Of Current Topics.

e Final cision.

It is just about a year since The Week published a series of editorials and several expert ticles on the water question in Victoria. e conclusions there arrived at have never en shaken by subsequent happenings, d the principal one has been finally con- med by the decision of the Privy Coun- in the Appeal case which came to hand Wednesday. The Week has always intained, and still maintains that Gold- eam is the only possible source of supply a permanent system. This fact is de- mined by three considerations. First, t it is the only source which is known be capable of yielding an abundant ntity. Second, it is the only source h a sufficient head to give by gravita- n all the pressure required for fire pro- ion as well as for general purposes. ird, it is the only source yielding water known purity. If Victoria goes to ke or to the Highland district, it will e less volume and less head, and on sent showing probably inferior water, ough the latter point is not so certain. toria has waited many years for a water tem. Victorians have agitated many rs; they have figuratively asked for ad and have been offered a stone. They e literally asked for water and have n given mud. They are tired of crank s and freakish notions. They have onstrated by turning down two water aws and by witholding their support n the petition for a third that they will sanction any patchwork scheme. They t a whole scheme, a big scheme and a manent scheme. When the best scheme his kind is put before them, backed by authority of engineers of standing, will vote whatever money is required arry it out. The citizens of Victoria e a very different view of its future n that entertained by Mayor Morley his aldermanic kindergarten. They eve it is going to be a big city, and it can only be kept both safe and tiful by a bountiful supply of water. people are not disposed to haggle over cost, and what they now require is without a moment's delay the most rt advice shall be secured, a complete ect mapped out and an opportunity n them to vote upon it. They have ted the motto, suggested by The Week ar ago, as embodying their ideas on subject. It is repeated for the benefit Mayor Morley and those who have ed him to delay matters for nearly two s. It is 'Water, pure water, plenty ater," and it will have to come from lstream.

Red ing.

The Victoria City Council has commenced what is called an investigation into the recent fire and its dant circumstances. The first ses- developed one or two well marked ares, but that most in evidence was determined attempt of the Mayor to a "red herring" across the trail. With criticism of the Fire Department he ifested quick sympathy, and displayed a little pettishness in endeavouring to t evidence that would damage Chief son and his staff. The intention was obvious to be missed. It is impossible to divert the attention of the citizens from the one outstanding feature of the catastrophe—lack of water. Everyone who witnessed the fire and the work of the firemen knows that they did the best they could under the circumstances. It is not Chief Watson and his men who should be censured. Public opinion has long ago decided that point, and if the Court of Inquiry, of which the Mayor has constituted himself judge, jury and prosecuting counsel, is only seeking an avenue of escape from the consequences of its negligence by seeking to place the responsibility elsewhere, the time will be wasted, as the eyes of the public have been opened to the real facts of the case.

A Weighty Contribution.

The best article which has ever appeared in the Victoria Times will be found in its issue of Wednesday last. It is a letter by an Australian named Bean, reprinted from the London Spectator. The letter canvasses in a most intelligent, capable and fair manner the subject of a "white" Australia, and sets forth in moderate language the disadvantages of Oriental immigration. The purpose of the letter is to make an appeal to the Imperial Government to intervene at the present stage to prevent any further influx of Orientals. The article points out that within three days' sail of Australia there are 40,000,000 Mongolians on the Island of Java, who are a constant menace and who may at any moment invade the colony. It is impossible in an editorial note to review the whole of the letter; it is full and strong and should be read by every British Columbian, because it raises in concrete form the very difficulties which are threatening this Province. Perhaps, however, the most important paragraph is a foot-note by the editor of the Spectator, whose important position adds great weight to his utterances. Every word is a word of wisdom, and his comment may be summed up in one sentence. It is, that the menace is a real one, and that everyone must sympathise with the views of the writer, but that the remedy is in the hands of the Australians themselves, rather than in the hands of the Imperial Government. In order to exclude Mongolians they must bring in white men. Hitherto they have set their faces against immigration of every kind in the supposed interests of organised labour. This is a mistake and a policy which, if persisted in will retard the development of their country, and keep alive the Mongolian menace. The remedy is an honest, capable, governmental immigration policy. The views of the editor of the Spectator so admirably expressed should receive careful consideration.

A Judicial Impasse.

On May 26th, 1679, the British Parliament passed the Habeas Corpus Act, one of the great bulwarks of English freedom, and second only in importance to Magna Charta. The main provision of this great Act is that it secures the liberty of the subject. Previous to its passing former sovereigns had, without remorse, left their enemies to pine and waste for long years in damp, unwholesome prisons. Mary, Queen of Scots, had lain for eighteen years in English dungeons, untried. Sir Walter Raleigh had lain for thirteen years, and Archbishop Laud for four, in a solitary cell. But by the Habeas Corpus Act no sovereign dared keep even the meanest subject in prison for more than a certain time, without bringing him to a fair trial. On the 22nd of July, 1907, Mr. Justice Martin of the Supreme Court, by a line of conduct which would appear to be indefensible, even if it is not unconstitutional and illegal, prevented the hearing of an appeal, the result of which would have determined the question of the personal liberty of a British subject, one Hansen, and to this extent constituted himself the instrument of thwarting the intention of one of the great charters of liberty. It is difficult to see what Mr. Justice Martin could hope to effect by his action. In the correspondence which has passed between himself and counsel for the appellant, as far as The Week is able to judge, his sole object in refusing to attend the Court of Appeal was because the notice calling upon him to do so was a verbal one through the registrar, who acted on the instructions of the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Martin claiming that he was entitled to a written notice direct from the Chief Justice. If this constitutes the gravamen of his complaint, the popular verdict will be that he has sacrificed the liberty of an individual for a chimera. Indeed it is difficult to conceive of a man of his intellectual capacity basing so serious an action upon such trivial grounds. It is still more difficult to believe, when one bears in mind that the present system of summoning the Appeal Court has been in vogue since the session of the Federal Parliament, which terminated in March, 1905, under which Mr. Justice Martin has been summoned to special sessions on previous occasions in precisely the same manner as on this, and has accepted and complied with such notifications. If he had a conviction that there was any irregularity in the procedure he could have raised the question in a form which would not have prejudiced individual liberty or public interest. That he should have created an impasse by preventing the Counsel of a prisoner from submitting to the Appeal Court a question of improper imprisonment and the right to liberation for a period of nearly two weeks constitutes a grave indictment, and one which even the high office which he holds should not prevent Mr. Justice Martin from being compelled to defend before a constitutional tribunal. The Chief Justice has fortunately been able to devise means of constituting the Appeal Court by calling other judges from their labours, but for this no thanks are due to Mr. Justice Martin, who at the time of writing still maintains his attitude, and has evinced no disposition to assist in furthering the ends of justice. The action of The Week in calling public attention to this matter reflects the opinion of a large and influential section of the community. It does so with regret because it recognises that Mr. Justice Martin is a man of the highest personal character, a man of integrity, and a most painstaking and capable judge. While his attitude in exacting ceremonial recognition for the Judiciary and the Court has oftentimes verged on the extreme, it has generally been felt that his desire was to uphold the dignity of the Bench and to discourage those flippancies which are so conspicuous in American courts, and so subversive of a proper respect for the representatives of the law. But there is a limit to all things, and on several recent occasions that limit has been reached in the case of Mr. Justice Martin. Some of his passages at arms with brother judges in open court have been hardly less indecorous on the part of a judge than the conduct of witnesses and of counsel, which has been severely rebuked, and has led in some cases to exclusion from the Court. Surely Mr. Justice Martin must see that his attitude in the Hansen matter is calculated to bring the administration of justice into contempt to a far greater degree than could be effected by the most unseemly conduct on the part of persons of lesser importance. Brother Judges, Counsel and the general public have put up with his vagaries because they regarded them more or less in the light of idiosyncrasies, or at any rate amiable weaknesses; but the time has come to make a stand. Mr. Justice Martin is not the master but the servant of the law, and in its administration, the servant of the people. Even at the risk of sacrificing a little personal dignity, and pocketing a little personal pride, he will have to learn that a liberty-loving people will not for one moment tolerate, even in a judge of the Supreme Court, a line of conduct which imperils the liberty of a British subject by denying him the privilege of showing whether he is entitled to his liberty or not.

A Step Forward.

In our news column will be found an important announcement with respect to the development of Vancouver. After due consideration it has been decided to establish a Stock Exchange and Mr. C. D. Rand, the President, fully justifies this policy in the admirable address delivered at its opening which is printed elsewhere. By degrees Vancouver is taking on all the leading features of a great city. It is not long since the promotion of commercial and industrial companies was confined to Montreal and Toronto. Then a step was taken westward, and Winnipeg began to figure in the list. Now by a leap Vancouver comes to the front as a financial centre, and its new Stock Exchange, established under such favourable auspices, will materially help forward its development. In its first president it has a man of proved capacity, wide experience and sterling character. The investing public will have confidence in his administration, and the growth of the Terminal City will owe more than a little to the additional facilities for investment afforded by the Stock Exchange.

Arion Club.

The concert given by the Arion Club at the Gorge Park on Thursday evening was one of the most enjoyable functions of the season. Remembering the success of the one given last year thousands of people journeyed to the Park and were fully repaid by a musical treat, to the success of which everything contributed. With such delightful weather as we are now having, open air entertainments are decidedly the most fashionabale attraction, and it should be possible to arrange with the Arion Club for other concerts during the season.

Motherland.

Legal Comfort.

Don't be downhearted. Remember that it is often the other side's best witness who wins your case for you. —Law Clerk.

America and Japan.

The concentration of the naval forces of the great Republic in the Pacific is the reply to Japanese claims. It is the intrepid acceptance of the risk of war in preference to submission to Japanese demands.—Eclair, Paris.

Inconsiderate Youth.

The modern young lady is neither punctual, orderly, nor particularly sympathetic. She is so busy leading her own life that she has no time for considering others or avoiding their susceptibilities.—Lady Violet Greville, in the Graphic.

Our Faithful Alley.

We possess the friendship of Great Britain, and we shall remain faithful to our alliance. If William II. goes to London he will not change a situation which simple politeness did not create and will not suffice to destroy.—Petite Republique, Paris.

Still Worth Beating.

France has beaten us at golf, New Zealand and South Africa at Rugby football, Australia at lawn tennis singles. Belgium has beaten us at rowing. But we are still worth beating, and a championship on English ground is still the greatest ambition of every good sportsman.—Weekly Dispatch.

