GEORGE MORROW TO RUN IN COMOX-ATLIN

This Time it Will be as "An Independent Liberal"—Announcement of Mr. Morrow's Intention Has Been Received by Several Intimate Friends

Another candidate is in the field for the constituency of Comox-Atlin in the person of Mr. George Morrow. His intention to contest the constituency was announced to several intimate friends by today's mail.

It has been known for a long time that Mr. Morrow was very ambitious to represent the constituency in the House of Commons, and that his withdrawal from the city after his defeat for alderman last year, had not destroyed his ambition for Federal honors. The chief doubt had been as to under whose banner Mr. Morrow would run, as of late years he has been associated with both political parties.

One well known local Conservative announced on Saturday evening that his friends were trying to induce Mr. Morrow to run as an independent Liberal in the hope that it would take away from the Liberal strength.

In his announcement, Mr. Morrow states that he will contest the constituency as an independent Liberal.

So far no name has been put forward as the Conservative standard bearer, but a convention has been called for the purpose of electing a candidate.

THE SCAVENGING MONOPOLY

Tonight the city council will meet in session. One of the items of the business will be the final disposition of Alderman Hilditch's by-law to create a scavenging monopoly. The by-law has passed three readings, and will come up for ratification—or rejection.

The old method of collecting and disposing of garbage by licensed scavenging firms was not a satisfactory one. No one is anxious to have it continued. It was a crude and costly way, and only utilised in emergency until the city could formulate a better plan. Nothing herein said is to be construed as an argument for reviving the old system of collection by private scavenging firms. As a system, it was almost as obnoxious as the creation of the scavenging monopoly, for while theoretically in competition with each other, scavengers, like competing railroads, soon learn the value of making a gentleman's agreement to maintain rates and get all they can out of the public.

The creation of the scavenging monopoly under a private contractor, is all the more suspicious, because the council do not believe in the private contract system. Alderman Hilditch himself, led the council's cry for a public works department.

Yet on the question of city scavenging—a work which owing to its relation to public health and comfort should above all others be looked after by the city—Alderman Hilditch has fathered the by-law to create a scavenging monopoly under a private contractor.

What is the reason—? —?

If it is possible for a private citizen to undertake the collection of garbage for a sum which pays for the cost of the service rendered and leaves him a surplus as profits, why should not the city undertake the work and save that surplus-profit for the citizens. Any other plan makes the city a party to a scheme whereby the citizens will have to pay for the actual cost of the work, plus an extra sum for rake off or profits.

It is true that the council have offered as an explanation for their action that they were obliged to give the work to a private contractor as they could not buy horses, only teams. But this is quite too thin for acceptance. A council which feels it is capable of undertaking a $500,000 hydro-electric scheme, knows enough to buy a team and divide it, even if it were really impossible for anyone to buy single horses.

Already complaints are coming in from citizens of alleged high-handed treatment from the scavengers. Several people in small shacks have been told that the charge will be 50 cents a visit. The schedule states that the total cost of garbage and night soil collection is to be 50 cents per month.

Does this mean that the contractors will only call once a month at shacks and cabins?

If so, the council had better vote $50,000 for a new typhoid wing to the Hospital, in readiness for the inevitable.

The News does not expect that the proposed by-law will be rejected. It is all too much of a kind with the extra hour to the hotels, the reduction of theatre license, the reduction of bar-tenders' licenses, the creation of bottle licenses, the payment of the disputed printing account, the patronage system, and the other distinctive works of the Manson administration. There are not enough public-spirited men on the council to defeat it. It will pass through all right.

But before the council pass the scavenging monopoly by-law, we invite them to take up the clause which states how often the scavenging is to be done. At present the clause reads "as often as is necessary." That means nothing. That may mean once a year, or once a month, or once a week. It will more likely mean once a month than once a week.

If a pig ranch is to be run in connection with the monopoly, it may mean "as often as is necessary to procure swill for the pigs."

There is another question that should be settled before the city is bound over to the garbage monopoly. That refers to the right of citizens to destroy their own garbage, if the monopoly fails to give proper service.

If trouble ensues, or a once-a-month service is inaugurated, can a citizen be fined or a private carter be fined if they undertake to protect the public health by destroying their own garbage?

Or if a public spirited citizen, prefers to build an incinerator at the back of his lot and destroy his own garbage rather than contribute to the coffers of the garbage monopoly, is he to be made the subject of a police prosecution?

A REMINISCENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEVIL'S FOOT

BY ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Copyright, 1911, by the Century Syndicate

"You will remember, Watson," he remarked one afternoon, "that there is a single common point of resemblance in the varying reports which have reached us. This concerns the effect of the atmosphere of the room in each case upon those who have first entered it. You will recollect that Mortimer Tregennis, in describing the episode of his last visit ot his brothers' house, remarked that the doctor on entering the room fell into a chair? You had forgotten? Well, I can answer for it that it was so. Now, you will remember also that Mrs. Porter, the housekeeper, told us that she herself fainted upon entering the room and had afterwards opened the window. In the second case—that of Mortimer Tregennis himself—you cannot have forgotten the horrible stuffiness of the room when we arrived, though the servant had thrown open the window. That servant, I found upon inquiry, was so ill that she had gone to her bed. You will admit, Watson, that these facts are very suggestive. In each case there is evidence of a poisonous atmosphere. In each case, also, there is combustion going on in the room—in the one case a fire, in the other a lamp. The fire was needed, but the lamp was lit—as a comparison of the oil consumed will show—long after it was broad daylight. Why? Surely because there is some connection between three things—the burning, the stuffy atmosphere, and, finally, the madness or death of those unfortunate people. That is clear, is it not?"

"It would appear so."

At least we may accept it as a working hypothesis. We will suppose, then, that something was burned in each case which produced an atmosphere causing strange toxic effects. Very good. In the first instance—that of the Tregennis family—this substance was placed in the fire. Now, the window was shut, but the fire would naturally carry fumes to some extent up the chimney. Hence one would expect that the effects of the poison to be less in the second case, where there was less escape for the vapour. The result seems to indicate that it was so, since in the first case only the woman, who had presumably the more sensitive organism, was killed, the others exhibiting that temporary or permanent lunacy which is evidently the first effect of the drug. In the second case the result was complete. The facts, therefore, seem to bear out the theory of a poison which worked by combustion.

"With this train of reasoning in my head I naturally looked about in Mortimer Tregennis's room to find some remains of this substance. The obvious place to look was the talc shield or smoke guard of the lamp. There, sure enough I perceived a number of flaky ashes, and round the edges a fringe of brownish powder, which had not yet been consumed. Half of this I took, as you saw, and I placed it in an envelope."

"Why half, Holmes?"

"It is not for me, my dear Watson, to stand in the way of the official police force. I leave them all the evidence which I found. The poison still remained upon the talc, had they the wit to find it. Now, Watson, we will light our lamp; we will, however, take the precaution to open our window to avoid the premature decease of two deserving members of society, and you will seat yourself near that open window in an arm-chair—unless, like a sensible man, you determine to have nothing to do with the affair. Oh, you will see it out, will you? I thought I knew my Watson. This chair I will place opposite yours, so that we may be the same distance from the poison, and face to face. The door we will leave ajar. Each is now in a position to watch the other and to bring the experiment to an end should the symptoms seem alarming. Is that all clear? Well, then, I take our powder—or what remains of it—from the envelope, and I lay it above the burning lamp. So? No, Watson, let us sit down and await developments."

They were not long in coming. I had hardly settled in my chair before I was conscious of a thick, musky odour, subtle and nauseous. At the very first whiff of it my brain and my imagination were beyond all control. A thick, black cloud swirled before my eyes, and my mind told me that in this cloud, unseen as yet, but about to spring out upon my appalled senses, lurked all that was vaguely horrible, all that was monstrous and inconceivably wicked in the universe. Vague shapes swirled and swam amid the dark cloud-bank, each a menace and a warning of something coming, the advent of some unspeakable dweller upon the threshold, whose very shadow would blast my soul. A freezing horror took possession of me. I felt that my hair was rising, that my eyes were protuding, that my mouth was opened, and my tongue like leather. The turmoil within my brain was such that something must surely snap. I tried to scream, and was vaguely aware of some hoarse croak which was my own voice, but distant and detached from myself. At the same moment, in some effort of escape, I broke through that cloud of despair, and had a glimpse of Holmes's face, white, rigid, and drawn with horror—the very look which I had seen upon the features of the dead. It was that vision which gave me an instant of sanity and of strength. I dashed from my chair, threw my arms round Holmes, and together we lurched through the door, and an instant afterwards had thrown ourselves down upon the grassplot and were lying side by side, conscious only of the glorious sunshine which was bursting its way through the hellish cloud of terror which had girt us in. Slowly it rose from our souls like the mists from a landscape, until peace and reason had returned, and we were sitting up on the grass, wiping our clammy foreheads, and looking with apprehension at each other to mark the last traces of that terrific experience which we had undergone.

