German Aircraft Came To Grief Off Coast Of Denmark

London, Feb. 18.—No marine disasters were reported at the end of the first day of the German "paper blockade" of the British coast, but instead of that two of the largest German aircraft came to grief off the coast of Denmark.

One was a Zeppelin and the other a Parsival. In the case of the Zeppelin eleven of the crew were rescued and four drowned. In the other case the crew were all saved.

CANADIAN CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

IT IS HOPED THAT FROM NOW ON THERE WILL BE MORE LUNCHEONS POSSIBLE.

Bishop Du Vernet Has Been Named as President for the Year.

In the Court House last evening the Canadian Club held its annual meeting and named officers for the year. These are as follows: President, Bishop Du Vernet; first vice-president, Wm. Manson, M.P.P.; second vice-president, G. R. Naden; secretary, C. T. Heward; treasurer, Rev. W. E. Collison; committee, Rev. Canon Rix, W. E. Williams, J. H. McMullin, O. H. Nelson, L. W. Patmore, H. F. McRae, J. C. Halsey, and W. S. Fisher. Judge Young is a member of the executive ex officio as retiring president.

Judge Young, in retiring from office, explained that in the past there had not been as many addresses as could have been hoped for. This was due to the fact that it had been difficult to get in touch with prospective speakers before they arrived in the city. It was now likely that with the G. T. P. line completed speakers would arrive more frequently. The Club had felt that it should not have other than good speakers.

The secretary-treasurer, Dr. W. B. Clayton, submitted his report and also the financial statement, showing $25 on hand. Dr. Clayton also tendered his resignation.

The reports were adopted and Dr. Clayton accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his services.

A vote of thanks was also accorded Judge Young, who stated that he would retire from the office of president.

The election of officers was pro-

CANADIAN EXPRESS HAVE LOCAL AGENT

Increase In Business Has Made It Necessary To Locate A Special Representative In The City---A. D. Gillies Is Here To Take Up Duties

The increase in business here over the G. T. P. has made it necessary to open a separate office in the city. Up to the present time the express business has been handled by the local G. T. P. agent, T. C. Chalmers, at the G. T. P. wharf. From now on the local express agent will have an office there and look after all the business pertaining to that end of the service.

The local agent is already on the ground. It is A. D. Gillies, who comes from the Winnipeg office. He arrived last night by train, together with W. H. Nattress, the route agent of the Canadian Express Company, with headquarters in Edmonton.

Mr. Nattress points out that the decision to put an agent here was reached because of the ever-increasing business that the company has. The fish trade is making a lot of extra business and with a representative right on the ground it is hoped that the work will be done with greater ease.

He says that the business of the express company is developing in a very satisfactory way. Everything that can be done will be attempted to serve the interests of the fish business here.

LOYALTY OF THE GERMAN-CANADIANS

W. G. WEICHEL, MEMBER FOR NORTH WATERLOO, SPEAKS FOR COUNTRYMEN.

No Sympathy With German Militarism—Faithful to Canada.

W. G. Weichel, of North Waterloo, in moving the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne at Ottawa referred to the great interest taken by the Duke of Connaught in the preparation of the Canadian forces and the deep interest taken by the Duchess of Connaught in the Red Cross work and the Belgian Relief Fund.

Europe had been plunged in a stupendous struggle after nations had for years put their trust in arbitration, and peace societies had become active everywhere. The warnings of those who knew were ridiculed. The late Lord Roberts' prophetic warning against the impending struggle was now shown to be only too well justified.

Mr. Weichel referred to the splendid achievements of the British navy. Canada was feeling the effects of the war, but the arrangements made by the Minister of Finance with the Canadian banks and the Bank of England had averted financial disaster. The banks and other financial institutions were stronger now than before the war.

The welfare of the Empire depended upon the strength of the British arms and on confidence on the part of the British people. In Canada there should be increased

Referring to the position of the German-Canadians since the war broke out, Mr. Weichel said he felt that he was fortunate to live under the Union Jack. "I am proud that I am a Canadian, born in this country and having the same opportunities as all others living in the Dominion. It is a great asset to be a British subject.

