Municipal Elections.

In twelve days from this date the Municipal elections in Victoria will be decided. The press is a unit in declaring that the management of civic affairs cannot safely be entrusted to the men who have muddled matters so badly during the last year. Public opinion tested by any of the mean available endorses this attitude on the part of the press. At the moment of writing the men who have declared themselves as candidates would not if elected constitute any improvement on the present Council. The press has appealed to the ratepayers and especially to the influential members of the community to rise to the occasion. The appeal is two-fold, it is to men of substance, of capability and of status in the community to allow themselves to be nominated; it is to the ratepayers to support them so that the City may have a Council worthy of its importance and able to deal with the serious problems which now confront it. The time has gone by for recapitulating the errors and emphasizing the weakness of the present Chief Magistrate and his colleagues; all this has been dealt with "ad nauseam." The greatest service which the press can render the City at the moment is to urge the ratepayers to possess their souls in patience for a few hours when they will in all probability have an opportunity of supporting men of different calibre both for Mayoral and Aldermanic offices. In view of the widespread dissatisfaction which exists in all classes of the community with the work of the present Council, it ought not to be too much to expect that the members would have sufficient modesty to decline renomination at the hands of their personal followers. It must be perfectly obvious both to the Mayor and Aldermen that the ratepayers will not pass any by-law, not even the much wanted by-law, if the money is to be expended under the direction of the present Mayor and his supporters. It was nothing but lack of confidence in these men which brought about the defeat of the Incinerator by-law, badly as it was needed. The same lack of confidence will ensure the defeat of the water by-law, and for this reason if for no other a different body of men should be elected, to whom the ratepayers are not afraid to entrust the spending of their money. There is good reason to expect that before this ink is well dry men of proved capacity will have been induced to come forward and save the City from the reproach of being the worst managed in the West. If such men are ultimately induced to stand there is no doubt that Victoria will gladly avail itself of the opportunity to establish a new departure in Civic policy.

The Water Question.

The Week appeals to the ratepayers of the City of Victoria to turn down the water by-law which the Mayor has railroaded through the Council at the eleventh hour. In doing this the considerations which weigh are that although it is the recommendation of Expert Adams whose advice on general principles should be followed, it is not opportune that a Council in the very last days of its term should couple the by-law with the Municipal elections. There is a further reason; anyone who carefully reads Mr. Adams' report will see that although he recommends that half a million dollars or more should be spent on improving the Elk Lake system, he couples with this the statement that even then it would only serve the City for a limited term of years and that another source of supply should be acquired in the near future. It is not to impugn the correctness or the wisdom of Mr. Adams' conclusions to suggest that the ratepayers might conceivably prefer to acquire the permanent source of supply in the first instance instead of making two bites at one cherry. At any rate since four or five different projects have been outlined and Mr. Adams has furnished the fullest details with respect to each, there is surely no reason why those who have to pay the piper should not be permitted to select the tune. It is all a question of cost and no doubt Mr. Adams' recommendation is at the moment the most economical, which accounts for the fact that it was found possible, although with difficulty, to secure the necessary signatures to the petition.

By THE LOUNGER

My accomplished colleague, Bohemian, has wished the readers of The Week the Compliments of the Season in such delightful style that he has left nothing for me to say. I fear, however, that my disposition is hardly as genial as his, and I doubt if, to such an extent, my nature is overflowing with the milk of human kindness. I doubt also if he ever "dossed" in lower Johnson street, or prowled the streets in the "wee small hours" in the hope that he might run against some Old Country acquaintance, who had returned from the wars, and wanted to stand him a supper.

I would, however, in my humble way, re-echo his good wishes, for even loungers know how to spend a merry Christmas and to hope for a happy New Year.

My Christmas has been a little clouded by the reflection that some of the "strangers within our gate" have not had a merry Christmas at all. It seems as difficult these days to keep the Oriental question out of a newspaper article as Mr. Dick of immortal fame found it to keep King Charles' head out of his literary disquisitions, but I am prone to confess that meagre as my crust was I shared it with a few poor Hindus who glided through the streets of Victoria in the pitiless rain looking more like wraiths than men. On Christmas eve I noticed some twenty of these belated sojourners proceeding along Government Street in single file, each man carried a long slab of drift-wood on his shoulder which he had rescued from the sea. I had the curiosity to follow and found that the rendezvous was a vacant lot off Chatham Street, where a fire had already been kindled, around which a dozen or more of their fellow countrymen were shivering.

I know that a few Victorians whose sense of humanity was stronger than their sympathy with the Asiatic Exclusion League, loosened their purse strings and most of the Hindus in the City had a little Christmas fare, and rude shelter, but I still think it is a disgrace that they should have received such inhuman treatment from the Mayor, and that the Chief Magistrate of a Christian City should have been so heartless in his handling of them and should have laid himself and the city open to such a scathing rebuke as has been administered by the Hindu missionary, Mr. Kumar.

Public policy may, and in the opinion of many does, demand either the exclusion or the restriction of Oriental immigration, but no consideration admitted among civilized people demands inhuman treatment even of aliens. It may be an oft-repeated story but when I pick up General Roberts' "Forty-one Years In India," or Flora Annie Steele's "On the Face of the Waters," and read of the thousands of brave Hindus who willingly gave their lives to save English women and children, I feel ashamed that their descendants should have to submit to indifference and neglect at the hands of British subjects who consider themselves superior because they happen to be white. Deport the Hindus, deport every Oriental if the public interest demands it and it can be done in a constitutional manner, but while they are here, the obligations of common humanity are just as strong, if not stronger, than in the case of people of our own race.

I have been deeply interested, in common I doubt not, with many readers of The Week, in following the sensational developments of the Druce case, and must plead guilty to a feeling of unholy joy at the denouement. Not that I am averse to Druce or any other man of humble origin, depriving a Duke of his estates, if he can prove title, but where I find ground for rejoicing is in the discomfiture of the professional perjurer Caldwell, who prepared such a skilful story only to find that he was destined to verify the time-honoured proverb that "if you give a fool enough rope he will hang himself."

Caldwell's story was very skilful and very plausible, and as he unfolded its attractive features, under the adroit examination in chief of his counsel, Mr. Atherly Jones, the Druce stock went up several points. When some features of his story, notably that dealing with the alleged mock funeral, and the putting of lead in the coffin, were confirmed by venerable grey-haired ladies of seventy, it was easy to conceive of Mr. George Hollamby Druce rubbing his hands under cover of the table and silently chuckling, not to say chortling, in his glee.

When Mr. Horace Avory took the witness in hand a change came o'er the spirit of his dream. Mr. Avory since the death of Sir Charles Russell, shares with Mr. C. F. Gill the reputation of being the cleverest cross-examiner at the Bar. He gravitated with surpassing subtlety to the weak points in Caldwell's story, and at the end of the second day's examination had him discredited. When Mr. Atherly Jones the following day announced that it was not the intention of the prosecution to rely upon the evidence of Mr. Caldwell, old habitues of the court knew that there would shortly be something doing. Inside of six hours a warrant had been granted for the arrest of Caldwell for perjury, but the old fox had scented the hounds and was already in full flight. A week later he was laid by the heels in New York and is now fighting extradition on the plea of ill health.

Meanwhile the American press is beginning to work up sympathy on his behalf. It will, however, avail him nothing. Perjury is an extraditable offence and what the law of his own country failed to do for him in connection with his attempt to blackmail Mrs. Stewart will be effectively done by the long arm of the British law.

But for Caldwell's perjury it is almost certain that the Druce grave would not have been opened, so long as the issue was merely a civil one involving personal aggrandizement, the law refused consent, but when the majesty of the law itself was impugned by a criminal offence, the permission was promptly given, with a result anticipated by everyone who has followed the case except, perhaps the poor deluded victims whose money has been used to carry it on.

I am not vindictive, but I hope that Caldwell will be treated just about the same as the Tichborne claimant, who was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment for perjury, and actually served fourteen.

A New Year Thought.

The Future comes, we know not whence,
Nor can we tell what it will bring;
We only know that far off thence,
The Past has sped on dusky wing.
With eager heart we turn to face
The great unknown that lies before;
We take it in a close embrace,
And hope that in its treasure-store—
It holds in trust for all mankind
The happiness they fain would find.

The Heart Line.

