Local and Personal

Those having friends visiting them will confer a favor by acquainting the PRESS with the fact. All other local news thankfully received.

STEWARD has just got in some lovely new hanging lamps.

J. W. S. Logie, of Summerland, visited Penticton Thursday evening.

Born, on Monday, 20th inst., to Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tupper, a daughter.

Chas. Burtch visited Summerland this week, returning home on Thursday.

F. S. Wilson has sold his house to S. W. Hatch. He will probably move to Calgary.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mahoney were among those who took in the Kelowna fall fair this week.

Mrs. Robt. Bowell and son, Walter, of Sapperton, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Tupper.

Don't forget that Wilfrid Small entertains under the auspices of Public Library, Friday evening.

Mrs. J. R. Mitchell will receive next Thursday and Friday before leaving to visit friends in Winnipeg.

The meeting of the Aquatic Association called for Tuesday evening has been postponed until further notice.

W. A. McLean, of Hedley, spent Friday in Penticton, being on his return journey after visiting the Seattle Exposition.

Jas. Creighton, John Mahoney and B. A. Shatford, all of Penticton, together carried off eight prizes, mostly firsts, for peaches at the Vernon fair last week.

Master Andrew Nesbitt, youngest son of Jos. A. Nesbitt, had the misfortune of breaking his arm last Saturday. He is, however, making rapid recovery.

There will be a meeting of the Conservative Association in the committee room at 8 o'clock on Tuesday evening. All Conservatives are requested to be present.

H. Murk and A. E. Moore left on Thursday for Merritt, the coal town of the Nicola, where Mr. Murk owns some real estate. They will be absent about a week.

A special service of song will be held in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, Sept. 26. W. L. Bradley will give a farewell talk to the Sunday School in the afternoon on the subject: "Boys Wanted.

Material is being laid on the ground for the erection of the Okanagan River bridge. We understand that by the intervention of the Dominion government, it is to be a swing bridge, and the preparation of the new plans has been the occasion of the delay in beginning construction.

The new gasoline street lamps that have been installed since last issue are giving excellent satisfaction so far, and are pronounced superior to incandescent lights. The streets are now passable and safe on the darkest nights. We trust that this success will encourage the Council to still greater municipal improvements.

Mrs. Otto Gaube has a sunflower stalk in her garden fourteen feet in height. It is loaded with smiling sunflowers. J. R. Mitchell took a turnip from his garden that weighed sixteen pounds. In the S. O. Land Co's window are exhibited carrots as big as large beets, from the garden of R. Weeks. Chas. Were tells a story of cabbages six feet high, but they didn't grow in Penticton.

Penticton-Summerland Road.

To back up our statements in last week's issue regarding the reason for work not being proceeded with from this end of the proposed Penticton-Summerland road, we append hereto a letter from Mr. Hamilton Lang, road superintendent. The fault lies at our own door; if a foreman had been chosen at the meeting two months' ago the work would have been in progress before this. However, better late than never, let the man be selected without delay. Following is Mr. Lang's letter:

Vernon, B.C., Sept. 18, 1909.
W. J. Clement, Esq.,
Penticton, B.C.

Sir,—Referring to your letter regarding the Penticton-Summerland road, I have been expecting a recommendation of a suitable man for foreman. If this is done and the man is satisfactory the work can commence at once.

Yours obediently,
HAMILTON LANG.

Farmers' Institute Organized.

There was a fair attendance at the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening of those interested in the organization of a local branch of the Provincial Farmers' Institute. The chief business of the meeting was the enrollment of members and the election of officers. E.W. Mutch was elected president; I. M. Stevens, vice-president; J. W. Edmonds, secretary-treasurer; and John Power, S. J. Kinney and J. R. Mitchell, directors.

The Institute starts with a membership of over thirty. Meetings will be held on the evenings of the first Saturday in each month.

Westward Ho!

Not for many months has Westward Ho! been so well illustrated, entertaining and instructive as the September issue, with its capital two-color cover design. Opening with one of Bonnycastle Dale's ever welcome nature studies and containing eight remarkably strong fiction pieces, that show careful selection, the balance of the contents consist of instructive articles including "The Suffragist in Canada," by Isabel B. Macdonald; "Canada's Music Master," by William Frederick Tasker; "Country and Suburban Homes," by E. Stanley Mitton; "Advertising a City," by Percy F. Godenrath; "At the Rainbow's Tip," by Cy Warman, and "A City of Surprises," by Ernest McGaffey.

SERIES OF

POPULAR LECTURES

BY

Mrs. A. T. Robinson,

F. R. S. G. S.

In Steward's Hall, Penticton.

(UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE W.C.T.U.)

Sunday, Sept. 26th, A MASS MEETING AT 8-30.
SUBJECT
National Righteousness
COLLECTION.

