BANK BANDIT KILLED

Robbers and Police Fight in Montreal.

THREE OTHERS WOUNDED

Belongings of Dead Man Point to Romance—Was to Have Been Married on Tuesday.

MONTREAL, Quebec, March 3.—One man was killed and three wounded in an encounter between police and five badits who tried to dynamite the West Montreal branch of the Royal bank early Saturday morning. One of the wounded men is Charles Fitzpatrick, son of the chief of police, who accompanied his father to the scene of the trouble.

The two wounded robbers are seriously hurt. Police are pursuing the two who escaped.

About midnight a watchman for the Canadian Pacific saw the five men at the railway station and becoming suspicious followed them about. They sawed the bars from a window of the bank building and crawled in. The watchman ran for the police. A number of policemen responded and surrounded the building. They called on the intruders to come out and give themselves up.

A terrific explosion wrecked the bank building. The robbers escaped in the confusion. They were chased to a shack on the outskirts of the city.

In a revolver duel the chief of police and his son entered the shack. One robber was killed instantly Charles Fitzpatrick was wounded by a glancing bullet. The men again escaped, were pursued and two more were wounded by fire from police revolvers.

The remaining two are somewhere south of Montreal, followed by officers. No loot was secured from the bank.

The killing of the bank robber by a vigilance committee in pursuit of a gang which tried to loot a branch of the Royal Bank at Montreal West ended a romance which apparently was to have culminated on Tuesday.

In the clothes of the dead bandit were found the picture of a girl, pasted in the back of a pocket mirror, and a new wedding ring engraved with the words "Will to Kitty, March 5, 1912."

The ring, with the engraving, and a tatoo mark on the chest of the man, bearing the words "In memory of mother and father," are the only clues by which the police hope to establish the identity of the robber. The only other articles in the clothes were a pocketknife and some matches. In their opinion the safe blower came from the United States.

DR. GRENFELL WILL VISIT WESTMINSTER

Missionary Hero of Labrador Coast Has Done Splendid Work Among Fishermen.

Dr. Wilfrid Thomson Grenfell, C. M. G., who is to speak in the Queen's avenue Methodist church on Tuesday evening on "The Rescue of Labrador," is widely known and respected for the great work he has done among the fishermen of that coast during the last 20 years. To every Eastern Canadian his name is almost a household word, and his splendid work has won recognition in the highest quarter, King Edward having conferred on him a commandership of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in 1906.

Dr. Grenfell was educated at Marlborough College and Oxford University and obtained his "blue" for Rugby football at the later place. In 1889 he joined the Royal National Mission to Deep-Sea Fishermen, and ever since then has devoted his life to the best interests of those "who earn their bread upon the waters." For twenty years he has been working on the Labrador coast, and under his supervision homes for the sailors have been founded on land and missi... ships equipped for use at sea. Dr. G... fell has also built hospitals, and in 1889, before he came to Labrador, he fitted out the first hospital ship for the North Sea fisheries. In Labrador he has built four hospitals and many other institutions tending to the better of the seamen and those dependent on them. Such a man is welcome wherever he goes, and it is certain that he will receive in Westminster the same hearty reception as he did at Vancouver.

For Empire Trade.

London, March 3.—To ensure the integrity of British manufacturers the Goulding merchandise marks bill provides that goods manufactured in the empire shall bear the words: "British Empire-Made." Goods shipped out of the British Isles not made in Britain, shall be marked "Not British-Made."

CAR DERAILED AND BRAKEMAN INJURED

Freight Car Runs Off Line on Fraser Valley Branch—Brakeman Bless Progressing favorably.

One man was severely hurt, a freight car derailed and traffic delayed for three hours as a result of an accident on the Fraser valley branch of the B. C. E. R. on Saturday evening. Brakeman Bless was the man injured and he was removed to the Royal Columbian hospital as soon as possible after the accident. Last night he was reported to be doing as well as possible, although his back and legs seem to have been badly injured.

It appears from accounts given of the accident that the freight ran off the rails in the neighborhood of Lehmann hill, and dashed into one of the poles, thus bringing down the wires. The brakeman stuck to his car in a plucky manner, until he was thrown violently out by the car coming to a sudden standstill. The accident happened at a point where the freight was scheduled to meet another train, and the falling of the wires held up all traffic for some time. It was three hours, in fact before the repair gang had the line in such shape that the trains could continue their journey.

H. L. EDMONDS BACK FROM EASTERN TRIP

Has Not Yet Picked Up Threads of Political Situation—Glad to Be Here.

Mr. H. L. Edmonds, who returned yesterday about noon with Mrs. Edmonds from his trip in the east, was more willing to talk about the pleasure of getting home to New Westminster than to discuss the local political position last night. During his absence he has naturally lost touch with the situation here, and he was not prepared to say anything with regard to his being a conservative candidate for the provincial house or not.

"We are pleased to get back again," said Mr. Edmonds, "and there certainly is no place like Westminster. All the time we have been away we have not seen any green foliage or grass, or anything, so you can imagine what it is like to be here once more."

The weather in the east, when Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds left was very cold. While they were away they spent two weeks in Ottawa, and three days in Toronto, and also visited Windsor, Detroit and Chicago. They came back over the Soo line through St. Paul.

SUFFRAGETTES SENT DOWN FOR TWO MONTHS

London, March 3.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, Mrs. Lukes and Mrs. Marshall, the three leaders of Friday evening's window smashing campaign by which the suffragettes succeeded in terrorizing the London tradesmen, were yesterday sentenced each to two months' imprisonment.

These were the first three of the 124 women who were arrested in the course of the street demonstrations and who are to be arraigned at the Bow street court chiefly on charges of causing wilful damage to stores in Bond street, Piccadilly, Regent street, Oxford street the Haymarket and the Strand, as well as other busy shopping streets.

The attorney for the prosecution announced in court yesterday that the total damage done by the suffragettes in their stone throwing manifestations was estimated at $25,000 and on behalf of the government he stated that the time had now arrived when the consideration which has been hitherto shown in connection with suffragette raids could no longer be given.

One Marriage Law.

Toronto, March 3.—Secretary Silcox, of the Evangelical Alliance, waited upon Premier Whitney and urged that the counsel appointed by the province to appear before the privy council in connection with the "Ne Temere" case be instructed to urge a "one marriage law for all of Canada."

GOLD DISCOVERY WAS FAKE.

Report of Gold Find in Cochrane, Alberta, District False.

Calgary, March 3.—The alleged Cochrane, Alberta, gold discoveries are a fizzle pure and simple, according to Messrs. J. H. Sherman and S. M. Petch, who returned today from the district to which the rush occurred during the past ten days. They have prospected the district and state positively that there is no trace of gold. The unfortunate feature is that hundreds of amateur prospectors have hurried to the section and are undergoing hardships and expense to no profit.

Messrs. Sherman and Petch are practical miners with experience in all the big mining centres of the world.

SCORES ROOSEVELT

Bryan Says Ex-President is Guarantor of Taft.

THIRD TERM PRESUMPTION

William Jennings No Longer Fancies Himself as an "Also Ran" So Will Support Party Choice.

