ALICE ARM ATTRACTING ALL KINDS OF ATTENTION

ARRESTS MADE IN WELLAND CANAL CONSPIRACY

Allies Held Back All Attacks Of Enemy At Avoncourt

Gen. Pershing Has Been In Action With Villa's Troops

Attacks Of Enemy Repulsed At Avoncourt Fighting West Of Muse

Paris, March 31.—In Argonne we have repulsed two attacks with hand grenades directed against Avoncourt.

West of the Meuse the bombardment has gone on with redoubled violence. Last night the Germans delivered a series of attacks in massed formation. They advanced along three sides at one time upon the village, which formed an advanced salient for our line which it sheltered. On one side, our battalions after furious fighting which entailed considerable sacrifices on the part of the enemy, our troops were forced to evacuate. The ruined village still holds out.

East of the Meuse the night passed quietly.

In Wovre the Germans endeavored on three separate occasions to capture from us the works east of Haudremont but were repulsed.

Alice Arm Centre Of Attraction Now For Mining Men

The effects of the Alice Arm excitement is manifest on every hand now. There is a general movement in that direction from this city, while arrivals from the south state that the same excitemen prevails in the cities there, only the excitement is more intense than it is here.

At the Government wharf last evening there was all the attendant circumstances to indicate that a new camp was opening up, when the steamer Princess Maquinna came in. On board the steamer was a large party of men going in to engage in the work of constructing the road, under the contract that has been secured by M. Albert of this city. In addition to that there were others connected with the development there on board, also stores and equipment in quantity.

Sol Cameron, who is to have active charge of the work on the road and the wharf at the new camp, was among the passengers. He went on by the steamer to the north and will lose no time in getting started. Camps will be established and the work got under way, even before the snow goes off. Later there will be additional men sent in as the work progresses and there is an opportunity to make use of them.

In addition to the road that is to be built along the 18 miles of country separating the waterfront from the mining property, the company will erect a sawmill at the Dolly Varden mine, and thus get the raw material for the construction works and the mine that is needed.

W. Law, who is opening a store at the new camp, was a passenger also last night. He had on board a considerable part of his stock, and is taking more from here. He stayed off at Prince Rupert until the next boat on Monday, the Prince Albert, when he will go on to the new location.

Other stores sent stock up by the steamer last night. Charles Vaughan, of the Acme Company, went on last night. N. Scheinman will proceed in in a few days also. The store is already ready and stock went in last night.

C. W. Calhoun, who has been in the south for some months this winter, was another passenger on the steamer, on his way back to start active operations on the property that he is interested in on the Illiance, opposite the wharf that is being constructed for the Dolly Varden mine. Mr. Calhoun says, that in Seattle he saw blue prints of the mining properties in the Alice Arm country that he did not know existed. There and in Tacoma the excitement about this new camp was quite intense, and enquiries were constantly being made. He has long had faith in the location, and thinks, that now with good legitimate work being done by concerns that are able to carry it out, the camp will come into its own and be one of the best of camps on this coast.

All interested in the camp are anxious that there should be no unwarranted boom with respect to the camp there. They have faith in the district, but do not want people to be carried into the notion that the camp is better than it really is. Certainly the scene at the wharf last evening was enough to warrant the idea that before long that camp would be an active place.

T. R. Mackenzie, of Vancouver, representing the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, is in the city again, but without samples. During a fire at Hazelton he had the misfortune to lose his samples, and is accordingly handicapped to that extent until he reaches the south again.

THE OPENING OF SPRING WILL SEE THE HILLS FILLED WITH PROSPECTORS

Whole Interior Will Be Gone Over As Never Before This Year.

With Usk as a centre, the district in that vicinity is experiencing quite a boom in a mining way. Arrivals by the train last evening report that before many months pass there will be several producing properties in that part of the district.

The same is true of Hazelton district, and all along the G. T. P. The high price of metal and the good promise has prompted activity. As a result the hills will be prospected this summer as never before in the history of the country.