Monday, Sept. 27th, at 8 p. m.
Japan & the Japanese as I Saw Them
COLLECTION.

Tuesday, Sept. 28th, at 8 p. m.
The Sweating System of Great Britain
COLLECTION.

Wednesday, Sept. 29th, Special Pay Lecture at 8 p.m.
Russia & its Island Prison, Saghalien
ADMISSION TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

(Mrs. Robinson is the only British woman who has visited this Russian Convict Prison.)

Mrs. Robinson, nee Miss Murcutt, needs no introduction to a Penticton audience, having lectured here on a former occasion. Her oratorical powers are of a high order, and her lectures are instructive, enlightening and entertaining. She speaks from experience and observation, having travelled a distance equal to twelve times around the world, adopted the customs and assumed the costumes of the Chinese, Japanese, Russians, Hindus, and Whitechapel Slummites, not to speak of Canada, the United States and the more accessible parts of Europe. She has visited the chief prisons of the world, has been among the long haired Amus of Japan and in the islands of Hakkaido and Saghalien. She is an ardent social reformer, and the present local option movement throughout the province is due very largely to her efforts as lecturer for the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Robinson's addresses in Penticton will be under the auspices of the local branch of that organization.

Wilfred Small to Entertain.

Master Wilfrid L. Small, the celebrated boy violinist, assisted by Mr. Percy S. Hook, pianist, will give a recital in Steward's Hall on Friday evening, October 1, under the auspices of the Penticton Public Reading Room and Library. Here is a chance to hear an artist and at the same time assist a worthy public enterprise. Summerland and Naramata have gone wild with enthusiasm over Master Small's executions on the violin. This will be the last opportunity to hear him before he and Prof. Hook leave the valley on an extended concert tour, so don't miss it. The admission fee is set at the modest figure of 50c. for adults and 25c. for children, or reserved seats at 75c. You can't afford to miss it. Brirg the whole family. Remember next Friday evening, Steward's Hall, the Penticton Public Reading Room and Wilfrid Small.

B. C. Fruit at Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

(From Toronto Daily Star.)

"Go West, young man!" was the advice once given by Horace Greely to the youth of America, and no better advice can be given to-day. The "Golden West" has always had a fascinating charm about it, which many have been unable to resist, and now the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia has sent East to explain why this is. In the Agricultural Building are signs, and they are exceedingly attractive ones. Pears that have no rivals anywhere; peaches, plums, apples, grapes—all kinds of fruit in abundance—tell of the wonderful climate, and explain why British Columbia secured the highest awards in Great Britain, Canada and the United States. It is a fruit grower's paradise; the "Garden of the West." Some years ago it could not grow enough for home consumption; to-day it exports 6,000 tons annually. "Exaggerated reports place the yield of fruit in places at $1,000 an acre. This is far too high, but any properly-managed fruit farm should yield $150 an acre every year," said Mr. W. E. Scott, Exhibition Commissioner of British Columbia, who is in charge of the exhibit.

And not only fruit. There are fish, game, honey, timber, and minerals in profusion as no other country can boast. But, in as much as what is seen is more convincing than what is described, no visitor to the Fair should fail to see the wonders of Canada's Great Western Garden.

The Waterworks Question.

It may seem like harping on the one string to again refer to what we consider the most pressing requirement of Penticton at the present time—that of a domestic water supply. We have times without number referred to the natural advantages of Penticton, its situation, picturesqueness, climate, resources and other attractions. We have maintained that it has the brightest future of any of the Okanagan towns. Of this we are just as assured as we ever were, but we are equally assured that the realization of this hope rests upon the fulfillment of certain conditions by the inhabitants of the community. Talk, or high hopes, can never make a town; it requires action, prompt action, individual action and united action. "Faith without works is dead," but Penticton without waterworks will never see life.

There are two possible destinies for Penticton. One is a snug little community of prosperous fruit growers with a town, as at present, consisting of a few merchants and business men making a fair competence but nothing more. The alternative is a beautiful thriving city of some thousands of inhabitants, with good streets, fine business buildings, and beautiful residences with well kept lawns and gardens.

People with means will not settle in a place that does not possess modern conveniences. Why should they? Most of them have endured all the hardship they desire. They have made their money and now look for a place where they can enjoy life. If Penticton can afford them the means of enjoying life many will come here; if it cannot, they will go elsewhere. There is no place better suited for a resort than Penticton. Then give the people conveniences, make the place beautiful and they will flock to this point.

