Follow up Victory

Hankow, Oct. 31.—The Imperial forces are preparing to follow up the victory over the rebels of last week and with an attack on Wu Chang, which the revolutionists have protected by elaborate emergency fortifications. Han Yang which is regarded as of utmost importance on account of the arsenal there is also to be attacked.

He assured them that the idea of a referendum on the naval question would be carried out.

Mr. Borden's Attitude

Will Reject Naval Tenders

METHODISTS HELD ANNUAL THANKSGIVING BANQUET

The Building of the New Church Was Matter for Congratulation—Excellent Banquet Was Followed by an Excellent Toast List

A love feast, not entirely dissociated from the stuffed turkey and pumpkin pies of Thanksgiving traditions, was held in the Methodist church last night. It was a complete success from the first attack on the viands to the feast of reason and flow of soul that followed. John Wesley would certainly have rewritten the discipline clause had he been there.

The occasion was of more than ordinary Thanksgiving significance. The fourth Thanksgiving banquet held in the little frame church current theme of the speakers was of the new permanent church building that the congregation have decided to erect on Musgrave Place. Long before next Thanksgiving the congregation hope to be housed in their new church home, and to have started a new chapter in the history of Methodism in Prince Rupert.

Rev. Charles Sing who proposed the toast to the Methodist Church at home and abroad, and Dr. Kergin and Mr. Arthur Allison who responded, all referred in terms of optimism to new church. A thanksgiving collection taken up during the evening amounted to approximately $170. This will be credited to the building fund.

Other toasts during the evening were "The Sister Churches," proposed by Mr. William Dean and spoken to by Revs. W. G. James and F. W. Kerr; "Our City," proposed by Mr. O. H. Nelson and responded to by Mayor Manson and Aldermen Douglas, Newton and Clayton; "The Press," proposed by Mr. Henry Murdoff and responded to by Mr. J. S. Cowper; "The Ladies," proposed by Mr. E. L. Fisher and responded to by Mr. M. M. Stephens. The toast of the Sisiter Churches was provocative of many expressions of Christian fellowship and mutual good will among the ministers who spoke.

During the evening the company were entertained by some excellent singing by Messrs. Alex Clapperton Meth Davies and H. G. Fletcher.

A BIG LUMBER MILL FOR KITSUMKALUM

Mr. Anthony Ludgate is on His Way to Assist Manager Jas. Croxford to Select a Suitable Site for a New Mill—Company Has a Billion Feet There

On his way to make a confidential report on the lumbering possibilities of the Kitsumkalum district, Mr. Anthony Ludgate, a lumberman from Pembroke, Ontario, is in town today. If you run into Mr. Ludgate you will know him for a man from the woods by his height and girth. He is a "skookum" man all right. Mr. Ludgate has been in the lumber camps most of his life, and knows the bush life and the possibilities of standing timber, as only the expert can.

Billion Feet of Lumber

His company have purchased a tract of timber land containing five hundred square miles near Kitsumkalum. Their cruisers have reported that it contains a billion feet of merchantable lumber. Mr. Ludgate will give a more confidentail and detailed report, upon which the company's plans will be laid. He will stay in the bush all winter, accompanied by Mr. James Croxford, manager of the company which is incorporated as the Kitsumkalum Lumber Company.

Will Erect a Mill

"It is the company's intention to erect a mill. The question will be what type of mill. That depends upon the timber. The idea is to have the mill in operation for the time when the line is completed, and then supply the markets of the east and the prairies," said Mr. Ludgate.

"One of our difficulties may be in holding the logs. The Skeena, I am told, is very swift, and we could not hold the logs there The Kitsumkalum river may prove better for our purposes."

The president of the company is Colonel Herbert Mackie who is one of the leading men among the eastern lumber men.

Met an Old Friend

Mr. Ludgate was glad to greet Mr. James Jabour in Prince Rupert. The men had met several years ago when Mr. Jabour was running a store in Whitney, Ont. Mr. Ludgate was then in charge of a lumber camp close by, for the St. Andrews Lumber Company, with whom he was associated for eleven years.

PRINCE RUPERT'S THANKSGIVING

Quiet but Enjoyable Day Spent by Large Number of Citizens in Glorious Weather Conditions. Evening's Entertainments Were Thronged.

