New Denver Centennial Park in a doubleheader Sunday afternoon in the first game of the Kaslo-Slocan Arrow Lakes senior baseball league semi-finals.

The best-of-three series originally scheduled to open last weekend was postponed due to the number of players firefighting.

Each club will endeavor to take two straight wins Sunday enabling the winner to meet either Slocan City or Kaslo playing off the other half of the semi-finals for the championship.

Slocan Park has formed a stronger club than ever before since their organization and are under the coaching of Pete Cheveldave while the Combines with their rookies and veterans will try to break their jinx of continually losing out in the semi-finals or finals.

The New Denver-Silverton Combines, starring righthander Eddie Elsmore along with youthful Dougal Greenan and Terry Minnis will be sharing the mound duties while young K. Savinkoff, Fred Jmaeff and M. Esovoloff will be on the hill for Slocan Park. These two clubs have met each other twice in regular league action with Combines coming out on top with scores of 17-4 and 3-0. If a third game is necessary, this will be played in Slocan Park next weekend.

The semi-final doubleheader begins at 1 p.m.

PGA Rained Out

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) —The executive of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association hastily decided to make the 54-hole championship tournament a 36-hole affair today after a rain storm washed out the second round.

All second round scores were wiped out and the tournament continues on a new and second final round today.

The draw is the same as in the washed out round.

Should there be a tie after 36 holes, there is to be an 18-hole playoff Sunday.

In Friday's play about half the field had finished. All the first-round leaders and favorites were on the course.

George Knudson, with an opening 68, was one under par after eight holes and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., runner-up at 67, was one over after nine.

Clay Married

CHICAGO AP — Cassius Clay, the deposed world heavyweight boxing champion, was married to Belinda Boyd, 17, in a Black Muslim ceremony Friday night.

LEAFS OUT TO EVEN SERIES WITH JETS

Nelson Maple Leafs tonight seek a split of their two-game midsummer hockey series with Spokane Jets when they travel to the Washington city.

The Leafs, Western International Hockey League, B.C. and Alberta senior hockey champions last season, dropped a 7-5 verdict to the runner-up Jets in the first game in early July in Nelson.

But the Leafs take a vastly changed lineup into tonight's return engagement. Added to the lineup will be netminder Seth Martin, defenceman Gary Kilpatrick, Shelly Atwell and Frank Carlson and forwards Terry Minnis and Howie Hornby.

Rounding out the lineup will be netminder Don Holmes, defencemen Bob Plager, Hugh Hooker and Frank Arnett and forwards Gail Holden, Carl Chwachka, Miles Desharnais, Leroy Mowery, Brian Russill, Billy Martin, Ed Legare and Al Holm.

While the Saturday night game is the spotlight of the weekend, Spokane general-manager-coach Colin Kilburn has other activities lined up to entertain the Leafs. Included is a Sunday golf tournament and anyone from Nelson travelling down for he game is welcome to enter the tournament and asked to contact the Leafs before leaving Nelson.

The Leafs have only seven players from the team that swept all before them until they ran against Calgary Spurs in the Western Canada Allan Cup finals last spring. In the first game, they had the majority of their club here, but most of the players can't make it back for this contest.

CHOSEN WELL

But the replacements are wise choices. Martin is rated the best amateur goalie in Canada and one of the best in the world. Kilpatrick and Plager are both entering the National Hockey League this year — Plager for the second time — with expansion clubs. Martin is also turning pro this year . . . with St. Louis Blues of the NHL.

Atwell is a big blueliner who is well known to Nelson hockey fans, having played for the Leafs before moving to the coast and UBC. Carlson is another ex-Leaf. He played with the Nelson club until three years ago, played one year with Kimberley Dynamiters then retired.

Minnis is a big, solid junior forward from Notre Dame Knights who has trained with the Leafs in past years, and also with Rossland Warriors. Desharnias played in the July contest, another ex-Leaf who moved to the coast and UBC, where he has starred for the Thunderbirds.

The line of Martin-Legare-Holm was picked up intact from Rossland Warriors to fill in the gap.

FAIR PLAY, MR. BENNETT . . .

The following is the text of a letter addressed to Hon. W. A. C. Bennett, Premier of British Columbia, by IWA Regional President Jack Moore.

"Dear Sir:

"First, on behalf of our organization, I should like to thank your government for appointing such an able man as Mr. Justice Craig Munroe to act as a Mediator in the dispute between our Union and the lumber employers in the interior of the province.

"However, just prior to your announcement of this appointment one of your Ministers, without hearing any of the facts possessed by our Research Department on the state of the industry, publicly sided with the employers: that woodworkers doing the same work in one part of the province could not be paid as much as those working in another section of the province.

"The section of the province this Minister was referring to (the Interior) also happens to have a higher cost of living than the coastal area, and his advocacy of maintaining lower wages in an area with a higher cost of living simply means that he is advocating that people in one part of this bountiful and wealthy province should have lower standards than people living in other parts.

"I am certain that the Honourable Mr. Williston was speaking for himself and on behalf of those of his constituents who control the forest area in northern British Columbia rather than making a policy statement on behalf of the government of this province, for it is inconceivable to me that any government would deliberately adopt a policy denying proper living standards for groups of its people only because of the location of their homes.

"On behalf of the IWA we would request that your government ensure that no further inflammatory outbursts are made by any Minister of the Crown until after Mr. Justice Munroe has been able to ascertain the facts from all the evidence he will be presented by both sides to the dispute.

"For Ministers of the Crown to publicly put themselves on the side of either the union or management in any kind of dispute before or during hearings to be held by a Mediator might leave the inference in the minds of some that political pressure was being exerted on an impartial umpire in a dispute — a situation which is eminently unfair to the man who has taken on the onerous task of mediating a dispute — and extremely unfair to the party against whom such a Minister may have spoken."

Yours respectfully,

J. A. Moore

President.

MARKET TRENDS

TORONTO (CP) — Blue chips came under heavy selling pressure while speculatives rallied on the Toronto Stock Exchange Friday.

Inco paced the decline, sliding 3¾ to 104¾. Last week the company announced a drop in six-months earnings. However, a company spokesman could give no reason for Friday's loss.

CPR, which announced a sharp drop in earnings earlier in the week, tumbled 1¼ to 67½ and Falconbridge 1¾ to 89¼.

As a result the industrial index, the key indicator of the market's performance, was off 1 to 169.63.

On the plus side of the ledger, ITL Industries rose 1⅞ to 42½, Algoma Steel 1⅛ to 27⅞ and Western Canadian Seed 60 cents to 3.25.

Speculatives gained momentum following two days of profit taking.

Consolidated Bellekeno was the most active issue, up 3½ to 17 cents on 650,000 shares. The stock climbed 5½ Thursday.

Among other speculatives, Satellite advanced 6 to 75 cents on 255,5000 shares and D'Eldona 15 cents to 2.45 on 232,000.

On index, golds were up .82 to 181.24, base metals .77 to 103.22 and western oils 1.43 to 199.99. Volume was 5,483,000 shares compared with 5,151,000 Thursday.

MONTREAL (CP)—After remaining mixed for the larger part of the session Friday, stocks dipped significantly near the close and at the final bell most major sections showed fractionally lower. Trading was light.

One analyst said the majority of corporations are forecasting earnings per share at levels close to those of last year, or even lower.

Declines beat advances 54 to 44 on the Montreal list and 91 to 86 on both Montreal exchanges combined.

International Nickel took a 2½-point drop late in the day, to 106. CPR and Falconbridge Nickel each dipped one point to 67½ and 90 respectively and Canada Cement and IAC ½ each to 38 and 22¼.

NORANDA ADVANCES

Noranada added 1½ points at 57½ and Algoma ⅞ at 27⅞.

Atlantic Sugar was the most active industrial in turnover of 9,275 shares, rising ¾ to 12½.

Speculatives moved higher on the Canadian Stock Exchange. Midepsa climbed 40 cents to $2.85 and Brunswick 30 cents to $6.80. Peace River Mining and United Asbestos each climbed 15 cents to $8.95 and $5.75 respectively.

Industrial volume was 188,000 shares and mines and oils 1,150,100 shares, compared with 205,5500 and 1,013,700 Thursday.

On index, industrials eased .39 at 171.98; utilities .81 at 146.06; papers .28 at 110.06; banks added .01 at 130.92. The composite index was .44 lower to 162.99.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in quiet trading Friday on the Vancouver Stock Exchange as only 917,925 shares were traded.

The industrials average was .46 higher at 163.91, the western mines average was up .52 at 166.00 and the pipelines average was .86 lower at 151.52.

Leading trader was Vanmetals on the mining board. It traded 55,900 shares to close at 30 cents, 1½ cents higher. Other leading mining issues included Buttle Lake, .02 higher at 1.25, Brando, unchanged at 7.70, Trojan Consolidated unchanged at .38½, and Norcan, down .01 at .61.

First National Mortgage led the industrials on a volume of 1,500 shares and closed unchanged at 2.90. Cunningham Drugs was .50 higher at $12, Pacific Western Airlines unchanged at 13.75, Trans Mountain Pipelines .13 higher at 21.75 and Western Pacific Products .25 higher at 6.50.

Plains Petroleum was the most active issue of the oils board closing 2 cents higher at .67 on a volume of 42,500. Other active oil issues were Merit Oil ½ cent higher at .13½, Sunlight Oil .05 higher at 1.02 and Peace River Petroleum .01½ lower at .26.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market Friday ended a losing week with a slight gain, just another of the narrow movements it has been making from day to day.