SEATTLE, March 3.—Characterizing Theodore Roosevelt as the guarantor of President Taft and asserting that he could have no right in the presidential race save on the theory that Mr. Taft had been a failure, William J. Bryan, in a speech before a packed auditorium in Dreamland pavilion yesterday afternoon criticised Mr. Roosevelt for his presumption in entering the lists at this time.

Mr. Bryan attempted to show where Mr. Roosevelt had been backed by the special interests and had been silent in the face of the call for popular legislation in behalf of the popular election of United States senators, the income tax and the referendum and recall.

Mr. Bryan wanted to absolve himself from any personal ambition or aspiration that led in the direction of the White House, declaring that he earnestly hoped that the Democratic standard bearer would be nominated before his own views on the subject had been disclosed. He promised fidelity to whoever the nominee might be, asesrting that, as a worker in the ranks himself he could accomplish far more good.

Socialists had evidently posted themselves about the assembly, for during the last half hour of his speech Mr. Bryan was interrupted so often by questions that he was compelled to claim the privilege of the floor.

"The good things for which the Socialists contend," he said rapidly after one of these questions, "will be settled by other parties."

Mr. Bryan was introduced by Chas. G. Heifner, chairman of the Democratic state executive committee as the foremost citizen of the United States and the world.

FORMER PREMIER PASSES TO REST

Hon. Edward Blake Who Led Liberal Party in Dominion, Dies in Toronto.

Toronto, March 3.—After an illness extending over five years, the Hon. Edward Blake, one time leader of the Liberal party in Canada and one of the foremost politicians of the day, passed away at his residence on Jarvis street. His death was not unexpected. He had been growing weaker, and was never expected to rally.

The late Mr. Blake was born at Cairngorm, Ont., 79 years ago. Considered able and clever, as was his father, the Hon. William Hume Blake, he showed an adaptability for the legal profession, and while still a young man was made a member of the Dominion parliament, and later became a Home Ruler in Ireland.

It was after he retired from politics in Canada that the Hon. Edward Blake set out on his greatest task. For the succeeding years he was an ardent Home Ruler and was one of John Redmond's greatest supporters, speaking with him on the same platform on many occasions, and being returned unopposed nearly ever time, but always undefeated, for the constituency of South Longford.

It was only when his illness attacked him with its full force that the great speaker had to retire from public life to spend his remaining days in his native province of Ontario. The late Mr. Blake was educated at Upper Canada college and later at the University of Toronto. He was first elected to parliament in 1867 and from that date stood for the high ideals of Liberalism. For four years he sat on the bench before being chosen as their leader and was elected to power in 1871, being for two years premier of the province.

In 1878 Mr. Blake was elected to the head of the Liberals in the Dominion and shortly after 1890 went to fight the battle of Home Rule.

Socialist Candidates.

Nelson, March 3.—At a meeting of the Socialists of Nelson and Ymir constituencies yesterday, Mr. R. P. Pettipiece, of Vancouver, was nominated as Socialist candidate for Ymir, and Mr. Arthur Harrod candidate for Nelson. Mr. Harrod is a bookkeeper in the co-operative store here.

Robbed of $104,000.

Tampa, Fla., March 3.—Declaring he lost or had been robbed of $104,000 which he had drawn from a bank in Savannah, Mo., J. E. Fezman, said to be a leading merchant there, was found today dazed and apparently unable to recall what has happened to him.

IN GRIP OF STRIKE

Effect on All Industry Is Paralyzing.

A MILLION MINERS ARE OUT

Many Foundries Are Closed—Steel and Cotton Workers Will Soon Be Idle.

London, March 3.—Although this is only the third day of the coal strike, its paralyzing effect on other industries is being keenly felt. It is computed that by tomorrow 150,000 workers outside of the coal miners will be idle. More that 1,000,000 miners in England, Scotland and Wales are out.

Shipping is approaching a standstill and steam trawlers are laying up. That source of cheap food soon will be shut off. Many foundries are now closed. Three or four days will suffice to cause a stoppage of most of the Sheffield steel works and if the colliers do not resume within a week more than a million employees in the cotton mills and allied trades in Lancashire will be without work.

As long as the National Miners' Federation adheres to the determination that a schedule of minimum wage rates, drawn up by themselves, must be conceded before they will enter into further negotiations, there appears not the slightest hope of settling the strike. The owners may be coerced to pay a minimum wage by exhaustive enactment, but this method cannot force the miners to accept and return to work. Their refusal even to negotiate the question has largely alienated public opinion as expressed in the newspapers, but what is calculated to prove far more effective is the pressure that will be brought to bear upon them by the vast army of workers in other fields thrown out of work and faced by hunger and destitution.

No violence has yet occurred and no troops have been moved, but orders were issued at Aldershot today that the troops make ready to entrain if their services are needed.

The great ports of the United Kingdom, particularly those situated in Wales, from which coal is shipped to every part of the world, and the centres of the iron and steel industries have naturally been the first to feel the effects of the strike of miners in England, Scotland and Wales.

Many iron works in various districts are closed and at Swansea and elsewhere work on the docks has practically come to a standstill. No vessels are arriving and the dockers and workmen employed in the industries of the places have been thrown out of work.

Great crowds of these men are gathered in the streets discussing the dispute.

Thus far there have been no disorders anywhere. In South Wales, however, the mineowners are preparing for emergencies. They have had walls built around the mines and have laid in great stores of provisions in anticipation of a long siege. The railroad and street car service in many cities was further curtailed today.

Only two small non-union mines in the entre country are still at work. One of these is in North Wales and the other near Berwick, on the Scottish border.

The tin plate works of Wales are closing down rapidly owing to lack of coal. Six hundred mills will be idle within a few days and forty thousand men will be thrown out of employment John Williams, labor member of parliament for the Gower district of Glamorganshire, South Wales, and general secretary of the Amalgamated Society of South Wales colliery workers, told the Welsh miners at a meeting today that he expected a settlement of the strike by Thursday next on lines satisfactory to both the men and the employers.

The prices of food are rising rapidly everywhere.

NUMBER OF LUNATICS INCREASED LAST MONTH

The February returns of the public hospital for the insane, shows an increase of thirteen patients during the month. Of these five are female and eight male, and the total figures at the close of the period were 523 male and 194 female inmates of the asylum One lunatic escaped during the month and was recaptured, while two men died. Fifteen were discharged altogether, but ten of these were on probation only. Thirty new patients were admitted.

Azores Storm Swept.

German Tailors Strike

Berlin, March 2.—Thirty thousand man tailors, representing thirty-one counties throughout Prussia, are on strike today. The men are dissatisfied with their wage schedule and working conditions.

CAUGHT BIG DEER IN PITT RIVER

Tom Rennie, Hero of Unusual Chase—Presents Capture to Queens Park Menagerie.

Queens park menagerie is richer today by one big mule deer presented to the park by Tommy Rennie. The story of the deer's capture is a good one.

Tom Rennie and Mr. Eickhoff were up the river in the latter's launch yesterday afternoon, and they saw a deer swimming Pitt river. Rennie immediately jumped into a canoe and gave chase. He quickly came up with the beast, and slipping a rope over its head, while it was in the water, led it back to the launch. The two men succeeded in getting it into the boat, and then brought it back in triumph to the city. From the wharf it was taken up to Queens park, to which institution Rennie has generously presented it.

