Wright, who also goes with the Ensign to Moose Jaw. A hearty send-off was given the little party leaving by the Camosun, and Ensign Johnstone shouted back his thanks to Prince Rupert. "Be as good to our successors as you were to us" was his parting message.

"THE BOYS" TROOPED DOWN TO WISH "THE GIRLS" FAREWELL

After a lively presentation of their Comedy "The Honeymoon Trail" on Saturday night, the Cleveland Comedy Company left Prince Rupert by the Camosun yesterday at one p.m. Principals and members of the chorus were amongst the last to board the "Old Reliable," which was held for fully half an hour to ship scenery including certain lurid portions of "Hades" scenes from "The Follies of 1901." Harry B. Cleveland and Miss Drena Mack waved a warm-hearted farewell to their friends in Prince Rupert, a good sprinkling of "the boys" having sauntered down to the wharf on the pretence of wishing to see the boat leave.

FRANK BOWNESS MAKES GOOD WITH HIS HOTEL AT NEWTOWN

For long the cry has been for a decent restaurant and bunk house at the end of the train trip from Prince Rupert at Mile 100. The need has been at last most efficiently supplied by Frank Bowness who is so well known to all old timers of Rupert as the Pioneer Restaurant Caterer of the Rupert Road. In pioneer work of this kind friend Frank fairly shines, and exceedingly high compliment is given his new venture by all those who have partaken of his hospitality on the way down to Rupert after "mushing it" into Newton for the Van Arsdol train.

GOOSE BAY MINERS COMPLAINED TO ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE

It is rumored that a boat is on its way north to Goose Bay, sent by the attorney general in response to a wire sent by some of the miners who were laid off by the Granby Company after a few days work on the Hidden Creek mine. The boat will be too late to find the men as they left Goose Bay by the Venture. The Company's officials were dissatisfied with the men's efficiency and paid them off. There was no boat to take them south and they were kept at the rate of a dollar a day afterwards reduced to fifty cents. There was no disturbance. A Provincial Police Constable sent by Chief Owens to investigate has not yet returned.

EX-ALD. T. D. PATTULLO COMES BACK BUT DISCLAIMS THE DIVINE CALL

The genial gentleman whose photograph is published here, arrived in town today on the Princess May. He walked into the Daily News office while the proof-reader was busy reading the editorial article entitled "Wanted a good clean man for Mayor." It looked like a heaven sent answer, but Mr Pattullo shook his head and looked sceptical. His business down in Victoria is humbling, and his trip to Rupert is made in the interests of Victoria clients. Duff is still the same consistent booster for Rupert he has always been.

The Daughters of the Empire will hold a meeting on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 at the residence of Mrs. McMullin.

"THREE MACS" RETURN SAFE AND SOUND

They Were Picked Up by the Launch Flora Outside the Harbor in a Flat Bottomed Boat—Porcher Island Samaritans We Good to Them.

After an adventurous trip, the three young Rupert men, Donald McLeod, J. McRae and Angus McKenzie, are back again in the city safe and sound. They were picked up in Chatham Sound by the launch Flora, while making their third try to reach Prince Rupert from Porcher Island in a flat bottomed row boat. The launch Flora in which Constable Forsyth is searching for them, has not yet returned.

The young men succeeded in their land staking venture at Welcome Harbor, but were storm bound and driven ashore while trying to get back. They were well looked after by a rancher named Joe Boyd who picked them up and played the part of the Good Samaritan to them. The young men speak in the highest terms of the kindness of Joe Boyd and of the other ranchers they met on Porcher Island.

The news of her son's safe return was at once conveyed to Mrs. McRae at the hospital where she lies recovering from a serious operation.

Wanted—A Good, Clean Man For Mayor

Although buried, as it were, in the editorial column, this is in the nature of an advertisement.

'Wanted, a Mayor for the city of Prince Rupert for the year 1912. a good, clean man with some business training and aptitude for work, preferably a man without any party affiliations.

The position is a hard one to fill, the problems of office being many and the city comprising several as yet, inharmonious elements. The pay $2,000 a year is not large.

On the other hand, an opportunity presents itself to the right man to do a great work by putting the city's finances on a sound footing by a successful debenture issue, by treating the city's problems from a business, and not from a party point of view, and by bringing the several warring camps of citizens to a better mutual understanding.

