Trades And Labor Council Take Stand On Conscription

Trades And Labor Discuss National Service Cards And Conscription

The adjourned meeting of the Trades and Labor Council, for the purpose of considering the National Service cards, was held last evening in the Carpenter's Hall

After considerable discussion by the members on the merits and demerits of the card system, and what it might lead up to, the following motion was put and carried: "That the Trades and Labor Council recognize the Cards, and suggest that the members sign them, either in the negative or the affirmative as they saw fit."

The following resolution was also carried:

"That the Trades and Labor Council go on record as opposed to the conscription of the manhood of the country unless accompanied by the conscription of basic industries. The conscription of the industries not only for military purposes but to be retained as a socialized utility in time of peace."

President Macdonald presided at the meeting, and there was a representative number of delegates from the different unions present.

In introducing the subject, the President said that at the last regular meeting there had been considerable discussion on the subject, but no decision had been arrived at. He thought that an adjournment would give the members time to consider the question. He cited the cases of Victoria, Vancouver and Regina, which cities had voted against the signing of the cards. The officials of the B. C. Federation of Labor felt that this was an initial step to conscription. On the other hand, President Waters and the Secretary of the Dominion Congress of Labor, claimed that the card system led to conscription in Britain, but away from it in Canada. Many laboring men in the city were awaiting the action of the Trades and Labor Council in this matter, and therefore he thought that it could be disposed of at the meeting.

Ald. Casey, in speaking to the question, said that he had taken a position relative to the card situation, but did not know that they had to be returned by the 10th of January. They were well worthy of consideration and deliberation. Those favorable had signed the cards and those who were not had refrained from doing so. But as the time had passed he considered it a dead issue. He thought at this time the Council would show themselves as being behind in the negative, as the majority who had identified themselves had done so in favor of the move.

He had not signed and did not intend to for reasons. The Government had not acted in a way that merrited the whole support of the working classes. They had been treated with an Alien view. They were the heart and cream of the nation. Up to the last four days they had come to realize this, and when they are being put to the test they are appealing to the workers. He was glad the workers in their own way were giving them support according to their consciences. And it looked well for those who had given their all and their lives in the cause. He was not proud of this, and yet he was proud in a sense of the great sacrifice they were making, but was disappointed that they did not see things differently. Because it is plain that they do not see their own interests.

The card system ended the voluntary system, he said, and that the Dominion was verging on an era of conscription. The workers were ceasing in their stampede for enlisting and some would have to fill up the gaps at the front. They were in need of men. It did not take a philosopher to see that. He was not afraid of conscription, but if they need a man such as he the jig was pretty near up, and the war would be near an end. He was not afraid for himself. He thought the Dominion would soon be considering conscription, and that the people should be awake and register a protest. If they were going to take the workers, they should demand some recognition from the Government. Were the same conditions to exist as had existed in

WEATHER CONDITIONS IN NORTH PACIFIC STOP FISHERMEN FROM SECURING CATCHES

Southern Cities Are Unable To Get Prime Fish On Account Of Shipments To Larger Centres.

The demand on the market for fresh fish is becoming greater as the season advances. The severe cold and stormy weather in the northern Pacific waters is resulting in very few catches being brought into port. As a result buyers are unable to supply their customers.

Yesterday two schooners belonging to the Booth Fisheries made port, the Commonwealth with 8,000 pounds of halibut and 4,000 pounds of black cod. The Puritan with 31,000 pounds of halibut. The latter boat will not discharge her cargo until today.

The schooner Sitka also arrived in port with 22,000 pounds of halibut. This catch was transhipped to Seattle by the Chelohsin, where there is a derth of fresh halibut.

J. J. Price of Seattle, who is connected with the Fiddler Creek mines, is in the city .He gives the information that the mine has made a shipment of ore of 150 tons to the Selby smelter at San Francisco.

The ore is of a very high grade. This one shipment will give returns sufficient to pay for the expense of operating the mine up to the present date. The mine is a lead, silver and copper proposition.

Mr. Price explained that the reason the ore was being shipped to San Francisco was that the Selby smelter was the only one on the Pacific coast that could handle that class of ore.

He also said that they looked for great activity in that region during the coming summer.

DISASTROUS FIRE DESTROYS CITY BLOCK

One of the most spectacular fires that has yet occurred in the City of Prince Rupert happened yesterday morning, when the Merryfield Block was totally destroyed.

The fire was first noticed at 6:30, when an alarm was sent in for the brigade, but before the brigade arrived on the scene the flames had gained such a hold on the basement that from the outset the fight to save he building was a hopeless one.

The morning was bitterly cold. The flames were fanned by a wind from the north, and the smoke that issued from the building was so dense that the heroic efforts of the fire fighters were of little or no avail. The adjoining houses were fortunately saved.

The occupants of the flats in the building practically lost all their belongings and were fortunate in escaping with their lives, as the structure was little more than a pile of smouldering ashes two hours after the alarm was sent in.