Blessing in Disguise.

You cannot tell from where you stand whether what happens to you is a blessing or a curse. Take the Western farmers, for instance. They have been cursing all winter at the railways for failure to remove their grain. Since then wheat has gone up in price—dollar wheat is in sight—and the farmers have their grain on hand instead of having sold it at sixty cents.—Kincardine Review, Ontario.

Employers To Pay.

Mr. Churchill has stated in Parliament that, though Chinese coolies were repatriated in opposition to their wish to renew their contracts, the employers would be called on to pay for their return in accordance with their bond.

America's Pacific Fleet.

If Japan's intentions are pacific, our fleets in the American Occident and the Asiatic Orient would make no friction. On the other hand, if Japan's intentions are sinister, the Pacific Ocean is the very place for the American Navy.—Post, Washington.

Mr. Chamberlain's Dream.

Though Mr. Chamberlain may be stricken and laid low—only for a time let us hope—his dream lives in the united demand of the Colonies for a realisation of their proper position in the political economy of the Empire. The Colonies demand, without one dissentient voice, that they now, and before it is too late, be made integral parts of an undivided and indivisible Empire.—Times of Malaya, Ipoh.

Union Jack Club.

A few gifts such as that made by Mr. Horn will soon sweep away the lingering suspicion that Australia is in a very bad way indeed, and restore its bygone reputation as the Land of the Golden Fleece.—British Australasian.

The Price of Peace.

Woman's dress is man's safeguard, the foundation of the tranquility of his home, and of the commercial wealth of the nation. Give a woman dress, and she will be good-tempered and happy. Peace will reign, and your sky will be unclouded.—Crown.

Transvaal's New Flag.

It is stated that the new Transvaal flag will bear the four colours (vierkleur—green, red, white, and blue) of the old republic, with the Union Jack in the upper left-hand corner. This is more or less according to the custom in other States of the Empire notably Cape Colony, Queensland, Victoria, and Canada, which all have the Union Jack in the upper left-hand corner and some special Colonial design on the red or blue ground colour of the rest of the flag.

Sir A. Conan Doyle Engaged.

A marriage has been arranged and will take place in September between Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of "Sherlock Holmes," and Miss Jean Leckie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leckie, of Glebe House, Blaikworth, and Monkstown Cottage, Crowborough.

Saved 441 Lives.

Richard Roberts, for forty-two years coxswain of the Deal lifeboat, during which period he and his crew have been the means of saving 441 lives, has been presented on his retirement, on behalf of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, with a gratuity of £50 and a pension of £12.

Nelson's Union Jack.

The Union Jack which flew from Nelson's flagship the Victory, and which covered his remains on the journey by water to Greenwich Hospital, was sold by auction at Mr. Stevens' rooms on Tuesday for 120 guineas.

The White Ensign which hung at the rear of Nelson's funeral car on its way to St. Paul was sold for 20 guineas.

Dangerous Friends.

The worst enemies of peace are its friends.—Broad Arrow.

After-dinner Speeches.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine 'after-dinner" speeches out of a thousand are inspired by a mixture of alcohol and vanity.—Sketch.

Pigeon's Great Feat.

Of 2,000 pigeons liberated at Rennes at 4.40 on Wednesday morning nearly all had reached their homes in Yorkshire on Thursday afternoon. The first bird covered the distance—380 miles—at the rate of 1,202 yards per minute, or almost forty miles an hour.

India pays the whole cost of her home mail service; Australia, wiser in her generation, or more able to fight for her rights, makes the Mother country share in the cost of her home mail. The other Colonies may also obtain some sort of concession. If this is so, why should not India receive one too? India's importance to England is greater than that of any of the Colonies.—Mail, Madras.

The New Grand.

The performance this week at the Victoria vaudeville house has been characterized by the number of musical turns which appear, and they are all good in their distinctive classes. "The Columbia Four" are excellent, both as comedians and as quartette singers; the basso in particular impressed me with a voice which sounds like an organ pipe and makes a splendid background to the part singing. It is long since I have enjoyed anything of this kind as much as I have the singing of these performers. As a comedian, eccentric and black, Wilbur Held stands high, and delighted his audience both with his songs and with his patter. One thing I would point out, viz., that during the course of the present year we have a terrible number of the same jokes; but I suppose that can't be helped, and anyhow there are always some good new ones. Miss Daisy Gordon has a sweet voice and her rendering of "Annie Laurie" was loudly encored on the first night. The Carol Sisters are young, but skilled instrumentalists, and their playing on banjo, and mandolin has been very good. Deery & Frances put up an amusing dialogue interspersed with singing and are distinctly amusing. The Illustrated song has proved a success this week, both the pictures and the music, the latter in the capable hands of Mr. Stanley being above the average, while the Moving Pictures have evoked roars of laughter. Next week the star feature billed is a comedy sketch dealing with domestic difficulties, which is reported to have scored an immense success on tour.

Newest CURTAIN Materials

Latest Goods That You Can Not See Elsewhere.

Now, here is newness in curtain materials that we are positive will please you. Newness in materials, newness in design and the most artistic color combinations make these late additions worth a special visit from you. The new arrivals comprise a shipment of "Sundour" Unfadable Madras Muslins, Cruggleton Tapestry and Crepe Curtains. These three lines are new to this town. They have never been on sale here before, and they are to be seen only at this "Home of Newness." We endeavor always to keep the newest and best in every department of this big business, and, after considerable trouble and delay, we are able to present for your inspection some of the choicest materials imaginable.

Absolutely Unfadable in Strongest Sunlight.

We want to call your particular attention to a most important quality these lines possess, and that is their unfadable colorings. "Sondour" is the distinguishing name given to goods dyed by this process, the secret of which is controlled and used by only one firm.

Materials dyed by this process are absolutely impervious to the direct rays of the scorching sun, and we have in our curtain department samples that have been exposed to the direct rays of the sun for weeks, that are unchanged in color.

The manufacturers have enjoyed unexpected success in the sale of these goods, and it was with difficulty we secured a limited supply. On this account we advise an early visit.

Dainty "Sundour" Madras Muslins, 50 inches wide, ranging in price from, per yard, $1.75 to.....85c

Crepe Curtains, 54 inches by 3 yards, one pattern only, at, per pair $8.00

Cruggleton Tapestry is a light material similar to Madras, but made in small patterns on a plain ground. The neatest and prettiest light curtain goods yet placed on the market. Four patterns only, at per yard $1.25

Mrs. (Dr.) Wolverton of Hamilton was the guest for a few days last week of Mrs. Fauklner of Nicola street, on her return from a visit to Victoria.

Mrs. D. H. Hays of 1559 Beach avenue expects next week Mrs. C. M. Hays, wife of the president of the Grand Trunk Pacific R. R., and daughter, Miss Louise Hays. Mr. Hays and party will follow a week or ten days later. They will be the guests of Mrs. Hays for an indefinite time.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod of Barclay street have as their guests Mrs. Darling of Everett, sister of Mr. McLeod, and Mrs. McLeod's sister, Miss Lauder of Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Davidson, a bride and groom, will arrive in the city Monday evening from Montreal. While here they will be the guests of Mrs. Davidson's aunt, Mrs. D. H. Hays, of Beach avenue.

Mrs. Faulkner and daughter, Miss Lillian, will leave next Saturday for a visit to Toronto and Beleville. Mrs. Faulkner expects to be away for three months, but Miss Lillian will remain in Toronto and will enter Branksome Hall for a year's study.

About thirty-five of the former citizens of Edmonton enjoyed a picnic Tuesday at Second Beach. A few of those present were Mr. and Mrs. Bennet, Aldridge, Green, McLeod, Elliott, Kenneth Grindlay, Miss White, Miss Martin, Miss Gindley and Mr. Sutherland.

The finals of the Bowling and Rink tournament were played on Monday. Mrs. Proctor, Ferrie, Major Boultbie and W. B. Ferrie were the winners of the Bowling tournament from Mrs. Ridgeway, Miss Robertson, Mr. Lockyer and Donald.

* * *

Mrs. Skinner of Robson was hostess at a delightful garden tea Thursday from 3 to 6 in honor of Miss Little, Dominion General Secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association. Several of the directors of the local Y. W. C. A. assisted Mrs. Skinner. They were Mrs. Peters, Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Faulkner, Mrs. W. H. Leckie and Mrs. Haskett.

Mrs. Martin Griffin gave a tea Wednesday afternoon in honor of her mother, Mrs. Garland. Those present were Mrs. Marpole, Mrs. Garland, Mrs. Tait, Mrs. McMillan, Mrs. Farquhar, Mrs. Plunkett, Mrs. Ferrie, Cecil Merritt, Mrs. Davidson, the Misses Tupper, Susie Cambie, Geraldine Cambie, Rigney of Kingston, and Van Sittert of Toronto.

* * *

Mrs. Ray of Beach avenue had a delightful Musicale Tuesday evening in honor of Adele Verne, who delighted those present with a few numbers on the piano, kindly consenting to play for them. Mrs. Green, Wrigley and McGuire sang and Miss Vaughan played the violin. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner, Mr. and Mrs. Drayton, Mr. and Mrs. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. James, Mr. and Mrs. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Ray and Mrs. McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. Peters, Misses Tregent, Dallas, Vaughan.

The annual garden party given by the Girls' Guild of St. Michael's church of Mt. Pleasant Wednesday afternoon and evening on the lawn of Mr. G. W. Hutching, 8th Avenue, was a very pleasant and successful affair. The grounds were lighted by electricity and Japanese lanterns. The decorations of coloured bunting, flags and very nice Japanese umbrellas which were given as souvenirs, made a very attractive picture. Harpin's orchestra furnished good music. The Japanese tea table was exceedingly pretty, presided over by the Misses Stephen, Bennett, Holden and Pugh, in most striking and becoming Japanese attire. The Fish Pond was in charge of the Misses Freshwater, Taylor, Grayston, Edgerton. The Candy was very pretty, in charge of Mrs. De Bou, Mrs. Nelson, Miss Fannie Stephens, and Miss Anna Shaw. Ice cream was served by Mrs. Spoore and Mrs. Fowler. Auntie and Sallie at the rear of the lawn was in charge of the boys.

The North Coast.

The Week is advised of the starting of a new paper on the mainland, the first issue of which will be out on August 10th. P. F. Godenrath & Co., advertising agents of Vancouver, are behind the enterprise, and Mr. Ed. Rowland, formerly on the staff of the Boundary Creek Times, will be the manager. The publication will be called The North Coast, and will be printed at Port Simpson.