Thanksgiving Day in Prince Rupert proved intensely quiet, the quietness of the city was, in fact, remarked upon by many. Most places of business were closed, and there was a considerable exodus from the city. A number of launch owners left on the previous Saturday for long hunting trips, and the waterfront was particularly undisturbed by bustle of any kind after the Prince George left at 8 a.m. for the south. The George bade farewell to Prince Rupert or the season with an extra three blasts from her siren, and a small group of early birds amongst the citizens gave her a waterfront send off. During the forenoon and early afternoon a number of young men made trips to the other side of the harbor where a shooting match was in progress.

There was a throng of many back to town in the evening, some having been far afield in the bush hunting, others having made the toilsome ascent of Mt. Oldfield, many having spent almost all day on the water. The weather was magnificent, a cool clear autumn day with calm sea and soft breezes. In the afternoon the May Roberts Company put on a successful matinee followed in the evening by another play which filled the Empress Theatre. Police circles were very peaceful all the week end. There has, indeed, been quite a lull in the police court list of "events" for some little time now, Prince Rupert's few regular delinquents being all on their best behavior. Hotels put on the usual Thanksgiving Day special menus and were well patronised during the day. In the evening the Methodists held their great banquet, and the McIntyre Hall was gay with masqueraders celebrating Thanksgiving Day's last few hours with music and dancing.

A RAW DEAL FOR THE STATION GANGS

The excellently written letter from a citizen station gang man printed in full in this column relieves the News of much of its responsibility to point out to the public the amazing nature of the raw deal handed to those citizen workmen who tendered for the Woodworth Lake clearing.

The News submits that the council's conduct in regard to the tenders is without precedent, and challenges the council to cite an instance where, after tenders have all been opened and read in public, a city engineer has been then invited to put in a tender. The council's action eliminates every atom of fairness from the procedure, and makes a mockery of the hardships, expense and inconvenience which the workingmen went to in order to figure on the jobs.

As one man scathingly put it: "They sent enough of us up there to figure on the job, to have cleared the land while we were there. Now it appears that our work was all in vain. There was no intention to award it to the lowest bidder."

If the city engineer's department is to be put in possession of the men's figures before being asked to tender it makes a mockery of the whole business.

PASSING COMMENT

In undertaking the erection of an $18,000 church building, the Methodists of Prince Rupert display their faith in the future of Prince Rupert as well as their faith in Methodism.

An investigation shows that Mr. Borden's Cabinet does not contain a Presbyterian representative. Neither has it a farmer. Martin Burrell who grows fruit, calls himself a horticulturalist. With the Presbyterians and the farmers, left out, how can Mr. Borden look on his Cabinet as representative of Canada.

Letters to the Editor

A STATION MAN'S PROTEST AGAINST A RAW DEAL

Dear Sir,—As one of a gang of twelve men who bid on the clearing of Woodworth Lake, I wish the people of Prince Rupert to understand the kind of a deal the council gave us, and the public as well.

The city council invited us to look the work over and many of us made the hard trip to Woodworth Lake, sleeping out in the open over night and came back and put in our tenders on this work, believing the council intended to let the work to the lowest bidder.

We have no fault to find if Shreiber & Co., or anyone else, underbid us, but, from their procedure at the meeting at which they opened the bids, we are very well satisfied that they did not intend to let the work to station men or anyone else in order to cover up their tracks. They have been willing to sacrifice the station man element and the contracting public by inviting them to look over this work, organize gangs, figure upon it, and submit tenders. There were many of us who bid on this work. It took more than half an hour to open and read all the tenders, during which time the City Engineer and Alderman Hilditch sat at the council table. When the last tender was finally opened and read, an inquiry was made of the City Engineer as to where his tender was. He did not reply, but looked in the direction of Alderman Hilditch, who rose to his feet with the amazing explanation that they had forgotten to bid. We ask if it is possible for a man to listen to the reading of thirty-five competitive bids and not realize until the last bid was read that he had intended to bid but had forgotten? And, mind you, Colonel Davis did not commit himself to the statement that he had forgetten. If he forgot, we believe he was instructed to forget.

After this they passed a resolution asking the Engineer to submit a tender as to what the city can do this for in days' labor on Tuesday next. We believe that they fully intended to do this on days' labor all the time and that they were afraid to bid themselves until they knew our figures and that the whole thing is a farce and the whole proposition of bidding was a put up job on the public and at our expense. There was absolute harmony among them all which is unusual.