Those residing in the apartments were: In the two front ones resided Mrs. Irwin and Miss Irwin; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Fuller and family. In the rear lived Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Merryfield and family; and Mrs. Kergin, Sr., and her daughter; Mrs. J. C. Halsey and her little son.

The occupants escaped from the blazing building in their night clothes, finding refuge at some of the neighbors.

TRYING TO FORCE AN ELECTION.

Frank Oliver, M. P., of Edmonton, late Minister of the Interior for the Dominion Government when the Liberals were in power, is rendering his latest song, "I Want My Old Job Back Again."

TRADES AND LABOR.

previous wars? The capitalist class were always assisted in every way. Everything was inaugurated for the capitalist class against the working class, and now they were going to conscript labor and sap the blood of the laborer. Labor ought to demand a hearing. If wealth and factories were conscripted, we would be able to say the Empire was at war for a purpose. The Government should take them over and retain them after the war for the workers and the returned soldiers. So that they could come home to their own shops. Then all would be willing to fight and no one would be making a profit. His remarks might be taken to be pro-British by some, but he was a true Britisher. His feelings were with the Allies and for the ends for which they fought.

President Macdonald, in speaking, believed that Mr. Casey was as good a Britisher as was in the room. That some of his views were in the best interests of the whole. The Trades and Labor Congress had gone on record as in favor of the card and to assist the Allies in their cause. The card did not mean conscription. Workers should consider the card. They should sign the card, but not necessarily in the affirmative. Mr. Casey made the remark that they did not know what they were fighting for. We have a fair and limited amount of freedom, and that was what the workmen were fighting for. All the unions in the city were supporting members at the front, and keeping their cards paid and in good standing. The British and her Allies were fighting for freedom, and that was what we must fight for if we expect to get it. The other fellow is not licked yet. The gaps must be filled, and labor can fill this gap and in that way assist. There is graft God knows in Canada, and as much on this side of the line as on the American. There was not a labor man in Austria or Germany could stand up and make a speech such as that heard at the meeting. But we have freedom. We would get our rights if we assist, but not otherwise. If the Dominion Government demanded men she would get them. He cited conditions in Australia. If labor is deceived by these cards, the Dominion Government will fail. They want to get out ammunitions. He was just as strong as any against conscription, unless wealth was also conscripted. Eastern cities were in favor of the card system. Certainly we were late in negotiations, but not too late to sit and make demands on the Government to come through. By doing so we have nothing to lose and something to gain.

Delegate Shaw was of the same opinion as Mr. Casey and his stand. He had not signed. The Governments had made so many promises that were not fulfilled. He cited instances in South Africa, and read clippings from a number of journals bearing on conditions as they exist in reference to labor. Also some bearing on the conscripting of wealth.

There was considerable other discussion on the subject in which Delegates Anderson, Pilford and McCorkindale took part.

vertiser is of considerable interest. Under the heading, "Big Eastern Market Takes All the Best Fish Through Prince Rupert — Spring Salmon Coming Early Next Month."

A little fresh halibut appeared on the Vancouver market yesterday, and the sentiment of the dealers is that for small mercies thanks should be returned.

"We must get the halibut, now that Prince Rupert thinks it can spare us from the big eastern markets, or that which they regard as not prime enough for Boston, Pittsburg, Chicago and the other great industrial centres that are now feeding on fish caught off the coast of this Province or Alaska," states one dealer. "The fish we are getting is quite small; too small for the export market, or fish that has been marked by the hooks. We only get second class halibut now, or halibut that has been marked as I say. Of course, it is good fish, but you cannot here get the first grade, because the demand is too strong back east."

Halibut has been wholesaling at 18 cents a pound in Chicago, so that the retail price in those big cities must be nearer 25 cents a pound than anything else. Yesterday the wholesale price here was 14 cents a pound.

Cold fish has been coming in more plentifully and the price is back at 6 cents wholesale.

A little steelhead salmon is coming on to the market at 14 cents a pound wholesale, and early next month one looks for a change in the salmon situation.

DISASTROUS.

Mr. Fuller was the only one of those living in the building who carried any insurance on his effects. The household effects of the other residents are a total loss.

The Dominion Customs examining warehouse was on the ground floor of the block, which was in charge of H. T. Cross. He informs The Journal that among those who will suffer loss from the fire are a number of the Prince Rupert boys who are serving at the front. They had received the privilege of storing their trunks and keep-sakes in the premises until their return from the front. The uniforms of the Earl Greys, or the 68th Battalion, were stored in this wareroom. About 130 in number.

The firemen are deserving of praise for the hard fight they put up to save the block, considering the disadvantages they had to put up with on account of the frost. J. Curry narrowly escaped with his life. A part of a burning wall in falling struck him. He was warned in time to almost save himself, but got struck on the side and leg. The injury is not serious.

The building, as we stated yesterday morning, was owned by A. Campbell of London, England. It was valued at about $16,000 and partially insured.