The need for a domestic water supply, both in the town and on the bench, eclipses every other need. No progress, no prosperity, no population need be expected until this want is met. Little, if any, move has been made during the past year to instal a water system. There has been some talk but no action, with the result that our population has decreaesd rather than increased. Many property owners, particularly on the bench, we are informed, are merely waiting for a domestic water supply to be installed before coming here to reside. Let us hasten their arrival. We must look to our Council to act upon this question without delay. There is no reason why it should be postponed for three, two, or even one year. If the proposition were pushed, we see no reason why a domestic water system should not be in operation early next summer. It can be done. It should be done. Then let us at it at once.

The School Stage.

We have previously pointed out the necessity for the School Board doing something to accommodate the children residing on the bench at a distance from town. It may not be so bad in summer, but in winter the attendance at school is, in some instances, rendered almost impossible. There should be either a new school opened on the bench or the Board should institute a stage for the conveyance of the pupils to and from school. In one instance, at least, a family have moved away, largely, if not solely, on account of the distance the children had to walk to school, and we are informed that others contemplate following. The duties of a Trustee Board comprise more than the engaging and dismissing of teachers, the payment of teachers' salaries, or the meeting of other current expenses, and we believe the providing of educational facilities for those on the outskirts of the municipality are among them.

W. R. King & Co.

During the past two weeks we have been busy placing in stock new fall goods in all the different lines we carry. We mention a few of the

and we cordially invite you to look over our stock.

Sweater Coats

Just the things for these cool evenings, in Norfolk and Sacque styles, for ladies, misses, men and boys. These are all hand-knit of best imported yarns. Take a look at them.

Boots & Shoes—(Special)

American made Patent Colt, in Button and Blutcher style for Ladies at $4.00 a pair; Men's at $4.50 a pair.

Flour.

Flour has dropped in price, and economical buyers should take advantage of the price while it is low as it is sure to go up again. Wheat is again soaring skywards, and flour prices will resume the high water mark again.

Purity and Royal Household 49 lb. sack $1.95; 100 lb. sacks $3.80.

Hats and Caps.

New styles in Men's Stiff and Soft Felt Hats. A good assortment of Caps to hand.

Broadway Clothing.

Our stock of clothing surpasses anything we have ever had. Workmanship, fit, style and material, combined, make this brand of clothing the best line in Canada to-day, and for genuine good value it cannot be beaten.

Let us show you our blue serges at $16.00 a suit, usually sold at a much higher figure.

Feed Wheat and Oats.

Oats, per sack - -	$1.75
Oat Chop, per sack - -	1.90
Wheat, per 100 lbs. - -	2.50

Lifebuoy Soap is delightfully refreshing for Bath or Toilet in. For washing underclothing it is unequalled. Cleanses and purifies.

Municipal Council.

The Municipal Council met in the Council Chamber on Sept. 17th, with the Reeve and Councillors Power, Murk and Hatch present. After the adoption of minutes of previous meeting, a communication from the Southern Okanagan Land Co., re control of dam on Penticton creek, was read and on motion of J. Power, seconded by S. W. Hatch, was referred to the Municipal Solicitor, Communications from Surveyor-General F. W. Richardson and L. Dierdorff were received and filed.

The Cemetery Committee reported that negotiations were proceeding in regard to the purchase of a suitable cemetery site.

The Works Committee reported that expert advice had been obtained as to the condition of the Smith Street bridge and had been advised that it was in a perfectly safe condition. On motion the report was adopted.

The agreement to be made with the Lake Shore Telephone Company was then discussed and the Clerk was instructed to submit a copy to the Company.

Moved by H. Murk, seconded by S. W. Hatch, that a committee be appointed by the Reeve to wait on the S. O. Land Co. with regard to the terms of the agreement for the Recreation Grounds. Carried.

Moved by H. Murk, seconded by S. W. Hatch, that whereas a sum of $1000 has been granted by the Provincial Government to the Municipality for improving the trunk roads within the Municipality, work to be done under the supervision of the Road Superintendent, Mr. Lang, and whereas it is getting late in the season, that the Road Superintendent be requested to allow the Municipality to proceed with the work as soon as possible. Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

THE CONQUEST of CANAAN

By BOOTH TARKINGTON,
Author of "Cherry," "Monsieur Beaucaire," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

After a time the old man got up, went to his easel near a window and, sighing again, began patiently to work upon one of these failures—a portrait in oil of a savage old lady, which he was doing from a photograph. The expression of the mouth and the shape of the nose had not pleased her descendants and the beneficiaries under the will, and it was upon the images of these features that Roger labored. He leaned far forward, with his face close to the canvas, holding his brushes after the Spencerian fashion, working steadily through the afternoon and when the light grew dimmer, leaning closer to his canvas to see. When it had become almost dark in the room he lit a student lamp with a green glass shade and, placing it upon a table beside him, continued to paint. Ariel's voice interrupted him at last.

"It's quitting time, grandfather," she called gently from the doorway behind him.