We are largely citizen laboring men of this town, but we prefer to take work on contract where we are paid for what we do rather than the time it takes to do it, but we do not like to be made monkeys of by asking us to bid when there was no intention of letting a contract.

Very truly yours,

CITIZEN STATION MAN.

THE Pillar of Light

By Louis Tracy

So Jim now contented himself by remarking dolefully that had his advice been taken "the bloomin' kid would be well on her way back to the Scilly Isles."

"You must not say that," was the grave response. "These things are determined by a higher power than man's intelligence. Think how the seeming accident of a fallen sail saved the child from the cormorants and other birds—how a chance see fell into the boat and kept her alive—how mere idle curiosity on my part impelled me to swim out and investigate matters."

"That's your way of puttin' it," Jim was forced to say. "You knew quite well that there might be a shark in her wake, or you wouldn't have taken the knife. An' now you won't have a word said about it. At the bombardment of Alexandria, a messmate of mine got the V. C. for less."

"The real point is, Jim, that we have not yet discovered what ship this boat belongs to."

"No, an' what's more, we won't find out in a hurry. Her name's gone, fore an' aft."

"Is there nothing left to help us?"

"Only this."

The sailor produced the brooch from his waistcoat pocket. It was of the safety-pin order, but made of gold and ornamented with small emeralds set as a four-leafed shamrock.

"Is the maker's name on the sail?"

"No. I fancy that this craft was rigged on board ship for harbor cruisin'."

Brand passed a hand wearily across his forehead.

"I wish I had not been so precipitate," he murmured. "That man had papers on him in all likelihood."

"You couldn't have stood it, mate. It was bad enough for me. It must ha' bin hell for you."

"Perhaps the baby's clothes are marked."

"That's the chance. She was well rigged out."

Brand cast the shark loose. The monster slid off into the green depths. A noiseless procession of dim forms rushed after the carcass. The birds, shrill with disappointment, darted off to scour the neighboring sea.

Beyond the damaged boat, bumping against the rock, and the huge jaws, with their rows of wedge-shaped teeth, naught remained to testify to the drama of the hour save the helpless baby on which the head-keeper was waiting so sedulously.

Already the signal "Doctor wanted" was fluttering from the lighthouse flagstaff. It would be noted at the Land's End and telegraphed to Penzance. The morning would be well advanced before help could reach the Gulf Rock from ashore.

When Brand and Spence entered Jones's bedroom they found him hard at work washing the child's clothing.

"She's asleep," he said, jerking his head towards a bunk. "I gev' her a pint of mixture. She cried a bit when there was no more to be had, but a warm bath with some boric in it made her sleepy. An' there she is, snug as a cat."

The domesticated Jones was up to his elbows in a lather of soap.

"Have you noticed any laundry marks or initials on her clothing?" asked Brand.

"Yes. Here you are."

He fished out of the bubbles a little vest, on which were worked the letters E. T. in white silk.

"Ah! That is very important. We can establish her identity, especially if the laundry mark is there also."

"I'm feared there's nothing else," said Jones. "I've not looked very carefully, as it'll take me all my time to get everything dry before the tug comes. As for ironin', it can't be done. But my missus 'll see after her until somebody turns up to claim her."

"That may be never."

"Surely we will get some news of the ship which was lost!"

"Yes, that is little enough to expect. Yet it is more than probable that her parents are dead. A baby would be separated from her mother only by the mother's death. There is a very real chance that poor 'E. T.' will be left for years on the hands of those who take charge of her now. The only alternative is the workhouse."

"That's so, cap'n," put in Jim. "You always dig to the heart of a subjec', even if it's a shark."

"In a word, Jones, you can hardly be asked to assume such a responsibility. Now it happens that I can afford to adopt the child, if she lives, and is not claimed by relatives. It is almost a duty imposed on me by events. When the doctor comes, therefore, I purpose asking him to see that she is handed over to Mrs. Sheppard, the nurse who looks after my own little girl. I will write to her. My turn ashore comes next week. Then I can devote some time to the necessary inquiries."

Jones made no protest. He knew that Brand's suggestion was a good one. And he promised silence with regard to the fight with the shark. Men in the lighthouse service are quick to grasp the motives which cause others to avoid publicity. They live sedate, lonely lives. The noise the rush, the purposeless activities of existence ashore weary them. They have been known to petition the Trinity Brethren to send them back to isolated stations when promoted to localities where the pleasures and excitements of a town were available.