Ed. Rowland, the manager, is an old typo. He has left for the north, accompanied by Mr. Stanley Boys of Vancouver and will have the plant in operation ready to turn out the first issue next Saturday.

Notes on Provincial News

Fernie's Holiday.

Fernie is living up to its reputation as the headquarters of athletic sports in the Kootenay. August 5th is to be the civic holiday, and the arrangements for an enjoyable time far surpass those made in any previous years. They include a football tournament, a baseball match and a splendid list of athletic contests with prizes running into nearly $1,000. The Coal City is nothing if not enterprising; no place in the West has shown more public spirit, or has more honourably and successfully surmounted its difficulties. Dr. Corsan who was in Victoria this week declares that Fernie was never so prosperous and never advancing so rapidly. The mines are working steadily and he believes that the epidemic of strikes has received its quietus. The Week looks towards Fernie and wishes it good luck.

A New Empire.

John Houston's latest venture has been launched, and he is now the owner, editor and manager of The Prince Rupert Empire. Two numbers have appeared; they are creditable to the producer and should benefit Prince Rupert. The editorial is favourable to the present Administration. While local news is limited there is valuable information about the new country, and an inspired article on the subject of early railway construction and the steps being taken by the local Government to ensure this. The second number contains three excellent illustrations and two land notices signed by Japs, which shows that the veteran editor is over-getting some of his prejudices.

Well-timed Recognition.

We understand that the C. P. R., through Mr. Wm. Whyte, second vice-president, has arranged to appropriate the sum of $100 per month to the local Y. M. C. A. for current expenses. Revelstoke will be very grateful to the railway company for their munificent gift which will so materially aid in furthering the excellent work done here, and so popular among all railroad men.—Revelstoke Herald.

Still Short of Coke.

There is still a shortage in Kootenay, in consequence of which the smelters are unable to take all the ore that is offering. Further than that the Northport smelter has been obliged to refuse Kiotenay ore, although it was only re-started quite recently. This is a serious matter and coming so soon after the strike settlement is calculated to engender doubt as to the future supply. The whole question of fuel in Southern B. C. is a serious one and will yet have to be made the subject of Government investigation.

Another Dividend.

The Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada, Ltd., has declared its regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent., payabale on August 1st. As the company pays these dividends regularly each quarter the total dividends for a year amount to 10 per cent. on the par value of the shares, which is $100; in other words, for each share held a dividend of $10 is received each year. It is probable from the favorable way in which the properties of the company are developing that it will not be a great while before there will be an increase in the amount it pays in dividends.

Visitors at Banff.

The most talked of woman in the United States, Mrs. Evelyn Thaw, with her mother and some friends, are staying at the Banff Springs Hotel this week. The party are strictly incog., but the publicity given the chief characters in the nauseous trial makes identification easy.—Crag and Canyon.

A Fallen Cherub.

The Hedley Gazette has an interesting editorial on the subject of the downfall of the Toronto Globe, and it handles that once influential organ without gloves. The attack is warranted by the grossly unfair manner in which the Globe has treated British Columbian affairs, ignoring important news items, misrepresenting industrial conditions and using all its energy to combat the Provincial claim to better treatment at the hands of the Federal authorities. The title chosen for its article, "The Fallen Cherub," is not inappropriate, although it bears a strong family resemblance to the title of a celebrated political squib, "The Damaged Arch-angel."

A Breezy Journal.

It does not pay always to be in a hurry. John Houston rushed back from the sand hills of Nevada to pick up a printing plant in Vancouver and hie away to Prince Rupert in order to get out the first paper at that point. Upon his arrival there he found that the company would not let him locate, and he writes that next spring is time enough to go there and fears that his health will break down if he loafs until then. He should hire a boat and print his paper on the ocean. This would insure him always of having a breezy journal.—The Greenwood Ledge.

Another Strike.

One of the Supreme Court judges at the coast has gone on strike. The military has not yet been called out. No serious rioting or damage to property has been reported. Should unlawful acts be resorted to it is believed the local militia will be able to protect law-abiding citizens and judges who didn't "come out" on the request of the walking delegate. The difficulty is of long standing and is believed to have originated over the discussion some years ago as to whether their lordships should or should not wear wigs and scarlet pajamas while in the discharge of their official duties. Every union man in the country will sympathize with the striking justice, and we feel assured will be prepared to support him not only morally but physically if need be. Down with the tyrants! say we.—The Ledge.

She Got There First.

Isabel had a young man paying her attention. Calling on her one evening he had to wait before the young lady came down; meanwhile her little sister Helen came in to entertain him, as was her wont. When Isabel entered the room she found Helen sitting in the caller's lap; she promptly and emphatically ordered her down. "I won't," says Helen; "I got here first."

Opening of New Stock Exchange.

By far the feature of the past week particularly in financial circles was he opening of the Vancouver Stock Exchange on Thursday. Temporary uarters have been secured at the ortheast corner of Pender and Hornby streets, and, judging by the large rowd that surrounded the floor on he opening day the new Exchange tarts out most auspiciously. The incorporation provides for a limited membership of 21. Already 12 have een enrolled and put up their $500 or a seat and there are some two core on the waiting list. The members are using a temporary trading st which will afterwards be superseded by a regular official list. The fficers are C. D. Rand, president; J. Waghorn, vice-president; John endall, secretary, and W. J. Gerhine, treasurer.

President Rand's address received e closest attention of the members d spectators and at its conclusion was the recipient of many conatulations on his timely advice and ggestions to his fellow brokers. He d:

'The establishment of a Stock Exange in Vancouver marks another ward movement in the progress of commercial activity of this city. e preliminary steps, which have en taken in the formation of the change have been carefully thought , and the rules and regulations, ich have been adopted, have been ken from the best which we could ect from the exchanges now in stence in Montreal, Toronto, New rk and Boston.

'In addition to the regular stock ding, which is the primary object this Exchange, it is well to remind members that this Exchange aims do business on broader lines than mere trading in stocks. In the t there has been a woeful lack of hentic information respecting the ustrial and mining industries of Province, and this lack of information has caused many desirable estors to go elsewhere, thus ening a direct loss to the Province. will be the endeavor of the Exnge to remedy this state of affairs far as it lays in its power to do and we trust that we shall have hearty co-operation of the public securing the results desired.

In this connection it may be well ook back over the history of the ing industry during the past lve or fifteen years. When the ing districts of Slocan, Rossland, ndary and East Kootenay were overed, prospectors endeavored to rest business men of the British mbia Coast cities in the different perties, but received practically no uragement, and the result was these same prospectors went to kane and the business men of city grasped the opportunity, ished the capital to develop these rent sections of our Province, and ed millions as their reward. The ons which were paid into the cof- of the Spokane citizens were re- sted by them in the purchase of estate, and the erection of magent buildings, and Spokane today a very large proportion of its ent prosperity to the mines of sh Columbia.

t the present time other similar rtunities are presenting thems. Within the past few years oast properties have been attract- considerable attention. We have dy seen the equipment and oper- of the Britannia mine on Howe d, the Tyee mine on Vancouver d and several properties on Texsland. Good prospects have been vered on Portland Canal, Obtory Inlet and White Horse, and sive operations have already commenced at these different s.

he latest reports from Queen otte Islands would seem to in- that a new, and somewhat exe district has recently been dised there, and there is no doubt the prospectors from these dis- wil be coming to Vancouver time to time endeavoring to raise capital for the development of their properties; and just here let me say that, if you are looking after your own interests as well as the interests of the City, treat these prospectors well, listen to them and try, if possible, to help them put their properties on a paying basis, thus securing to Vancouver the benefits which, from its geographical position, properly belong here. In other words, 'Give them the glad hand, and not the marble heart.'

"Some years ago when the Kootenays were first beginning to attract attention I took the trouble to place the merits of the districts before a very wealthy and prominent Eastern Canadian, one who has been prominent in Canadian affairs for the past twenty years, and who is pointed out as one of the most influential and loyal Canadians now living. This man made his millions in Canada, and being a Canadian patriot I thought he would be most anxious and willing to aid in developing Canadian resources. After listening to me for probably an hour he ended the interview very abruptly by saying: 'I do not see any reason why I should spend any money in developing the Kootenays. Let the Americans do it. They know how to do it better than the Canadians.' The rebuff, which I received, made a great impression on me and, whenever I think of it, it rankles.

"That there is a certain amount of prejudice and distrust against stock exchanges is well known, but this unfortunate state of affairs is largely owing to the fact that a great majority of those who make investments through exchanges, do not make the same careful investigation of investments as they would in any other ordinary commercial transaction. The usual course followed is to buy today and trust to luck to sell tomorrow at a higher price. There is no enquiry as to the merit of the stock, no questions asked as to the capitalization, management, earning power or dividend record of the company; just an order to the broker to buy something for 100, and a further order to sell for 105. If successful the investor tells his friends about his great business acumen, but if losses are made he blames the broker for leading him astray, and inducing him to buy the wrong thing at the wrong time. And here let me digress and refer to a little more history.

"It is well known that at the time of the Rossland boom the brokers of Toronto took a very active part in it, and that a large number of companies were formed, and that the stocks were sold throughout the length and breadth of Eastern Canada. While the market was advancing and everybody getting rich on paper these brokers were posing as philanthropists, and were taking much credit to themselves for the great part they were taking in the development of British Columbia, but when the bubble burst, and the stocks began to decline, and the wild-cats dropped out of sight, these same brokers, instead of taking their share of the responsibility, endeavored to place the blame for all the wild-catting upon the brokers of British Columbia, and were so successful that the average investor in the East looked upon the Western broker as little better than a highway robber. Now that mining activity is commencing again and British Columbia is beginning to be looked upon by investors as a favorable field for investment the wild cat will undoubtedly soon make his appearance. This Exchange will not hesitate to expose any attempted flotations which are not backed by merit, and will warn the public against speculations which may have the effect of discrediting British Columbia in the eyes of the investing public. We will endeavor to give a square deal, and shall ask for a square deal in return.

"I have devoted considerable time in this address to the mining industry, because I expect that mining stocks will probably be more largely dealt in than any other class of securities. This Exchange will, however, deal in not only mining and local industrial stocks, but in railroad and other securities which are recognized and listed in all the leading stock exchanges in Canada and the United States. It is a well recognized fact

A Lady's Letter

By BABETTE.

