Gunfire Kills Two In Newark Riots

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Gunfire raked the streets of this riot-torn city Friday, claiming two more lives and raising the death toll to five in three straight nights of racial violence.

The latest victim was a white policeman.

A city-wide curfew was advanced to 10 p.m. after originally being set for midnight.

Governor Richard J. Hughes said a third of the city was under siege, cordoned by police and national guardsmen and in the grip of what he termed "criminal insurrection."

He declared it a disaster area in an attempt to enforce rules to quell the lawlessness.

Police radios crackled with reports of disorderly groups and flashes of gunfire winked in the darkness of a warm, humid summer night.

Police headquarters reported that Black Power advocate Stokely Carmichael had entered the city in a motor caravan about nightfall. His mission was not known.

An estimated 2,600 guardsmen backed by helmeted police with riot guns sealed the Negro district, even as looting continued in broad daylight.

"It is like laughing at a funeral—the destruction is unbelievable," said Hughes after a tour of the riot area.

MAIN STREET CLOSED

A main street in the Negro neighborhood, Springfield Avenue, was closed to traffic for 15 blocks. Guardsmen were stationed in doorways and others with guns patrolled in a half-track, a mobile personnel carrier equipped with defensive armor. Bayonets were fixed to rifles.

More than 1,000 firemen were in reserve in the event of a new outbreak of fire bombing.

The governor said he was appalled by the bizarre holiday air of the looters—surging gangs of laughing men, women and children who hauled food, clothing and furniture from smashed stores.

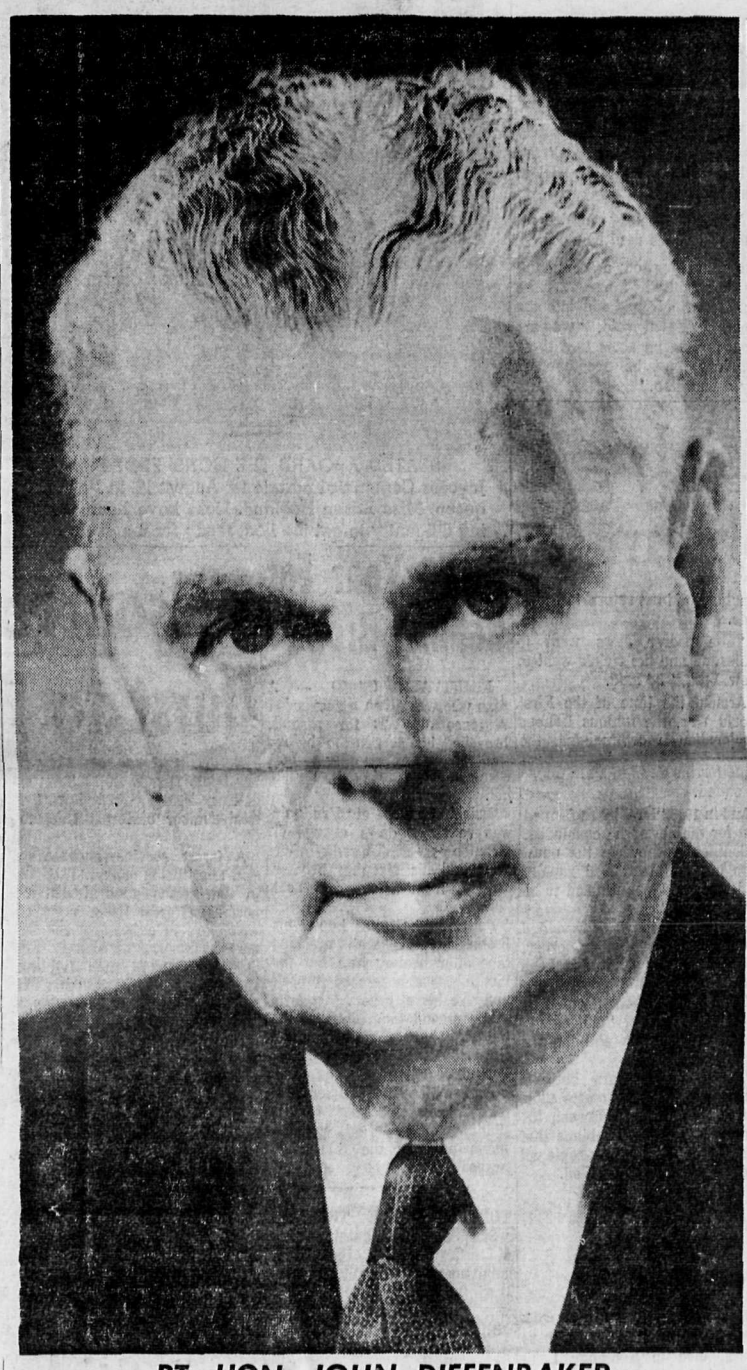
Hughes joined Mayor Hugh Addonizio in proclaiming the curfew for every one of the city's 400,000 residents, half of them Negroes.

BARS CLOSED

All liquor sales already had been banned, with bars closed, and Hughes vowed: "We'll dry this city out."

Also embargoed were all sales of firearms by pawnshops or sporting goods establishments.

Many business and offices closed in early afternoon, with employees directed to go home and stay there. Mail deliveries halted when post office branches closed at 3 p.m.



RT. HON. JOHN DIEFENBAKER

Will Take Official Salute During Military Tournament

By GLEN ALLEN
News Staff Writer

Former Prime Minister of Canada and Conservative party leader John Diefenbaker is to visit Nelson Monday.

The visit here will be the only break he will make in his and Mrs. Diefenbaker's two week holiday at Fairmont Hot Springs.

Kootenay West Conservative Association president Walter Davis of Nelson and Mayor Louis Maglio "prevailed upon" him Friday morning to come review the centennial military tournament Monday night, and meet Nelson and Kootenay citizens.

Mr. Davis and the mayor were flown to Fairmont early Friday morning by Nelson businessman and pilot Hank Coleman.

"We want him to take the salute and inspect the troops if possible," said Mr. Davis.

"It is not a political visit.

"But it will afford the people of the Kootenays the chance to pay respect to one of Canada's greatest of men.

"It is a privilege to have him here."

Mr. Davis said the Conservative leader who will speak at a party leadership conference in the fall, was to holiday at Fairmont until July 27.

"We had to prevail upon him to come to Nelson. I've been trying for two years to get him here," said Mr. Davis, a friend of long standing of Mr. Diefenbaker.

"This will be the only break in his vacation."

Mr. Davis said the provisional schedule for Monday's visit would call for Mr. Diefenbaker to be here before 3:30 p.m.

It is not known how he will be flown here, although Okanagan Helicopters have offered their services.

In the afternoon he will meet "a dozen or so old friends" at the home of Vincent Fink, then spend "a few minutes" at Mr. Davis' home.

After the 7 p.m. tournament to be held in the Civic Centre grounds it is hoped he will be able to meet the public.

"But I'm afraid we won't be able to take everyone there up to meet him," said Mr. Davis.

"He will have to leave here by 8 p.m."

Mr. Davis, Mayor Maglio and Mr. Coleman breakfasted with Mr. Diefenbaker Friday morning.

The mayor and Mr. Davis had a half-hour "conference" with him in his rooms at a Fairmont resort.

The former prime minister and his wife, Olive, drove to Fairmont from Calgary Thursday.

Interviewed in Calgary before his departure he told reporters his western vacation trip was "just to meet people."

Asked if the trip could be considered a pre-campaign tour he replied: "I'd say that assumption, like most assumptions, is based on fact."

Mr. Diefenbaker, if all plans for his visit here go well, will be honored guest at a military display featuring an aerobatic jet plane and 180 performing soldiers.

The Red Knight aircraft, flown by Flt.-Lieut. Jack Waters of London, Ontario, will open the program with a 30-minute aerobatic show.

Militia units involved in the tournament are the Seaforth Highlanders, 15th Field Regiment, the B.C. Regiment and signal squadron, 155 RCASC, and the Canadian Scottish Regiment.

Internal Rumpus Hits Britain's Labor Party

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP)—An internal rumpus has boiled up in the Labor party over a veiled threat by Britain's largest union to chop at the pocketbooks of MPs whose parliamentary voting records do not suit it.

The move, which some experts think may come close to infringing on members' constitutional privilege, has turned the spotlight on an unusual facet of British parliamentary life. This is the practice by unions of "sponsoring" designated MPs by picking up part of the bill for their annual expenses.

About 150 of the government group in the Commons is sponsored in this way by a union. The 1,400,000-member Transport and General Workers' Union, which threatened this week to upset the applecart by a decision of its convention in Blackpool, helps 26, including eight ministers.

The union, resentful of the fact that many of the 26 have not supported its bitter opposition to the government's wage-restraint policy, voted unanimously to have its national executive regularly scrutinize their voting records.

The warning from the TGWU is specially pointed because its powerful general secretary, Frank Cousins, quit as technology minister last year in protest over Labor legislation on a wage-price freeze.

Cousins said at Blackpool that a man could not ask for union members' money and then work consistently against union policy.

In general, assistance given to a sponsored MP runs to around $1,800 a year, though it can go higher. It was about $3,000 in Cousins' former constituency of Nuneaton.

While the sums are not large in terms of Canadian political spending, they can go a considerable way towards easing the financial burden of a Commons member, who gets only $9,750 a year.

Queen Mother Receives Degree From Dalhousie

HALIFAX (CP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth became the first member of any royal family to receive an honorary degree from Dalhousie University Friday.

Prime Minister Pearson also received an honorary degree during a special convocation in the university rink.

About 1,000 guests clapped as the Queen Mother, wearing a red-and-black - trimmed gown and black hat with gold tassle, entered.

University President Henry Hicks conferred the degrees of doctor of law.

Honorary degrees were also conferred on Dr. Matthew Robert Kinde of Battle Creek, Mich., a specialist in preventive medicine, and Dr. Norman Joseph Belliveau of Belliveau's Cove, N.S., president of the Canadian Medical Association.

Mr. Pearson said Vietnam and the Middle East are only two of the more tragic examples of the "gap between pretension and performance."

"We send shiploads of food to starving refugees and then other shiploads of ammunition to make more refugees."

The older generation was turning over to younger Canadians, who are now the majority of the population, "our failures and our success."

PRAISES CANADA

The Queen Mother, speaking briefly, said that during Confederation year Canada is celebrating the "birth of a great nation."

The day was humid and sultry with grey skies and intermittent showers. But the Queen Mother rode through the city in an open car on her way to attend a series of engagements, the busiest day so far of her 13-day tour of the Atlantic Provinces.

Israel, Egypt Fight Along Suez Canal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt and Israel battled with tanks and artillery along the Suez Canal Friday.

Israeli jet aircraft strafed Egyptian artillery positions in the fiercest fight since the Middle East ceasefire of June 10.

The United Nations announced its ceasefire observers will be operating at the canal Sunday in an attempt to stop the sporadic fighting.

An Israeli communique said Israel's jets hammered Egyptian artillery south of the 104-mile waterway to stop harassing fire and permit the army to remove dead and wounded.

Cairo radio said the Israeli planes made four attacks and that Egyptian anti-aircraft fire shot down five jets. An Egyptian military spokesman said two civilians were killed and at least 46 wounded.

Both sides claimed they inflicted punishment as big guns roared from the canal's east and west banks.

Israel claimed three Egyptian tanks were knocked out and reported five Israeli soldiers killed and more than 20 wounded.

ARABS CLAIM HITS

Egyptian authorities claimed that they also destroyed eight Israeli tanks, 10 half-track armored vehicles, six trucks, one launch and three other boats and some guns.

Egypt placed its military losses at one tank and four soldiers wounded.

An Egyptian military spokesman said Israel started the fighting "to gain some sort of advantage" before arrival of the UN ceasefire observers. The spokesman said Israeli air and artillery attacks on Suez and Ismailia were on "civilian targets in areas where we have no troops."

Four Israeli Planes Downed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) Four Israeli planes were shot down Friday by Egyptian anti-aircraft fire when they raided the town of Suez, said an Egyptian general command statement quoted by Cairo radio.

Earlier an army announcement in Tel Aviv said Israeli aircraft were called in to silence Egyptian batteries at the head of the Gulf of Suez Friday after a day of shelling of Israeli forces in the area.

Peking Mobs Rap Chi

By ANTHONY GREY

PEKING (Reuters) — Hundreds of thousands of persons took to the streets of Peking Friday in a new wave of condemnation of President Liu Shao-chi.

Streaming through the Chinese capital in disciplined ranks, they carried banners and portraits of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and cartoons ridiculing Liu.

The marchers repeatedly roared slogans against Liu, party General Secretary Teng Hsiao-ping and former fourth-ranking party member Tao Chu.

The demonstration was the first of its kind since April when the Maoist leadership branded Liu "the top party person in authority taking the capitalist road" and the leader of the opposition to Mao.

The reasons for the new campaign were not immediately clear, but the demonstrations coincided with an editorial in the party newspaper People's Daily which said a handful of persons in the party are trying to exploit recent disorder connected with Mao's "cultural revolution" to make a counter-attack against the proletariat and facilitate their comeback. The paper referred to the disorder as "anarchy."

Some slogans on walls in the capital in black Chinese characters four feet high spoke of an attempted comeback by Liu.

U.S. Heavyweights Go Into Action

SAIGON (AP)—The U.S. command swung its aerial heavyweights into action Friday against suspected North Vietnamese troop concentrations in highland mountains near the Cambodian frontier of South Vietnam.

B-52 bombers rained tons of explosives into a sector seven miles southwest of Duc ... in support of ground troops of the U.S. 4th Infantry Division, who would bear the brunt of any massive North Vietnamese drive in that area.

Jets struck about 220 miles south of the so-called demilitarized zone where they made three raids Thursday against gun positions that harass U.S. marines and South Vietnamese troops south of the zone.

Canadians Produce Near-Perfect Cigarette Filter

By DAVID QUINTNER

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A Canadian university research team has announced a major breakthrough in eliminating possible health hazards in cigarette smoking.

Dr. Joseph E. J. Habowsky and Otto and Peter Brudy of the University of Windsor said in an interview they were making the announcement because of action by Columbia University in acquiring a "revolutionary" tar and nicotine-reducing cigarette filter system.

The three men claim a tiny plastic device they have developed eliminates up to 90 per cent of the possibly injurious agents present when cigarettes are smoked.

The Columbia statement acknowledged its new system removed 50 to 80 per cent more tars than existing filters.

Dr. Habowsky, 38, assistant professor of biology at the University of Windsor, said the group had worked together for less than a year to develop techniques enabling them to isolate potentially harmful agents released by combustion in cigarettes.

They say their device is a percolator, a small plastic chamber that could be manufactured at the same cost as a filter tip.

MADE OF PLASTIC

The percolator, a fraction smaller in diameter than a cigarette, is a chambered cell constructed from plastic, with a perforated aluminum diaphragm attached. As smoke is inhaled into the mouth, tars are deposited safely outside the chamber on the rim of the device.

Otto Brudy, 61, inventor of the percolator, said a spiral motion of air waves set up within the chamber helps force the tars through the diaphragm. He said the aerodynamic principle involved is not understood.

They have refused to identify the device further, pending patents in Canada and the United States.

The three men claim their researches indicate they are "somewhat farther ahead of developments on filter systems as acquired by Columbia — if we judge correctly the information in reports from New York."

He said that in spite of emphasis placed on seeking a possible link between cigarette smoking and some forms of cancer, this had not been the orientation of the Windsor team.

"We feel that a whole series of respiratory ailments could be involved in our work here. The possibility exists that our researches may aid in offering some relief to emphysema and other sufferers who are undergoing hardship in trying to stop smoking," the German-born biologist said.

GOVERNMENTS ALERTED

Federal and provincial health departments have been alerted on the findings and representatives of two leading tobacco companies in Canada have inspected the project, a part-itme, self-financed program.

One of the most curious aspects of their research, they say, is the observed effects of cigarette smoke on the simple-celled aquatic animal, hydra.

Dr. Habowsky worked with posed to tar-laden smoke develop tumors of a type not previously reported.

Mr. Brudy began experimentation with cigarette filter systems in the 1930s but thought-up the percolator "almost by chance" when designing another device for microscopy a year ago.

The three men smoke a package of cigarettes a day each and have impressive credits in research.

Dr. Habowsky worked with the Atomic Energy Commission of Canada at Chalk River, Ont., where he conducted studies on the effects of radiation on brain cells. Otto Brudy, internationally-recognized designer of research equipment, is superintendent of the University of Windsor's research equipment section. He was a colleague of Dr. Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, and aided in the development of the first artificial lung. Peter Brudy, 23, a chemistry technician, pioneered research into recent advances in automobile reflector designs.

Buses Burned In Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP)—Roving bands of Chinese sympathizers burned buses, fought with police and staged sporadic demonstrations in Hong Kong Friday night as anti - government terrorism erupted after 12 hours of relative quiet.

Bands of terrorists dealt their damaging blows and scurried through side streets, followed by police riot squads and crowds of curious spectators in a helter-skelter pattern.

Early in the Century...

City Police Had Troubles but Few Traffic Problems

By GLEN ALLEN
News Staff Writer

Back in the bad old days Nelson was the place where the Sagebrush trail met the Klondike road.

And if the resulting civil commotion wasn't enough to attract the likes of Billy the Kid and Jesse James, it kept the city's three-man police force going around the clock.

Speeding horses, stray chickens, hobos, petty crooks, houses of ill-repute, railroad strikers, drunk and disorderly miners off on a toot, gambling, and a man named Silver King Mike kept the lockup full and the magistrate busy.

Police records from years at the turn of the century now in the custody of Nelson Police Chief H. M. Thomlison, tell the full, sometimes amusing story.

In those pre-Great War heydays an entry in the force's minute book dated August 17, 1907, reads: "On duty 8 a.m. Notified all saloons and hotels that there was no more gambling after 2 p.m. on Saturday until Monday morning. Off duty midnight."

Or how about: "Nov. 1, 1907 — called out of bed at 2:30 a.m. Two chippies having fight. Arrested Hattie Adams who shot off a revolver in the house."

The law's handwriting, some of it hurried, nearly illegible, some clear, and careful continues: "April 26, 1908 — On duty at 12 midnight. Electric Train Company car barn burning from 3:15 a.m. to 4:15 a.m. A quiet night."

Another April entry. "Quiet day. Ordered Chinese window cleaner to stop cleaning windows on main street on Sunday."

CHICKEN ROUNDUP

One notation that "quiet" spring reads: "Went out with Chief to round up chickens running in the streets.

"Later, ordered Silver King Mike to remove boxes from Hall St."

May 21, 1908: "Arrested man for sleeping in box car. In company with chief, went through red light district. All quiet. Also arrested man for insanity."

And on May 28: "Police officer reported to me that he caught a man in the act of nailing a defamatory letter to Telephone post on Baker St. Paraded streets, fed prisoners. Cautioned several people for obstructing sidewalks while Salvation Army was holding meetings in Baker Street. No drunkiness (sic).

May 29: "Warned hobo to leave town at 11:20 p.m. He left. No complaints.

FIRST AUTOMOBILE

P.S. First automobile arrived in Nelson up from CPR."

June 11, 1908: "Received complaint of some men shooting about midnight .Said could be heard as far as Ymir.

"Man complained that poundkeeper took 60-cent fish from him and didn't pay 60 cents."

July 1 (Dominion Day): "Chief and two constables attended sports all day."

Oct. 6: "CPR strike. Striker fired two shots. Threw rocks. Pickets harrassing CPR police."

And from charge to sentence.

Another book — a bigger one with even more writing — in Chief Thomlison's care, is the police court register.

A sampling from the court records for 1901 shows the same old crime and punishment theme. Only the offenses — and the price paid — are perhaps different.

One Owen Thomas of Nelson paid $1.25 when he "did drive a wagon drawn by two horses at a gallop exceeding eight miles per hour on Baker St."

Another cold winter day George Hiatt, no fixed address, was found guilty of being drunk and disorderly and was given one hour to get out of town.

Stud Williams, a pioneer playboy, was fined $25 by the magistrate, "for supporting himself by gaming."

HORSES AT LARGE

Allowing horses to run at large cost any number of Nelson horse-owners that year $10.

James Campbell was fined $5 for driving his bicycle on a Nelson sidewalk and another unfortunate traveller the same price for the same offence — but in a sleigh.

A restaurant proprieter paid $10 for carrying swill in two uncovered vessels, and a woman, whose name occurred often enough in the police occurrences book was fined $30 for keeping a disorderly house.

Carrying a concealed weapon — and many more must have remained concealed — carried a fine of $25.

Penalties for anyone not from Nelson for minor offences was almost invariably to "get out of town."

By actual count, in the whole year there were only two traffic offences. And that's the biggest change of all.

"Doing Job Well"

Lifeguards at Pools Defended by C. Bell

The city director of recreation, Charles Bell said Wednesday it was not necessary to increase the number of lifeguards at local pools.

Commenting on a recent incident at Gyro pool, in which a three-year-old child was pulled from the water by her father, Mr. Bell said children of that age "should never be in the water by themselves."

"No guard can concentrate on any one individual among 200," he said.

He warned that no one should leave a three-year-old child around a pool and "rely on any number of guards to pick her particular child."

"At that age they take constant looking after," he said.

Mr. Bell said he was well pleased with the quality of job that the life guards have been doing.

"I think there has been no negligence on their part at all," he said.

Mr. Bell said that he checks the guards "twice a day," to insure that they are doing the job well.

He said the Red Cross checked the guards Wednesday and "were pleased with the job they are doing."

Mr. Bell said "when the pools are full," there are three guards on duty.

"You could have twice the guards and you wouldn't see them all," he said.

Mr. Bell commended lifeguard Carol Wilbur who rescued a man swimmer, who weighed about 265 pounds, from drowning Wednesday in Lakeside pool.

He said such a feat was a "tremendous job" worthy of commendation."

Commenting on the quality of life guards and pool safety Mr. Bell said, "I haven't seen any slip ups yet."

