G.T.P. MAY BUILD A FLEET OF TURBINE STEAMERS

COUNCIL RECEIVE PLANS FOR THE CITY CEMETERY

Work Was to Have Been Done by the G.T.P., But Now the City Will Assume it---Architect Also Wants the City to Pay Part of the Fees---A Beautiful Spot to be Known as Fairview Cemetery

Plans for Prince Rupert cemetery laid out very tastefully by the landscape architects for the townsite, Messrs Brett & Hall, have been forwarded to the Mayor and council, and were considered last night. The architects mention that these plans were prepared for the G. T. P. but the G. T. P. Co. laid over the scheme of development here. Now that it is left to the city to develop this public necessity, the architects suggest that the city should defray a certain portion of the cost of the plans which was not paid by the G. T. P. because they did not go on with the work. This matter is being considered by the finance committee.

The plans show a very well laid out cemetery with winding roads and graceful sweeping curves bordering the plots. The extent is about fourteen acres, practically the whole of the ground leased for 999 years to the city for cemetery purposes by the G. T. P. The main entrance to the cemetery is by Omineca avenue and here is marked the site for a chapel on an eminence. The plans show extensive provision for shrubbery and garden plots, on the lines of the most beautiful cemeteries all over the world, and every possible advantage has been taken of the natural contour of the ground, which is sloping and undulating land situated beyond Fairview.

"Fairview Cemetery" is the title given on the plans. With an unwittingly grisly touch the architect remarks that cemeteries are generally very profitable forms of municipal development, and hopes that this one will prove so to Prince Rupert. He doesn't actually suggest a boom in real estate in six feet by three lots, but it seems so from his letter. A proposal is taking shape at the city hall that the portion of the ground nearest the city will be laid out as soon as possible so that the need for funeral launch trips to Garden Island will soon become a thing of the past.

CRUISER RAMMED THE OLYMPIC

Big White Star Liner is Badly Damaged Off Southampton by H. M. S. Hawke.

(Canadian Press Despatch)
 Southampton, Sept. 25.—Following the ramming of the White Star liner Olympic by the British cruiser Hawke, the big liner has been towed into port for repairs. Inquiry shows that none of the two thousand persons on the passenger vessel suffered injury, although both vessels were badly damaged by the impact. A big gaping hole is torn in the liner's side, while the whole of the front part of the cruiser is twisted out of recognition.

An inquiry is being conducted by the authorities. It is supposed that the accident was due to a failure of the cruiser's steering gear, which caused her to swerve off her course.

FREE PHONE BOOKS

Progressive Plan of Prince Rupert Advertising Firm Newly Started.

Telephone directories supplied absolutely free to the citizens are part of the programme of the Prince Rupert Advertising Company just opening up in this city, and application has been made to the city council by this firm for permission to take over the issue of "Hello Books." The firm promises to put out a much better affair than even the tidy directories now published by the city, and will of course depend on the advertising in them for its returns. Referred to the telephone committee.

Was one of the Most Popular C. P. R. Conductors in the West.

Calgary, Sept. 25.—Conductor J. H. Campbell, one of the best known railway men in Western Canada, is dead here. He had been in failing health for some time but stuck to his post to the last.

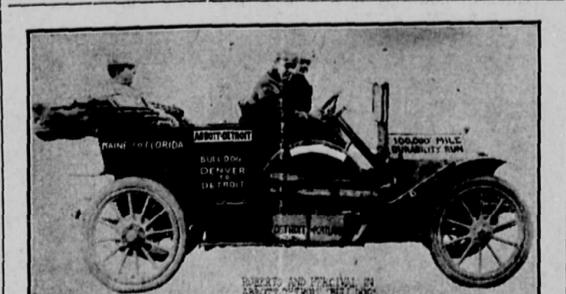

Mr. Campbell was born in Burlington, Ontario, and came west a very young man when the C. P. R. was being constructed. He entered the employ of the company at Kenora and has been with it ever since. He had charge of a train running out of Winnipeg for years. He lived in Medicine Hat for ten years, subsequently coming to Calgary. As an evidence of the confidence of the company in his ability and reliability he was given charge of the "Edmonton Flyer."