This is not a personal reminiscence, nor a little thing of my own, but a brief account of one of the most interesting books I have read for a long time. It was sent to me direct by the McMillan Company of Toronto for reviewing purposes, and therefore I am unable to say whether it is on sale at the local stores, but either of the Victoria book sellers can readily procure it for anyone who after reading this reflection may desire its closer acquaintance.

The title of the book is "The Heart Line." It is the work of a young man who writes under the nom-de-plume of Gellett Burgess. He has previously written a few successful short stories for the American magazines, without, however, attaining any considerable reputation. His best work has been done in the pages of the Smart Set, to which he contributed a series of articles entitled "Maxims of Methuselah." His work proved him to be bright and original, but what always struck me most was that he must have seen a great deal of the seamy side of life, and that he had been particularly unfortunate in his choice of lady friends.

"The Heart Line" more than confirms this impression. It is a story of Bohemian life in San Francisco. Its literary merit is a negligible quantity, unless it be a literary merit to tell a story well. The author introduces and skilfully delineates characters whom happily few ordinary mortals have met in the flesh. His picture of the gaiety, the carelessness, and the frivolity of a phase of life in American cities is obviously true, and because of its truth convincing. Every man who wishes to understand from the inside, something of the indifference with which a certain set in the States regards social and family obligations should read "The Heart Line" —it is the key to many a problem and will well repay study.

Probably, however, the most interesting part of this remarkable book is that which deals with the American craze for spiritualistic seances, so-called psychic phenomena and palmistry. In the knowledge of these "occult sciences" Gellett Burgess is a past master; not only can he explain every trick, but he relates clearly from his own experience how the tricks are worked to produce the desired result. According to Gellett Burgess there are no honest spiritualists; the whole gang he labels "charlatans and fakirs," and if he had spent half a life-time in practising their arts and wiles he could not be better posted. I have read many so-called exposures of spiritualism. For quite a number of years I was a member of the London Psychical Research Society and was present at the unmasking of Professor Slade, but I never met with anyone who knew more about the tricks of this detestable trade than the author of the Heart Line. I would be the last to say one word which would hurt the feelings of those who have been cajoled into any measure of confidence in the representations of spiritualists, but I would give a great deal if all such could read this book, and learn how the success of the cult is entirely dependent upon skilful trickery on the one hand and human credulity on the other.

Apart, however, from these two features "The Heart Line," as its title indicates, is a love story of much more than average interest. The hero was for some years a professional palmist and only abandoned the calling when his eyes were opened to its dishonourable character through the influence of the girl whom he loved.

The heroine, Clytie Payson, is delightfully drawn; she is attractive and lovable, with fine moral instincts and high principle, and her work of redemption is followed with absorbing interest until she finally retrieves her lover from his discreditable calling and the associates whom it has provided for him. The interest is increased by the fact that she possesses a remarkable intuition which makes her in reality far more susceptible to legitimate psychic influence than the professors of the cult.

Her father, a millionaire, furnishes the victim and by his means the author well illustrates the process of "rooking the pigeon."

But the most delightfully drawn character in the book is Fancy Gray, a replica of "the red-haired impressionist girl" immortalized by Kipling in his "Light that Failed." In her devotion to the hero, her numerous flirtations by way of diversion, her worldly wisdom, her delightful flippancy and her tragic fate, she constitutes one of the most attractive characters of modern fiction. To know Fancy Gray is to love her.

It is due to the author to say that while his first important book has obvious blemishes, they are entirely those of a young author. At times the work is crude, in two or three places the action drags, and perhaps the chief defect of all is that the book is at least one-fourth too long, but in view of the wide experience, the special knowledge and skilful handling, not only of the side issues but of the central plot, "The Heart Line" must be regarded as a conspicuous success.

Perhaps what after all is the most important consideration to an old book-lover, is that the tone is good and the book leaves one with a decided conviction that there are some things usually gilded which are very far from being gold.

A Sociological Study of the Negro.

"The Negro Races," by Jerome Dowd, which has just been published by The Macmillan Company, is the first volume of a series in which the author is to present a sociological study of mankind from the standpoint of race. Mr. Dowd insists on the importance, as a basis of sociological study of establishing the fact that each race has its distinctive institutions and special evolution corresponding to the locality in which it lives or has lived. This is his primary object, with which is associated his purpose of discovering the factors and laws which explain the mental and moral characteristics and particular institutions of each general racial division, to the end that the principles and laws discovered may be applied to whatever is abnormal or retrogressive. The present volume, the first of the proposed series, deals with the life of the Negritos, Negritians, and Fellatahs, from the earliest times to the present, showing the conditions which existed or still exist as an outcome of native suroundings, and noting the changes which have taken place in consequence of outside influences. Succeeding volumes will deal with other branches of the Negro race and with other aspects of their industrial, social and moral status. These volumes will be of special importance to the American sociologist as supplying the necessary background of knowledge for any scientific attempt to deal with the Negro problem as it exists in this country.

The Multiversant China Bowl

¶ No article in the wide field of ceramics, suits itself to the occasion as does the item which in turn is a salad, berry, fruit, preserve or nut bowl. Besides, the handsomely decorated one, is a show-piece of no ordinary qualities, for the china closet or buffet table.

¶ A large and satisfactory display surely. Look them over.

SPECIAL BLANKET VALUES.

Blankets, that'll make you forget the dreary and disagreeable cold outside, and send you quickly to the land of dreams, are waiting here for you. Warm, fleecy kinds that are not oppressively heavy. Blankets that are better than than the ordinary —made of "wool"—not a "mixture." Full weight, too, and sizes that often measure more, and never less, than what the ticket says. Blankets made by the best makers, and offered you by a house ready to guarantee them, and offered, too, at prices that are "right." Quality should be the keynote when buying blankets. If you are not absolutely certain of the quality of those offered it is doubly important that you should exercise care. There are many "shoddy" blankets offered as "all wool." Prices look extraordinarily low for such good-looking blankets. But wait until they have seen some service—wait until they strike the water. Quite often it is difficult to find enough to "go round." Doesn't it seem wise policy to buy from a reliable house that will guarantee their quality? Every blanket we sell has this firm's guarantee of quality behind it. That is sufficient for those who know us. The values we offer are the best possible, made possible only through the fortunate early purchase of a big lot. Better investigate our blanket stock.

Lamp Art Lamp Utility

¶ Never in the history of lamp making have art and science been so cleverly combined as at the present time.

A Lady's Letter

By BABETTE.

Dear Madge:

Ugliness, as it exists in the majority of homes, is due not so much to a lack of knowledge as it is to the haphazard way many people have of selecting their belongings. Out of the family income a certain sum is set aside each year for repairs and new furniture and is usually expended in the following manner—curtains this year, wall paper the next, rugs the year following, and after that, some new furniture. All this is well and good. Out of just such careful planning often comes a charming home. But too often when the housekeeper is ready to make her purchases, she throws caution to the winds and selects a certain style, not for its beauty or utility, but because it is the fad, the neighbours have some like it, or the price happens to correspond with the amount in her purse. The note, discordant or otherwise, which it will sound in the room it occupies is the last thing considered.

In the old days, when cabinetmakers were not so plentiful and the woods with which they worked far more numerous, sins against good taste were not nearly so frequent. Family possessions accumulated much more slowly and were chosen chiefly for use and for their honest workmanship. Though the colonial house might, according to our modern standing, seem cold and cheerless, it was a home in the truest sense of the word and not a store-house for junk. The furnishings were few, but so beautiful in their chaste simplicity that we cannot equal them.

Very rarely is it possible to combine several different kinds of wood without sacrificing the decorative effect of each. Yet it is not uncommon, even in these days of widely scattered information on the subject of furnishings to find rooms in which swamp oak, mahogany and birdseye maple hobnob in the closest companionship. Separately, these things are good. Collectively, the wars of the ancient Romans were not more fierce than the combats waged by these otherwise peaceable articles.

Beyond a doubt the clearance sales of the department stores are responsible for a large number of the blunders made in house furnishings. The temptation to buy a chair simply because it has been marked down to half its former price is one that very few women can resist. Hence the rubbish that cumbers our homes, the tables, all legs and no tops; the chairs that may fit the corners of the room but were never made to fit a human back, and the highly decorated footstools that were never made for feet.