"I am of German origin like hundreds of thousands of others in Can-

WENT THROUGH LANE OF BRITISH WARSHIPS

New York, Feb. 18.—Passengers arriving here on the British steamer Megantic from Liverpool said that extra precautions apparently were being taken to protect shipping in and out of British waters from torpedo or submarine attacks.

Charles A. Nelson, of Utica, N.Y. said the Megantic leaving Liverpool was closely guarded by destroyers until she was well clear of the Channel.

"It appeared as if we were going through a lane of warships," said Mr. Nelson. "The destroyers were moving back and forth at a rapid speed."

Mrs. Frank A. Ellis, of Prince George, arrived in the city last evening by the train.

LOCAL CONTINGENT MADE FINE SHOWING

Capt. McMordie Who Has Returned From The South Saw The Men Of Col. Peck's Command Entrain At Vancouver---The Members Were All In High Glee At Getting Off

While Capt. S. P. McMordie was in the south he had the privilege of seeing the local contingent in the 30th Battalion entrain for the front He had seen the men in their quarters at the Willows a few days before and says they were all fretting to get away. The final call came quickly and he happened to meet Col. Duff Stuart in Vancouver on the day they sailed and was informed that they would be in Vancouver in a few hours. He therefore was on hand to see them arrive and depart.

All were looking in excellent shape and were delighted to get off for the front. The Prince Rupert men, together with the other members of the 30th, felt it was exceedingly good luck on their part to get away before the others who were brigaded in the Third Contingent got any orders.

British Shipping In No Danger

London, Feb. 18.—The White Star steamer Adriatic arrived in Liverpool this afternoon from New York after an uneventful voyage. The steamer was flying the British flag all the way, crossing the Irish Sea at night.

PREMIER MCBRIDE ON SOCIALIST CHARGE

Sir Richard Said The Canadian Northern Had Been Largely Free From Complaints As To The Treatment Of Men In Hospitals

Victoria, Feb. 18.—In the Legislature today Sir Richard McBride entered a strong protest against the remarks of Parker Williams, the Socialist leader, in which Mr. Williams sought to convey the impression that MacKenzie & Mann in the construction of the Canadian Northern Railway had systematically exploited labor, and even resorted to small trickery in handling funds contributed by laborers for medical attention.

The Premier said the charges were baseless and added that during the past four years the Canadian Northern had expended $45,000,000 in the province. The charges, he said, were most unfair and undeserved.

During the whole period of construction, said the Premier, there was an almost entire absence of complaints from the employees. The railway camps were regularly visited by competent medical men. The general record of the Canadian Northern Railway in British Columbia was excellent, the Premier declared.

Canadian Railways Ask Higher Rates

Montreal, Feb. 18.—The Canadian railway companies have decided to apply for a general increase in freight rates owing to the reduction in the earnings, the lessening of the borrowing power and the increase in the operating expenses.

EVER AT WAR.

The Liberal organ is now wrathy because the Government at Victoria in extending an official reception to H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught spent so much money. It is admittedly difficult to strike what would be a happy medium in matters of that kind, but we are safe in saying the News would not have been satisfied in any event. Prince Rupert citizens have recollections of a reception here to the same distinguished visitor. The News on that occasion waxed wroth also; but not because too much was spent but because too little was expended. And so it would be in any event. The News and the party it represents appears to be parsimonious when the other side is in any way liberal. It is extravagant when the Government retrenches. It is also this; being in opposition it can find fault, but unfortunately that party has never been taken seriously by the people. This is accounted for largely by the alacrity with which that party turns somersaults on public questions.

After all, in a reception expenditure of the kind referred to is it not a fact that the great bulk of the money so spent goes into the hands of workers in various lines? The News should not forget that, because it is today engaged in a gigantic struggle together with the local leaders of the Liberal party to prove that their hearts are bleeding for the working man. These Liberal politicians believe an election is near and the votes of labor men are necessary. For a few months now crocodile tears will flow from these on behalf of labor.