DENTAL CORPS IS NOW AN EFFICIENT UNIT

Remarkable Progress Made Since First Organized.

Major W. B. Clayton, of this city, officer commanding the Canadian Army Dental Corps, is in Vancouver on his return from Victoria, where he made an inspection of medical headquarters, says the News Advertiser. While at the Capital he was the guest of the Victoria Dental Society, and was an honored guest at the annual convention of the British Columbia Dental Surgeons. Major Clayton left the coast about a year ago and has seen service with the dental corps in France for several months, working between Ypres, Givenchy and Armentieres.

For the splendid work being performed by the dental corps, Major Clayton has only the highest praise. Starting nine months ago about 50 strong, it has now increased to 1,000 members, and has been the means of placing in the firing line thousands of men. At the beginning of the war tens of thousands of men were rejected on account of bad teeth, but since the dental corps has been in existence rejection on that account has dwindled until now it has been practically eliminated.

No less than about 40,000 operations are carried out every month, and there is more work to do if the men can be secured to do it says Major Clayton. When the corps was first started at St. Martin's Plain, Salisbury, Major Clayton said one morning an officer rapped at his door and informed him that he had a few patients outside. The "few" patients lined up represented about 1,000 men. In declaring that no man would be rejected, no matter what the condition of his mouth may be, Major Clayton said the government had paid a high tribute to the work of the dental corps. On their part the dentists are trying to make good, and to deserve the faith displayed in them by the government.

Arrests Of Conspirators Charged With Plot Upon Welland Canal

Washington, March 31.—The Department of Justice has announced that two alleged conspirators, one of them Captain Hans Tauscher, have been arrested for being implicated in a plot to blow up the Welland Canal. They are under arrest in New York.

A third is under surveillance in New England, and they expect to arrest a fourth in a few days.

Captain Tauscher is the husband of the Prima Donna Gadski, and the head of the Tauscher Arms Company, a representative of Krupp's.

The information against Tauscher was given by the German spy, Von Der Goltz, who was arrested in England and sentenced to death, the sentence being commuted on condition that he came to America and gave evidence against his associates. Tauscher had procured the dynamite supplies for the proposed outrage.

STRONG RECRUITING PICTURES AT MAJESTIC THEATRE

The Story Of Edith Cavell Drew Immense Crowd Last Night.

The Majestic Theatre was crowded last night as a compliment to the class of entertainment that is being put on at that house, under the new management. The great attraction last night which will draw equally large attendance on repetition this evening, was the Edith Cavell film.

This is one of the greatest recruiting films that could be imagined. It

Rome, March 31.—Political operations by the Allied forces in several parts of the Greek Islands has aroused excitement in Athens. ECONOMIC WARFARE AFTER WAR CEASES

THE CONFLICT WILL LEAVE A HERITAGE OF ANIMOSITIES

Australia Has Taken A Very Decided Stand In Matter.

The problem that trade will present after the war is beset with many difficulties The London Chronicle says "it bodes ill for humanity that this war threatens to leave behind it a legacy of embittered economic warfare." The Chronicle thinks that the prohibition of imports from the Central Empires into the countries of the Entente Powers possesses "inherent absurdity." It suggests instead that a pact whereby the importation of goods into those countries in ships belonging to Germany would be forgotten for the next twenty years would be "a just retribution for her unpardonable sin against civilization and humanity in causing this appalling war." It cites as a precedent the Statute of Cromwell, which excluded imports in any other ships than those carrying the British flag, which statute was in force until the middle of the last century.

Mr. Asquith recently said, when speaking of the conference to be held on trade-after-the-war, that it was not contemplated that there should be any interference with the fiscal independence of any of the nations or of the componet parts of the British Empire. This necessarily very greatly limits the scope of the discussion of any such conference. It does not, however, affect in any way such action as the several governments of the Empire may see fit to take after consultation among themselves. It will be exceedingly difficult to build a commercial wall around the Central Empires.