This town is chock full of good fellows with a weakness for party politics. A good non-partisan Mayor who can help to save us all from ourselves will earn a monument for himself in days to come. He can count on the sympathy and support of the best men of both sides and of one newspaper at least.

So far the News has been unable to find the ideal man, but applications (in strictest confidence) are solicited from any and all who think they possess the necessary qualifications and are willing to take the chances."

THE Pillar of Light

By

Wherein Enid was completely mistaken: she would never commit a greater error of judgment during the rest of her days.

When Pyne quitted the kitchen his intent was to reach Brand without delay. As he passed Mrs. Vansittart's bedroom he paused. Something had delighted him immeasurably once the first shock of the intelligence had passed.

He seemed to be irresolute in his mind, for he waited some time on the landing before he knocked at the door and asked if Mrs. Vansittart would come and speak to him.

"Are you alone?" she demanded, remaining invisible.

"Yes," he said.

Then she appeared, with that borrowed shawl still closely wrapped over her head and face.

"What is it?" she said warily.

"You have had a letter from my uncle?"

"Yes, a charming letter, but I cannot understand it. He says that some very important and amazing event will detain him in Penzance after we reach the place. He goes—but I will read it to you. I am quite bewildered."

She took a letter from her pocket and searched through its contents until she found a paragraph. She was about to read it aloud when someone came down the stairs. It was one of the officers, yet Mrs. Vansittart was so flurried that she dropped the sheet of paper and bent to pick it up before Pyne could intervene.

"Oh, bother!" she cried. "I am dreadfully nervous, even now that we are in no further peril. This is what I wish you to hear."

And she read:

"Nothing but the most amazing and unlooked for circumstances would cause me to ask you to postpone the date of our marriage for at least a month after you reach shore. This is not the time, nor are your present surroundings the place for telling you why I make this request. Suffice it to say that I think, indeed, I am sure, a great happiness has come into my life, a happiness which you, as my wife soon to be, will share."

The American, whilst Mrs. Vansittart was intent on her excerpts from his uncle's letter, studied all that was visible of her face. That which he saw there puzzled him. She had suffered no more than others, so he wondered why she wore such an air of settled melancholy. Throughout the lighthouse gloom was dispelled. The sick became well, the lethargic became lively. Even the tipplers of methylated spirits, deadly ill before, had worked like Trojans at the rope, eager to rehabilitate their shattered character as to land the much-needed stores.

What trouble had befallen this woman so gracious, so facile, so worshipful in her charm of manner and utterance during the years he had known her, that she remained listless when all about her was life and joyance, when the cynosure of many eyes by her costumes and graceful carriage, cowering from recognition? Here was a mystery, though she had repudiated the word, and a mystery which, thus far, defeated his sub-conscious efforts at solution.

Pyne, as Constance had done, came near to him and said, with an odd pendency in his voice:

"Say, you feel bad about this. Guess you'll hate our family in future."

"Why should I hate anyone who brings rank and fortune to one of my little girls?"

"Well," went on Pyne anxiously, "she'll be Mrs. Stanhope, anyhow, before she's much older."

"That appears to be settled. All things have worked out for the best. Most certainly your excellent uncle and I shall not fail out about Enid. If it comes to that, we must share her as a daughter."

Pyne brightened considerably as he learned how Brand had taken the blow.

"Oh, bully!" he cried. "That's a clear way out. Do you know, I was beginning to feel scared. I didn't count a little bit on my respected uncle setting up title to Enid!"

It is a good rule," he said, "never to pretend you can handle another man's affairs better than he can handle them himself."

He met her kindling glance firmly.

"Mr. Trail is certainly the best judge of those worthy of his confidence. Excuse me if I spoke hestantly. Let matters remain where they are."

"Just a word, Mrs. Vansittart. My uncle has written you fairly and squarely. He has not denied you his confidence. If I understood you, he has promised it to the fullest extent."

"Yes, that is true."

"Then what are we quarreling about?"

He laughed in his careless way, to put her at her ease. She frowned meditatively. She, who could smile in such a dazzling fashion, had lost her art of late.

"You are right," she said slowly. "I am just a hysterical woman, starting at shadows, making mountains out of molehills. Forgive me."