He had had some thought of going into the interior from Skagway, perhaps as far as Dawson, but speaking with Mr. Congdon and Mr. George Black on the boat coming up he had decided that the trip would be too risky so late in the season. Since leaving Denver, Col., on October 10th, 1910, the car has

MR. CONGDON WILL FIGHT TO RETAIN THE YUKON SEAT

Change of Government Will Not Affect his Intention—Dr. Alfred Thompson to be Brought Out by Conservatives to Oppose Him—Tribute to Laurier

Fred T. Congdon, Liberal member for Yukon in the last parliament, made a two hours stay in the city yesterday, on his way north on the Princess Royal. Disappointment was expressed that he had not been able to be here and make a speech during the campaign, but he said the leaders of the party in Vancouver and Victoria would insist that he stay there to help out the Liberal cause. He had, however, been able to speak for Duncan Ross at Cumberland.

It had been announced by wire that Mr. Congdon had no opponent for the Yukon seat and that therefore he would be elected by acclamation. But yesterday was nomination day in that territory, and he understands that the Conservatives were to make a nomination, their candidate being Dr. Alfred Thompson, who was formerly elected as an independent candidate. George Black, barrister and member of the Yukon council, also leader of the Conservative party of Yukon, was also a passenger on the Royal and will take an active part in the campaign.

Mr. Congdon did not know until his arrival here that it had been announced by wire in yesterday's News that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was to retain the leadership of the party, but he said: "I could not imagine his retirement simply after a defeat or because of a defeat. I know Sir

PLACE FOR THE CITY POUND

Puzzle to Find a Site for the Fold for Stray Dogs and Cats is Left to the Board of Works.

Once again Alderman Douglas is disconsolate. The site for his civic pound is still in abeyance. Last night letter was read from General Superintendent Mehan of the G. T. P., saying that the proposed place for the pound near the sniff yacht wharf was not likely to be at all permanent, and suggesting that the council look out another. The mayor proposed that the matter should be left with the Board of Works with power to act, but to this Alderman Newton at first took exception. After some talk in which it was clearly shown that every consideration was being shown by the Board for all possible objections and objectors, it was agreed to let the matter be settled by the Board of Works.

CELEBRATING THE VICTORY

Today, according to the telegraphic despatches from the capital, the Conservative leaders intend to celebrate their great victory in a fitting manner. They have the right to celebrate. No one will begrudge them the joys of victory, or doubt that the Conservative leaders will use the occasion in a manner befitting their dignity.

The following is the kind of telegraphic despatch telling of the celebration at Ottawa, that the News does not expect to receive tomorrow:

(Special to the Daily News)

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—The Conservative leaders celebrated their victory last night with a tin can parade. Nothing like it has ever been seen in Ottawa before. It was a revelation of statesmanship, and showed that the new government is keenly alive to the responsibilities of being selected to guide the affairs of the country.

The Premier cut a dignified figure at the head of the procession, mounted on a cart horse, and carrying a card in his hand. He was accompanied by members of the Cabinet holding flaming brooms, and by a large number of small boys beating empty gasoline cans.

The party walked through the mud for several blocks, and stood cheering outside the residences of members of the late Cabinet. After their throats were tired, and the brooms had burned out, the procession walked to Rideau Hall, where a harangue was delivered by their leader. The harangue was to the effect that all jobs were to be filled by Conservatives, and that a Liberal applying for a job would require to have his credentials passed by himself. He also announced that he would make it his business to see that all Liberals who had had the audacity to oppose his election, were made to walk out of town on the railroad ties before the year was over.

The statesmanlike sentiments were on a par with the dignified nature of the celebration, and have done a great deal to inspire public confidence.

This as we said before is the kind of telegraphic despatch we do not expect to receive tomorrow.

WILL THE NAVY DISAPPEAR?

Now that Henri Bourassa has succeeded in securing a strong party in the new House, some of his declarations of intention assume an enlarged interest. At his big meeting at Three Rivers in August he told an audience of seven thousand people that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was too Imperialistic to suit him. Speaking of his own intention he said that if returned to the House with a strong following, "if Quebec so declares, the navy will disappear."

It will be interesting to wait and see what happens to the navy.

Political observers are now recalling Armand Lavergne's statement to an interviewer early in the campaign, "It is to obtain the balance of power we are working for."

A TENDERFOOT'S WOING

By Clive Phillips Wolley

(AUTHOR OF GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO, ETC.)

"Let him alone where he is," urged Ed. "He won't understand no." "Wosh, understand, wosh he? You think he's gone away. Nonsense; he's here all right. He'll understand, you bet."