The deer is a fine specimen, and is one of the largest taken on the coast for some time. It is truly a big beast, and must weigh all of three hundred pounds and more, its captors calculate.

ADMIT ADVANTAGES OF FRASER RIVER

Westminster's Port Under Consideration—Shipping Men Think Highly of Its Possibilities.

The Vancouver Morning Sun has admitted editorially and in a generous spirit, that as a harbor the Fraser river has advantages over Burrard Inlet. Such recognition is a graceful concession by Westminster's big sister city, but that it is demanded by the facts is shown by the opinion of eminent shipping men on the coast. In conversation with a representative of the Daily News, the chief agent of one of the biggest British shipping lines running to the Pacific coast ports, stated the other day, that he was looking for great development on the Fraser river, especially following the opening of the Panama canal.

"Do you think, that a fresh-water harbor is really better than salt water one?" he was asked. His reply was unhesitating.

"It certainly is. With plenty of water under her bottom ever ship simply loves to get into fresh water. The fresh water kills the barnacles on her and this not only means that they stop growing, which they would continue to do in salt water, but that they can be easily knocked off. When the barnacles are alive they are most tenacious and can only be scraped off with great difficulty in dry dock. And then the teredo is a really important factor. The life of a wooden wharf in fresh water is practically unlimited, while in the salt water, owing to the destructive creatures it is very brief."

In short the opinion of this experienced man was that if once the channel of the Fraser was made deep enough for big boats it would make a most desirable harbor, one that ships would like to come into.

With regard to the effect of the Panama canal on trade of this coast, shippping circles are very optimistic. The greatest change they expect is the shipping of grain to Liverpool via British Columbian ports and the Panama; but the export trade in lumber and canned fish, etc., will also, they think, be greatly facilitated. General merchandise and heavy freight coming from eastern and European ports will also probably find their way via the new route, that is shortly to be opened, and in anticipation of which Westminster is preparing to spend big sums on harbor improvements. On the other hand the very costly freight from the Orient, such as silk, will still pass through the ports of this province to go overland to the east owing to the large amount of money tied up in the goods as the consequent importance of time in their transit.

FIVE DIE TOGETHER

Could Not Bear to See Children Starve.

MOTHER ADMINISTERS POISON

Leaves Note Telling of Inability to Earn Enough Money to Sustain Life.

Salem, Ore., March 3.—Mrs. L. F. Jellson, about 36 years old, gave a drink of cyanide of potassium to each of her four children and then partook of the poison herself. At noon all five were dead. Mrs. Jellson was despondent because she was unable to earn enough to ward off starvation.

The little family lay dead in the home at 469 Liberty street, almost in the heart of the city, but the tragedy was not discovered until the police received a letter through the postoffice telling of the deed. The discouraged mother had written:

"I know the law requires an investigation. Do as little as possible. The plain fact is I canot earn enough alone to keep from starving. Some one induced my boy to leave and now I am too ill to work. I cannot see them (the children) starve. There is a little money in my purse, $21. Make it bury us all together. Sorry to make so much disturbance, but I am too confused to write."

Immediately after receiving the letter Chief of Police Hamilton and Day Officer Sam Burkhart went to the house and found it locked. Going to a tent in the rear, their eyes were greeted with the sight of the mother and four children huddled together on the bed dead. A glance about the tent disclosed a bottle of cyanide of potassium. The bodies were still warm. On a table standing near the bed was the following note:

"Let Mrs. Pratt have my tent and everything else is left to Mrs. Carrie Clair. Sory to put you to this bother. Forgive me. I hated to lie to get the stuff."

The children who found death at the hands of their mother are Espey, a girl 16 years old; Harland, 13; Maud, 11, and Raymond Swanson, 9.

All had evidently complied with the mother's wish to take the poison, save the youngest, who showed marks of violence, as though he had resisted.

Mrs. Jellson had been employed in the Royal cafeteria here at $10 a week, but about a week ago she quit, saying she was going to Colorado. Russel K. Strong, a boy about 17 years of age, a son by a former husband, ran away a week or so ago. The mother had been dependent on him to assist in supporting the children, and after he left she became despondent.

Realizing her destitute condition, the waitresses at the cafeteria had been taking food to her but labored under the impression that she would soon get financial asistance from friends and go to Colorado.

WARNS WOMANKIND OF FATE OF ROME

United States College Professor Says Conditions Today Resemble Those of Olden Time.

Kansas City, March 3.—"Present-day conditions as regards women bear a striking resemblance to conditions in old Rome. Roman women in the height of their glory achieved their greatest degradation. Childlessness was the vogue. We are approaching the verge."

In these terms Prof. C. A. Elwood, of Columbia, Mo., warned patrons of the Missouri university extension course here of the necessity of reform in the conduct of the home.

"Woman's invasion of the fields of industry means an increase in the death rate of the child,' he continued. "Fatherhood must support motherhood. Class consciousness enters into the woman question. It sets sex against sex. But woman is half the world. She should not consider herself a class. Women of the Rome that fell achieved all the legal and social rights the modern women clamor for save the vote. Woman does best in the home. Life is not a conflict and sex antagonism defeats every end of nature."

Brownsville, Ore., March 3.—Sam Baker, owner of a restaurant here, pleaded guilty in a case of bootlegging and was fined $50 and costs. Mr. Baker's place of business was raided Saturday by Attorney Tussing, who owns the building, and a large amount of beer and wine was found in his possession.

SAGE TEA WILL DARKEN THE HAIR

Restore Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color--Dandruff Quickly Removed.

There is nothing new about the idea of using Sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our grandmothers kept their hair dark, glossy and abundant by the use of a simple "Sage Tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of Sage leaves, and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves; and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing Sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy.

This preparation gives youthful color and beauty to the hair, and is one of the best remedies you can use for dandruff, dry, feverish, itching scalp, and falling hair. Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today, and you will be surprised at the quick results. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

INHERITS $500,000 WILL REMAIN SERVANT

No Mere Man Will Get This Maid's Money—Will Complete Her engagement.

New York, March 3.—Though she recently inherited $500,000 from her uncle, Hiram Chase, of Reno, Nev., Miss Mary Chase, a maid in the employ of Mrs. G. W. Allen, of 109 East Fifty-Sixth street, said that she would not let her wealth change her mode of living.

"Mrs. Allen has been very kind to me," said Miss Chase, "and just because I have been fortunate enough to inherit money I'm not going to upset her plans by leaving her. She's been rather ill and wanted me to go aboard with her, so I will continue as her maid and go along. But when I get back I'll go out to Reno, as I understand a woman has filed a claim against the estate. While I'm in Europe I will be represented by Col. L. Clark Raymond, of Welland, Canada, and E. P. Johnson, of Reno.

"After I settle affairs in the West I shall build a house in Buffalo and spend the rest of my life with my father, George W. Chase, who is 80 years old."

"No fortune hunter will ever get any of my money,' retorted Miss Chase. Ive had to wait too long for it to let a mere man come along now and take it."

But she admitted, smilingly, that as it was a woman's privilege to change her mind she might change hers should the right man appear.

Miss Chase, who for ten years was maid to Mrs. Wallace Shillito before she entered Mrs. Allen's service, naively suggested that it was a shame so good a maid should give up the work because of money.

OPTICIAN IS BOLD THIEF.