If, when about to purchase a new piece of furniture the housewife would consider, first, is it really beautiful or does it distract the eye with meaningless curves and angles?, and, second, does it harmonize both in colour and design with the finish and with the other furniture in the room? there would be fewer of the glaring incongruities so frequently found in our homes. I have in mind a room, I have lately seen. perfect but for one jangling note. It is a library, papered in brown, with here and there a tinge of pink, like a hint of sunrise. The rugs are Persian, lustrous with age. The table, the bookcases and the chairs are excellent examples of the Mission style and correspond with the finish. There is no fussy collection of bric-a-brac over the mantel, but instead a few pieces of rare old bronze, with a growing plant or two. Now for the discord. It is a davenport in maple, very modern as to carving, upholstered in sky-blue and fairly groaning beneath its weight in pillows.

But the greatest sins are committed against pictures. How shall we excuse the ornate gold frames which direct attention, not to the picture within, but to their gaudy selves? How pardon the ignorance which hangs sketches, water colours and photo-engravings on the same wall? The architect who said things when he discovered that his patron had drilled a hole in the green tiled chimney piece and placed therein a photo of his wife, could sympathize with the artist who found one of his cherished studies of animal life hung close to a pert ballet girl poster.

Most people hang their pictures without regard to size, subject or sky line. It is not uncommon to find them above the moulding. Many of the floral papers liked for chambers make pictures unnecessary, but in just such rooms are they most abundant. Particularly is this true of the bedrooms belonging to the daughters of the house.

We have ceased, at least some of us have, to hang our dining-rooms with pictures of dead ducks, but the woman who has the courage to banish entirely her first crude attempts at painting is rare indeed. What was your favourite study in the days when you took painting lessons because you wanted some pictures for the drawing room? Was it a dog holding a duck in his mouth or did you incline towards a dropsical-looking milkmaid seated on the wrong side of her cow? Ah! the paintings were bad enough but modern fancy work is not greatly improved. Surely it were better to spend one's spare hours in piecing quilts than in making "Gibson-head" pillows, in poker work.

Is it not time we came to our senses, and turned our surplus energy into more profitable channels? The laws of harmony are not hard to learn. Artistic furnishings depend not so much on a large outlay as they do upon a sense of beauty and the ability to make use of common materials.

Not Quite Clear.

A well known clergyman of Boston was once talking to some friends with reference to the desirability of chronological coherence in ideas, in the form of written statement, when he observed that there are times when this method becomes a trfle too suggestive.

"For instance," said the speaker, "I once heard a minister in New Hampshire make his usual Sunday morning announcement as follows:

"'The funeral of the late and much lamented sexton takes place on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock.

"'Thanksgiving services will be held in this chapel on Thursday morning at eleven o'clock.'"

Absent-Minded Professor—"I always forget to put a handkerchief in my coat. I really must make a knot in it to remind myself."

Husband — "What? You have bought that beautiful vase for Frau Muller? I thought you couldn't bear her."

Wife—"No more I do, but the other day I heard her say that this was exactly the kind of vase she didn't care for."

Waitress—"Excuse me, sir, but this is the sixth time you have gone away from here without paying your bill."

Wiley Customer—"So sorry, but when one sees your face one forgets everything else."

"That matrimonial agent has had his beard shaved off."

"I suppose he wants to look as like Cupid as he can."

Captain of the Fire Brigade—"There are two fires raging, one in Holzheim and the other in Weidenbach. Both places are an hour from here; which shall we go to?"

Fireman—"Weidenbach. The beer's better there."

"Why this is the second temperance meeting I have seen you at. What are you doing here?"

"Well, you see one gets such a gorgeous thirst at these gatherings."

Extremely Rare.

Cashem—"I wish they would get another cook at our boarding house. The steak is always too rare to suit me."

Hashem—"Huh! At my boarding house the steak is so rare we only see it once or twice a week."

Sporting Comment.

The most notable sporting event that has been scheduled to take place in this city for many years, is the Rugby football match which will be played this afternoon at Oak Bay when the Stanford University team will try conclusions with the Victoria fifteen. This game bears more importance than many realize and it is hoped that the citizens of this city will show their appreciation by attending the match in large numbers. By securing this match attention is drawn to Victoria in every city in California and if it should so happen that the local boys are victorious it will be a glorious day for the grand old game of Rugby. It is a well known fact that for the past few years football has been practically dead in Victoria and it is only withiin the past year that it has assumed any semblance of popularity and the game will in a measure show whether or not the people of Victoria appreciate the efforts of the players in endeavouring to place the Capital city of the Province in the place which it should occupy.

It is largely to the efforts of the Vancouver Rugby Football Union that this game has been arranged and they are entitled to no small share of praise for their endeavours to place Rugby football again on a sound basis in Victoria. Victorians should show their appreciation by attending in such numbers that it cannot be said that the game was a financial failure.

The necessary expenses towards bringing the Stanford team of B. C. are very heavy. Three games have been played in Vancouver which have cleared Vancouver's share of the expense and now it is up to Victoria to do likewise. Stanford has a strong team and it will take a good combination to beat them. It is impossible for me to say whether or not the locals can do it, but that they will make an extra effort goes without saying. It is true that the local team is not as strong as it should be, but this is no reason why there should not be a good attendance. The fact that the locals are having a hard time placing a first class fifteen on the field is all the more reason why they should be encouraged and it is up to the people of Victoria to do so. In times of prosperity any team has all the backing it requires, but it is when the hard roads of failure marks the path that friends are welcome and now is that time. It is impossible to criticize the team for at the time of going to press it is not definitely decided on, but it can be depended on that it will be the best that can be secured under the circumstances and all that is required is that Victorians should be true to their representatives and turn out and encourage them. The game is called for 2.15 and it will be called sharp on time. It will be played rain or shine, but as there is a large covered grandstand a little moisture should have no effect on the attendance.

Allen & Co.'y Clothing Sale.

It is a question, as to whether the reader would prefer to buy one of Allen & Coy., "The Fit-Reform Wardrobe," $21.50 Men's Business Suits and pay the full price and get a genuine crisp five-dollar bill in the side pocket of every coat, or to take Allen's & Co.'s big ten-day Clothing Sale, and buy the very same $21.50 suit for $16.50. It really does not matter which of the two propositions are preferred the result is the same—a saving of from $5 upon every suit of clothes or overcoat during sale days only. Allen and Company are the most reliable concern. They give the customer excellent service and stand at quality in clothing. They claim that as they are the only exclusive clothing store in Victoria and carrying by far the largest and most comprehensive stock of clothing in this city, can always give better values. During the year 1908 Allen & Company contemplate many new departures in the clothing business and promise their many customers and casual patrons a much better range of stock to choose from and a continuance of the popular prices that have been the greatest drawing card to this store.

The Fit-Reform make of clothing is best described as the most complete and up-to-date garment that modern tailoring art can produce. Every garment is hand-tailored. There is a noticeable absence of shoddy and shapeless outlines in a Fit-Reform garment. It is carefully cut and conforms to every figure. A perfect fit is guaranteed and the man who is particular about his clothing, and most men now-a-days are, exacting enough to get a suit that fits and if a perfect fit is desired get a Fit-Reform suit from Allen & Company.

During the sale which commences on Saturday and continues for ten days hundreds of suits and overcoats will be offered at a sacrifice.

THE BANK OF VANCOUVER

(TO BE INCORPORATED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT OF CANADA. CHARTER APPLIED FOR)

This proposed bank is being organized and will have its Head Office in Vancouver with its directors chosen by the subscribers to its stock at the organization meeting.

The Western Provinces and British Columbia in particular have for some considerable time felt the urgent need of an institution such as the proposed Bank of Vancouver. The formation of new industries and the developing of those already established, has been seriously retarded for want of ordinary financial accommodation, and the primary object of this new bank will be to alleviate the situation by largely confining its operations to the splendid field awaiting it in the Pacific Coast Provinces, and more especially in British Columbia.

The bank proposes to do business on the safe and well-laid-down lines of the old established banks, and will earn their respect and goodwill by a continuation of this policy.

The Bank of Montreal has its head office in Montreal.
The Bank of Toronto has its head office in Toronto.
The Bank of Ottawa has its head office in Ottawa.
The Bank of Hamilton has its head office in Hamilton.
The standing of these banks is beyond question.

	Par Value of Stock per Share	Present. Value Per Share.	Rest Account or Undivided Profits.
The Bank of Montreal	$100.00	$260.00	$11,000,000.00
The Bank of Toronto	100.00	235.00	4,500,000.00
The Bank of Ottawa	100.00	226.00	3,000,000.00
The Bank of Hamilton	100.00	217.00	2,500,000.00

The above banks, while doing a general banking business throughout the Dominion, each aims at fostering and developing business and trade, SPECIALLY IN THEIR RESPECTIVE CITIES AND DISTRICTS.