The idea was too grisly. That any poor devil should be condemned even after death's release to hang round the Ideal, struck Jim as the climax of horrors to which hell itself would be a mild punishment.

But he saw in the set's determination his own opportunity. Going up to the only man in the place who was still sober, he touched him on the shoulder. "Bill, would you do something for a woman?"

The big man, who was still drowsing by the stove, started from his apathy. "A woman? There ain't no woman here. It's only whiskey and hell."

"But there's women elsewhere, down to the Risky Ranch, for instance. Will you do something to help one of them?"

"Anything," he said, rising. "Then go up into that fellow's room, pointing to the doctor, and corral all his outfit, instruments and grip-sack, whatever he takes along with him when he goes visiting. No one will notice you as you live here, and if they do they are too drunk to mind."

"What do you want it for?" "There's a woman dying down to the Risky, and I've got to get that little hog and his fixin's to save her. You heard him say he wouldn't come."

"I did, curse him; but he won't be any good like that. They never are any good when you want them," and he sank back into his dreams.

"He won't be like that when I get him to the Risky. Will you do it?" "All right; if it's for a woman," and he slouched off to the part of the house where its boarders slept.

Meanwhile Jim Combe went out to secure his own horse and another. The latter part of the business was horse-stealing, almost the worst offence in Cattleland, but he had dilled already to a friend, and was meditating a worse offence than horse-stealing.

When he had tied the two horses at the back of the empty house in which old man Hayes lay, he returned to the bar room.

There he found his ally, Bill. "Have you got the things?"

"Yes." "Then sneak out and cinch them on tight behind the saddle of my horse, a big red roan, tied up behind the house where Hayes' body lies, and wait there for me. Don't make any mistake, and don't speak till I do."

Bill took his orders in silence, and whilst he slipped out at the back, Jim Combe went up to the bar, and called for drinks for the crowd.

"Thought you was going to take a drink with the old man," he said to the doctor, who was now half asleep. "So I wash, but I can't get any fellow to go long."

"And you're too scared to go alone? I thought you were a scientific joker, who didn't believe in ghosts or spirits, or any of them things you can't see or stick a knife into."

"Don't know what I believe, and I don't know what blanked business it is of yours, anyway, but I'm not scared of anything, Mister Jim Combe, if you are a foot taller than me."

Jim laughed aggressively. He knew the man's peculiarities. "Why, you're afraid right now. I'll bet you the next round of drinks that you dare not go alone to take a glass with old Hayes."

The bet just suited the humor of the crowd, besides the form of settlement touched their personal interest.

"It's up to you, doc," they cried. "You're the little man to win his money."

To do the doctor justice, he was no coward, drunk or sober.

"Hand me the bottle, Ike," he said, rallying in the most extraordinary manner, and speaking quite soberly. "And one of those glasses. See you again, gentlemen, and he walked towards the door."

"I guess it's my money that's up, so if no one has any objection, I'll still hurt the doc and see that he gets right to it. That's the bet, isn't it?" asked Combe.

"I guess so." "Nobody else leaves the room until we come back. I don't want the doctor's friends handy to keep his courage up."

"He don't want any. Don't you worry. The doc's got as much grit as the next man."

"Appears like it," said Jim, and stole out, shutting the door noiselessly behind him.

CHAPTER XIII.

Abduction

Very solemnly and placing each foot with carefully calculated precision, the little doctor made his way from the Ideal to the place where old man Hayes had been stored out of the way of the dogs.

The awful heat and closeness of the bar room which he had left, made the chill of the night air more noticeable. It struck him like a bar of cold iron across the forehead and made him catch his breath with a gasp. But his errand had no terror for him. He was one of those who, having learned a great deal about the mechanism of the human body, looked upon it as an in-different piece of machinery capable of many improvements, and having about it nothing of the supernatural.

As a locomotive he considered it best to contempt. Walking was at best but a succession of falls avoided. That had always been his opinion, but he had never known so much difficulty before in getting up that hind prop in time to save a collapse.

Before starting from the bar room door he had taken a line upon the house which he wished to reach, and he had contrived not to lose sight of his points, but it was difficult to keep them, moving as he felt compelled to do, as a knight moves at chess.