Mr. Bell said that for safety reasons, "only 175 persons" are allowed in the Lakeside pool at any one time.

When the pool is crowded all the guards are used he said.

Commenting on a complaint made recently by a parent whose three-year-old child fell into the pool, Mr. Bell said, "We are now putting up signs that these children must be accompanied by a guardian."

SEATED ABOARD THE LIONS' FLOAT for the Jaycees Centennial parade for August 19, is Nelson's queen, Miss Karen Hegland. Lions have been working diligently to get the float ready for the great day and are hoping to have plenty of competition from floats entered by other Nelson and district organizations.

Mrs. N. Gray Of Balfour Dies

Mrs. Norah Havelock Gray, well-known Balfour resident, died in Kootenay Lake General Hospital Friday.

Born at Pincher Creek on Oct. 20, 1902, she attended school there and later came to Nelson in 1921 to train and graduate as a registered nurse at the Kootenay Lake General Hospital. She married James Gray at Vancouver in 1948 and they resided at Vancouver and then at Kaslo for a number of years. For the past six years they made their home at Balfour. Mrs. Gray had been an active member of the Anglican Church having served on various Guilds.

Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter Mrs. A. (Beatrice) Robson of New Westminster and six grandchildren.

J. R. Bicken Dies at 75

A former Procter and Balfour resident, James R. Bichan, died recently at the Surrey Memorial Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mr. Bichan was 75.

Born in the Orkney Islands off Scotland, Mr. Bichan worked as a carpenter in Procter and Balfour before moving to Vancouver during the Second World War.

He worked on the Coast in shipyards and then worked into the house building business until his retirement in 1952.

Before his death he lived at Guilford, Surrey.

He is survived by his wife, Charlotte.

MARRIAGE MEDAL SHOWN

NEW YORK (AP)—The June exhibit at the Brooklyn Public Library, a show of old and new wedding mementoes, included the marriage medal of Sarah Rapalje, known as the first white girl born in New Netherlands. The medal was struck in 1639.

Teacher Gives Insight Into Mideast Problem

A Trail history teacher and former prosecutor at the Nuremberg Trials in Germany told Rotarians Friday that bitter hatred between Arabs and Jews may someday end.

"If the Jews in Israel survive another 50 years," the hatred may end, said Dr. V. V. Fanderlik, Friday.

Dr. Fanderlik, originally of Czechoslovakia, was a delegate at the war crimes commission at Nuremberg and is teaching history in Trail.

Speaking on "Israel — The Problem of the Middle East" he said it was essential "the Jews find a way of getting along with the Arabs."

"Israel has no future as just a place where the Jews can congregate," he said.

He told Rotarians that Israel could and must "become the import centre of the Middle East."

Although Lebanon is the present centre Dr. Fanderlik said he thought Israel could take the lead.

He said that Israel is the only Middle East area with "potential and European standards."

It is necessary then, that some kind of workable "relationship with the Arabs," is found by the Jews.

But the "problem is 2000 years old and won't be resolved in our lifetime," he cautioned.

But Israel is "a kind of new colony that will survive but it can't remain isolated," said Doctor Fanderlik.

EAST BUSINESSMAN

"It has to become the businessman of the East," he repeated.

The Rotarians listened attentively while Dr. Fanderlik added some historical fact to his lecture.

Before the 18th Century "Jews couldn't make oaths because they weren't Christians, they couldn't served in the army and they couldn't be land owners," he explained.

This situation which went on "until 1800", forced the Jews to concentrate on business.

The treatment and lot of the Jews improved after that date but "anti-semitism survived," he said.

At the end of the 19th century, "a movement of Zionism grew," which, he explained, was the determination of all Jews "to meet back in their promised land of Palestine."

CLASS DISTINCTION

He added, however, that all Jews who "always had class distinction" did not return to Palestine.

"The poorer Jews went to Palestine and the richer went to New York," he said.

Around the time of the First World War, the famous Balfour Declaration recommended the British government "establish a home for the Jews in Palestine," he stated.

And in 1948 "Israel was formed just for the Jews" he concluded.

Conflict arose when the numbers of Jews increased rapidly and the "Arabians refused to be squeezed out."

Now began the task assumed by the British "to keep order, keep the Arabs quiet and keep the Jews from immigrating."

The British soon decided to give up the job of "policeman" said Dr. Fanderlik and the UN took over.

The resulting wars between Israel and the Arab states illustrated the "hatred between the Israelites and the Arabians that has grown with these people all their lives," he concluded.

Mrs. Kelly Passes at 85

Mrs. Mary Anne Kelly, resident of Nelson for the past 24 years, died in Kootenay Lake General Hospital on Friday.

Born in Scotland on Dec. 8, 1881 she came to Canada in 1917 and married John Kelly at Calgary in 1919. They lived for a number of years at Fort Steele and later at Cranbrook before moving to Nelson.

Her husband predeceased her in 1952. Mrs. Kelly is survived by two daughters, Mrs. William (Mary) Cavalier of Nelson and Mrs. W. D. (Ann) Johnson of Cranbrook and eight grandchildren.

Funeral services are to be held Tuesday at Cranbrook with interment in Westlawn Cemetery.

Drowned Tot Born in Nelson

Trudy Christine Hawkins, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hawkins of Crawford Bay, was a drowning victim on Thursday, July 13th at Crawford Creek. Trudy was born in Nelson on September 14, 1964. Besides her parents, she is survived by another sister, Wendy Darlene.

No Injuries In Collision

FRUITVALE (Staff) — Passengers narrowly escaped serious injury Friday afternoon after a collision on Highway 3, one-half mile west of here.

Drivers were Peter Heinrick of Calgary and John Harvey of Salmo.

Damage to both cars was estimated to be $600.

Given Year For Beating Brother

FRUITVALE (Staff) — A man who was given a suspended sentence July 28 for assault, breached his suspension by assaulting his brother July 11 and was sentenced to one year in jail.

Gerald Graves of Fruitvale was convicted on a charge of common assault, Thursday after he pulled his sleeping brother William from a car and beat him.

Police said Graves bound his brother's hands with masking tape after beating him but the victim was able to free himself and flee his attacker.

The assault took place at the brother's body shop near Montrose on Bear Creek road.

On June 28, Graves was given a one-month suspended sentence for threatening his brothers William and Harold with a machete, after the three had argued.

Nelson Forests, Tinder Dry, Burst to Flames in 15 Spots

Nelson District of Forests burst into flames in 15 new locations Friday, bringing the total number of forest fires to 46.

A forest service spokesman said 17 of the 22 ranger districts in the Nelson general district now have forest fires, some of which are in extremely remote areas.

"There are 78 men fighting the fires now, an increase in 28 fire fighters from Thursday," he said.

"If we don't get some rain we could have some real trouble," he warned.

He explained that "one good rain" keeps the forests and undergrowth green and moist for "about two weeks," but the forecast for the weekend is "hot and dry."

FLASH HAZARD

"If this weather continues we could have a flash hazard that could take off on us," he said.

He explained that a 'flash hazard' was a condition reached when the dry slash after logging and the fuel on the ground, or windfall, gets so dry that fire becomes a dangerous threat.

"We are not at that point yet," he said but added that when the forests do reach a flash hazard they become "so hot the green stuff burns."

He said that the forest service can only hope we "don't get any wind."

The wind would carry the blazes through an area at a rate that would make fire-fighting difficult.

The forest officer said that all fires burning in the Nelson District now were caused by the "Wednesday evening thunderstorm and a local lightning storm Thursday."

He said the storm Thursday "wasn't as general as the one before," and as a result the area affected wasn't as large.

Most of the fires were "in the East Kootenay from Invermere down to Creston," he continued.

There are presently seven fires in the Nakusp area which "we are bombing at the moment," he said.

He indicated that fires in the Duncan area, one of the least accessible areas, would be fought Friday night, "as soon as it cools down."

There are eight fires at Lardeau and three at Creston and these are the fires closest to Nelson.

According to the spokesman there was one fire in the Lardeau area that was presenting a fighting problem because of "dry windfall."

This fire was in an area of old "burnt trees," that apparently could or has rekindled.

"We can't get equipment in to fight this fire and fighting with only manpower is pretty difficult," he said.

The fire hazard in the Nelson district is still classified as "moderate to high."

New Orange Sticker Forces Driver to Report to Police

Police in British Columbia have been armed with a new weapon to help them in the battle of accident prevention.

Its a square piece of paper, colored orange and white, and its a necessary passport for an accident damaged car.

For from now on, any vehicles damaged in accidents, in which there are deaths or injuries or damage is over $100, must get police clearance before they can be repaired.

And the small colored stickers give that clearance.

RCMP and city police departments have been issued with the stickers.

They will put them on cars at the scene of accidents or at police stations.

POLICE INSPECTION

But before the vehicles get the sticker clearance, damage to them will be inspected by the police.

On the sticker is a diagram of a car. The corresponding damage on the accident car will be marked in the diagram.

The new damaged motor vehicle clearance order came into being at the beginning of July.

Repair shops also have to comply with it.

They have been instructed not to repair an accident-damaged car unless it bears the sticker.

Police have welcomed the clearance order, "It was a long time coming," said one officer Friday.

Alberta and Ontario have run the scheme for several years.

An RCMP spokesman said in Nelson: "This means that if a motorist has an accident he will have to go to the police. It forces his hand."

But he warned that stickers will only be issued by police in the area or city where the accident occurred.

"If you have an accident in Nelson it is no good going to Prince George and then applying for a sticker."

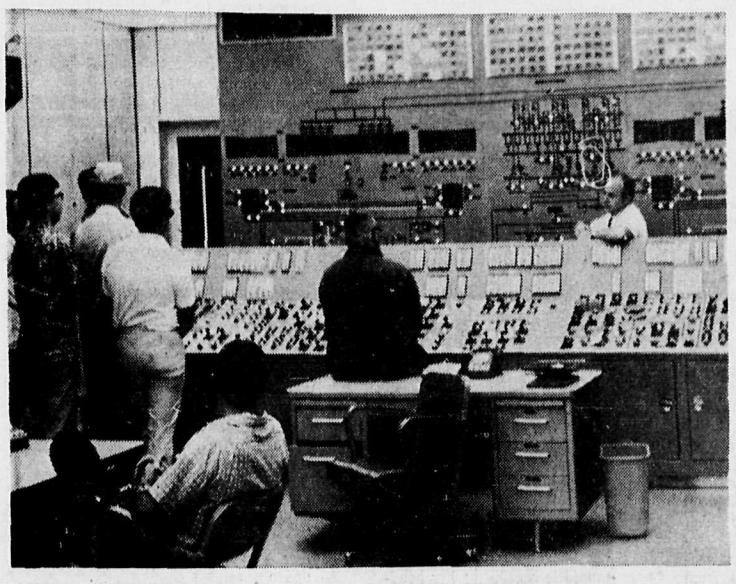
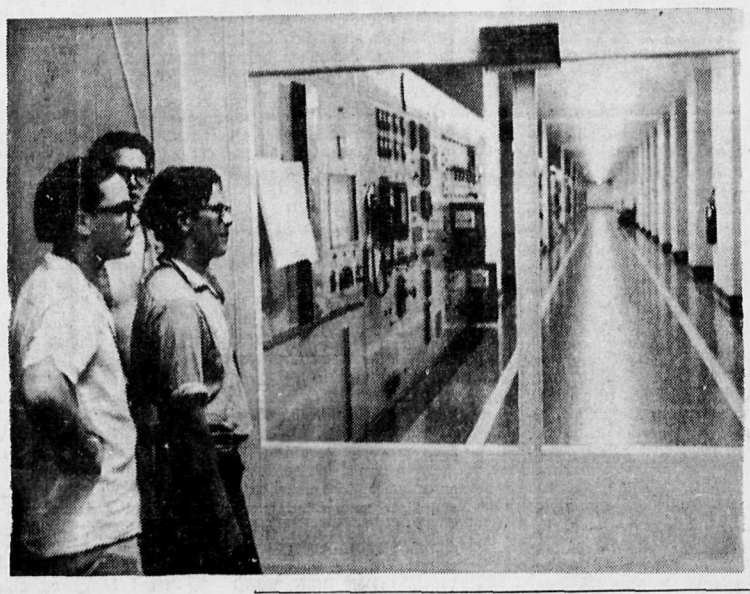
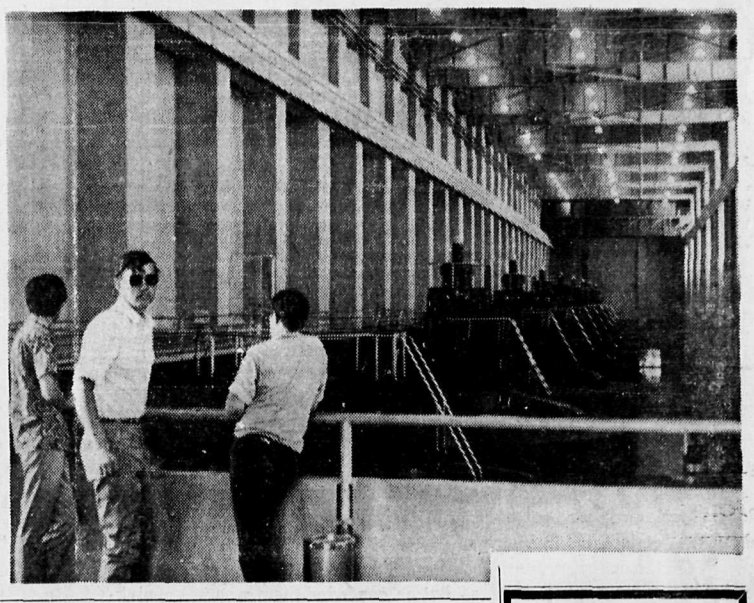
The Mysteries of Nuclear Power Production Revealed







Cranbrook . . .

Rotary Society Now Operating

CRANBROOK — Efforts toward establishment of a united fund drive in Cranbrook to pool the multitude of appeals for funds for worthy purposes each year will continue in 1967 under Rotary Club sponsorship, new president L. A. T. Nimsick reports.

A club committee is preparing findings of the past year toward enlisting all Cranbrook service clubs support in efforts toward consolidating the year-long series of duplicate canvasses of the city supporting various national and local worthy causes.

This will be circulated to clubs and lodges sponsoring canvass for these with the recommendation one major drive a year be jointly undertaken.

Main Rotary community service project underway at present is arranging for the Sam Steele Days barbecue dinner which will be Friday, August 11 when guests of honor will be Harwood Steele, son of Major Sam Steele of the North West Mounted Police, and Rotary District 508 past governor, Greek Wells of Spokane.

Rotarians prepare the barbecue which will be served at Mount Baker auditorium, with a limit of 200 tickets on sale.

New Rotary officers also installed recently are vice-president John Zwick, secretary Cliff Barley, treasurer Robert Cockwell, and directors Dr. A. R. Richardson, Ronald Rines and past president Michael Harris, with one more still to be named.

Castlegar Students Tour Nuclear Plant

CASTLEGAR — The world's mightiest steam nuclear power plant was recently visited by seven aspiring young engineers who are students at Stanley Humphries High School here.

They were given VIP treatment and a full guided tour of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's Hanford Nuclear steam plant in southern Washington.

The group headed by Peter Samoyloff had earlier visited the Grand Coulee Dam and its giant generating plant.

"The sights both inside and outside the dam were simply stupendous," says Larry Wanjoff, one of the young engineers.

With him were Albert Jankola, Peter Saliken, John Abetkoff, Don Shukin, Stanley Sherstibitoff and Dick Fowler, president of the unique high school Future Engineers Club which the students belong to.

At the nuclear plant, the young visitors were shown the two 430,000,000 watt steam turbine generators — largest in the world weighing in at over three million pounds.

Second stop in the $120 million plant was the giant complex control room from which the entire plant is operated.

On a point overlooking the Columbia River, the Canadian students were shown where the late President Kennedy broke the ground for the construction of the plant.

He had waved a radioactive wand over a geiger counter which triggered a steam shovel to scoop the first bucketful of soil.

After the nuclear plant, the students visited the Hanford Science Centre where they learned more about nuclear power.

The Stanley Humphries Future Engineers Club was formed in 1965 and is believed the first of its kind in B.C.

It was started through the efforts of two men, Elmer Verigen and G. Hughes.

And since its formation, members have made many field trips to engineering projects.

Appledale Beats Rosebery Team

NEW DENVER — The Appledale Little League team completely outplayed and outhit the Rosebery - Silverton team here Saturday coming out on the top end of a 19-3 score.

Rosebery - Silverton missed their pitcher Gerry Detta and catcher Billy Scott but nevertheless gave it everything they had. The visiting Appledale squad scored 3 runs in each the first and second innings, were shut out in the third, went around the batting order in the 4th to score 9 big runs and added 4 more in the final frame.

The home squad scored their only 3 runs in the 5th inning.

H. Rebalkin on the mound for the Appledale boys struck out 13 while allowing 5 walks while for Rosebery - Silverton Stewie Nelson and Jeff Broughton together registered 6 strikeouts and gave up 7 walks. H. Rebalkin and R. Ozeroff were the big hitters for Appledale while Jeff Broughton got the only extra base hit for the local team.

Combines Increase First Place Hold

NEW DENVER — The New Denver-Silverton Combines held strongly onto first place in the Kaslo, Slocan, Arrow Lakes Baseball League when they travelled to Nakusp Sunday and added another victory to their record, taking their fifth straight league game by a convincing 10-3 score.

In league and exhibition encounters this year, the Combines have suffered only one loss to date and that to Kaslo, 1966 champions by a score of 5-4.

Young southpaw Dugal Greenan pitched a masterful 4-hitter while striking out six men and allowing 8 walks, to take the win for the Combines. Losing pitchers Derek McQuaid and Tad Kiyono together struck out six players and allowed 5 walks.

The Combines struck early in the game for 2 runs in the first inning and added another one in the 3rd frame and were then shut out in the next 3 innings, only to break loose for a 7-run onslaught in the 7th inning as they brought 11 men to the plate. They scored their 10 runs on 8 hits while committing 3 errors.

Nakusp scored their first run in the 3rd inning and brought in 2 more runs in the 6th inning to tie the game up, but from then on were held scoreless. The home team, Nakusp scored their 3 runs on 4 hits and committed 4 errors.

Big batsmen for the New Denver - Silverton Club were Lorne Wright with 2 hits while Terry Minnis made a double with 3 RBI's and Doug Neslon also a double with 2 RBI's. Nakusp's top batter was Derek McQuaid with 2 hits out of 4 times at the plate.

This Sunday afternoon at the New Denver Centennial Park, the Combines will host the much improved Slocan Silver Kings who will be seeking revenge for their loss to the Combines last month by a score of 9-4.

The Combines who are currently in first spot have as their leading batter Lorne Wright who is batting 390 while youthful Doug Thring is in second place with a 368 average. Veteran Knobby Hayashi who is very well known throughout the valley in the sport of baseball is closely behind with 351. Speedster Dugal Greenan is batting 345 while Eddie Elsmore is close behind at 333.

Dugal Greenan is also the leading base stealer of the Combines with 12 stolen bases and also leads in the walks department with 14. Terry Minnis leads the club with 12 RBI's while stalwart Dugal Greenan is closely behind with 11 RBI's. Doug Thring is currently leading the Combines with extra base hits with 2 homeruns, 2 triples and 1 double.

Game time will be 2 p.m. this Sunday afternoon at the Centennial Park between these two Slocan Lake teams, the New Denver-Silverton Combines and the Slocan Silver Kings.

Reveal Plans For Project

KINNAIRD (Staff) — Plans for a new business development in the vicinity of the Hi Arrow Arms hotel were revealed to Kinnaird village council Tuesday.

A hotel spokesman said six lots near the hotel will be sold in hopes of starting a centre for the business area.

Preferably the lots will be sold in one-acre tracts to assure controlled development which would be valuable to the hotel and Kinnaird as a whole.

The idea first appeared publicly at the meeting but has been considered for the past year.

The hotel spokesman said extensive planning of sewage water and paving of the new area have to be done before full development takes place.

Alma Likes Miniskirts!

Always seeking a subject of general interest I stood on the corner and watched them go by, cast a critical eye on every one I noted in the supermarkets or prettily posed almost everywhere. Then asked old and young, male and female what they thought of the tempest in the tea-pot. Height of the present hemline or the mini-skirt is what I'm trying to reach and if you're very short that will be difficult.

Frankly speaking, I like them, on young girls and those with the figure to dare them. They're concealing but revealing. Far more flattering for girlish gams than skimp short shorts or stretchies which outline every seam in the unmentionables. Some oldsters scowled and some youngsters giggled when questioned, the former grinned though, when reminded of the late '20's and early '30's. They'd forgotten they were at least three inches above the knee which, if the girl was really hep, rouged to match her cheeks. Heaven only knows why. These silly teenagers — aren't we all at one time or another? Shucks it's only part of growing up so why get in a dither about styles—wear 'em and enjoy yourself, otherwise your age is showing which in this era is worse than a run in your nylons.

Guess it's time to run along and gather bits of business about the village.

Visitors from far and near keep this town agog. Among these are Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Bartlett and two children, John and Jane from Medicine Hat on a two-week stay with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Davidson. Swelling the population for a week is Allan Liness from Prince George, visiting his mother Mrs. W. McLaughlin and relatives in Nelson and Fruitvale.

A former resident, Mrs. I. Johnson of Quesnel, has been guest of her brother J. Bacchan and other relatives in the area.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Read have returned from Expo and a stopover at Calgary with Mr. Read's brother Vern. The couple declare it was indeed an exciting adventure to tour the buildings at Expo and sore feet was the only complaint. While at Calgary they "took in" the stampede.

We hear the Guide company from here are thoroughly enjoying their camping at Fletcher Creek with Kokanee Division.

It's a sad sight — the almost finished swimming pool dry and unused all for the sake of enough volunteer labor to finish it off. And these hot days will not go on forever, is the lament. Too bad but that thing recognized as community spirit has almost vanished. The few faithfuls carry on. It will be interesting to note who takes the first swim.