Having determined the immediate future of little "E. T.," whose shrunken features were now placid in sleep, they quietly separated. Brand flung himself wearily into a bunk to obtain a much-needed rest, and the others hurried to overtake the many duties awaiting them.

Weather reports and daily journals demanded instant attention. The oil expenditure, the breakage of glass chimneys, the consumption of stores, the meteorological records—all must be noted. An efficient lookout must be maintained, signals answered or hoisted, everything kept spotlessly clean, and meals cooked. Until noon each day a rock lighthouse is the scene of unremitting diligence, and the loss of nearly an hour and a half of Spence's watch, added to the presence of the baby and the constant care which one or other of the two men bestowed on her, made the remaining time doubly precious.

About nine o'clock Brand was awakened from a heavy slumber by Jim's hearty voice:

"Breakfast ready, cap'n. Corfee, eggs an' haddick—fit for the Queen, God bless her! An' baby's had another pint of Jones's brew—Lord love her little eyes, though I haven't seen 'em yet. A minnit ago Jones sung down to me that the Lancelot has just cleared Carn du."

The concluding statement brought Brand to his feet. The doctor would be on the rock by the time breakfast was ended and the letter to Mrs. Sheppard written.

When the doctor did arrive he shook his head dubiously at first sight of the child.

"I don't know how she lived. She is a mere skeleton," he said.

Brand explained matters, and hinted at his theory.

"Oh, the ways of nature are wonderful," admitted the doctor. "Sometimes a man will die from an absurdly trivial thing, like the sting of a wasp or the cutting of a finger. At others, you can fling him headlong from the Alps and he will merely suffer a bruise or two. Of course, this infant has an exceptionally strong constitution or she would have died days ago. However, you have done right so far. I will see to her proper nourishment during the next few days. It is a most extraordinary case."

Jones managed so well that the child's garments were dry and aired. Wrapped in a clean blanket, she was lowered into the steamer's boat, but the doctor, preferring to jump, was soaked to the waist owing to a slip on the weed-covered rock.

The crew of the tug-boat bailed out the derelict and towed her to Penzance.

That evening a fisherman brought a note from Mrs. Sheppard. Among other things, she wrote that the baby's clothes were beautifully made and of a very expensive type. She was feverish, the doctor said, but the condition of her eyes and lips would account for this, apart from the effects of prolonged exposure.

Brand read the letter to his mates when the trio were enjoying an evening pipe on the "promenade," the outer balcony under the lantern.

"S'pose her people don't show up," observed Jim, "what are you going to call her?"

"Trevillion," said Brand.

The others gazed at him with surprise. The prompt announcement was unexpected.

"I have told you about the fabled land of Lyonnesse lying there beneath the sea," he went on, pointing to the dark blue expanse on whose distant confines the Scilly Isles were silhouetted by the last glow of the vanished sun. "Well, the name of the only person who escaped from that minor deluge was Trevillion. It is suitable and it accords with the initial of her probable surname."

"Oh, I see," piped Jones. His voice always high-pitched, became squeaky when his brain was stirred.

"That's O.K. for the 'T,'" remarked Jim, "but what about the 'E'?" Elizabeth is a nice name when you make it into bessie."

"I think we should keep up the idea of the Arthurian legend. There are two that come to my mind, Elaine and Enid. Elaine died young, the victim of an unhappy love. Enid became the wife of a gallant knight, Gawain, who was

"—ever foremost in the chase,
And victor at the tilt and tournament,
They called him the great Prince and man of men.
But Enid, whom her ladies loved to call
Enid the Fair, a grateful people named
Enid the Good."

"That settles it," cried Jim, brandishing his pipe towards Penzance. "I hope as how Miss Enid Trevillion is asleep an' doin' well, an' that she'll grow up to be both fair an' good. If she does, she'll be better'n most women."

Brand made no reply. He went within to attend to the lantern. In five minutes the great eyes of the Lizard, the Longships and the Seven Stones Lightship were solemnly staring at their fellow-warden of the Gulf Rock, whilst, in the far west, so clear was the night, the single flash of St Agnes and the double flash of the Bishop illumined the sky.

CHAPTER III.

THE SIGNAL

At the foot of a long flight of steps leading from the boat quay to the placid waters of Penzance harbor a stoutly built craft was moored. It had two occupants this bright January morning and they were sufficiently diverse in appearance to attract the attention of the local squad of that great army of loungers which seems to thrive in tobacco-blessed content at all places where men go down to the sea in ships.