Red Bank, N. J., March 3.—A stranger called at the home of Miss Jennie Joline, who lives on the Eatontown Boulevard, near Red Bank, for the purpose of looking over the house and property with a view of buying it. He was allowed to inspect the premises and in the conversation that followed the visitor said he was an optician.

Miss Joline, whose eyes troubled her, asked him to test her sight. He placed two pairs of glasses over her eyes, and after that she remembered nothing until she regained consciousness, about three hours later.

Miss Joline had her purse, containing $13, with her when her eyes were being tested, and the intruder not only took it, but money and a large quantity of silverware were also missing from the house. She is now confined to her bed under the care of a physician. She is in a critical condition. An investigation will be made to ascertain the drug used by the bogus optician.

The police authorities of Red Bank, Eatontown and Long Branch, have been notified and a watch is being kept on all outgoing trains and trolley cars.

The Hope.

That night they took him from the sea
(And him in truth it was, they said)
I went not when they summoned me,
Nor viewed I wanst that sheeted head!

Not wanst I looked on his white face,
That bitther dusk they brought him home,
And shut in such a wee dark place
A lad who's ever loved to roam!

Yet now I listen thro' the rain,
And foolish-like I still believe
That back some day he'll come again
To where the Arran wathers grieve!

Some day he'll come, wid parrakeets,
Wid shells and sharms and furrin' lore,
Come climbin' up the ould sad streets,
And stop beside me waitin' door!

And when I'm wid me wheel, alone,
And all the ould gray house is still,
I seem to hear, past sod and stone,
A homin' step that mounts the hill!

I listen as the sound comes near,
(And how me ould heart flutters fast!)
I sit and wait and shake wid fear—
But iv'ry footstep, faith, goes past!

Yet dusk by dusk when thro' me door
There sobs and sings the ould gray sea.
Och, still I watch and listen for
The Dead that's niver dead to me!

A Warwickshire Song.

There are no oaks in all the shires
I love so well as those that spill
Smooth acorns from their mailed cups
Along the Warwick lanes; and still
The Avon holds as clear a way
As Tweed or Thames, and never blows
The wind along a sweeter land
Than that where down the Avon goes.

On northern hill and Sussex down,
In Derby dale and Lincoln fen,
I've trafficked with the winds of God
And talked and laughed with many men;
I've seen the plowshare break the earth
From Cumberland to woody Kent;
I've followed Severn to the sea,
And heard the swollen tide of Trent.

I know the south, I know the north,
I've walked the counties up and down,
I've seen the spires of east and west,
And sung for joy of what I've seen,
But oh! my heart is ever fain
Of ways where Avon's oaks are green.

STEAMERS ALMOST IN COLLISION

Full Speed Astern by Steamers Charlotte and Vadso Prevented Accident.

Victoria, March 3.—Collision between the steamers Princess Charlotte and Vadso was narrowly averted at the entrance to Victoria harbor, both vessels having to go full speed astern to avert coming together. Much excitement prevailed among the passengers on the C. P. R. liner, who were seen scurrying aft along the decks as the distance narrowed between the vessels.

The Vadso was steaming inward at full speed, returning from Naas and way ports, and the Princess Charlotte was leaving for Vancouver. The government tug Point Hope was preceding the Boscowitz Company's steamer into the harbor, and when the little vessel approached the Princess Charlotte the C. P. R. steamer blew the signal for her to cross on the starboard side. Instead of doing this the tug signalled that she was crossing to port, and the three-funneled liner was forced to swing to pass the tug on the port side. The Princess Charlotte was then swinging, and the steamer Vadso was abreast of the Beren's Island lighthouse, passing into the harbor, and was preparing to cross on the starboard side when the Princess Charlotte whistled for a port crossing. The Vadso, swinging in the effort to pass on the port side, continued to cross the path of the Princess Charlotte, and before she could sheer to pass to port the two vessels were very close together. Captain Griffin, on the bridge of the Princess Charlotte, at once rang for full speed astern, while Captain Noel of the Vadso did likewise, and the three-funneled steamer churned up the foam as her engines were reversed. This stopped the way of both vessels considerably, and they were brought up within two or three feet of each other, with the bow of the Princess Charlotte near the starboard bow of the Vadso.

When the two steamers were nearing each other, although the navigators on the bridge were coolly working to avoid an accident, much excitement prevailed on the decks. On the Vadso the watch below scurried up from the forecastle, and on the Princess Charlotte the passengers who had been lining the rail forward ran aft, evidently fearing that a collision must ensue from the position of the steamers.

ALLEGED BENEFITS OF WAR.

Interesting Speech by Mr. Norman Angell, Well-Known Author.

Curiosity to see and hear the suddenly- famous author of "The Great Illusion" drew a crowded audience to the Grafton-square Brotherhood. It was Mr. Norman Angell's first appearance as a public speaker in London—at any rate since the publication of his book. A touch of something like mystery has added to the popular interest in Mr. Angell. Dozens of "personal pars." concerning him have left us with the bare fact that he is an English journalist living in Paris. He is, to be exact, the Paris manager of the Daily Mail.

When the chairman mounted the platform, followed by two lady soloists and the speaker, there was almost a murmur of mild surprise among the audience. It was hard to realize that this slight, fair-haired young man was the thinker whose theory of modern war has proved the most "explosive idea" of recent years. Mr. Angell, at first sight, seems almost boyish in appearance. A second glance shows that the small-featured, clean-shaven face has the cast of mature thought, as well as the pallor of the student, upon it. It is a sharp, eager face—let us say, the face of a keen journalist—distinguished by a forehead of a kind which is not possessed by everyone—even in Fleet-street. Mr. Angell has a rather weak voice, but his deliberate, unhestitating mode of speech enables him to be heard well, even in a large building. Without afefctation of eloquence, he is a good speaker to an audience that wants argument, not fireworks. And as even serious audiences like bright and witty illustrations, Mr. Angell's gift that way is all to the good.

He plunged straight into his subject, "War and Its Alleged Benefits." He had tried to show, he said, that war between two civilized nations must be profitless, both to victor and vanquished. That might be true, some of his critics said, but surely it was very sordid to give up fighting just because it doesn't pay? Nations did not fight about money. "Well," said Mr. Angell, "it all depends upon what you mean by money. If you mean the means by which the nation provides better housing, better food, better conditions for its children, then we do fight about money—or if we don't we ought to." Mr. Angell bases his main argument upon the changed conditions of life and commerce during quite modern times. In a primitive state of society a man might live upon his enemies; but today, so much were the nations interdependent parts of the same organism, that, if all our enemies were to disappear, half of us would die of starvation at once. Suppose the Germans invaded England and parcelled it out among German major-generals, acting as taskmasters over the people, and restraining their freedom of buying, selling, travelling, amusement, etc., immediately the dividends of trading companies, railways, theatres, etc., would disappear. An invader must do one of two things: restrain freedom in this way, which spelt ruin; or leave the life of the country untouched—and why come here to do that?