THE BANK OF VANCOUVER will aim to do the same, that is, to encourage and promote legitimate business in BRITISH COLUMBIA PARTICULARLY.

The Capital asked for is $2,000,000.00 in 20,000 shares of $100.00 each. The first $500,000.00 of stock is offered the public at a premium of 10 per cent., that is, at $110.00 per share.

Payments can be made in full or on the instalment plan. Interest will be allowed at 3 per cent. per annum upon the par value of the stock until organization.

The provisional directors, when appointed, will reserve the right to increase the premium upon the remainder of the stock, also to allot or reject any subscription in whole or in part.

Look at This List of New Edison Records for January, 1908

9722 In the Clock Store (Orth) — Edison Concert Band
One of the features of this descriptive selection is the musical clock chiming "Blue Bells of Scotland," followed by the various other clocks all striking the hour together.

9723 Down in the Old Cherry Orchard (Henry) — Frederic Rose
A fascinating new rural ballad with a waltz refrain that lingers with one from the time of first hearing.

9724 Smile! Smile! Smile! (Hoffman) — Ada Jones & Billy Murray
"I could learn to love you when you smile! smile! smile!" as sung in "The Rogers Bros. in Panama." A most tuneful selection, delightfully rendered.

9725 She's Such a Love (Catlin) — Albert Benzler
A song and dance played by the bells and orchestra. It is one of the old timers, full of melody and grace.

9726 Dreaming (Dailey) — Irving Gillette
A beautiful sentimental song now very much admired in many parts of the country.

9727 Who Do You Love? (Johnson) — Collins & Harlan
One of the comic song hits from Cole & Johnson's "Shoo Fly Regiment" sung as a coon duet.

9728 When It's Moonlight Mary Darling 'Neath the Old Grape Arbor Shade (Helt) — Manuel Romain
J. Fred. Helf's newest descriptive ballad with the scene laid in "Dixie" and sung by the foremost minstrel tenor.

9729 Don't Get Married Any More, Ma! (Pether) — Ada Jones
Selected from Vesta Victoria's new bunch of songs and confidently expected to equal, if not surpass in popularity her "Waiting at the Church" and "Poor John."

9730 Mariutch (Von Tilzer) — James Brockman
A comic Italian dialect song telling how "Mariutch make-a de hootch-a ma kootch down at Coney Isle.

9731 O Moment That I Bless (Dennee) — Mr. and Mrs. Waterous
A beautiful sentimental soprano and baritone duet, sung by two new operatic artists to our record catalogue.

9738 Ev'ry Ship Will Find a Harbor (Schmid) — Byron G. Harlan
A tuneful ballad with a catchy march chorus, which never fails to arouse interest. The words tell an unusually pretty story.

9733 Punch and Judy—Intermezzo (Henry) — Edison Military Band
A new instrumental selection by the composer of "Peter Piper" and numerous other hits, both vocal and instrumental.

9734 When the Hammer on the Anvil Rings (Havez) — Ada Jones
A novel comic song, picturing a scene in which the ladies are said to frequently take part. Reference to the "hammer" and some effects borrowed from the "Anvil Chorus" make very plain indeed the ungallant idea of the composer.

9736 Just Because He Couldn't Sing "Love Me and the World Is Mine" (Fitzgibbon) — Arthur Collins
A funny coon song telling how his "steady gal" handed him "a nice fat juicy lime," because of a love song another beau had taught her.

9737 The Rosary (Nevin) — Hans Kronold
Ethelbert Nevin's most popular song artistically performed as a 'cello solo, accompanied by piano.

EXCLUSION.

By Arthur Davies. (All Rights Reserved.)

To the full-blooded fanatical exclusionists the sudden change of front by their spokesmen at Ottawa must have come as a bolt from the blue. It is only a few short weeks since the denationalised Vampires, from across the border, were instilling into the people of Vancouver the pernicious poison of racial hatred—it seems only yesterday that a certain cock-a-whoop, strutting across the public platform airing his oratorical plumage for the benefit of the ignorant mob, in lieu of argument, threw out dark threats of "cutting the painter," "Boston tea-parties," etc. Today, all this is changed. With the eyes of the empire focussed on them, and faced with the logic of cold facts before a reasoning body of men in the Parliament of the Dominion, the dangerous and utterly weak arguments used in British Columbia are thrown overboard, as useless lumber in the midst of the storm they have themselves created in their endeavour to secure the votes of the unthinking at the next election.

In place of racial hatred, the science of political economy is introduced. In place of cutting the painter, an appeal is made to the very Empire they are doing their utmost to tear asunder. Poor, deluded fools! The blundering and fallacy of their previous arguments was safety itself compared with the untenable position they have now taken up; the leader whose hand they are attempting to force will —either privately or publicly—riddle them with the impact of cold facts. Meanwhile, as the press of British Columbia is, for political reasons, gagged—"The Week" only remaining independent—I welcome the opportunity to discuss this Asiatic Exclusion question on Economic and Imperial grounds; but before getting down to arguments, there are one or two well known truths that will materially assist at a prompt and right decision.

The solution of every political and economical problem is made difficult by the pernicious and blundering habit of mankind—in the aggregate—to see only effect and neglect to discover cause. So widespread and popular is this habit that one may truthfully say "cause is generally discovered by a process of stumbling over effect." Those who would get at the truth, in this problem of Asiatic Immigration, must brush aside effects and search for cause; after which, sensible and humane remedies may be applied, instead of the chaotic, irritating, and useless regulations now suggested or actually in use—regulations which touch only the fringe, but never get near enough to cure the cause.

Sophistries and false ideas may and do masquerade as truth; but truth only can prevail, from which follows:—it is essential to test every idea and promptly ascertain its truth or falsity; for if false, it is sheer waste of time and energy, and can never prevail. Confusion and contradiction are signs of falseness in any idea; clearness of perception is a sign of truth.

Magnetic influence is a powerful factor in economic questions; such questions are generally discussed in public, where magnetic influence plays a leading, and very often, pernicious part. The gifted orator bends the mob to his will by the power of this magnetic influence; the eloquent preacher moves his congregation to tears by the power of this same influence; even where only two or three are gathered together, this human magnetism prevails either for good or evil. It is given to only a small percentage of humanity to possess a large portion of this magnetism; those not so gifted should remember that whilst under its influence their own individuality, their real self, and the thinking powers God has given them, are temporarily put out of commission. The feeling of conviction they possess after listening to those gifted with this magnetic influence, is not really their own, but the conviction of the speaker; and more often than not, wrong!

Doubt plays a leading part in the decision of any public question; the individual can ascertain this fact for himself by recollecting that when he has a clear and decided opinion on any idea, doubt does not exist; his mind is clear. But out of the quantities if ideas which pass through his mind during a lifetime, but few are clear; the majority are clouded with doubt. What is true of the individual, is true of the multitude. Their actions are more often governed by doubts than by clear perception. Now, it is a well ascertained fact that 'doubt is never produced by the thing doubted of"; there must be some other idea which causes the doubt. To illustrate: if you are walking home with a friend on a dark evening, and he remarks—"the sidewalk is concrete." If you have a single and clear perception that the sidewalk is concrete, you will agree with him; if, through the sense of hearing or through some inaccuracy of feeling, you have an idea of ashphalt, wood, or stone, running in your mind, you will not agree; i. e., your doubt is caused by the idea of wood, stone, or ashphalt, and not by the idea of concrete. Every student of this Asiatic problem should pay careful attention to this fact; for in all probability, nine out of every ten Exclusionists are led by their doubts and not by clear perception. It follows that we must look elsewhere than Asia for the cause of their doubts. I would direct the reader's attention to the inflated wage bill of British Columbia, as being the real idea which causes the doubt.

The source of any evidence or opinion is an excellent guide as to its truth or falsity; if the source be clear and undefiled, you can rest assured of its purity; if it be doubtful or dirty, a very thorough cleansing is necessary to discover the particles of truth. On a matter of such vital moment as this Asiatic question, which involves the very being of our beloved Empire, the evidence or opinion—either WRITTEN or SPOKEN—of any man who has already willingly and wilfully bartered his allegiance and loyalty to that Empire in exchange for a mess of pottage in the shape of momentary popularity and desired self-aggrandisement in a foreign country—is already defiled and tainted; it is utterly unreliable. The guidance of such a man is an invitation to wreck the destinies of our Empire in the quicksands of dissolution.