Pyne went up the stairs his reflections took this shape:

"The old man shied at telling her outright. I wonder why. He is chock full of tact, the smoothest old boy I ever fell up against. He thinks there may have been little troubles here, perhaps. Well, I guess he's right."

In the service-room he found Brand cleaning a lamp calmly and methodically. All the stores had been carried downstairs, and the store-room key given over to the purser.

"I am glad you have turned up," said the lighthouse-keeper. "Oblige me by opening that locker and taking back the articles I purloined recently. If the purser asks for an explanation, tell him the truth, and say I am willing to eat this stuff now for my sins."

Pyne noticed that Brand's own letters lay in a small pile on the writing-desk. With two exceptions, they were unopened. As a matter of fact, he had glanced at the superscriptions, saw that they were nearly all from strangers, and laid them aside until night fell and the lighting of the lamps would give him a spare moment.

"I'll do that with pleasure," said the American, "but there's one thing I want to discuss with you whilst there is a chance of being alone. My uncle says he has written to you."

"To me?"

"Yes. It deals with an important matter too. It concerns Enid."

"Mr. Trail has written to me about Enid?" repeated Brand stopping his industrious polishing to see if Pyne were joking with him.

"That's so. See, here is his letter. It will tell its own story. Guess you'd better read it right away."

"We wasn't to tell him about the sweet stuff they put in our tea. That is all, Funny, isn't it?"

Brand knew that these little ones were motherless. His eyes dimmed somewhat. Like all self-contained men, he detested any exhibition of sentiment.

"I say," he cried huskily to Pyne, "you must escort your friends back to their quarters. No more idling, please."

"An' you will really send for us to-morrow to see the milkman?" said Edith.

Notwithstanding his sudden gruffness, she was not afraid of him. She looked longingly at the great lamp and the twinkling diamonds of the dioptric lens.

"Yes, I will not forget. Good-bye, now, dearie."

The visit of the children had given him a timely reminder. As these two were now, so had his own loved ones been in years that might not be recalled.

The nest would soon be empty, the young birds flown. He realized that he would not be many days ashore before the young American to whom he had taken such a liking would come to him and put forward a more enduring claim to Constance than Mr. Trail had made with regard to Enid. Well, he must resign himself to these things, though no man ever lost two daughters under stranger conditions.

When Pyne returned, Brand was ready for him. The struggle was sharp, but it had ended.

"I would like you to read your uncle's letter," he said. "I am clear in my own mind as to the right course to adopt. If Mr. Trail wishes to win Edith's affections he will not take her by surprise. Indeed, he himself recognizes this element in the situation. You will not rush away from Penzance at once, I take it?"

"No, sir," said Pyne, with a delightful certainty of negation that caused a smile to brighten his healer's face.

"I may not get clear of the rock for several days. There is much to place in order here. When the relief comes, I must help the men to make things ship-shape. Meanwhile, Stanhope—or Constance, whom you can take into your confidence—will smooth the way."

"No, sir," interrupted Pyne, with an emphatic smile to brighten his healer's face.

FREE TRIP ROUND THE WORLD

We have just arranged with one of our clients to place forty-two lots on the market under exceptional advantages to the purchasers. The lots are some of the best in Sections 7 and 8. The prices are as low as any on the market, and the terms so easy—monthly—that anyone can buy. Along with this exceptional offer, each lot admits the purchaser to a drawing for a FREE TRIP ROUND THE WORLD. If you hold the lucky ticket the trip is yours; or you can surrender it for a cash consideration. The chances are good—one in forty-two. Come in and investigate.

"BLACK DEVIL" IN FIX

Famous Auto After Many Vicissitudes is Locked Up

Harry Sykes ran an auto some time ago in Rupert. It was called "that devilish black auto" by Ald. Newton. It went to Hazelton and there nearly ran itself to death. Returned to Rupert for repair at the Rupert Marine Depot it has been fitted with very nearly a new stock, lock and barrel. Now it comes out that Harry hasn't paid all he owes the Vancouver Automobile Company for the "black devil." The company claim the machine, but the Rupert Marine have a little bill which must be settled before the "black devil" can be allowed out. Guarding the "black devil" is the latest waterfront pastime.