Volume was 8,260,000 shares compared with 8,790,000 Thursday.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up more than three points in the morning, closed with a small gain of .81 at 919.04.

Analysts said economic news continues to show steady improvement. There also is abundant cash in customers' accounts ready to be committed to the stock market.

But Wall Street seemed to be hesitating because of the size and timing of the proposed surtax on incomes, the possibility of an auto strike in September and the unknown reverberations from the September election in South Vietnam.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dipped .3 to 337.3.

BID REJECTED

Allis-Chalmers was the most active stock, off 7¼ at 35½ on 301,500 shares as directors of the company refused a second and higher bid from Ling-Temco-Vought to take over the company.

News that Bethlehem had raised base prices on hot rolled steel plates by $4 a ton—the first rise in nearly four years—had only a slightly bullish effect on steel stocks.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 8 cents to $52.59.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock index rose .15 to 94.78.

After the close, the New York exchange announced the short-interest in the month ended Aug. 15 had risen 601,071 shares to 16,454,981.

Among Canadian issues, Granby Mining gained ¼. International Nickel lost 2⅝, Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines ¼, Alcan, Massey-Ferguson and Walker Gooderham ⅛.

Habitat is revolutionary but architect Moshe Safdie says it could be the solution to urban living problems.

HABITAT

HOME IS A CONCRETE BOX

But a young Montreal architect and his family find living there is great

By James Quig
Weekend Magazine

HABITAT 67, Expo's controversial housing exhibit, has been called a lot of things since it started to shape up in Montreal but Anthony Peters and his family are among the very few who can call it home. And how sweet it is — mice or no mice.

Peters, a young Montreal architect, has lived at Habitat since May with his wife Gwyneth, son Miles, 5, and daughter Lynette, 3. "We figured 1967 was going to be a year to remember, especially in Montreal," he explains, "so why not do it up right by living right here on the Expo site."

If you are among the millions of people who have visited Expo, you have likely seen Habitat's way-out mass of grey concrete not far from Expo's main entrance, Place D'Accueil. If you haven't you should know that at Expo, where a lot of things are pretty weird, Habitat is one of the weirdest of all.

The project is about four city blocks long, 300 feet wide, 120 feet high and generally pyramidic in shape. It is made up of 354 units or boxes of pre-cast concrete measuring 38½ feet long, 17½ feet wide and 10 feet high. These boxes, when placed side by side and on top of each other, make up the project's 158 houses. There are 19 types of houses — depending on how the boxes are arranged — that contain from one to four bedrooms. (The boxes were fabricated in a plant adjacent to the site.)

The structure is 13 levels high. The top 11 are the houses; the ground level is the parking area for 175 cars and the lowest level is for building services. Three elevators serve major pedestrian streets at the ground, sixth and tenth levels. The streets are open-air but are sheltered from the winds that blow in off the St. Lawrence river by a glass balustrade and a curved transparent plastic screen. The whole thing cost $22,195,920.

Habitat is the brainchild of Moshe Safdie, 28, who came to Canada from his native Israel about 12 years ago. He believes high density living can and should be a lot more fun than it is in today's conventional, box-like apartment buildings which he considers "unfit for human consumption."

"The average family wants privacy, its own garden, parks, sunlight, fresh air and, equally important, a sense of identity with its home," he said. "Habitat is a complete environment because it has these requirements."

But what is it really like to live there? When the Peters family moved in they planned to stay only for the duration of the fair — six months. They wanted to be close to Expo and more important, they wanted to know what Habitat had to offer. Soon after they moved in they decided it had a lot to offer. They loved it and now they don't want to move.

Their decision to stay has a lot to do with the fact that they love Habitat's weird, futuristic environment but it also has to do with Anthony Peters and his dislike for gardening.

In 1960 he purchased 17,000 square feet of wooded land in Préville on the south shore of the St. Lawrence river near Montreal and built himself a large split-level home complete with six bedrooms, three-and-a-half bathrooms, recreation room, the works. He and Gwyneth then awaited the birth of Miles and had sweet visions of the good life among their 100-year-old elms.

In no time at all, however, Anthony Peters discovered his idea of the good life had nothing whatsoever to do with cutting all that grass and caring for all those flower beds.

"It was too much like work. We had never lived in a big house and we were not ready for all that space. The maintenance was a menace. We liked the greenery but we didn't enjoy cutting it. All in all I guess we realized we were more urban-minded than we had known."

Then along came Expo and Habitat — Moshe Safdie's idea of the good life. The Peters, up to here with grass, trees and flowers, decided to give it a try.

"I was a little worried about it all," confessed Mrs. Peters. "After living in that big house I couldn't imagine where we would put things. I still don't know what to do with our grand piano."

Right now their lives are very hectic because they are living on the site of the greatest show on earth — Expo. Everybody wants to visit them even though visitors have to pay $2.50 at the Expo entrance before they can come calling.

"And I have to pay baby-sitters and cleaning ladies an extra $2.50 every time I need them," said Mrs. Peters. "It gets expensive." Especially expensive if you pay $470 rent each month as the Peters do at Habitat where rents during Expo range from $330 to $750.

But friends don't seem to mind paying their way in. "Everybody gets a kick out of coming to Habitat and we enjoy it. After all that's why we moved in. Funny though how as soon as we got here the members of the car club I belong to decided it was my turn to host our monthly meeting," Mr. Peters said.

The Peters live on the ground floor of Habitat away from the exhibit section through which thousands of wide-eyed visitors flock every day. They decided on the ground floor because of the children.

"It is designed for family living but we just don't feel safe about letting the children go up to the higher levels. They have the run of the ground floor and feel they own it all but we don't let them go to the playground up near the top," said Mrs. Peters.

The unit they live in overlooks the St. Lawrence river but Mrs. Peters does not worry about the children falling in the water which is very fast in back of their house. "They can understand the danger of water. They don't get too close," she said.

Furthermore, the house has several windows that give them not only a wonderful view of the river but Miles and Lynette can also look out of their bedroom windows and see the pavilions on Notre Dame Island, the minirail, Expo Express, helicopters and hovercraft.

"It's all pretty wild," Mrs. Peters said. "A bit 1984, you know. All sorts of things to see. It makes us all feel very alive."

It is also an ideal way to see a world's fair. Nearly every day Gwyneth takes the children out to see a pavilion or two and because they know they are going to be there for the duration there is never a need to rush. When they get tired they simply come home.

Mrs. Peters enjoys watching Expo visitors and their reaction to Habitat. "Every so often I will hear someone say that it is just an experimental exhibit and that nobody really lives here. I always speak up and tell them I live here and that it is wonderful."

A lot of people say they find Habitat's mass of concrete rather grey, gloomy and cold. But not the Peters. Mr. Peters said he gets a different feeling every time he looks out a window.

"The sun is constantly casting shadows on it and the effects are very interesting. It is always changing as the sun moves. It's like living in the middle of a Henry Moore sculpture. You get a new view at every turn."

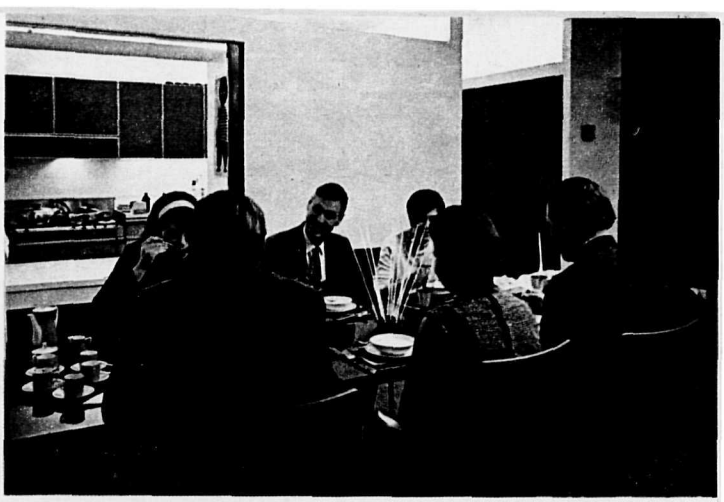
They also enjoy the spacious patio that overlooks the river. You can get to it from either of their bedrooms and from the living room. It is a wonderful place to entertain guests. Despite its high-density design they find they do identify with their unit as Moshe Safdie predicted.

"We can walk right around it and feel it belongs to us. You can't do that in an ordinary apartment building," said Mrs. Peters.

They are not nearly as fond of the arrangement of some of the windows. Those in the master bedroom, bathroom and hall could have been located to insure more privacy. And it is dusty. "There is a lot of concrete around here and they did not put any sealer on it," said Mrs. Peters. "I think that was a mistake. With two children running around all the time there is a fine layer of dust on everything just about all the time. You no sooner clean it up than it is dusty again."

Space is another concern. Bedrooms are small and so is the laundry area. And after living with three-and-a-half bathrooms they find it difficult getting by with just one.

It's like living in a Moore sculpture



Children's bedroom is bright and spacious (left) and a good place to play. Right, a dinner party for some friends. Corridor below is one of Habitat's indoor streets.

But these are minor problems to the Peters who are fast learning to cope with the ways of living in a development that is as new as tomorrow — or maybe the day after.

