Wanted—Transportation.

The British Columbia Electric Railway has for sometime been hauling freight from Mount Tolmie into the city. The freight consists of gravel and sand, which has been used for various purposes but mainly in connection with the construction and extension of transportation lines. The City Council, acting on the advice of the City Barrister, has applied for an injunction to restrain the carriage of freight, on the ground that the Company is not entitled to do this under the provisions of its charter. The matter came up before Mr. Justice Martin, who refused to grant the injunction, and it is understood that the case will be appealed to the Supreme Court. There are two ways in which the matter may be looked at; apaart altogether from the legal interpretation of the charter, most people will think that it is a very short sighted policy, from a business standpoint, to hamper the Company in any way, and that nothing better could happen than that they should be prepared to carry any kind of freight over their lines, which does not interfere with the business of the city. There are many reasons why such a policy must be in the best interests of the community; in the first place it greatly facilitates the transaction of business, although such an institution has not been instituted in Victoria, the wholesale merchants have repeatedly endeavoured to arrange for the conveyance of merchandise, and for a connection with the E. & N. track. Special rails have already been laid for this purpose, but the matter is held up pending a satisfactory understanding with the city. In England the conveyance of light freight over city tramways is very general, the only stipulation being that it shall not interfere with the passenger and street traffic. In Vancouver, the system is in full force, and has proved of immense advantage, in fact, it is a very determinate factor in the progress of any city. There is the further consideration that by restricting the use of permanent way and plant, the earnings of the operating company are kept down, which prevents them from attaining the maximum standard of economy, and from making concessions to the public. This is well illustrated by the experience of Vancouver where the added income from transportation of freight has enabled the British Columbia Electric Railway to reduce the cost of electric light time after time, until in spite of the fact that wages and other items of cost are double as much in Vancouver as in the large Eastern cities, the rate charged for electric lighting is the lowest in Canada. This demonstrates not only the possibility of advantage to the public but illustrates the spirit in which the case has been met by the Company. The Week does not hesitate to say that a policy which would in the slightest restrict the conveyance of freight of any kind over street lines, provided always that proper safeguads are imposed to protect the public, is diametrically opposed to progress and development, and cannot be justified on any ground. This leaves untouched the legal questions involved in the interpretation of the Company's charter, and although it seems as if this, as well as every other matter which can possibly be dragged into the Courts, must become the subject of litigation, yet the clauses governing the point at issue would not appear to be very abstruse, and the difference not such, even according to the plaint of the city, as to justify expensive and protractive litigation. The trouble arises over Clause 25 of the original agreement, dated the 20th of November, 1888, between the Corporation of the City of Victoria, and certain parties, who were then forming a street railway company. The clause referred to reads: 'The cars shall be used exclusively for the carriage of passengers." On the 6th of April, 1894, the Company went to the Legislature, and obtained an Act, Chap. 63. This Act was intended to cover all the points dealt with in the original agreement, and to make many important additions. Among these additions are included matters set forth in Clause 16 of the new Act, part of which says: "In addition to the power conferred by the agreement, the said Company are hereby authorised to take, transport, and carry passengers, freight, express and mail matter, upon and over the said lines of railway." The claim of the Company as set forth when the case came before Mr. Justice Martin, is that Clause 16 of the new Act of 1894 is a contravention of Clause 25 of the original agreement of 1888, and gives them full authority to carry freight without any reference to Clause 25. The city on the other hand contends that the two clauses must be read together. That both are operative now, and that the true interpretation is that while the Company may carry freight, they can only do so, if they also carry passengers over the same lines. The practical application of this would be that, in the case of the Mount Tolmie road for instance, the Company must either put on a car service for passengers, or discontinue hauling freight. The Week does not pretend to offer any opinion as to the correct interpretation of these two clauses, or as to the bearing of the Act of 1894, on the agreement of 1888, but it ventures to suggest that if the case is correctly stated, the city is not justified in wasting money to determine an interpretation which, even if favorable to their contention, would not be in the public interest. There is no such population in the district affected as would justify the running of a passenger service, and to endeavour to force the Company to do so at a loss, might either lead to the abandonment of the freight service, or at any rate would create a situation inimical to economic operation, and therefore in the end not a public advantage.

Resources Of Canada.