The size of an administrative area had no connection with the prosperity of its inhabitants. As a clear and simple illustration of this point, Mr. Angell pointed to Switzerland. With no army to speak of she was as prosperous and happy as Russia with her vast territory and 4,000,000 soldiers. Suppose Germany conquered all Europe, where was her profit? Would she impoverish the conquered countries—and ruin her own markets? The British Empire was a picture of what the world of the future would be like. Here we had five independent nations which had practically surrendered the possibility of ever exerting force one against the other. If it was so with five nations, why not with fifteen? The common interests which bind us together would in future be sufficient guarantee that one nation will behave decently to another. What guarantee did Switzerland give for the safety of the thousands of British subjects who visit her? Only that she wants them to come again! And so it was with other business interests besides holiday tourists.

Mr. Angell interested the Brotherhood by camparing his view of the peace propaganda with the methods by which religious liberty was achieved. Not by definite acts and treaties, but by the spread of ideas, would Europe be converted to a sane view of war. "If we allow passion to rule us instead of reason," concluded Mr. Angell, "we shall have to pay the price; and the innocent will suffer with the guilty even to the third and fourth generation." It was the only touch of prepared eloquence in the speech. The fact was itself a sign that the cause of peace is no longer in the hands of mere sentimentalists and rhetoricians. The men of logic and intellect are coming in—following Mr. Norman Angell's brilliant lead.

Eleven Million Jews.

New York, March 3.—A prediction that the next century will see nearly all of the 11,000,000 Jews of the whole world on American soil was made by Sheriff Julius Harburger in an address before delegates from all parts of the country gathered for the annual meeting of the executive committee of the Free Sons of Israel. Arrangements were considered for the quinquennial convention of the entire order at Rochester on May 19.

In reviewing the history of the order since its inception in 1849, Sheriff Harburger spoke of its benefactions and its remarkable resources. There were only 3000 Jews in the United States when the first census was taken, he said, and today there are 2,000,000.

Every land which has persecuted the Jews, he said, has fallen into decay, and he lauded the action taken by the United States in abrogating its treaty with Russia in order to impress that "barbaric nation" with a lesson of justice to Jewish-American citizens.

HOPEFUL OF RECONCILIATION.

There is no other change that would so much encourage the promoters of a world-peace as the substitution of friendly alliance for strained relations between the British and German Empires, says the Toronto Globe. Apparently some real progress in this direction has already been made, and more is expected. There is a general belief among those most in touch with the whole situation that the recent visit of Lord Haldane to Berlin was made at the suggestion, if not the request of the German Government, and the best proof that it was productive of good is that it is to be returned by sending to London a German statesman who is known to be friendly to Great Britain. These visits are informal, and the communications are not in the technical sense "diplomatic;" they are merely conversations held for the purpose of ascertaining whether it is possible to find some common standing ground.

It is well understood all round that Germany wants and intends to have room for colonial expansion. It is difficult to name any part of the world where she can now secure great stretches of territory unoccupied by other powers. The area persistently named at present as likely to become basis of a modus vivendi is Portuguese East Africa. If Portugal is willing to sell this piece of real estate Germany and Britain might easily and would probably buy and divide it: certainly they will not let any other power acquire a foothold there. Just as certainly they will not quarrel about their respective interests in the property. In fact it seems certain that if Portugal refuses to sell, Germany and Great Britain will come to an agreement as to "spheres of influence" which they might commercially and industrially exploit, while watching for the course of events to bring about a psychological moment for making a purchase. The troubled political condition of Portugal may bring that about sooner thatn at present seems probable.

BEAUTY FROM THE DESERT.

Sculptures of Two Thousand Years Ago in Tripoli.

Four hundred years before the birth of Christ an unknown Grecian sculptor in the city of Cyrene, in Tripoli, carved a beautiful marble head of the goddess Athene.

Cyrene vanished from the face of the earth only some tombs and half-buried ruins remaining—and for 2000 years the exquisite work of the sculptor who lived before the Ptolomies lay buried in the wreck of the dead city. Last year Professor Richard Norton, excavating at Cyrene, dug up this relic of a lost civilization, and to lay the head of the goddess whom the Greeks in old Cyrene worshipped is shown for the first time to English eyes.

"Fortunate is the excavator," writes Professor Norton, in his preliminary report just issued, "who can add to the world's store of beauty an object such as this—from the best period of Greek sculpture. The goddess wears the Corinthian helmet pushed back on her head, leaving a diadem of heavy hair rippling across her broad, serene brow, and gathered behind in a simple, massive braid that falls on the nape of her neck.

"Very striking is the constrast of the strong, unruffled curve of the helmet above the lovely face. The head bends slightly to the left, like a flower on its stem. The eyes are clear, straight-looking, gentle; the cheeks full, above the vigorous chin; the mouth sensitive as the dew on the grass, but strong and firm as one of Nature's laws. A great individual master was he who carved the face, which looks at us across the ages of vanished time with the tranquillity of perfectly accomplished beauty."

A Wonderful Statue.

A wonderful statue of a woman found in the same place is, in similarity of feeling, says Professor Norton, strikingly like the famous Nike of Samothrace.

"There is the same magnificent flux and flow of life," he writes, "the same grandness of design, the same mastery of execution, that enabled the sculptor to represent a splendid large body which is neither clumsy nor dumpy, and which, though heavily draped, is neither hidden nor swaddled by the garments that take life from and flutter around the pulsing shape within."

Once before, half a century ago, Cyrene was visited by excavators—two English officers—who returned with sculptures of astonishing beauty, now in the British Museum. A British consul afterwards brought home some fine painted vases from the tombs; but with these exceptions, Cyrene, with all its hidden wealth of art, has been left untouched from the days when Arabs swept away its life, and Professor Norton was the first to delve in the Acropolis, where his treasures were found. His workmen were wild Arabs, who at first came to work "covered with knives and pistols and guns."

The top of the Acropolis hill was first attacked, and here a colonnade, with adjoining wings and rooms, was unearthed. Behind the colonnade ran a corridor with a painted plaster floor, which, with some coins which were found, suggests, says Professor Norton, the third century B. C. as the date of the work.

Ancient Veneer.

It is amusing to find that the very modern plan of covering up walls with a thin layer of marble was practised so long ago. In some of the rooms a large quantity of various colored marbles, "which had once formed a veneer on the walls, and also probably a floor," was found.

Layers of terra-cotta pipes, which may have been part of the latest system of steam-heating, were unearthed, as well as floor mosaics and ceiling tiles, stamped generally with the name of the Greek god Zeus.

Miniature figures, a half life-size figure of an athlete, "Antonianos, otherwise known as the Fool, the Ephesian," a torso of Artemis, with a quiver on her back, a torso of a Nereid, and fifteen half-length, life-size figures of women, dating from 300 B. C. to 300 A. D., were among the treasures discovered.

These statues are "peculiar in many respects," Professor Norton states. They are apparently figures from tombs, and two of them have the carved drapery "drawn across the face and held in the left hand, leaving only the eyes and brow visible, covering the faces exactly as the women of Cyrene do today."

Four fine semi-colossal statues of women, dating from 300 B. C. were found in an enclosure, and near one of them were several figurines, representing the same goddess, but dating from 600 B. C.

"The sculptor who made them is forgotten," Professor Norton writes of the larger figures. "The religion that drove his chisel has vanished as the wind over the sea, but these figures rise before us to stir our tired bodies and our jaded senses with the reminder of a great valor which has gone from the world."

To Prevent Prairie Fires.