Being an architect himself Mr. Peters says the Habitat concept is very challenging. If it is not perfect in every way, he said, that is because it is the first of its kind. "A lot was learned here about building and housing people and that's exactly why it was built," he said.

The family, of course, has not spent a winter at Habitat yet. I wish them luck and I believe they are going to need it. Last winter I toured the project with its creator, Moshe Safdie. The wind was blowing in off the river and standing there in the midst of Safdie's revolutionary pre-cast concrete boxes was the coldest experience I have ever known. Safdie may have been kept warmer by his love for his masterpiece but whether or not the Peters family and other Habitat residents will generate enough enthusiasm to overcome the chill factor is another question.

But the Peters aren't worried. They are having fun. The For Sale sign is up in front of their split-level home in the suburbs and, joy of joys, Anthony doesn't have to cut the grass anymore. When you pay $470 rent a month as he does for the concrete boxes he calls home somebody else handles the lawnmower.

The mice? The Peters trapped 17 of them in their kitchen before wiping them out and just how a family of mice got through all that concrete is anybody's guess. ◁

Dr. Murphy produces steady and successful output of scripts.

DRAMATIC Doctor From Halifax

Surgeon Arthur Murphy wields a pen as well as his scalpel

WHEN DR. ARTHUR LISTER MURPHY of Halifax returns home from a hard day's work — and his private practice, his jobs as attending surgeon at Victoria General Hospital, consulting surgeon at Halifax Infirmary and associate professor of surgery at Dalhousie University keep him busy — he finds he's too tired to put his feet up and read. But when it comes to writing he gets his second wind.

"Writing is a complete change from my medical profession," says surgeon-playwright Murphy. "I find release in it."

To Dr. Murphy, the release comes from a steady output of scripts for radio, television and the stage. And along with it comes success. One of his plays was produced on the Ben Casey TV show, another on General Motors Theatre. He was one of five Canadians chosen to write a play for Centennial year. He has won numerous drama awards and his two-act comedy, The Sleeping Bag, was taken across Canada by Neptune Theatre last spring before winding up at Expo 67.

Sometimes he writes so fast that he produces the notes for a one-hour play one weekend and on the next he dictates the finished dialogue into a tape recorder.

Born in Dominion, N.S., a Cape Breton coal mining town, Dr. Murphy was first struck with the stage when he attended a drama class at Dalhousie University. A few years after he graduated in 1930, he started writing children's shows for radio.

But it wasn't until the late 1940s that Dr. Murphy started full swing into his successful writing career — and this was triggered when his daughter Joanne (he also has two sons, Paul and Arthur) set out for New York to study drama.

He hopes one day to write a play for Joanne, who now lives in Hollywood with her husband, Paul Carr. Both are actors.

Hollywood is a city he has no time for. His first tangle came some years ago when he submitted a hospital drama to an agent for the Ben Casey show. The agent promptly sent it back with a note: "This is not up to Ben Casey standards." Just as promptly, Dr. Murphy sent it direct to the program and it was immediately accepted.

Although he hates Hollywood, the feeling is not mutual. People down there tell him, "If you want to come out here we'll get lots of work for you. But you can't expect to live in Halifax and write for Hollywood."

He just smiles, and tells them he's quite happy in Halifax living the busy life of a surgeon-playwright.

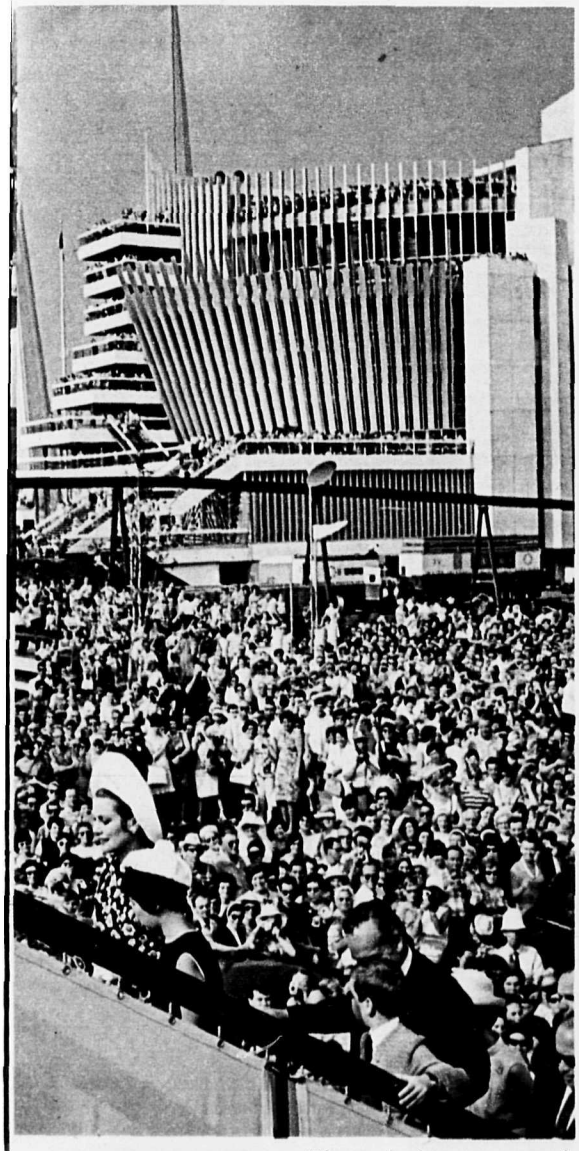
Princess Grace wowed crowds in Montreal when the Royal family of Monaco visited the world fair

PRINCESS GRACE of Monaco came, saw, and conquered. From the time the Royal family of Monaco — the former Hollywood star Grace Kelly and Prince Rainier, together with two of their three children — arrived for an official visit to the world fair, Expo was at her feet.

A huge crowd of 8,500 crammed into Place des Nations to greet her — a welcome that exceeded that of President Lyndon Johnson of the United States. By 11 A.M. on July 18 the lure of Princess Grace had attracted roughly 140,000 visitors to Expo — seven times the population of Monaco, and at that time an Expo record.

Unfortunately, Princess Grace's Canadian visit was interrupted when she was taken to hospital in Montreal with a miscarriage, from which she has since recovered.



Thousands of spectators crowd the area in front of the French Pavilion as the Royal family climbs a ramp for a minirail tour of the grounds.

Mayor Jean Drapeau and Madame Drapeau chat with Princess Grace at reception at the Château Champlain hotel.

IT IS PROBABLY the most exciting moment in the whole of sport — and certainly the most frightening. As the starter's flag slashes down, the best drivers in the world hurl the most perfect cars in the world three abreast toward the first corner, wheel to wheel, blazing blue smoke and blasting out a hail of noise that seems to tear the sky apart.

That is Formula 1, or Grand Prix, motor racing, the ultimate test of car and driver, a supremely exacting combination of art and science in which success is rewarded by wealth and fame, failure punished all too often by fiery disaster.

Thousands of drivers around the world are duly licensed to risk their lives and limbs at the wheels of fast cars — Indianapolis cars, sports cars, stock cars, dragsters and the rest. Of all that oil-stained crew, only a handful — a mere 20 or so — are judged good enough to control Formula 1 cars. And most of this world's elite will be at Mosport on Aug. 27 for the first Formula 1 race ever held in this country, the Player's Grand Prix of Canada.

What will the anticipated 50,000 spectators at Mosport see? First of all, during the race itself, they will see little of the drivers. Formula 1 drivers go to work in flame-proof underwear, flame-proof coveralls and the best crash helmets ingenuity can devise. And, since one of their number, Lorenzo Bandini, rolled his car during this year's Monaco Grand Prix and died three days later from his terrible burns, virtually all of them pull down their goggles over flame-proof masks. In the cockpit they look like the invisible man.

Jack Brabham won French Grand Prix at Le Mans in July, covering the 227 miles in 2 hours, 13 minutes, 21.3 seconds at an average speed of 98.901 m.p.h.

Their leather gloves have flame-proof backs so that in an emergency they can cover their faces with their hands. They don't like to speculate how long these precautions will give them to extricate themselves from a "shunt", as they call a crash. It is no more than seconds.

A Formula 1 driver lies, more than sits, at his wheel, a surprisingly small wheel like those in go-karts. His car, in fact, except for its foot-wide tires, looks not much bigger than a go-kart, and he must wriggle into the cockpit with his arms above his head, tucking them in later. His seat is moulded to the shape of his body, and the sides of the car which hold him firmly in place on corners are in fact his gasoline tanks. He may have another gas tank in front of him, above his outstretched legs, which must be jammed through a tunnel only about a foot wide. The battery makes a hump beneath his knees — it is the only place the designer can find to put it.

His gear lever is less than six inches high and he may have to use it more than 2,600 times in one race, without benefit of a synchromesh gear-box. After this year's French Grand Prix here at Le Mans, the youngest of all Grand Prix drivers, the 23-year-old New Zealander Chris Amon, showed me an ugly blister his gear lever had raised, and then burst, on the palm of his hand.

One Formula 1 car, the BRM, or British Racing Motor, goes on to the starting grid with a wrench taped to its steering wheel. This is so that the driver can get the wheel off in a "shunt" and it dates from the Belgian Grand Prix at Spa last year, when the Scots driver Jackie Stewart was pinned in his car for 35 minutes after a crash.

