NEWS BY TELEGRAPH

Ashcroft, December 26—Johnson knocked out Tommy Burns in the fourteenth round of their fight in Australia. All wires down to the west. May get particulars later.

Los Angeles, December 23—James J. Jeffries, proprietor of the Jeffries Athletic Club, has cabled to Australia a challenge for the winner of the Burns-Johnson fight to meet the winner of the Kaufman-Berry contest in Los Angeles, the bout to take place in this city.

Juneau, Alaska, December 23—Only the timely discovery of an infernal machine saved the life of Deputy United States Marshal Faulkner last Tuesday evening. Faulkner is living in the residence of Governor Hoggatt and as he was returning home in the evening, a piece of string fastened to the gate. Owing to the frequent warnings received, his suspicions were immediately aroused and he started to investigate. The string led to a death engine in the shape of a Smith & Wesson revolver attached to the gate post in such a manner that the opening of the gate would discharge the revolver and kill any person passing through.

Moosejaw, Sask., December 25—The Dominion Land Office staff here established a new world's record Thursday when six hundred entries for homesteads and pre-emptions in the Moosejaw district, were received. The streets present a stirring site. Fresh batches of land hungry men are arriving by train daily.

Lufkin, Texas, December 24,—Refusing to surrender a young woman boarder at their hotel whom the police were endeavoring to arrest, Mrs. Joseph Ferguson and her daughter Bertha engaged in a pistol duel with officers and members of a citizens' posse who came to their assistance. During the shooting the two women were mortally wounded.

Waycross, Georgia, December 24—To wreak vengeance for the arrest of one of their companions, on a charge of being drunk, six young white men rode into the town of Beach and fired 500 shots, riddling buildings and terrorizing the town. Four young women, walking on the street, were fired on and one of them, Maggie Taylor, aged fourteen, was probably fatally wounded.

London, December 26—A song entitled "Canada" is being sung at the music halls, by Harriet Vernon, which asks; "Why send your sons to Canada, tell me now, John Bull, where hunger stares them in the face?" A couple of dozen Canadians, annoyed at the anti-emigration sentiment expressed in the song, visited the Hippodrome with the idea of singing the "Maple Leaf" but were denied admittance. The Canadian party was led by N. B. Colcock, Ontario government agent.

Paris, December 23—In a battle between 2,000 students and police reserves, four persons, including Prefect of Police Lepine, were injured. The first clash occurred in front of the college building, where the students were holding a mass meeting in protest against the action of the faculty in granting the first class and second class diplomas.

Half the students assailed the police with rotten eggs, decayed vegetables and ink stands. The police charged the students, using the butts of their revolvers, and drove them into the boulevard, where they barricaded themselves.

Winnipeg, December 26—A sensation has been created in Manitoba sporting circles by the publication, by the Manitoba Amateur Athletic Association, of a list of over 200 of the best known Winnipeg athletes as being under the ban of the association for professionalism. From the fact that many of these men are playing hockey with the amateur leagues, enormous confusion has resulted. In the list are also the names of prominent football and lacrosse players whose amateur standing is questioned.

Calcutta, December 24—A remarkable state of affairs exists at Bettiah, in Champaran district of Behar. Disputes between planters and Ryots (peasant cultivators) have led to open acts of hostility and, in order to protect the European population, large forces of Bengal armed police and Gurkhas have been drafted to the town. Fifty rounds of ball ammunition have been served to each member of the Behr Light Horse and affairs have assumed a warlike appearance. Seven cases are reported where Europeans have been attacked by natives.

Took Chinese Medicine.

Chinese medicine is a constant source of wonderment to the druggists and a case in point came under the observation of a local apothecary. A Chinaman had a severe attack of la grippe and went to a man among his countrymen who was supposed to be learned in the art of healing the ills which flesh is heir to. He gave him a ball of "medicine" and told him to give off as much as would cover a dime and to mix it with water and take it three times a day. The "medicine" had the effect of making him more ill instead of curing him. As he was very ill he consulted a well known local druggist, who asked him what the Chinese man of medicine had prescribed for him. The Chinaman handed him the ball and an examination disclosed that it was a ball of hair from the stomach of a cow. Hair is indigestible even in the stomach of a bovine and it collects in a ball there, and is only extracted after death. The presumption is that the Chinese "medicine man" procured this particular ball from the slaughter house of P. Burns & Co. By cutting off portions of it and taking it in water the stomach of the patient was filled with a large number of small sections of hair, which must of necessity irritated the walls of the stomach. The wonder is that the Chinaman who took the so-called medicine is alive.—Rossland Miner.

