Love's Young Dream.

She (precluding it with a kiss)—So you went down to see papa this morning about a rather—er—tender matter, eh?

He (sweetly)—Yes, darling.

She—And you poured forth your inmost soul—

He—Yes, dear. I confessed everything.

She—Made it perfectly explicit about your present position and your prospects for the future, eh?

He—Made a clean breast of it all.

She—Told painly the sweet secret of my loving you in return, and only awaiting his sanction, and all that, eh?

He—Yes, love. I quoted your own gentle love vows and your resolves to stand by me through thick and thin forever.

She—That's right. You certainly are very brave. How did he receive all these tender tidings?

He (hesitatingly)—I — er —really—I don't know as yet.

She (in amazement)—But you saw papa, did you not?

He—Yes. I stood on the street corner and saw him come out of the office and go to get his lunch.

She—And then you went to lunch with him, eh? Oh, how clever!

He—No, I went up into his office and poured forth my soul—into his phonograph. He's got it all by this time.

She—Ah, that's what he meant then when at dinner to-night he said he took his hatchet and smashed his phonograph to bits.

He—Thank heaven!

She—For what, pray?

He—Just think! I might have been the victim. That's what I call escaping by the skin of my teeth. Come, darling, let's elope. (They do).—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

C. Drinkwater Wray, and a man by the name of Morrison were pulling a boat, loaded with rock, across Owl Creek, when Wray slipped and fell in the creek, draging the other fellow in also. If Morrison would let go the rope so as to extricate himself from Wray's grasp, the boat would be off, down the stream so he had just to hold on and let Wray use him as a means to clamber out.

They both looked like something the cat would bring in on a wet day.

HERE AND THERE

A. P. Christie, Government Agent at Ashcroft, accompanied by his wife and son, paid Lillooet a visit on Saturday last, and were all very greatly impressed by our advantages, and were loath to leave so beautiful a vicinity. Mr. Christie would like to have spent a week, being an enthusiastic fisherman, and Cayoosh and Lake creeks are ideal trout streams. He was formerly constable at Slocan City until his promotion to be Government agent at Ashcroft where no doubt so capable an official is greatly appreciated. They started for home Sunday morning, via Lytton.

A well-known B. C. physician points out that Diet has an influence on health greater than anything else. One of the fundamental rules, is to put no food into the stomach while it contains a remnant of the last meal.

SINGLE TAX.

A famous exponent of Henry George's idea is now in B. C.

He believes it will cure all our political ills, by putting a single tax on the source of all wealth, the land, instead of all sorts of indirect taxes on the products of labor. He calls a protective tariff, highway robbery; and a revenue tariff, sneak thievery.

Vacant land, he says, should pay its share of the burden, and at such a rate that the owners would be compelled to make use of it, to make it pay.

According to the Vancouver World, and a miner named Howard Thorpe, there is a rush beginning towards the Fraser bars owing to low water. This rush, it is expected, will reach here at about the same time as the Salmon rush. Miners who can live on salmon and spuds, need not go to great expense. Tons of Taters in this region.

The Sudbury Nickel Mines.

Fifteen years ago the world's supply of nickel was chiefly drawn from the mines of New Caledonia, supplemented by the Gap Mine in Pennsylvania, and a few isolated workings in Sweden and Norway; to-day about one-half is derived from the Sudbury district in Northern Ontario, where mining operations began in 1886. Some years ago experts employed by the United States Navy Department examined the Sudbury deposits of nickel-bearing one (a pyrrhotite containing from 1 1-3 to 3½ per cent. of nickel, and from 2 to 4 per cent. of copper, which does not, therefore, deserve the name of "kupfer nickel" or "goblin-copper") and reported that there were 650,000,000 tons of ore in sight, and since then other important discoveries, some of which are already being developed, have been made within an area of about 2,000 square miles. In 1900 the Sudbury district produced 7,080,000 pounds of nickel in "matte," which averages about 25 per cent. copper and 18 per cent. nickel, and there can be no doubt that its product will eventually monopolize the world's markets, and that Sudbury is destined to occupy much the same position in regard to nickel-mining that Kimberley holds in regard to the production of diamonds. Wherever strength, malleability, the capability of taking a fine polish, and freedom from rusting are required—as in the construction of cannon, small arms, armor-plate, boilers and machinery—nickel steel is in request, and the fact that the price of nickel has risen considerably in the last two or three years would appear to show that the supply has not increased pari passu with the demand.—London Morning Post.

Lord Coleridge on the Bench.

Lord Coleridge, Lord Chief Justice of England from 1880 until 1894, has been described as England's greatest criminal judge. A writer in the Pall Mall Magazine says that in appearance he has the very embodiment of judicial dignity. He was ever courteous and considerate, and never tried to win cheap applause at the expense of an inexperienced barrister or overwrought witness.

He had a curious habit, on the bench, of leaning back in his chair and closing his eyes, and this sometimes led the unwary to conclude that he was asleep.

On one occasion, during the trial of a prisoner for setting fire to a dwelling-house, the counsel for the defence was much upset through his ignorance of the chief's habit. Throughout the day he had been trying to get before the jury the fact that a man other than the prisoner had openly threatened to burn down the particular house.

Each attempt to introduce testimony which the rules of evidence would not admit, was checked by a prompt objection, sustained by the court. But when the speech for the defence was begun Lord Coleridge went off into his usual doze, and the counsel saw his opportunity.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said he, "let me come to another and more serious point. We have heard from the witnesses that a certain Bill Smith had, prior to the fire, been dismissed by the prosecutor from his service. Now, gentlemen, I can tell you something—"

"But not about Mr. William Smith, I'm afraid," came from the bench, in gentle tones which conveyed no sense of irritation or annoyance.