The scarlet wands of Indian paint brush splash the byways with color. A sharp contrast to the white daisy and green fern. Bees bumble and drone, the shrill whistle of the gopher pierces the heat waves shimmering midst the timber and another wonderful day prepares to dissolve into night.

Stalemate It Is

Enroute to Saigon for his ninth visit in six years, Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara was a little testy in responding to a reporter's question about the "stalemate" in Vietnam.

"On the contrary," said McNamara, "the military operations continue to show very substantial progress." But he conceded there was not equivalent progress in the pacification program. The military command recently took over control of the latter program, designed to secure liberated areas and villages against Communist raids.

If reports from Vietnam are true, Secretary McNamara will find that the pacification program isn't working because the Vietnamese forces charged with carrying it out under American advisers are not doing their job as well as they should. One American returning from Vietnam recently said he visited a village in which the 59-member pacification team was short 28 men absent without leave and with five of its seven women members pregnant.

But whether or not there is a military stalemate depends upon interpretation of the word. The Viet Cong were reported to have had 5,000 full-time and part-time fighting men in 1960. They are now believed to have 230,000 fighting men, most with modern arms supplied from the Soviet bloc and Red China. In 1960 there were no North Vietnamese Army troops in South Vietnam. Today there are about 60,000 NVA. North Vietnam has between 200,000 and 300,000 soldiers north of the demilitarized zone, in addition to many more reserves, and Ho Chi Minh appears willing to commit as many as necessary to keep the war going.

The United States has raised its military commitment in South Vietnam to 466,000 troops since early 1965 and Gen. William Westmoreland has asked for at least 200,000 more. There is no reason to believe on the basis of the record, however, that all increases in American troop strength will not be met proportionately by increases in Viet Cong and North Vietnamese fighting forces.

If it is true that the South Vietnamese and American forces have killed 200,000 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in South Vietnam since the war began —and the estimates are subject to grave question — the calculation by the Associated Press that the VC-NVA troops in the south now number 290,000 is truly astonishing.

The determination of the Communist-led forces to win certainly is equal to the dedication of American forces, and far more convincing than the attitude of the South Vietnamese military and civilian population.

Although Secretary McNamara may with justice claim "substantial progress" in military operations, and although American policy prohibits taking North Vietnam out of the war by massive bombing, a sound case may be made for use of the word "stalemate." Best military estimates now are that at least one million American troops will be necessary in South Vietnam. But there could still be a stalemate if North Vietnam shoved another 200,000 regulars — who are first class fighting men — into South Vietnam.

In short, there is no clear prospect of total victory in South Vietnam, and there will not be unless or until the South Vietnamese decide the Viet Cong must be defeated at all costs. Secretary McNamara has been over-optimistic after previous visits to the war front. We await with interest his report after this tour. —Oregonian.

Time of Reassessment

A recent day must have been a day of sober reflection and reassessment for some members of the United Nations.

The Soviet Union took a diplomatic bruising when its resolution citing Israel as the aggressor in the Middle East war and demanding reparations was defeated. This the Russians may have expected, but the fact that their resolution got only 36 votes must have been galling after the Soviet Union had manoeuvered the Middle East question into the General Assembly and after Premier Alexei Kosygin had travelled to New York to argue the Arab case before the delegates.

Even the Yugoslav resolution, sponsored by 19 non-aligned nations and supported by the Soviet Union and other Communist states, failed by a wide margin to win the necessary two-thirds majority with 53 votes to 46 against and 20 abstentions. The defeat of this resolution — which did not condemn Israel but called for an immediate and unconditional withdrawal of its troops — also punctured France's prestige in the United Nations.

France had backed the Yugoslav resolution but despite its lobbying was unable to secure the votes of more than half of its former colonies in Africa, nor was it able to influence the Latin American bloc.

The United States ended the day pleased that the Russians and French had suffered setbacks, but had to acknowledge its own limitations by not allowing its resolution to go to a vote. For Israel, elation at the defeat of the Russian and Yugoslavian resolutions had to be tempered by the Assembly's sharp disapproval of its actions in Jerusalem. The resolution, calling on Israel to rescind its legislation unifying Jerusalem and not to change the status of the city in any way, was supported by 99 countries, including Canada.

Until Assembly president Abdul Rahman Pazhwa's ill-timed announcement of a one-week adjournment, it appeared that the Middle East question would quickly move back to the Security Council where the propaganda winds might have diminished sufficiently to have permitted real steps toward a settlement.

Then there might have been agreement to send a representative of the Secretary-General to the Middle East to talk to the disputants, and to report back to the council on the possibility of mediation. This is a suggestion which Canada already has made tentatively, and which now might find favor. At this point, it seems clear that neither side is willing to make the first concession and that a series of bilateral moves will be necessary if peace and stability are to be achieved.

The chances of such negotiations being carried out successfully without the services of a respected and neutral UN mediator are negligible. —Toronto Globe and Mail.

Fighting Along Canal
Katangan Revolt Ends
Riots in Hong Kong

Strife in the Middle East, the Far East and Africa held world attention this week.

A new outbreak of fighting Thursday along the Suez Canal was described as the most serious since a ceasefire between Israeli and Arab forces went into effect five weeks ago.

The troops of Egypt and Israel confront each other along the canal, closed to the world's ships since the start of the six-day war in early June when the Israelis smashed Arab armies and occupied chunks of Egyptian, Jordanian and Syrian territory.

Lt.-Gen. Odd Bull, the Norwegian who heads the United Nations Palestine observer force, continued with preparations to post neutral observers along the ceasefire lines. Bull said 16 observers will begin their duties on both sides of the canal Sunday.

In New York, debate went on in the UN General Assembly on resolutions demanding withdrawal of Israeli forces from the territories they overran.

Another assembly resolution was considered certain of approval. It calls upon Israel to rescind its annexation of the Old City of Jerusalem, which it took from Jordan and incorporated politically with Israel's New City. The Israelis meanwhile were taking steps to ensure access for all regions to the holy shrines of the Old City.

REBELLION ENDED

In The Congo, an eight-day rebellion by Katangan and mercenary troops in the northeast appeared over. The mercenaries were in flight by road Friday towards Uganda, while Red Cross plans flew out Europeans and Americans who had been held hostage in Kisangani.

The uprisings in Kisangani and Bukavu and Kindu in Kivu province were believed linked with the kidnapping of ex-premier Moise Tshombe and his detention in Algiers. The Congo is trying to extradite Tshombe, under death sentence on treason charges.

VIOLENCE IN HONG KONG

Hong Kong, the British colony on China's doorstep, continued to be a trouble spot. The known death toll reached 21 Friday in riots by Chinese which began May 11.

Troops and Hong Kong forces were making raids and arrests in an effort to curb violent anti-British demonstrations, strikes and terrorist attacks. The disturbances started with industrial disputes two months ago.

FIGHTING BIAFRA

Nigerian federal troops claimed to be making progress Friday in a military campaign to end the secession of its Eastern province.

Lt.-Col. Odumegwu Pjukwu, military governor of the African country's Eastern region, proclaimed the independent nation of Biafra May 30, saying the Ibo tribesmen who dominate the oil-rich province could no longer count on federal protection. Biafra claimed its troops were withstanding the assaults by central government forces.

AIR WARFARE INTENSE

In Vietnam, the U.S. Air Force stepped up its attacks on the North, attacking missile sites and other targets around Hanoi and Haiphong late in the week. Meanwhile U.S. troops just south of the so-called demilitarized zone suffered heavy casualties from North Vietnamese artillery dug in north of the zone. B-52 bombers and the guns of U.S. warships tried to silence the Communist weapons.

A further increase in forces fighting on the side of the Saigon government appeared in prospect after a new visit to South Vietnam this week by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara.

BETTER FILTER FOUND

A unique cigarette filter which offers hope for reducing the risks of lung cancer was announced Thursday by Columbia University in New York City.

The filter was developed by a New Jersey chemist, Robert L. Strickman, who claims it removes two-thirds of the nicotine and tars passed by current filters. He has given the university a major interest in his invention, on which much research remains to be done.

Two U.S. tobacco firms expressed interest in the filter, which will be made available for production under licence.

QUEEN MOTHER VISITS

Queen Mother Elizabeth, 67, is in the midst of a 12-day tour of Canada's four easternmost provinces. She arrived in Saint John, N.B., by air Tuesday and flies home from St. John's, Nfld., July 22. During her tour, the royal yacht Britannia is serving as her headquarters.

EX-MINISTER DEAD

Mr. Justice Guy Favreau, 50, former leader of Quebec's Liberal MPs, died Tuesday in Montreal of Uremia, a blood condition. The former federal justice minister and government leader in the House was appointed to the Quebec Superior Court bench after resigning from the cabinet April 4.

Critizied by the Dorion royal commission for his handling of the early stages of the investigation of Lucien Rivard, Favreau resigned as justice minister in June, 1965, but took on two other portfolios. Illness caused his later departure from the cabinet.

Favreau's integrity was not questioned in the report of Chief Justice Frederic Dorion. He was criticized for having decided on his own against prosecution of attempted-bribery allegations made in connection with Rivard, now serving a sentence in the U.S. on a narcotics charge.

Tarnished Green With Age

By DAVE NICHHOLSON

HALIFAX (CP) — Tarnished green with age, the statue of Joseph Howe stands in a peaceful plot of grass in downtown Halifax.

The inscription describes him as a patriot, but Howe is probably best remembered in his native province for his struggle to rend the fragile fabric of Confederation.

Nowhere in this capital city is there a statue of Sir Charles Tupper, the man who guided the province into union with New Brunswick and the Canadas.

The situation is only mildly surprising in a province where the first election after union produced an overwhelming victory for those who had opposed it and where a rankling distrust of people and things "Upper Canadian" remains to this day.

Howe spoke for many in his day when he wrote, shortly before Confederation was realized, that the rest of Canada had little to offer for Nova Scotians.

"Take a Nova Scotian to Ottawa, away above tidewater, freeze him up for five months where he cannot view the Atlantic, smell salt water or see the sail of a ship, and the man will pine and die."

FEARED REPUBLICANISM

But although the story of Nova Scotia's reluctant entry into the fledgling nation is in many ways a study of the conflicting personalities of the shrewd Howe and the bold Tupper, its roots lie deeper in the past.

Arguments for some sort of union in British North America were made as early as 1784 after New Brunswick and Cape Breton had been separated from Nova Scotia.

Many of the arguments centred on what had recently occurred to the south. Union, it was felt, would protect the British colonies in North America from the invidious influences of republicanism which had led to the American revolution.

But public interest in these debates was only cursory and proposals for a national union were abandoned after the merger of Upper and Lower Canada in 1840.

After the fading of interest in the larger union, attention turned to the possibility of creating a Maritime union. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island—Cape Breton had been restored to Nova Scotia in 1820—existed as almost separate countries. Each had its own stamps, customs duties and coinage and the suggestion to end it all by amalgamating the three provinces into one became a familiar theme of after-dinner speeches.

WAR REVIVED FEARS

It took the renewed spectre of danger from the south—this time in the form of the American Civil War — to revive interest in the possibility of a national union.

"Confederation was a dream," writes historian Peter Waite. "It tantalized men and legislatures, sometimes appearing during the despair of bad times, sometimes in the fever of partisan politics, but nearly always . . . the result of some crisis either of the world or of the spirit."

What moved the dream almost immeasurably closer to reality was the Charlottetown Conference of 1864.

Called originally to deal only with the matter of Maritime union, the conference took its place in Canadian history with the arrival of delegates from the Canadas, who added the subject of the larger union to the discussion.

Although much of the Nova Scotia press was hostile to the Canadians, champagne flowed freely and the delegates hammered out the basic agreement that later formed the basis of the Quebec proposals —which in turn formed the bedrock of Confederation itself.

At home, Nova Scotians were less enthusiastic.

UNION WITH ENGLAND?

Lt.-Gov. Richard MacDonell told his superiors in the imperial colonial office that there was such a "strong feeling of opposition to the proposed scheme that I doubt the probability of it being carried in Nova Scotia." His solution: union of Nova Scotia and England.

More importantly, the pro-Confederates by this time had aroused the ire of publisher Joseph Howe.

Early in 1865, after the Quebec proposals had become known, the Halifax Morning Chronicle began carrying a series of "Botheration Letters," unsigned but clearly in Howe's peppery style.

Nova Scotians, he wrote, were worthy only of contempt if they sold their birthright of self-government "for the precious mess of pottage brought hither from Quebec."

Howe, who had significantly been missing from the Charlottetown Conference the previous year, also denied the obvious confederate argument of strength in union.

Was Samson strong, asked Howe, when Delilah "confederated" him by shearing his hair?

Tupper, who had upset Howe's Liberal government in 1863, measured his opposition and hesitated in taking the issue to the public in a general election.

Howe, who had already won his greatest victories by establishing the freedom of the press and the right of self-government in the colonies, was appalled.

He pleaded with the British government in 1866 to stop plans for Confederation, but failed. He also failed in his efforts to have the issue brought to a public vote before the British North America Act was proclaimed.

But Confederation itself did not end Howe's opposition.

He rallied the anti-Confederation forces in the elections for both the provincial legislature and the new federal House held in September, 1867, and scored a stunning upset: 36 anti-confederates to two pro-confederates in the provincial house and the same lopsided margin of 18 to 1 in the federal House.

Howe himself was elected to the federal House and the following year went with associates to London to plead once again that his province be allowed to leave Confederation.

The appeal was unsuccessful and Howe turned to obtaining better financial arrangements for Nova Scotia. This venture was successful and, shortly after, he joined the cabinet of Sir John A. Macdonald.

Even his last decision stirred accusations that Howe had been bought off and bribed to end his opposition.

But historians now feel that Howe had at last recognized that the province's place in the new union was inevitable.

The last serious threat to Nova Scotia's role within the Canadian nation had been removed.

OTTAWA—So now we're helping in our own modest little world-saving way to bail out the Arabs.

And not just with money, food and the offer of a place here in the Canadian sun for some of them to live.

We're even helping to train Algerian aircraft pilots.

Just as we help train the Tanzanian armed forces even while Tunisia is kicking around some of its British residents.

Like we assisted Zambia with an oil airlift in the UN's economic squeeze on Rhodesia, at the very time the Zambian government was pushing around some more of the British and making things uncomfortable for a few Canadians, too.

And like we gave an economic hand-out to the Indonesians when they were attacking Malayasia, one of our fellow Commonwealth club members, and looting the British Embassy.

Even the founding father of Canadian world-saving, Nobel prizeman Prime Minister Pearson shows signs of getting just a bit fed up.

It was quite a surprise to hear him say the other day, when asked about the Canadian UN contingent on Cyprus, that "we can't stay there forever."

The Canadians have been there four years so far and are just starting another six-month hitch.

The four-year bill — and Canadian taxpayers alone foot it for their 900-man force — runs $32,000,000.

To be coldly objective about it, the biggest part of the bill—pay and allowances for the Canadians — would have to be paid no matter where the men might be serving.

But $2,250,000 of the annual $8,000,000 cost is incurred simply because the force is where it is, in Cyprus, and must be supplied. Over the four-year period that amounts to $9,000,000.

So now, the patient prime minister, amazingly, is getting tired of paying out the taxpayers' money — and for what?

For no settlement, he has confessed to parliament, and for precious little prospect of any being negotiated.

It was that old Conservative war-horse, former defence minister Gordon Churchill, who dug up the baffling situation of Canadian taxpayers financing the training of Algerian pilots.

How come, he wanted to know, especially when Algeria had flown in troops for Nasser's laughable legions?

Well, lamely explained external aid director Maurice Strong of the external affairs department, the pilots were "only" civilian fliers and their training was costing merely a negligible $300,000 a year. But aren't civilians militarily convertible?

We're helping the Communist Viet Cong — without their invitation — with medical supplies in their war against the Americans.

And why are Canadian taxpayers volunteering unsought assistance to the enemies of our closest neighbors and strongest allies? Because, says aid director Strong, "we make no distinction between the two sides."

IS ALL VANITY?

Our foreign aid bill runs an annual $300,000,000 and the government keeps talking about doubling it.

Why? What's the reasoning behind it?

Well, it used to be politically fashionable to lash Canadian taxpayers for not giving enough, and demanding that they come across until it hurts.

But signs have been appearing that it just might be going out of style.

Item: Heber Smith, Conservative MP for Ontario's Simcoe North, unanimously regarded as what generally is referred to as a "forward-thinking" parliamentarian, let fly with this the other day:

"We give $100,000 to some country in Southeast Asia where it doesn't do us a nickel's worth of good — just so cabinet ministers can junket out there and make speeches."

Item: Senator Grattan O'Leary, one of the deans of Canadian journalism, has said this:

"We are attempting to take over areas all over the world which, whatever it may tell of our good heart and good intentions, tells very little of our realism and good sense. It is all very well to minister to the vanity of certain people who strut their little hour in the field of external affairs, except that it is utter nonsense to be undertaking these obligations on the other side of the world as a result of nothing less silly than a phony national pride."

Item: The uproar in letters to the editors of the Ottawa newspapers — the "local, hometown" publications read by parliament — over shelling out for these Middle and Far Eastern countries ruled by some of the world's wealthiest despots.

Item: Agriculture Minister Joe Greene, a man of good heart if ever there was one, saying over and over again that charity begins at home—and isn't it about time that some of these "poor" countries began showing some interest in a little self-help?

White, Pink Color Theme at Tattrie-Kern Wedding

To the strains of "Praise, My Soul, the King of Heaven", Trudy Marlene Kern approached the altar of Fairview United Church to exchange wedding vows with Kenneth George Tattrie.

Clad in a floor-length white crepe gown featuring empire waist and fashioned on slim lines, she was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Carl Lundstrom.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. David A. Cline. Baskets of pink and white gladioli made a charming background and white ribbons marked the pews.

Mr. Angus Fraser played the wedding music and accompanied soloist Mrs. Doris Wright who sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Olga Kern and the bridegroom the son of Mrs. G. Tattrie.

The bridal gown had a bodice of cotton embroidered lace with lilypoint sleeves and square neckline. The long train which flowed from two bows at her shoulders was also of lace, bordered with crepe. Her bouffant scalloped veil was tiered to the waist and misted from a cluster of nylon roses and leaves. A necklace and earrings completed her outfit.

Mrs. Gordon Burgess Jr., as matron of honor, was gowned in pink crepe with sleeveless bodice of pink embroidered lace, empire styled with scoop neckline. The floor-length straight skirt featured a slit at the back hemline and long ribbons fell from the bow at the waistline.

The other attendants, Miss Jane Ferguson and Mrs. Fred Evanoff, were similarly gowned, and their headpieces were bands of the dress material topped with a spray of net. They wore long white gloves and carried cascade bouquets of white and pink carnations. Their pearl pendants were gifts of the bride.

FLOWER GIRL

Miss Caren Lundstrom, niece of the bride, as flower girl, made a dainty picture in a pink floor-length A-line dress of peau de soie. A white bow with long ribbons enhanced the empire waist and her headpiece was of pink roses and net. Her locket was the bride's gift and she carried a basket of pink and white baby 'mums with green accents. Ringbearer, Master Steven Lundstrom, the bride's nephew, wore a navy blue blazer and grey trousers.

Mr. Fred Evanoff was groomsman and Mr. Everett Tattrie, the groom's brother, and Mr. Gordon Burgess were ushers.

The 130 guests gathered for the reception in a hall decorated with pink and white streamers, hearts and white bells.

The four-tiered bridal cake, embedded in pink tulle, was set on a white embroidered cloth. It was trimmed with pink roses and silver leaves and topped by a miniature bride and groom. Pink candles completed the table decor.

Mr. Gordon Burgess, the bride's brother-in-law, was master of ceremonies and read telegrams of congratulation from Vancouver and Fort St. John.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Kern chose a becoming two-piece dress of beige, lace brocade, beige shoes, pink accessories and pink carnation corsage.

Mrs. Tattrie was attired in a pink suit set off by white accessories and white carnation corsage.

Miss Cheryl Ferguson, niece of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

The bride changed to an orange two-piece suit with which she wore a flowered hat and shoes en tone, white accessories and white rose corsage. She presented her bouquet to her mother.

TO RESIDE HERE

Following a honeymoon in the Okanagan, Vancouver, Victoria and U.S. points, the couple are making their home at 614 Cedar Street.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gaber and Troy of Kamloops; Mrs. Lori Hubscher of Quesnel; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lundstrom, Debra and Caren, of Osoyoos; Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Ferguson, Raymond, Jane and Cheryl, of Beaver Falls; Mr. and Mrs. D. Gallis of Salmo. Mr. and Mrs. Doug Houndle, Janice and Carol, and Mrs. M. Houndle, all of Trail; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Greer, and Mr. Neil Tattrie of New Denver; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Tattrie, Louise, Jim and Marietta, of Penticton; Mr. and Mrs. Rick McLean of Trail; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Anderson of Rossland; Mr. and Mrs. Don Teel, Linda, Liane and Arnot of Winfield.

Nelson CARS Marks 18th Anniversary

A small luncheon party Wednesday celebrated the 18th anniversary of the founding of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism society in Nelson. Attending were Arthur Foster, president, Paul E. Thompson, honorary treasurer; Mrs. A. J. Browning; Mrs. L. S. Gansner, Women's Auxiliary president and Mrs. G. B. Gullivan.

Joseph Kary, representing the Community Chest, G. A. Hoover and Miss Mary Pack, CARS executive Director from Vancouver recalled the first meeting called by the late Dr. F. M. Auld, on Sunday, July 10, 1949.

Since that time more than 3000 men and women and many children, residents of Nelson, have received relief from arthritis through treatments given by CARS therapists.

Miss Elaine Higham MCSP, CPA, CARS present therapist treats patients, referred by their doctors, in the modern well-equipped department at the Kootenay Lake General Hospital.