To prevent prairie fires starting and spreading from sparks thrown from engines the Railway Commission at Ottawa, has issued a drastic fire guard regulation affecting all railways operating under its jurisdiction in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The order provides: "That every railway company subject to the legislative authority of Canada operating steam lines in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan shall, on or before Aug. 1 of each year, construct along each side of the right of way in these provinces and not less than 300 feet distant from the centre a fireguard consisting of a ploughed strip of land not less than sixteen feet in width." This fire guard must be kept free from dry grass, weeds and other combustible material between Aug. 1 and Dec. 1 of each year. A penalty of $25 in addition to any civil damage is placed upon any employee of the companies who leaves gates open or cuts fences, resulting in injury to cattle. The companies are subject to a penalty of $100 for each infraction of the order.

To obviate the necessity of employees of railways going under engines to empty ash pans, a work which endangers life, the board orders that all engines be equipped before Dec. 31, 1913, with ashpans which may be dumped without going underneath. No engine not so equipped can be used after the date fixed by the order.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE ARTS.

A Fantasy in Three Acts, By John Galsworthy.

In The Pigeon, Mr. Galsworthy pursues the same path that he has so steadfastly trodden in "The Silver Box," in "Strife," and in "Justice," says The Times. He bids us pity and understand and succour the outcasts, the disinherited of this world. He shows us not only the sadness but the irony of their fate; the breakdown of our social machinery in dealing with them; the need not for systems but for a new spirit. An apostle, then, he is, first and foremost, using art to awaken our consciences; but it is always art that he uses—are without base alloy, are with that quintessential poetry which wells up when feelings are deeply stirred and with that beauty which is the outcome of clear and complete expression. Work of his "high emprise" and so finely wrought is rare in the theatre; every one must feel grateful for it, must feel that our stage is ennobled by it. But of course it is chastening, troubling, the very reserve of joyous; there can thus be no "thunders of applause" for it, only a quiet, thankful appreciation. One paid it, rather, the tribute of a sigh, and went away pensive, and with certain old words about "charity" recurring obstinately in the mind. And in that mood Mr. Galsworthy had his reward.

For it is of charity, "the greatest of these," that "The Pigeon" eloquently speaks; whimsically, too, and most winningly. The charitable man is one Christopher Wellwyn, whose pockets, as his daughter Ann tells him, are "spiritually—one enormous whole." His charity comes of an immense and abiding instinct for friendship. The practical will call him a sickly sentimentalist. But, says he, it isn't sentiment. "If I'm to give up feeling sort of nice in here (his breast) about people—it doesn't matter "who" they are—then I don't know what I'm to do. I shall have to sit with my head in a bag." Sympathy for the outcasts, just friendliness, liking, is what he feels. "I suppose they see I like them—then they tell me things. After that, of course, you can't help doing what you can.' He falls into talk with them in the street and gives them his card. Of course they invade his studio (he is a painter, 'a ses heures') and prey upon him, while liking him as heartily as he does them. There is Guinevere Megan, the flower-girl, and Ferrand, the Frenchman, and old Timson, the cabman. They drink his rum, take his money and his clothes, make his house their home. Warmed and fed, they get for a time a new sense of life. In the flower-girl and Ferrand it becomes a real "joie de vivre;" they shout and laugh and dance and, if the whole truth must be told, kiss. As for the cabman, he works steadily through three bottles of rum in less than a week. The friendliness of it all would be enough for Christopher but then comes in the parson, who preaches repentance and reform. The flower-girl must be induced to go back to her husband; old Timson must be set to help in the studio; the Frenchman, an undesirable alien, must be sent about his business. Christopher has other advisers, a professor and a J. P. According to the professor, "we're to give the state all we can spare, to make the undeserving deserving." According to the J.P. "we ought to support private organizations for helping the deserving, and damn the undeserving." The parson "seems to be a little bit of both." And so the three advocate each his nostrum, and argue till they quarrel, with no practical result. The symmetrical and synchronistic arrangement of their three personified theories—rather than persons—reminds you of the quarrelling professor in Thomas Love Peacock—and, good as they are in Peacock, they have not "body" enough for the definite and solid surroundings of the stage.

MARRIAGE WAS LEGAL.

Couple Went Through Ceremony for Joke That Proved Binding.

Bridegport, Conn., March 3.—A mock marriage that after twelve years has turned out to be real is the cause of the suit for divorce brought here by Dr. Howard P. Mansfield of Ridgefield, and Miss Clara Georgia of Zanesville. In November, 1899, Miss Georgia was visiting friends in Georgetown, Conn., when she met Dr. Mansfield. They stopped at the home of one of the townsmen, who was a justice of the peace, and Dr. Mansfield jokingly proposed that they go through a marriage ceremony. They have not seen each other since that time. Recently the physician learned that the ceremony is binding and both agreed to divorce proceedings.

Honor Lost Among Thieves.

New York, March 3.—A robber who robbed the robbers who stole $25,000 from two bank managers in the financial district two weeks ago was afterward twice robbed himself. Such was the chapter added to the "taxi-cab holdup story" by the confession of Matteo Arbano yesterday.

Arbano gave himself up and told the police how he walked into a saloon where the five taxicab bandits were dividing $25,000 loot, and by "pure bluff" was given $10,000. As he left the saloon he was in turn held up by two companions and had to divide with them.

With $3000 left he fled to Havana, Cuba. In Havana he became acquainted with a woman and after a night of drinking said he found himself short $2500, which he alleged the woman had stolen.

The police so far have recovered only $2000 of the original loot.

Paddled With Hat.

Bellingham, March 3.—Bob Shields yesterday launched a home-made 14-foot launch, and in his zeal to show the speed of his handiwork, traveled far out into the bay; there the engine stopped. As Mr. Shields had neglected to take along a pair of oars he was compelled to row his craft ashore, using his hat as a paddle. The operation, which took about three hours was viewed by a vociferous multitude, none of whom offered to come to his aid.

The Appearance of Evil.

"Sister Henderson," said Deacon Hypers, "you should avoid even the appearance of evil."

"Why, deacon, what do you mean?" asked Sister Henderson.

"I observed that on your sideboard you have several cut-glass decanters and that each of them is half-filled with what appears to be ardent spirits."

"Well, now, deacon, it isn't anything of the kind. The bottles look so pretty on the sideboard that I just filled them half way with some floor stain and furniture polish, just for appearances."

"That's why I am cautioning you, sister," replied the deacon. "Feeling a trifle weak and faint, I helped myself to a dose from the big bottle in the middle."—London Telegraph.

"We women may not know some things, but we have some sense of business honor," said Mrs. Blithers.

"Do you mean to tell me that we have no sense of business honor in public life now?" demanded Blithers.

"Well, my dear," said Mrs. Blithers, with a superior smile, "facts speak for themselves. Do you consider this businesslike? This paper says that 7000 bills were presented to congress in the first nine daily sessions. I believe this paper is reliable."

"Perfectly," said Blithers, "but what of it? Suppose 20,000 bills were presented in that time?"

"What of it? What of it?" cried Mrs. Blithers. "You surprise me, even if you are a man. Do you think it businesslike to have that number of bills, all in nine days, too?"

Blithers scratched his head in perplexity.

"How would you women stop it?" he demanded.