It had been raining and halfway round the first lap of the 8.76-mile course the cars swept round a corner at 140 m.p.h. — right into a sheet of water flowing down across the track from a flooded hillside. Stewart was one of five drivers who "lost it" and went off the course. He ended up hanging head down over a ditch, pinned by his steering wheel. Two other drivers who had come to grief ran to a nearby farm for tools and cut him free.

"When you're trapped for 35 min-

Anatomy Of A Grand Prix Race

The Player's Grand Prix of Canada, to be held at Mosport, Ont., Aug. 27, is the first automobile race ever held in Canada to count toward the world driver's championship, which is based on Formula 1 races. This will be the first time Formula 1 cars, the highest expression of the racing-car designer's art, have appeared on a Canadian track.

Formula 1 cars are limited to engines of three-litre (3,000-c.c.) capacity and must weigh at least 1,100 pounds. They must have a self-starter and must run on ordinary high-test 100-octane gasoline. They race only in Grand Prix events, over distances of at least 187.5 miles and not more than 250 miles, which means the cars go flat out throughout the race and a pit stop virtually ends a driver's chance of winning. Next weekend's race is more than 90 laps, or 220 miles, of the twisting Mosport circuit, which is highly rated by world-class drivers who have run there.

A country is permitted only one Formula 1 race a year. This year there are 11 — in South Africa, Monaco, Holland, Belgium, France, Britain, Germany, Canada, Italy, the U.S. and Mexico. Only these 11 Grand Prix races count toward a driver's standing in the championship. He receives nine points for a win, six for second place, four for third, three for fourth, two for fifth and one for sixth. A similar point system for cars determines the manufacturer's championship.

Exclusive healing substance in Preparation H proven to shrink hemorrhoids ... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes, and speeds up healing of the injured inflamed tissues.

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

utes you have lots of time to think that perhaps this is not your vocation," Stewart told me with his urchin-like grin. "You think you might be better suited to tiddleywinks — or baseball."

ship as a motor engineer at Dunbarton — some Grand Prix drivers know all there is to know about engines, others leave it all to their crew.

Before he took up racing, Jackie was European clay-pigeon shooting champion — good eyesight and fast reaction are essential to a Formula 1 driver. He started motor racing in 1961 and in 1963 won more club races than anyone else in Britain.

In his first year in a Formula III car, a smaller version of Formula 1, he won 11 straight races and the European championship in his class. The next year, he was in Formula 1 — and third in the world championship.

Like most Grand Prix drivers, Stewart is small — only 5 feet 7 inches and 140 pounds — but wiry and immensely strong. Dan Gurney, an American considered by some of the cognoscenti on the Grand Prix circuit to be the world's best all-round driver, is an exception to the general rule, being 6 feet 3 inches tall. He is so strong that he occasionally breaks his gear lever and during one race he tore his steering wheel apart.

John Surtees, the ex-motor cycle ace who was world champion in 1964 and now heads Japan's Honda Formula 1 team, once heard a rival boasting about how light his new car was. As if to test its weight, Surtees bent down and picked up the car's front end.

Stewart — the other drivers call him "MacNab" — likes to take his wife and son on picnics, enjoys a game of golf (with a handicap of "around 12 or 14") and fishing for salmon. In the fall he goes on shooting parties with his fellow driver, Graham Hill, who takes pride in his deerstalker hat and matched pair of guns. Hill, champion driver in 1962 and Indianapolis winner last year, is 38 and hates to be asked about his retirement plans. But the irrepressible Stewart calls him "Grandpa" — a mode of address not recommended to lesser souls.

Stewart is the most popular of Grand Prix drivers. "It's only Jackie who has a normal existence in which motor racing plays a part," one team manager told me. "All the others' lives revolve around motor racing."

This is not surprising. Formula 1 drivers also enter sports-car and other races and they are on the track virtually every weekend of the year — even driving in Australia and New Zealand during the European winters. Each race requires a couple of days of practice beforehand, and top drivers are also in demand as test drivers, putting such vital accessories as tires through their paces. And in their scant spare time most of them run garages or other businesses.

"I'm doing well if I have a total of two months of the year in England, a couple of days at a time," said Mike Spence, a 30-year-old Englishman who drives a BRM.

The vast sums at stake in Grand Prix racing have also contributed to its transition from carefree glamor sport to demanding business.

Bill Dunne, a former motor-cycle racer and automotive journalist who now manages Dan Gurney's racing team, told me a Formula 1 car can cost "anything from $50,000 to $150,000." Gurney's is one of the smaller teams, yet it costs about half a million dollars a year to keep it racing. Some teams spend much more.

A driver may receive only $600 for starting in a race and the first prize may be worth a mere $2,000. But prize money is only a bonus for a name driver, whose contract to drive may bring him well over $100,000 a year even before he begins to pick up "endorsement" money from the makers of everything from fountain pens to toothpaste.

All this loot must come from somewhere, and it comes of course from companies producing tires, gas, oils and other indispensable adjuncts to motoring, who are recompensed by the rich advertising value of Grand Prix racing.

In this atmosphere, Formula 1 racing has become big business. It was not always so. Grand Prix racing was once an irresistible lure to playboy princes — or at any rate counts. There was the French driver named Jules Goux who won the Indianapolis 500 in 1913 and the Italian Grand Prix later; every time M. Goux's car pulled into the pits during a race he took a gargantuan swig from a bottle of champagne. Then there was a burly opera singer-cum-driver named Giuseppe Campari, who used to polish off four dozen snails after a practice run. And Tazio Nuvolari, the "Maestro," one of the all-time greats, who used to scream at his car during a race and bombard his mechanics with tools if they displeased him.

Champagne, and the "dollies" that traditionally go with it, are foreign to today's breed of drivers, most of whom are family men, non-smokers and virtually teetotallers. Wine is served with dinner as a matter of course at the kind of French hotels Formula 1 drivers stay in, but any table just vacated by drivers is certain to be littered with half-full or even untouched glasses. One evening at Loué, near Le Mans, I saw Pat McLaren, wife of the New Zealand driver Bruce MacLaren, urge her husband to try a champagne cocktail. He did — but he shared it with Dan Gurney and even between them they didn't finish it.

The Formula 1 driver today is calculatingly and completely professional, and he gives nothing away. He is competitive to the point of obsession and, with rare exceptions, ungiven to displaying emotion, even if he feels it. Often he is so taciturn that a grunt is considered an over-effusive reply to a question. The jocularity and horseplay encountered at smaller racing events do not exist on the Grand Prix circuit and such fraternization as there is takes place only on the surface.

Dan Gurney, whose idea of a big night is to stretch out on the rug with a plate of cheese watching a western movie on television, strode into his hotel at Loué one night tired and hungry after a day's practise. The Lotus team, which includes Jim Clark and Graham Hill, greeted him with a welcoming cry. Their cars had been held up by French customs men and they had been unable to practise. This was a considerable disadvantage since the Grand Prix circuit at Le Mans is a new one, smaller than and inside the regular 24-hour course and unknown to some of the drivers. The gear ratios of Formula 1 cars have to be adjusted to each track, which takes time, so that the loss of a day hurt.

"What about the gear ratios, Dan?" someone on the Lotus team asked. "How slow did you take the slowest corners?"

"On which lap?" Gurney asked innocently, reaching for a plate of hors d'oeuvres.

Immediately, a Lotus hand snatched the plate away: "You don't get any until you tell us!"

Gurney didn't tell — and they probably hadn't expected him to.

The next night, Jackie Stewart stopped by Gurney's table and the big American, grinning mischievously, tried to persuade him to have a glass of wine. "Come to bed, Jackie," snapped team-mate Mike Spence. He may have been joshing — but Jackie went.

JACK BRABHAM, 43, learned to drive in midget races on dirt tracks in his native Australia. He is current world champion.

CHRIS AMON, 23, of New Zealand, is the youngest driver on the Grand Prix circuit. He first drove a Formula 1 car at 19.

Jack Brabham, a 43-year-old Australian who learned to drive on dirt tracks and has won the title three times. Brabham manufactures his own cars — as do Gurney and McLaren — and is tremendously successful off the track as well as on it: he sold 86 Formula III cars last year and has thrown a scare into all the other constructors, as Formula 1 car manufacturers are called.

He has black hair and black eyebrows which are usually drawn into a frown of concentration as he ponders some mechanical problem or other. He displays such a cool reserve — his friends attribute it to shyness — that he is known as "Black Jack," and he once flew from London to New York in a jet in the next seat to Tony Rudd, BRM's racing manager, without volunteering a single word of conversation.

But Brabham is the undoubted "old master" on the track, his natural gift for racing reinforced by immense experience. Denis Hulme, a brawny New Zealander who drives for him and headed into the second half of this season at the head of the championship table, calls him "the cunningest driver on the track."

Just what is it that sets the Formula 1 driver apart on his pinnacle? The drivers themselves seem to find it hard to explain, perhaps because it is largely inborn talent.

"You've got to have determination," says Hulme. "You must never let the car become the boss." This may involve going round a left-hand corner with your front wheels turned full-lock to the right. No matter, you must bend the car to your will and you do this by "feel." Quite often, says Hulme, "you can anticipate when the car is going to do something."

During practice, a Grand Prix car is carefully adjusted to do just what the driver wants it to do. As Hulme says: "Eventually you get the car so that it handles perfectly and you think you could talk to it."