Dear Madge:

If the season of 1907 is so far showing no particular features to make it noticeable it is likely to linger at any rate in the memory of our unfortunate husbands. It is perfectly plain that we are in for a bout of the most unexampled extravagance. There is no running away from it. Nothing is worth having just now that is not ruinously dear, and the woman who is limited in her expenditure will have to give long and careful consideration to each article before she buys it. There can be no careless choosing and throwing away this year unless one's hat is to suffice for every occasion. It is particularly millinery that is so frightfully expensive at the moment, and it shows every sign of getting rapidly worse; untrimmed shapes run constantly well into $5.00, and then when the trimming is thought of it runs into several more. From this it can be judged that the wonderful models displayed, mount up into hitherto undreamt of sums. If there is a perfect epidemic of bankruptcies and divorces in the autumn it will certainly be due to the milliners' bills—really until this year quite unjustly the cause of so much mirth in the comic papers. The enormous hats that are growing steadily in favour demand enormous trimmings. Feathers of moderate size are quite useless unless we have them by the dozen, and the great plumes and ospreys necessary for the perfection of a really beautiful creation cost more than a couple of hats last year. I noticed a girl buying a feather which she proclaimed was to "do up" a hat she was wearing, but she paid six dollars for the feather.

For the benefit of those girls who may sometimes have the sort of experience a certain friend of mine has just gone through, I am going to tell about her, without, of course, mentioning names.

This girl for quite a long time went about a good deal with a man of whom she was very fond, and who in turn, seemed attached to her. However, when he finally became engaged, it was to another girl. Meeting an intimate friend of the gentleman's a few days after his engagement was announced, I expressed surprise at his overlooking the girl who seemed to be his favourite. "Oh, not at all!" replied the friend; "I was not surprised. He wouldn't want that sort of a wife. You know very few men marry girls with as little scruples as she seemed to possess about where to draw the line. My friend would never think of marrying a woman whose code of right and wrong was but a sliding scale to be adjusted to whatever degree she thought compatible with the man who happened to be with her." I suggested that it was a selfish way of getting enjoyment to lead a girl on to do things of which in his heart he disapproved so much that he'd never think of marrying the girl who did them. But my friend replied: "That's a mistaken idea. A girl of mature years, like the one we've been talking about should have sufficient stability of character to say what she will not do in her acquaintance with men. The woman who thinks she is pleasing men by being lax in these matters is making a great mistake. I only hope this girl my friend is not going to marry will guess the reason why."

It may be she never will guess the reason, and so will go on making the same mistake over and over. But I've told the story here, thinking that possibly some girl who reads it may find in it a hint regarding her own conduct.

If an author wishes to attain a popularity so universal that even Kings, Queens and Emperors have heard of him, he must make people laugh; for royalty will have no traffic with your tragic writer. Poets they hold cheap, and historians they prefer at a distance. Thus Mark Twain is perhaps the only living writer of English who has been feted at Potsdam and has caused exalted sides to ache on the slopes of Windsor. And why not, forsooth? Sitting on thrones (so apt in these days to be lined with bombs) is not all beer and skittles, and shall not a monarch laugh when he can. From time immemorial kings have owned a jester, if the jokes of that Court official sometimes seem a trifle dreary to sophisticated moderns, no doubt they appealed to the sense of humour of their particular period. It is significant that the jester, or Court fool, was invariably a man. Are women, then, without a sense of humour? It is true we can boast of a George Eliot, a Jane Austen, and an "Elizabeth" of the "German Garden," but we have no female rival of Artenus Ward and Mark Twain.

The season of garden-parties is upon us, and whatever the condition of the barometer, we find ourselves in gay attire parading on well kept lawns or seeking the shade of well groomed trees, sipping ices, talking gossip or discussing the late heat wave that is burning up Victoria. Why we do not manage to get more out of our matchless gardens as backgrounds for summer parties is not quite clear, for lovely girls, like prize rhododendrons, look better out of door than in. We are always being reminded that in the great days of Versailles, the garden party was one of the glories of the monarchy, and that half-a-dozen artists made themselves famous by painting these "fetes champetres." This is true, but then an open-air entertainment in the golden days of the eighteenth century was a very different affair from our garden party. It is a matter of common notoriety that at the French fete champetre you sat on the grass. Be-ribboned gentlemen reclined on the sward and toyed with the ladies, and even played mandolines when urged thereto by a sentimental passion, but how, forsooth, shall a man with a top hat who is perhaps a J. P., and aspires to higher offices, so far forget his insular dignity as to do these things? It is true there is hope of some slight diversity, in play, and when I hear of Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson in her charming comedies at the Botanical Gardens, London, I realize that a fancy-dress garden party, properly carried out, might be a diverting innovation.

Nothing But Cod.

In one of the crowded streets in Boston a fish-hawker was belaboring his poor horse and crying aloud at the same time, "Cod, fresh cod!" A woman was watching him from an upper window and was very angry on seeing how shamefully he treated the dumb animal. Unable to bear the sight of such cruelty without protesting, she cried to the hawker: "Have you no mercy?" "No," was the reply. "Nothing but cod."

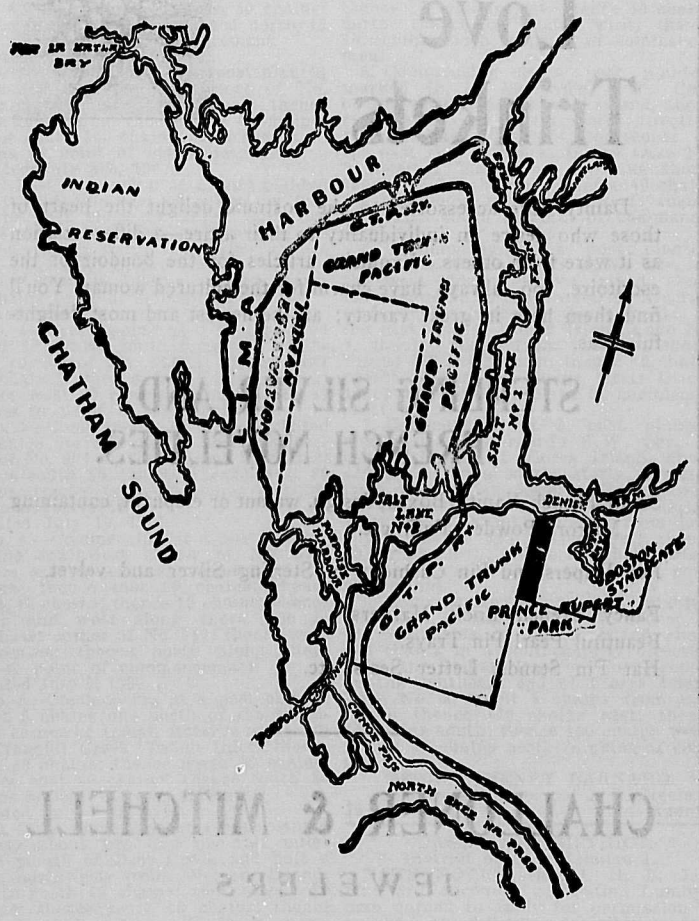
Keep your Eye on PRINCE RUPERT



DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY

KAIEN Island, which will be known as Prince Rupert Island, is about four miles square, with a big mountain in the centre, which necessitates building the town along the waterfront, and the island will necessarily be used largely for railway terminal property. Several hundred feet of wharves are now being built around Lima Harbor.

A bridge 100 feet long will connect the island with the mainland, and Prince Rupert Park adjoins the finest located property of the G.T. Pacific, and which is the most beautiful spot in the entire vicinity of Prince Rupert. Prince Rupert Park is but a short distance from the railroad and the same distance from Cloyah Bay, which for scenery, beach and waterfront surpasses anything on on the coast. Already a street car company is endeavoring to get a franchise, and also to make a lock harbor of Salt Lake.

This property cannot help but be the most valuable residence and business section in Prince Rupert.

Lots are on sale from $125 to $500, according to location. Terms, quarter cash, balance 4, 8 and 12 months.

We consider that there is no better money making proposition on the market than these lots. A year from now when the rush is on they will be worth from $500 to thousands.

It is a little early to go there now, but not too early to buy, as values are daily increasing, and there is nothing like getting in on the ground floor before all this property is in the hands of speculators.

We have described this property as it exactly is at the present time, and being owners of the property, we in no way wish to mislead you. The lots are slightly timbered, high and dry, with a very gentle slope. The back lots, which are $125 a lot, command a magnificent view. All lots are 25x120 feet, with 20-ft. lane and 66-ft. wide streets, and persons investing in these lots at the present prices are bound to reap a big profit.

WATER FRONT LOTS - - $500
WATER ST. to 6TH ST. - $225	6TH ST. to 9TH ST. - $200
9TH ST. to 12TH ST. - $175	12TH ST. to 14TH ST. - $150
14TH to 16TH - - $125

In Memoriam.

It seems hardly possible to realise at it is now four years since Wil-m Ernest Henley passed to his rest, t it is indeed so, for this melan-oly fact has been recalled to us by e recent unveiling of the memorial at has been erected to his memory the City of London, England.

The news of his death came to ose of us who knew him with all e force of a keen loss, and to those o were only acquainted with him rough the medium of his incom-rable writings with the sense of a rsonal sorrow.

t seemed that in the passing away Henley the world was left the orer, and it was indeed a bitter re-ction to many of us that we should er again listen to the charm of his v-born verse.

So many friends and admirers had nley that it was hardly to be sup-ed that his memory should remain g unperpetuated and on July 11th, fourth anniversary of his death, a nze bust, by M. Auguste Rodin, of s distinguished poet and man of ers was handed over to the care safe-keeping of the Dean and apter of St. Paul's Cathedral.

short service of dedication was ducted by the Archdeacon of Lon-, assisted by Canon H. S. Hol-l after which Lord Plymouth and Wyndham paid eulogies to the and work of this great realist romantic.

othing could be happier than the ction of the place chosen for the norial of Henley, situated as it is he very heart of the city he loved dearly and of which he so often g so nobly and beautifully. Every se of the life of London was be-d by Henley and he seemed to be in the completest harmony with its varying and complex moods aspects; he was in every sense he word a poet, a man with the he gift of imagination, whose men-eye saw what should have been rather than what was. No matter how sordid or miserable the vision might be that presented itself to Henley's eye his mind was only capable of seeing the vision beautiful through the paltry real.