For many years rooms in the old nurses' residence were used, furnished by CARS with the help of local clubs, notably the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

Dr. G. R. Barrett, Dr. N. E. Morrison and Dr. R. B. Shaw acted as medical advisors to CARS voluntary group here and the W. A. has performed a yeoman service in providing transportation to and from the treatment unit and to the arts and crafts program, as well as special enertainment for disabled patients.

CARS spends more that $10,000 annually, most of this locally as Nelson's share in treatment, research and education, of the B.C. budget of $780,000, Miss Pack said.

$7,200 NEEDED

To meet these expenses in 1968 donations of $7,200 from Community Chest funds will be necessary. She noted that Nelson is fortunate in having a CARS therapist, as Trail, Kamloops, Prince George and the northern areas of B.C. have been without a staff person for several months.

In 18 years CARS B.C. division has won an enviable reputation for excellence of care, efficiency and operations, she observed. Doctors from Scandinavia, New York, Australia have visited CARS medical centre in Vancouver to observe. Many Nelson patients have spent months in this centre or in the Rufus Gibbs Lodge, Miss Pack added.

Now a drive is underway to obtain new members for CARS. There are five regular meetings held each year, and new members are needed to help promote the objectives of the society, one of which is to see that the right standards of care are available for people with disabilities of anw kind, the group agreed.

CARS is hoping to be able to work with the hospitals in providing training to medical and para-medical personnel so that proper treatment is available for patients with long term illness, Miss Pack told the gathering.

One of the main purposes of CARS is to teach such persons to live on their own within their limitations. This it is able to do through the experience gained over years of dealing with such problems, she said.

It is hoped to provide a demonstration unit from Vancouver that would enable persons learning the methods to see in actual practice just how the work is carried out, she concluded.

About The Town

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Armstrong, 215 Chatham Street have had as visitors for a few days Mrs. Armstrong's brother, Henry Johnson of Los Angeles and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Lief Johnson of North Surrey. While they were here, a large family picnic attended by 43 family members was enjoyed at Lakeside Park Sunday. They came from Vancouver, Robson, Salmo and Kaslo for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Bartrim and family of Port Alberni visited Mr. Bartrim's grandmother, Mrs. J. M. Armstrong, 142 Front Street.

* * *

Mrs. Jack McMahon and children, Jill and John, who have been visiting Mrs. McMahon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gibbon, 709 Fourth Street, left Friday for Revelstoke where they will visit Mrs. McMahon's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Gibbon before entraining for their home in Ottawa. They will be accompanied to Ottawa by Mrs. McMahon's brother, Barry, who will visit there for a month.

Kaslo Notes

KASLO — The Ladies Auxiliary to Branch 74 Royal Canadian Legion met with 12 members in attendance. The committee reports proved gratifying with the past term a busy one. Three members attended the convention in Nelson.

A new member, Mrs. Alice Harbottle was installed.

It was decided to hold a supper with each couple inviting two guests. A bake sale was planned for a later date. Several members were visited in hospital.

The group recessed until September.

Hints From Heloise

HELOISE CRUSE

DEAR FOLKS:

Battles are fought and many are lost but I don't think I ever heard of many women permanently winning the battle of the toilet bowl ring . . .

Have you?

I think I found the cause to 90 per cent of our troubles.

I have been making tests in hard water areas lately and most of this kind of water leaves rings of discolorations and stains. These are definitely caused by minerals in the water—which none of us can do too much about.

But . . . we can take the top of the tank off and see what's down inside. I nearly dropped dead when I saw what was in two of them.

One tank bottom was covered with hard mud and tiny bits of built-up minerals.

The other was loaded with orange rust in the bottom and the sides were completely coated with it.

This is what caused that discolored bowl each week. If the bottom of the tank is covered with minerals and rust, it stands to reason that some of it is bound to end up in the bowl.

So let's go clean out those water tanks.

Pick up as much of the hard residual as possible with your hand. Then use an old sponge and try to pick up what's left. I did and so can you.

Wipe all the discoloration off the insides. Gals, that water is going to be so muddy looking that you will wonder where the bottom went!

Now start flushing. Not once but lots of times. Each time wipe the inside with the sponge again until all the discoloration comes off. This may also be cleaned with scouring powder. Then just flush again until it's spanking clean.

I cross my heart that if you get this job done that bowl won't get stained so quickly.

If I run out of black thread when sewing buttons on dark clothes, I use white thread and then dab it with a black felt-tipped marker.

DEAR HELOISE:

While traveling this summer, if you find a pretty or unusual stone that you would like to keep, wash it and then coat it with clear varnish.

It can be used as a paper weight and at the same time a reminder of a fun vacation.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a tip for all new mothers. I can take my two-month-old anyplace without hesitation because I know he will never cry.

The trick is carrying a jar of baby fruit with me. I dip the tip of his pacifier in the fruit then give it to him, and he'll stay content even past bottle-time if necessary.

It's not only good for him but it's great for my nerves.

Becky Phillips

DEAR HELOISE:

After putting your hair up for a home permanent, use a stretch hair band around your head in front of the rollers and tuck it behind your ears.

You'd be amazed how much solution does NOT run down your face, as these stretch bands are very absorbent.

Also, you can tuck cotton or tissues between stretch band and hairline to further cut down drips.

Advertising stands the test of time

ADVERTISING IS NEWS ABOUT PRODUCTS AND SERVICES

You haven't seen celluloid collars and cuffs for years. You may not even remember them. But they had their day. Gone now—supplanted by better products—introduced through advertising.

That's what advertising is really. News about products or services that you might be interested in. It's a way of letting you know what's new and different and better in the world today.

Just as advertising helped end the days of celluloid collars and cuffs, so it also helped replace the horse and buggy with the automobile, the ice box with the refrigerator, and housemaid's knee with electric floor polishers.

And when you buy any of the products that are advertised in your daily newspaper, you put money in circulation. You help create jobs. That helps improve the standard of living for everyone in the country.

In that sense, advertising is not only news—it's good news. Good news for you and everyone else. That's why advertising has lasted longer than celluloid collars and cuffs. It stands the test of time.

Vicenzo Fires Record Round

From AP-Reuters

HOYLAKE, England (CP) — Roberto de Vicenzo, a genial 44-year-old Argentine making his 10th bid since 1948 to win the British open golf championship, fired a record-equalling 67 Friday for a two-stroke lead over South African Gary Player going into today's final round.

De Vicenzo held a three-stroke lead over defending champion Jack Nicklaus of the United States, who fired a 71.

Australian Bruce Devlin, with whom Nicklaus had shared the second-round lead, and Clive Clark of England followed at 212. Clark shot a three-under-par 69 and Devlin a 72.

Kel Nagel, 1960 champion, and Lionel Platts, the Englishman who broke the course record with a 68 to take the opening-round lead, both stood at 213. Nagle had a 69 nd Platts a 72.

BALDING FIRES 69

Al Balding, 43-year-old pro from Toronto, was one of three players in the field of 58 at 214 after 54 holes. The only Canadian in the tournament, his rounds were 74, 71 and Friday's 69. Sebastian Miguel of Spain shot a 68 and Jimmy Hume of Scotland a 73.

De Vicenzo had only 31 putts in his five-under-par 67 over the 6,995-yard Royal Liverpool for 70-71-67—208, eight-under par.

Less thn an hour before de Vicenzo's finish, Player fired the record-cracking 67 for 72-71-67—210 over the course which had dried out in the hot sun after heavy overnight rain. Player has won all of golf's major crowns.

Tony Jacklin of England, Christy O'Connor of Ireland, Harold Henning of South Africa Fred Boobyer of England and Peter Thomson of Australia were bracketed at 215.

Doug Sanders and Deane Beman of the U.S. and Dennis Hutchinson and Barry Franklin of South Africa were bracketed at 216. Beman also fired 68.

Balding is playing here for the first time in 11 years. He finished 12th in the U.S. open won by Nicklaus.

Before the big-wheel par-busters came flooding home, Balding and Miguel shared the early third-round lead.

FLOCK OF BIRDIES

Balding birdied the third with an eight-foot putt, the sixth from 15 feet and the eighth from 10. He got one down at the 12th from 30 feet, another at the 14th from eight and hit the green on the long 16th with his second shot to set up another birdie.

De Vicenzo had seven birdies and went over par only twice.

"The turning point for me was when the 13-footer went in at the seventh. Then I thought: Today maybe I make a score. And so I did."

"Some day some Argentinian must win," he said, adding: "Jurado finished second to Tommy Armour in the 1931 British open. Tony Cerda, Leopold Ruis and myself all have been second. So, with a little bit of luck . . ."

Nicklaus slipped in the race as his putts failed to drop.

"Three shots can be overcome on the final round. I've not had what I regard as a big round yet. Maybe it will come Saturday. Conditions were a piece of cake today and anybody who did not score well had only themselves to blame. So I guess it's my fault I'm three shots off."

If there is a tie today, the playoff will be held Sunday.

Americans Prepare For Pan Am Games

By JERRY LISKA
Associated Press Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Despite a half-dozen illustrious absentees, including miler Jim Ryun, a formidable American squad jockeys for Pan-American track and field berths today and Sunday.

The world's best or near best in the shot put, pole vault, long jump, and high hurdles are among almost 100 male athletes competing for a team place for the fifth Pan-Am Games at Winnipeg July 23-Aug. 6.

In addition, some 45 of the United States top feminine tracksters will meet in the two-day trials at the University of Minnesota's Memorial Stadium.

United States Olympic Committee officials were upset over the absence of Ryun, sprinters Tommie Smith and Charlie Greene, high school mile phenomenon Marty Liquori, hammer thrower Ed Burke and distance star Gerry Lindgren.

But Pan-Am coach Cornelius Warmerdam was satisfied that this may be the most representative U.S. squad to engage in the Games.

Besides the incomparable Randy Matson, world shot put record holder, Warmerdam, himself a pioneer in a great pole vault lineage, has a pair of vaulters crowding the 18-foot barrier in Bob Seagren and Paul Wilson.

Also expected to dominate the two-day trials are premiere high hurdler Willie Davenport and three champions from the 1963 Pan-Am Games at Sao Paulo, Brazil—Jim Grelle in the 1,500 metres, world - record long jumper Ralph Boston, and high jumper Gene Johnson, only military champion entered here.

In action will be Matson, whose winning shot put of 67-1½ in the recent U.S.-British Commonwealth meet was far under his world mark of 71-5½.

Also on tap Saturday are finals in the 100 metres in which National AAU champ Jim Hines is strongly favored; the 400 metre hurdles; hammer throw; javelin; 3,000 metre steeplechase and long jump.

Even without Ryun, the 1,500 metres has quintet of sub four-minute milers in Grelle, Dave Wilborn, Tom Van Ruden, Roscoe Divine and Sam Bair.

After the weekend trials, the track squad joins 10 other Pan-Am sports squads, including basketball, baseball and rowing, in training and ssembly here before shoving off for Winnipeg next Wednesdy and Thursday.

Oakland Not Celtic's Home

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Sporting News says that Charlie Finley has abandoned Oakland, Calif., as a possible future home for his Kansas City Athletics and now is considering a move of the American League franchise to Milwaukee.

The article quotes high-placed sources attending the major league All-Star game Tuesday.

It says Finley's efforts to move the club from Kansas City may fail because at the present time he is two short of the required seven votes to move the club. He is said to have only five.

Finley's interest in moving the team to Oakland faded, the newspaper says, when he learned the city did not have a television channel available for baseball.

Spain Leads Davis Cup

BARCELONA, Spain (AP)—Spain led Friday after the first day of the European Zone A Davis Cup finals.

Juan Gisbert, Spain's No. 2 player, defeated Alexander Metrevelli, Russia's No. 1, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2, after Manuel Santana easily conquered Tomas Lejus 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

Canada Wins Dingy Cup

LONDON (Reuters)—Canada won the international 14-foot dinghy championship at Hayling Island in southern England Friday. Two Canadian entries easily defeated an American helmsman in the final day's sailing.

Ian Bruce of Ottawa topped the field in a fresh breeze with a winning time of 12:43.40, ahead of Ward McKimm of Montreal, who was timed in 12:44.12.

Stuart Walker of the United States was third in 12:45.30.

Canada, the U.S. and Britain competed in the races here.

MUNICH (AP)—The film version of My Fair Lady is not plagiarized from a 1935 German movie, a court ruled here. Film producer Eberhard Klagemann brought suit alleging Columbia Pictures stole ideas from his film Pygmalion which, like My Fair Lady, was based on the George Bernard Shaw play.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

B.C. Golfer Up Top

Victoria's Wakeham In First-Place Tie

By SCOTT BUTTON

TORONTO (CP)—Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg lost his chance to become the second - round leader in the Ontario Open golf championship Friday when he was penalized two strokes.

Homenuik finished with a rected score of 70 and a 36-hole total of 140, one stroke behind leaders Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., Bill Wakeham of Victoria, B.C. and amateur Ben Kern of Cooksville, Ont.

A spectator accidentally kicked Homenuik's bal land it moved about two feet on the 17th fairway.

After consulting with playing partner Nick Weslock, the Winnipeg golfer took his next shot with the same ball from where it had been kicked.

Len Goldston, tournament committee chairman, said the committee ruled Homenuik should have picked up the ball and dropped it in its original position, or asked for an official ruling or played two balls and then asked for a ruling.

The committee could have disqualified Homenuik.

KERN LOSES GROUND

Kern, tied with Gary Fawcett of London, Ont. for the first-round lead with 68, shot a 71 Friday.

Norman fired a 69 to go with his first-round 70 while Wakeham posted a 68 to shave three strokes off his opening-round score.

Wakeham blew a chance to occupy top spot when he took a two-over-par six on the 16th when he three-putted from 12 feet.

Jerry Mcgee of Toronto and amateur Gary Cowan of Kitchener had 36-hole scores of 141. Mcgee toured the 6,455-yard course in 68 Friday, five strokes lower than Thursday.

Cowan, who shot an opening round 71, clipped off one stroke Friday. The talented amateur came home in 33 after taking 37 on the front nine. Fawcett settled for a 74 and a two-day total of 142.

Tied with him were Frank Whibley of Toronto and Weslock. Whibley fell to 72 from a first round 69 while Weslock, a veteran amateur from Brantford, Ont., shot par 70, two strokes lower than his opening round.

FOUR TIED AT 145

At 144 were Brian Bond of Toronto and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor. Both had 71 Friday. Wally Byers of Toronto, Ernie Nerlick of Toronto, Bob Cox of Vancouver and Bob Rose of Toronto were tied at 145 after Friday's play.

Ken Duggan of Toronto, a 69 shooter Thursday, soared to 79 while two amateurs, Paul Gilbert of Toronto and Don Morgan of Toronto, also had trouble.

Gilbert shot 78 following his opening-round 70 and Morgan zoomed to 80 from his earlier 70.

Officials decided upon 151 as the cut-off mark and reduced the field from the starting 146 pros and amateurs to 36 pros and 29 amateurs for today's final 18 holes.

The low pro will win $1,200 and a berth in the $200,000 world championship at Woodbridge, Ont., Sept. 1-4.

The four low Ontario amateurs in the combined 54 holes of the Open and the Ontario amateur championships in London, Ont., July 26-28, will comprise Ontario's Willingdon Cup team.

Joe Frazier Wants Patterson

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Joe Frazier Friday looked beyond his scheduled 12-round fight with George Chuvalo of Toronto and said he wants to fight Floyd Patterson for the world heavyweight championship.

"When I finish with Chuvalo, I'd like to fight Patterson for the title and have all the commissions accept it as a title fight," the unbeaten young Philadelphian said.

Frazier is scheduled to fight Chuvalo in New York next Wednesday.

Lou the Toe Signs Contract

CLEVELAND AP — Veteran Cleveland Browns' place kicker, Lou Groza, who has scored more points than anyone else in pro football, has signed his 22nd contract with the club, the National Football League team announced Friday.

Groza, 43, says he feels he can still kick as good as always.

"The Toe" has scored 1,532 in pro ball, 1,273 of them in the NFL. He is the only NFL player to pass the 1,000-point mark.

Mathews Clouts 500 To Join Elite Six

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Ed Mathews hit the 500th home run of his major league career Friday night, powering Houston Astros to an 8-6 victory over San Francisco Giants.

Mathews hit Juan Marichal's first pitch in the sixth inning over the right field fence with Jim Wynn and Rusty Staub on base, lifting the Astros into a 6-4 lead.

The veteran third baseman's seventh homer this season enabled him to join six other sluggers in the elite 500-homer club.

The victory snapped a five-game winning string for San Francisco.

Marichal, attempting to become the first pitcher in the majors to win 13 games, also was tagged for a three - run homer by rookie Norm Miller and suffered his eighth loss.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Al Ferrara slammed a home run and Lou Johnson lashed a two-run double as Los Angeles Dodgers ended a four-game losing streak Friday night with a 5-2 victory over Chicago Cubs.

Ferrara hit his seventh homer off Rob Gardner with the bases empty in the second inning.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Pinch hitter Orlando Cepeda singled in one run in the seventh inning and another scored on Jose Pagan's throwing error, giving St. Louis Cardinals a 2-1 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates Friday night.

Left - hander Larry Jaster, lifted for a hitter in the seventh, received credit for his sixth vic Tommie Sisk, who had a one-hitter golifted for a hitter in the received credit for his sixth victory against four losses. Tommie Sisk, who had a one-hitter going into the Cards' seventh, suffered his seventh setback in 14 decisions.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tony Perez' bases-loaded single in the 10th inning gave Cincinnati Reds and rookie right-hander Gary Nolan a 1-0 victory over New York Mets Friday night.

Nolan hurled a five-hitter for his eighth victory against two setbacks in winning a brilliant duel against the Mets' Jack Fisher.

Fisher, 6-10, got the first two men he faced in the 10th, then walked Floyd Robinson. Vada Pinson lined a single to centre, sending Robinson to third, and Pete Rose drew an intentional walk, filling the bases, before Perez delivered the winning hit to centre.

ATLANTA (AP)—Rico Carty slammed a three-run homer in the first inning Friday night, leading Atlanta Braves to a 4-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies, whose comeback bid was checked by Hank Aaron's 23rd home run of the season.

Carty's 11th blast of the year came after Mack Jones walked and Aaron doubled.

The Phillies had taken a 1-0 lead when Tony Gonzalez led off the first inning with a homer. They cut the Braves' lead to 3-2 in the third when Gonzalez scored on John Callison's infield out after three straight walks issued by Tony Cloninger.

NEW YORK (AP)—Fritz Peterson blanked Cleveland 2-0 on four hits after Al Downing pitched a five-hit 2-1 victory as New York Yankees scored their first doubleheader sweep of the season.

For Peterson, it was his second straight victory after losing his first eight.

The Yanks got their first run in the first inning on a walk to Dick Howser, a single by Joe Pepitone and Mickey Mantle's sacrifice fly. Their other run, in the third, came on a single by Pepitone and pop fly singles by Mantle and Steve Whitaker.

Downing struck out five and walked one in the first game.

A fourth inning homer by Elston Howard broke a 1-1 tie.

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox went on a rare hitting spree behind Joe Horlen's six-hit pitching and breezed to an 8-0 victory over California Angels Friday night for a split of their doubleheader with the Angels.

The Angels won the opener 8-2 on a run-scoring single by pinch hitter Jimmie Hall in the seventh inning.

The White Sox jumped on California starter Clyde Wright of two runs in the first inning of the nightcap and wrapped up Horlen's 11th victory in 13 decisions with a five-run burst in the second.

Pete Ward, the Montreal-born third baseman for the Sox, singled one run across in the first and slammed a controversial two-run homer to cap the second-inning explosion.

Angels coach Bob Lemon was ejected from the game during a heated argument following Ward's homer when California claimed a fan interfered with the ball.

BOSTON (AP) — Home runs by Tony Conigliaro and Carl Yastrzemski led a 12-hit attack that powered Boston Red Sox to an 11-5 romp over Baltimore Orioles Friday night.

Yastrzemski's blast off reliever Stu Miller equalled his career high for a season, set in 1965. He also added a single and double in four trips, raising his batting average to .327.

Rico Petrocelli also drove in two runs with a double as the Red Sox finally exploded after an eight-game drought in which they had averaged only 2½ runs per contest.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — John Donaldson drove in two runs with a pair of singles and rookie reliever Tony Pierce snuffed out a bases-loaded threat in the sixth inning, leading Kansas City Athletics to a 3-2 victory over Minnesota Twins Friday night.

The loss snapped a three-game winning string for the Twins and ended Kansas City's losing skein at six games.

Pierce relieved winner Chuck Dobson, 5-6, after the Twins loaded the bases with two out in the sixth. He struck out Rod Carew to end the threat.

Control trouble plagued Dobson.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Casanova looped a two-out single to right field in the eighth inning Friday night, driving in two runs to lead Washington Senators to a 3-1 victory over Detroit Tigers.

It was Washington's fifth straight victory and Detroit's fourth consecutive defeat.

The Senators' Phil Ortega and Earl Wilson of Detroit were locked in a 1-1 duel until Washington broke it open in the eighth.

Doubles by Ken McMullen and Frank Howard accounted for Washington's first run, in the first inning, and the Tigers matched it in the seventh on Bill Freehan's 13th homer of the season.

Eskimos Freeze Out Ti-Cats

EDMONTON (CP) — Linebacker Dave Gasser and defensive end E. A. Simms came up with key defensive plays in the last minute Friday night to preserve a 16-11 win for Edmonton Eskimos over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League exhibition game.

The two plays forced the Ticats back to midfield after a fumble recovery had put them in scoring position.

The win, before a crowd estimated at 15,000, was the first of the season for the Esks, who had lost an exhibition game 7-2 to British Columbia Lions five days before.

The Eskimos led 3-1 after one quarter, 3-2 at half time, and 16-11 after three quarters. The fourth quarter was scoreless.

Edmonton got touchdowns from flanker Randy Kerbow and defensive backfielder Gary Lefebvre. Peter Kempf converted one and kicked a field goal.

Hamilton's lone touchdown was scored by Gord Christian, who recovered a fumble in the Edmonton end zone. The other Tiger-Cat points came on a field goal by Dave Viti and singles by Tommy-Joe Coffey and Doug Mitchell.