He sank back in his chair, conscious for the first time of how tired he had grown. "I suppose so," he said, "though it seemed to me I was just getting my hand in." His eyes brightened for a moment. "I declare, I believe I've caught it a great deal better. Come and look, Ariel. Doesn't it seem to you that I'm getting it? Those pearly shadows in the flesh"—

"I'm sure of it. Those people ought to be very proud to have it." She came to him quietly, took the palette and brushes from his hands and began to clean them, standing in the shadow behind him. "It's too good for them."

"No," he murmured in return. "You can do much better yourself. Your sketches show it."

"No, no!" she protested quickly.

"Yes, they do, and I wondered if it was only because you were young. But those I did when I was young are almost the same as the ones I paint now. I haven't learned much. There hasn't been any one to show me. And you can't learn from print, never! Yet I've grown in what I see—grown so that the world is full of beauty to me that I never dreamed of seeing when I began. But I can't paint it. I can't get it on the canvas. Ah, I think I might have known how to if I hadn't had to teach myself, if I could only have seen how some of the other fellows did their work. If I'd ever saved money to get away from Canaan—if I could have gone away from it and come back knowing how to paint it—if I could have got to Paris for just one month! Paris for just one month!"

"Perhaps we will. You can't tell what may happen." It was always her reply to this cry of his.

"You're young, you're young." He smiled indulgently. "What were you doing all this afternoon, child?"

"In my room, trying to make over mamma's wedding dress for tonight."

"Tonight?"

"Mamie Pike invited me to a dance at their house."

"Very well. I'm glad you're going to be gay," he said, not seeing the faintly bitter smile that came to her face.

"I don't think I'll be very gay," she answered. "I don't know why I go. Nobody ever asks me to dance."

"Why not?" he asked, with an old man's astonishment.

"I don't know. Perhaps it's because I [illegible] dress very well." Then, as he made a sorrowful gesture, she cut him off before he could speak. "Oh, it isn't altogether because we're poor. It's more I don't know how to wear what I've got, the way some girls do. I never cared much and—well, I'm not worrying, Roger. And I think I've done a good deal with mamma's dress. It's a very grand dress. I wonder I never thought of wearing it until today. I may be"—she laughed and blushed—"I may be the belle of the ball—who knows!"

"If I could have got to Paris for just one month!"

"You'll want me to walk over with you and come for you afterward, I expect."

"Only to take me. It may be late when I come away—if a good many should ask me to dance for once. Of course I could come home alone. But Joe Louden is going to sort of hang around outside, and he'll meet me at the gate and see me safe home."

"Oh!" he exclaimed blankly.

"Isn't it all right?"

"I think I'd better come for you," he answered gently. "The truth is, I—I think you'd better not be with Joe Louden a great deal."

"Why?"

"Well, he doesn't seem a vicious boy to me, but I'm afraid he's getting rather a bad name, my dear."

"He's not getting one," she said gravely. "He's already got one. He's had a bad name in Canaan for a long while. It grew in the first place out of shabbiness and mischief, but it did grow, and if people keep on giving him a bad name the time will come when he'll live up to it. He's not any worse than I am, and I guess my own name isn't too good—for a girl. And yet, so far, there's nothing against him except his bad name."

"I'm afraid there is," said Roger. "It doesn't look very well for a young man of his age to be doing no better than delivering papers."

"It gives him time to study law," she answered quickly. "If he clerked all day in a store he couldn't."

"I didn't know he was studying now. I thought I'd heard that he was in a lawyer's office for a few weeks last year and was turned out for setting fire to it with a pipe"—

"It was an accident," she interposed. "But some pretty important papers were burned, and after that none of the other lawyers would have him."

"He's not in an office," she admitted. "I didn't mean that. But he studies a great deal. He goes to the courts all the time they're in session, and he's bought some books of his own."

"Well, perhaps," he assented, "but they say he gambles and drinks and that last week Judge Pike threatened to have him arrested for throwing dice with some negroes behind the judge's stable."

"What of it? I'm about the only nice person in town that will have anything to do with him—and nobody except you thinks I'm very nice!"

"Ariel! Ariel!"

"I know all about his gambling with darkies," she continued excitedly, her voice rising, "and I know that he goes to saloons and that he's an intimate friend of half the riffraff in town. And I know the reason for it, too, because he's told me. He wants to know them, to understand them, and he says some day they'll make him a power, and then he can help them!"

The old man laughed helplessly. "But I can't let him bring you home, my dear."

She came to him slowly and laid her hands upon his shoulders. Grandfather and granddaughter were nearly of the same height, and she looked squarely into his eyes. "Then you must say it is because you want to come for me, not because I mustn't come with Joe."

"But I think it is a little because you mustn't come with Joe," he answered, "especially from the Pikes'. Don't you see that it mightn't be well for Joe himself if the judge should happen to see him? I understand he warned the boy to keep away from the neighborhood entirely or he would have him locked up for dice throwing. The judge is a very influential man, you know, and as determined in matters like this as he is irritable."