"How would we stop it?" said Mrs. Blithers scornfully. "Why, we wouldn't have any bills at all. We'd pay cash as we went along."—Lippincott's.

AVIATOR'S DARING FEAT.

Leaped From Aeroplane and Descended to Earth in Parachute.

St. Louis, March 3.—For the first time in the history of heavier-than-air flying, a man leaped from an aeroplane at Jefferson barracks yesterday afternoon and descended to the earth in a parachute. The man was Captain Albert Berry. The leap was witnessed by hundreds of soldiers. When the aeronaut landed the soldiers cheered wildly, and, surrounding the man, lifted him from the ground and half carried him to the office of Colonel Wood, the commandant. Berry and Polit Bannus left Kinloch aviation field in the afternoon in a two-passenger biplane. Beneath the machine, in a specially constructed case, was a large parachute, similar to those with which aeronauts leap.

The trip to the barracks was made without a stop. The first the soldiers knew that anything unusual was going on was when they heard the buzzing of a propeller and saw the plane, which was flying high and swiftly. The soldiers were astonished to see Berry slip down under the craft. It took them several seconds to divine that he had climbed to a trapeze bar attached to a parachute.

Bannus steadied the machine. Berry gave a quick jerk on a rope, a knife slashed, and man and parachute plunged downward while the aeroplane, bouncing like a cork, suddenly poised and steadied itself.

SPORTS

INTEREST INTENSE IN HOCKEY GAMES

Tuesday Night's Game at Vancouver Should Have Important Bearing on Final Result.

For the last time this season, unless the unforeseen happens, the Westminster and Vancouver hockey teams will clash at the Arena rink tomorrow evening. This match has an important bearing on the league championship, inasmuch as a victory by Westminster will practically put Vancouver out of the running. In order to break even and tie with Westminster, the Terminals would have to win the last fixture of the season, on March 15, and Westminster would have to drop their two games with the Victoria septette. As Jimmy Gardner's crowd has usually found Lester Patrick's bunch fairly easy this season, it is unreasonable to suppose that they canot at least take one of the two last games.

Word was received yesterday by P. W. Luce, secretary of the local club, that the wearers of the orange and black, would go on the ice tomorrow evening determined to wipe out that awful beating of a week ago, when Frank Patrick's men trounced the Gardner gang to the tune of nine to two. On that occasion the Westminster men were distinctly off color, some of the boys not seeming able to get going at all. Ernie Johnson, in particular, was in the inbad class, while McLean and Gardner were also keeping time to the "Dead March in Saul" in the ice gyrations. Lehman, who usually keep the rubber out of danger zone, felt ashamed of himself after the game, and vowed that he would get the Westminster crowd on its collective feet at the next rencontre.

The walloping sustained last week was entirely due to one of those reversals of form which are apt to happen at any time, but it gave the Willie Wise crowd a great opportunity to cry "Fake" and "Frame-up."

Any way you look at it, the man who wants to see evidence of a frame-up in the Pacific Coast Hockey League is going to find a chance to holler, "I told you so'.' If Vancouver wins the championship and goes east after the Stanley Cup, it's something like this:

"Sure, framed up from the start. Frank Patrick is manager and told the others he had to captain the winners. Easy."

Supposing Victoria wins (there is still a chance no bigger than the plam of a man's hand) it's the same story:

"Lester's the captain of the Victorias. He had to win to make the sport take good in the Capital. Frame-up."

And after the season is over and the Paterson is filling a widely advertised gap in a mahogany cabinet in the public reading room of the Carnegie library, this will be the song:

"Only way it could be doped out without the public getting wise. That's the only time Westminster'll win anything in this league. Oh, they can't fool ME."

What are you going to do to please this crowd?

Tickets for Tuesday's game were on sale at Ryall's Drug store and at Duncan's Cigar store on Saturday evening. As usual, arangements have been made by the secretary for special cars on which holders of tickets will be given free transportation. Persons not having tickets will not be permitted to ride on these cars.

The cars will leave the B. C. E. R. depot at seven o'clock sharp and will return to this city shortly before midnight.

SENIOR AMATEURS BEATEN BY V. A. C.

The Senior Amateurs had no better luck on Moody square against the V. A. C. than the Rovers had at Recreation park. Here again the ground was in bad shape, the mud in front of the two goals being at least four inches deep. It was a fairly fast game, however, but the local players did not seem able to score. They had a good share of the game, but threw away several good chances in front of goal. V. A. C. scored once in the first half and twice in the second.

This defeat does not put Westminster out of the running altogether, but they will have to win pretty nearly everything in sight if they expect to come out ahead of the rest at the close of the league. At present they are standing third in the competition, Coquitlam still being in first place.

Bitten by a Dead Dog.

Olympia, March 3.—Secretary H. L. Hinsley, of the Industrial Insurance Commission, says the claim put in by Fred W. Davis, a conductor on a Beacon Hill street car, in Seattle, for compensation for a bite inflicted by "a dead dog" holds the record to date. The dead dog that took a "chaw" out of the pedal extremity of the conductor was not dead but had just been run over and stunned.

WAS RAGGED GAME ON MUDDY GROUND

Rovers Lose Imperial Cup to Thistles by 7-2—Rough Play and Damaged Players.

Saturday was a black day for Westminster on the soccer field. The Rovers went under to the Thistles in the final of the Imperial cup by seven goals to two, and the Senior Amateurs were beaten by the V. A. C. by three goals to nothing.

The Imperial cup final was played at Recreation Park with the ground in wretched condition. The mud and water were inches deep, and in places it was almost impossible to move the ball out of the slough. These conditions militated against the Rovers' chance of success, as they took the field with much the lighter team, and the long kicking game of the Thistles was well adapted to the muddy ground. The Rovers, too, never seemed to find their form and were certainly outplayed on the day's exhibition. In the second half the Thistles roughed the game considerably, but Referee Phillips did not see fit to put any of the men off.

The Thistles were the first to score, Matthews and Doull both netting the leather shortly after the start. Rovers then made a spurt, and Walker headed through a nice centre from the right wing. Thistles, however, were soon back again in front of the Westminster goal, and Bell found Sampher, who was right off his form, at fault again and scored the third goal for his side. The game now became very ragged, and the ball was generally in the Rovers' territory. Walker got badly kicked on the back of the leg, and was lame for most of the match, and several of the other Westminster players were more or less hurt. Cairnduff made a nice piece of play in the second half, which resulted in Shawcross scoring, but Thistles held the upper hand throughout. The kicking of their backs was superior to that of the Westminster men, and their left wing particularly put in some good forward work.

MARTIAL LAW IN PEKIN PROCLAIMED

Foreign Legations Preparing for Siege--British Protecting Women and Children.

Peking, March 3.—President Yuan Shi Kai has virtually admitted that he is unable to preserve order in the capital when he summoned republican troops from Nanking.

It is probable that General Li Yuan Hung, former commander-in-chief of the rebel army, will accompany the troops here to put down the disorders with an iron hand.

The foreign ministers here, after a conference, have decided to bring into Peking all the available foreign troops stationed in adjacent ports in China. A force of 1000 troops of various nationalities will arrive here today.