ROOT CAUSE.

Instead of listening to the frothy eloquence of mob agitators and relying on the partisan editorials in our daily press, apply the rule mentioned in paragraph three of this article; brush aside effects and get at root causes. Take any map of the world—Mercator's Projection preferred—place a dollar bill over Japan, China, and India; place a ten-dollar bill over British Columbia. The one-dollar bill represents approximately the weekly monetary value of an Asiatic in his own country; the ten-dollar bill represents the weekly monetary value of the same Asiatic in Canada. The nine dollars difference is the golden magnet which draws him to this country; the sole root cause of the Asiatic question, for if that magnet did not exist, with the exception of a few merchants, students, and travellers, there would be no Asiatic immigrants.

The same root cause is true of the British and United States immigrants who enter our land, with the variation of the difference in the size of the magnet and, in their case, the addition of land hunger, which is merely a different attribute of the same essence.

The chief desire of the rabid exclusionist is to bolster up, and if possible, increase the scale of wages in British Columbia. As soon as he has succeeded—or thinks he has succeeded—in keeping out the Asiatic, he will inevitably turn his attention to the immigrant from Europe under the plea of undesirable. Granting he is in earnest in this matter; it is nothing less than a calamity for British Columbia.

NOVEL POLITICAL ECONOMY.

A great portion of the time occupied by the representatives of the Exclutes at Ottawa was taken up by a novel and amusing form of political economy. Attention was drawn to the difficulty of maintaining the working class in B. C., owing to the high cost of living, together with a dramatical forecast of what would happen if an influx of Asiatics broke down the present high scale of wages. Strange as it may seem to the majority of my readers, I have no hesitation in saying the high cost of living in British Columbia is due almost entirely to the mistaken policy of the working men in forcing up the cost of labour to such a point that we have the greatest difficulty in successfuly organising and building up manufactures to supply our local needs, and we are entirely prohibited from any attempt whatever to manufacture goods for export. To attempt to cure this evil by excluding cheap labour is more worthy of a bedlamite than of a sane man. We have one of the richest countries in the world in British Columbia, the surface of which is merely scratched, the major portion absolutely untouched. Long ere this we should have developed one of the greatest dairying countries on the American Continent; instead, we import the bulk of our butter, eggs, and cheese—the major portion from Eastern Canada, and pay high prices which astonish our eastern friends when they come to dwell amongst us. The reason for these high prices is simply that it is cheaper to import our produce over thousands of miles of expensive transit than to produce locally. Yet our land is the more productive and our winters and summers more genial. The exclusionist would have you intensify this policy.

His leaders drew a picture of the fiesheries of British Columbia in the hands of the Japanese; blaming the latter for having ousted the local fishermen. What arrant nonsense! If all the Japanese fishermen were suddenly removed from British Columbia does anybody believe that white folks would start up in this arduous life of a fisherman? Not much. We should catch our fish from the freight trucks of the C. P. R. as they arrived from the East. For if we had to employ fishermen the herring would cost two bits and a pound of smelts be sold for a dollar.

IMPERIALISTIC.

For sheer cunning and blatant cheek, nothing surpasses the spokesmen of the Exclusionists when they use as argument the question of Empire. I wonder if such men have the slightest idea of what the British Empire really consists. It will probably do no harm to give this in fact and figure, as I am convinced the majority of Exclusionists have not the slightest conception of the meaning of the British Empire. Our Empire consists of four hundred and fifty million people, made up as follows: sixty million whites; three hundred and fifteen million Asiatics; fifty-six million Negroes; four million Soudanese; ten million Egyptians; five million islanders of various races, scattered all over the Globe. As solid standing ground for the maintenance of our Empire we have acquired and hold approximately one-third of Mother Earth. The above figures give a true and adequate idea of our Imperial interests. The exclusionist's idea of the British Empire is bounded by the Pacific Ocean on the west; the Rocky Mountains on the east; the 49th parallel on the south; and the Alaskan Territory on the north. His idea of the people comprising that Empire is spelt with four letters—"S-E-L-F."

Look at This List of New Edison Records for January, 1908

9722 In the Clock Store (Orth) — Edison Concert Band
One of the features of this descriptive selection is the musical clock chiming "Blue Bells of Scotland," followed by the various other clocks all striking the hour together.

9723 Down in the Old Cherry Orchard (Henry) — Frederic Rose
A fascinating new rural ballad with a waltz refrain that lingers with one from the time of first hearing.

9724 Smile! Smile! Smile! (Hoffman) — Ada Jones & Billy Murray
"I could learn to love you when you smile! smile! smile!" as sung in "The Rogers Bros. in Panama." A most tuneful selection, delightfully rendered.

9725 She's Such a Love (Catlin) — Albert Benzler
A song and dance played by the bells and orchestra. It is one of the old timers, full of melody and grace.

9726 Dreaming (Dailey) — Irving Gillette
A beautiful sentimental song now very much admired in many parts of the country.

9727 Who Do You Love? (Johnson) — Collins & Harlan
One of the comic song hits from Cole & Johnson's "Shoo Fly Regiment" sung as a coon duet.

9728 When It's Moonlight Mary Darling 'Neath the Old Grape Arbor Shade (Helt) — Manuel Romain
J. Fred. Helf's newest descriptive ballad with the scene laid in "Dixie" and sung by the foremost minstrel tenor.

9729 Don't Get Married Any More, Ma! (Pether) — Ada Jones
Selected from Vesta Victoria's new bunch of songs and confidently expected to equal, if not surpass in popularity her "Waiting at the Church" and "Poor John."

9730 Mariutch (Von Tilzer) — James Brockman
A comic Italian dialect song telling how "Mariutch make-a de hootch-a ma kootch down at Coney Isle.

9731 O Moment That I Bless (Dennee) — Mr. and Mrs. Waterous
A beautiful sentimental soprano and baritone duet, sung by two new operatic artists to our record catalogue.

973B Ev'ry Ship Will Find a Harbor (Schmid) — Byron G. Harlan
A tuneful ballad with a catchy march chorus, which never fails to arouse interest. The words tell an unusually pretty story.

9733 Punch and Judy—Intermezzo (Henry) — Edison Military Band
A new instrumental selection by the composer of "Peter Piper" and numerous other hits, both vocal and instrumental.

9734 When the Hammer on the Anvil Rings (Havez) — Ada Jones
A novel comic song, picturing a scene in which the ladies are said to frequently take part. Reference to the "hammer" and some effects borrowed from the "Anvil Chorus" make very plain indeed the ungallant idea of the composer.

9736 Just Because He Couldn't Sing "Love Me and the World Is Mine" (Fitzgibbon) — Arthur Collins
A funny coon song telling how his "steady gal" handed him "a nice fat juicy lime," because of a love song another beau had taught her.

9737 The Rosary (Nevin) — Hans Kronold
Ethelbert Nevin's most popular song artistically performed as a 'cello solo, accompanied by piano.

Municipal Elections.

In twelve days from this date the Municipal elections in Victoria will be decided. The press is a unit in declaring that the management of civic affairs cannot safely be entrusted to the men who have muddled matters so badly during the last year. Public opinion tested by any of the mean available endorses this attitude on the part of the press. At the moment of writing the men who have declared themselves as candidates would not if elected constitute any improvement on the present Council. The press has appealed to the ratepayers and especially to the influential members of the community to rise to the occasion. The appeal is two-fold, it is to men of substance, of capability and of status in the community to allow themselves to be nominated; it is to the ratepayers to support them so that the City may have a Council worthy of its importance and able to deal with the serious problems which now confront it. The time has gone by for recapitulating the errors and emphasizing the weakness of the present Chief Magistrate and his colleagues; all this has been dealt with "ad nauseam." The greatest service which the press can render the City at the moment is to urge the ratepayers to possess their souls in patience for a few hours when they will in all probability have an opportunity of supporting men of different calibre both for Mayoral and Aldermanic offices. In view of the widespread dissatisfaction which exists in all classes of the community with the work of the present Council, it ought not to be too much to expect that the members would have sufficient modesty to decline renomination at the hands of their personal followers. It must be perfectly obvious both to the Mayor and Aldermen that the ratepayers will not pass any by-law, not even the much wanted by-law, if the money is to be expended under the direction of the present Mayor and his supporters. It was nothing but lack of confidence in these men which brought about the defeat of the Incinerator by-law, badly as it was needed. The same lack of confidence will ensure the defeat of the water by-law, and for this reason if for no other a different body of men should be elected, to whom the ratepayers are not afraid to entrust the spending of their money. There is good reason to expect that before this ink is well dry men of proved capacity will have been induced to come forward and save the City from the reproach of being the worst managed in the West. If such men are ultimately induced to stand there is no doubt that Victoria will gladly avail itself of the opportunity to establish a new departure in Civic policy.

