HEAVY BOMB FIGHTING OCCURS BEFORE DIXMUDE

W. A. NOBLE ARRIVED HOME FROM BATTLE FRONT

How Coast Was To Have Been Devastated by Germans A Year Ago

Plans of a plot which was to culminate in the seizure of Vancouver, Prince Rupert and other cities of the British Columbia coast by the Germans have just come to the attention of the authorities. Details of the plan are said to have been worked out by Alvo von Alvensleben, a German broker, of Vancouver, who was in Berlin when war was declared, having been in the German capital for several weeks of the early summer last year.

The information obtained, is that while in Berlin, Alvensleben cabled to a Teutonic resident of Vancouver, who now resides in Seattle, asking him to call a meeting of those whom he could trust. The object was to agitate the citizens of Vancouver to ask a German squadron to visit Vancouver and Victoria during the summer months and invite their own destruction.

In accordance with the instructions of Alvensleben a meeting was held, not in the German Club, where gatherings of that nature were usually convened, but in a room in a down-town hotel. Several meetings in private were later held by those vitally interested in the scheme, and the only information which leaked out was that it was to be announced at a later date that the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Nurnberg, Leipzig and Geier were to pay a friendly visit to San Francisco and Seattle in return for the visit paid to Germany several years before by the United States fleet which encircled the world.

Upon the official announcement being made to this effect the traitorous residents of Vancouver, many of whom had assumed the cloak of Canadian citizenship, were to bring every influence at their disposal to bear to have the citizens of Vancouver invite van Spee and his ships to partake of the hospitality of this city.

The date set for the arrival of the Kaiser's ships was to be, it transpired, about the time that Germany had prepared to declare war. Then, with

Serbians Have Accepted Proposals Of Concessions Made by Bulgaria

Athens, Sept. 3.—It has been announced here that the Serbs have accepted in principle the proposals for territorial concessions to Bulgaria, with the reservation that the new Serbian frontier remain in contact with Greece in some parts.

London, Sept. 3.—The London Daily Chronicle in an interview by Percy Alden, M. P., with Sir Edwin Pears. Mr. Alden points out that Sir Edwin, ever since 1873, when he settled in Constantinople, has been in close touch with Turkey and the Balkans. As president of the European bar in that city, as far back as 1881, and as a newspaper correspondent who called attention to the Moslem atrocities in Bulgaria, he may be trusted, says the interviewer, to give a calm and unprejudiced opinion as to the events that are taking place in Constantinople, Athens, Belgrade, Sofia and Bucharest. Among other things, Sir Edwin said:

"If Bulgaria can only secure the promise from Serbia and the allied powers that Macedonia will be returned to her, my own impression is that, despite King Ferdinand, who is known to have Austrian leanings, she will come in. If she enters the arena Greece will follow."

When asked whether King Ferdinand's opposition to war with Turkey would make Bulgarian intervention impossible, Sir Edwin replied:

"Ferdinand is a born diplomat. He began life as an Austrian officer and possesses vast estates in Hungary. He is vain, ambitious, and I fear, unscrupulous. The foreign policy, owing to the group system in Bulgarian politics, is almost entirely in his hands. Nevertheless, Bulgaria is democratic in name, and may become at a crisis like this democratic in reality. The king regards Bulgaria as furnishing the pressure of the Balkans. I think it would be a mistake to attach much importance to the influence possessed by royal families, but that influence must not be underestimated. At this moment in Roumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Sweden are strong pro-German elements in the court. The democracy, however, for the most part takes a different view and I am sure that the Bulgarians, but for their chargin over the second Balkan war would long ago have entered on our side.

In regard to Greece Sir Edwin said:

'The Queen, who is the sister of the Kaiser, as you are aware, has great influence with King Constantine, and it is she who quite recently brought Greece within measurable distance of a revolution. The concern of Venizelos today is rather how far he can rely upon the army."

RECEPTION ACCORDED FIRST OF LOCAL SOLDIERS TO RETURN FROM THE FRONT IN THE GREAT WAR FOR FREEDOM

Arthur Noble, who left here with the first contingent that went to serve in the war that is now being waged against German aggression in Europe, returned last evening by the G. T. P. train from the east. He is the first soldier to return from war, having received an honorable discharge after being severely wounded at the front.