The pair consisted of a weather-beaten fisherman and a girl.

The man was scarred and blistered by wind and wave until he had attained much outward semblance to his craft. Nevertheless, man and boat looked reliable. They were sturdy and strong; antiquated, perhaps, and greatly in want of a new coat; but shaped on lines to resist the elements together for years to come. Ben Pollard and his pilchard-driver, Daisy, were Cornish celebrities of note. Not once, but many times had they been made immortal — with the uncertain immortality of art—by painters of the Newlyn school.

The girl, an animated cameo, to which the shabby picturesqueness of Old Ben in his patched garments and old Daisy in her unkempt solidity supplied a fitting background, merited the tacit approval she received from the pipe-smokers.

Flaxen-haired, blue-eyed, with a face of a delicate, flower-like beauty which added to its mobile charm by the healthy glow of a skin brightened and deepened in tone by an abiding love of the open air, she suggested, by her attire, an artistic study of the color effects derivable from the daringly trustful little plant which gave the boat its name. She wore a coat and skirt of green cloth, lightly hemmed and cuffed with dark red braid. Her large white hat was trimmed with velvet of a tone to match the braid, and her neatly fitting brown boots and gloves were of the right shade. Beneath her coat there was a glimpse of a knitted jersey of soft white wool, this being a tribute to the season, though a winter in Lyonnesse can usually shrug its comfortable shoulders at the deceitful vagaries of the Riviera.

That she was a young person of some maritime experience was visible to the connoisseurs above at a glance. She was busily engaged in packing the spacious lockers of the Daisy with certain stores of apples, oranges and vegetables—ranging from the lordly new potato (an aristocrat at that time of the year to the plebeian cabbage—and her lithe, active figure moved with an ease born of confidence in the static principles of gravitation as codified and arranged by a rocking boat.

Pollard, too, was overhauling his gear, seeing that the mast was securely stepped and the tackle ran free. Whilst they worked they talked, and, of course, the critics listened.

"Do you think the weather will hold, Ben?" asked the girl over her shoulder, stooping to arrange some clusters of daffodils and norcissus so that they should not suffer by the lurch of some heavy package when the boat heeled over.

"The glass be a-fallin', sure, missy," said the old fellow cheerily, "but wi' the wind backin' round to the norrard it on'y means a drop o' wet."

"You think we will make the rock in good time?"

"We'm do our best, Miss Enid."

She sat up suddenly.

"Don't you dare tell me, Ben Pollard, that after all our preparations we may have to turn back or run for inglorious shelter into Lamorna."

Her mock indignation induced a massive grin. "A mahogany table breaking into mirth," was Enid's private description of Ben's face when he smiled.

"'Ee knaw the coast as well as most," he said. "Further go, stronger blow, 'ee knaw."

"And not so slow, eh, Ben? Really, you and the Daisy look more tubby every time I see you."

Thus disparaged, Pollard defended himself and his craft.

"Me an' Daisy 'll sail to Gulf Light quicker'n any two other tugs in Penzance, missy. Her be a long run at this time o' year, but you'm get there all right, I 'xpect. Wi' a norrard breeze we'm be safe enough. If the wind makes 'ee c'n zee et comin', 'ee knaw."

She laughed quietly. Any reflection on the spanking powers of his pilchard-driver would rouse Ben instantly.

"As if I didn't know all you could teach me," she cried, "and as if anyone in all Cornwall could teach me better."

The old fisherman was mollified. He looked along the quay.

"Time we'm cast off," he suggested. "Miss Constance be a plaguey long time fetchin' them wraps."

"Oh, Ben, how can you say that? She had to go all the way to the Cottage. Why, if she ran—"

"Here she be," he broke in, "an' she b'aint runnin' neither. Her's got a young man in tow."

What announcement would straighten the back of any girl of nineteen like unto that? Enid Trevillion turned and stood upright.

"Why, it's Jack!" she cried, waving a delighted little hand.

"So it be," admitted Pollard, after a surprised stare. "When I look landward my eyes b'ain't so good as they was."

He stated this fact regretfully. No elderly sea-dog will ever acknowledge to failing vision when he gazes at the level horizon he knows so well. This is no pretence of unwilling age; it is wholly true. The settled chaos of the shore bewilders him. The changeful sea cannot.