For Jim Clark, driving champion in 1963 and 1965, the difference between driving a Formula 1 car and any other is like the difference between riding a thoroughbred and an old farm horse. "Everything happens a lot quicker in a Formula 1 car," he says. "You have to be very accurate. Your margins are finer."

A Grand Prix driver, says Clark with the Grand Prix driver's habitual understatement, must have "a certain amount of confidence, and a lot of concentration — if you see a driver's lap time slowing by half a second, you know his concentration is slipping."

Formula 1 cars demand handling that is firm and yet delicate, and they don't forgive mistakes. A dragster will out-accelerate them and a big Ford seven-litre sports racing car will outrace them on the straight. But no car is more powerful for its weight. A Formula 1 chassis weighs only 68 lbs. before the machinery goes in.

The three-litre engine to which the car is limited by the formula develops up to 400 h.p. — against the 530 h.p. developed by the big Ford. But that 400 h.p. pushes a tiny car much lighter than a Volkswagen up to 175 m.p.h. before the driver changes into his top, or sixth, gear.

No car is "quicker" than a Formula 1 car on the corners — Grand Prix people never say "fast." No car is more responsive to its driver's commands. And no car is more insistently demanding of its driver's skill.

That is why there are only 20 or so drivers in the world considered capable of driving Formula 1 cars. Out of that select number, 10 at the most are considered real contenders to win a Grand Prix. And of those 10, perhaps five comprise the elite of international drivers — men who might win the world driver's championship.

The competition at Mosport next weekend will be something to see. ◁

A Model's Place In The Sun

Larisa Pavlychenko, when she isn't running between London, Paris and New York in her race to the top, relaxes in her dream home on a Mediterranean island

By Robert Musel

SANTA EULALIA, IBIZA. IF YOU ASK for the tall Canadian lady in this picturesque town the natives will show you the way to an ancient Moorish watch tower, guarding a white house among the flowers and fields a country mile from the tourist haunts. Larisa Pavlychenko, who comes from Saskatoon, lives there gathering strength for the New York season which she hopes will climax her career as a model.

It isn't often that a Canadian girl has a chance to move into the top ten of the international model set — the most exclusive fashion club in the world. Larisa should have made it months ago but a long series of physical and emotional upsets held her back. Now she is well again and ready to leave in September for the fashion wars, too wise this time to risk the overwork that almost destroyed her health and her career.

She credits her recovery to her Mediterranean home. Fifteen years ago her husband, Canadian artist Graham Coughtry, first discovered this lovely spot, one of the Balearic Islands off the coast of Spain. College of Art and at one point was the curator of the Greenwich Gallery of Art in Toronto.

Coughtry is now in Canada pursuing his own career as a painter. Separation is often, it seems, one of the penalties a husband and wife pay when they achieve success in different fields. His paintings hang in the National Gallery of Canada, the Museum of Modern Art in New York and the Tate Gallery in London.

Larisa, who stands 5 feet 9 inches, spoke with pride of her father, Dr. T. K. Pavlychenko, and how he was one of the few Canadians to appear in the American Who's Who.

Larisa said she first broke into modelling in a serious way in Paris, where she went to study French and where she also met and married Graham Coughtry.

"I did very well for the first few months, then came the summer slump and no one used me. I don't know how I stuck it out. We were both having such a tough time Graham went back to Canada to try and find some work there. So my first year of modelling I had literally no money to live on. I sometimes went hungry.

"Graham sent me everything he could when he could, which was nearly never. But I persevered. Some photographers said I had too strange a face and that my nose was crooked on one side. Others took a chance on me and some good pictures began to appear and they helped.

"There is so much to learn," she said. "You must know every angle of yourself, and lighting and cameras and how to be a bloody good actress. You must have a strong sense of elegance, which is extreme simplicity, and a flair for accessorizing and sensing things before they happen and there aren't many who sense this. It is hard to register it on camera. It must come from the tips of your fingers.

"I'm not beautiful," she said. "I have a strange face and a strange sort of body, but it lends itself to high fashion which is dramatic, and plays with exaggeration.

"I won't stop until I get to the top," she said. "And I will get there because I know I can do it."

It was in 1962 that Miss Pavlychenko bought the old house with its 800-year-old watchtower on Ibiza and three and a half acres of land against the day she might want a quiet retreat. That day arrived late last year when she found it difficult to shake off the after-effects of hepatitis and exhaustion.

On beach Larisa plays with her dog, Noble Hound Nicholas. She prefers bathing in secluded spots.

In her bedroom in circular tower Larisa models this exotic caftan with matching silk trousers. On our cover she poses with local fishing crew.

The house is traditional architecture for the warm, sunny climate. It is finished in white stone with a herringbone design worked into the walls. The eight rooms are arranged around a large, cool grand salon, with a wood-beamed ceiling.

"I came here to rest," she said, "and since I needed something to occupy my mind I decided to furnish the house. It was just the therapy I needed. I am not nearly through but it is becoming the home I dreamed of and no matter where I work from now on — and I have film and modelling offers in both New York and London — I will always try to come back here from time to time."

Larisa's motion picture debut was a 10-second role in the well-received British film Morgan. The star, David Warner, riding up an escalator grins at a girl riding down. Miss Pavlychenko, who was that girl, spoke not a word but looked at the camera. And the magic flickered long enough for many people to remember that brief appearance out of many memorable moments in the film.

"I haven't put too much furniture into the house yet," Miss Pavlychenko said. "I am in no hurry. Wherever I see something that might suit I buy it and have it shipped. I've shopped all over Spain and in the south of France for pieces — mostly 16th Century Spanish bureaus, tables, chairs and occasional pieces if I can find them. But the main theme is to keep the furniture on the primitive side — it goes with the house."

The watch tower is part of the property and Miss Pavlychenko is having the structure strengthened. There is a limit to what even top models can afford so this work is proceeding slowly. One of these days she may get a telephone.

"But my main problem at the moment is to buy more land," she said. "The town is stretching out this way and I want to protect my house against having neighbors overlooking it. The price of land has jumped since I first got this place."

Larisa said she was delighted at finally mastering the Spanish language. This will make it easier for her to deal with tradesmen, farmers, furniture dealers and others.

"I feel well for the first time in a long time," she said. "I'm looking forward to New York. But I know I'll be thinking about Ibiza. Still, I might be able to pick up a piece or two in New York for my sitting room. It's a thought." ◁

Cousin Mariano, Grandmother Eulalia and husband, Maria, little Maria and José are family who work for Larisa.

There's A Naked Lady In The Receiving Line

THE MAN in the next office came in grinning, and said, "No one listens any more."

"I do," I assured him. "I listen to you so much that my ear is permanently bent."

"You don't count," said T.M.I.T.N.O. "I mean society doesn't listen."

"You been out in society?" I asked. "With that face?"

"This face went to a bun fight," said he. "A reception for visiting VIP types. A receiving line — the works. And nobody listened to me."

"What did you say? Anything worth listening to?"

"Well, I think so," said T.M.I.T.N.O. He's never heavy on modesty. "To the first lady in this receiving line I said, 'How do you do? The management wants me to tell you that the floor below this is a mass of flames. We must ask everyone to jump from the windows after saying a brief prayer.' That's what I said to her."

"And what," I asked, "did she say to you?"

"She said, 'Lovely! Just lovely.' "

"And then," continued T.M.I.T.N.O., "I was passed along to the next VIP. A man. And I said, 'Don't look now but the woman at the end of this line has forgotten to put on any clothes except her gloves.' And he said, 'A great occasion, isn't it?' "

T.M.I.T.N.O. was still grinning when he left my office. And so was I.

I'm already making a smashing list of things to say at receptions.

Elsie Gilbert's dahlias come up prize winners.

Dilly Dahlias

Umbrellas aren't for people. Umbrellas are for dahlias.

That's the message you'll get if you drive past the Earl Gilbert home, a couple of miles north of London.

Weekend Magazine Photographer Charlie King was driving past one wet, foggy morning and the sight of so many umbrellas shielding so many dahlias made him reach for his camera to get this picture.

Later Elsie Gilbert clued me in on the reason for umbrellas.

"I put them over the most promising buds," she told me, "the ones that look like prize winners at the Western Fair. Not just to keep off the rain, but to shield them from the direct sun, too."

About five years ago Mrs. Gilbert joined the London Dahlia Club and she credits her success to the information and help she got from the club.

She begins her plants in a greenhouse, and in mid-June sets out about 500 green plants. She thinks that this late planting and umbrella-shielding gives bigger and better blooms.

And who could argue with her? Last year at the Western Fair she scored 21 firsts in 23 classes.

Good Grooming

A guest at the wedding of a young university student and his childhood sweetheart reports that while the groom's mother was suitably solemn during the service the groom's father was less touched by the occasion.

As his son repeated the phrase, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow . . . " the father remarked to the mother, "There goes his motorcycle and his radio."

Signs Of The Times

Sometimes a bit of misspelling turns an ad into a real eye-catcher, comments a reader who sends as an example an ad written by a man who promised to "Cut Your Grass And Keep Your Propriety Clean."

For it I swap another eye-catching sign. It was spotted in a Vermont grocery store and went like this:

Four-legged chickens . . . 29 cents per lb.
Double-breasted chickens . . . 33 cents per lb.

