THE LILLOOET PROSPECTOR

Vol. 1 No. 46 | FRIDAY, SEPEMBER 27, 1912 | $2.00 Per Year

RAILROAD CONSTRUCTION TO START WITHIN NEXT MONTH

NEWS FROM THE CORONATION

Arthur Noel stated to a Prospector representative that the recent strike made at the Coronation group recently was even larger than estimated in last week's paper.

"The showing," said Mr. Noel, "was larger than any of us imagined and there is now, according to the expert's report, over 600,000 tons of high grade ore in sight. This is not a continuation of the Countless, but a new lead struck in crosscutting from the No. 4 tunnel and runs parallel with the Countless.

"Work on the Pioneer is moving along in fine shape and the lead was uncovered in a cross cut at about 300 feet from the surface.

"To anyone that understands mining there is no doubt but what the Bridge River now has beyond question one of the biggest strikes ever made in British Columbia, and we are highly pleased with the results and realize that the Coronation group is no longer a prospect—but one of the richest mines in the province.

"The Lorne has an excellent showing, but the work has not been pushed as formerly, but, with the advent of the wagon road, new machinery will be installed on both the Coronation properties.

"It is a cause of great satisfaction to all interested in the district to travel over the new wagon road. The old-timers, who helped blaze trail into that district can readily appreciate the difference between the old trail and the new road. Those in charge of the road should be congratulated on the efficiency and speed shown in their work so far and within the next three weeks the work will be completed.

"On our way in my wife and I stopped at the Telephone camp and we surely enjoyed the hospitalities extended to us. The boys are certainly a happy family and to anyone seeing the work accomplished by them in the past two months there is no need of a recommendation. They have "made good" as the work shows for itself.

Carpenters Will Arrive to Establish Camps Inside of Two Weeks. Will Freight Over Lytton Road

Contractors J. W. Stewart, P. Welch, F. Wilson, J. Callahan and A. Kellett arrived by auto from Clinton on Tuesday and proceeded to Seaton lake, where they laid out camp and commissary sites.

Mr. Kellet, chief of construction, says: "We will have a force of carpenters erecting camps within the next ten days and dirt will be flying within the next 30 days. Every effort will be made to push the construction as fast as possible.

"Our head commissary will be established at this end of Seaton lake, which will be our base of supplies. All our supplies will be brought over the Lytton-Lillooet road, and not over the Squamish trail as reported.

"I expect to return the first of the week to make preparations incidental to the immediate starting of construction work.

Three hunting parties returned this week and say that while they did not bag an exceptionally large amount of game, they thoroughly joyed their outing. They all brought some trophies and highly compliment their respective guides on the succesful way in which they handled their parties.

Geo Gibson and D. McLeod are down from McGillivray Creek.

Arthur Phair's special with Chaffeur Rafe Stephenson and Joe Russell as mechanician, burned the dust up on our city streets today.

Cole Murchison is remodeling his pool room this week.

Wm. Abercrombie left for Pavilion today.

The Lillooet Rooming House is now open and Mrs. Collins, the landlady, has shown much skill in the tasteful arrangement of her rooms and it is safe to say that the house will soon be filled with roomers.

That Dance Tonight.

Terse Town Tales

The seven-passenger car Glide returned Tuesday from a trip up the Cariboo road and report a fine trip.

C. L. Palmer, who has been employed at the McGillivray Creek mines, is spending a short vacation with friends here.

Harry Keary returned the first of the week from the North Fork, where he was working his assessments on the Sure Winner group.

The Boy Scouts are making an excellent showing and the movement is now an assured success.

George Hurley says he shook hands with the Duke---but "we hae our doots."

E. J. Holbrook is a business visitor from Moha.

W. W Jones left this morning for Coast points.

Wm. Nichols arrived from Lytton via Weaver's "air line" this morning.

Chief of Surveyors F. E. Ashe was down from Anderson Lake last night and reports everything going fine in the survey camp.

J. M. McKinnon, accompanied the railroad contractors up the lakes the first of the week and says that there is no doubt but that the railroad work will start at once.

Hank (Duberry) Graham will discontinue the apple show which he has conducted in the Victoria for the past two months.

THE U. S IN WRONG

(From the Bellman Minneapolis, Minn.)

The Bellman has had more to say about the effect of this Panama Canal bill than most American publications, because it realizes the very grave nature of the questions involved and desire to impress upon its readers, especially upon western readers who do not usually concern themselves with matters concerning our international relations. The fact that, if the United States continues to act upon a false, dishonorable and discreditable basis of action action in administering the affairs of the canal, the result cannot fail to involve the nation in serious complications, which may go so far ultimately as a resort to force.