The Water Question.

The Week appeals to the ratepayers of the City of Victoria to turn down the water by-law which the Mayor has railroaded through the Council at the eleventh hour. In doing this the considerations which weigh are that although it is the recommendation of Expert Adams whose advice on general principles should be followed, it is not opportune that a Council in the very last days of its term should couple the by-law with the Municipal elections. There is a further reason; anyone who carefully reads Mr. Adams' report will see that although he recommends that half a million dollars or more should be spent on improving the Elk Lake system, he couples with this the statement that even then it would only serve the City for a limited term of years and that another source of supply should be acquired in the near future. It is not to impugn the correctness or the wisdom of Mr. Adams' conclusions to suggest that the ratepayers might conceivably prefer to acquire the permanent source of supply in the first instance instead of making two bites at one cherry. At any rate since four or five different projects have been outlined and Mr. Adams has furnished the fullest details with respect to each, there is surely no reason why those who have to pay the piper should not be permitted to select the tune. It is all a question of cost and no doubt Mr. Adams' recommendation is at the moment the most economical, which accounts for the fact that it was found possible, although with difficulty, to secure the necessary signatures to the petition.

A Progressive Ticket

At a meeting of property owners and ratepayers, held last evening, at which representatives of every section of the community were present, including Labour, Manufactures, Trade, Commerce, Wholesale and Retail Business, and the Professions, it was resolved to make a special effort to secure a which would put an end to the MISMANAGEMENT AND MUDDLING of the MORLEY REGIME. At their solicitation the following gentlemen have consented to accept nomination, and THE WEEK urges the ratepayers to support them in the interests of PROGRESS.

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

By THE LOUNGER

My accomplished colleague, Bohemian, has wished the readers of The Week the Compliments of the Season in such delightful style that he has left nothing for me to say. I fear, however, that my disposition is hardly as genial as his, and I doubt if, to such an extent, my nature is overflowing with the milk of human kindness. I doubt also if he ever "dossed" in lower Johnson street, or prowled the streets in the "wee small hours" in the hope that he might run against some Old Country acquaintance, who had returned from the wars, and wanted to stand him a supper.

I would, however, in my humble way, re-echo his good wishes, for even loungers know how to spend a merry Christmas and to hope for a happy New Year.

My Christmas has been a little clouded by the reflection that some of the "strangers within our gate" have not had a merry Christmas at all. It seems as difficult these days to keep the Oriental question out of a newspaper article as Mr. Dick of immortal fame found it to keep King Charles' head out of his literary disquisitions, but I am prone to confess that meagre as my crust was I shared it with a few poor Hindus who glided through the streets of Victoria in the pitiless rain looking more like wraiths than men. On Christmas eve I noticed some twenty of these belated sojourners proceeding along Government Street in single file, each man carried a long slab of drift-wood on his shoulder which he had rescued from the sea. I had the curiosity to follow and found that the rendezvous was a vacant lot off Chatham Street, where a fire had already been kindled, around which a dozen or more of their fellow countrymen were shivering.

I know that a few Victorians whose sense of humanity was stronger than their sympathy with the Asiatic Exclusion League, loosened their purse strings and most of the Hindus in the City had a little Christmas fare, and rude shelter, but I still think it is a disgrace that they should have received such inhuman treatment from the Mayor, and that the Chief Magistrate of a Christian City should have been so heartless in his handling of them and should have laid himself and the city open to such a scathing rebuke as has been administered by the Hindu missionary, Mr. Kumar.

Public policy may, and in the opinion of many does, demand either the exclusion or the restriction of Oriental immigration, but no consideration admitted among civilized people demands inhuman treatment even of aliens. It may be an oft-repeated story but when I pick up General Roberts' "Forty-one Years In India," or Flora Annie Steele's "On the Face of the Waters," and read of the thousands of brave Hindus who willingly gave their lives to save English women and children, I feel ashamed that their descendants should have to submit to indifference and neglect at the hands of British subjects who consider themselves superior because they happen to be white. Deport the Hindus, deport every Oriental if the public interest demands it and it can be done in a constitutional manner, but while they are here, the obligations of common humanity are just as strong, if not stronger, than in the case of people of our own race.

I have been deeply interested, in common I doubt not, with many readers of The Week, in following the sensational developments of the Druce case, and must plead guilty to a feeling of unholy joy at the denouement. Not that I am averse to Druce or any other man of humble origin, depriving a Duke of his estates, if he can prove title, but where I find ground for rejoicing is in the discomfiture of the professional perjurer Caldwell, who prepared such a skilful story only to find that he was destined to verify the time-honoured proverb that "if you give a fool enough rope he will hang himself."

Caldwell's story was very skilful and very plausible, and as he unfolded its attractive features, under the adroit examination in chief of his counsel, Mr. Atherly Jones, the Druce stock went up several points. When some features of his story, notably that dealing with the alleged mock funeral, and the putting of lead in the coffin, were confirmed by venerable grey-haired ladies of seventy, it was easy to conceive of Mr. George Hollamby Druce rubbing his hands under cover of the table and silently chuckling, not to say chortling, in his glee.

When Mr. Horace Avory took the witness in hand a change came o'er the spirit of his dream. Mr. Avory since the death of Sir Charles Russell, shares with Mr. C. F. Gill the reputation of being the cleverest cross-examiner at the Bar. He gravitated with surpassing subtlety to the weak points in Caldwell's story, and at the end of the second day's examination had him discredited. When Mr. Atherly Jones the following day announced that it was not the intention of the prosecution to rely upon the evidence of Mr. Caldwell, old habitues of the court knew that there would shortly be something doing. Inside of six hours a warrant had been granted for the arrest of Caldwell for perjury, but the old fox had scented the hounds and was already in full flight. A week later he was laid by the heels in New York and is now fighting extradition on the plea of ill health.

Meanwhile the American press is beginning to work up sympathy on his behalf. It will, however, avail him nothing. Perjury is an extraditable offence and what the law of his own country failed to do for him in connection with his attempt to blackmail Mrs. Stewart will be effectively done by the long arm of the British law.

But for Caldwell's perjury it is almost certain that the Druce grave would not have been opened, so long as the issue was merely a civil one involving personal aggrandizement, the law refused consent, but when the majesty of the law itself was impugned by a criminal offence, the permission was promptly given, with a result anticipated by everyone who has followed the case except, perhaps the poor deluded victims whose money has been used to carry it on.

I am not vindictive, but I hope that Caldwell will be treated just about the same as the Tichborne claimant, who was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment for perjury, and actually served fourteen.

Lounger.

A New Year Thought.

The Future comes, we know not whence,
Nor can we tell what it will bring;
We only know that far off thence,
The Past has sped on dusky wing.
With eager heart we turn to face
The great unknown that lies before;
We take it in a close embrace,
And hope that in its treasure-store—
It holds in trust for all mankind
The happiness they fain would find.

The Heart Line.

This is not a personal reminiscence, nor a little thing of my own, but a brief account of one of the most interesting books I have read for a long time. It was sent to me direct by the McMillan Company of Toronto for reviewing purposes, and therefore I am unable to say whether it is on sale at the local stores, but either of the Victoria book sellers can readily procure it for anyone who after reading this reflection may desire its closer acquaintance.

The title of the book is "The Heart Line." It is the work of a young man who writes under the nom-de-plume of Gellett Burgess. He has previously written a few successful short stories for the American magazines, without, however, attaining any considerable reputation. His best work has been done in the pages of the Smart Set, to which he contributed a series of articles entitled "Maxims of Methuselah." His work proved him to be bright and original, but what always struck me most was that he must have seen a great deal of the seamy side of life, and that he had been particularly unfortunate in his choice of lady friends.