ANOTHER UNION.

Coming together again and joining financial forces, the powers of the Triple Entente have given another illustration of their determination to see the war to an end in company, says the Montreal Mail. Great Britain, France and Russia can put more money into the balance than any other three nations in the world.

It is surely an epoch-making event when three nations such as these join together, purse to purse. The result is a pile of gold and a mountain of credit. From now on goods ordered by the Allies from any neutral nation will be given without the slightest worry. Indeed anxiety to tap such a huge treasure-box may be of considerable influence in stimulating the sympathies of frail humanity the world over to support the cause of civilization.

What pleases us best, however, in reflecting upon the huge financial backing of the cause against the Huns is that the moral backing is even more impressive.

SIX FRANCO-GERMAN WARS PREDICTED

BISMARCK'S PROPHECY IN CONNECTION WITH FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Interesting Interview Given by th Old Statesman on Future.

"You (the British) will never take up arms against us in the cause of France."

"Russia will never join France against us—of that be assured—it is impossible."

These were two predictions of Prince Bismarck, the astute German diplomatist, made in the course of an interesting private interview granted to the late Mr. W. B. Kingston in the year 1867. The latter prophecy was uttered with great earnestness, the Chancellor leaning half way across the table which separated him from the British interviewer. The text of the conversation has just been published in London and is of particular interest in view of the changed attitude of the powerful nations referred to.

"A war between such near neighbors and old enemies as France and Prussia, however, it may turn out, s only the first of at least six; and supposing we gained all six, what should we have succeeded in doing?" reads one notable paragraph in the interview. "Why, in ruining France, certainly, and most likely ourselves into the bargain; do you think a poor, bankrupt, starving, ragged neighbor is as desirable as a wealthy, solvent, fat, well-clothed one?"

Belgium Not Wanted.

"He believes in peace, and for many reasons," wrote Mr. Kingston, privately, after a four-hour conversation, in which the possibility of a war with France was referred to. This war, as everybody knows, did actually break out.

"The attack must come from her," said Bismarck. "We shall never begin a war, if war there ever be, for we have nothing to gain. Suppose France entirely conquered and a Prussian garrison in Paris, what are we to do with our victory? We could not even decently take Alsace, for the Alsaciens are become Frenchmen, and wish to remain so. Belgium we do not want; besides England guarantees her integrity Therefore, should this possibility which is always dinned into my ears as a probability, ever come to pass, France will undoubtedly attack us, in which case, if she stand alone, she is lost, for our system is such that the further she may advance into our country the more armies will spring up against her, like Cadmus' teeth.

"France the victor would be a danger to everybody—Prussia to nobody. That is our strong point England wishes to see a power in Europe strong enough to counter balance France. That is the reason she supported and sympathized with Austria as long as Austria seemed t

This preparation has been so generally successful in clearing drains that it is bought over and over again by those who have tried it, but inasmuch as no on can know the actual condition existing within a pipe, it is absolutely impossible for the manufacturer or the dealer to guarantee the result.

be strong—that is the reason why England is now turning towards us—because she sees in us the continental contrepoids to France, which you English, in spite of your loudly-protested alliance with Napoleon, are too sensible not to understand the necessity of. Your allegiance has already cost you dearly in continental influence, and I should not wonder if the proud English people were to get tired some day of playing a bad second fiddle to the old foe they have so often conquered. You will never take up arms against us in the cause of France.

Ramshackle Empire.

"I have as little fear of Austria. Austria is like a house built of bad bricks, which, however, are kept together by an excellent mortar. How do you call it? Cement—that cement is her German population. Whatever good has been done to her barbarous provinces has been done by the Germanising of their institutions; the inhabitants of the different Slav, Magyar and Latin provinces must use German to understand one another. An alliance, therefore, with France, having for its purpose the arrest of German unity in its majestic progress, and the devastation of German territory, would be fatal to Austria, which ever way the tide of victory set. She would surely be ruined through such an alliance, and she knows it. I am not the least apprehensive of an Austro-French alliance, I give you my word of honor. Russia will never join France against us—of that be assured—it is impossible.