EARLY DAYS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

(By C. F. Morison.)

Part II.

I passed my first night in camp with Joseph Trutch and Edgar Dewdney, both of whom were afterwards lieutenant-governors of this fair province; and here in this camp I ate my first meal of that ambrosial food, bacon and beans; but perhaps being a little too worldly minded, I speedily gave it up again to the intense amusement of my companions and my own discomfort.

BOSTON BAR.

Next morning I proceeded on my pilgrimage towards Boston Bar, having the previous day crossed the Fraser by a rope ferry, where afterwards the Alexander suspension bridge was built. The section of the road between Chapman's Bar and Boston Bar, about twelve miles, was very rough and hard, large portions of it blasted out of the solid rock. The scenery here was absolutely grand, the trail winding round almost perpendicular bluffs, with the Fraser winding and boiling on its way to the sea hundreds of feet below. I passed a night at Boston Bar, a small mining village, I imagine now deserted.

Next day I arrived on my working ground, the contract 35 miles from Boston Bar to Lytton City, built by that best of friends and bosses, the late Tom Spence. It was a remarkable fact that the construction of this stupendous work was carried out by men who, with the exception of Trutch, were not engineers at all, but carried their work through with the help of those great teachers: experience in the rough and good horse sense. My boss was a baker by trade, and his foreman, a Yorkshire man, Geo. Pelton by name, was an old California miner and a most splendid fellow.

On this part of the road lay the celebrated Jackass Mountain, which I have no doubt at least two old pioneers now residing in Hazelton will remember well. Oh! the weariness of toiling up that almost Jacob's ladder of a trail and down the other side; for pack animals it was something awful. The road was built around the side of it—mostly crib work and blasting—at a height of fully 1000 feet above the Fraser. It broke the man, McClelland, who took the sub-contract, which I had the labor of writing out, for $20,000.00.

After completion this was a delightful drive in the stage behind six half-broken horses, round sharp curves, with the boiling torrent below; but under the expert driving of Steve Tingley one was as safe as in a church.

LYTTON CITY.

Lytton City consisted of a dozen houses, and wind—always wind in Lytton. Lytton was a busy place in 1862. The hotel was kept by Mons. Hautier. There was a large store owned by the Oppeheimers, and another by DeNouvian, a partner on the contract, together with a Hanoverian gentleman, George Landvoigt. (Continued on third page.)

CONFLICTING SURVEYS.

There is a tangle in land matters in the Bulkley Valley that, like the long deferred creditor, will have to be faced, and disposed of by the Provincial Government at some time.

The principal difficulties come from the conflicting surveys in the nine townships, numbered from 1 to 9, and which were first surveyed several years ago by a surveyor named Poudrier, and by which name the survey now goes. Being found faulty and in some cases the lines not being run out, J. H. Gray, P.L.S., was sent to remedy the trouble. The way he remedied it was to make a new survey of the whole tract without much regard to the previous survey.

This Gray survey brought about changes in almost every section line, resulting in the moving of almost every pre-emptor who had a location in the district involved. In some cases the lines are moved a few feet and in others the difference between the old and new surveys amounts to several hundred feet.

Those who had located under the old survey naturally resisted the idea of having their farms in one place and the land to which they were eventually to hold title to in another; or as one of the ranchers expresses it, "owning a portable ranch." There are a number of ranchers who filed under the Poudrier survey who cannot in the name of justice be compelled to give the best part of their ranches to conform to a subsequent survey. On the other hand are those who have filed under the Gray survey who would be equally injured should there be a reversion to the previous survey.

Without going into the subject in detail and taking up each separate case, the conflicting surveys have resulted in such a tangle that neither survey can be finally adopted without working a hardship on a number of deserving men, who, with the best intentions, filed on a piece of land and who want the same land they filed on.