Former Lion Kapp Roar Muffled

The roar of B.C. Lions quarterback Joe Kapp was muffled Friday by the Supreme Court of B.C.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer in effect upheld the suspension of Kapp by the team in refusing to grant his request of an injunction.

Kapp also sued the Lions for $17,000 for alleged breach of contract in an action set for later this year. He had asked for a temporary injunction requiring the Lions to lift the suspension.

Mr. Justice Dryer said the suspension might never have taken place had Kapp been "frank" with Lions officials at the time he was negotiating with Houston.

He said he was taking into consideration Kapp's conduct in the developments which led to his suspension.

John L. Farris, lawyer for the Lions, said Kapp had signed a contract to play for the Oilers for the 1968 season, plus whatever portion of the 1967 season he would be available.

Mr. Farris said Kapp, by breaking his contract and dealing with Houston while legally tied to the Lions, had raised doubt in the minds of B.C. team officials whether he would "give his all" for the Lions.

W. J. Wallace, Kapp's lawyer, said his client has every right to plan in advance for his livelihood in the period which followed the end of his career with the Lions.

CITES FAILURE

"The present difficulties in which the plaintiff (Kapp) and the defendant (Lions) find themselves have been at least contributed to by the failure of the plaintiff to be frank with the defendant as to his negotiations with the Houston club," Mr. Justice Dryer said.

Mr. Justice Dryer said if he granted Kapp the injunction the effect would be to restore Kapp to his former position as an employee of the Lions.

But it would be impossible for the Supreme Court to supervise or control the performance of his duties, much less the quality of his performance.

Name Team For Tuna Test

HALIFAX (CP) — Canada's team in the 18th international tuna cup match at Wedgeport and Cape St. Mary, N.S., in August was announced Friday by Thomas Wheeler, Toronto, Canadian team organizer.

Warren Reynolds, Toronto, will be captain of the seven-man team. Reynolds, an advertising agency president, was a member of the British Commonwealth team in 1957 and the Canadian seven in 1965.

Nova Scotia will be represented by two veteran anglers, Dr. Norman J. Belliveau, Beliveau Cove, N.S., and Alfred Trask, Yarmouth. Dr. Belliveau, president of the Canadian Medical Association, captained the Canadian team in 1966.

Mr. Trask, a pharmacist, has boated some 40 tuna in his long fishing career. He won the tournament for the British Commonwealth in 1956 with 648-pound fish.

Other members of last year's team returning this year are Mr. Justice David M. Dickson of the New Brunswick Supreme Court, and Dr. Ray N. Lawson, a Montreal surgeon.

Two newcomers will be Ewart Hillyard, St. John's, Nfld., and Lee Straight, Vancouver.

Venezuelan Marksmen Aim at Pan Am Games

CARACAS (Reuters) — Venezuelan hopes for medals at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg July 22 to Aug. 7 are pinned firmly on their marksmen.

In a small representation of only 56 competitors, the crack shots of Venezuela hold 11 places—almost as many as the combined athletic and swimming teams.

Venezuela will take part in only 10 of the 23 events and, surprisingly, will not be represented in the baseball championships. One of Latin America's leading baseball nations, Venezuela did not name a team because of the lack of amateur talent. Many of the young amateur stars turn professional at an early age and the best are usually signed up by U.S. clubs.

The boxing federation was angry with the Venezuelan selection committee for allotting it only four places, despite winning four gold medals at the Central American and Caribbean Games in Puerto Rico last year and also taking five of the six titles in a recent competition with Mexico, Panama and Puerto Rico.

Only southpaw Guillermo Salcedo, the junior welterweight champion, was assured of making the Winnipeg trip.

The selection committee also awarded only four places to the athletics team. The best hope in this squad will be Gisela Vidal, who recently broke her own national 200-metre record in qualifying for the Games with a time of 24.8 seconds. She will also compete in the pentathlon.

Of the nine swimmers going to Winnipeg, high board diver Carlos Rodriguez totalled 146.533 points in easily surpassing the minimum requirement of 138.500.

Volleyball will be the only team sport in which Venezuela will participate.

In the cycling events, Daniel Larreal will carry the main Venezuelan hopes. He won a bronze medal at the Central American Games last year.

A BUSINESS COURSE FOR EMPLOYED PERSONS leading to professional recognition

In commercial and industrial firms, institutions and governments, professional accountants hold responsible executive positions. Conversant with tax and financial problems, budgeting and accounting, they have skills that are essential to the proper management of every type of enterprise.

The Certified General Accountants' Association of British Columbia, through its affiliation with the University of British Columbia, offers young men and women an opportunity to become professional accountants and financial executives.

If you have completed Grade 12 in B.C. or the equivalent elsewhere, you can enrol in a five-year course of study leading to certification as a Certified General Accountant (C.G.A.). This course may be completed either at evening lectures or by correspondence while you remain permanently employed and earn a regular income.

Applications for enrollment for the 1967-68 term will be accepted by the Registrar up to September 8, 1967.

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

Sunday, July 16, 1967

MARCH 21 to APRIL 20 (Aries) — This could be a very telling day in your life. You should have fresh incentive. Use it to your advantage. Generate enthusiasm commensurate with past "best performances."

APRIL 21 to MAY 21 (Taurus) — You can make this a bright day by emphasizing your serene and happy personality. Use your versatility and intuition in revitalizing, firming things up.

MAY 22 to JUNE 21 (Gemini) — Some caution needed. Determine a suitable program, and plan which phase to develop first. Counteract opposition with novel moves. Strengthen position shrewdly.

JUNE 22 to JULY 23 (Cancer) — Retain the finest of the old while incorporating the choicest of the new. Industriousness only brings attainment if applied to worthwhile matters. Study all angles before going into high gear.

JULY 24 to AUGUST 23 (Leo) — A tendency to let this day "go by the boards." But, without some determined thinking and planning ahead, complexities could rise up to vex you next week. Face up to what are real requirements.

AUGUST 24 to SEPTEMBER 23 (Virgo) — You will be judged more by action than by words. Be sure that both register to your benefit. Discuss "sticky" problems with knowing heads.

SEPTEMBER 24 to OCTOBER 23 (Libra) — A sunny outlook if you stick to worthwhile activities. Don't scatter energies. Gather extra knowledge along the way to hasten success.

OCTOBER 24 to NOVEMBER 22 (Scorpio) — The position of Mars indicates that the time is ripe for strong, definite moves. Get a smart start and keep uniformly busy. Building for the future stressed.

NOVEMBER 23 to DECEMBER 21 (Sagittarius) — There is evidence that competition is on the move. Don't be left at the post. Prompt action coupled with suitable application of talents needed.

DECEMBER 22 to JANUARY 20 (Capricorn) — Thinking about new ventures will not be enough. Back good ideas with action — after determining their feasibility, value.

JANUARY 21 to FEBRUARY 19 (Aquarius) — Take a reading on completed performances. Have you been on the right track? Employing proper tactics? If so, day is moulded to fit your type of endeavor.

FEBRUARY 20 to MARCH 20 (Pisces) — Perform with your normal dexterity and happy outlook. With belief in your goals, you can go far and aid others, too.

YOU BORN TODAY are friendly yet have a reserve that makes others shy from you at times. You like old scenes, traditions, but are quick to correctly judge the need for a new plan or setup. You are a bit too sensitive, which means you can be hurt easily. Your humanitarian instincts guide you into praiseworthy endeavors. You are deeply sympathetic, self-reliant, kind and gentle; may be too changeable at times, however. Remember that restlessness solves nothing; constructive discussion and action do. You are able, patient teachers, not always so patient otherwise. You could excel as statesman, historian, lawyer. Birthdate of: Sir Joshua Reynolds, painter.

DINES IN HALIFAX

HHALIFAX (CP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth was greeted at a civic luncheon here Friday by Thomas HH. Wolfe, who was maitre d'hotel at the CNR's HHotel Nova Scotian when she was a guest during her last visit to Nova Scotia in 1939. The luncheon menu consisted of melon, Nova Scotia salmon, strawberries and cream.

TIMBER SALE HARVESTING LICENCE A00245

Sealed tenders will be received by the District Forester at Nelson, B.C., not later than 11:00 A.M., August 14, 1967, for the purchase of Timber Sale Harvesting Licence A00245, to authorize the harvesting of 920,000 cubic feet of timber each year for a ten year period.

Cutting Permits to be issued under authority of this licence will authorize cutting on areas within the Quinn Creek Drainage, Kootenay Land District.

As this area is within the Cranbrook P.S.Y.U., which is fully committed, this sale will be awarded under the provisions of Section 17 (1a) of the "Forest Act", which gives the timber sale applicant certain privileges.

Further particulars can be obtained from the Forest Ranger, Cranbrook, from the District Forester, Nelson, B.C., or from the Deputy Minister of Forests, Victoria, B.C. —141-h

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

10-Year-Old Loses Bid

SUTTON, Mass (AP) — Ten-year-old Beverly Klass lost a court bid to gain entry in the Ladies PGA championship Wednesday, leaving a field of 52 golf pros for the start of the $17,500 tournament today,

Superior Court Judge John H. Meagher denied a petition for a restraining order which would have permitted Beverly to compete.

Beverly's father, Jack Klass, filed the petition, claiming the girl was being deprived of her rights. She has played in three other tournaments.

The LPGA voted last week to bar anyone under 18 from playing in one of its tournaments.

Times Carries Favreau Obit

LONDON (CP) — The Times carries a long obituary on Guy Favreau, former Liberal justice minister who died Tuesday in Montreal.

The newspaper says Favreau's career included "his unswerving faith in co-operative federalism . . . and his absolute loyalty to the prime minister."

"Seldom has there been a political figure in Canada whose future looked so promising and yet, in the space of a couple of years, because of a mixture of parliamentary inexperience, bad luck, and bad health, found himself in the end on the lower rungs of the ladder after almost having reached the top."

EXPECTS BUILDING SURGE

TORONTO (CP) — Ottawa's policy of making more mortgage money available should result in a surge in house building this year, says Lawrence Shankman, president of Consolidated Building Corp., Ltd. of Toronto.

BOMB ROCKS CLUB

MONTREAL (CP)—A plate-glass door, a ceiling and entrance of l'Etoile de l'est Cafe, a nightclub, were damaged early Friday by a dynamite blast. No one was injured. Police said the explosion was caused by a bomb made of a stick of dynamite and detonated by a fuse. Police were checking on whether the bomb was connected with a possible renewal of the protection racket which flourished in some Montreal areas several years ago.

GUILTY OF BRIBERY

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London lawyer Donald W. Reid, 38, Friday was found guilty on two counts of bribery and sentenced to concurrent jail terms of 12 months on each charge and a $5,000 fine. Judge Bruce J. S. Macdonald of Windsor, Ont., found Reid guilty of giving $10,000 in bribes to a former mortgage manager of British Mortgage and Trust Co. of Stratford, between Dec. 1, 1961, and Sept. 15, 1962. Reid was found not guilty on a third charge of bribery.

Crime Ring Involved?

TORONT O(CP)—An international crime syndicate may be involved in the theft and sale of $200,000 worth of registered common stock certificates stolen in December, police said.

Police recovered 90 per cent of the stocks Thursday. They said they know where the other 10 per cent is and hope to recover it in the next few days.

Investigation revealed the stocks were sent to the tiny European country of Liechtenstein after thieves stole them from the home of Dr. William Love on Dec. 17.

They were then sold to a bank by a "front" with an extremely good credit rating, police said.

The stolen certificates then returned to Canada through an international stock brokerage house.

Interpol, the international police organization, has been asked to join Canadian investigators in the case.

Court Upholds Kapp Ouster

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court Friday upheld the suspension of former British Columbia Lions quarterback Joe Kapp by the Canadian Football League team.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer refused to grant an injunction to Kapp which would have lifted the one-year suspension and restore his name to the players' list.

The Lions contended that Kapp breached his contract by signing with Houston Oilers of the American Football League for the 1968 season, while still under contract to the Lions.

John L. Farris, Lions lawyer, said Kapp had received $10,000 for signing the contract, was to receive another $30,000 when he reported to the Oilers and was to receive $10,000 as a public relations officer.

Bastille Race

PARIS (AP)—Sailor an eight-year-old by L'Admiral out of Eastern Bronze, charged down the stretch and won the $57,763 Bastille Day feature at the St. Cloud race track Friday. HHe paid 6-1.

Sailor won by 1⅛-lengths over Yampez. Time for the 1 9-16 miles was two minutes, 41.3 seconds.

MARKET TRENDS

TORONTO (CP) — Scurry-Rainbow Oil highlighted heavy trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange Friday as it bounced back from Thursday's losses.

The western oil index climbed 4.19 to an all-time high 195.27 at 2:30 p.m., but slipped back to close at 194.18.

Analysts said there have been rumors circulating about possible mergers concerning Scurry and new ore discoveries.

Midrim Mining rose 9 cents to 1.99 on 743,000 shares. The rise came in the wake of a company announcement that assay results of 3.28 per cent combined nickel and copper had been obtained from property in northwestern Quebec.

Among industrials, John Labatt Ltd. rose 1¾ to 26⅞ after the board of directors recommended at a Friday meeting that the company's shares be split on a two-for-one basis.

On index, industrials gained .31 to 167.37. Golds slid .41 to 163.51 and base metals .46 to 98.87. Volume was 5,006,000 shares, the heaviest trading since April 26, 1966. Thursday's volume was 4,331,000 shares.

MONTREAL (CP) — A late spurt carried the composite index narrowly onto the plus side in brisk trading Friday on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Declines, however, beat advances 56 to 43 on the Montreal list and 88 to 80 on the combined Montreal markets.

Senior oils led the advance, following recent reports that Canadian western oils will be in great demand following the disruption of Middle East oil supplies.

Dome Pete jumped three points to 62¾ and Shell ⅞ to 30⅜. Pacific Pete was up ⅜ at 17½ and Husky ⅛ at 18.

Labatt, which has announced plans to split its stock on a two-for-one basis, rose 1⅜ points to 27 on the industrial list.

CPR and Imperial Tobacco each declined ⅞ to 71⅛ and 14¼ respectively.

Among the mixed utilities Trans-Mountain Pipe Line rose ⅞ to 21 while Trans-Canada Pipe Line eased ¾ to 32.

Banks were lower, with Canadian Imperial Commerce off ⅜ at 65¼ and Montreal ¼ at 125⅜.

On the Canadian Stock Exchange, Peace River Mining added 50 cents at $8 while United Asbestos lost 55 cents to $4.35.

Industrial volume was 245,669 shares and mines and oils 813,537 shares, compared with 250,000 and 908,000 Thursday.

On index, industrials gained .14 at 167.62, a new high; utilities .01 to 149.00; papers were unchanged at 110.59; and banks slid 1.23 at 125.22. The composite index was up .15 at 160.20.

NEW YORK (AP) — Steels took centre stage in the stock market Friday and the summer rally continued while cigarette stocks retired to the wings.

Steels advanced solidly.

The cigarette issues — strong early in the week amid incomplete reports about a new filter Columbia University was unveiling—stumbled to sharp losses.

Strength in various other sections of the list was such that the market was ahead all day, and roughly to the same degree.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.52 to 882.05.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced 1.1 to 330.8, with industrials up 2.6, rails up .1 to a new high for *the year and utilities un*changed.

The steels made their big advance because of wide publication of the fact that the Vickers "favorite 50," an analysis of investment company portfolios, showed investment companies had acquired a substantial position in the stocks of major steelmakers.

Reynolds Tobacco, the most active issue of the two previous sessions, sank to third place among the volume leaders and took a loss of 2 at 42.

As the week ended, the New York Stock Exchange said trading for the week was the highest in history—about 57,400,000 shares.

Atlas Corp. was the most active issue, up ¾ to 4⅝ on 227,300 shares.

TELEPHONE A LOSER

Eleven of the most active stocks rose and four fell. American Telephone, off ⅛ at 52⅛, was one of the losers.

Volume Friday was 10,890,000 shares compared with 10,730,000 Thursday.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 19 cents to 92.74.

Among Canadian stocks, Granby Mining advanced 1½, Alcan ½, Distillers Seagrams and Hudson Bay Mining ⅛, McIntyre Porcupine lost 1¾, Canadian Pacific ½, International Nickel, Massey - Ferguson and Walker Gooderham ¼.

Prices were generally higher on the American exchange. Volume was 5,560,000 shares compared with 5,170,000 Thursday. The exchange's index rose 11 cents to $20.89.

Calgary-based Scurry - Rainbow Oil continued its advance on rumors of encouraging prospect results in Saskatchewan and take-over bids. It advanced 1⅝ as fifth most active stock.

Among other Canadian stocks, ¼ gains were made by Brazilian Light and Power, Canadian Javelin and Preston, with Canadian Marconi rising ⅛.

Bond Prices Improved

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prices of the Government of Canada short-term bonds improved on the Canadian bond market this week.

The 4½-per-cent June 15, 1968, issue closed at 99.70 bid and 99.80 asked.

The long-term Government of Canada bonds were unchanged with the 4½-per-cent Sept. 1, 1983, issue closing at 85⅝ bid and 85⅞ asked.

On July 10, the Government of Canada offered $175,000,000 of bonds in three maturities comprising of: $20,000,000 5-per-cent due Oct. 1, 1968, prices at 99.50 to yield 5.44 per cent; $70,000,000 5½-per-cent due April 1, 1969, prices at 99.90 to yield 5.56 per cent; and $85,000,000 6-per-cent due Dec. 15, 1971, priced at 99.75 to yield 6.06 per cent. All maturities sold out quickly and current markets are 99.75-99.85; 100.20-100.30; and 100¼-100½ respectively.

Day-to-day money traded at 3½ per cent.

Treasury bills were unchanged with the 91-day bills closing at 4.24 per cent and the 182-day bills at 4.53.

Municipal issues awarded during the last week reflected the downward trend of prices and lack of interest in such issues.

Dollar Down

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian dollar down 1-64 at 92 23-32 in terms of U.S. funds. Week ago 92 41-64.

MONTREAL (CP) — U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds unchanged at $1.07 27-32. Pound sterling unchanged at $3.00¾.

Interior Businessmen . . .

IT'S YOUR INCOME WE'RE TALKING ABOUT!

The more we earn, the more we can spend with YOU for our needs.

For this reason you should know why Interior IWA members are now bargaining for the same wages and contract conditions as are now in effect at the Coast.

The wage-spending of 8,000 woodworkers in the Northern and Southern Interior is an important factor in business activity. The Interior must not become a low-wage area, because this can only lead to business stagnation.

Interior woodworkers now receive 50c an hour less for comparable work than Coast woodworkers. This lowers living standards throughout the Interior.

Placing Interior woodworkers on the same footing as Coast woodworkers will ensure the circulation of another $8 MILLION throughout the Interior, most of which will flow toward retail outlets.

Increased output per man-hour fully justifies these proposed wage increases. The labour costs per unit of production have in fact been substantially lowered, protecting the industry's export market.

The accumulated profits and increased net worth of the big corporations which now dominate the Interior lumber industry could easily provide the same wages for their Interior employees as they pay at the Coast.

And remember, wage spending of the workers in the community far exceeds these companies' local purchasing.

We ask for your moral support so that we can together greatly enrich the prosperity of our Interior communities.

THE FEMININE EVOLUTION

Helen Gurley Brown, author of Sex And The Single Girl, speaks to Weekend Magazine's Jock Carroll about love, marriage, careers and, of course, sex

By Jock Carroll

WOMEN are on the march again.

The torch carried by the suffragettes of the last century has been picked up once more by new leaders of the struggle for "equal" rights. The bloomer girls spent 50 years battling for women's rights. Women spent the next 50 years wondering if they really wanted them.

In a way, the bloomer girls won the battles but lost the war. In the eyes of both men and women, the feminist image became that of an aggressive, man-hating, embittered, sex-starved spinster — a woman who was trying to become a man. As a result in recent decades only a few exceptional women have chosen careers over marriage, or tried to mix a career with marriage. Most women have turned away from careers and back to husband, home and children.

Unfortunately, the divorce rate continues to climb. And the modern home appears to have spawned a disturbing number of alienated children. And psychiatrists and psychologists listening to American women hear these words:

"I feel empty somehow . . . incomplete . . . I have a tired feeling all the time . . . I get so angry with the children it scares me . . . I'm so bored . . . I've got my health, fine children, a lovely home, a successful husband and I keep asking myself 'Is this all?' "

Despite freedoms and luxuries the envy of women all over the world, the American woman is unhappy. And recently a large number of high priestesses has emerged, all with different analyses, opinions and programs for today's woman. Among these writers and thinkers are such famous women as Simone de Beauvoir, Margaret Mead, Phyllis McGinley, Betty Friedan, Helen Gurley Brown, Marya Mannes and many others.

Whether they agree or not, their ideas are affecting current debate on the new morality, birth control and abortion, education, and may even foreshadow changes in our basic concepts of marriage and family life. According to some of the high priestesses, the war between the sexes is far from over. They have not yet begun to fight. The following interview with Helen Gurley Brown, author of Sex And The Single Girl, is the first in a series by Weekend Magazine Associate Editor Jock Carroll.

SIX YEARS AGO the career of Helen Gurley Brown went on the rocks. She was then the highest-paid woman copy writer in the Los Angeles office of the Kenyon & Eckhardt advertising agency. But a new creative director arrived on the scene, who didn't like her work. Worse, he didn't like her.

She got the deep-freeze treatment. She received no assignments. She wasn't invited to meetings. Her memos went unanswered. Her pay was cut by several thousand dollars a year.

At first, Helen reacted as she had all her life, by working harder. As a voluntary project she worked up a whole series of institutional ads for a major client and put it on the creative director's desk.

Still bitter today, she says, "That son of a bitch didn't even acknowledge it."

(In her present position as the busy, successful editor-in-chief of Cosmopolitan magazine, Helen acknowledges every scrap of paper from her staff.)