Meanwhile, the dawdlers lining the wharf, following Enid's signals with their eyes, devoted themselves to a covert staring at the young people hurrying along the quay.

Constance Brand, being a young and pretty woman, secured their instant suffrages. Indeed, she would have won the favorable verdict of a more severe audience. Taller than Enid, she had the brown hair and hazel eyes of her father. To him, too, she owed the frank, self-reliant pose of head and clearly cut, refined features which conveyed to others that all-important first good impression. Blended with Stephen Brand's firm incisiveness, and softening the quiet strength of her marked resemblance to him, was an essential femininity which lifted her wholly apart from the ruck of handsome English girls who find delight in copying the manners an deven the dress of their male friends.

Her costume was an exact replica of that of Enid. She walked well and rapidly, yet her alert carriage had a grace, a subtle elegance, more frequently seen in America than in England. Her lively face, flushed with exercise, and, it may be, with some little excitement, conveyed the same Transatlantic characteristic. One said at seeing her: "Here is a girl who has lived much abroad" It came as a surprise to learn that she had never crossed the Channel.

The man with her, Lieutenant John Percival Stanhope, R.N., was too familiar a figure in Penzance to evoke muttered comment from the gallery.

A masterful young gentleman he looked, and one accustomed to having his own way in the world, whether in love or war. True type of the British sailor, he had the physique of a strong man and the adveneurously cheerful expression of a boy.

The skin of his face and hands, olive tinted with exposure, his dark hair and the curved eyelashes, which drooped over his blue eyes, no less than the artistic proclivities suggested by his well-chiseled features and long, tapering fingers, proclaimed that Stanhope, notwithstanding his Saxon surname and bluff bearing, was a Celt. His mother, in fact, was a Tregarthen of Cornwall, daughter of Cornwall, daughter of a peer, and a leading figure in local society.

One may ask: "Why should a youth of good birth and social position be on such terms of easy familiarity with two girls, one of whom was the daughter of a lighthouse-keeper, and the other her sister by adoption?

Indeed, a great many people did ask this pertinent question; among others, Lady Margaret Stanhope put it often and pointedly to her son, without any cogent answer being forthcoming.

If she were denied enlightenment, although her maternal anxiety was justifiable, the smokers on the pier, representing the wider gossip of the town, may also be left unsatisfied.

....ITEMS OF.... SPORT!

Is baseball uncertain?

Ofttimes this old question has been argued pro and con, but it has never been better verified than by scores of the post-season games played between National and American leagues club.

* * *

Leaving the Giants and Athletics out of it, for the reason that almost every expert in the country decided the series to be a toss-up, with very little advantage to either side, as the games up to date have proved, the uncertainty comes, with both feet, in the case of the Cleveland Naps, St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

* * *

Probably the biggest surprise was the four straight defeats handed the Cubs by Duffy's delegation. The Cubs finished second in the National league chase, after putting up a tough fight for the pennant until almost the last week of the season. The Sox, on the other hand, ended in fourth position, a fraction of a point better than the Boston Red Sox. All during the season the Sox were "in and outers," one day being sixth and the next third, but never showing anything which would warrant their giving a tough battle to a team second in the Lynch league. Now they surprise every one, including their own supporters, by beating the Cubs in easy fashion.

* * *

To balance this, Cincinnati, who finished a poor sixth in the National league, plays Cleveland for the Ohio championship and defeats the American leaguers four games in six despite the fact that the Naps rushed under the wire third in their league.

* * *

Last but not least is the case of the two St. Louis teams' city series. The Cardinals finished fifth in the National race and the Browns sometimes called the worst team in the American league proved by the fact that they finished last by many games win four out of the six games played Roving Rajah's club and their showing, like their scores, has been much better than the National leaguers.

* * *

During the season every one admitted that the Browns were, without a doubt, the poorest team in either of the big major leagues, one writer going so far as to say that they would be easy picking for any of the American association leaders, but according to the curious ups and downs of dope the Browns are better than the Chicago Cubs. To prove it, how does this sound?

* * *

The Sox toyed with the Chicago Cubs in the four games of the city series. During the 1911 season the Sox lost the majority of their scheduled contests to Cleveland, who proved poor opposition to Cincinnati in their recent series for the Ohio championship. Getting back to the National league, according to unofficial figures St. Louis finished the season with a big lead over Cincinnati in the year's clashes, and now the St. Louis Browns, last in the American league, beat the Cardinals, which, according to the above, ranks them better than the mighty Cubs.