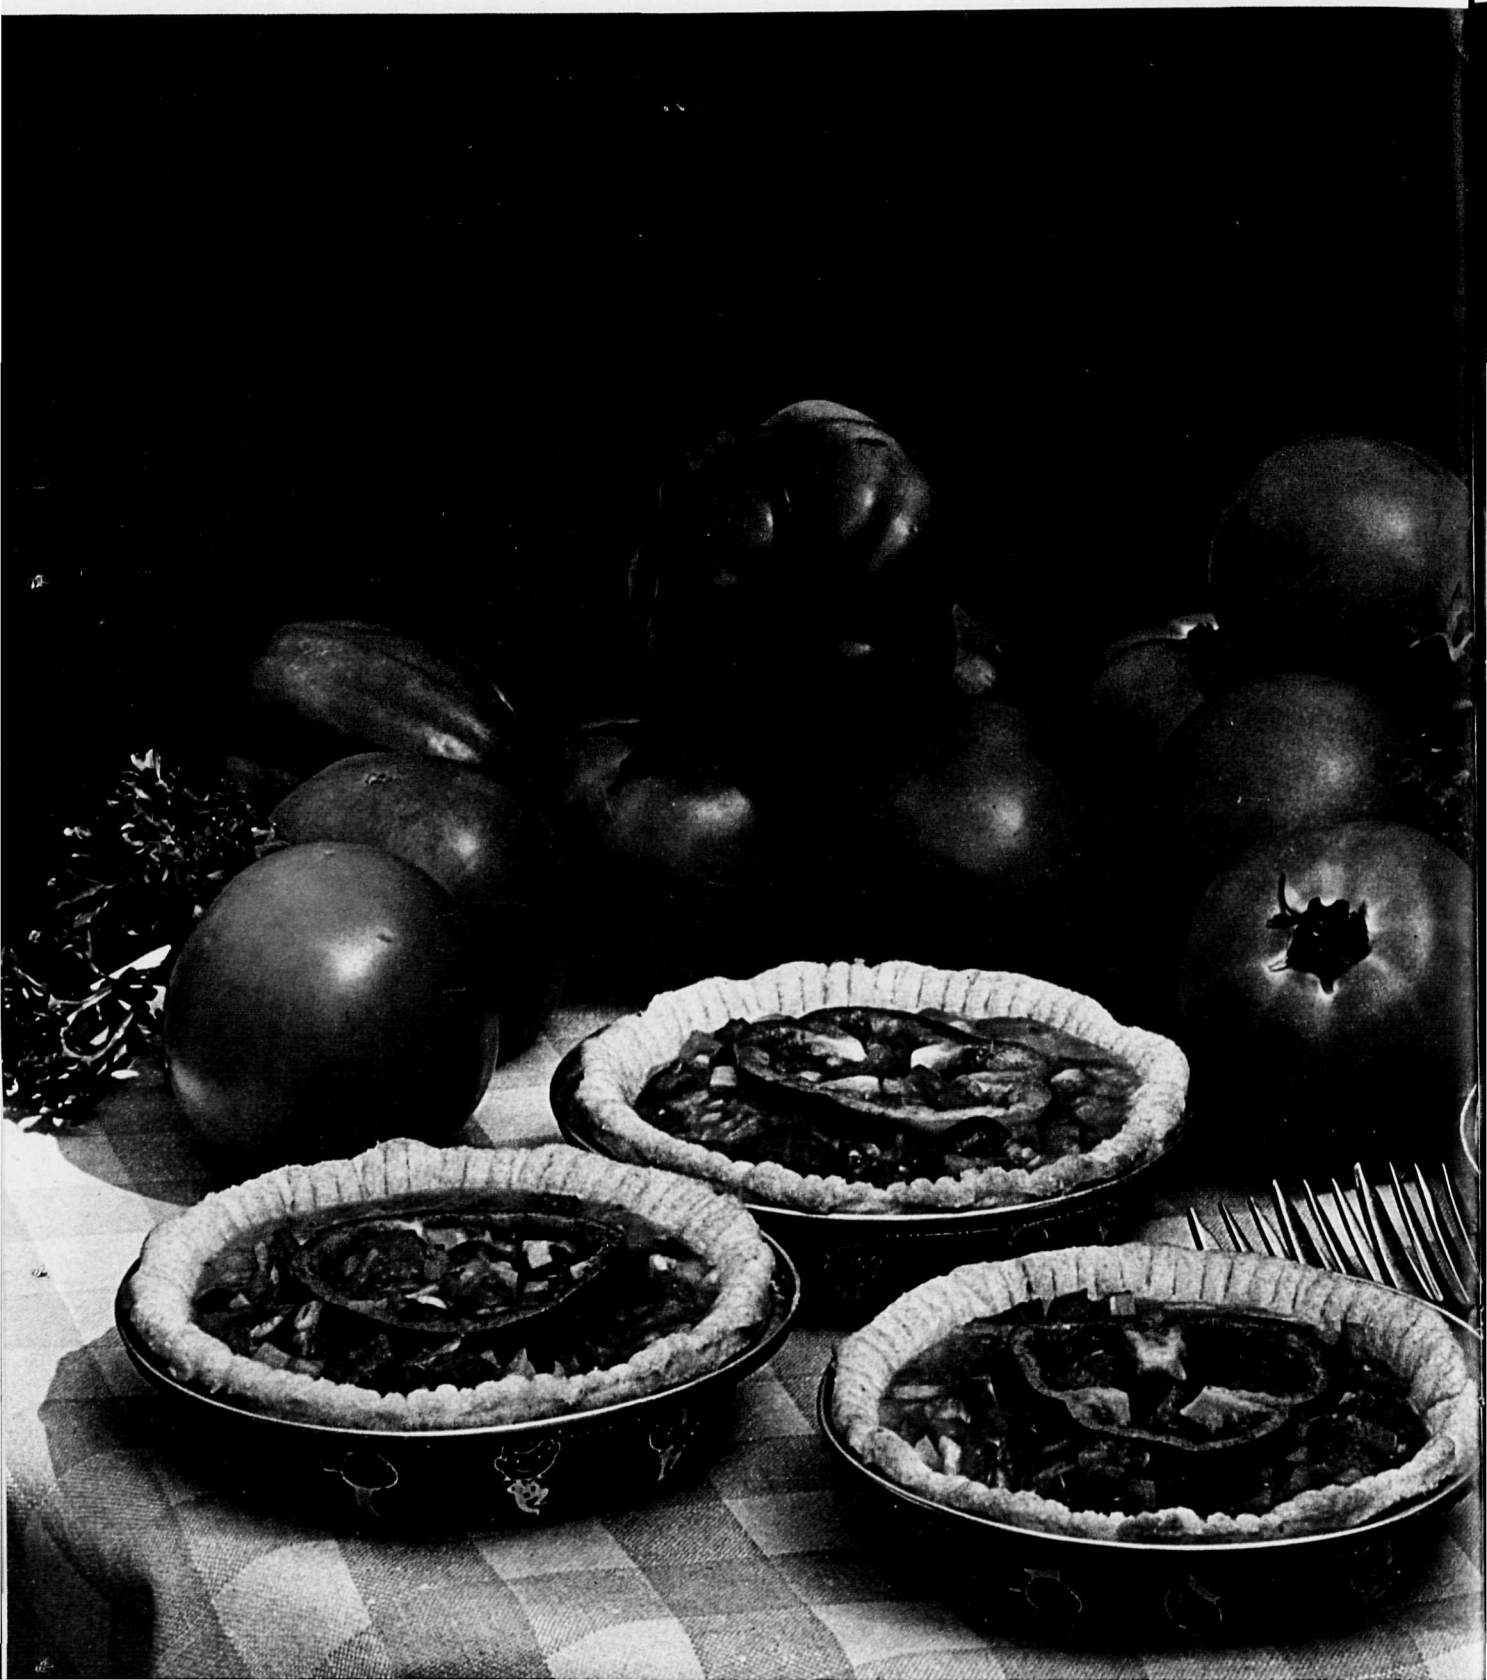
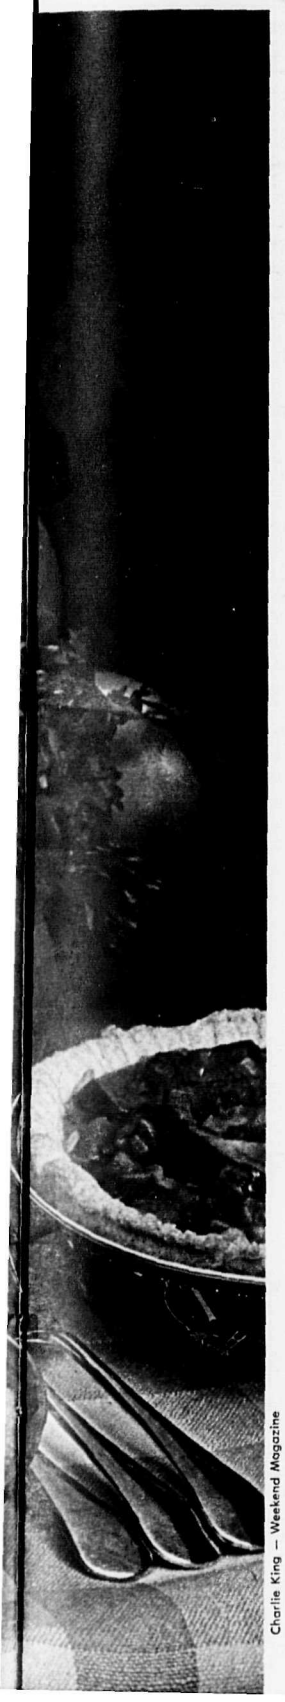
Temptation Is



A Luscious Tomato



Charlie King — Weekend Magazine

"WHY DO YOU use tomatoes in your recipes so often?" asked a reader recently.