As the silence around her mounted, Helen began to burn, slowly, quietly, around the clock. She struck back, in female fashion, by carting home the office stationery. Four boxes of carbon paper. Five packages of yellow second sheets. Ten stenographer's notebooks.

Unfortunately, when she arrived home with her next load of contraband, she was caught by her husband, a story executive at 20th Century-Fox. He made her take it back.

"Look," he said, "if you steal $10 worth every day for the next two years, it won't make up your salary cut. Either be a good girl — or else make up your mind you're going to leave the company."

Helen abandoned her life of crime. Her husband suggested a better way of putting in her time. "Write a book about your life as a career girl."

She sat down and wrote a book called Sex And The Single Girl. The book zoomed to the top of the best seller lists. It sold more than three million copies in 28 countries. It was made into a movie. It earned an estimated $500,000. It led Helen to a nationally syndicated column, to the editorship of Cosmopolitan and to two more books, Sex And The Office, and The Outrageous Opinions Of Helen Gurley Brown.

It's turned out to be a much faster way of getting rich than stealing paper clips from the boss. And it certainly must have taught that creative director a lesson. You can't keep a bad girl down.

My interview with Mrs. Brown took place in the New York offices of Cosmopolitan. She welcomed me into her private office where a large, comfortable sofa was in front of her desk. Mrs. Brown curled up in a corner of the sofa, displaying a very shapely pair of legs. I considered joining her on the sofa but decided it would be better if I sat in a nearby chair where I could keep an eye on her.

"Mrs. Brown," I said, "your books have scared the pants off a lot of people, but I've read them carefully from cover to cover and I cannot find the wild, sexy parts. Are you a bit of a fraud?"

Mrs. Brown threw back her head and laughed. "You know, I don't think people read what I write! On radio and television interviews I get these dumb questions, beginning, 'Mrs. Brown, you say everybody should go out and have at it . . . everybody should have three lovers and five mistresses . . . ' so I ask them, 'Did you ever read a word to that effect in my books?' They have to admit they haven't My books say a girl should work hard and play hard — onward-and-upward books I call them. But I have gotten this other reputation and in that sense, I guess, I am a fraud."

"Why was your book so successful?"

"It had this particular thing, a real woman, not anyone particularly significant, saying in a sincere way the things that happened to her as a single girl. And inspiring other single girls not to be discouraged or feel guilty about their lives. It just happened along at the right time and it clicked. I doubt if I could ever write a best-seller like that again."

"Could you sum up the message of the book?"

"If you're a single girl you can have a wonderful life; that's the simple message. And, amplifying it, it's that single girls do have affairs with men. They have a very good sex life, many of them better than the girls who are married."

"Both of your parents were school teachers. Was there anything in your childhood to indicate you would grow into the Helen Gurley Brown of today?"

"I don't think so," said Mrs. Brown thoughtfully. "My father died when I was 10, which perhaps frightened me. I can remember asking, very shortly after his death, if there was insurance to look after us. I was very much aware that my mother, my sister and I were alone in the world, without a man to look after us."

"Was there enough insurance?"

"For a while. But then my sister got polio and that ate up our money. My mother had to work. And when I finished high school and business school I went to work right away. I've said we were very poor, but I think perhaps I've exaggerated that. Certainly we weren't poor as I know people can be. But from an early age I knew anything we were going to have, we would have to work for. That's how I developed this compulsive work pattern, I guess."

> "Single girls have a very good sex life, often better than girls who are married"

"How did you do at high school?"

"Well, I had the highest scholarship rating of any girl in my senior year and I was president of the scholarship society. And valedictorian. My motivation came from a terrible case of acne, and I wasn't a very pretty girl to begin with. But I worked hard to be popular and do well in class. I had good instincts, but don't ask me how you instil these in children; I don't know. It seems to me today too many children do the negative thing if they have problems. They try to get away from it all with pot or LSD or whatever they're currently using."

"Why didn't you go on to university?"

"There just wasn't money to send me to university for four years. I did go for one term — before I switched to business school. When I left there I could take shorthand at 130 words a minute and type 80 words a minute. I can probably still type faster than anyone in this office. That's another thing about today's girls. I get calls at Cosmopolitan all the time from girls who want to get into the fashion business. I nearly go through the roof! To begin with, it's a scruffy business, rampant with homosexuals, but on top of that these girls can't even take shorthand or type!"

"Life magazine has described you as an 'iron butterfly', which makes you sound like a terribly ambitious woman. Were you like this as a girl?"

Mrs. Brown laughed. "I was an ordinary secretary from age 19 until I was 33. So if I was terribly ambitious I certainly wasn't doing very well, was I? No, I simply had good work habits — and I don't know how you cultivate these in a child. Maybe I just had a good example. My mother was a wonderful woman. The way I got to be a copy writer, I think, was another example of trying to make the best of things. There was a shower for one of the girls in the office one evening, and I was the only girl who wasn't invited. I could have sat around that night, feeling sorry for myself. Instead I entered a contest in Glamour magazine, 'What Is Your Ambition?' I was one of the winners and when my boss heard about it — I said my ambition was to be a copy writer — he gave me a chance at copy writing."

"Mrs. Brown," I said, "there's a great deal written today about woman's desperate search for identity — "

She laughed. "That's so ridiculous! Women never had it so good! We're still womanly, we have babies and men fall in love with us. And in addition to these traditional functions, we have this whole other thing, the career world. I think we've got it all!"

"Is there a sexual revolution going on?"

"Women are getting into the act. They no longer want to be passive partners, putting up with sex. The Pill is a big factor. No longer worried about pregnancy, some women become sexier. I also think most young people in this country sleep together before marriage. I think the double standard has to go."

"There are signs of more than that," I said. "Stories of wife-swapping clubs. The appearance of the amoral teeny-bopper. In California they've even established the Sexual Freedom League, which seems to advocate a totally promiscuous way of life, complete with orgies. Is sex becoming simply a game of musical chairs?"

"I can't imagine that," said Mrs. Brown. "What's going on doesn't upset me morally. I think what adults do together, that doesn't hurt anybody, is their own business. But I think those people are dopes. I don't think that way of life would be much fun. And I think not having any fun would keep people from having at it, with every breath they take."

"What effect are these new sex attitudes having on marriage?"

"My fondest hope would be that people would get married because they might have a good life together. I mean, it's wonderful if you are attracted to someone sexually, but that shouldn't be the reason for getting married."

"Neverthless, in your latest book, you mentioned a dinner party of yours at which there were eight people — with a total of 17 marriages. Excluding yourself, with one marriage, the others averaged 2.43 marriages each. Isn't the increase of divorces tied up with new sex attitudes?"

"I don't think divorce has anything to do with sex," said Mrs. Brown. "Divorce is more acceptable socially today and women can now take care of themselves by working. They don't have to put up with a man who makes them miserable."

"Aren't children paying the price for this new freedom of woman?"

"I don't think they pay more of a price than they do living in an unhappy home. Of course, I'm such a great authority, not having any children."

"But we do seem to be producing a wave of alienated children, a large proportion of them from broken homes."

"It would take a sociologist to discuss that. But, yes, you do run into some ridiculous situations. She has three children from her marriage. He has two from his. And they have two more of their own. I cannot say that is good. But children are sturdy; they do survive if they get enough love — from someone. As I say, I'm no authority on children, not having any of my own."

"Recently," I said, "there's been agitation from college girls for the Pill. What if teenage girls demand it?"

"Until a woman has a man in her life, getting one is her greatest concern"

"Well," said Mrs. Brown, "I think that 14, 15, 16, is too young for girls to be sleeping with boys. If I were a parent, which I'm not, I'd try to convince my daughter not to be in such a bloody hurry. But if I suspected she was having sex relations, I'd have her taking the Pill with her orange juice every morning."

"There is a quotation in one of your books, 'I've never yet known a happy virgin.' At what age do you think a girl should lose her virginity?"

"That depends on the individual," said Mrs. Brown. "But I think any time under 20 is pretty young, if you can generalize about such a thing. However, if a girl waits until she is in her thirties, she may find it difficult to adjust to a normal sex life."

Our conversation was interrupted by the arrival of a man with a Cosmopolitan magazine layout for Mrs. Brown's approval. Then followed a couple of telephone calls, one of which was from her husband, David Brown. While she was busy I examined some of the covers of Cosmopolitan which were attached to the large bulletin board in her office. Since she took over at Cosmopolitan, Mrs. Brown has been busy changing the magazine from a rather staid publication into a kind of Playmate Of The Month. Some of the articles featured on the cover in that period have been The Affair Versus Marriage, Battle Plan Against The Other Woman, Romantic Nightgowns, A Lady Reports On Scandinavian Men, How Surgery Can Build Your Bosom, and The Complete Husband-Hunting Wardrobe.

The accent on sex has increased the magazine's circulation to more than a million, but the new look has not won the approval of every woman. Betty Friedan, author of The Feminine Mystique, feels that Cosmo's new outlook is "quite obscene and quite horrible. It is an immature teen-age-level sexual fantasy . . . there is nothing in life but bed, bed, bed."

When Mrs. Brown returned to the sofa I quoted Betty Friedan's comments about Cosmopolitan.

Mrs. Brown smiled. "We're very honest about sex, because it is a great, human drive. Until a woman has a man in her life, getting one is her greatest concern. But I don't suggest sex is all there is to life. I suggest getting a man — and getting on with a career."

"Mrs. Brown," I said, "you have stated there are four million more women than men on this continent. Unless these four million girls get a part of someone else's man, they will have to do without. Do you agree with the saying that any woman worth her salt would sooner have one-sixth of a first-rate man than all of a sixth-rate man?"

Mrs. Brown threw back her head and went into a gale of laughter. "I hadn't heard that! What the single girl gets, I think, is one-quarter of four men and about one-sixteenth of 16 men. That, it seems, adds up to about two whole men."

"To be more personal," I said, "are you prepared to share your husband with any of these four million unfortunates?"

Mrs. Brown laughed again. "No! I'm all for monogamy — for myself anyway. And I certainly wouldn't want to share my husband in bed with anybody. If I ever do, I hope I don't know anything about it. I don't think you should ever confess, if you don't have to."

"Are women's new attitudes on sex and marriage having an emasculating effect on men?"

"There were always some women who emasculated men. The Pill, now, is apparently upsetting a certain number of men. The ones who always wanted to be the ones who said, who, what, when, where. These men don't particularly want a woman who is raring to go all the time. It makes them feel they may not be able to produce well enough."

"Then are we facing a change in sexual roles?"

"The role of man has been changing since the industrial revolution. Perhaps since we left the caves and men no longer had to be great hunters, with a lot of muscle. I think the roles are definitely changing, but there have been matriarchal societies in the world before. That idea doesn't frighten me."

"There have been matriarchal societies in the world before. The idea doesn't frighten me"

"It may not frighten you," I said, "but it certainly frightens me."

"I don't suppose either of us will be around to see it," said Mrs. Brown. "But the fact is there have always been some strong women and some weak men. It's only when you try to make the male or female role too rigid that trouble develops."

"Do you agree with the ideas in Betty Friedan's book, The Feminine Mystique?"

"Well, she feels women have been tyrannized into thinking they should do nothing but stay home and bring up a family — and I go along with that. Take our national heroines. Our biggest national heroine is Jackie Kennedy, who does nothing. She's a lovely lady, a doll, but a goose! Now, perhaps Betty Friedan goes too far regarding woman and a career. She says a home and family is not enough for any woman. Obviously, she's wrong about that. Because there are many women who are quite happy looking after a home and family."

"Are you familiar with the writings of Simone de Beauvoir?"

"I couldn't get through her book, The Second Sex. It bored me. Mind you, I don't deprecate this woman. God knows, she's got plenty to say. But with her, woman seems so put upon, has such a cross to bear. It's all so dramatic and terrible and sad, it seems masochistic. Mind you, I'm not familiar enough with her work to judge, or with life in France. But over there it seems the moment a woman gets out of bed to do something constructive, she's in trouble!"

"What about Ayn Rand's writing?"

"I'm afraid I don't know her work. You tell me what she's about."

I gave a quick summary of Ayn Rand's philosophy, as I understood it.

"Royal Instant Puddings taste like being a Hollywood Star"

Ask any girl about Royal Instant Puddings, and she'll say something sensational like that. Because a girl can't help being dramatic about Royal. Why? Simple. Royal is the instant pudding with more award-winning natural flavor in every spoonful. More chocolate. More butterscotch. More strawberry. More Royal Flavor. Maybe someday, somebody else will discover Royal's flavor secret. But 'til then, Royal is really the only instant pudding you should buy. Royal Instant Puddings. They taste like all the good things kids dream about.

"If she's against taking care of people, against charity," said Mrs. Brown, thoughtfully, "I don't know about that. I don't know how many people I take care of, in my 80-per-cent tax bracket — quite a few — but I still have enough left to have the best life I ever had. I'm afraid I'm being subjective now, as women are sometimes inclined to be. But I think it's marvellous we have medicare and social security and things like that. I think we take care of too many people now, but — — whoops I'm not supposed to swear — I never had it so good. Let's just say, no matter how permissive we are and how many people we're taking care of and how many are on relief rolls, it's still so good for whoever is footing the bills, I don't think we're in too much trouble. Certainly, between the way it used to be and the way it is now, I'll take the way it is now."

"The writings of Françoise Sagan and Rona Jaffe appear in your magazine. Are they living lives typical of today's modern woman? The kind of life you advocate in Cosmopolitan?"

"Sagan I don't know," said Mrs. Brown. "She comes from a wealthy family. She would be comparable to a society girl in this country, and I don't write for that sort of person. They're not girls who have to work for a living. I adore her books. They have very naughty heroines who cause their husbands' mistresses to drive cars over cliffs out of sheer unhappiness. I think she writes fantastic stories but I can't say she speaks for a whole generation. Now Rona Jaffe would be a Cosmopolitan girl except that Rona is extremely successful. She's been a successful novelist, has sold books to the movies and Rona is perhaps a bit more of a swinger than my kind of girl. She gets to run around all over the world. She's — you know, more parties, more yachts . . . "

"Not an example of the new woman?"

"Not a typical example, because Rona is, well, she's very special. She's so smart and so wonderful, but I think we're picking out somebody who — who is famous, for one thing. I wouldn't attempt to advise Rona Jaffe on anything, because she did it before I did — she was a successful writer — but I don't think Rona typifies how things are now because she's a neurotic girl, even as I am. Rona has her own special hang-ups. I believe she has been, or still is, in psychiatry. She's fantastic and I admire her tremendously, but I don't think she's typical of a generation of girls, because she's now a celebrity."

"There's no doubt that I'm neurotic. But my particular neuroses have benefited me"

"You said she was neurotic, as you yourself are. How do you consider yourself neurotic?"

"Well, I think anyone who doesn't marry until she is 37 is quite neurotic! Here I am saying that to have a man of your own to love and be with is wonderful. O.K., how come it took me so long? Obviously, something was funny. For one thing I was driven on, in this compulsive-work situation, from early fright, or whatever. There's no doubt I'm neurotic! But my particular neuroses, one of them, anyway, this compulsive-work pattern, has only redounded to my benefit."

"You are a compulsive worker?"

"Yes. I have other neuroses. I lived with one very destructive neurosis, which was to be attracted to men who were not very good to me. I went off and on with one particular man for nine years. He had other women, he destroyed my confidence, he didn't bring out the best in me at all. Certainly, that's neurotic. Anyone who would let that be done to them must be out of her head! So, let's say I'm successfully neurotic. I've been through analysis. I think it helps enormously. It doesn't cure you. An alcoholic is always an alcoholic. A neurotic person is always neurotic."

Siamese cats, Gregory and Samantha, often keep Mrs. Brown company when she works at home.

"What do you learn in analysis?"

"Insight. You learn what's going on in people's heads, including your own. It makes you very empathic and sensitive. And you find these horrible destructive patterns that you're living with — and you're able to break them. You can no longer have any fun with your neuroses!" She laughed. "Takes all the fun out of it."

It was now nearly 7 P.M. and I could see Mrs. Brown was becoming anxious to get back to the work piled on her desk. I rose to leave and she helped me locate my overcoat where it had been tucked away in a closet in the outer offices. The offices were now deserted and the only person in sight was a cleaning woman, busy with a mop and pail.

As Mrs. Brown showed me the way out of the office, I asked, "What do you do for fun?"

"Well, I'm a bit of a bore these days and I don't do very much for out-and-out fun. David is just a few blocks away — that's my husband. He drops me off here in the morning and he picks me up here at night. Tonight we're having dinner with people. Last night we went to the theatre. We see all the movies and plays because that's his business."

"No swimming, tennis or other sports?"

"I used to, in Los Angeles. But right now the magazine is much more consuming than I would have thought. But I can't do it and not give it everything I've got. And it seems to require just that."

She pushed back a strand of hair, with the first trace of tiredness I'd noticed in her.

She went on, "It's silly really. I work here every night until 7:30 or 8. Surely it's not THAT important! Why am I taking it so big? Maybe it's like the child who will take every single minute of his mother's time, and every single ounce of her energy if she lets him. I guess that's what's happening here."

Ron Stewart is cool and collected – and he could be the last of the little men

By Robert McKeown
Weekend Magazine

THERE IS this little halfback. He only comes up to the shoulders of most of the fellows he plays against.

When the big pros first see him, they say, "Don't tell us he plays on the team."

Then they see him in action.

He can run, catch, block and pass. They soon realize that he is a big man packaged small.

He'll go for five yards with a couple of tacklers on his back. He knocks down the 275-pound giants as if they were pygmies.

In one game when he's really hot, no one can lay a finger on him. He catches passes, and slams through or around the line for more yards than any pro football player — Canadian or American — has ever gained in a single game.

At this point a movie producer or book publisher likely would call a halt to a writer's story outline. He well might decide that the customers wouldn't buy or believe this version of the old David-and-Goliath plot.

That would be because he did not know Ottawa Rough Rider halfback Ron Stewart.

Over the past nine years, Canadian football fans have seen Stewart play David to a large number of Goliaths. An Ottawa crowd was not unduly surprised during a game last season when Stewart had to be restrained by his team mates from fighting with Hamilton's big tackle, Angelo Mosca. The difference in height and weight between the two is about one foot and 100 pounds.

Stewart's exact height is a matter of doubt. On programs and in the record books it is listed as five feet, eight inches.

"Stew," said a friend, "is exactly that tall — standing on his tiptoes and a chair."

Frank Clair, the Rough Rider coach, said, "Sometimes he looks shorter than that. I've never been able to find out for sure. I can't recall him ever being around when we were measuring."

In the merciless ribbing of the Rough Riders' dressing room, Stewart has long ago lost any sensitivity he may have had about remarks concerning his height. A man who can hold his own in such repartee, he dismisses the matter with "Let's just say I'm five-foot-nothing."

Whatever his height, Stewart stands tall in Canadian football. Both in college and in professional football, he has won most of the awards the game has to offer.

His team mates have twice chosen him as the Rough Riders' most valuable player. The Ottawa fans have done the same. In 1960 he won the Schenley Award as the outstanding Canadian player in the country.

He has been named to a variety of all-star teams. He also belongs to the exclusive "Thousand Yard Club" composed of players who have gained more than 1,000 yards in a single season. His all-time, all-league record of 287 yards in a single game has stood since 1960.

Stewart (he's also on cover) finds

But Stewart could well be the last man of his size ever to make such a mark in Canadian football as a halfback. For in the game today the big are getting bigger and the small no longer have much of a chance.

"In future it's going to be more difficult to work a little man into pro football," said Red O'Quinn, Ottawa Rough Riders' general manager and a former star with the Montreal Alouettes. "There may be the occasional one who's a specialist — a flanker back or someone who runs back punts. But you'll rarely find a small man in the backfield."

O'Quinn points out that a few years ago there were plenty of small, fast backs. Coaches have always looked for speed in players, especially for the backfield. And the light men used to have it all over the heavy ones when it came to covering ground in a hurry.

Not any more. Year by year the boys who turn out for football are getting bigger and faster. The coaches no longer have to turn to slightly-built men for the speed they need.

"The linemen of 250 to 275 pounds who are coming up today are just as quick as the 230-pounders used to be," said O'Quinn. "About 10 or 15 years ago it was unheard of to have backs who were 235 to 240. Today they are numerous in the United States though there aren't yet many in Canada. But we've had backs who weigh well over 200 pounds, like Bo Scott and Jim Dillard."

O'Quinn says almost all the small halfbacks who have tried to make the Canadian Football League in recent times have not lasted or have had serious injury problems.

"They look good at the beginning of the season when the fields are dry and the turf is good," he said. "But later on the footing gets heavy. The big linemen start to catch up with them. Then the injuries start. And small men tend to get hurt more easily than big ones."

This has been the story with such small, speedy half-backs as Sherman Lewis, formerly with Toronto Argonauts; Willie Fleming, who was with Vancouver Lions; and Ernie White, who played for Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Alouettes. The exception has been Stewart, who has missed only two games through injuries in nine years of play with Ottawa.

"Ronnie," says Rough Rider coach Frank Clair, as he superstitiously raps the wooden seat of his chair, "has gone as long as any back in Canada and stayed free of injury."

The reason for Stewart's durability is plain to anyone who sees him in the dressing room. His breadth of shoulders and powerful arms tend to make him appear shorter than he really is. This strong, compact build has enabled him to withstand the years of battering by massive linemen — and to do considerable damage himself.

"He's got a burning desire to knock big men down," said O'Quinn. "He delights in it."

Stewart, a quiet-spoken and good-natured man, says the physical contact of football is one of its chief attractions for him. He confesses that he "likes to get out there and knock heads." He believes he probably would do it even if there was no money involved in playing the game.

"I love it," he says of the bodily contact. "You just have to love it. You're not trying to kill anyone. You just like running into him.

"Especially there's great satisfaction in blocking. In the United States the backs don't block the way they do in Canada. Here everyone blocks. That's what makes the game so much more fun. There's nothing quite like cleaning somebody out of there."