LA BELLE RUSSE

Thrilling Drama to be Staged by the May Roberts Company Tonight.

"La Belle Russe," the offering of the May Roberts Company tonight, will demonstrate even more fully the prowess of this excellent company.

The plot of "La Belle Russe" is woven around the story of twin sisters who lead very different lives, one being the unfortunate wife of a younger son and the other an adventuress of the worst type who tries to usurp her sister's place on discovering the husband has for years lost track of his wife in London. The ruse of "La Belle Russe" nearly succeeds for she is on the point of remarriage with Sir Philip Calthorpe who believes that she is his lost wife but she is foiled by her abandoned husband. The play is full of intense situations and reminds one of Belasco's best work.

A HALLOWE'EN PARTY

How to Entertain Young Girls on the Eve of Witches

Have one or two pumpkin heads for decoration at a Hallowe'en party. Put lighted candles inside and set them on tall white-draped stands. Candles are best for hallowe'en lighting in general, but if you wish you may shield the electric lights with several thicknesses of red or yellow fringed paper instead. Corn stalks make fascinating decorations and pop corn portiers are effective.

You should, of course, have some of the real old Hallowe'en games, such as ducking for apples in a tubful of water, jumping over candles, etc. You may have all these distinctive sports in a spearate room if you like—the kitchen is as good as any. A couple of witches sweep the party into the charmed place and you might have ceremonies by handing each guest an apple to peel. You mustn't break any of the skin, you know, but whirl it three times round your head and drop it over your left shoulder, and say:

"By this paring I wish to discover
The letter of the name of my true lover."

A Hallowe'en pie is made from a dish pan trimmed around the edge with crepe paper and filled with flour in which is hidden the traditional ring, coin, thimble and star attraction. With a good book and a very little practice anyone can learn to read hands.

For refreshments, serve pumpkin pie, doughnuts, coffee and fruit passed in an immense pumpkin basket. If somebody feels like making maple cream on the range and mother and cook are agreeable, it will certainly add to the fun.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

An easy way to remove the tops from pineapples. Hold the "pine" with your left hand, and with the right give the top a twist, as though you were wringing its neck. Out comes the top and part of the core.

* * *

Boiled potatoes make an excellent substitute for soap if your hands have become blackened with contact with pots and pans. Take a little of the potato and rub well into the skin, then rinse it off with wram water.

* * *

A highly polished table may be used as a card-table without marking it. Cut a piece of felt larger than the table and run a casing around the outer edge with an elastic in it. This can be easily put on and will save many a finger-mark.

* * *

Fill tub half full of boiling water, then pour in half a can of concentrated lye and with an old broom scrub sides and bottom well. Rinse with clear water and wipe with soft cloth. This will remove all spots and make the tub look new.

Of course you must have the apple-bite contest. One hostess of my acquaintance strung portiers of big beauties across the folding door space and everyone tried the test for three minutes by the clock, if unsuccessful, a whistle was blown, another apple was attached to the string, and a second relay took the places of the first. Your hands are tied behind your back, of course, but if you succeed in getting the coveted bite, you open the apple, count the seeds and get a separate wish for each one.

HARD ON FLIRTS

For flirting and light behaving Rhodesian women had their noses, ears and lips cut off and Doctor Dunbar-Brunton has seen many of these creatures. For speaking against a chief the punishment was mutilation of the tongue and ears. For stealing one hand was chopped off at the first offense and the other hand at a second offense. This penal code was in full operation as lately as ten years ago. The present chief is a man of somewhat milder disposition than the one who produced the atrocities.

IN MERRIEST MASQUERADE

McIntyre Hall Last Night was a Lively Scene with Music and Motley.

In the McIntyre Hall last night the first masquerade ball of the season was held as a Thanksgiving Night celebration. The masquerade was a great success about forty merry couples being present in costume. Quaint and curious motley was worn by the men and the ladies appeared in some very dainty disguises. Prizes were offered for the most effective cottumes, the winners being:

Lady s Prize—A silver chatelaine, won by Mrs, Casely for her clever coon costume in company with Mrs. Shoemaker as her coon partner.