The question at issue does not merely concern the matter of tolls charged shipping for the use of the canal. This is a small matter. No foreign nation cares a rap how much we fondle and coddle our coast shipping, but each and every nation in rhe world is deeply and vitally interested in the protection of treaty rights. If these are to be disregarded whenever it suits the whims or conveniences of the contracting parties, then the whole fabric of international agreement, which the world is sacredly bound to uphold, goes to pieces and a chaos ensues, out of which war may follow as easily as the sheriff and bankruptcy follow the man who repudiates his financial abligations.

The Bellman repeats in all seriousness that, if we persist in ignoring all treaty abligations and refusing to arbitrate the question whether or not our actions constitute such a denial the position tends rapidly toward a state of thing that may very readily be fanned into hostile action. To such a pass has such an unthinking and uncaring congress brought us and it behoves the American people to give this matter profound consideration, lest when the acute issue rises they be unprepared to comprehend its cause.

It does not require the understanding of a diplomat to comprehend the meaning of the covenant made between Great Britian and the United States, to the support of which the honor of the nation is sacredly pledged. Any intelligent person, who is cabable of reading English can interpret it. Having done so, he must admit that the Panama Canal Bill has placed the United States in the wrong, and no amount of verbal jugglery or political subterfuge can make this wrong right. The longer we persist in our false position, the further we will go astray and the only possible course open to us is fhe repeal of the infamous Panama Canal bill, with all its secret and open iniquities, as soon as possible and make a fresh start with a fairer and higher appreciation of out treaty obligations and our duty to our own people and the world without.

A KOSHER GAME OF POKER

Max Levy and ome of hss friends in the Jewish quarter of New York, always played a quiet little game of poker under the most harmonious circumstances in a certain little saloon, until Friday night last, when there was a fight. The result was that Levy was a prisoner in the market court charged with maliciously breaking six lager beer glasses. Levy, according to all accounts had been a steady winner at the game. There was no winner although the ante was generally a penny and the raises rarely exceeded four cents. Levy's luck made him the envy of the crowd. He had been known to win as much as much as $1.45 at a single sitting. On Friday night the players. Shortly before midnight Mike Lefkowitz arose and said: "Schentlemens, I should say already dot ve should break up der game when its twelf times by der clock. I also move dot ve play all jackpots until dot time." The other players agreed to that proposition. Shortly before the time was announced Levy announced that he was even with the game. "Schentlemens," he said, "I would probose dot oider next round of jackpots ve make dem five cents by der ante." The others were agreeable. When the hands were dealt in the last jack beads of perspiration stood out on Levy's brow. He opened the pot for two cents —Mike Lepschlitz raised him three cents. Levy called him and drew one card. Lepschitz stood pat. Levy bet two cents and his opponent raised him one. "I will gall you, but I have got you beat," said Levy, throwing down four kings. "You vas "You vas a very safe player," said Lepsceintz, "und you play them quite close to your ribs, but I want to announce that I have here a handt that can beat anything beat with cards. I would bet mine push car on it." Vat is der fine handt you haf," asked Levy. "Oh, I hate to show it, It was too bad—too bad to beat four kings, bet poker is poker and he laid down his hand. It consisted of the deuce, four, six, eight, ten of hearts. "Vot you mean? Vot kind of a hand do you call dat?" asked Levi excitedly. "Vy, dot is a kosher mashina, It beats any hand in der pack. It is better dan five aces." "Dis is nod according to Hoyle, cried Lepschitz. The other players sided with the latter and told Levy that a Kosher manshina was a standard hand and rarely ever held by anyone. Levy rose from the table and according to the story told to the police demanded that the proprietor of the saloon return to him the 30 cents he lost in the game. The saloon keeper refused to return the money and Levy swore he would get satisfaction. He then smashed the six lager beer glasses that were on the bar. A policeinfn was called and Levy was arrested. When the magistrate heard the story he fined him five dollars. "Chudge," he shouted, before he was locked up, "can I speak to you just a moment?" "Certainly," said the magistrate. "Dot fine vos pretty hard on a poor man. Please, Mr. Chudge, vill you make der saloon man to give me back der 30 cents." The magistrate refused and Levy was locked up.

MONOTONY

The same old face on the pillow
The same old boots by the door
They're all very well for a year or so,
But later they're apt to bore.
The same old weary chatter,
The same old accents shrill,
The same old why'd I marry you,
The same d'ye love me still?
The same old hand at the teapot,
—and of this take careful mem—
The same old voice on the landing
When returning at 2 a. m.
You soon get used to beauty
And virtues are duller than sins
These same old beauties and virtues
Oft times result in has-beens.
The same old—but I tire you,
I've only myself to blame,
I married when I was twenty-three,
And you—you'll do the same.