Stewart has taken particular delight in taking out such rugged characters as Hamilton's Mosca and Ralph Goldston, now coaching in Montreal. For his efforts he was named to Mosca's first "meanie team," an honor he prizes, although he doubts it was deserved.

In almost every Ottawa-Hamilton game, Stewart and Mosca seem to have a difference of one kind or another. Given the disparity of size, the Ottawa fans particularly relish the sight of Mosca being cut down by the diminutive Stewart.

"It's sort of ridiculous, the difference in size," Stewart said. "Yet you can't let somebody just push you around. You have to stand up and pretend you're going to eat him up, too.

"Angie is the kind of fellow who comes right back at you when you say or do something to him," he said appreciatively. "Of course there's nothing personal about it. It's just the different colors of our jerseys."

There was nothing to indicate that Stewart would become something of a giant-killer when he first turned out for football at Riverdale Collegiate in Toronto. He was 12 years old, stood all of four feet nine, and weighed about 110 pounds in full gear on a muddy day.

He was so small that none of the school equipment would fit him without severe pruning. Even the smallest pair of football pants drooped to his ankles (he has the same trouble today with professional equipment, which is not designed with men of his height in mind).

Stewart appeared so delicate that his first high-school coach, a retired army colonel, feared to play him even on the bantam team. He sat on the bench until almost the end of the season when he finally saw brief action as a defensive end.

When Stewart got his hands on the ball in subsequent years, he proved what a mighty mite he was. Soon opposing teams were assigning two or three players to stop the smallest boy on the Riverdale team, but without much success. Stewart led Riverdale to bantam and junior championships, while winning the first of many most-valuable-player awards.

After graduating from high school, he worked for a year to get money to attend Queen's University where he took degrees in arts and physical education before going on to first-year law. He finished law at the University of Ottawa while playing for the Rough Riders.

To say Stewart was sensational as a college football player is an understatement. He led Queen's to championships in 1955 and 1956, playing both offensive and defensive and piling up prodigious yardage as a ball carrier.

In 1957, not a vintage football year at Queen's, the Golden Gaels lost every game. Newspaper accounts of that disastrous season indicate that Stewart was the team. He carried the ball on practically every play and made most of the tackles on defence. For his efforts he was named the most valuable player in the Inter-Collegiate Rugby Football Union.

Frank Clair, not a man of unbridled enthusiasm, had reservations when he first heard about Stewart.

"I was not elated," he said recently. "Despite his college record, he was pretty small for professional football."

But Clair was interested enough to take in a Queen's game. After seeing Stewart run a few times, he decided that this was a player who was worth a tryout, despite his size.

"He was maybe 170 pounds then, but he hit like a man of 190," said Clair. "And he had this compact build — like a little blacksmith."

It did not take Stewart long to prove his usefulness. He also let larger players know he could both take and dish out punishment with the best of them.

"I remember some of the pile-ups in those first games after Stew and I came to the Riders in 1958," said Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson. "No matter how hard he had been hit, Stew was always first on his feet. He wasn't going to let anyone think they'd hurt him."

Today Stewart can take his time in getting off the ground. He has amply demonstrated to team mates and opponents alike that there is not a harder rock in Canadian football.

This applies particularly to his blocking. There are many who will agree with Jackson's opinion that Stewart is the best blocking back in Canadian football.

"The coaches and players appreciate blocking more than the fans," Jackson said. "It's something you see on the field and in the films, but often miss in the stands. And Stew's blocks are sensational.

"He goes hell bent for leather, and what he does to line backers and defensive ends is ruinous. He almost goes right through them."

Both Clair and O'Quinn attribute the effectiveness of Stewart's blocking to his low centre of gravity. He hits both very low and very hard.

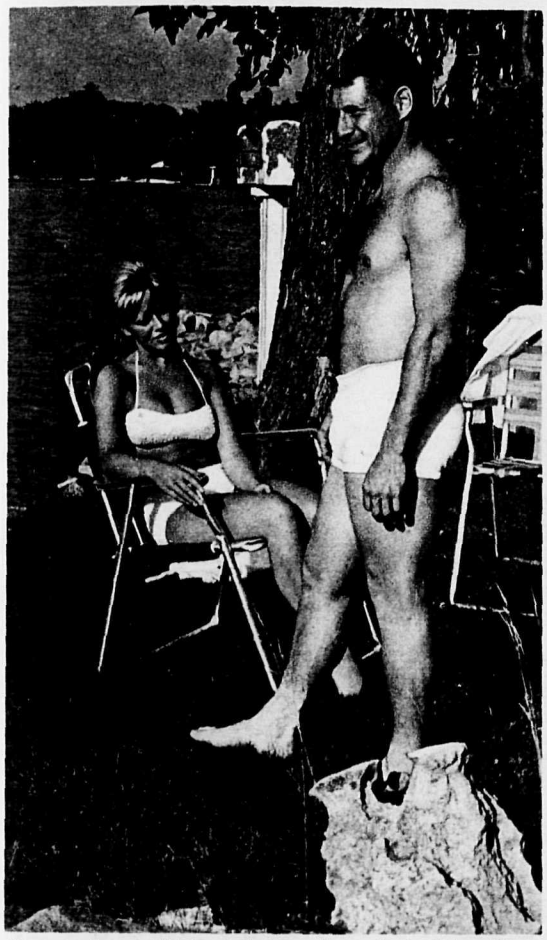
"He's smart," said O'Quinn. "If he went in high toward the big arms of the linemen, he'd take a lot of punishment. His way, they're down on the ground before they know what hit them."

O'Quinn recalled wryly the game in 1960 when he was playing for the last time in a Montreal Alouette uniform before retiring. Unhappily the opponent was Ottawa and Stewart was in top form.

"I had hoped to retire in a blaze of glory," O'Quinn said. "But Stew ruined the day for me."

As Ottawa pounded Montreal 51 to 21, Stewart broke the all-time rushing record by gaining 287 yards and tied a Big Four record by scoring four touchdowns in a single game. Four of his carries were for 37, 51, 51 and 59 yards.

Off the field, lawyer Stewart is involved in Canada's electoral matters.



Stewart relaxes with Sherri Armour after swim in Rideau River.

His yardage might have gone much higher had the Riders realized that a record was in the making. They did not use Stewart in several series of plays and only learned that he had set the rushing mark when an announcement was made on the public-address system in the fourth quarter.

If Stewart has had no other games quite up to that one, he has had many that came close. On the day in 1963 when Ottawa lost the Big Four title and a playoff bye to Hamilton by a score of 11-10, Stewart scored the only Ottawa touchdown.

A great clutch player, he gave his team chance after chance to score, only to have it thwarted by the Hamilton defence. Among other things, he ran back the three Hamilton kickoffs for 91, 25 and 54 yards.

"He's a fierce competitor," said Jackson. "He never lets up, no matter what the score is. It's great for the team's morale."

With high morale and as close to a set team as you will find in Canada, Ottawa plays its first pre-season game against Calgary on Monday night. While they lost to those other Roughriders from Saskatchewan in the Grey Cup game last year, the Ottawans have their fingers crossed that they will be back in the Grey Cup game this year and playing it on their new home field.

If so, it will be the third Grey Cup contest for Stewart, who was chosen by sports writers as the outstanding player in the first one in which he played seven years ago. After 10 years in pro football, he might seem to be a candidate for retirement some time soon after that, but he has no such thought in mind.

Stewart enjoys the life he leads. He is executive assistant to Nelson Castonguay, Representation Commissioner, who is in charge of future changes in Canada's electoral map. Stewart's job is an interesting one in which he can make use of his legal training. He lives comfortably in a converted carriage house a stone's throw from a golf course. A bachelor, he appreciates feminine company, good books and wines, and travel,

But to Ron Stewart the good life also includes "knocking heads" on the football field for five months each year. At 32, he has no intention of giving up this enjoyment for several years to come. ◁

CHRISTIAN UNITY

A Bright New Hope For All Mankind

Our generation is witness to many exciting and historic events.

The discovery of nuclear energy. The conquest of space. The development of that amazing mechanical brain called the computer. The never-ending invention of new devices, new machines, new techniques to provide human convenience, comfort and pleasure.

But of all the things that are happening in our time, none is more important to the family of man in general ...and to you personally... than that quiet spiritual revolution called — Ecumenism.

It aims to restore the spirit of unity that existed among the followers of Christ a thousand years ago. It proposes a true fellowship of man, under the fatherhood of God, for all believers, Christian and non-Christian alike. It challenges all the People of God to apply God-given principles in their personal lives, and to the solution of the problems and evils of our times.

The historic Ecumenical Movement did not begin, of course, with the convoking of the recent Vatican Council. The Council said, in fact, that it met in response to the grace that created in other Christians "a remorse for their divisions and a longing for unity."

But a knowledge of the deliberation and decrees of the Vatican Council is necessary to a true understanding of Ecumenism — what it means to the world — what it can mean to you. For the Council decisions represent a commitment of the apostolic Church to a new and historic fellowship with all the People of God... and a new and better understanding of the spiritual heritage in which Catholics and other Christians share.

We have a new pocket-size pamphlet on "Principles of Unity." It deals with the disunity that has been the "scandal" of the Christian world. It explains why Christian unity is both necessary and clearly possible. It describes the Catholic principles on Ecumenism and Ecumenism in practice. It discusses the relationship of the apostolic Church to churches separated from the Holy See... and to non-Christian religions.

Big Dam On The Prairies

A DREAM that is 100 years old will come true for Saskatchewan July 21 when Prime Minister Pearson is scheduled to officially open the Gardiner Dam of the South Saskatchewan River Project.

The dam, located midway between the towns of Outlook and Elbow, is the largest earth-fill dam in Canada and one of the biggest of its kind in the world.

The dam will rise 210 feet above the river bed and will be nearly three miles long. A second dam, the Qu'Appelle River Dam, about 12 miles southeast of the town of Elbow, controls the flow of water from the South Saskatchewan River Reservoir into the Qu'Appelle Valley.

The main reservoir is 140 miles long, 192 feet deep at the dam and has a shoreline of 475 miles, making it the largest lake in the Canadian central plains. It will be filled gradually over at least one year to permit engineers to make sure the dam is functioning properly. About 109,600 acres of land in the reservoir will be flooded. Of this 5.2 per cent was previously under cultivation. The balance was mainly used for grazing.

The project, first proposed more than 100 years ago, will stabilize agriculture in the region through irrigation and provision of more dependable water supplies. It will also provide hydro-electric power; make it easier for Regina and Moose Jaw (125-odd miles southeast of the dam) to get water for domestic and industrial use; reduce the water fluctuations in the river which in the past had caused problems for Saskatoon, 70-odd miles northeast; and create greater recreation facilities.

The project required nine years to complete and cost some $112 million.

For Everybody Who's Anybody

And if you can't get in The Daisy club in Beverly Hills chances are you're somebody who's a nobody

By Bill Trent
Weekend Magazine

HER NAME is Sandra Giles and the folks back home in Hooker, Okla., where she comes from, might be glad to know that while she hasn't yet heard from Columbia about her screen tests, she has learned to play a mean game of pool. And at southern California's most in poolroom — the one at The Daisy, a discothèque in exclusive Beverly Hills which anybody in the movie business will tell you is the real in place.

Sandra is one of the chicks. In Beverly Hills, chicks are girls between 16 and 24 or so who all have one thing in common. They all look the same age — 19. They want careers, most of them in the movies. They have heard that in Hollywood, if a girl is over 21, she may well be over the hill. Unless of course she has made it as an actress. So it's important to look 19.

It's important, too, to be seen. In one of those new black, one-piece, fringed bathing suits around the pool of the Beverly-Wilshire where so many of the film people hang out. Or in a wonderfully-abbreviated sports outfit on one of the area's in tennis courts. And at night — well, in a miniskirt at The Daisy. Where else?

The Daisy is a membership club. People just can't walk in off the street. When you knock on the heavy wooden door at 326 North Rodeo drive, the maitre d' looks through a sliding panel. If you are one of the 400 regulars, or have been recommended, you're in. If not, forget it. It's this element of privacy that has made The Daisy a favorite place for movie stars who know they won't be bothered by autograph hounds.

It's run by a well-tanned, ruddy-complexioned, athletic-looking bon vivant of 46 named Jack Hanson who knows everybody in Hollywood and who has the distinction of having been classed by Nancy Sinatra as one of the three most important men in modern-day America. (Her father, Frank Sinatra, and Playboy magnate Hugh Heffner are the other two.)

Hanson has played host to a good many parties for movie stars. Top people like Dean Martin and Natalie Wood — and not long ago there was an all-night session with Frank Sinatra and Mia Farrow.

Hanson's major business is operating a string of exclusive, expensive Jax Slacks Shops for women in California and New York. And when Nancy Sinatra named him one of the top men in America, it was not so much for the number of people he knew in the movie business rather for his views on life.

A man who practises what he preaches, Hanson says people should have a good time and they shouldn't worry about such things as growing old. "That old business of acting your age," he says. "What nonsense that was!"

Hanson set out just after the end of World War II to break some taboos, notably those affecting the female form. At a time when girls were wearing those big, loose skirts, he says he introduced the tight-fitting pants and the tighter-fitting T-shirts.

"The thing is that men like to look at girls' behinds," he says. "Well, the female form is a beautiful thing."

His store business keeps him busy for most of the day. But every night at 11, the waiters at The Daisy (they are all students of the University of California at Los Angeles) push three or four tables together to form a head table and Hanson, often accompanied by his glamorous wife Sally, holds court.

Hanson's head table, looking out on a dance floor where some of the world's most beautiful girls — most of them in short, short miniskirts, do the frug, the jerk and the shing-a-ling — has become something of a legend in Hollywood and to be invited to sit and chat a while is a high honor indeed.

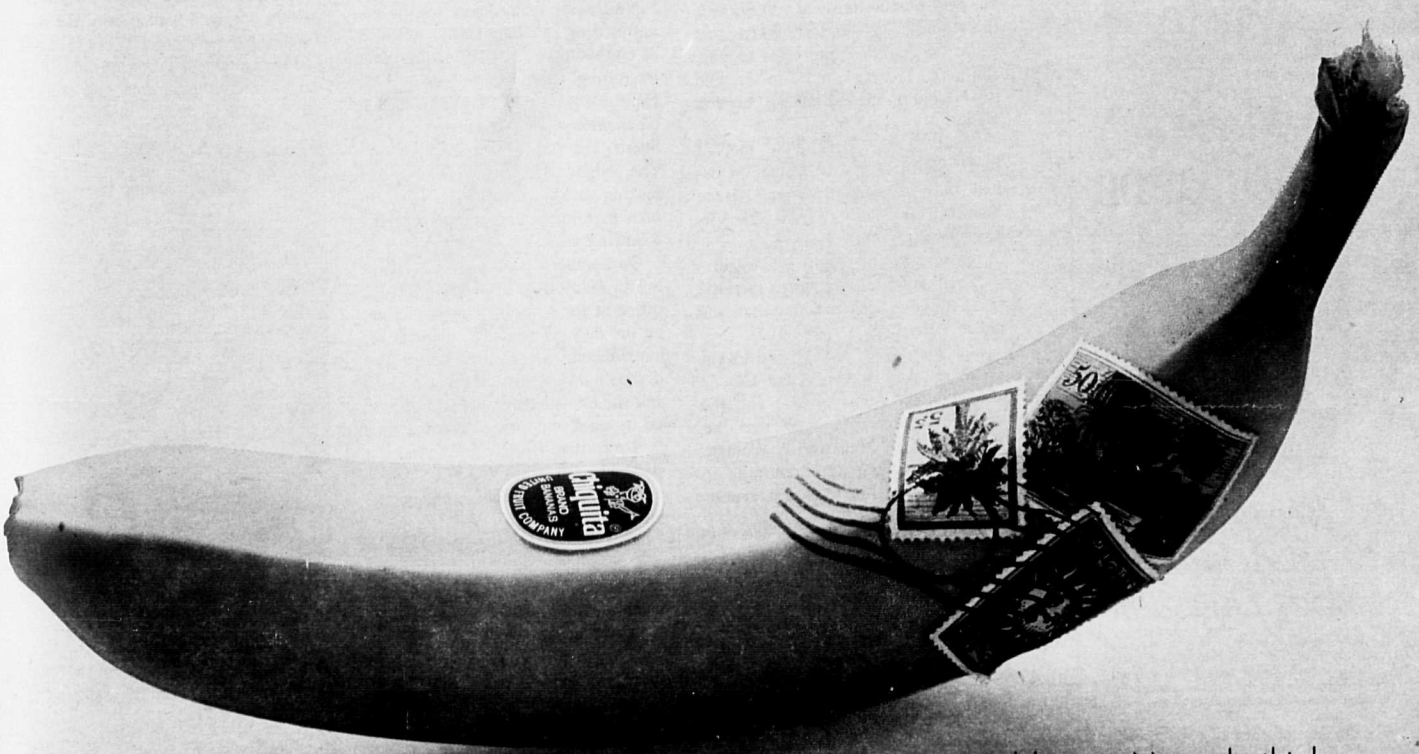
The Special Delivery Banana.



Maybe you didn't know it, but a banana can go through plenty on the way to your grocery store.

2,200 miles of bumping, bouncing, rolling ocean.

And with nothing to protect it but the skin it was born in.

Smash. Bang. Ka-pow.

Now, we wouldn't let our Chiquita Brand Bananas come in for that kind of treatment. So we pack them. Each and every one.

We cut them from their stems and nestle them in corrugated boxes. Nine-ply thick. And shield them with layers and layers of tissue.

That's our Chiquita Brand Banana. Otherwise known as The Special Delivery Banana.

The Royal Mail should have it so good.

Better Way to Fight Constipation

Because it Actually Aids Digestion

When you're constipated, you may also suffer from "fat" indigestion. Your system just doesn't digest fatty foods properly and you get that over-full bloated feeling that makes constipation even more distressing.

To get real relief from constipation, take the laxative that millions depend on to keep "regular." It's more than a laxative for it actually helps you digest both fats and proteins . . . CAROID AND BILE SALTS TABLETS.

CAROID AND BILE SALTS TABLETS act so gently—yet so thoroughly—never cause cramping or griping. They contain: 1. Selected laxative ingredients that gently give you a full bowel movement. 2. The exclusive ingredient "Caroid"* helps you digest proteins. 3. The "Bile Salts" increase the flow of liver bile to help you digest fat.

Special Introductory Offer: SAVE 30¢! Send 20¢ to P.O. Box 3000, Dept. CW, Aurora, Ontario. We will send you a regular 50¢ size of CAROID AND BILE SALTS TABLETS. Send today. Offer Good Only in Canada.

How do chicks rate entrance to The Daisy — and how do they sometimes manage to reach the head table?

The proprietor says he wants his discothèque (there are no hired dancing girls and the music emanates from a turntable) to be a meeting place for attractive people who have something to contribute. All the chicks are attractive and many are interesting as well.

Sandra came over and talked to me in The Daisy's poolroom that first night I visited because I was wearing a tuxedo, a garment which indicated one thing to her in this sporty, informal place — that I had been to the Academy Awards at Santa Monica Civic Auditorium and that I had likely followed the stars to the big bash for the press at the Beverly Hilton. Formal wear is frowned on at The Daisy.

"I could tell right away you went to the awards," she said excitedly. "How was the show?"

Sandra has long silky hair that keeps falling across her face, letting her peek mischievously at you through the strands. She wears miniskirts and white boots. When she talks to you, she is not looking around to see who is watching. She is talking to you alone.

"Anita Louise sat beside me," I said. "She accepted an Oscar on behalf of a costume designer." (Irene Sharaff, for Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf?)

She seemed only mildly interested.

"Shelley Winters sat across the aisle from me. She looked better than she did in Alfie."

Her interest was aroused and I went on about Anouk Aimée and Claude Lelouche, the feminine lead and the director-photographer of the hit French film, A Man And A Woman. "Anouk said they were returning to France in a few days," I said, reporting the news as casually as anyone else at The Daisy might have done.

It's full of beautiful young girls in the shortest of miniskirts

Sandra took the billiard cue in her hand, brushed the hair from her face and surveyed the table. "What do you think?" she said, nodding in the direction of one of the balls.

I crouched behind her and surveyed the scene, too. But I didn't get a chance to answer. Sandra put her left elbow on the table and then leaned beautifully on the green felt. She drew back her right arm and let go and the ball she had been aiming for dropped into the proper pocket.

Conversations with chicks are always very informal, I was to discover on subsequent visits to The Daisy. One girl, amazed to find that I had come all the way from Canada, wanted to know whom I had met. But she wanted the information on the dance floor.

"Julie Christie's making a film in San Francisco," I said, remembering an earlier interview. As we frugged, I told her about Inger Stevens, who had just finished making A Guide For The Married Man. "We agreed that it was necessary to be enthusiastic about things that were important to us," I said. I recalled that Inger had made quite a point of this.

You never really know who is going to drop into The Daisy

You never really know who is going to drop into The Daisy, and this, of course, makes a visit all the more interesting. One night as I sat at Jack Hanson's head table, I was handed a typewritten announcement. Omar Sharif, the star of Dr. Zhivago and The Night Of The Generals, was making known that he intended to take part in a chess tournament the following week.

On another occasion, as I sat talking to Hanson in his small, crowded office at the club, there was a knock on the door. A beautiful, long-haired, long-limbed, sultry-voiced girl asked if she could come in. Hanson nodded and she immediately went to his desk, sat up on it and crossed her legs.

"Isn't that wonderful?" Hanson said as he listened to the girl.

"Yes, I think it's going to be good," she said.

"This is Jill Townsend," Hanson said, turning to me. "Jill has the female lead in a new CBS western on television."

"It's called Cimarron Strip," Jill explained. "It starts in September and it's with Stuart Whitman."

Jill slipped out of the office and we followed minutes later. We stopped by the head table where Sally Hanson was looking after the guests. At the dance floor we stopped and watched a score of couples doing a watusi.

Hanson watched the gyrating movements of the girls in their miniskirts and said, "It was an old Puritan idea that the body was ugly."