Readers of The Week will remember that a few months ago Victoria received a visit from a number of distinguished Mining Engineers from the Old Country. Among them was Mr. John Ashworth, President of the Manchester Geological Survey. Many Victorians had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Ashworth at the reception given by the Provincial Government in the Parliament Buildings, and found him to be a man of keen observation, and profound knowledge. It is no little compliment that Mr. Ashworth should have delivered an address to the Society of which he is President, recounting many incidents of his Canadian tour, and emphasizing the value of the resources of the Dominion. The Colliery Guardian just to hand contains a report of his address, which is too lengthy for reproduction, but which covers in an intelligent manner the principal mining districts visited. Mr. Ashworth does full justice to British Columbia, and confirms at least one very important opinion expressed by Canadian geologists, that the coal measures of the Crow's Nest Pass and of Western Alberta belong to the same horizon. Mr. Ashworth seems to have missed nothing for he carries his resume to the Nicola Coal field, then on to Vancouver Island, and refers flatteringly to the development at Ladysmith, and Nanaimo. There is one matter of very distinct importance, to which attention may well be directed, especially as an opinion from such a competent, and disinterested authority is valuable. Mr. Ashworth refers to the Labor question in the following terms: "There is a great demand for Asiatic labour, mainly Chinese and Japs, both on the surface and also underground, at the mines on Vancouver Island. A Jap can be put to work which a white man will not do, and therefore it is clear that the Jap is the greater menace to white labour than is the Chinaman. Already there are thousands of Japs in the city of Vancouver." The significant sentence is that which declares that "the Jap is a greater menace to white labour than the Chinaman." This confirms the opinion repeatedly expressed by The Week: Mr. Ashworth concluded by describing the excursion as one of the most enjoyable trips a man could possibly have, "accompanied with kindred spirits and every reasonable information on everything there was to be seen and as to the country wherever we happened to be."

Best Wishes.

The campaign for the erecting of a suitable home in Victoria for the Y.M.C.A. has been happily and successfully inaugurated. It has the good-will of every right-thinking citizen, and men of all callings and occupations have gladly put their shoulder to the wheel to ensure success. The able speakers who, out of the fulness of their experience elsewhere, enlightened Victoria on the value of a Y.M.A.C. as an asset in the community, laid the city under an obligation. The case has never been so clearly stated, and everyone now realizes that the work is a public benefit, and that it is no longer a question as to whether Victoria can afford $100,000 for such a purpose. As a matter of fact Victoria cannot afford not to carry this scheme to success. Fourteen days may seem a short time in which to raise so large an amount, but raising money for a laudable purpose is simply a matter of system and proper organization, and Mr. Wilcox, Mr. Brace and their army of assistants have reduced this to a science.

The Pugsley Debacle.

There is a tendency in commenting upon the Pugsley Debacle to regard the matter rather in its personal, than in its public aspect. This is to belittle a great issue, and to miss its significance. If Mr. Pugsley were not a member of the Government, the question of misappropriation of the funds of a certain railway would be entirely a matter between himself and the railway, or other parties concerned in financing it, but what concerns the public is that a man, who has been entrusted by the Premier, with the administration of a great department, has been declared guilty of misappropriation of funds by a commission presided over by as competent, and fair-minded a man as Judge Landry. It is almost inconceivable that after reading the report of the Commission the Premier should have declared that he did not consider it necessary to propose an investigation into Mr. Pugsley's conduct. It is impossible that the matter can rest here, and the Opposition has given notice that it will be brought up in the House on Monday next. The Colonist very properly remarks that everyone would be pleased if Mr. Pugsley should clear himself of the charge, but his conduct in dodging the issue and the action of the Premier in screening him on a technicality does not inspire confidence in Mr. Pugsley's anxiety to face investigation. The whole question resolves itself into whether it is the intention of Sir Wilfred Laurier to continue or to abandon a policy under which wrong-doing in high places is winked at, and the grossest instances of maladministration, are only visited with condign punishment, when public opinion becomes so aroused that it is possible to disregard it. If the Premier fails to realise this there is still one tribunal to which Mr. Pugsley can be made to answer, and there should be public spirit enough to insist that the necessary proceedings be instituted to ensure this. The way things are going the record of the Laurier administration will become a record of "damaged archangels."

An Important Judgment.