"Oh, if you put it on that ground," the girl replied, her eyes softening, "I think you'd better come for me yourself."

"Very well, I put it on that ground," he returned, smiling upon her.

"Then I'll send Joe word and get supper," she said, kissing him.

It was the supper hour not only for them, but everywhere in Canaan, and the cold air of the streets bore up and down and around corners the smell of things frying. The dining room windows of all the houses threw bright patches on the snow of the side yards. The windows of other rooms, except those of the kitchens, were dark, for the rule of the place was Puritanical in thrift, as in all things, and the good housekeepers disputed every record of the meters with unhappy gas collectors.

There was no better housekeeper in town than Mrs Louden, nor a thriftier, but hers was one of the few houses in Canaan that evening which showed bright lights in the front rooms while the family were at supper. It was proof of the agitation caused by the arrival of Eugene that she forgot to turn out the gas in her parlor and in the chamber she called a library on her way to the evening meal.

Joe escaped as soon as he could, though not before the count of his latest sins had been set before Eugene in detail, in mass and in all of their depth, breadth and thickness. His father spoke but once after nodding heavily to confirm all points of Mrs. Louden's recital.

"You better use any influence you've got with your brother," he said to Eugene, "to make him come to time. I can't do anything with him. If he gets in trouble, he needn't come to me! I'll never help him again. I'm tired of it!"

Joe's movements throughout the earlier part of that evening are of uncertain report. It is known that he made a partial payment of 45 cents at a secondhand book store for a number of volumes, "Grindstaff on Torts" and some others, which he had negotiated on the installment system. It is also believed that he won 28 cents playing seven-up in the little room behind Louie Farbach's bar, but these things are of little import compared to the established fact that at 11 o'clock he was one of the ball guests at the Pike mansion. He took no active part in the festivities, nor was he one of the dancers. His was, on the contrary, the role of a quiet observer. He lay stretched at full length upon the floor of the inclosed porch—one of the strips of canvas was later found to have been loosened—wedged between the outer railing and a row of palms in green tubs.

It was not to play eavesdropper that the uninvited Joe had come. He was not there to listen, and it is possible that had the curtains of other windows afforded him the chance to behold the dance he might not have risked the dangers of his present position. He had not the slightest interest in the whispered coquetries that he heard. He watched only to catch now and then over the shoulders of the dancers a fitful glimpse of a pretty head that flitted across the window—the amber hair of Mamie Pike. He shivered in the drafts, and the floor of the porch was cement, painful to elbow and knee, the space where he lay cramped and narrow, but the golden bubbles of her hair, the shimmer of her dainty pink dress and the fluffy wave of her lace scarf as she crossed and recrossed in a waltz left him apparently in no discontent. He watched with parted lips, his pale cheeks reddening whenever those fair glimpses were his. At last she came out to the veranda with Eugene and sat upon a little divan, so close to Joe that, daring wildly in the shadow, he reached out a trembling hand and let his fingers rest upon the end of her scarf, which had fallen from her shoulders and touched the floor. She sat with her back to him, as did Eugene.

"You have changed, I think, since last summer," he heard her say reflectively.

"For the worse, ma cherie?" Joe's expression might have been worth seeing when Eugene said "ma cherie," for it was known in the Louden household that Mr. Bantry had failed to pass his examination in the French language.

"No," she answered. "But you have seen so much and accomplished so much since then. You have become so polished and so"— She paused and then continued: "But perhaps I'd better not say it. You might be offended."

"No. I want you to say it," he returned confidently, and his confidence was fully justified, for she said:

"Well, then, I mean that you have become so thoroughly a man of the world. Now I've said it! You are offended, aren't you?"

"Not at all; not at all," replied Mr. Bantry, preventing by a masterful effort his pleasure from showing in his face.

"Then I'm—glad," she whispered, and Joe saw his stepbrother touch her hand, but she rose quickly. "There's the music," she cried happily. "It's a waltz, and it's yours."

Joe heard her little high heels tapping gayly toward the window, followed by the heavier tread of Eugene, but he did not watch them go.

He lay on his back, with the hand that had touched Mamie's scarf pressed across his closed eyes.

The music of the waltz was of the old fashioned swingingly sorrowful sort, and it would be hard to say how long it was after that before he could hear the air played without a recurrence of the bitterness of that moment. The rhythmical pathos of the violins was in such accord with a faint sound of weeping which he heard near him presently that for a little while he believed this sound to be part of the music and part of himself. Then it became more distinct, and he raised himself on one elbow to look about.

Very close to him, sitting upon the divan in the shadow, was a girl wearing a dress of beautiful silk. She was crying softly, her face in her hands.