"Upon my word, Watson!" said Holmes at last with an unsteady voice, "I owe you both my thanks and an apology. It was an unjustifiable experiment even for oneself, and doubly so for a friend. I am really very sorry."

"You know," I answered, with some emotion, for I had never seen so much of Holmes's heart before, "that it is my greatest joy and privilege to help you."

He relapsed at once into the half-humorous, half-cynical vein which was his habitual attitude to those about him. "It would be superfluous to drive us mad, my dear Watson," said he. "A candid observer would certainly declare that we were so already before we embarked upon so wild an experiment. I confess that I never imagined that the effect could be so sudden and so severe." He dashed into the cottage, and, reappearing with the burning lamp held at full arm's length, he threw it among a bank of brambles. "We must give the room a little time to clear. I take it Watson, that you have no longer a shadow of a doubt as to how these tragedies were produced?"

"But the cause remains as obscure as before. Come into the arbour here, and let us discuss it together. That villainous stuff seems to still linger round my throat. I think we must admit that all the evidence points to this man, Mortimer Tregennis, having been the criminal in the first tragedy, though he was the victim in the second one. We must remember, in the first place, that there is some story of a family quarrel, followed by a reconciliation. How bitter that quarrel may have been, or how hollow the reconciliation, we cannot tell. Whh reconciliation, we cannot tell. When I think of Mortimer Tregennis, with the foxy face and the small shrewd, beady eyes behind the spectacles, he is not a man whom I should judge to be of a particularly forgiving disposition. Well, in the next place you will remember that this idea of someone moving in the garden, which took our attention for a moment from the real cause of the tragedy, emanated from him. He had a motive in misleading us. Finally, if he hid not throw this substance into the fire at the moment of leaving the room, who did so? The affair happened immediately after his departure. Had anyone else come in, the family would certainly have risen from the table. Besides, in peaceful Cornwall, visitors do not arrive after ten o'clock at night. We may take it, then, that all the evidence points to Mortimer Tregennis as the culprit."

"Then his own death was suicide!"

UNCLE JERRY ATTRACTS NOTICE

Vancouver "World" Reporter Spies Him Motoring in Vancouver.

A cloud of dust chased behind a big six-cylinder auto car. A big genial-faced man in a specially made Stetson hat leaned back on the cushions beside his wife and hinted to the chaffeur that none of the occupants of the car would be frightened if the throttle was thrown wide open.

In a word "Uncle Jerry" had come to town from Prince Rupert, and was enjoying his first auto ride in several months in this several thousand dollar car, which he had been laying up in a local garage since he went north last summer.

Mr. Jeremiah H. Kugler is, so the human compediums from the Skeena River country maintain, the livest wire up there. He is a real estate agent, and is here to see 30 put at the bottom of some fair sized sales of fruit lands and Rupert real estate.

Before going to Prince Rupert Mr. Kugler was a banker back in that financial hive known as Wall street. The advantages of the fruit lands he owns along the Skeena River have been advertised in every leading paper published in Canada and the country to the south.

As to the future of Prince Rupert and the surrounding country, Uncle Jerry says that the best testimony that he can offer is the fact that he is in business there and is going back next week to stay.—Vancouver World.

Naden and an impression existed that he was to be away for several weeks. It was only a week's holiday jaunt, however, and all who have enquired where the doctor would be back are informed that he is now in town.

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

SMART AFTERNOON GOWN

Above sketch from an im-pot ted model, possesses possibilities for the girl with a small, limited income. Bodice and upper part of skirt are twine colored chiffon voile and the deep band of lace (which is heavy linen thread) matches in color. The whole gown is made over emerald green satin as are the short sleeeves, the latter finished with three tiny accordion plaited ruffles of chiffon in same color as voile. A narrow band of stain tops the bodice where it joins the gathered yoke of chiffon.

HANDY HOME HELPS

Embroidery, Rug Hint, and Cleaning

Protect embroideries that come to the bottom of the skirt by placing a scant ruffle of lace back of the scallops. The lace should extend a half-inch below the scallops. This adds to the appearance of a lingerie frock.

✿ ✿ ✿

The way to handle large rugs is to have a pole heavier than a clothes-prop. Preferably the pole should be round, but will answer if the edges are rounded off to make it octagonal. Roll the rug on this, and it can then be lifted and carried easily.

✿ ✿ ✿

Lukewarm water and fine soap will remove fats from fast-colored woolens, while tar and wagon grease will yield to lard rubbed on, then soaped and allowed to lie for an hour or so. Afterward wash alternately in water and spirits of turpentine.