Before a land office was established at Hazelton mistakes occurred and since then, September, 1907, other mistakes have been made which have tended to still further confuse the situation. Conflicting titles arising through the application of South African war scrip, purchase of land from the Government and pre-emption, are numerous throughout the settled portion of the Omineca district. Some people would lay the whole blame for the matter on the Provincial Government; some would make John Flewin, former agent at Port Simpson, the scape goat, while others want to saw off the whole responsibility on the local Government Agent, F. W. Valleau.

Without entering upon a defence of Mr. Valleau, it might be said that he cannot be blamed for things that happened before he took office, nor is he at fault that the necessary records were not furnished him for about eleven months after he was installed at Hazelton.

Mistakes, like accidents, are bound to happen in government affairs as well as in private, and cussing the Government and its officials at this stage of the game is not going to help matters much. There are two ways out of the difficulty: Let things drift along until the courts are asked to take a hand in the matter, or have a Royal Commission appointed with full powers to settle all disputed overland matters, on a basis of ^{that I am} ~~justice~~. Such a Commission was asked for some months ago by the Conservative Associations of this district and recommended to the Government by the local agent.

If these matters in dispute are allowed to go to the courts it will be a case of "heads, the rancher loses; tails, he is broke."

A Chinaman invited to write an editorial for the Charleston News and Courier delivered himself of a warning to the United States against Japan, which, he says, is preparing to take the Philippines away from the United States. His expression of opinion is interesting, not so much because it enlightens the United States concerning the possible attitude of Japan towards the United States, but because it shows that the average Chinese mind harbors a great distrust of the Japanese, which probably is not wholly uncalled for.—Rossland Miner.

Charles Spence, DeNovian and Landvoigt are all gone; they were good fellows and always treated me with the greatest kindness, and their memory is always green to me.

Captain Ball was magistrate at this place, with that fine fellow Fitzgerald as constable, who was afterwards gold commissioner in the Omineca, and who laid his bones there.

I spent the summer on the road looking after stores, etc. It was while employed in this work that I had the honor of an introduction to that prince among men, Sir James Douglas, the best governor this province ever had—a thorough gentleman and a most courteous one. He had a most difficult work to perform in the colony—a great gold rush of all sorts and conditions of men to be dealt with, the great wagon road to build, an official staff to form, and numberless other things to be done—with little or no money to do it with. To my certain knowledge he offered to pledge all his own personal property for a loan of $450,000 from England. Needless to say he got the loan at once without the Imperial Government exacting the pledge.

I also saw that terror to evil-doers, the never-to-be-forgotten late Chief Justice Begbie, going up country on circuit, swinging along the road in his shirt sleeves and singing at the top of his splendid bass voice; also the Rev. John Sheepshanks, now Bishop of Norwich, England, on his usual mission trip to Cariboo. He was a very fine man and renowned for his keen appetite; on this point I may refer my readers to James H. May of Hazelton.

I witnessed many accidents to pack animals on the mule trail, one of which had a comical side to it. A mule fell over a high bank into the Fraser; on his descent the diamond hitch gave way and his pack, consisting of baskets of champagne, was scattered around in charming confusion. We thought the mule would certainly be killed, but after bumping over rocks and logs, into the river he went, undergoing total immersion, he swam ashore sound in mind and body. Some part of his pack was destroyed; what was left the owner sold to our camp for a mere song; so behold us at 6 p. m., feasting on bacon and beans washed down with "Napoleon Cabinet" out of tin pannikins. Alas for McAlister and the Four Hundred!

THROUGH HELL'S GATE.

After the contract was finished from Boston Bar to Lytton I was moved nearer to Yale onto a contract Spence & Trutch had taken between Sailors' Bar and Chapman's Bar. To get there a party, consisting of six young Australians, Trueworthy (captain), a colored number one bowman, Timothy, our small but great cook, and the writer, were advised to take boat down the river, which we did, running through the canyon of the Fraser. It was a grand sight, but calculated to turn your hair white; the Skeena is "not in it." The passage through Hell's Gate was perfectly awe-inspiring. At this point the river is very narrow, with high perpendicular cliffs on either hand and a huge rock in the center; the noise of the water was like thunder and we obeyed our captain by signs. When he raised his hand we were to lay into it. We approached nearer and nearer to the rapid, the noise increasing to a deafening roar; up went the hand, and pulling with all our might we flashed past the rock and floated into calmer water, feeling rather proud of ourselves. It was intensely exciting while it lasted. A boat following us two days later, through some mistake in steering, ran on the center rock and split in two. All of her crew, seven in number, perished. A few miles below we passed under a bluff where blasting operations were being carried on. They had just lighted the fuse and yelled to us to pull for our lives, which we most certainly did. Bang! went the blast, and a huge piece of rock weighing at least five hundred pounds fell into the water just by the steering oar; a little closer and the writer with his chums would now be reposing at the bottom of the Fraser—how much we have to be thankful for!