To him beauty was everything, not, mind you, the mere evernescent quality of a pretty face, but the beauty of truth itself; the mastery of the mind over matter; the love of humanity because it was part and parcel of this great kosmos, and because it was the intelligent and comprehensible medium between man and his creator.

Henley was such a man that he was unabale to go into the streets without feeling the whirl of the life of the city strike a responsive cord on the strings of his heart; he was such a poet that, by the exquisite witchery of his words, he could translate this emotion so that it became intelligible to the man of average intellect and make him feel all the pathos and mystery of even the most commonplace incidences of existence.

When we take into consideration the weekly and undermined body that supported his soul we can only marvel at the buoyancy and cheerfulness of his spirit; years of his life were passed in suffering and pain, yet no touch of sadness is evident in his writings, but only a gladness and keen appreciation of the privilege of living.

To him there was an inestimable joy in merely being alive; all through the long and weary days of his illness his courage never left him nor was there a single note of despair in any of his poems; even when, in addition to all his physical sufferings, he was called upon to surrender his claim as a father on the life of his dearly loved daughter his spirit rose superior to what might well have been to many of us a crushing and final blow and through it all he never rebelled or cried aloud for pity.

Rather must it, from the tone of his subsequent writings, have appeared to be of the nature of another test to try his indomitable courage and his belief in the divinity of humanity, and through this darkest hour of sorrow his faith never left him but was capable of responding to all the demands that were made upon it.

Those beautiful words of his:

"In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud.
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed."

are, indeed, a direct refutation to any idea of surrender to the terrible mental torture he was called upon to endure.

Let us take another stanza of this poem and see what his final answer was to all the overwhelming misfortunes which beset his path through life.

"It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul."

How many of us would have the strength of spirit to say this after battling so long with the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune as Henley did? Not many indeed, but to Henley, as to the Early Victorians, life was a very real and earnest thing, and the mere fact that he was called upon to bear more than his fair share of mortal pain and suffering appeared to be no excuse for him to give in or cease to make use of those great talents with which Providence had seen fit to endow him.

Apart from his genius as a poet and a man of letters, Henley was well known as a competent and discerning critic; no one, whether he was a a well-known literary man or an author only just emerging from the cloud of obscurity could wish to meet with fairer or kinder treatment than he would receive at his hands, but pretentiousness of any kind was obnoxious to him. It was one of his great delights to bring forward anyone whose writings showed real merit, and many men who have since risen to distinction are proud to acknowledge that it was to the kind councils of Henley that they were enabled to place their feet on the ladder of fortune for the first time.

No less an authority than George Meredith has declared that Henley was "one of the main supports of good literature in our times," and those of us who are familiar with his work and writings cannot but endorse this judgment. Apart altogether from the responsiveness of his temperament to all that was good and beautiful, no man knew better than he did that the secret of art is selection and the deliberate setting on one side of all that is ugly and needless to the presentment of the perfect whole and, though he has passed away from us, his writings will ever remain as examples of the highest form of the poet's art.

His was distinctly an English nature and he loved England and her ways from the bottom of his large and generous heart, nor was he ever tired of singing her praises in his own inimitable style; yet for all this he thoroughly appreciated, understood, and took the keenest delight in the art of France.

What could be, therefore, more appropriate than that his memorial should be the work of the greatest living French sculptor?; that M. Rodin himself thoroughly knew the value of Henley's work and admired him we well know, for he himself tells us: "Certes, c'est une consolation pour moi d'avoir fait son buste."

There in the sanctity of St. Paul's Cathedral his memorial remains along with those of other great and eminent men who have gone before him; valiant and noble spirits who spent their lives unselfishly in giving of their best for the honour and glory of their country and, by inference, for all humanity.

Hoist on His Own Petard.

"Well," said the man with the bald head, the twinkling eye and the merry chuckle, as he placed the telephone receiver back on the hook, "I am a second Edison. I've made a great discovery."

"What's that?" inquired the convenient auditor.

"Why, I've just discovered something that every married man since Adam's time has been looking for."

"What is it? That rib?

"No."

"A bargain that didn't have a joker in it?"

"No."

"A millinery bill that would pay itself?"

"No, nothing like that. That 'is impossible."

"Well, what's the answer?"

"I've found the way to have the last word with my wife. Call her up on the telephone, say it, and hang up quick before she has time to answer."

"It works, does it?"

"Sure. Didn't you just see me do it?"

At this point the telephone bell rang. The discoverer of the great secret took down the receiver, and, in his business tone, said, "Hello!"

The convenient auditor heard a squeaking, and then saw a look of utter sheepishness creep over the other's face. The squeaking stopped, and the receiver was placed gently back on the hook.

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothing, only I guess I'm just a common dub like the rest. I forgot she could call me up."

Neither a Doctor nor a Gentleman.

There were once two famous physicians introduced at a reception. They were deservedly famous, but of opposing schools, and the regular, as he shook the other by the hand, said loftily: "I am glad to meet you as a gentleman, sir, though I cannot admit that you are a physician."

"And I," said the homeopath, smiling faintly, "am glad to meet you as a physician, though I cannot admit you are a gentleman."

On Lawn Tennis.

Is lawn tennis a game or a social function? I suppose the correct answer is—both. In any event a tennis tournament has become such an important event that I need make no apology, especially during the present week, for devoting my column to a discussion of some of its most interesting features.

The first thing that strikes one in Victoria is that other games may come and go, but tennis seems like going on for ever. The entries are more numerous; the players more skilful and the spectators more enthusiastic. For one reason it is an increasing pleasure each year to renew acquaintance with old players, as for instance, when Tyler, the champion, came on the ground for the first time on Tuesday and was greeted from all sides with a hearty exclamation "Well Joe, how are you?" Tyler is a worthy champion, holds many valuable prizes and is just fresh from new victories south of the line, but his most valuable possession is that same cognomen "Joe," the spontaneous tribute alike to his reputation and his worth; as an expression of hearty good feeling it stands far above cups and medals.

This is not the only but merely a typical case, and spectators who have never actually met the prominent players are none the less glad to welcome them once more to the Victoria courts.

This annual function has another bright side. It enables new-comers to realise that there are really quite a number of ladies residing in the Capital City, a fact which has been stoutly denied, but of which there is ample demonstration at the tennis tournament. And they are hospitable ladies, who serve tea and cake from tables decorated with beautiful flowers to the accompaniment of a kindly word and a bewitching smile. If a Philistine and a Bohemian withal may be permitted without offence to offer a slight criticism, it would be made from the artistic standpoint and would take the form of a suggestion that the attractive picture furnished by the green courts, lined with interested visitors, would be more in accordance with the canons of art if the ladies were not all massed in one group at the foot of the pavilion, and carefully roped in lest any bold and designing male adventurer should dare to invade the sacred precincts. Being an old buffer myself, and remembering the days when the exchange of a few cheery words with a beautiful girl was quite an event in a prosaic life, I could not help feeling sorry this week for the young men of Victoria, whom one would judge are either too dangerous to be met except en masse, or too inconsiderable to be worthy of a thought.

It has been my happy lot to attend tennis tournaments at all the principal fashion centres of the Old Country and in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and Winnipeg in Canada; but Victoria is the only city where the good old fashioned system in vogue in Scotch Presbyterian churches of carefully seating the ladies in one place and the men in another is still adhered to. Surely if Shakespeare's hackneyed phrase could ever be justifiably used again, it is in connection with this solecism—"A custom more honoured in the breach than in the observance." Of one thing I am certain, that if the custom be abolished even in one short year, there will be far fewer ladies available for segregation.

The result of the week's play will be dealt with in the Sporting Column, but there are two or three things to which I am privileged to refer. The first is to comment on the splendid form shown by some of the local players in defeating men from across the line who have a much wider reputation, and who during the season do little but play tennis. The victory of Schwengers and MacRae over Hunt and Crawford was both brilliant and meritorious in the highest degree. It was a great surprise to the visitors and should do much to encourage local players. I am writing before the final results of Saturday's play are known, but have no hesitation in saying that Schwengers was never in as good form as this season, and that the return of A. T. Goward to something approacahing his very best form has been one of the most pleasing features of the week. I suppose I should have complimented the ladies first, and among them Miss Beckett, Miss M. Pitts and Mrs. Arundel have distinguished themselves.

Of the younger players two attracted attention whenever they were on the courts and both have in them the making of first class players; I refer to Rhodes and McDougall. Both are active, skilful and aggressive. Both have some very fine strokes; they only need practice against strong players and the experience of one or two tournaments to take high rank. Lack of steadiness was the one thing which prevented them from winning out on several occasions.

Even the most cursory review of tennis week would be incomplete without a word of praise to Dr. Douglas Hunter for his unvarying courtesy and attention to all the details of the tournament. His official position of referee was no sinecure. The energetic Secretary, Clarence Pitts, was ubiguitous.

My last word must be a re-iteration of what I wrote in this column several months ago, that the time has come for the Victoria Tennis Club to acquire new grounds where more courts can be laid out and maintained in a decent manner. Courts everywhere are bad this year in consequence of the prolonged drought, but probably the Victoria courts have never been as indifferent. Beyond the mere question of their condition it was demonstrated many times during the week that for the fast players and hard hitters, and their number is increasing, the space between the base line and the fence is insufficient, and several players narrowly escaped injury when jumping back to take a smash. There is enough money, enough enterprise and sufficient interest in the game of tennis to finance new grounds, and I sincerely hope that the Committee will be able to organise some scheme in this direction before another year.

Pretty Much the Same.

"My poor husband,' mourned a widow, as she was returning from the funeral. "He was such a dear, kind man. There never was anybody like John."

"Don't grieve so, Mary," urged a friend, consolingly. "Husbands are pretty much the same. I've had four and ought to know."

Too Much for Him.

The other day a wealthy Chicago manufacturer was showing one of his partner's friends over his extensive workshops. Taking up a beautifully turned screw he held it up before the visitor with the remark: "Fine piece of work, isn't it?"

"Yes," admitted the other, "very fine; but you can't hold a candle to the goods we turn out in the East."

"Oh," said the other in surprise, "what's your line?"

"Gunpowder."

Comfort for Missy.

Not long ago a young lady of Macon, Ga., visited the house of her fiance in New Orleans. On her return home an old colored woman, long in the service of the family, and consequently privileged to put the question, asked:

"Honey, when is you goin' to get married?"