The judgment of Mr. R. S. Lennie, confirming the assessment of the British Columbia Southern Land Grant, is an important one for the Province. If it should be sustained on appeal it will mean the addition of $150,000 a year to the funds available for expenditure on development work. The money is required, every dollar of it, for although the Government has pursued a most progressive and generous policy, the revenue is by no means adequate to the demands which are crowding in from every direction. No doubt the question will be fought by the railway company, to the highest Court; as the principle involved is an important one neither side can afford to give way, and the ultimate issue will be awaited with interest.

The Sublime and The Ridiculous.

Fighting Joe Martin has laid siege in true militant fashion to the political fortress of Stratford-on-Avon. According to the cartoonist of the Victoria Times he is armed with a new suit of Semi-Ready clothing, a silk topper, and a carpet bag. The latter is a large unwieldy receptacle, albeit capacious, and is supposed to contain the draft of Joe's campaign speeches in support of Woman Suffrage, the abolition of the House of Lords, and Free Trade. With such an outfit, and such a programme, the "Stormy Petrel" ought certainly to achieve something, it is safe to say that he will achieve the one thing dearest to his soul—notoriety. It is not a little singular, although distinctly characteristic of the man, that he should have chosen three hopeless issues on which to base his first apepal to an English constituency. It is safe to say that if he could have found anyone more hopeless than these, he would have included it. The chief interest of the contest will circle round the possibility of a duel between Joe Martin and Marie Corelli. The petticoated sensationalist will certainly resent the intrusion into her special preserve of the political sensationalist, and it will be interesting to see whether a sense of "noblesse oblige" will restrain the fire-eating democrat from an attack, which is certain to be provoked by the strenuous and susceptible novelist. Meanwhile Shakespeare still "sleeps" hard by, and one may have to conjecture whether his immortal injunction against those who might disturb his bones, applies to one whose advent is pretty likely to create a dust.

At The Street Corner

By THE LOUNGER

There is general indignation, coupled with not a little amusement, at the antics of the City Council and the City Solicitor who seem to think that they have inherited whatever represents in the twentieth century the divine right of kings to legislate and rule. Everyone wants to see Victoria become a clean, sanitary, beautiful, progressive city. It is even now fairly clean, fairly sanitary and fairly beautiful, and during the last three years has begun to be progressive. It seems, however, that anything which savors of activity, and up-to-dateness, vexes the souls of those good men and true, who are the legitimate descendants of Bumble of immortal memory.

No one believes that the City Fathers are purposely scotching the wheels of progress. They themselves have a large stake in the City, and are undoubtedly anxious to promote its interests, but there is something either in the air, or possibly in the water of Victoria, which generates a spirit of contrariness in its civic rulers and impels them to undertake the most extraordinary stunts for the common weal, which unfortunately operate for the common woe.

My vocabulary is limited, and I cannot lay my hand on a dictionary which would supply words adequately to characterize the last proposal of the Council with respect to businesses and occupations, which may not be conducted in residential portions of the city. If a few others had been included, it would have been impossible to exist under the conditions which would have been produced, however, unless I am entirely mistaken the citizens will let their opinion of these proposals be heard in an unmistakable manner. There is no demand for such legislation as is proposed; it is unnecessary, it will hamper the ordinary avocations of life and would benefit no one. If the council does not wish Victoria to be dubbed a city of cranks, it would do well to abandon the proposed by-law, and to let it be known that it was only in a moment of obsession that the idea originated.

The manner in which Mr. E. A. Wallace has laid out the grounds of the Empress Hotel does credit to himself, and to the corporation which has furnished the funds. The finished work might well be described as "The metamorphosis of a mud flat," and is a triumph of landscape gardening. I do not know whether Mr. Wallace's commission covers the North end of the property near Humboldt street. If it does, I would like to make the suggestion that the appearance is likely to be decidedly rocky for many years to come, and a judicious expenditure on soil would enable him to treat it more in harmony with the balance of the grounds. At any rate it would approximate more to that thing of beauty which is a joy forever.

This leads me again to remark that the improvement of the Empress grounds only brings into greater contrast the wretched appearance of the property East of Douglas street. I suppose it would take money, the one commodity of which the city is so short just now, at any rate for civic purposes, but it could be worth a great effort to remove the eyesore, and until it is done the picture will be sadly marred.