Earth seemed for once to have no solidity; the laws of gravity in his particular case seemed to have been suspended; his feet would not keep down and he suffered from an almost irresistible temptation to allow his legs to collapse altogether, a temptation which arose from a growing conviction that they really had nothing whatever to do with him, and that he could move perfectly well by the mere exertion of will power. But he was not sufficiently drunk yet to yield to this temptation. He still had some control over his memory, and he remembered that he had tried that game before, and had been found in the street very odd indeed the next morning.

Dr. Frotheroe had a considerable knowledge of the many intricacies of the flesh, but his knowledge of the different expressions of alcoholic dementia was comprehensive. He even diagnosed his own case accurately as he staggered along.

"Drunk," he said, severely; "very drunk. It's the cold air has done it. Always does it; but I'm not 'frid. Who said Doctor Frotheroe was 'frid?"

He stopped, swaying dangerously in the middle of the dark street to think out that problem, but even his mind could only move now as the knight moves. It would not go straight.

"Doctor Frotheroe 'frid?" he repeated this two or three times in a sort of sing-song, and then, suddenly: "Dr. Frotheroe," he said. "Doc-tor Frotheroe, Thomash's. — London — England. Not Ontario! None of your bloomin' Canadian 'bout me. Doctor Frotheroe, Thomash's, London, England. Gentleman; professional man," and then he burst into peal upon peal of derisive laughter, in the midst of which he fell flat upon his face in the mud.

After lying there for a few minutes chuckling still to himself, he rose upon his hands and knees, reached for his hat, put it rakishly upon the back of his head, and continued his journey upon all fours.

"Vartosh's veins," he muttered, as he wobbled. "Shtytska, gout, notin' to do w' whiskey. All rot. Cause—abshurd attempt violate lawsh of nature. Man dam fool; meant to walk on four legs, tries to walk on two. Poshterior limbs over worked; painful shwelling followsh. Of course."

But in spite of the excellence of his reasoning he was obliged after a time to conform to custom, and finished his journey in a wild burst upon two legs, which landed him in a heap at the old man's door.

The violent exercise did something to counteract the effects of the chill air upon his heated brain, but not enough. He could remember that the door fastened with a latch; he could even repeat to himself the necessary instructions for lifting the latch; but for the life of him he could not find it.

Sitting upon the ground with his eyes carefully shut, and talking rapidly but incoherently, he explored the whole door from the mad to within six inches of the lock half a dozen times, and at last concluding that he must have reached the wrong side of the house, began to crawl round it, until utterly weary, he sank despairingly into a peculiarly cold puddle, from which lowly station he beat intermittently upon the solid pine logs of the wall, imploring old man Hayes to "get up and let a fellow in."

At last oblivion came to him, but not in the kindly fashion to which he had grown accustomed. There was a difficulty about his breathing which he did not remember to have noticed on previous occasions. It was quite natural that he should have turned over on his back, but his head was rolling about in an unusual way, and there seemed to be an obstruction in front of his mouth.

"Asphyxiashun," he decided. "Un-usual symptom, rather than un-natural. Not had enough whiskey for that," and then he went out into space where nothing mattered, and thought itself became a mere succession of vague and disconnected suggestions.

One of these, the most persistent, was that he was flying. He remembered, as you do in dreams, that he had done this before. He had never been quite certain whether it was in dreams that he flew, or in waking life. The dream had always seemed so real, but he knew that he was flying now. He felt himself going up and up, and it was only will which supplied the motive power. He knew that because he tried to flap his wings and could not. They were tied to his sides.

"Heave him up on to the pinto, Bill. He's dead to the world."

"How is he going to stick on?" "You heave him up," insisted Combe from the other side of the stolen horse, "I'll fix that. He'll ride as well as the pinto's last passenger."

"The old man in there," replied Bill, looking over his shoulder nervously, and speaking in a hushed voice.

"Yes. Can you steady him like that whilst I throw a hitch around him. Don't let him roll."

"I'll try, Jim; but his legs are like water. You can't hold them. They slip all ways to once."

"They won't do that long. Now! How's that?"

Combe had taken the tie rope from the pinto's saddle, and with it had lashed the doctor's feet together under the belly of his horse, after which he had passed the light of the rope round his victim's waist and secured him firmly by it to the horn of the saddle.

"I guess he'll ride like that for a bit," he said, looking critically at his work. "Seems pretty well packed, doesn't he?" and taking the doctor by the shoulder he swayed him tentatively in the saddle.