The engagement not having been announced, the Macon girl smilingly replied:

"Indeed, I can't say, auntie. Perhaps I shall never marry."

The old woman's jaw fell. "Ain't dat a pity, now?" she said. "But, after all, missy, dey do say dat old maids is the happiest critters there is, once dey quits strugglin'."

hat the wisest investors today confine their stock operations almost exclusively to listed stocks. The benefits which would accrue to a local industrial stock by being listed on the Exchange is at once apparent. It will acilitate the industrial movement here o the extent of increasing credits for xpansion purposes, and the stocks would become negotiabale at the anks.

"At present, no matter how high ividends local joint stock companies re paying, the stocks are not marketble at the banks, and in themselves re not sufficient to obtain loans for he purpose of increasing business enerprise. In addition to this, local tocks listed would attract many inestors, who would readily take adantage of the opportunity to put eir money into concerns they could isit every day, and would not have depend altogether upon annual reorts. This, in itself, should stimute Vancouver's industrial growth.

"I am not in sympathy with stock ambling. But I am, nevertheless, in ympathy absolutely with the motive hich prompts those in control of a rge corporation to list its stocks on public stock market where it may be ought and sold in the open without striction. Any other course, to my ind, is lacking in expediency, if not ethics. The listing of a stock on e public stock market is of itself act of good faith—an act of guarnteeing the worth of that stock—a blic proclamation of its real value. is announcement to the world thus ise: 'Here is a thing of public value aced on a public market. It is to bought as a thing of public value, d by the same token it is to be sold such. In offering it for sale to the blic in this manner we thus pubh our confidence in its intrinsic lue and hereby signify it to e world that sufficient value inheres in this stock at all times to make it worthy of being trafficked with in the accustomed marts of men.'

"The investing public is rapidly being educated to the idea of buying ONLY LISTED STOCKS on the assurance that in that way only lies safety and profit.

"The market values of public listed stocks shrink and expand, of course, as every intelligent investor knows. Extraneous influences, having no bearing on intrinsic values, coming from speculative and manipulative sources, often unjustly inflate or depress market values. But at the same time there is a basis of equilibrium for listed and publicly supported stocks which unlisted and privately exploited stocks do not command. The listed stocks strike a better balance, a higher avereage and a stronger poise than unlisted stocks, especially those of the nondescript class.

"I know of numbers of investors who have bought a wide variety of unlisted stocks on unsupported representations made by individual financial agents, dealers in investment securities and others coming under such sonorous classifications who are absolutely helpless in the matter of marketing the so-called values they have paid their good money for. It is hard to fix the value as live assets of holdings in unlisted stocks. Instances are numerous of the publication of long lists of listed stocks and bonds held by banks, corporations, estates and individuals the aggregate market value of which has grown beyond their purchase price. It would be difficult to point to a single instance in the case of such a list confined to unlisted securities. Such cases are rare, if, indeed, they can be shown to exist. Regardless of their merit or demerit, the fact alone that the ordinary classes of unlisted stocks havae no designated channel of conversion back into cash again singles them out and materially detracts from their realizing value.

"A wise man once said, 'If one would know the value of money go a-borrowing.' Let me here alter the phrase to read, 'If one would know the value of unlisted stocks for which there is no prescribed market go a-marketing of them.'

"Let the buyers of privately exploited unlisted stocks seek out the persuasive men who sold them and demand that they give as well as take—to the extent of even one-fourth of their holdings—and they will be treated to an exhibition of 'welshing' and 'quitting' which would be a spectacle for both gods and men.

"It is not to be expected that the business which will be done by the Exchange, will be very large or profitable at the outset. A campaign of education will be necessary to interest the public, and an active and progressive policy must be adopted in order to give the public confidence in the ability and utility of the Exchange. If we pursue a conservative course and place the investment money of our customers in properties of merit, it will not be long before the Vancouver Stock Exchange will be appreciated, and looked upon as one of the prominent institutions of the city.

"In conclusion allow me to state that I appreciate the honor that you have conferred upon me by electing me your first president, and, while in office, will endeavor to enforce the rules and regulations of the Exchange without fear or favor, and I bespeak and expect the hearty co-operation of all the members of the Exchange. I now have much pleasure in declaring the Vancouver Stock Exchange open for the transaction of business."

The Golden West.

Mrs. Morris was the winner of the $10 special prize on Henry Young & Co., given to readers of The Week and users of Golden West Soap. The regular Golden West Soap Man was away last week and his pal gave away the prizes for him. On his return the Soap Man had quite a time of it, getting back his job, and according to one who should know, his pal has the regular man beaten a Country Block. Leaving the hotel the Soap Man boarded a Fort Street car till he came to Stanley avenue; turning to the left he kept on till he came to the pretty home of Mrs. Morris. Not being an old-timer at the game he was quite surprised when she produced The Week Paper, Golden West Soap and Washing Powder and Toilet Soap. She was given the $10 prize on Henry oung & Co. It's a fact that it matters not if the house be large or small if you ask you will find Golden West Soap in use.

On his trip around town today the Soap Man heard a pretty good story. There is a colored man who, when buying his groceries the other evening, was asked to try Golden West Washing Powder. When the grocer saw him again he asked how he liked the Powder. "Mr." he said, "that am sure the finest cleaner on earth. It has almost made a white man out of me, and I only used her twice."

Take a tip from the Soap Man and give Golden West Washing Powder a trial. Ask your grocer for a 25c package. Use it and you will be glad you read this article. Remember if you do not like it, we will be pleased to refund you your money.

It is a money-back Article.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Cripple Creek, July 24th.

Did that fire at Victoria start yesterday by the hot roasting that paper, The Week, tried to publish. I hope that critic was saved.

J. B. DYLLYN.

Her Choice.

There was an atmosphere of mystery about the house which little Milly couldn't understand. The doctor was there, and the nurse, and everybody was going on tiptoes and speaking in whispers. Nobody paid any attention at all to her, and she felt most strangely abused.

The fact of the matter was that the stork had paid a visit to Milly's house, but in the excitement incident to it no one had thought to convey the glad tidings to Milly. Presently, however, the doctor came out, and seeing Milly sitting dejected and alone, undertook to break the news to her.

"Hello, Milly!" he said, sitting down beside her and stroking her soft curls, "What's the matter?"

"There isn't nuffin' the matter, only I'm lonesome, that's all."

That was a good lead and the doctor took it. "Milly, would you like to have a little brother or sister to play with you, so you wouldn't be lonesome?"

"Yes," Milly replied, without enthusiasm.

"Which would you rather have, a little brother or a little sister?"

"I'd ravver have a little brother and a little sister."

"'But if you couldn't have both, which would you rather have?"

This question required time for reflection, and Milly took it before answering.

"Well," she said, finally, with an air of decision, "if I can't have bofe, I'd ravver have a dog."

"Hello!"

"Yes."

"Just a moment, please, ma'am. Hold the wire, and I'll see whether he is here."

"Mr. Black," asks the boy, with his hand over the transmitter, "are you here?"

"Who wants me?" Mr. Black asks.

"I don't know, sir. It's a lady."

"Tell her I'm not here."

"No, ma'am," the boy says into the telephone, "he's not here."

"Yes, Mrs. Black, I'll tell him when he comes in. It was Mrs. Black, sir. She said to call her up when you come in.

"Yes. But I'm not coming in tonight. Understand?"

"Yes, sir. I understand."

At The Street Corner

By THE LOUNGER

"Parturunt montes; ridiculus mus Nascetur."

Horace, A. P.

An excellent example of the perspicacity of the jovial bard, who must often have laughed at the follies of the human race while secure in his retreat at the Sabine farm, is the above. How often do we find that the cause of some huge tumult, spreading consternation on all sides, is merely the outcome of some trivial occurrence, which, like the hydra-headed monster, scandal, is exaggerated by every effort to retard its progress. There was an amusing illustration of this birth of a mouse last Tuesday in the principal street of Victoria, and one which well shows how easy it is to excite interest in trivialities if only it be possible to inculcate into someone's mind the idea that there is a tragedy lying at the bottom.

On the morning in question a police patrol waggon was observed outside the hospitable door of the Garrick Head in Bastion Street. There is always a melancholy pleasure in seeing an arrest made and the first two or three persons who noticed it stopped for eventualities. A nucleus thus formed, the gathering rapidly increased in numbers. Soon there were at least thirty men, professional men, business men, prominent men, gazing eagerly at the mystic door which hid, no doubt, a crime. Presently a sound which can best be described as a cross between a sigh and a groan, with a note of triumph thrown in, broke from the crowd as two policemen appeared bearing a black trunk. Obviously it was a case of murder, and the body had been concealed in the trunk; in all probability, hidden within the receptacle were the mortal remains of some luckless infant, cut off in the early prime of its babyhood; the crowd increased as if by magic till it numbered now over half a hundred. Then another burly guardian of the peace appeared carrying clothing, soiled and stained; the gory testimonies of the crime could be seen, showing blood-red on what had been snowy linen. Murmurs of indignation could be heard, but none stepped forward to inquire as to details. Call it fascination, curiosity or what you will, the crowd, still again augmented, held its breathless stand and awaited for more to follow.

"See," said one, "here's what he did it with." And sure enough broken pieces of a chair were produced, then a picture with other articles of furniture. All these alike were stained with what in the distance looked like the gory clues which even the best regulated murderer must at times leave behind to bring him in the end under the grim shadow which awaits within a Provincial gaol.

At last one man, braver than his fellows, nerved himself to hear the worst, and stepping forward spoke in a low tone, as became the occasion to a policeman. Horror! He returned laughing, and the crowd dispersed in wonderment, but as the policeman said to me afterwards, it was very embarrassing to them to have such a crowd watching as they were removing some of the furniture which had been lost in the fire, to the police station.

Now consider the wasted energy which was expended by the crowd in exciting itself over such a trivial matter. And in this hot weather none can afford to waste energy. If people would only mind their own business and take things as they come without worrying what a happy world this would be, and it is here that I am going to exchange a few words on paper with another contributor to this publication which has as its object the making of happy homes; in fact it somewhat reminds me of Sunlight Soap, though I suppose I oughtn't to say that when the Golden West man is round.