CHAPTER IV.

ARIEL had worked all the afternoon over her mother's wedding gown, and two hours were required by her toilet for the dance. She curled her hair frizzily, burning it here and there with a slate pencil heated over a lamp chimney, and she placed above one ear three or four large artificial roses, taken from an old hat of her mother's, which she had found in a trunk in the storeroom. Possessing no slippers, she carefully blacked and polished her shoes, which had been clumsily resoled, and fastened into the strings of each small rosettes of red ribbon, after which she practiced swinging the train of her skirt until she was proud of her manipulation of it. She had no powder, but found in her grandfather's room a lump of magnesia that he was in the habit of taking for heartburn and passed it over and over her brown face and hands. Then a lingering gaze into her small mirror gave her joy at last. She yearned so hard to see herself charming that she did see herself so. Admiration came, and she told herself that she was more attractive to look at than she had ever been in her life and that perhaps at last she might begin to be sought for like other girls.

It was in the Pike dressing room that the change began to come. There was a big cheval glass at one end of the room, and she faced it when her turn came—for the mirror was popular—with a sinking spirit. There was the contrast, like a picture painted and framed. The other girls all wore their hair after the fashion introduced to Canaan by Mamie Pike the week before on her return from a visit to Chicago. None of them had "crimped" and none had bedecked their tresses with artificial flowers. Her alterations of the wedding dress had not been successful; the skirt was too short in front and higher on one side than on the other, showing too plainly the heavy soled shoes, which had lost their polish in the walk through the snow. The ribbon rosettes were fully revealed, and as she glanced at their reflection she heard the words, "Look at that train and those rosettes!" whispered behind her and saw in the mirror two pretty young women turn away with their handkerchiefs over their mouths and retreat hurriedly to an alcove. All the feet in the room except Ariel's were in dainty kid or satin slippers of the color of the dresses from which they glimmered out, and only Ariel wore a train.

She went away from the mirror and pretended to be busy with a hanging thread in her sleeve.

Ariel sat in one of the chairs against the wall and watched the dancers with a smile of eager and benevolent interest. In Canaan no parents, no guardians, no aunts were haled forth o' nights to duenna the junketings of youth. Ariel sat conspicuously alone. There was nothing else for her to do. It was not an easy matter.

Once or twice between the dances she saw Miss Pike speak appealingly to one of the superfluous, glancing at the same time in her own direction, and Ariel could see, too, that the appeal proved unsuccessful, until at last Mamie approached her leading Norbert Flitcroft partly by the hand, partly by will power. Norbert was an excessively fat boy and at the present moment looked as patient as the blind. But he asked Ariel if she was "engaged for the next dance" and, Mamie having flitted away, stood disconsolately beside her waiting for the music to begin. Ariel was grateful for him.

The orchestra flourished into "La Paloma;" he put his arm mournfully about her and, taking her right hand with his left, carried her arm out to a rigid right angle, beginning to pump and balance for time. They made three false starts and then got away. Ariel danced badly; she hopped and lost the step, but they persevered, bumping against other couples continually.

She caught her partner making a burlesque face of suffering over her shoulder and, turning her head quickly, saw for whose benefit he had constructed it. Eugene Bantry, flying expertly by with Mamie, was bestowing upon Mr. Flitcroft a condescendingly commiserative wink. The next instant she tripped in her train and fell to the floor at Eugene's feet, carrying her partner with her.

There was a shout of laughter. The young hostess stopped Eugene, who would have gone on, and he had no choice but to stoop to Ariel's assistance.

"It seems to be a habit of mine," she said, laughing loudly.

She did not appear to see the hand he offered, but got to her feet without help and walked quickly away with Norbert, who proceeded to live up to the character he had given himself.

"Perhaps we had better not try it again," she laughed.

"Well, I should think not," he returned, with the frankest gloom. With the air of conducting her home he took her to the chair against the wall whence he had brought her. There his responsibility for her seemed to cease. "Will you excuse me?" he asked, and there was no doubt that he felt that he had been given more than his share that evening, even though he was fat.

Ariel sat through more dances, interminable dances and intermissions, in that same chair, in which, it began to seem, she was to live out the rest of her life. Now and then if she thought people were looking at her as they passed she broke into a laugh and nodded slightly, as if still amused over her mishap.

After a long time she rose and, laughing cheerfully to Mr. Flitcroft, who was standing in the doorway and replied with a wan smile, stepped out quickly into the hall, where she almost ran into her greatuncle, Jonas Tabor. He was going toward the big front doors with Judge Pike, having just come out of the latter's library, down the hall.