W. A. Noble who has been identified with the city of Prince Rupert from its inception almost, reached the city last evening from the east. With characteristic modesty he had planned to get home without the citizens knowing of it. His plans were frustrated. He had sent word to the city that he would probably get here about September 10. His friends knew that this was a hoax, and accordingly laid plans to guard against any surprise by the enemy and had outposts placed along the line of approach, to herald the approach of the veteran. Yesterday morning word was received that Private Noble was on the train and coming strong. Dr McCutcheon got word early, and a few minutes later came a message to George W. Morrow. At once the word was passed out and steps taken to avoid any surprise by a veteran fighting man.

Little knowing that his reception was all being prepared for, Mr. Noble enjoyed his trip along the G. T. P., meditating upon the laugh he wou'd have on his many friends in the city the next morning when he called upon them at their places of business and extended the glad hand to them.

Just before he got to the city boundaries, however, Conductor Moxley, an old time friend of the soldier, however, broke the news to him that he was living in a fool's paradise, and that the people of Prince Rupert knew all. Then it was that he revealed from his language that he had served with the army in Flanders.

The city turned out in force to receive him. As he stepped from the train with his non-chalant air, he was received by the school children and the citizens generally, who at once extended on him a hearty welcome home. Looking little the worse for the trials that he had gone through. Mr. Noble after a year's absence defending the Empire, was accorded a right royal welcome.

A meeting had been called hurridly yesterday morning in the Hotel Prince Rupert to arrange for a reception, which should be necessarily of an impromptu character largely. A Fortier placed his auto at the disposal of the committee in charge, and accordingly it was used to convey Mr. Noble and representative men from the station to the Court House, where the reception was held.

Upon alighting from the train, Mr. Noble was escorted by the Mayor, William Manson, M. P.P., and Major McMullin to the auto through crowds anxious to greet him and welcome him home. The school children and male chorus sang patriotic airs, and then headed by the bag pipes with the Irish Fusiliers stationed here, the 68th Regiment, the cadets and the school children, a procession was formed and marched to the Government Buildings.

The Mayor on behalf of the citizens extended a hearty welcome to Mr. Noble. He had, the Mayor said, gone through trials and tribulations since he left Prince Rupert. He felt it was most fitting that he should be given this reception. He fully recognized the sacrifices that he and his comrades had made. None could have anything but admiration for what he had done in upholding the Empire. He had returned showing the scars of battle. He had done his part nobly, and would always be remembered.

In being called upon to reply, Mr. Noble was greeted with prolonged cheers. He expressed his pleasure at being home again, and said he was glad to have been a member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He had heard what General Alderson told the Canadians; that he was proud of the badge he wore on his arm; indicating that he commanded the Canadian Force.

Mr. Noble said he had served at Festubert with the 7th Battalion from May 15 to May 25, when they had won high honors. The 30th Battalion with which he left Canada, had lost 75 per cent. of its men in battle. The Canadians had been where something was doing all the time.

Referring to the uniformed men before him, who had turned out to assist in the reception, he hoped they would soon get to the front, for "you are all needed," he said.

Mr. Noble is here as a result of the wounds he has received on the field. Speaking to the Jouranl, he says he is ready to return at any moment to the trenches if he could be ac-

BACK FROM THE FRONT.

There arrived in the city last evening the first of the soldiers from here who went to serve the Empire. W. A. Noble after risking his life to uphold the Empire and defend us who stayed at home, has returned. There is no reason why Arthur Noble should go and risk his life any more than hundreds of others—in fact all others who remained at home. One who was at the meeting which arranged the reception, very forcibly put the situation, when he said it appeared to him that there were very few present who should not go to the front. And so it is. Men like Mr. Noble who have protected us who stay at home, are entitled to well at the hands of the public bodies in the city. These men should not be forgotten even if men who might equally as well have served, but who did not, have to vacate posts to make room for them.

THE RUSSIAN TRADE.