We arrived at Sailors' Bar late in the evening, and after making camp and eating supper we were only too glad to turn in. Good night, gentle reader, good night.

Charles Spence, DeNovian and Landvoigt are all gone; they were good fellows and always treated me with the greatest kindness, and their memory is always green to me.

Captain Ball was magistrate at this place, with that fine fellow Fitzgerald as constable, who was afterwards gold commissioner in the Omineca, and who laid his bones there.

I spent the summer on the road looking after stores, etc. It was while employed in this work that I had the honor of an introduction to that prince among men, Sir James Douglas, the best governor this province ever had—a thorough gentleman and a most courteous one. He had a most difficult work to perform in the colony—a great gold rush of all sorts and conditions of men to be dealt with, the great wagon road to build, an official staff to form, and numberless other things to be done—with little or no money to do it with. To my certain knowledge he offered to pledge all his own personal property for a loan of $450,000 from England. Needless to say he got the loan at once without the Imperial Government exacting the pledge.

I also saw that terror to evildoers, the never-to-be-forgotten late Chief Justice Begbie, going up country on circuit, swinging along the road in his shirt sleeves and singing at the top of his splendid bass voice; also the Rev. John Sheepshanks, now Bishop of Norwich, England, on his usual mission trip to Cariboo. He was a very fine man and renowned for his keen appetite; on this point I may refer my readers to James H. May of Hazelton.

I witnessed many accidents to pack animals on the mule trail, one of which had a comical side to it. A mule fell over a high bank into the Fraser; on his descent the diamond hitch gave way and his pack, consisting of baskets of champagne, was scattered around in charming confusion. We thought the mule would certainly be killed, but after bumping over rocks and logs, into the river he went, undergoing total immersion, he swam ashore sound in mind and body. Some part of his pack was destroyed; what was left the owner sold to our camp for a mere song; so behold us at 6 p. m., feasting on bacon and beans washed down with "Napoleon Cabinet" out of tin pannikins. Alas for McAlister and the Four Hundred!

THROUGH HELL'S GATE.

After the contract was finished from Boston Bar to Lytton I was moved nearer to Yale onto a contract Spence & Trutch had taken between Sailors' Bar and Chapman's Bar. To get there a party, consisting of six young Australians, Trueworthy (captain), a colored number one bowman, Timothy, our small but great cook, and the writer, were advised to take boat down the river, which we did, running through the canyon of the Fraser. It was a grand sight, but calculated to turn your hair white; the Skeena is "not in it." The passage through Hell's Gate was perfectly awe-inspiring. At this point the river is very narrow, with high perpendicular cliffs on either hand and a huge rock in the center; the noise of the water was like thunder and we obeyed our captain by signs. When he raised his hand we were to lay into it. We approached nearer and nearer to the rapid, the noise increasing to a deafening roar; up went the hand, and pulling with all our might we flashed past the rock and floated into calmer water, feeling rather proud of ourselves. It was intensely exciting while it lasted. A boat following us two days later, through some mistake in steering, ran on the center rock and split in two. All of her crew, seven in number, perished. A few miles below we passed under a bluff where blasting operations were being carried on. They had just lighted the fuse and yelled to us to pull for our lives, which we most certainly did. Bang! went the blast, and a huge piece of rock weighing at least five hundred pounds fell into the water just by the steering oar; a little closer and the writer with his chums would now be reposing at the bottom of the Fraser—how much we have to be thankful for!

We arrived at Sailors' Bar late in the evening, and after making camp and eating supper we were only too glad to turn in. Good night, gentle reader, good night.