Jonas was breathing heavily and was shockingly pale, though his eyes were very bright. He turned his back upon his grandniece sharply and went out of the door. Ariel turned from him quite as abruptly and re-entered the room whence she had come. She laughed again to her fat friend as she passed him and, still laughing, went toward the fatal chair, when her eyes caught sight of Eugene Bantry and Mamie coming in through the window. She went to the window and looked out. The porch seemed deserted and was faintly illuminated by a few Japanese lanterns. She sprang out, dropped upon the divan and, burying her face in her hands, cried heartbrokenly. Presently she felt something alive touch her foot, and, her breath catching with alarm, she started to rise. A thin hand, issuing from a shabby sleeve, had stolen out between two of the green tubs and was pressing upon one of her shoes.

"Sh!" said Joe. "Don't make a noise! What were you crying about?"

"Nothing," she said, the tears not ceasing to gather in her eyes.

"I want to know what it was," he insisted. "Didn't the fools ask you to dance? Well, what do you care about that for?"

"I don't," she answered; "I don't." Then suddenly, without being able to prevent it, she sobbed.

She gave way all at once to a gust of sorrow and bitterness. She bent far over and caught his hand and laid it against her wet cheek. "Oh, Joe," she whispered brokenly, "I think we have such hard lives, you and I! It doesn't seem right while we're so young! Why can't we be like the others? Why can't we have some of the fun?"

He withdrew his hand with the embarrassment and shame he would have felt had she been a boy. "Get out!" he said feebly.

She did not seem to notice, but, still stooping, rested her elbows on her knees and her face in her hands. "I try so hard to have fun, to be like the rest, and it's always a mistake, always, always, always!" She rocked herself slightly from side to side. "I am a fool, it's the truth, or I wouldn't have come tonight. I want to be attractive. I want to be in things. I want to laugh like they do."

They made three false starts and then got away

"I'll tell you something," Joe whispered, chuckling desperately. "Gene made me unpack his trunk, and I don't believe he's as great a man at college as he is here. I opened one of his books, and some one had written in it, 'Prigamaloo Bantry, the Class Try-to-Be!' He'd never noticed, and you ought to have heard him go on! You'd have just died, Ariel. I almost bust wide open. It was a mean trick in me, but I couldn't help showing it to him."

Joe's object was obtained. She stopped crying and, wiping her eyes, smiled faintly. Then she became grave. "You're jealous of Eugene," she said.

He considered this for a moment. "Yes," he answered thoughtfully; "I am. But I wouldn't think about him differently on that account. And I wouldn't talk about him to any one but you."

"You must go away," she said anxiously. "Oh, please, Joe!"

"Not yet. I want"—

She coughed loudly. Eugene and Mamie Pike had come to the window, with the evident intention of occupying the veranda; but, perceiving Ariel engaged with threads in her sleeve, they turned away and disappeared. Other couples looked out from time to time and, finding the solitary figure in possession, retreated abruptly to seek stairways and remote corners for the things they were impelled to say.

And so Ariel held the porch for three dances and three intermissions, occupying a great part of the time with entreaties that her obdurate and reckless companion should go. When for the fourth time the music sounded, her agitation had so increased that she was visibly trembling. "I can't stand it, Joe," she said, bending over him.

PART IV.,

"WATER CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION ACT, 1897."

WHEREAS the Southern Okanagan Power Company, Limited, has applied to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in Council under section 87 of the said Act, to enable the said Company to proceed with its undertaking:

And whereas the Company has filed with the Clerk of the Executive Council the documents required by section 85 of the said Act, and the plans showing the situation of the proposed undertaking and the works of the Company:

This is to certify that the said Southern Okanagan Power Company, Limited, was duly incorporated the 21st day of August, 1905, as a power and lighting company, and that the present works and undertaking of the Company, as submitted, have been approved, and the same are as follows:

1. The construction of a dam or diversion wall at a point at the outlet of Dog Lake, in the Similkameen Division of Yale, British Columbia, at that point on the Okanagan River known as Okanagan Falls, the said wall to be built from a point on a small island known as 1101 rock, and from thence easterly to the eastern bank of the said Okanagan River, and from a point on the said rock northerly ninety-nine (99) feet or thereabouts to a point in the centre of the stream.

2. The construction of a canal, flume or ditch, or canals, flumes and ditches from the said point of diversion easterly and southerly following the line approximately of the said Okanagan River to a point one-quarter (¼) of a mile or thereabouts southerly from the said point of diversion on the eastern bank of the said river, and all roads, bridges and other works necessary therefor.

3. The construction and erection of a power-house and power plant, sufficient for the generation of electricity for the purposes set out herein, on portion of Lot ten (10) in the said District, to be acquired from the Southern Okanagan Land Company, Limited, and all necessary works incidental thereto, or in connection therewith.