The impression is growing that the appointment of fire chief will be either to Joe Wachter or to an outsider. The Week adheres to its original choice, and believes that, taking everything into consideration, Wachter is the best man in sight diffuence to me which leads the puh-for the job. He possesses more of the necessary qualification than any other candidate, with the additional advantage over some of them, of being thoroughly acquainted with the city and of having worked harmoniously with the fire brigade for many years.

Arrangements for the big race meeting are well under way, and there is no reason why the project should not be made a source of enjoyment and of profit, both to the Country Club and to the city. The undesirable element, which seems almost a necessary adjunct to race meetings will gain no footing in Victoria if Chief Langley has his way, and the attitude of the press has made it perfectly clear that in this regard no laxity would be tolerated. With reference to the book-making end of the proposition that will have to be looked after by the management. All the public asks for is a square deal, if they get it they will patronize the "sport of kings," but if the methods which have killed racing in the States, are revived here it will mean, the end of racing in Victoria. The whole business will be on its trial, and the names of the local directors are a sufficient guarantee that an honest attempt will be made to give Victorians the genuine article.

The Best He Knew.

Gladstone, a Jamaican negro, was assistant to a district physician in the Canal Zone, and, being rather poor in his Latin, the bottles had been numbered for his benefit. One day a Spanish laborer came in for medicine, and the doctor told his worthy assistant to give him two pills out of No. 6. After he had gone the doctor asked:

"Gladstone, did you give the man a dose of No. 6?"

"No, no, sah, Doctor; numbah six war finished, so I just give him one pill out of numbah foah and one out or numbah two."

A lawsuit, seemingly interminable, has been settled amicably in Berlin after dragging along in the courts 478 years! The suit began away back in 1430 between the local authority of Friemar, a suburb of Gotha, and certain mill owners. A lawsuit of such venerable age naturally came to be looked on as an "institution," as one of the enduring things. The lawyers will miss a sure source of income, for great sums of money have been spent by the contending parties. The cause of the trouble was the action of the 15th century mill-owners in raising, without due permission, the height of a dam in the river Nesse.

The negro's love of titles of whatever sort of amusing illustrated by a story told by the governor of a Southern state. It appears that the congregation of a colored church in Georgia conceived the notion that it would add greatly to their dignity if the pastor of the church were enabled to add the initials "D. D." to his name. A member, hearing of an institution in the North which would, for value received, confer such a degree, enterd into correspondence with that end in view. Reply came to the effect that the sum of $75 would obtain the desired dignity.

A difficulty arose, however, in that the congregation were unable to raise more than $39. Finally, after much confabulation, the congregation delegated one of their number to see the thing out. Accordingly the following message was sent to the institution mentioned:

"Kindly forward our pastor one 'D.,' we being unable to afford the other at this time."

The chief social event of the week was the marriage of Miss Harriet Susan Pemberton, youngest daughter of Mrs. J. D. Pemberton, "Gonzales," Victoria, and Mr. W. Curtis Sampson of Molton Combe, Oak Bay, Victoria, which was solemnized at Christ Church Cathedral on Wednesday afternoon at half past two by his lordship the Bishop of Columbia.

The bride who was given away by her brother, Mr. Fred. Pemberton, was most beautifully gowned in soft, clinging white Liberty satin with panels of real Brussels lace with a yoke and sleeves of Brussels net embroidered. She wore a lovely old Brussels veil held in place by a coronet of orange blossom and sheath of Easter lillies tied with white satin ribbon and her only ornament, the gift of the groom, a pendant of pearls and peridot.

The Misses Arminie, Phillippa and Mab Pemberton and Allison Beanlands, Helen Laundy and Theresa Pemberton made most charming bridesmaids wearing "Kate Greenway" flowered muslins and white muslin caps, with green ribbon, carrying green baskets of daffodils.

Mr. Sampson, the groom, was ably supported by Mr. H. A. Bromley, while Mr. L. Crease, Mr. T. Pemberton, Mr. C. Pemberton, Mr. A. W. Williams, Mr. Kingscote and Captain McDonald acted as ushers.

There was a fully choral service the choir rendering "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden," and "O Perfect Love."

The church had been most beautifully decorated with greenery, daffodils and the wild white lilly.

Mrs. J. D. Pemberton, mother of the bride, looked very handsome in a rich black satin gown relieved by touches of old lace and a smart black toque with white and black plumes, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley.