I had to answer that I suppose I use them so often because I am so fond of them myself. It turned out she likes them, too, but they don't like her. So she can't eat them.

Fortunately, most of us can and love to eat the luscious red fruit. And this is the time of year for us.

Plain, with salt and pepper, fancied up with marinades, giving zest and texture to salads or added to cooked dishes — tomatoes are always marvellous.

Here are some things to enjoy, using fresh tomatoes. Our Tomato And Green Pepper Tarts are a nice luncheon treat. The well-seasoned vegetable filling is baked in corn meal pastry for interesting texture and flavor.

Some of the other recipes here are Mediterranean Baked Fish — any white fish baked with onions, pimento, green onions, tomatoes, mushrooms and seasonings, Tomato Chowder and Fruit Relish.

⅛ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Lettuce

BAKED TOMATO PUFFS

6 large tomatoes
2 whole cloves
2 tsp. grated onion
⅛ tsp. sweet basil
3 tbsp. butter
3 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. salt
Dash pepper
⅛ tsp. dry mustard
½ cup light cream
2 egg yolks, beaten
2 egg whites
Pinch cream of tartar
½ cup soft bread crumbs
Salt and pepper

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Have ready a shallow baking pan large enough to hold the tomatoes.

Cut a thick slice from the top of the tomatoes. Scoop out the pulp with a teaspoon (save the pulp) leaving a good firm "wall" of tomato to hold the filling. Invert scooped-out tomatoes on paper towelling to drain.

Combine tomato pulp, cloves, onion and sweet basil in small saucepan, bring to a boil, turn down heat and cook gently until there is about 1 cup of the mixture. Strain, pressing through as much of the tomato pulp as possible. (You should have about ¾ cup of the puree.)

Melt butter in saucepan. Sprinkle in flour, ¼ tsp. salt, dash pepper and mustard and stir to blend. Remove from heat and stir in cream and tomato puree all at once. Return to moderate heat and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Remove from heat and stir in egg yolks.

Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until stiff and fold into hot mixture along with bread crumbs.

Sprinkle insides of tomatoes lightly with salt and pepper. Spoon in egg mixture filling tomatoes about ¾ full. Set them in the baking dish and bake 25 to 30 minutes or until filling is puffed, lightly browned and set. (Serves 6.)

Bruce Moss – Weekend Magazine

Lois Maxwell, James Bond's Miss Moneypenny, has her mind on other things while meeting Trent.

The Most Kissable Lips Spoke Of Chickenpox

IN THE WARM, soft light of late afternoon there in the park, Miss Moneypenny, secretary to M, the head of British Secret Service, was disarming. She was the girl with the most kissable lips in the world and as I moved close to her on the bench, my pulse sounded like the beat of a drum.

Instinctively, she dampened her lips with her tongue. As I waited, feverish with anticipation, she said, "Last year at this time, both my children had chickenpox."

Miss Moneypenny with children? The children with chickenpox?

"Then he got it," she said. "My poor husband got chickenpox."

In the excitement I had almost forgotten. Miss Moneypenny was really Lois Maxwell, a Toronto-born girl who has made any number of movies in the U.S. and in Italy but whose chief claim to fame is that she has been in all five of the pictures based on late author Ian Fleming's James Bond books. She was in Montreal on this occasion to publicize her latest film, You Only Live Twice, for United Artists.

"We keep in close touch," she said of her husband, Peter Marriott, European head of NBC International who is based in London. "I was talking to him this morning and to the children (Melinda, nine and Christian, seven). The telephone is super, isn't it?"

"Never mind that," I said, cutting her short and running my fingers through her hair.

A short time before, I had gone to a helicopter pad near the St. Lawrence river east of Montreal and watched her climb out of the craft.

During the filming of Dr. No, Ian Fleming told Lois Maxwell, "When I first thought of Miss Moneypenny as a character, I saw her as a tall slender woman with the most kissable lips in the world. You, my dear, are exactly the woman I had in mind."

As the long-limbed Lois stepped from the helicopter, the sun caught the glass heels of her white shoes and I shut my eyes in quick defence. When I opened them, she was standing beside me. Bond would have liked the glass heels and approved the yellow linen suit she wore down to the kneecap — a subtle combination of flair and efficiency.

"We have no time to lose," I said, whisking her from the pad to the quay where the hovercraft waited. As the craft sped up the river cutting the water at a 60-mile-an-hour clip, she combed the auburn hair away from her blue-green eyes. She was exactly what I had been told to expect — tall and slender and supple-bodied.

The hovercraft let us off at Expo 67 for a quick visit and minutes later we were driven into the city in a limousine. Lois showered, slipped into a green print dress and joined me. And now we were sitting on this bench in Dominion Square.

I didn't want to hear about her work with CBC years ago, nor how she had been a foil for comedians Wayne and Shuster back in the days of the Canadian Army Show, nor how she became the first winner of the Lady Louis Mountbatten Scholarship at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London.

"I used to call my husband the Gentle Giant," she said as I inched closer to her on the bench. "He is just under six feet, six inches."

So her husband was tall. She had once been infatuated with Ronald Reagan, the present governor of California who played opposite her in an old film called That Hagan Girl. And she had once played with Vittorio de Sica in a movie that won the top award at the Venice Film Festival (Tomorrow Is Too Late). And she had just completed a spoof on the James Bond spoofs in Italy — a United Artists release starring Sean (James Bond) Connery's younger brother, Neil.

"I remembered James never took to a girl who could twist him around her finger"

"Big men tend to keep their emotions under control," she said.

I felt my jaw harden, my lips become firm.

"If they are aggressive, you see, they are likely to be accused of being bullies," she went on. "If on the other hand they are quiet and retreating, they're likely to be thought of as sissies. How can the big man win?"

I remembered that James never took to a girl who could twist him around her finger. So I took a hard line.

I took her arms firmly in my hands and turned her to me.

I was breathless as I brought her close to me and she noticed it. She pulled away, put her head close to my chest and said, "I think your breathing has stopped. Perhaps you should tell someone."

I held her arms again and she said, "I do hope this sort of thing isn't habit-forming."

Then she put her hands to my face and caressed my cheeks and I was filled with the ecstasy of the moment. My wildest, fondest dream was being realized. And it was about this time that she broke into mild hysterics.

"What is that?" she asked, running a finger above my lip.

"That," I replied indignantly, "is a moustache."

"I haven't seen anything like that in 20 years," she said, getting up and starting back across the square to her hotel. She was still laughing as she went in through the revolving door.

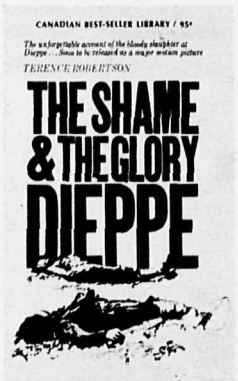
THIS WEEKEND AND NEXT

The Shame And The Glory

It's 25 years ago Aug. 19 that Canadian troops made a brutal, bloody assault on Dieppe — a raid that is marked down in history as one of Canada's grandest tragedies.

To commemorate this "reconnaisance in force" — a test of the strength of the German defences, a test that rapidly developed into a holocaust — McClelland & Stewart are publishing a paperback edition of Terence Robertson's The Shame And The Glory: Dieppe.

To regular Weekend Magazine readers, the book is not new. Excerpts from it were published in serial form five years ago on the 20th anniversary of Dieppe. But it makes exciting reading as it tells the minute-by-minute, day-by-day planning that went into the abortive assault of Canada's 2nd Division against the little French resort town.



The new paperback

And sometime in the near future we should be able to see the whole daring exploit on the movie screen.

For several months this year, author Robertson was at work with movie producer-director Ronald Neame (the man who helped make such classics as Great Expectations, The Third Man, Blithe Spirit and Tunes Of Glory) at Neame's villa in Italy on a film treatment based on the book. For the last few weeks they've been working in London. On this anniversary they were planning to attend the quarter-century celebrations in Dieppe, and then fly to Canada for a conference on the movie.

Falcon Pictures of Canada Ltd., which will make the movie, says that it will soon start arranging financing and distribution.

As Sir Winston Churchill said, "Dieppe occupies a place of its own in the story of war," and with its dramatic storyline, the movie is a natural for a blockbuster.

Racers And Women

The world's top racing drivers (page 12) are an undemonstrative breed of men who — in public at least — play down the dangers of their calling. But what of their womenfolk? Weekend Magazine Staff Writer Philip Smith watched July's French Grand Prix at Le Mans from the American Dan Gurney's pits, where Pat McLaren, wife of Gurney's team-mate Bruce McLaren, was keeping charts of the race.

When McLaren was forced into the pits with ignition trouble after 26 laps, Smith thought that Mrs. McLaren, though disappointed, was also relieved. Afterwards, he asked her if she worried when her husband was on the track. "No, not really," she replied after a pause.

Unconvinced, Smith later questioned another feminine occupant of the pits, Carolyn Dunn, wife of Gurney's team manager, who supplied another view of what life is like for the wife of a leading driver.