Some Beautiful Dresses

The visit of May Roberts who commences her engagement in "The Thief" at the Empress Theatre tomorrow night, will have a special interest for the ladies of Prince Rupert, owing to the superb wardrobe which Miss Roberts possesses. It is all of purely Parisian production, having been specially designed and made for Miss Roberts' present tour by Parisian modistes during her recent visit to the French capital.

GREW BAKED APPLES

This is the Champion Hot Weather Story from Toronto

The Toronto Star is responsible for the following:

"Baked apples, cooked by Old Sol in his last record-breaking stunt, were brought to The Star office this morning by Mr. George Goyne of 19 Wayland avenue, East Toronto.

"Mr. Goyne states that the apples, over a dozen of them, were half-cooked on. the tree, as they appeared actually half-browned as if they had been in an oven, and did not fall off the tree, but were plucked by him last evening.

"'They were all right last Sunday,'" said Mr. Goyne. "'The same thing happened to currants and gooseberries. They were literally cooked on the bushes where exposed to the sun.'"

IN THE LAUNDRY

Exactly what will Help the Busy Housewife Best

A safe bleaching agent for cuffs and collars, handerkchiefs, etc., is pure borax. Dissolve a spoonful of the borax in boiling water, and strain through muslin into the water in which the articles are to be washed.

Dark blue cotton dresses should have the final rinsing in water that has a good deal of clothes bluing in it, enough to make the water a deep blue. This will also help to keep black sateens from turning brown. For light blues, a smaller amount of bluing is used in the rinsing water.

Blouses, corset covers, and under wear that have become stained by perspiration should be soaked for from thirty minutes to an hour in warm water to which ammonia is added, before being washed. If the stains have not disappeared, rub the places over with lemon juice, then rinse thoroughly in cold water.

Fruit and other stains should always be removed before the linen is washed, as many of them would be fixed indelibly by the action of the alkali in the hot suds.

Fruit Hash

Cut cherries, peaches, pineapple, pears and any fruit desired into small pieces. Add a quarter of a pound of blanched almonds and pour over this a gelatine made with the juice of lemons and raspberry gelatine. Set it aside to chill. Serve with devil food cake.

Clarence Brooks, ex-Beaver back stop, at present working with the Butte club of the Union Association, states that the fans are going crazy over the ball served by the Lucas leaguers and that the circuit will be a huge success this season. He states that the 50-cent gates are proving big money-makers.

✿ ✿ ✿

E. MacDonald, manager of Matt Wells, English lightweight champion, received a cablegram the other day from the London Sporting Life, offering a purse of $20,000 for a fight between Wells and Packey McFarland of Chicago, in December. Sporting Life is probably acting for some London boxing club.

✿ ✿ ✿

Eddie Householder is now a member of the Seattle club. He signed and took his place in left field. He signalized his initial appearance with the Giants by batting 1.000, walking three times and hitting safely twice.

Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion of the world, and Freddie Welsh, challenger, will meet in a 20-round fight for the title at Los Angeles Thanksgiving Day, November 30. The terms accepted by the fighters from Promoter T. J. McCarey call for an unpublished amount for Wolgast, said to be $15,000, and $5,000 for Welsh. In addition Wolgast will get 51 per cent of the receipts from the moving pictures and Welsh 49. There will be no side bet. The weight will be 130 ringside. The fight to be refereed by either Jack Welsh or Eddie Smith.

Duff Stuart, Color Sergeant Hunter, Private Warden of Vancouver, Captain Wolfenden Armstrong, British Columbia; Cap tain Dover, Truro, N. S.; Staff Sergeant Richardson, Victoria, B. C.; Sergeant White and Sergeant Cliff, Toronto.; Lieutenant A. Blackburn and Lieutenant Forbes A. Clarke of Winnipeg, and Sergeant Peter Armstrong.

After a fleeting stay in Edmonton, Frank Patrick hit the pike to the coast again to do some work there on the big hockey league which he is supposed to be organizing. While there, he says he made arrangements for the erection of a large rink, in which the games will be played, and which will accommodate thousands of people. It will be built along the same lines as the rink in Victoria, except that it will not have an artificial ice plant. The Victoria rink will cost about $100,000. The total cost of the Edmonton plant will be about $50,000.

Tom Longboat and Billy Queal, the two leading long distance "pro" runners, have done their best to try and get Clarence De Mar, the B. A. A. Marathon winner, to meet them in a cpeial race but the North Dorchester champion says "nothing doing," till after the Swedish Olympic games. De Mar has the right idea at that, but there are not a few who contend that both Longboat and Queal are too much for the British Columbian in any distance, from the modified Marathon to the full Marathon route.