Alas, the best of friendships must be severed at the call of duty, and I feel that I should not be doing my duty to the public if I did not join issue with my very good friend "Bohemian" on his last article re "Taking Things Philosophically." He reminds me of the man who, well meaning enough, advises the toothache martyr to try and think of something else; or the well-wisher who tells a man with a bad cold that it has to be worse before it will be better. Such philosophy is a drug in the market; it is too cheap. "Bohemian" seems unable to soar into the realms where such troubles are unknown. True philosophy, that is to say, the real love of wisdom, lies in the capability of man to realise that what is, is, and that what is to come is fore-ordained. In other words, it is no good "kicking." Such an interpretation does not necessarily imply that no effort should be made to alleviate misfortune. It is simply another way of saying that it is no good crying over spilt milk. The fact that the milk has been spilt is merely a premonitory caution as to the carrying of the pitcher on the next journey. The philosopher is to learn by his misfortunes how to live again, both here and in the next world, but being a philosopher he is not to cavil at the accidents which may have hampered his present life. "Bohemian" seems to have imagined that a brave man cannot be a philosopher; I as "Lounger' contend that it is only a fool that cannot be one. I hope this will not necessitate coffee for one and pistols for two at some absolutely immoral hour in the morning.

My latest "lounge" abroad in the interests of my readers, and in this case very much in my own interest also, was to Colwood last Sunday, where the genial dispensers of drinks, cooling and otherwise, were disporting themselves on their first annual Association picnic. I love picnics when there is work to do; I don't profess to find much amusement in being sent to gather wood to make smoky tea; I hate packing up, and I am not very fond of carrying things. But Sunday's picnic was ideal. Everything was there ready; like Topsy, it seemed to have just "growed." On a boiling hot day, there are better drinks than tea, and in good sooth there was abundance. As for the sandwiches they were like Samson's slain, "heaps upon heaps." Baseball proves an interesting game even to one who knows nothing of the rules, when a gentleman with a cognomen from the land of cakes is acting as referee, and there are few exercises more refreshing on a hot day than that of watching a hard fought tug-of-war. Everybody had a good time, and none more so than Lounger.

Short Story

DELIA TRIES THE SIMPLE LIFE.

An Experiment And Why It Proved a Failure.

(By H. B. Marriott Watson)

It is obvious that we eat and drink too much in these latter days, which is one of the causes of our degeneration from the healthy stock of our more prudent and abstemious forefathers. And so any movement that makes for the simple life is welcome. I told Delia as much when she propounded her new theory, which was not, of course, hers. It was Lady Ewart's.

"At any rate," said Delia, "Lady Ewart has done it."

"Not done, you must mean," said I, "since the theory consists in the main of abstinence."

"And whatever you say, I'm going to do it," remarked Delia defiantly.

"My dear, I've said nothing; nor am I going to open my mouth to stand in the way of progress," I replied.

"Well, I don't believe you approve," said Delia, and as I made no answer she added, rather unkindly, "I know men are always thinking of their stomachs."

"But it seems to me," I protested, "that people who bestow all this attention on what they eat or don't eat are thinking probably more of their stomachs than——"

As a rule no one at table would know that Delia was eating, but her actions now announced it to all and sundry. It would seem as if she designed to sit at food with us as a being of another order might condescend.

In that supernal plane a certain lofty scorn seems imposed upon inhabitants. It embarrassed us poor, low, coarse people to satisfy our barbarous appetites under her lustrous eyes. And to drink beer or wine or whisky, when water was clearly the nectar of gods and goddesses! I confess I took to gin, and saw, mingled with shame and pride, Delia's approving smile. Gin, you probably don't know, looks like water. It has a very innocent appearance.

"I'm glad you've takaen to it, dear," observed Delia in a gentle voice. "Why don't you try it in the evening, too?"

I hung my shame-faced and embarrassed head and murmured that one has to get accustomed to things by degrees. I fear she took all this for signs of grace in me, and used many kind and coaxing ways to lure me on. She wished to stay me with apples, and suggested that I should make experiments with puffed rice, which, to judge by the effects in my mouth, was composed mainly of sawdust. At last I could play the hypocrite no longer. The fact preyed on my conscience and drove me recklessly to drink. That is to say, I was surprised absorbing a large whisky-and-soda one afternoon. I will not repeat Delia's words, and I could not describe the flash of her eyes.

"The new diet sometimes allows of meat intervals in its adepts; and Delia between eating oats and plasmon, forgot her conscience and how to be serious.

"You see, dear," she explained gaily, "we save by it."

"Do we?" said I. "Then I needn't thank you quite so much for the household. Let me see——"

"Oh, but," protested Delia hastily, "we have lots of things, of course, which take up the balance; and, besides, it isn't so much difference."

"What sort of things?" I inquired with interest.

"Oh—lots," she said vaguely, and added inconsequently, "Do you like my new blouse?"

It was charming, of course, as I told her, at which she brightened.

"My new evening dress has come home, dear," she went on rapturously. "You must see it. It's a love."

"I see," I said. "Well, my dear, what may be called the simple life, but it seems to me very complex."

"If you were to follow it," said Delia pensively, "we should have lots more money to spend on—well, other things."

"Dresses?" I suggested.

"Of course not, dear," she replied quickly. "Cigars, and—oh, and other things." She was silent a moment, apparently calculating. "You see, we could get rid of the butcher's bill, and the wine merchant's, and the milkman's bill. Milk is animal food, you see," she explained.

'I will explain that to the baby," I said. "He must be persuaded to give up milk. It's unnatural."

Delia was offended, and showed it.

The main point about the simple life is that it is capable of indefinite expansion. Delia discovered one of its possibilities when lunching with Lady Ewart on grape-nuts and beans. She returned full of the extension.

"You ought to live out of doors as much as possible. It is the only natural way," she declared. "Day and night," she explained. "Fancy breathing foul air in stuffy rooms." I was still silent. "Jack," she said hesitatingly, "do you know I'm thinking of sleeping out of doors."

"The ground is very hard," said I.

"Do you think—oh, I'll have a hammock," she said with an inspiration.

"You used to lie in a hammock," I said, meditatively, looking back, "when I was——"

"Don't be silly," said Delia. "This is a matter of principle, not stupid nonsense. I would have it slung between the apple trees and——"

* * * * * *

I think I was in the middle of my beauty sleep when I was awakened by a cry of distress. A moment later Delia entered, her hair flowing in dishevelment and her garments dripping.

"It's—it's come on to rain," she said pathetically, "and oh, I am so wet."

Perhaps it was the cold douche; I don't know; but she was pensive next day, and at luncheon she at roast beef.

The Owl.

The owl is a very wise bird, and has therefore been taken as the badge for a brotherhood. Victoria now possesses about 180 members, affiliated with other branches of the same order. But even owls sometimes make mistakes. They made a great mistake with regard to Mayor Morley lately. An excursion has been arranged for the Victoria owls to hoot in concord with their Vancouver brethren, and tickets have been issued from 1 o'clock p.m. Saturday, August 3rd, till Monday, August 5th. In order to advertise this, a deputation waited on His Worship for permission to stretch a streamer across Government street, but were peremporily turned down.

"No," said the cock of the walk; "I have determined to put down all this kind of thing."

Early on Friday morning a streamer announcing the Merchants' picnic to be held on August 8th might have been seen across Government street, and was soon taken down. Why this thusness?

New Tennis Rules.

The Golden Star of the 27th ult. publishes the following rules which have just been adopted by the Tennis Club of that ambitious little city. They are commended to the consideration of the Victoria Tennis Club:

"Resolved that hereafter the gentlemen shall be careful to extend invitations to the waiting ladies in attendance; resolved that while large numbers forlornly occupy the side benches one set only shall constitute a game to one single active quartette; resolved that gentlemen net players shall be fined for poaching on their fair partner's preserves; resolved that tournament matches shall take precedence over friendly contests; resolved that before serving the player shout in an audible tone 'ply' the object being to notify the opponent running that the ball is about to be 'plyed'; and, finally, resolved that devotees continuing their exercises into twilight hours shall collect all balls and close all gates. All of which is respectfully submitted."

Another Dividend Payer.

The B. C. Copper Company has joined the dividend payers, and on Sept. 4th will distribute $200,000. This dividend is equal to 40 cents per share and places the company on a 20 per cent. basis. The dividend is paid from earnings and the Secretary announces that the company sufficient funds on hand to pay the next two regular quarterly dividends. This is a splendid showing, much of the credit of which belongs to Mr. Fredrick Keffer, the general manager, who is also President of the Canadian Mining Institute.

Spoonerisms.

The late Dean Spooner had a most unfortunate habit of mixing his words in a manner most ludicrous to his hearers; the following are some of his most noticeable sayings:

One day when about to start on a journey he was in a great hurry and found he required an extra bag to carry some papers in. Imagine the astonishment of the unhappy man in the saddler's shop when the Dean rushed in and said in a breathless voice:

"Please give me at once a brown bandy hag to travel with." Needless to remark he meant a brown bandy bag.

On another occasion the Dean went into a refreshment room at a railway station and demanded from the astonished barmaid a "glass bun and a bath of milk, please."

One morning in the winter he wished a fire lighted in his wife's morning room, so he rang the bell and said to the said, "Jane go into your mistresses's room and fight the liar."

Once the Dean had very carefully watched two boys for any army exam. and was thoroughly annoyed when he found they had failed to pass, particularly as during terms time he told them they were wasting their time and not working hard enough. Imagine their astonishment when the Dean called them into his study and telling them they had failed, he wound up with the scathing remark: "Young boys, you have deliberately tasted two terms," meaning of course, that they had wasted two terms.

An Empty Nest.

Never a sign in this empty nest
Of the love that mated, the love that sung;
The birds are flown to the East and West,
And the husk of their homestead has no tongue.
To tell of the sweet, still, summer eyes,
Of the sweeter, merrier summer days,
Only a nest in the falling leaves,
And silence here in the wood's dark maze.

But I hold in my hand the dainty thing,
Woven of feather, and fluff and reed,
Once 'twas the haven of breast and wing,
And the shelter of callow and helpless need.
It tells of a passionate gladness gone;
It dumbly whispers that love is best;
That never a night but has had a dawn—
And I drop a kiss in the empty nest.

Business is Business.

Son (to his father, a wine-merchant): "I say, father, isn't that too cheap? You're giving them a quart of Moselle for eighteenpence."

Wine-merchant: "That's all right, my son. In the first place it isn't quite a quart, and in the second it isn't quite all Moselle."

The Man from Kentucky.

At the junction of Whittington and Park avenues, Hot Springs, Ark., is situated the magnesia spring. At this spring patrons are given all the water they can drink for five cents.