Miss Bella Falconer scored over the mere males present by carrying off the gentlemen's prize of a handsome umbrella. Her costume, that of a charming young prince fit for the pages of the most romantic story book, was declared a winner from the word go. Judges in the competition were Mr. Gottstein, Mr. Barker and Mrs. Frizzell. Round the last named centres an amusing incident showing the perfection of the disguises last night. Mr. George Frizzell was to have acted with the other two gentlemen named as judge. He was nowhere to be found and his wife herself sought for him in vain. Mrs. Frizzell was asked to take her husband's place and did so. Immediately after the order to unmask the whole company recognized the missing George Frizzell in the person of one of the principal masqueraders. Sandy Gazley as a comical Dutchman, kept the whole company in a roar all the evening and Gray's orchestra under whose auspices the masquerade was organised was present in full strength and great form.

Everyone present enjoyed the fun to the full expressing the general feeling that masquerade dances in Rupert are the most popular of all, and the more there are of them this season the better.

A ROW BOAT TRIP

Two Men in a Skiff Rowed Round Kaien Island in Six Hours.

The trip round Kaien Island has been frequently attempted by gasoline craft when the tides permit the rapids being ventured. On Sunday afternoon the trip was made in a four-oared skiff by Mr. H. S. Cowper of the steamer Prince George and his brother, J. S. Cowper of this city.

The trip started with a jaunt to Shawatlans Lake, the decision to complete the round trip being made on the spur of the moment. Both rapids were negotiated easily, it being nearly high water when Zanardi bridge was reached. The pull up the harbor against the tide at the end of the journey was the stiffest part of the journey but the travellers mananged to cut off seven miles of a pull round Porpoise Island by portaging their craft across the neck of Porpoise Island when the tide was nearly full.

Allowing for a deviation from the course through following a false bay before picking up Lake Wainwright, the course scales approximately twenty miles, and was accomplished in six hours flat.

Several schools of seal were encountered at the back of the island in Lake Morse, apparently on the trail of the salmon, which are said to be plentiful in Denise Arm at present.

MAY ROBERTS
Appearing at the Empress theatre

AT THE THEATRE

Thanksgiving Night Production of Victorien Sardou's "Divorcons" Was a Success.

After one of the most successful matinees ever held in the Empress Theatre at which they presented to a full house the charming comedy "The Judge and the Girl" the May Roberts Company presented in the evening Victroien Sardou's brilliant comedy-with-a-purpose, "Divorcons" or translated freely, "Let us divorce." The play deftly discloses the essential truth, that half the trouble from which divorce suits spring lies in the dull matter-of-factness of husbands as contrasted with the romance and dare-devilry of the attentions of other admirers of the discontented wives who seek relief in the divorce court.

It falls to the lot of M. Henri Des Prunelles whose clever part is taken by L. Victor Gillard in the piece, to turn the tables completely upon his rival, M. Ahdemar Gratinac. The play ends in the entire re-instating of the husband, and the utter ridicule of the rival. The leading woman part, that of Mme. Des Pruenelles, played by Miss Roberts brings the discontented wife successively through a dozen different distracting emotions entirely distinct from the cold hard desire for separation from her husband. She finds herself growing again anxious for his safety, then becoming violently jealous of him, and finally giving his would be supplanter, Adhemar, the coldest turn down he ever experienced when she dashes off delightedly to a little supper at the Cafe with her husband in the style of his bachelor days. The plot is capitally brought out, the players last night one and all were in perfect mastery of their parts. The production was an advance on anything yet seen in Prince Rupert, and gave immense satisfaction to a packed house.

Mr. Gillard's acting was the perfection of restraint and subdued intensity. Miss Roberts thoroughly realised her part. Miss Frances Williamson as Josepha the French maid, and Miss Lillian St. John as Mme. De Brionne both showed excellent ability. Mr. Leonard Carey, and Mr. Ira Robertson both had double roles to handle and in each acted well, while as the ardent Ahdemar Mr. George Zucco was most effective.

The company proved the truth of Mr. Gillard's statement that during their sojourn in the north all have worked hard studying new plays promised for Prince Rupert, and are putting on nothing which has not been thoroughly rehearsed and brought to perfect pitch for production. Mr. Gillard said some exceedingly complementary things last night about Dawson and Fairbanks, and his remarks were appreciated by the many who know these places here. He implied that he will have as pleasant accounts to give of Prince Rupert as he continues his successful tour with the May Roberts Company. Tonight "La Belle Russe" will be staged.