MR. WESTON'S EXPLANATION ON GARBAGE COMPLAINTS

Says His Men Have Authority to Make Extra Charges Where They Think the Collector Has Not Called for Several Weeks—Knows Nothing About a Pig Ranch

In reference to the complaints of citizens about the scavenging system collections, fees, etc., J. C. Westeon speaking to a News reporter this morning said that he thought the difficulties complained about resulted from the operations of the old company's collectors endeavoring to collect their last month's levies. He also stated that his own men were authorised to charge extra for the removal of refuse which from its quantity, and apparent staleness they could judge to be the accumulation of six weeks or more. This may have given rise to the complaints about the "fifty cents a call" statement of fees. Mr. Weston remarked that all his employees at present are English-speaking men, but some difficulties might occur through foreign-speaking residents not understanding the language.

Citizens Supply Cans

"It is up to the citizens to supply their own garbage cans," said Mr. Weston. "While the Sanitary Inspector may insist on a particular type of can as suitable, the citizens may select their own provided it is in keeping with the regulations. I am prepared to supply suitable cans at $1.25 and $3, the latter being a garbage can."

Mr. Weston knows nothing what ever, he says, about a hog ranch being run in conjunction with the garbage scavenging. Hogs which came into the city recently were sent up river. The reason why restaurant garbage is charged less for removal per fifteen gallon can than the garbage of other businesses, according to Mr. Weston is because of the greater frequency of calls necessary on restaurant premises.

WHAT HAPPENED IN DARK WHEN LOCO MET HANDCAR

Inquest on Tom Votisaratos, Killed on Railway While Riding Without Permission on Handcar—Death Result of Collision—Whose Whiskey Was It?

"We, the jury find that deceased Tom Votisaratos came to his death as a result of injuries sustained through the collision of a hand car upon which he, and three others were clandestinely riding from Prince Rupert, and from which he was thrown against the engine of a gravel train approaching from the other direction."

Above is the verdict of the jury on the death of the victim of the hand car accident of Wednesday night. Magistrate McMullin presided over the inquest held on Saturday night. Considerable interest was aroused in this accident, and the Provincial Courtroom was crowded.

Foreman's Story

According to the evidence of John Wilsar, foreman of the section gang, the party had run short of provisions though a supply train had passed up that very day. Wilsar asked the other men George Dinoroatis and Nick Dinoriatis, along with the deceased to come into town on the hand car. They bought bread, and provisions in Rupert, and started back to camp on the hand car. Wilsar declared that a small bottle of soft drink was all the liquor he had seen during the trip. The dead man had the bottle. There was no light on the hand car. The night was rather dark. They were travelling fast, but not so fast as they had been when they came in.

Declared Car Stopped

Of importance in the foreman's story was his reiteration of the statement that the car was stopped by him immediately he realised the train was ahead. He had thought all traffic was ended for the night, but two lights ahead revealed the oncoming train travelling tender first. Wilsar heard no whistle, but said that he applied the hand car brakes, stopped the car, shouted to his mates to jump, and himself ran twenty feet forward before the car was hit by the engine. This account was not fully corroborated by the other men on the car, though it was evident that efforts had been made to stop the car. The foreman admitted that he had no right to take the car without permission.

Bottle of Whisky

Evidence was given by Dr. Eggert showing that decesaed had died of fracture of the skull. Then George Dinoriatis who had also travelled on the hand car told his story. He had not heard the section foreman tell him to jump, and maintained that the hand car was moving when the accident happened. The foreman tried to put on the brakes though. Witness mentioned a bottle of whicky which was found on the line after the accident. The bottle, he said, belonged to the foreman who had put it wrapped in his coat on to the hand car just before starting from Rupert. Witness was mixed about the lights shown by the tender of the train. His brother briefly corroberated his evidence.

Engineer's Evidence

Engineer C. P. Graham, driver of the "work extra" train into which the handcar ran, gave a clear story. He had not seen the hand car. It had no lights. His first warning was a sound like a man's whistle close to him. (This sound was probably the noise of the hand car brakes being applied). Immediately he applied the engine brakes, but saw a dark object fall sideways from the end on the tender on the waterside of the track. It was a standing order that engines should whistle just before rounding curves, but in this case he was a long way past the last curve, and a third of a mile from the next. Witness believed that the section foreman might possibly have had time if a very smart man, to do all he said he had done. Only a very few seconds elapsed between the sound of the faint whistle heard by the engineer, and the blow of the tender on the car.

With this evidence, and a statement by Dan Dempsey, general foreman of the G. T. P. work, to the effect that the men had no right to take out the car, the evidence concluded. The jury arrived at their verdict in a few minutes.