"Yes, he'll stay there till you untie him, but what are you going to tell the ferryman?"

"That's my trouble. I'm blanked if I know how I'm going to fix that, unless I gag him too. I wish the doctor was not too drunk to sit on by himself."

"If he wasn't he wouldn't go."

"Yes, he would, with this," and the light flickered on a barrel hardly harder than the speaker's face.

Bill looked at Combe, doubtfully. He had known Jim many years, but had never seen the man he saw now. The sight staggered him and made him doubtful of the share he had taken in the proceedings.

"You don't mean no foul play by him, do you?"

"No, of course not. A dead ass ain't no good. Hand me his bridle, and Combe reached for the saddle for it. But Bill held on to it.

"See here, Jim, this is a mighty ugly business. It is for a woman?"

"For a woman, sure. Hand over, or they'll be after us."

Still the man doubted, and Combe saw a bar of light in the front of the Ideal. Some one had opened the door to look out. The crowd was growing impatient for its drinks.

"There was no time to be lost. It was crucial, but he had to do it. "Bill," he hissed, "when she died, wouldn't you have done this or any other blanked thing to save her?"

"My God, yes," was the startled answer. Without further demur Bill handed over the bridle and Jim, turning the horses sharply down hill, disappeared into the night, whilst the widower slunk through the back premises into the Ideal.

WOMEN IN WALL STREET

Financial Success in the Feminine World

Rumors have been spread about lately of a houseclearing in Wall street, and the financiers are reported to be perturbed. It is the latest phase, apparently, of the feminist movement, and is not to be sneezed at when it is remembered that Mrs. Harriman, Mrs. Russell Sage, Mrs. Gates, Mrs. Pullman, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Huntington and half a dozen other women are now in control of some of the biggest fortunes which have been accumulated in Amer-in the last twenty-five or fifty years, the era of the making of huge fortunes. Mrs. Hetty Green is an active power already; Mrs. Elkins is another woman to whom a vast fortune has but lately come under her control. The making of great wealth does not seem to be generally conducive to long life, or at least, so it would seem from the above quoted examples of the wives of rich men who have survived their liege lords. It is now proposed that these women and others, who are estimated to be the holders of well over a billion dollars, should combine and dictate terms to the men who at present pull the strings for most of the financial moves. A ban on stock juggling and general jockeying of the market would be the object of such a combine, and the establishment of a sounder credit system, with the consequent lessening of liability to panic. It would scarcely be surprising if the women did not come to the rescue; the Treasury Department has had its hands full for a good many years. And most of the money held by these rich women was made by proper manipulation of the market, so there would be some ironic justice in the move. What the casual onlooker would take most interest in, however, would be, not the financial uplift movement, but the possibility of war to the knife between, say, Hetty Green and J. P. Morgan. It would be an exciting spectacle, and many would regret that Russel Sage had not lived to take Morgan's place, as a more fitting opponent. In an age when money rules, here is a distinct menace to masculine superiority.

IF I WERE LOVED BY THEE

If I were loved, as I desire to be, What is there in the great sphere of the earth, And range of evil between death and birth That I should fear—if I were loved by thee? All the inner, all the outer world of pain Clear love would pierce and cleave, if thou wert mine, As I have heard that, somewhere in the main, Fresh-water springs come up through bitter brine. 'Twere joy, not fear, clasped hand-in-hand with thee, To wait for death—mute—careless of all ills, Apart upon a mountain, tho' the surge Of some new deluge from a thousand hills Flirg leagues of roaring foam into the gorge Below us, as far on as eye could see. —Tennyson

NEW MATERIALS

What Fashion Makers are Making Fashions Of

Ratine is one of the most talked-of in the heavy materials, not so expensive as those of the camel's-hair class, but effective in suitable combinations, velvet or broadcloth being prepared for the purpose.

As for the shorter coat suits, both pieces are of the most unique cut and design, bows, sashes, scarfs, braids and ornaments of all sorts brought into service. With all this there is a certain trigness about them, a clearly defined outline, that adds very much to the desirability and preserves their right to be called "tailor-made." They are all straight or show a slight inward curve, and for the most part, fasten with one or two buttons. Very few models fasten all the way down.