"The Heart Line" more than confirms this impression. It is a story of Bohemian life in San Francisco. Its literary merit is a negligible quantity, unless it be a literary merit to tell a story well. The author introduces and skilfully delineates characters whom happily few ordinary mortals have met in the flesh. His picture of the gaiety, the carelessness, and the frivolity of a phase of life in American cities is obviously true, and because of its truth convincing. Every man who wishes to understand from the inside, something of the indifference with which a certain set in the States regards social and family obligations should read "The Heart Line" —it is the key to many a problem and will well repay study.

Probably, however, the most interesting part of this remarkable book is that which deals with the American craze for spiritualistic seances, so-called psychic phenomena and palmistry. In the knowledge of these "occult sciences" Gellett Burgess is a past master; not only can he explain every trick, but he relates clearly from his own experience how the tricks are worked to produce the desired result. According to Gellett Burgess there are no honest spiritualists; the whole gang he labels "charlatans and fakirs," and if he had spent half a life-time in practising their arts and wiles he could not be better posted. I have read many so-called exposures of spiritualism. For quite a number of years I was a member of the London Psychical Research Society and was present at the unmasking of Professor Slade, but I never met with anyone who knew more about the tricks of this detestable trade than the author of the Heart Line. I would be the last to say one word which would hurt the feelings of those who have been cajoled into any measure of confidence in the representations of spiritualists, but I would give a great deal if all such could read this book, and learn how the success of the cult is entirely dependent upon skilful trickery on the one hand and human credulity on the other.

Apart, however, from these two features "The Heart Line," as its title indicates, is a love story of much more than average interest. The hero was for some years a professional palmist and only abandoned the calling when his eyes were opened to its dishonourable character through the influence of the girl whom he loved.

The heroine, Clytie Payson, is delightfully drawn; she is attractive and lovable, with fine moral instincts and high principle, and her work of redemption is followed with absorbing interest until she finally retrieves her lover from his discreditable calling and the associates whom it has provided for him. The interest is increased by the fact that she possesses a remarkable intuition which makes her in reality far more susceptible to legitimate psychic influence than the professors of the cult.

Her father, a millionaire, furnishes the victim and by his means the author well illustrates the process of "rooking the pigeon."

But the most delightfully drawn character in the book is Fancy Gray, a replica of "the red-haired impressionist girl" immortalized by Kipling in his "Light that Failed." In her devotion to the hero, her numerous flirtations by way of diversion, her worldly wisdom, her delightful flippancy and her tragic fate, she constitutes one of the most attractive characters of modern fiction. To know Fancy Gray is to love her.

It is due to the author to say that while his first important book has obvious blemishes, they are entirely those of a young author. At times the work is crude, in two or three places the action drags, and perhaps the chief defect of all is that the book is at least one-fourth too long, but in view of the wide experience, the special knowledge and skilful handling, not only of the side issues but of the central plot, "The Heart Line" must be regarded as a conspicuous success.

Perhaps what after all is the most important consideration to an old book-lover, is that the tone is good and the book leaves one with a decided conviction that there are some things usually gilded which are very far from being gold.

A Sociological Study of the Negro.

"The Negro Races," by Jerome Dowd, which has just been published by The Macmillan Company, is the first volume of a series in which the author is to present a sociological study of mankind from the standpoint of race. Mr. Dowd insists on the importance, as a basis of sociological study of establishing the fact that each race has its distinctive institutions and special evolution corresponding to the locality in which it lives or has lived. This is his primary object, with which is associated his purpose of discovering the factors and laws which explain the mental and moral characteristics and particular institutions of each general racial division, to the end that the principles and laws discovered may be applied to whatever is abnormal or retrogressive. The present volume, the first of the proposed series, deals with the life of the Negritos, Negritians, and Fellatahs, from the earliest times to the present, showing the conditions which existed or still exist as an outcome of native suroundings, and noting the changes which have taken place in consequence of outside influences. Succeeding volumes will deal with other branches of the Negro race and with other aspects of their industrial, social and moral status. These volumes will be of special importance to the American sociologist as supplying the necessary background of knowledge for any scientific attempt to deal with the Negro problem as it exists in this country.

SPECIAL BLANKET VALUES.

Blankets, that'll make you forget the dreary and disagreeable cold outside, and send you quickly to the land of dreams, are waiting here for you. Warm, fleecy kinds that are not oppressively heavy. Blankets that are better than than the ordinary —made of "wool"—not a "mixture." Full weight, too, and sizes that often measure more, and never less, than what the ticket says. Blankets made by the best makers, and offered you by a house ready to guarantee them, and offered, too, at prices that are "right." Quality should be the keynote when buying blankets. If you are not absolutely certain of the quality of those offered it is doubly important that you should exercise care. There are many "shoddy" blankets offered as "all wool." Prices look extraordinarily low for such good-looking blankets. But wait until they have seen some service—wait until they strike the water. Quite often it is difficult to find enough to "go round." Doesn't it seem wise policy to buy from a reliable house that will guarantee their quality? Every blanket we sell has this firm's guarantee of quality behind it. That is sufficient for those who know us. The values we offer are the best possible, made possible only through the fortunate early purchase of a big lot. Better investigate our blanket stock.

Lamp Art Lamp Utility

¶ Never in the history of lamp making have art and science been so cleverly combined as at the present time.

¶ The practical considerations have not been sacrificed in striving for the ideal—yet we have lamps in forms and colors that are truly artistic and within the lines of conservatism as to cost.

¶ Perfect combustion renders them odorless—eliminating the only objection to kerosene as a lighting agent.

¶ Our display for the coming winter season is the the largest we have ever shown and by far the best.

¶ Come in and we'll tell you all about them.

A Lady's Letter

By BABETTE.

Dear Madge:

Ugliness, as it exists in the majority of homes, is due not so much to a lack of knowledge as it is to the haphazard way many people have of selecting their belongings. Out of the family income a certain sum is set aside each year for repairs and new furniture and is usually expended in the following manner—curtains this year, wall paper the next, rugs the year following, and after that, some new furniture. All this is well and good. Out of just such careful planning often comes a charming home. But too often when the housekeeper is ready to make her purchases, she throws caution to the winds and selects a certain style, not for its beauty or utility, but because it is the fad, the neighbours have some like it, or the price happens to correspond with the amount in her purse. The note, discordant or otherwise, which it will sound in the room it occupies is the last thing considered.

In the old days, when cabinetmakers were not so plentiful and the woods with which they worked far more numerous, sins against good taste were not nearly so frequent. Family possessions accumulated much more slowly and were chosen chiefly for use and for their honest workmanship. Though the colonial house might, according to our modern standing, seem cold and cheerless, it was a home in the truest sense of the word and not a store-house for junk. The furnishings were few, but so beautiful in their chaste simplicity that we cannot equal them.

Very rarely is it possible to combine several different kinds of wood without sacrificing the decorative effect of each. Yet it is not uncommon, even in these days of widely scattered information on the subject of furnishings to find rooms in which swamp oak, mahogany and birdseye maple hobnob in the closest companionship. Separately, these things are good. Collectively, the wars of the ancient Romans were not more fierce than the combats waged by these otherwise peaceable articles.

Beyond a doubt the clearance sales of the department stores are responsible for a large number of the blunders made in house furnishings. The temptation to buy a chair simply because it has been marked down to half its former price is one that very few women can resist. Hence the rubbish that cumbers our homes, the tables, all legs and no tops; the chairs that may fit the corners of the room but were never made to fit a human back, and the highly decorated footstools that were never made for feet.

If, when about to purchase a new piece of furniture the housewife would consider, first, is it really beautiful or does it distract the eye with meaningless curves and angles?, and, second, does it harmonize both in colour and design with the finish and with the other furniture in the room? there would be fewer of the glaring incongruities so frequently found in our homes. I have in mind a room, I have lately seen. perfect but for one jangling note. It is a library, papered in brown, with here and there a tinge of pink, like a hint of sunrise. The rugs are Persian, lustrous with age. The table, the bookcases and the chairs are excellent examples of the Mission style and correspond with the finish. There is no fussy collection of bric-a-brac over the mantel, but instead a few pieces of rare old bronze, with a growing plant or two. Now for the discord. It is a davenport in maple, very modern as to carving, upholstered in sky-blue and fairly groaning beneath its weight in pillows.

But the greatest sins are committed against pictures. How shall we excuse the ornate gold frames which direct attention, not to the picture within, but to their gaudy selves? How pardon the ignorance which hangs sketches, water colours and photo-engravings on the same wall? The architect who said things when he discovered that his patron had drilled a hole in the green tiled chimney piece and placed therein a photo of his wife, could sympathize with the artist who found one of his cherished studies of animal life hung close to a pert ballet girl poster.