Mrs. Hugo Beavan wore a smart white suit with a white hat trimmed with pale blue roses.

Mrs. J. D. Pemberton, in old rose with hat of same tone.

A most delightful reception was held at "Gonzales," the residence of the bride's mother. The bride received in the drawing-room which was daintily decorated with pink carnations and begonias and white lillies. The artistic hall was banked with daffodils and asparagus fern gracefully arranged. The dining-room, which was utilized for the cutting of the cake and toasts, was fragrant with the scent of lillies of the valley and roses; the table was extremely dainty; the cake forming the centre piece, with lillies of the valley and bride roses relieved by the green of asparagus fern and maiden hair were daintily arranged in little silver vases from the centre to each corner, finished with large true lover's knot in white chiffon, the bridegroom standing under a huge arch of green with white blossoms surmounted by a large true lover's knot in white chiffon.

The bride's going away gown was composed of a lovely pale blue brocaded silk, semi-fitting, with cloth skirt of same tone and a hat to match trimmed with maline and satin.

Mr. and Mrs. Sampson left for Mr. F. Pemberton's summer house in the country where the honeymoon will be spent.

Among the numerous smart gowns noticed were: Mrs. Flumerfelt, in dull green satin trimmed with cream and gold and a hat of the same tone.

Doubtless the city water will soon be good. In the meantime, however, one sniff seems enough. An easy solution of the pure water question is to order from your dealer a few cases of the famous White Rock Lithia Water, certified by leading analysts as "absolutely pure." There are many other mineral waters, but "White Rock" is the best of all and well worth the little extra expense. Another excellent drink is "C. & C." Ginger Ale, a strictly non-alcoholic substitute for malt and spirituous beverages, famous all over the civilized world for its purity and deliciousness. Its label, bearing the name of Cantrell & Cochrane, Belfast, Ireland, is a strict guarantee of its goodness. We have arranged to always keep a full stock of "C. & C." Ginger Ale, both the Aromatic and the Dry Imperial. For health's sake, do not put up with an inferior brand. If your dealer does not handle "C. & C." ask him to kindly procure it from Pither & Leiser, corner of Fort and Wharf streets, Victoria, Water t., Vancouver, and Nelson, British Columbia.

On Misunderstandings.

By BOHEMIAN.

Poverty is said to be the root of all misery, just as money is said to be the root of all evil; both proverbs contain the kernel of a truth, but neither is more than half a truth. I have sometimes wondered whether there is any more prolific source of misery than misunderstandings I am sure there is no more acute form.

The misery resulting from poverty is very real, very direct and very obvious. The misery resulting from misunderstanding while not less real is more complex, and in the very nature of things generally hidden from the vulgar gaze. The misunderstandings that occur in business, or in the ordinary affairs of life which do not involve the cultivation of close personal friendship usually result in material loss of one kind or another. For instance, two men do business together for years to their mutual advantage, when in the course of some deal, one of them imbibes the impression, rightly or wrongly, that the other has been trying to get ahead of him, or that everything has not been open and above board, that is the end of amicable relationship, probably without any explanation they drift apart. The co-operation which has been so beneficial is never renewed, and it may even happen that their mutual estrangement becomes a matter of notoriety, and one or both may be prejudiced in the eyes of their associates.

Similar experiences occur in political, and public life, colleagues, who have been together, have effected good work, become estranged through a little petty jealousy, or a little indiscreet tittle-tattle, which should have been allowed to go in at one ear and out at the other, but in the absence of frank questioning, and open explanation the poisonous suspicion which has been implanted, does its deadly work.

There have been instances where separation of this kind has been effected by political opponents for sinister purposes. One of the readiest means to hand in such cases is the bearing of false witness. How often has a man been weak enough to listen to the lie that so and so said so and so about you, and heeding it has nursed enmity. From all these experiences, it may safely be deduced that the man who believes ill of another without absolute proof is a fool, because there are so many motives, which lead unscrupulous people to make use of the ready lie. There are few instances in which it is not both policy and duty to go straight to the other fellow and demand an explanation; in nine cases out of ten the explanation will remove the grievance, or at any rate will show that the mischief-making meddler, who intervenes, had an axe to grind, and in the process, became a false witness.