Death Roll of the Plague.

Over a million and a half people in India have died of plague since the disease first made its appearance in Bombay in 1895. In 1896 there were 1,700 deaths. The Mortality increased to 56,000 in 1897, to 118,000 in 1898, and to 135,000 in 1899 The following year there was a big drop the number of deaths going down to 93,000, but the hope that the end was in sight was quickly dashed to the ground, the year 1901 seeing no less than 274,000 deaths, while the total rose in 1902 to the terrific figure of 577,000. Since then matters have grown even worse, the first three months of the current year adding roughly another 300,000 to the list of those who have perished from the disease.

OWL CREEK HATCHERY.

Our Own Correspondent

The public will be glad to hear that the Salmon and other fish are coming up the creek fast and that the mosquitoes have taken unto themselves wings, and have flown. Everyone is busy here, expecting a big run. But it's always the Unexpected that happens! —as we found the other day. I was in the Hatchery, working on the troughs, with some of the other men, —while Drinkwater Wray and Morrison were engaged in boating rocks across the creek, strengthening the weir. Above the roar of the creek, which is now at high water the splashing of salmon could be distinctly heard, but we were all of us frightfully startled by a terrific splash, that raised the creek several feet, and a roar like a boiler explosion with a steam syren accompaniment.

We all rushed out to see the cause of this awful disaster,—— It was Drinkwater Wray fallen into the creek.

It appears that Drinkwater was rowing the boat and Morrison was sitting in the stern, the creek raging furiously. The rower was putting all his weight against the current, when crack! went one oar, —and Drinkwater went head over heels into the foaming creek. Unfortunately, as he went, one of his No. 13's caught poor Morrison, and before he knew anything about it, he too was plunging about in the icy waters.

"Hold to the boat," shouted Wray in a voice of thunder, "I will tow you to the shore," and taking hold of Morrison's trowsers by the teeth, Drinkwater succeeded in swimming safely to shore, saving Morrison, the boat and the load of rock.

When Drinkwater landed, he was a sight. In stentorian voice he immediately began to explain the disaster, frequently interrupted by the spouting of water, from his throat, ears, eyes, and boots. Poor Drinkwater had drunk water, and drunken water enough to last the rest of his time here.

"COCK O' THE WOODS."

Another Attempt Being Made to Introduce the Capercailzie.

An effort is being made to stock Ontario forests with capercailzies, the famous game bird of northern Europe. Under the direction of Mr. Thomas Gibson, Director of Provincial Parks, 80 birds have been imported from Norway and were recently released in Algonquin Park. The greatest care was taken with the shipment, and the birds were in good shape when released.

They cost $8 each in Sweden, and the cost of transportation was no small amount. A special commissioner was sent to New York to meet them, and take them to their new home.

The capercailzie is a large, glossy, black grouse, and as it thrives in all the pine forests of Northern Europe, it is thought that it should get along in Ontario. It became extinct in Scotland and Ireland during the eighteenth century, and has been reintroduced to the Highlands by methods similar to those now adopted by the Ontario Government. The bird is familiarly known as "Cock o' the Woods."

An effort was formerly made by Mr. Gibson and three were imported. They were placed in Rondeau Park on Lake Erie and the weather turned very warm. To make them more comfortable their keeper moved them to a shady, cool place, and next morning found their throats had been cut by a weasal.

It is hoped this trial will have better luck. Mr. Gibson, who is still in Northern Ontario, saw them released, and says that most of them rose straight up and went off to the wilderness. Others were more affected by the two weeks' confinement, but after hobbling around for a few minutes they, too, took to the woods.

Governor of Western Australia.

The London Star says that Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford, G.C.B., whom the King, in pursuance of the apparently settled policy of having military and naval Governors for the constituent colonies of the Commonwealth, has appointed to be Governor of Western Australia, entered the naval service in July, 1852, and as a youngster was present at several of the operations in the Black Sea and the Baltic during the war with Russia in 1854-5. As a commander he served in the Serapis, when it carried the King, when Prince of Wales, on his memorable visit to India. As Flag Captain on the Shah, on the Pacific station, he took that vessel into action with the Peruvian ironclad Huascar off Ylo in May, 1877. In 1884, when in command of the Monarch, he received the special thanks of the Admiralty for his efforts to organize the flotilla on the Nile for the relief of General Gordon. For the Benin expedition he received the K.C.B., and the Grand Cross of the Bath followed among the coronation honors.

Talking About Canada.

"When I first came to the Senate," said Senator Cullom to those lunching at the same table in the Senate restaurant the other day, "I had great ideas about a greater United States. My eyes were not turned southward, where everybody seems to be looking nowadays, but northward; I was just as sure as sure that before this time we should have gobbled up Canada. I did not think that we were going up there, and make a conquest of the country, but I could not see any chance of its getting away from us. When, when I was elected the second time, and went out to Illinois to make my bow to the Legislature, my little speech was filled with the annexation of Canada. Since that time, I have watched Canada slipping farther and farther away from us, until now it takes a brave man even to suggest that some day the Stars and Stripes may float beyond our northern boundary. I have often wondered if any of the members of that Legislature remember my speech. If they do, they must think that I am a mighty bad prophet."

"Yes," said Senator Burrows, who had listened as befitted a man so much Mr. Cullom's junior, "you could not pry Canada away from Great Britain now with a jimmy."—