The other day a man walked in, drank some three or four big glasses of water and tendered the proprietor a half-dollar in payment. It was early in the morning and there was no change for this money in the cash register.

Turning to a man sitting near the proprietor asked for change for the money.

"Sir," replied the man, "I am from Kentucky; if I had change for half a dollar, do you suppose I would be drinking water?"

One Was Enough.

Little Ruth wanted a sister.

"Let's pray to God to send us one," she said to her mother. Then, after thinking a moment, she added: "No, don't you pray, for if we both prayed we might have twins."

Joe Jefferson's Monologue.

I was playing in St. Paul, Minn., several years ago and during our week's engagement the Twin City Press Club had a benefit in Minneapolis. All of the companies playing in both cities sent volunteers. I was among the number. During the performance the late Joe Jefferson was on the stage giving his reminiscences of the stage. I was standing in the first entrance, listening to him. There were two song and dance women that were to follow Mr. Jefferson. They were getting impatient and wanted to do their act and get through, when one of them called to the one standing alongside of me, "Who's on, Sadie?" Sadie yelled back: "Some old guy is doing a monologue. It's fierce." "Why don't he get down to his finish, sing his song, and give us a chance?"

'Tween the Lines.

Many men of various races
'Tween the lines, they think they'll find
Often seek in different places,
For the truth they think will lie
Underneath a smooth reply.
'Tween the lines, they think they'll find
What is real beneath a "blind."

Just like children, when they're ill
Take the jam, and find the pill;
So these men refuse to take Any statement, till they rake
'Tween the lines, to make quite sure
That it has no hidden lure.

There's a worthy man I know,
Full of zeal, who's all aglow
Finding water; but won't try
Any scheme, until he pry
'Tween the lines; for there, he thinks,
Truth will sleep, while falsehood winks.

Adams for a handsome price,
Came and gave some good advice,
But the Mayor turned it down,
And, when questioned, with a frown,
"'Tween the lines," he said, "I see Something bad for this City."

People should not be too smart,
As I've found, for my own part,
That the truth is mostly found
Right above, on open ground.
"'Tween the lines," is often read
By the folks who should be bled.

Sporting Comment

The success which has attended the representatives of the city while taking part in the various rifle tournaments has brought Victoria before the whole world. At Bisley Sergt. Major Cavin has upheld the honor of the 5th Regiment in a most worthy manner. Although he did not win the King's Prize he was the high man on the Canadian team and only eight points separated him from the winner. This is a most creditable record and one that every Victorian should be proud of. Sergt. Cavin is a most conscientious shot and that he should so well uphold the record of Canada is something that should redound to his credit. Although Sergt. Carr and Gnr. Fisher did not get into the last stage for the King's Prize they were not far behind and they did nobly considering that it is their first visit to the meeting where the best shots in the world congregate. All honor should be extended to Sergt. Cavin, Sergt. Carr and Gnr. Fisher on their grand work and their return should be made memorable. While the representatives of Victoria were doing so well at Bisley those who had been left behind were also adding more laurels to Victoria. At the Calgary meet Sergt. Richardson won the championship of Manitoba and brought some more silverware home as an evidence of his prowess. At the annual meeting of the British Columbia Rifle Association Victoria was again to the fore and on the team which will represent British Columbia at Ottawa will be found three Victorians. When it is taken into consideration that the whole Province is represented it is a matter of great pride that Victoria secures three representatives out of ten. It is not only the fact that three representatives of this city have secured positions on the Ottawa team, but that the championship of British Columbia was won by a Victorian. Quarter-Master-Sergt. Lettice deserves all the credit that can be given him for his performance at the annual meet of the association. For many years Sergt. Lettice has taken part in the matches, but never before has it fallen to his luck to come out on top of all the shots in B. C. In addition to winning the championship of B. C. Sergt. Lettice also won the Cornwall Cup which now becomes his absolute property. Another cup which was brought to Victoria was the New Westminster Cup. Sergt. Richardson again coming to the front. Gunner Winsby also made a very good showing despite the fact that he did not capture any big prizes he was steadily plodding along and his steadiness led to his securing a position on the Ottawa team. These three shots along with the three who will meet the new comers at Ottawa will represent the Capital City of the Province at the Dominion meet which takes place in the very near future and it will be surprising indeed if Victoria does not figure in some of the big prizes. The team which represents the Fifth Regiment this year has several cups to defend and the manner in which the locals are shooting gives the impression that the majority will again adorn the Officers' Mess room. Sergt. Lettice, Sergt. Richardson and Gunner Winsby leave during the early part of the month for Ottawa and the best wishes of all Victorians is extended to them and to the three local representatives who are now on their way home from Bisley.

Before leaving Sergt. Cavin, mention must be made of the manner in which he assisted the Canadian team as a whole. In the majority of matches the winnings of the individual members is devoted to the entire team, while in others the winnings go to the individuals. That Sergt. Cavin shot for the benefit of the Canadian team is very easily shown when it is stated that he won 760 shillings for the team and failed to get a penny for himself. This is sport, and The Week offers hearty congratulation to Sergt Cavin on his loyalty to his team. Sergt Cavin is a representative that Victorians should be proud of.

A surprise was sprung on the sporting public on Wednesday evening when Jimmy Britt received a decision over Battling Nelson in a twenty-round fight at San Francisco. It is generally conceded that once a champion is defeated he never comes back, but Britt has upset all calculations and is again the master of the durable Dane. The beating handed out to Nelson by Ganns has something to do with his defeat by Britt and it is very unlikely that Nelson will ever again be known as the champion of the world.

The Victoria Intermediate lacrosse club will do battle this afternoon against the Bellingham team at Oak Bay and a good game is anticipated. According to all calculations the locals should win and if the visitors from the Sound manage to get the upper hand it will be a surprise to all followers of the locals. The local youngsters are very game and have only lost one game this season, and it is expected that another victory will be added to their record this afternoon.

PLANNING TO BUILD.
I want you to write for my new Book "COUNTRY AND SUBURBAN HOMES." It is especially prepared for prospective home builders and is full of valuable, practical and useful information on the subject. Each residence is illustrated by half-tone plates of the original showing exactly how the building will look when completed. There are complete descriptions of each home and accurate estimates of cost. This book will cost you nothing, but will be worth a great deal of money to you. Write to-day I prepare at low cost special designs and plans for new work or for remodelling old buildings.

Merchants' Picnic. The Victoria Merchants' picnic which takes place on the 8th inst. should be a most successful affair, if careful preparation, good management and enthusiasm afford any criterion. The amusements are unique and the prizes more numerous and valuable than in any previous year. If the present glorious weather continues, and there is no reason to doubt it, thousands will avail themselves of this opportunity of visiting Langford Plains and spending a day in the country under the most delightful auspices.

The New Method. Many complaints have reached The Week office as to the manner in which the Relief Fund, so promptly and generously subscribed for sufferers by the late fire, has been dealt with. While it is perfectly true that no one was placed in danger of starvation, thanks to the sympathy of neighbours and friends, there were a number of cases on the verge of destitution, in which a little timely aid would have been greatly appreciated, and would have prevented anxiety and inconvenience. In Canada of all countries, people are slow to acknowledge poverty or distress, which accounts for the inability of some people to discern where help was really needed. That the good intentions of citizens who were anxious out of their abundance to assist needy cases should have been thwarted, either by ignorance or indifference is regrettable on every ground, and even now it is not too late, nor, unfortunately, is it unnecessary, to render pecuniary assistance in a few cases. If the Chief Magistrate still shirks this duty it might well be undertaken by those who can afford it.

Factious Opposition. It is the undoubted privilege of any constituency, or of any section of persons in a constituency to contest an election, and no one has a right to criticise them for exercising a constitutional privilege. There are, however, times when by common consent opposition ceases to be a virtue and one of these times appears to have arrived in Vancouver. Mr. Bowser will be the last to complain that he is not to be allowed to take his seat as a minister without opposition. He loves a contest and is a born fighter, but that the city should be saddled with the turmoil of a contested election in order to satisfy the vagaries of Mr. Joseph Martin and Mr. E. T. Kingsley is almost too much of a joke. Enough has been said of Mr. Martin's candidature, of Mr. Kingsley it need only be remarked that he has proved himself to be an illogical, irreconcilable, revolutionary demagogue of the worst type. He represents in Canada the spirit which for years has made the Coeur D'Alenes of Idaho a byword and a reproach throughout the civilised world. He is not a serious politician, and The Week doubts if he is even a serious Socialist. His candidature coming at a time when the revelations of the Haywood trial have set everyone's ears tingling may not be an unmixed evil, if it directs public attention to the fact that the organisation which has just figured so disastrously in the American courts has a branch in Vancouver, and that its chosen representative is Mr. E. T. Kingsley.

Fire Traps. The Week called attention in last issue to the fact that in the centre of the City of Victoria, adjacent to the most valuable business buildings are a number of old wooden shacks in a highly inflammable condition. It needs but a single spark to set any one of these aflame, and why they should be allowed to remain where they are passes the comprehension of every citizen, who is not acquainted with the motives which actuate our most extraordinary City Council. It is the intention of The Week to deal with these fire traps seriatim, until the danger is removed. Before doing so it cannot be too clearly understood that under its by-laws the city has ample authority to order the removal of every such dangerous shack, and if the owners fail to comply with a requisition to that effect, the city authorities can themselves remove it. One of the worst of these is the small block on the north-east corner of Fort and Broad, which contains the Beehive saloon and several tumbledown shacks adjoining. When one considers the age, construction and condition of these buildings, it is a marvel that they have been allowed to remain so long. In the same block is the Driard Hotel, with its hundreds of summer visitors, and the Victoria Theatre, at times packed with more than a thousand auditors. The safety of all these people is imperilled by the existence of the miserable shacks referred to, and the City Council is grossly negligent of its duty in permitting the nuisance to continue. The responsibility rests upon the shoulders of the elected representatives of the ratepayers, as private individuals are naturally loth to interfere in matters for which provision has been made. This is Fire Trap No. 1 on The Week's list, and it is probably the worst. Who owns it, and why is its continuance permitted?

MUMM'S
For Purity.

It has been frequently asserted by eminent authorities that nearly two-thirds of the crime and poverty of the world is directly traceable to itnemperance. These wiseacres should state that these evils are due to the immoderate use of wines and liquors of questionable quality for it is a well known fact that intemperance is practically unknown in the wine-producing countries of the world where the inhabitants drink moderately of good, pure wines.