Later Hanson played a game of billiards with another beautiful girl. After the game she asked me what I did and I said I was a writer.

"Isn't that marvellous," she said with a small sexy gulp in her voice.

She wore a tight fitting white satiny miniskirt that clung firmly and closely to her and suddenly I realized that Jack Hanson had been quite right about what men liked to look at.

"My name is Laura," she said, standing very close to me. "Laura Sutton."

"Television?" I asked.

"I'm a poet," Laura said.

I followed Hanson to the bar. I climbed up on the stool and Laura was beside me. She didn't sit down. She just stood there beside me. In that dress, you could tell right away whether she was inhaling or exhaling. I watched with fascination until Hanson introduced me to the girl on the next stool.

"This is Trish," he said, and she smiled and said, "Hello."

In just that casual a way, I had been introduced to Trish Hilton, wife of Nicky Hilton, son of hotelman Conrad Hilton and first husband of Elizabeth Taylor.

"Would you like me to write a poem for you?"

I turned to find Laura breathing in very deeply. I waited until she had reached the peak point in her inhaling and then nodded. I followed her into the brightly-lit poolroom and we sat down on the couch. When she sat, her skirt was so short it resembled a bathing suit.

Laura Sutton, who says she is a poet, shoots pool game at The Daisy.

She took a piece of paper from me and began writing. In a few moments, she read me what she had written:

"To know such tenderness
As a dewdrop slipping down a rose's cheek,
A snowflake glistening on a doe's brow,
A breeze soothing a day."

She gave me the paper with the poem written on it, then got up, took a cue and went to the pool table. She crouched down on the table, inhaling as she did. "That's beautiful," I said.

"I told you I was a poet," she said. "I'll call that one Emotions." ◁

NO-COOK SUMMER TREAT

You make the no-bake crust with Kellogg's Corn Flake Crumbs . . . and the no-cook filling with Borden's Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk

- ¾ cup KELLOGG'S CORN FLAKE CRUMBS
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1 15 oz. can BORDEN'S EAGLE BRAND SWEETENED CONDENSED MILK
- ⅓ cup fresh lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 3 tablespoons sugar

1. Combine Corn Flake Crumbs, sugar and melted butter in 8-inch pie pan or ice cube tray; mix well. Remove 2 to 4 tablespoons Crumbs mixture and reserve for topping. Press remaining Crumbs mixture evenly and firmly around sides and bottom of pie pan or in bottom of ice cube tray.
2. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon coloured; combine with Eagle Brand Condensed Milk (the precooked blend of whole milk and sugar). Add lemon juice and lemon peel; stir until thickened.
3. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Gradually beat in sugar. Fold gently into lemon mixture. Pour into Crumbs-lined pan; sprinkle with reserved Crumbs. Freeze until firm.
4. Cut into wedges or bars to serve. May be garnished with fresh berries.

YIELD: 8 servings.

Note: If frozen very hard, set pan on hot, wet towel for a few minutes before cutting.

ACCORDING TO DOYLE

This Bus Has Baby Buggy Bumpers

IF you've ever tried to take a baby carriage on a bus you'll appreciate this picture.

No problems in Christchurch, New Zealand. There the prams are hung on the front of the bus.

The picture was sent me by Heather Lees, a Vancouverite who is working her way around the world but has "bogged down" in New Zealand because she likes its people and its climate so much.

"When I heard that they hung baby carriages on the buses I was horrified," Heather writes. "But I was relieved when it was explained that the baby is removed first.

"However, I did hear of one young couple who actually left their baby asleep in the carriage as they said they didn't want to disturb him and they were only travelling a short distance.

"I also heard that the poor bus driver got quite a shock when he went out front to unhook the pram and found the baby in it."

What's The Answer?

"Sometimes I feel kinda sorry for you," says Glenn MacKenzie, of Kingston. "You have a rough time with the man in the next office. So here's something to stump him. Ask him what articles are concerned when they are referred to as the following: Dixon's, Gordon's, Welland's, Ohio's and (a real clue) Ted Allen's."

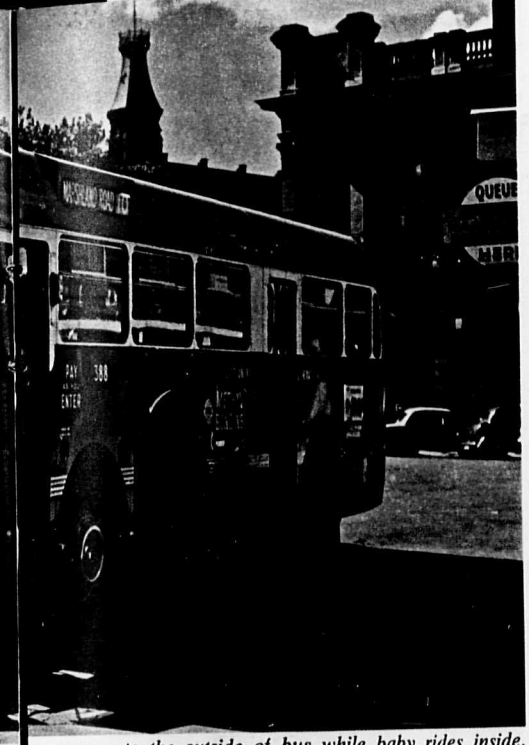
Thanks a lot. T.M.I.T.N.O. is stumped.

But so am I. And I felt pretty foolish when I couldn't give T.M.I.T.N.O. the answer.

Help!

How To Shrink A Guest List

Now that it's all over, the father of an Ontario bride says he guesses he should pass along some money-saving advice to future fathers-of-the-bride.



prams to the outside of bus while baby rides inside.

When he and his daughter were going over the lengthy list of wedding guests, before sending out the invitations, he did some speedy and shocking calculation.

"I figure," he told her, "that a reception for this many people would set me back about $2,000."

Then he handed her a cheque for this amount and added, "Pay for the reception out of this, and any money you have left over is for your trousseau or your furniture or anything you like."

He reports that you never in your life saw a guest list shrink so fast.

And that daughter had a lovely trousseau and was pleased with the furniture she got, too.

Classified Adversity

The editor of my favorite small-town newspaper apologized for the wording of a classified ad recently. The ad was for a reconditioned television set, and should have read: ". . . reconditioned and ready for several years of trouble-free service."

What appeared was: ". . . reconditioned and ready for several years of trouble."

Undoubtedly this displeased the man who was selling the set.

But the person who drew it to my attention remarked, "Isn't it wonderful to see a real honest ad for a change?"

Literary Lapses

Ever notice the way books sometimes get misplaced in a library? I once saw a favorite novel, Cold Comfort Farm, filed away in the section titled Agriculture.

My friend Edward Pinto, of England, tells me that the most amusing wrong classification he has noted so far is Lamb's Tales classified under Cookery and T. S. Eliot's book The Cocktail Party classified under Home Entertaining.

Smart Move For Summer

I'VE JUST DECIDED some of my most delicious summer baking isn't.

Isn't baked, I mean.

Not one of the cookies shown here ever went near the oven. And I'm willing to bet that few people who taste them will ever guess.

Of course, unbaked cookies aren't new by any means. Remember when we used to melt candy bars or marshmallows, add cooked cereal and mould into teenage treats?

The great "unbakeds" have come a long way since then, and in most households there are some favorites. I hope you'll add some of these recipes to your favorites.

All are made with cereal or biscuit crumbs as a base, and many of them have a quickly-cooked butter, sugar and egg mixture to give them a special goodness. And the favorite flavors are here. Chocolate, of course. Be sure to try Chocolate Bars and Chocolate Drops. And there are Butterscotch and Peanut Butter, too. Unbaked cookies as good as these are certainly a smart move for summer.

TESTED RECIPES

BUTTERSCOTCH SQUARES

½ cup butter
½ cup brown sugar
1 egg, beaten
8½-oz. pkg. vanilla wafers, broken up (see note)
¾ cup chopped walnuts
6-oz. pkg. butterscotch chips
1 tsp. vanilla
Brown Butter Icing (recipe follows)

Melt butter in heavy saucepan. Remove from heat, add sugar and egg and stir to blend well. Set over moderate heat and cook, stirring constantly, until boiling. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

Stir in wafers, nuts, butterscotch chips and vanilla, and spoon into buttered 8 x 8 cake pan. Press down firmly with lightly-buttered hand. Ice with Brown Butter Icing if desired. Cut in small squares to serve.

Note: Break wafers into pieces about the size of a large pea instead of crushing.

Brown Butter Icing

3 tbsp. butter
1½ cups sifted icing sugar
1½ tbsp. light cream (approx.)
¾ tsp. vanilla

Put butter in small saucepan and set over moderate heat. Let brown until it turns a good golden tan color. Remove from heat and blend in remaining ingredients, using enough cream to make an icing of soft spreading consistency.

PEANUT-BUTTER SQUARES

¼ cup butter
¼ cup peanut butter
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 tsp. vanilla
8½-oz. pkg. vanilla wafers, crushed
½ cup chopped salted peanuts
½ cup chopped seeded raisins
Peanut Butter Icing (recipe follows)

Combine butter, peanut butter, sugar and egg in heavy saucepan. Set over moderate heat and cook, stirring constantly, until boiling. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

Stir in vanilla, vanilla wafers, salted peanuts and raisins and spoon into buttered 8 x 8 cake pan. Press down firmly with buttered hand. Ice with Peanut-Butter Icing. Cut in small squares to serve.

Peanut-Butter Icing

3 tbsp. peanut butter
1 tbsp. soft butter
2 cups icing sugar
2 tbsp. cream (approx.)
½ tsp. vanilla

Blend all ingredients using enough cream to make an icing of soft spreading consistency.

GUMDROP BALLS

1 can sweetened condensed milk
Dash salt
3 cups coarsely-crushed corn flakes
1½ cups finely-cut up gum drops
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. almond extract
Flaked coconut

Put condensed milk and salt in the top of a double boiler. Set over simmering water and heat, stirring occasionally, until very thick and caramel-colored, about 1 hour.

Stir in corn flakes, gum drops, vanilla and almond extract. Drop mixture by small spoonfuls into flaked coconut and roll them around to coat on all sides. Put on waxed paper to set. (Makes about 7 dozen.)

CHOCOLATE BARS

¼ cup sugar
5 tbsp. cocoa
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups fine graham-wafer crumbs
1 cup coconut
½ cup chopped nuts
Vanilla filling (recipe follows)
4 squares (4 oz.) sweet baking chocolate
1 tbsp. butter
¼ tsp. vanilla

Combine butter, sugar, cocoa and egg in top of double boiler. Set over simmering water and cook and stir until thick and smooth, about 5 minutes. Stir in 1 tsp. vanilla.

Combine graham-wafer crumbs, coconut and nuts and stir into chocolate mixture. Spoon into buttered 9-inch square pan and pack down firmly.

Spread with Vanilla Filling. Chill for 15 minutes.

Combine chocolate and butter in top of double boiler and set over simmering water until melted. Stir in ¼ tsp. vanilla and spread over filling while hot. Chill. Cut in small squares to serve.

Vanilla Filling

¼ cup butter
¼ cup milk
2 tbsp. instant vanilla pudding mix
2 cups icing sugar
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. vanilla

Cream butter. Combine milk and instant-pudding mix, blending until smooth. Stir into butter. Add remaining ingredients and blend on low speed on the mixer or with a rotary beater. Spread on chocolate layer as directed above.

SKILLET CHEWS

2 cups brown sugar, packed
1½ cups chopped dates
2 cups crispy rice cereal
½ cup chopped walnuts
3 tbsp. evaporated milk
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. almond extract
¼ cup sugar
¼ tsp. cinnamon

Combine eggs, brown sugar, dates, rice, cereal, walnuts and milk in large heavy skillet. Set over medium low heat and cook slowly, stirring often, until very thick, about 25 minutes.

Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla and almond extract. Cool to lukewarm.

Shape into tiny balls or logs. Combine sugar and cinnamon and roll each chew in mixture. Let stand on waxed paper until set. Store in covered tin in refrigerator. (Makes about 6 dozen.)

CHOCOLATE DROPS

½ cup sugar
⅔ cup boiling water
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2¾ cups fine graham-wafer crumbs
½ cup coconut
1 tsp. vanilla
Thin Icing (recipe follows)
Chocolate decorating candies
Coconut

Combine cocoa, sugar and water in saucepan and boil hard 3 minutes. Remove from heat and cool. Stir in lemon juice, graham-wafer crumbs, coconut and vanilla.

Shape mixture into tiny balls with buttered hands. Put on waxed paper and let stand to dry for 30 minutes.

Dip each ball in Thin Icing, shake to remove excess, then roll in chocolate decorating candies or coconut. Set on waxed paper and chill until set. (Makes about 5 dozen.)

Thin Icing

1 tbsp. melted butter
1½ cups sifted icing sugar
2 to 3 tbsp. light cream
¾ tsp. vanilla

Combine all ingredients, using enough cream to make a thin icing that will just lightly coat balls.

MARSHMALLOW DELIGHTS

½ cup butter
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup sugar
¼ cup coconut
1 tsp. vanilla
2¼ cups fine graham-wafer crumbs
½ cup chopped walnuts
3 cups miniature marshmallows
Butter icing (optional)

Melt butter in top of double boiler. Add eggs, sugar and coconut and set over simmering water. Cook, stirring often, until thick, about 10 minutes. Stir in vanilla. Cool to lukewarm.

Blend in crumbs, nuts and marshmallows. Pack into buttered 12 x 8 x 2-inch cake pan. Ice with Butter Icing if desired. Chill and cut in small squares to serve.

Butter Icing

2 tbsp. soft butter
1½ cups sifted icing sugar
1½ tbsp. light cream (approx.)
¾ tsp. vanilla

Blend all ingredients, using enough cream to make icing easy to spread.

REFRIGERATOR BROWNIES

2 eggs, beaten
½ cup sugar
2 squares (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate
Dash salt
½ cup butter
2 tsp. vanilla
1 cup chopped nuts
2½ cups fine arrowroot biscuit crumbs

Combine eggs, sugar, chocolate, salt and butter in top of double boiler. Set over simmering water and cook, stirring often, until thick, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla.

Combine nuts and biscuit crumbs in a bowl and pour into chocolate mixture. Blend well. Pack in 9-inch square cake pan. Ice with chocolate butter icing if desired. Chill and cut in small squares to serve.

The Trents with Falada on the farm

Down On The Farm

Staff Writer Bill Trent, whose article on Hollywood's Daisy Club appears on page 18, says he is always being asked corny questions when he returns from movie-set assignments. People keep saying things like, "Yes, you interview girls but what do you do for a living?" Or else someone will say, "Of course it must be a lot of fun but when are you going to settle down and do something serious?"

How corny do the questions get? Well, says Trent, there is the following example: "How are they going to keep you down on the farm after you've seen Hollywood?" Actually Trent likes this one because he can answer it with a serious face. He really does live on a piece of farmland in the foothills of Quebec's Laurentian Mountains with an attractive wife named Dawn, a 12-year-old son named Blake and a 10-year-old daughter called Shelley. And, oh yes, there are also three horses — Dexter, Princess and their proud new offspring, a dashing young colt named Falada.

Why, there is even a picture to prove it.

Next Week

When the Montreal International Film Festival in conjunction with Expo 67 decided to run a world-wide competition to see who could make the best 50-second movie on the theme Man And His World, the organizers wondered a little about what sort of reception they'd get.

They needn't have worried, because the idea really caught on and by deadline some 870 film makers in 37 countries had entered.

Next week Weekend Magazine presents a color spread of some of the top entries. Patrick Watson, late of This Hour Has Seven Days fame and now a teacher of political science at the University of Waterloo, headed the committee with the monumental task of choosing the best of the batch and he sums up his impressions of the movies.

Expo Commissioner-General Pierre Dupuy (L), judges Watson and Geneviève Bujold with Pavel Prochazka, of Czechoslovakia, who won gold medal and $10,000 for his movie, Health Of Man.

The Canada Pension Plan provides basic financial security in retirement.

But aren't you planning on a few basic luxuries?

If you are, it might be a good idea to call your New York Life man.

First of all, he'll be happy to sit down with you and help figure out just what you can expect from the Canada Pension Plan in dollars and cents.

There's no obligation, of course. If you think the Canada Pension Plan will provide all you want, he'll shake you by the hand and go. But if you encourage him a little, he'll tell you about some of the plans we've made for your retirement.

They involve things like money for travelling to all the places you ever wanted to see. Money for doing all the things you ever wanted to do. Money to buy yourself a little place in the sun. Or even a big place in the sun.

Now that the Canada Pension Plan takes care of the basic necessities, you may find that you can afford to plan quite a few little luxuries.

It's up to you.

YOU CAN'T TELL the girls from the boys!"

That's often the comment of the adult who was young back in the days when boys' clothes and girls' clothes were so completely dissimilar that no one had any trouble identifying male and female.

Nowadays it's more difficult. Boys wear longer hair, girls wear shorter. Both wear pants-suits and shirts and caps and boots.

In Montreal a shop for young men, West One, sells more than 50 per cent of its stock to girls.

"More and more girls are buying our men's slacks," says Eric Scott, who runs the boutique. "They like them because they're all lined and because we go in for the less usual fabrics and colors and designs. They buy our men's shirts, too. And vests and capes are going over big with both girls and boys."

It's the same story in Toronto at the Take 3 Male Shop, where girls ignore the store's name and buy most of the things that were originally designed for men.

"There'll come a day," forecasts the owner of a men's-wear store, "when we won't have shops for men and shops for women. We'll just have shops. For both. I'll bet we'll see it in 10 years."

Maybe. In the meantime, it's reassuring to report that although the rest of us may have trouble telling the boys from the girls, it's no problem to the youngsters. They always know. ◁

LI'L ABNER by AL CAPP

POGO
LOOK LIKE OL' BARNSTABLE BEAR IS TRYIN' TO TAKE MIZ BEAR BACK.
ALL THE BASHER IS TRYIN' TO DO IS GET MIZ BEAR TO STAR IN A TV SHOW... SHE'S ALL DRESSED UP AN' OL' BEAR DON'T RECOGNIZE HER.
KOREN WALLACE

"Oh whence that wince, my wench?" quoth I
She blushed and said, "Oh, Sir,
"My Daddy isn't stirrin'
"Since my Momma's been in stir!"

Oh, I may be your dish of tea
But baby, don't you sugar me..
A VOICE LIKE UNTO A TENOR TOAD.
BARNSTABLE!
MAN, HE'S A SECOND ROSIN, LE BOW.

VOILA, FOLKS! HERE EASE THE BUCKET OF ICE CREAM FOR THE DEE-SERT.
OWL'S FRENCH CAFE
Don't stir me, girl, or try to spoon
Don't sugar me, 'cause us is throon
A PUBLIC DISGRACE.

OOP, ALORS!
BARNSTABLE BEAR, I'LL CROWN YOU.. DON'T YOU KNOW YOUR OWN WIFE?

KNOW HER? OF COURSE! SHE'S A KINDA FAT, SQUASH-EYED, LUMP-SIDED CHICKEN-PLUCKER TYPE.
OWL'S FRENCH CAFE

STONE THE CROWS, THEY'S BOTH MUSICALLY INCLINED.

I AIN'T GONNA STAND FOR NO HUSBAND OF MINE FLIRTIN' WITH A STRANGE STRAWBERRY WHEN HE DON'T KNOW IT'S HIS WIFE, 'SPECIALLY IF SHE'S ME.
WHAT FLAVOR IS IT, MYTE?

TRAIL WAYS

IN THE ANCIENT DAYS OF GIANT REPTILES THE TULIP TREE FAMILY WAS COMMON IN EUROPE AND ASIA

THE BEAUTIFUL AND STATELY TULIP TREE, ALSO KNOWN AS TULIP POPLAR OR YELLOW POPLAR, IS NEITHER A POPLAR NOR A TULIP

WHICH BEES EAGERLY GATHER AND CONVERT INTO A DARK AMBER HONEY

STANDING LIKE A MIGHTY COLUMN AMONG LESSER FOREST TREES, THE TULIP TREE'S LOWEST BRANCHES MAY BE 80 FEET ABOVE THE GROUND

AND THIS TALLEST OF EASTERN HARDWOODS REACHES HEIGHTS UPWARD TO 200 FEET...

WITH A TRUNK 8 TO 10 FEET IN DIAMETER

GROWING EAST OF THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY FROM NEW ENGLAND TO FLORIDA, THE TULIP TREE IS THE STATE TREE OF INDIANA, TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY

Dennis The MENACE

by Hank Ketcham

"Look at this shabby office! . . . Would I be here if I got kickbacks from the herb and root dealers?"

"The chairman of the board couldn't make it today, but he wanted his presence felt!"

"It makes military sense, gentlemen . . . A smaller war is much easier to handle than a bigger one!"

"My compliments to the baker, but tell him he added a pinch too much fabric."

"Listen, dear . . . They're murdering our song!"

"I won it last week by suggesting they lower it to $100!"

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY—My boys help dry dishes and often cups meet disaster. Rather than discard them I repair them with glue to use for rooting geranium slips. Whenever a piece of geranium is broken off I plant it in one of these cups which look so pretty on the window sill. There they stay until replanted in the garden.—DONIS

DEAR POLLY—When I knit a sweater I leave a long end of yarn on each piece that is finished to use in sewing up the seams of the body and sleeves.—DOTTY

DEAR POLLY—I finally discovered that the steam from my steam iron was a villain in my fight against rough red hands. Now I keep a pair of white cotton gloves clipped to my pressing board and put them on before starting to press suits and skirts. The hot steam no longer hits my hands directly and ends the battle before it has begun.—MRS. F. W.

DEAR POLLY—When I am coating candies or marshmallows with chocolate I insert a toothpick in each candy before dipping it and turn my colander upside down and place the toothpicks in the colander holes until the chocolate dries.—ANNA

Polly pays a dollar for every idea used. Send them to her, care of this newspaper.