4. The construction, operation and maintenance of a system for irrigation of lands within a radius of one hundred (100) miles from the Company's proposed works, and the supply of water to farmers, owners of land, development companies, or any other persons, as the Company shall deem meet, for the irrigation of land; the laying of mains, flumes, canals along the public highways, or, if necessary, on private property, with the right to cross and re-cross the said highways, provided, however, that the Company restore the surface of any such highways to a proper condition as speedily as possible, and that the Company take due and proper precaution for the protection of the public travelling along and on the said highways.

5. The construction, operation and maintenance of a complete lighting and telephone system in and throughout the said district, being a radius of one hundred (100) miles from the said Company's power house; the erection of telephone or light poles along the sides of the said highways with the right to cross and re-cross the said highways, and the erection of telephone poles where necessary on private property; the wires to be securely strung along the said poles not less than twenty (20) feet from the ground.

And this is to certify that the Southern Okanagan Power Company, Limited, shall have subscribed before it commences the construction of that portion of the undertaking and works specified in clauses one and two herein the sum of twenty thousand (20,000) dollars, and such capital shall be subscribed within twelve months from the date hereof.

And the times within which the works and undertakings set forth in paragraphs one and two herein are to be commenced and completed are twelve months and two years respectively, from the date hereof.

The Company shall have subscribed before it commences the construction of that portion of the Company's undertaking and works set forth in paragraph three (3) herein the sum of thirty thousand (30,000) dollars, and such capital shall be subscribed within twelve months from the completion of that portion of the Company's undertaking set forth in paragraphs one and two herein.

And the times within which that portion of the Company's works and undertaking set forth in paragraph three herein are to be commenced and completed are three and four years, respectively, from the date hereof.

The Company shall have subscribed before it commences the construction of that portion of the undertaking and works set forth in paragraphs four and five herein the sum of fifty thousand (50,000) dollars, and such capital shall be subscribed within twelve months from the completion of the work set forth in paragraphs three and four herein.

And the times within which that portion of the Company's works and undertaking set forth in paragraphs four and five herein is to be commenced is five years from the date hereof.

And subject, as aforesaid, such application is hereby approved. 10-5

NARAMATA.

Messrs. W. J. Robinson and J. W. S. Logie spent last Sunday in town.

Mr. Wells, who recently bought an interest in the Naramata Supply Co., has assumed charge of the store.

Mr. J. H. Small, of Vancouver, spent Sunday in town, the guest of Prof. Hook.

Mr. George Wolstencroft spent a few days this week in Summerland on business in connection with the Trust Co.

It is understood that Prof. Hook is soon to start out on a concert tour with Master Wilfrid L. Small, the boy violinist. This decision was partly an outcome of the magnificent reception accorded the appearance of these artists at the recent concert in Summerland. Mr. Small, the boy's father, will for a while act as advance agent.

Showers! Showers! Showers! Plenty of them this week, but the one that drew the biggest crowd was a "Kitchen Shower" in honor of a very popular young lady, Miss Hatfield, a member of the Unity Club. The function referred to, took place on Friday last at the home of Mrs. T. R. Wellband, and was occasioned by a well-founded rumour of Miss Hatfield's approaching marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. McNeil, of St. John, N. B., were visitors at Mr. Allan's this week.

J. S. Kirk, provincial surveyor, with road superintendent H. Lang, have been at work recently on a projected road north of town.

Messrs. Will, Jack, and Campbell Robinson started this week for Toronto, where they will resume their course in McMaster University. The two former having completed their degree course, are now preparing for special work, Will for medicine, Jack for law.

The ten o'clock service this coming Sabbath will likely be the farewell service by Rev. N. L. Bradley. There will be special music provided by Master Wilfred L. Small and Prof. Hook, and possibly, too, the Penticton Methodist Choir will assist.

The Brown Brothers Company
Nurserymen, - of Ontario

Are extensive growers of all kinds of Fruit Trees, Shrubs, Roses, and Ornamental Trees, and the members of the firm are all practical nurserymen of 25 years experience, and have built up the most successful and extensive business of the kind in Canada.

The growing of the stock, as well as every other detail in connection with the work, is personally superintended by the individual members of the firm, and they work on the plan that the best is none too good for their customers.

We have made large shipments of trees into the Okanagan Valley and can give the names of the largest planters in that district, who have planted our stock successfully, if desired.

Our trees are grown in the famous Niagara district, in Ontario, in a climate very similar to that of the Okanagan Valley, and our trees are consequently better suited to the needs of planters there, than are the Coast stock, being more hardy in the wood, with a more abundant supply of fibrous roots, which count for much in making an investment in an orchard a safe and permanent one.

We shall be pleased to hear from prospective planters, with a view to supplying them with the best grade of trees, true to name.

We wish to secure the services of a good reliable man to represent us at Penticton and vicinity, and will make liberal terms to the right party, for all, or a part of his time.