"If I'm not calm during a race," said Mrs. Dunne, whose husband also spends the race in the pits, "I don't see how they can be. I suppose they made up their minds long ago that they had to put up with it, but I don't believe there's one who doesn't look forward to the day when her husband retires. Of course, it's better being at the race than sitting at home wondering."

Next Week

Henri Bourdens, a 44-year-old French airline pilot, and his wife José, 48, set off happily last January in their 45-foot yacht Singa Betina from Singapore aiming to sail eastward around the world to France. Near Darwin, Australia, they ran into a raging cyclone; their craft was beached and they found themselves stranded on a uninhabited tropical island — Bathurst Island — which soon proved itself a mosquito-infested, snake-plagued hell. Next week, in the first of two instalments, Bourdens relives the grim two months they spent on the island.

THE EDITORS

"I Believe in God... ISN'T THAT ENOUGH?"

Some people seem to think so.

They'll tell you they believe in a Supreme Being. But they have no religion... belong to no church... feel no need for religious worship.

They are convinced by their own logic and reason that there must be a supernatural power. For what else could explain the marvels of the universe... the origin of life... the unique nature of man? This sort of belief, however, represents a minimum recognition of our Creator ... a minimum understanding of divine truths... a minimum effort to learn the most important thing in our lives.

The wonders of the universe undoubtedly show forth the existence of God. But, they do not establish it to everyone's satisfaction. The unique nature of man suggests our possession of an immortal soul. But such proof is not immediately evident to everyone.

The clearest proofs we have concerning God are those He reveals to us. And the channel of His revelation is religion. Through the prophets, through the Bible, through the Church — He manifests Himself to us in ways we can understand.

He doesn't leave us to guess and theorize about Himself, or ourselves. He tells us what to believe—and why. Without religion we can only conjecture. As members of the family of God, we can be sure!

Belief in God is not enough to bring the true peace of mind that everyday living requires. There must also be understanding of God's relation to us and our relation to God. Though we can see how our bodies function and our minds think, we can understand why only when we understand our God-given place in the order of creation. While we can hope for an eternal destiny of joy, we can be sure of it only through the sure knowledge that comes from God Himself.

"Religion Means God and Me" is the title of a newly-published pamphlet which we know will help you to achieve a better understanding of the divine and eternal "facts of life." It covers such topics as "God and Man — How Related?" ... "Reason and Revelation?" ... "Christianity and Freedom" ... "Morality and Religion." It is pocket size and can be read in a matter of minutes.

We'll be happy to send you a copy upon your request... and without cost or obligation. And nobody will call on you. Write today... ask for Pamphlet No. WE-18.

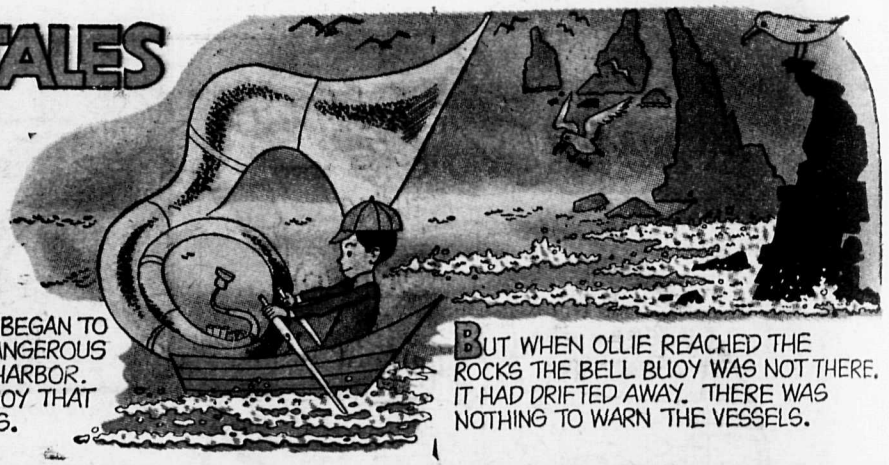
CHILDREN'S TALES

LITTLE BOY WITH A BIG HORN

PART 3

OLLIE WENT AND GOT HIS ROWBOAT AND BEGAN TO ROW FAR OUT FROM THE SHORE. SOME DANGEROUS ROCKS MARKED THE ENTRANCE TO THE HARBOR. THE ROCKS WERE GUARDED BY A BELL BUOY THAT TOLLED A WARNING TO INCOMING VESSELS.



BUT WHEN OLLIE REACHED THE ROCKS THE BELL BUOY WAS NOT THERE. IT HAD DRIFTED AWAY. THERE WAS NOTHING TO WARN THE VESSELS.

AND NOW A THICK FOG WAS SPREADING OVER THE OCEAN. IT SHUT OUT SIGHT OF EVERYTHING, EVEN THE ROCKS NEAR BY. EVERY DAY AT THIS TIME A STEAMSHIP BROUGHT PASSENGERS AND FREIGHT TO THE TOWN WHERE OLLIE LIVED.

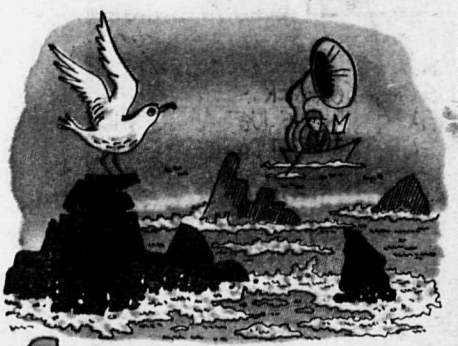
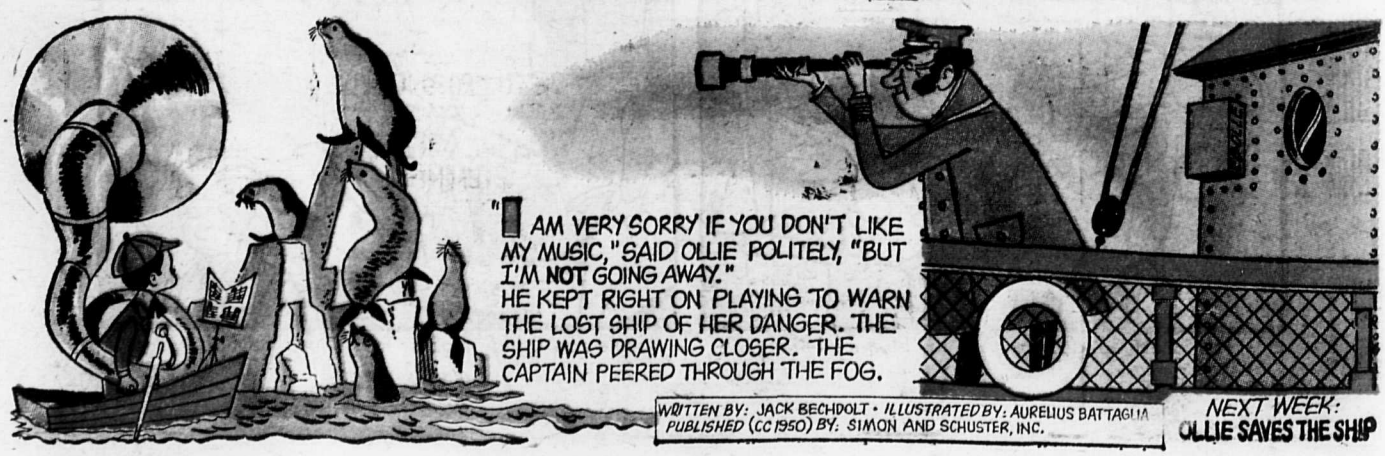
THE SHIP MUST BE SOMEWHERE NEAR EVEN NOW, LOST IN THE FOG. THERE WAS NO WARNING BELL TO TELL ITS CAPTAIN WHEN HE WAS NEAR THE ROCKS.



SO OLLIE STAYED. AND HE PLAYED. HE PLAYED "ASLEEP IN THE DEEP," BECAUSE THAT WAS THE ONLY TUNE HE KNEW.

A BIG GRAY GULL CIRCLED OVER HIS HEAD. THEN ANOTHER. AND ANOTHER. "AWK-AWK-AWK-AWK," THEY SHOUTED ANGRILY.

SOME SEALS THAT LIVED ON THE ROCKS BEGAN TO BARK A PROTEST, "OWK-OWK-OWK!"



"I AM VERY SORRY IF YOU DON'T LIKE MY MUSIC," SAID OLLIE POLITELY, "BUT I'M NOT GOING AWAY."
HE KEPT RIGHT ON PLAYING TO WARN THE LOST SHIP OF HER DANGER. THE SHIP WAS DRAWING CLOSER. THE CAPTAIN PEERED THROUGH THE FOG.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY—An old pair of nylon hose tied in knots makes a nice toy for your puppy. He can shake it and pull it and you do not have to worry about his hurting his little ears. He will then leave your shoes alone.—VIDA

DEAR POLLY—Use empty waxed paper or aluminum foil boxes for storing photo slides.—DORIS

DEAR POLLY—When one of my plastic knitting needles snapped in two near the pointed end I made it good as new by sanding a new point with an emery board. It works as well as its mate.—J. M. M.

DEAR POLLY—Different friends have given my daughter their discarded earrings. She wears a clip-on earring stuck in the rubberband that holds her pony tail in place. This is a nice use for an odd earring and makes a pretty clip to match a costume. I save those rubberbands that come around the newspaper for her hair.—VIRGINIA