And suppose one whom we had accounted friend has said a harsh thing about us, may he not have had, or have thought he had, ample justification; no man is perfect, and there are few who do not give occasion for offense, not intentionally perhaps, but in such form that in sober moments it could not be justified; and even loyal friends may be sensitive, and hasty.

But the tragedies of life are caused by the severance of intimates, whether it be two men who have been as brothers, or a man and a woman who have enjoyed the finest and holiest intimacies which life affords. The closer and happier the association the greater the tragedy if separation takes place. There are some people in the world who affect to believe that all things must have an end, and with them they class even the purest friendship. The theory is unfounded, many such associations have lasted all through life, and as some of us would fain believe, are not even measured by its bounds.

The very contemplation of a severance is destructive of happiness; permanence is the one element which hallows the most intimate friendship, and an association, which looks to less than this is not of the highest type.

Life contains little that is worth living for beyond the pleasure which two people may derive from congenial companionship. It is not always that either realizes its value, even at the moment of its highest fruition, but there is a bitter awakening at its termination, and for sensitive souls, a blank vista of years stretches out to a dark valley.

Just because this relation is at once so sensitive and so delicate, it is oftentimes the butt of selfish and inconsiderate attack. The means employed are often insidious, and always ruthless. It is the first little misunderstanding which should be the signal of danger, and which if rightly interpreted may prevent a tragedy.

LITERARY NOTES.

In Defence of "Together."

A committee of self-appointed censors has undertaken to stop the sale in Canada of Robert Herrick's "Together" by appealing to the Dominion authorities at Ottawa to prohibit its importation on the ground that it is an immoral book. Such a proceeding appears rather ridiculous in the face of what the religious journals have been saying about this novel, since it was published last summer. The "Churchman," for example, does not appear to agree with the Canadian remonstrators!

"Robert Herrick is one of the most serious and thoughtful of our novelists, and his latest story, 'Together,' is to our mind his best. The book is not for young people. It demands some experience of judgment. But for those who can bring those qualities and time to the reading, it is exceptionally worth while."

What the "Churchman" finds "exceptionally worth while," would, one would think, be safe to permit the Canadians to read. The Chicago "Interior," however, is even stronger in its praise:

"There is a fine constructive philosophy in it, a healthful, wholesome, uplifting wisdom that should make many soul-perplexed men and women deeply grateful to Robert Herrick. In truth a remarkable book."

The Prophet of Love and Comradeship.

"Whitman's analogues, I suspect, are rather to be found in great personalities, in men who bring a message to their brothers, a truth mainly expressed in their lives and only incidentally through their writings,—such men, shall we say, as Francis of Assisi or George Fox, or many an Oriental teacher of earlier or later times. These are the great acceptors and unifiers of life; their teachings and examples pass beyond the confines of literature or politics; they show new and noble ways of living. Of this type, in his own degree, Whitman seems to me to have been. He is the first and the most notable of those who, in the nineteenth century, in Europe and in America, preached the vision of the world as love and comradeship."

With this estimate of Walt Whitman as the preacher of love and comradeship, Professor G. R. Carpenter closes his life of the poet, published this week in the English Men of Letters Series. The book, however, is really a life of the man and not a critical analysis of his writings. Whether one likes him or not, he was a great personality and it is this personality that Professor Carpenter sets before his readers. The change that time has wrought in our opinion of it, is tersely summed up.

"Then critics found his personality turbulent and egotistic; the barbaric yaup that he sounded over the roofs of the world was thought to be his own braggart voice. Now we see that he spoke as the symbol of democracy."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

A most delightful dance was given on Thursday evening last by Mrs. Thos. Tye and Mrs. Beauchamp Tye. The house was massed with jonquails and spring flowers, with smilax and asparagus fern. The supper table was very attractive with large bowls of daffodils and fern. Mrs. T. Tye wore a very handsome gown of black satin, relieved by touches of real lace, while Mrs. B. Tye was greatly admired in a dainty Empire gown of pale pink crepe de chine. Miss Thain's orchestra provided a very attractive programme. Among those present were: Mrs. Fagan, in pale pink; Mrs. Coles, black; Mrs. Erb, in white lace gown; Mrs. R. H. Pooley, in white satin; Mrs. Herman Robertson, in a black spangled robe; Mrs. Genge, in white; Mrs. Harold Robertson, white spangled gown; Mrs. Alexis Martin, in white; Miss Page, in white taffetta; Miss D. Page, soft white satin; Miss Mason, pale green chiffon; Miss D. Mason, pale blue silk muslin; Miss Drake, silk flowered muslin; Miss Gillespie, in white satin Empire; Miss Newling, in grey crepe de chine; Miss Clute, flowered organdy; Miss Pooley, flowered muslin; Miss V. Pooley, pale green touches of ecru; Miss Monteith, pale blue; Miss T. Monteith, white; Miss Arbuthnot, Dresden silk; Miss Savage, embroidered Japanese taffetta; Miss Lugrin, white; Miss N. A. Y. P. Exposition.