"It is true that there has been some talk of an understanding upon the Oriental question of a common plan of action in the east. Prince Gortschakoff, Russian chancellor, is a funny fellow; he has been taken in six or seven times by French humbug and protestations of an Entente Cordiale, which always lasts from three to five weeks: then he always finds out that he is the victim of French cunning and ignorance mixed, and begins to curse and swear by all the devils and saints in the Russian calendar "qu'on ne le prendra plus." And then he drops into the next trap with inimitable naivete. Poor Gortschakoff! He gained his prestige in the Polish business, and thinks the only way to keep it up is to lend himself to the Oriental proclivities of Russia. Popularity is his one ambition. Russia is in a horrid state, and a big war is out of the question for her until she has set her house in order. If I were the Emperor's Prime Minister (as he very much wished me to be six years ago) I should begin by cutting the army down to exactly half its present number and knocking the privileges of the Tchinovnik on the head. That foul and useless Tchinovnik causes half Russia's misfortunes. Just now public feeling in Russia is as bad as can be against France—but, whatever happens, make up your mind that we are quite safe from Russia.

"I do not think I need tell you why a French-Italian offensive alliance against us is out of the question; 'sela saute aux yeux.' But I will tell you something that I am told by our agents at both courts, who are not often mistaken—and that is that Napoleon is going to add another to the list of horrible mistakes he has made within the last five years. He is going to let the Italian troops occupy the Pontifical States with the mere exception of Rome itself, by which he will bring down the whole of the Catholic, Legitimist and Orientalist parties upon him, and make his position infinitely worse than it is, and it is bad enough, God knows. But to return to our peace or war prospects. There remains to France, therefore, in Europe (putting Denmark and the other Scandinavians out of the question—they are not worth counting) only Spain as an ally." Then Bismarck looked at me comically, and we both laughed.

Napoleon's Mistakes.

"What do I think might bring about war? Of course, an excuse would not be wanting if the French really needed one—but I think the greatest danger of all proceeds from Napoleon's vacillating state of mind. He is become old—but he is also become young—that is to say, he indulges in vagaries—gives way to impulses—and allows his wife to exercise a great deal too much influence over him. The Mexico business was her doing, as I suppose you know. He is not the man he used to be—and Europe will never be safe while his present state of intellect continues.

"Another ground of danger is the intense ignorance and mendacity of the men who represent France everywhere. Look round Europe for one capable or honest French agent! All are knaves or so crassly ignorant and prejudiced that an intelligent schoolboy is worth all of them put together. Grammont (Duc de Grammont, then French ambassador at Vienna, subsequently French foreign minister), for instance, is half a fool and a notorious liar—I beg your pardon—I should have said a lover of hoaxes. Benedetti (Ambassador to Germany) is more clever than the run of French statesmen, though quite as dishonest—but why is he more clever? Because he is an Italian. These fellows will neither learn anything nor will they keep quiet; the consequence is that Napoleon is worse informed upon European affairs than any other sovereign. They made him go to Salzburg. You were quite right about that meeting—it was an utter fiasco—but I know it would be so from the first—and my people warned Napoleon of it and advised him not to go.

German Plans.

"You would like to know something about our plans, our aggregation projects, and our ambitions, would not you? I will tell you exactly what they are, and only two or three besides the King and myself know. First of all, there is Austria. Now the German provinces of Austria except the Tyrol and Salzkammergut, both of which are blindly Catholic and Hapsburg, may experience a strong gravitation towards us—I do not deny it for a moment.

"But I assure you if I were offered Upper and Lower Austria to morrow, I should refuse them. They are too far off; there are Bohemia Austrian Silesia, Moravia, with three-fifths Slav populations, between us. If those provinces of German Austria were where Bohemia, etc., are—if Prague and Vienna could change places—I do not say no. Then we might think of it. As it is, we do not. I assure you it is our earnest desire to see Austria strengthen herself round her German nucleus and stand firmly alone Of course, we would not suffer any new oppression of Hungary any more than we would of the Austrian Germans, but we shall gladly enter into a fast and sincere alliance with a constitutional King of Hungary, who, as Emperor of Austria, allows the German element full play in his other provinces. There is Bohemia, Silesia, etc., again. They would prove a second Poland to us. We should have to learn how to manage the Czechs—whereas Austria has some experience in that task, although I admit it has been very bad experience. W don't want Bohemia, Silesia, Moravia, or any other part of Austria—let her get strong and be our ally.