Although parties belonging to the army commanded by Chang Huai Shih last night were themselves engaged in looting, they fought the looters yesterday in the outskirts of the city. Prisoners they took were summarily decapitated and many headless bodies are lying in the streets. In the distant part of the Forbidden City considerable trouble occurred. Whole streets of shops were looted and many houses were set on fire. The civilian population has armed and fortified private premises, while barricades were erected in the streets. The mutineers who left Peking for Pao Ting Fu yesterday and whom Yuan Shi Kai ordered to be arrested or killed, have been joined by many of the soldiers here. They have looted a great part of Pao Ting Fu and burned large areas.

Feng Tai, 22 miles from Peking on the railroad to Tien Tsin, was looted by another gang of mutineers. British troops guarding the railroad there protected the women and children, but the mutineers burned all buildings.

A serious recrudescence of disorder occurred today when a detachment of artillery, headed by a band, marched to the palace of Duke Kuei Hsian, father of the empress dowager, and snelled down the gate. They looted much property and burned a portion of the palace.

Martial law, which has been proclaimed in the capital, is operating successfully. At 10 o'clock this morning quiet prevailed near the legations, but continual cannonading was heard in the direction of Feng Tai, with which communication has been cut off temporarily. A detachment of American troops is due at 8:30 o'clock this evening. The legations are preparing for a siege. Direct attacks on the legation here are not feared, but the Chinese troops possess many modern guns, which might be used effectively if turned on the legations.

By the dynamiting of the bridges on the Hankow railway and because of the fighting along the Tien Tsin line, Peking temporarily is out of communication with these places.

The foreign guard along the railway will be increased. The diplomatic body held a conference last night and considered that steps for the restoration and maintenance of communication with Tien Tsin. The river is now open, therefore it may not be necessary to guard the line between Tien Tsin and Chinwang Tao, and it would be possible to reach the sea by way of the river.

FELL FROM A HAY LOFT

Suffered Tortures With His Kidneys Until He Tried Gin Pills

You might think that Mr. Baker needed a surgeon more than GIN PILLS. But there were no bones broken. His back was strained, which was harder to cure because nothing seemed to do any good. It is the same with a sprained ankle and broken leg. You can set the fracture and it will be well in six weeks—but the sprain may take months to get well.

However, Mr. Baker found the quick way to get relief from the pain—here are his own words.

A BAD FALL

AULTSVILLE, ONT.

"I have been a great sufferer from Kidney Trouble from an injury to my back caused by falling from a hay loft about six years ago. This left my kidneys weak, so that every cold I got would settle in my kidneys and cause intense suffering. I was advised to try GIN PILLS. I found, to my surprise, after taking two boxes, that the pains were relieved and I began to feel better. I am still taking GIN PILLS and feel sure I will be completely cured. I recommend GIN PILLS to all who suffer from any Kidney Trouble". C. BAKER.

You see, the fall had strained the kidneys and they were affected by the slightest chill. GIN PILLS immediately strengthened the kidneys—soothed any irritation and thus enabled the kidneys to overcome the effects of the fall.

If you are having pain in the back—or trouble with kidneys or bladder through accident or overwork—do just as Mr. Baker did—take GIN PILLS. They will help you—cure you—or we will promptly refund your money. Buy GIN PILLS at your dealer's. If, after taking them, you feel that Gin Pills have not helped you, return the empty boxes and get your money. We will take your word for it. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Harbor Lights.

For around the turn of the road is that which we most desire, and ever the road turns.
Ah! many mariners go down to the sea in mighty ships,
And many a sailor tempts the tide alone;
Their hearts' expectancy at last is quenched in death's eclipse,
They sink "unknelled, uncoffined and unknown."

And many a vigil still is kept and bitter tears are shed
By patient eyes that scan the sunset foam;
For those, with softer accents let the burial rites be read,
Who sank in sight of harbor lights and home.

Though sad is he who sails away to seek a sunny isle
That basking lies in deep-empurpled seas,
And never gains the port he sought, and buffeted meanwhile
By adverse tides and long-delaying breeze,

The ones to whom my sympathy goes out all unrestrained
Are those who mark at eve the city's dome
Rise from the world of waters, and the haven almost gained,
Go down in sight of harbor lights and home.

—Alonzo L. Rice.

REDWOOD LOG AGES OLD.

Remains of Buried Forest Found in California.

San Jose, March 3.—More than 150 feet beneath the floor of the Santa Clara Valley are buried the remains of a prehistoric redwood forest, according to the theory of those who have examined remnants of a log which is being sunk on the Y. M. C. A. property in Santa Clara street. Embedded in thick clay, the log was encountered at a depth of 145 feet.

The remnants of the ancient tree are in excellent condition, and will be preserved carefully.

It is believed that specimens of great scientific interest may be unearthed.

WELL-KNOWN CITIZENS BUILDING FINE HOMES

Dr. R. E. Walker is reported to have bought several lots on the corner of First street and Fourth avenue, facing Queen's Park. It is believed to be his intention to build a fine residence for himself on this property.

Another prominent citizen who is building a fine home is T. H. Barbaree of the Dominion Trust Company. He has chosen Third avenue, between First and Second streets, for his location, and thestone foundations are being laid.

Spinks—What made him so annoyed?

Winks—He told his wife she had no judgment, and she just looked over him critically from head to foot, and said she was beginning to realize it.—Penny Magazine.

The Star—The author of this play is a great stickler for realism, isn't he?

The Manager—I haven't noticed it.

The Star—Why, he objects to my wearing diamond rings in the scene where I pawn my hat to buy food for the children.—Penny Magazine.

WHITE ROCK NOTES.

Activity is the watchword at White Rock these days; lumber and building material is coming down from New Westminster by the carload, and teams from the Hunter Mill Company at Hazelmere, and the Morrison Mill Company at Blaine, are hauling it here every day.

Upwards of a dozen new houses have been contracted for by the various builders, amongst which might be mentioned a large up-to-date bungalow for George Blakley and a 60x40 three-story residence for T. Kennedy. These latter are now being erected by Barr and Hetherington, who have four men working.

J. Chisholm and the Hughes Bros., of Vancouver, are well under way with their buildings near the depot; John Matthews will commence in a day or so, and W. Wade, recently from London, England, has given instructions for the erection of a house for himself and family.

An enterprising firm have announced their intention of putting up a garage before the summer season opens, and on all the townsite additions as well as on the townsite proper, men are at work burning, clearing and improving the various properties in many ways.

Activity, too, is shown by the G. N. R. Co. surveyors are making lines for a considerable amount of extra track in connection with a larger switch, the new depot and Provincial Government offices.

In matters religious also, the same spirit of progress is shown by the fact that the Rev. W. W. Colpitts, resident Methodist minister, has been enabled to purchase an organ for his Sunday services, which at present are held in the school house. Indications, therefore, all point to 1912 being a banner year in the history of this young burg.

The only note of discord is the almost unfriendly indifference of the Surrey Municipal Council toward the needs of this growing district in regard to road appropriations. Some of the members of that honorable body frankly state that they have no desire to finance matters favorably for this district.

The man on the street, however, understands that should this unwise policy be persisted in, steps will be taken to remove White Rock township from the jurisdiction of Surrey Municipality.

The optimistic spirit of this district, fostered as it is by the bracing breezes from Semiahmos Bay, is not daunted by this one set-back, and at the present time progress is still the watchword.