Cutaways are popular, and there is a great variety of them. After them, the double-breasted effects are in favor. Usually with these there is a seam or a line of trimming down the skirt that continues the opening of the coat and gives an appearance of completeness that is lacking in most coat and skirt suits.

Among new models might be mentioned the draped cutaway, and one which fastens high over the bust at the left side, with both edges curved to a rounded point at the centre back, then faced all the way on the outside, with self-material.

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

MODISH EVENING GOWN

Oyster white lace was used for the skirt of a charming evening gown worn at a fashionable seashore hotel by a well-known Quaker City matron. Over the lace skirt was a tunic of black and white striped chiffon voile edged with a band of plain violet silk, which in turn was bordered with a band of jet embroidery. The bodice was attractively put together with the same materials in surplice fashion, a rosette of narrow lace hiding the meeting of surplice pieces at waist line. The sleeves were made from one deep flounce of lace.

CRINOLINE NOW IN FASHION

Will be Worn by Smartest Women of Paris During This Winter Season.

Paris, Sept. 27.—During the "Grande Semaine" at Trouville one of the best-dressed Parisiennes informed her intimates under the seal of secrecy that the sensation of the winter season would be the crinolines worn by the smartest women of the capital.

In order to ascertain the facts, a reporter called on M. Poirer, whose position as a "wizard of fashion" enables him to speak with authority.

"The Great Mogul dress, as it has been christened, will, I promise you, be all the rage this winter. The outstanding feature about it is the revival of the crinoline. Hoops will be employed at the bottom of the skirts, as in our grandmothers' days, but not in such exaggerated proportions. On the contrary, the new crinolines will be very little wider than the present skirts worn, and the wearers will have perfect liberty of movement. To the skirt will be attached the long tunic coming to the knees, the two being made in one piece. As regards trimmings, gold and silver facings and braid will be used plentifully."

RUPERT HAS TO TRADE WITH U.S.

New Additional Plant for Electric Light Works Will be Purchased from American Firm, and American Engineers will Test Machinery.

Reciprocity is not going to happen now, but the City of Prince Rupert will nevertheless purchase her additional plant for the electric light works from over the line. The machinery was recommended by Superintendent Ross of Seattle, who naturally chose the product of a firm with which he was familiar in the Eastern States. Last night, however, the council found themselves up against a new point not foreseen in connection with the purchase of this plant. The engine recommended by Mr. Ross is supposed to be a great coal saver. But the city wants a guarantee of its efficiency. A test of the plant is necessary before the city can take it over definitely, and as this test could be made here only under imperfect conditions, Engineer Ross recommends the employment, for a fee of about $100, of a New York firm of expert engine testers whose thoroughly competent representative would make a trip to the works and see that the engine was up to standard before shipment. This test would have to be independent of the local boilers of course, and could hardly be a perfect test for coal saving in Prince Rupert. Superintendent Ross suggests a clause in the purchase contract stipulating that in the event of the engine's not coming up to standard it shall be shipped and run in Rupert until an engine up to the standard is supplied to replace it. The matter remains in the hands of the electric light committee, arrangements for the test to be entrusted to the city's expert advisers in Seattle. The extra plant is required without delay.

CITY BUNTING FOR A WEDDING

City Fathers Agree to Lend the Civic Decorative Flags to be Used to Drape the Church at Miss Craig's Wedding.

Mr. Morte H. Craig, whose daughter is to be married on Thursday, wrote last night to the city council requesting permission to use the civic bunting to decorate the church for the wedding. The request was granted, not without some demur on the part of Alderman Clayton and Alderman Kirkpatrick who rather doubted the wisdom of establishing the precedent of lending out public property for a private ceremony. Alderman Clayton felt strongly that there was something inappropriate in placing at the disposal of Mr. Craig for his daughter's marriage the city's Union Jacks and Canadian National flags when he had reason to believe that the very parties now concerned with this request were not Canadian citizens, none too loyal to the British flag, and had even been heard to disparage the flag of Britain saying that "Old Glory" was good enough for them. Alderman Douglas, with one of his happy paternal inspirations, pleasantly changed the tenor of what seemed like patriotism grown just a trifle small, by saying that whatever the bride may have been before her wedding, she would be a Canadian citizen after it as she was marrying a Canadian. "If they were my flags I'd give them with a will for a wedding," he exclaimed with enthusiasm. Ald. Clayton moved that flags be not lent. Alderman Smith moved an amendment that they be lent provided they were returned in good order. This was seconded by Alderman Hilditch, and carried, so the brave old Union Jack of Britain with the Canadian emblem, will appropriately grace the union of hearts at Thursday's wedding.