Most people hang their pictures without regard to size, subject or sky line. It is not uncommon to find them above the moulding. Many of the floral papers liked for chambers make pictures unnecessary, but in just such rooms are they most abundant. Particularly is this true of the bedrooms belonging to the daughters of the house.

We have ceased, at least some of us have, to hang our dining-rooms with pictures of dead ducks, but the woman who has the courage to banish entirely her first crude attempts at painting is rare indeed. What was your favourite study in the days when you took painting lessons because you wanted some pictures for the drawing room? Was it a dog holding a duck in his mouth or did you incline towards a dropsical-looking milkmaid seated on the wrong side of her cow? Ali! the paintings were bad enough but modern fancy work is not greatly improved. Surely it were better to spend one's spare hours in piecing quilts than in making "Gibson-head" pillows, in poker work.

Is it not time we came to our senses, and turned our surplus energy into more profitable channels? The laws of harmony are not hard to learn. Artistic furnishings depend not so much on a large outlay as they do upon a sense of beauty and the ability to make use of common materials.

Babette

Not Quite Clear.

A well known clergyman of Boston was once talking to some friends with reference to the desirability of chronological coherence in ideas, in the form of written statement, when he observed that there are times when this method becomes a trfle too suggestive.

"For instance," said the speaker, "I once heard a minister in New Hampshire make his usual Sunday morning announcement as follows:

"'The funeral of the late and much lamented sexton takes place on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock.

"'Thanksgiving services will be held in this chapel on Thursday morning at eleven o'clock.'"

Absent-Minded Professor—"I always forget to put a handkerchief in my coat. I really must make a knot in it to remind myself."

Husband — "What? You have bought that beautiful vase for Frau Muller? I thought you couldn't bear her."

Wife—"No more I do, but the other day I heard her say that this was exactly the kind of vase she didn't care for."

Waitress—"Excuse me, sir, but this is the sixth time you have gone away from here without paying your bill."

Wiley Customer—"So sorry, but when one sees your face one forgets everything else."

"That matrimonial agent has had his beard shaved off."

"I suppose he wants to look as like Cupid as he can."

Captain of the Fire Brigade—"There are two fires raging, one in Holzheim and the other in Weidenbach. Both places are an hour from here; which shall we go to?"

Fireman—"Weidenbach. The beer's better there."

"Why this is the second temperance meeting I have seen you at. What are you doing here?"

"Well, you see one gets such a gorgeous thirst at these gatherings."

Extremely Rare.

Cashem—"I wish they would get another cook at our boarding house. The steak is always too rare to suit me."

Hashem—"Huh! At my boarding house the steak is so rare we only see it once or twice a week."

Sporting Comment.

The most notable sporting event that has been scheduled to take place in this city for many years, is the Rugby football match which will be played this afternoon at Oak Bay when the Stanford University team will try conclusions with the Victoria fifteen. This game bears more importance than many realize and it is hoped that the citizens of this city will show their appreciation by attending the match in large numbers. By securing this match attention is drawn to Victoria in every city in California and if it should so happen that the local boys are victorious it will be a glorious day for the grand old game of Rugby. It is a well known fact that for the past few years football has been practically dead in Victoria and it is only withiin the past year that it has assumed any semblance of popularity and the game will in a measure show whether or not the people of Victoria appreciate the efforts of the players in endeavouring to place the Capital city of the Province in the place which it should occupy.

It is largely to the efforts of the Vancouver Rugby Football Union that this game has been arranged and they are entitled to no small share of praise for their endeavours to place Rugby football again on a sound basis in Victoria. Victorians should show their appreciation by attending in such numbers that it cannot be said that the game was a financial failure.

The necessary expenses towards bringing the Stanford team of B. C. are very heavy. Three games have been played in Vancouver which have cleared Vancouver's share of the expense and now it is up to Victoria to do likewise. Stanford has a strong team and it will take a good combination to beat them. It is impossible for me to say whether or not the locals can do it, but that they will make an extra effort goes without saying. It is true that the local team is not as strong as it should be, but this is no reason why there should not be a good attendance. The fact that the locals are having a hard time placing a first class fifteen on the field is all the more reason why they should be encouraged and it is up to the people of Victoria to do so. In times of prosperity any team has all the backing it requires, but it is when the hard roads of failure marks the path that friends are welcome and now is that time. It is impossible to criticize the team for at the time of going to press it is not definitely decided on, but it can be depended on that it will be the best that can be secured under the circumstances and all that is required is that Victorians should be true to their representatives and turn out and encourage them. The game is called for 2.15 and it will be called sharp on time. It will be played rain or shine, but as there is a large covered grandstand a little moisture should have no effect on the attendance.

Allen & Co.'y Clothing Sale.

It is a question, as to whether the reader would prefer to buy one of Allen & Coy., "The Fit-Reform Wardrobe," $21.50 Men's Business Suits and pay the full price and get a genuine crisp five-dollar bill in the inside pocket of every coat, or to take in Allen's & Co.'s big ten-day Clothing Sale, and buy the very same $21.50 suit for $16.50. It really does not matter which of the two propositions are preferred the result is the same—a saving of from $5 upon every suit of clothes or overcoat during sale days only. Allen and Company are a most reliable concern. They give the customer excellent service and aim at quality in clothing. They claim that as they are the only exclusive clothing store in Victoria and carrying by far the largest and most comprehensive stock of clothing in this city, can always give better values. During the year 1908 Allen & Company contemplate many new departures in the clothing business and promise their many customers and casual patrons a much better range of stock to choose from and a continuance of the popular prices that have been the greatest drawing card to this store.

The Fit-Reform make of clothing is best described as the most complete and up-to-date garment that modern tailoring art can produce. Every garment is hand-tailored. There is a noticeable absence of shoddy and shapeless outlines in a Fit-Reform garment. It is carefully cut and conforms to every figure. A perfect fit is guaranteed and the man who is particular about his clothing, and most men now-a-days are, exacting enough to get a suit that fits and if a perfect fit is desired get a Fit-Reform suit from Allen & Company.

During the sale which commences on Saturday and continues for ten days hundreds of suits and overcoats will be offered at a sacrifice.

THE BANK OF VANCOUVER

(TO BE INCORPORATED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT OF CANADA. CHARTER APPLIED FOR)

This proposed bank is being organized and will have its Head Office in Vancouver with its directors chosen by the subscribers to its stock at the organization meeting.

The Western Provinces and British Columbia in particular have for some considerable time felt the urgent need of an institution such as the proposed Bank of Vancouver. The formation of new industries and the developing of those already established, has been seriously retarded for want of ordinary financial accommodation, and the primary object of this new bank will be to alleviate the situation by largely confining its operations to the splendid field awaiting it in the Pacific Coast Provinces, and more especially in British Columbia.

The bank proposes to do business on the safe and well-laid-down lines of the old established banks, and will earn their respect and goodwill by a continuation of this policy.

The Bank of Montreal has its head office in Montreal.
The Bank of Toronto has its head office in Toronto.
The Bank of Ottawa has its head office in Ottawa.
The Bank of Hamilton has its head office in Hamilton.
The standing of these banks is beyond question.

	Par Value of Stock per Share	Present. Value Per Share.	Rest Account or Undivided Profits.
The Bank of Montreal	$100.00	$260.00	$11,000,000.00
The Bank of Toronto	100.00	235.00	4,500,000.00
The Bank of Ottawa	100.00	226.00	3,000,000.00
The Bank of Hamilton	100.00	217.00	2,500,000.00

The above banks, while doing a general banking business throughout the Dominion, each aims at fostering and developing business and trade, SPECIALLY IN THEIR RESPECTIVE CITIES AND DISTRICTS.

THE BANK OF VANCOUVER will aim to do the same, that is, to encourage and promote legitimate business in BRITISH COLUMBIA PARTICULARLY.

The Capital asked for is $2,000,000.00 in 20,000 shares of $100.00 each. The first $500,000.00 of stock is offered the public at a premium of 10 per cent., that is, at $110.00 per share.

Payments can be made in full or on the instalment plan. Interest will be allowed at 3 per cent. per annum upon the par value of the stock until organization.

The provisional directors, when appointed, will reserve the right to increase the premium upon the remainder of the stock, also to allot or reject any subscription in whole or in part.