"All the nonsense you have heard about part of Russian Poland, Courland, or the Baltic provinces, is as stupid as it is untrue. It is true there is some dissatisfaction amongst those Northerns, half German, half Scandinavian, on account of the Russian language being imposed upon them—but we shall not interfere. What should we do with provinces which we could not defend? Besides, depend upon it, we shall not meddle with Russian territory or affairs any more than they will with ours.

"Beust is trop fin. Some time ago, about the vexed question of Bavaria and Wurtemberg, I let him know that, although we were prepared to maintain openly the treaty of Nikolsburg, we would give our best attention to any proposals he might like to make, and if we could not accept them would faithfully keep his secret. He wanted to be too clever and answered to my confidential communication that he thought the propositions ought to come from our side—that it was our turn to hold out a hand. I did not agree with him, and so the matter dropped. But we have since been very careful about South Germany, and have remained quite passive. We can stop as we are for ten years or more, only insisting upon the terms of the treaty—but the Southerners will not let us—and if they come to offer us an accession of power, we shall certainly not kick them downstairs. But we wish it clearly understood that if Austria must disintegrate, we don't want any of the pieces. There s nothing in our attitude to annoy or alarm France—I think, barring the accidents at which I have hinted, there is nothing to prevent the maintenance of peace for ten or fifteen years, by which time the French will have got accustomed to German unity, and will consequently have ceased to care about it.

"I told our generals this spring, when they endeavored to prove to me by all sorts of arguments that we must beat the French if we went to war then: 'If you can make it as clear to me as that God be thank we can crush France and occupy Paris, I will still do all I can to prevent war; for you must remember, gentlemen, a war between such near neighbors and old enemies as France and Prussia, however it may turn out, is only the first of at least si wars; and supposing we gained al six, what should we have succeeded in doing? Why, in ruining France, certainly—and most likely ourselves into the bargain; do you think a poor, bankrupt, starving, ragged neighbor is as desirable as a wealthy, solvent, fat, well-clothed one? France buys largely of us, and sells us a great many things we want—is it in our interest to ruin her completely? I strove for peace then—and I will do so as long as may be—only, remember, German susceptibilities must be respected, or I cannot answer for the people—not even for the King! The French, I am quite aware, are buying horses and provisions. That does not frighten me. Their harvest is a bad one, and they are quite right to take precautions against distress. They cannot want provisions for a war with us, for in such a war they must be the aggressors, and if they invade Germany they will find food and provender enough for ten French armies. Their preparations do not disquiet me in the least. We are always ready."

LOYALTY OF THE GERMAN-CANADIANS

ada. They have felt keenly the situation since the war began. This is a delicate subject, but I know I am speaking to men who want to see all classes in this country welded into one harmonious whole.

"The Germans in Canada have been of frugal habits, possessing business ability and always looked on as desirable citizens.

"Since the outbreak of war a very few papers have been casting reflections on the German-Canadian. I am glad that those insinuations have come only from a few.

"The people of German origin in Canada are loyal to their King and to their country. They have given ample evidence of this fact.

"The people in Canada of English, Scotch, and Irish origin love the country from which they or their ancestors came. The German-Canadians are the same and they are proud of the achievements of Germany in science, art and literature, but they are not proud of the violation of the neutrality of Belgium nor the destruction of Louvain. German progress in science, art and literature is one thing.

"German militarism is another.

"They want the curse of militarism removed the same as you do.

"German-Canadians are going from Waterloo, Huron and Bruce to fight together with other Canadians. They will do their duty in the fight for liberty and free institutions and to drive the rule of militarism from the face of the earth."

Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.