DRAGON-LAND IN POLICE COURT

Picturesque Case This Morning Over the Gambling Raid Saturday. All Kinds of Orientals and Quaint Gambling Display.

Dozens of Orientals filled the police court this morning when the Chinese gambling case came up for trial. King Tai was there beside L. W. Patmore who appears for the Orientals. Mr. Peters undertakes the prosecution. Chief Vickers to whose vigilance the case owes its presence in the police court had plenty of evidence of play and some strong witnesses to support the charge that play was for money, and that a rake off had been taken. But in the entanglement of Oriental evidence the thread of the case got frequently curiously curled, and at noon with the case still in progress it was impossible to say which way the Magistrate's decision might go. All the golden, red, black and white spotted, and silver appurtenances of a Chinese gambling table littered the police court table. After Constables Swasey and McArthur had described the raid of King Tai's premises, and the hurried grabbing up of coins, and scuttling of Chinamen in all directions an Oriental named Hong described the game of fan tan, and picked out at least ten of his countrymen in the crowd whom he declared had been gambling. He mentioned a rake off of five cents on the dollar which Mr. Patmore disputed, and Mr. Peters insisted had been taken. He picked out a man Kwong whom he said had arrived in Rupert on "a boat with three pipes" meaning the Rupert or the George. A witness, Lee Kee, in an English summer suit tried to Smart Alex the interpreter but was brought sternly to plain answers.

STILL AFTER THE CITY ENGINEER

Ald. Newton Again Alleges That Costly Blunders Have Been Made by the Engineering Department and Blames Chief.

"I am satisfied that Colonel Davis is absolutely honest, and tries to do the best for the city's interests, but he does not seem to me to properly grasp the city's needs so as to work for the best interests of the community." So said Alderman Newton last night after charging the City Engineer with general incompetence because his prices for various works let to contractors were frequently ahead of several other bidders. Alderman Hilditch defended the engineering department, pointing out that the City Engineer's prices were usually midway between those of the lowest and highest bidders, and that he was sometimes lowest bidder also.

At present he is engaged in working three mineral claims up the lake, but the whisper that a fight-fest was due proved too much for him, and he will be on hand to challenge the winner.

COURTEOUS, EH WHAT?

Aldermen Douglas, Clayton and Hilditch Have a Three Cornered Duel of Words. "Alderman Douglas with his usual thick-headedness keeps harping on Seventh street cut, while I am referring to First avenue," said Alderman Clayton in council last night. "I don't think I am one bit more thick-headed than Alderman Clayton," declared Alderman Douglas with conviction cycling the fuzzy head of his colleague as if to estimate its density as he made his reply. Alderman Hilditch summed up the situation mercilessly thus: "Sometimes a man can see a thing. Sometimes he doesn't want to see a thing, and sometimes he fails to see it when it is right under his nose." This, with a contemptuous glance at the alderman on his right.

BOX SOCIAL MADE BIG HIT

Baptist Church Ladies Aid Novel Plan Realized no Less Than $125 Last Night. Was an Immense Success.

Lively, and original as it was, the plan of the Ladies Aid of the Baptist Church to hold a box social in the McIntyre Hall last night was crowned with real success. The ladies had kindly postponed their event to suit the Salvation Army festival last week, and reaped abundantly the reward of courtesy. A splendid crowd attended, the contributors of boxes provided lavishly for the purchasers, and some of the boxes fetched as high as five dollars. Their contents, good things for two, have every satisfaction. As auctioneer, Mr. Frank Ellis was witty and popular as ever, and the thanks of a pleased throng of merry-makers were most heartily accorded at the end of a delightful evening's programme to the ladies, and the pastor Rev. W. H. McLeod.

HURT ON CITY JOB

Should City Pay Hospital Fees for George Parks?

A letter from George Parks, the workman who was injured by a falling rock on retaining wall construction, was read at the council last night. This workman while not demanding compensation exactly find that as he was only laid up for about two weeks the regular workman's insurance does not apply sufficiently liberally to cover the expense of his spell in hospital. He requests that the city bear this for him as the injury was caused in regular city work through no fault of his own. Referred to the finance committee.