There will arrive in the city today Gregory Wilenkin, the special representative of the Minister of Finance of Russia. Prince Rupert has much to appeal to this representative on. With a railway line unexcelled on the continent in the way of capacity for carrying; with a port that is able to take care of all kinds of shipping; with the shortest route across the Pacific, the claims of Prince Rupert to trade with Siberia are the best.

HOW COAST WAS TO HAVE.

a powerful fleet in the sheltered waters of the Gulf of Georgia, the cities of Vancouver, Victoria and the great coal fields of Vancouver Island would have been at the mercy of the Huns, while the railway terminals here and the almost completed drydocks and terminals at Prince Rupert would have been easily destroyed.

All trade with the Orient would have been cut off, the Australian cables would have been cut, and in place of the coast cities which have sent so many men to the trenches in Flanders, nothing would have remained but charred ruins.

As a matter of fact, the Germans attempted to carry out an assault on the British Columbia coast. The Leipzig was afraid alone to enter the Straits of Juan De Fuca, guarded by the Rainbow and two submarines, but a little later the Nurnberg, evidently furnished with coal and other supplies by German agents, either in Mexican or Northern Pacific waters, is believed to have gone as far north as Prince Rupert.

The reason she feared to pounce on that city was the belief that the British cruiser Newcastle was in the neighborhood. Fearing a combat with that doughty vessel, the Nurnberg headed away south again and joined the main squadron of von Spee.

Various Buyers Got The Catches Brought In For Sale.

The arrival of fishing boats continue to bring good supplies of halibut here. Yesterday there were about 100,000 pounds brought in.

The Corona, Captain Swanson, brought in 40,000 pounds which was sold to the Cold Storage Company. The Myrtle Endricsen, Capt. Austin, had 40,000 also on board, which was sold to the Rorvik Fish Company. The Lillian M. brought 8,000 to the Cold Storage.

There were quite a number of smaller boats came into the harbor with smaller catches that were landed here.

RECEPTION ACCORDED.

cepted. He has lost his right eye and wears a false one, which renders him unfit for an active part in the war. Otherwise he is fully fit and suffers nothing from the wounds he received.

He did not get away to the front with Maor Peck's company. At the time the call came he was on furlough in London. Major Peck seized the opportunity that presented itself, and got away without waiting to get the absentees back. A few days later Mr. Noble followed, going to the 7th Battalion under Major Victor Odlum. He had not long to wait, but got into active service within a few days after arrival at the front at Festubert.

He was wounded in the wrist and in the eye. The loss of his eye followed, but otherwise he recovered fully. He says that there is a great deal of luck in connection with the wounding. Some get struck down in the first engagement they enter. Others come through unscathed for months.

He brings encouraging news relative to Capt. Don Moore. He says that Dr. Willoughby, of Victoria, a nephew of Dr. Jones of that city, told him he treated Capt. Moore in a base hospital. This has given him hope that Capt. Moore is still alive.

There is no advantage to be gained by depreciating the German soldier in the opinion of Mr. Noble. The Germans are well equipped and are good fighters. It takes hard fighting to overcome him. At the front there is no doubt in the minds of the British and the French as to the ultimate result. There is doubt as to the time when victory will come.

The Canadians have made good, he says. There are none who stand higher in the public opinion than the Canadian soldiers. Speaking of the men from here, he says they behaved most valiantly. Major Gibson and "Dad" Baxter are right in the front rank. When hard marching was required, these men came in better than some of those who had been used to packing all kinds of loads over the trails.

With respect to the food, there could be no complaint. They have lived excellently. The restrictions with regard to teeth, he believes, were good. Hard tack had to be used and it was good food. It was useless to tackle it without good teeth, however.

How many British soldiers are in France he would not venture to say. The roads seemed to be crowded with them, but the number cannot be ascertained.

The fighting spirit of the men from here was of the best. Frank Holland paid a premium to get a chance to get to the front with the draft for the Princess Pats. He saw Crippen the day he lost his life. He was a bomb thrower with a Lieut. from Victoria, who was shot down three times as he led his men before he would finally give up.

Major Peck stands high with his men, says Mr. Noble. He had made good in every particular and looks well. His return is only temporary, he says, if he can get back again. The men are needed and he is ready to give his experience in advancing the cause of Empire.