In those countries there are now resident nearly one hundred and fifty million people, and they have in the past and they will in the future be large consumers of the products of other countries. It is one of the fundamental axioms of commerce that countries cannot import if they are prevented from exporting, because commerce is an interchange of commodities, only the balances being settled in cash. The Teutonic Empires have hitherto bought much from the British Empire, France, Russia and Italy and this fact has to be considered, as well as the volume of German and Austrian exports in dealing with the problem of trade after the war.

In Togoland the British military authorities have already taken steps to root out German trade by deporting all enemy traders from the country The Australian Government has prepared a "black list" of enemy firms attempting to do business in the Commonwealth and has published it. One of the firms protested and asked that its name be removed from the list. Prime Minister Hughes refused. It was shown that the shares of the company were held as follows:

Two German subjects in Germany	78,447
One German subject in England	2,200
Three naturalized subjects (German origin)	190,721
Wife and daughter of German member of the firm (naturalized Germans)	95,470
Others	25,952
Total	392,790

The directorate of the company was composed of four naturalized Germans and that most of the workmen were British, but as the administrative staff was composed of Germans, the Prime Minister said it must be regarded as belonging on the "enemy list." In giving his decision he said:

"In my opinion the firm is German. The fact that it has thrown over itself the mantle of British nationality is interesting as showing by what means Germans impose upon the generous toleration of the British people. But it does not in the least affect the true character of the firm, which is controlled by German capital, directed by German shareholders, and the proper place for the firm is on the enemy list, from which I do not intend to remove it."

This illustrates the attitude of Australia toward German business houses during the war. How far it will be continued when peace comes remains to be seen, but it seems fairly safe to conclude that the Commonwealth will not be satisfied with any half measures. Up to the present there has been no pronounced expression of public opinion on this question in Canada, but it may be truthfully said that the general desire of the people is that they shall have as little as possible to do with German or Austrian products after the war.

THE MINING AWAKENING.

Prince Rupert seems destined to be the centre of a real awakening of mining interest this year. Those having the best interests of the industry and of the country at heart will hope that there will be no boom in the ordinary sense of the word boom, which presupposes over speculation or unduly advertising and selling of prospects where values do not exist to warrant the statements made about them. The Alice Arm country seems to be of sufficient worth to warrant very considerable development. Capital is now being spent there by a strong company. Others may follow. It is to be hoped that this will not create a desire to sell stock where there may be nothing to back up the claims made by promoters.

THE PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

It may appear strange that the Government at Victoria should, in the face of an estimated revenue of only $9,000,000, submit an estimated expenditure of $11,300,000. But it does not follow that at the end of the fiscal year of 1916-17, or on March 31st next, there will be this deficit. The improving industrial conditions in lumbering and mining, and the better prospects for increasing prosperity all round, which the Budget refers to, should result in the provincial revenues exceeding the very conservative estimate of the Finance Minister which is about a million less than the last fiscal year, thus causing the expenditures and revenues to more nearly balance.

The Finance Minister's statement shows that the Government have pared the estimates of expenditure down to the last cent. Since the fixed charges of the Province amount to $3,800,000, it is seen that it is difficult for the Government to make further reductions. For public works there is the large vote of $3,000,000, of which $2,500,000 is for roads, streets, bridges and wharves. How necessary this outlay is, an expenditure which in some provinces is charged to capital account and added to the debt of the province, is to be seen when account is taken of the numerous demands that have been made upon the Government this session for road improvements. The vote for hospitals has been increased by $150,000 also a necessary expenditure, that for all public institutions being slightly increased. Administration expenditure other than salaries has been decreased by $70,000; that for education by $50,000, and the vote for agriculture by $30,000. The cost of transportation has dropped by $40,000, and a saving of $100,000 has been made in miscellaneous items.

Thus the Government has been closely scrutinizing the estimated expenditure lists in an honest attempt to meet the decreasing revenues, without impairing the efficiency of administration or neglecting those calls upon the Provincial Treasury which the conditions of the Province imperatively demand be met.