Japan's participation in the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will provide the world with such a show of the life, customs and resources of the rising eastern empire as has never been shown at any other international fair. For the big event which opens on June 1 the Nipponese have brought together a more comprehensive exhibit of their people, resources and products than has ever been displayed before. Instead of the usual exhibit of a pagoda and a few Japanese jugglers and contortionists, so common at expositions, the Japanese government has taken in hand the preparation of a thorough exhibit, with the idea not only of amusing the visitor, but of instructing the world in Japan's commercial status, and of increasing her trade with the nations of the Pacific.

T. Takasawa, Imperial Commissioner to the Exposition, arrived in Seattle a month ago to take personal charge of the erection of Japan's building, which is now almost complete. He was accompanied by K. Hayashi, special consular agent, who will be attached to the local Japanese consulate this summer, and will look after the interests of thousands of his countrymen who will visit the United States to see the Exposition.

Japan's building is of the architecture of that nation a century ago. It is being erected by skilled workmen of Japan, who are residents of the Northwest. Much of the material has been imported from the Orient, and the building will be typical of the land it represents. For the collection of the exhibits it will house, Japan is spending 200,000 yen, half of which is appropriated by the government, the other half by Japanese business men through the Japanese Exhibition Society. The value of the exhibit will be many millions of yen, for the government of Japan is entrusting to its commissioner some of the rarest and most sacred of its relics and documents.

As in the case of the U. S. Government, Japan will have a complete mint in operation in its building. The war equipment and methods of Japan will be shown, with models of aged war junks, and modern battleships, of old time swords and armor, and modern rifles. The fisheries and manufactures, the tea growing and agriculture, will be displayed. And for entertainment there will be Jpanese theatres and art exhibits, and the tea gardens with kimona garbed geishas, which have contributed so much to the romantic lore of the islands.

Among the government displays at the A. Y. P. Exposition, Japan will run a close race for first place, barring the mammoth display which Uncle Sam is preparing. The International tone given to the A. Y. P. by the displays of the nations of the Pacific is one of the Expositions leading attractions, and Japan is more than doing her share in this department.

"I'm sorry," said the man tailor, "that your last gown didn't please you. I hope that won't prevent you sending your friends to us." "I'm afraid it will," replied Mrs. Swellman. "I don't want to get them into bad habits."

Short Story

MRS. DARCY AND THE DOCTORS.

By Harold Susman.

Mrs. Darcy was rich.

She was very rich indeed.

In fact, she was so rich that it made her sick.

She suffered from fatty degeneration of the bank account.

She had been everywhere; she had been everything; she had done everything.

Sh had all the diamonds she could wear, and all the rubies, and all the pearls; all the silks, and satins, and velvets, all the feathers, and laces, and gewgaws.

There was nowhere she couldn't go; there was nothing she couldn't have; there was nothing she could do—except be happy.

It bored her to do this, and it bored her to do that, but it bored her most of all to do nothing.

It bored her to ride, and to drive; it bored her to stand up, and it bored her to sit down.

It bored her to eat, and to drink, and to sleep.

So she sent for the doctor—Dr. Black.

He gave her pills.

She grew worse.

So she sent for a second doctor—Dr. Green.

He gave her powders.

She grew still worse.

So she sent for a third doctor—Dr White.

Dr. White was a modern doctor, a very modern doctor, an ultra-modern doctor.

He said that he was as umch a meta-physician as a "matter-physician"!

"What is the trouble with you?" said Dr. White.

"Everything!" said Mrs. Darcy.

"You have a beautiful home," said Dr. White.

"I am tired of it," said Mrs. Dacy.

"You have beautiful jewels," said Dr. White.

"I am tired of them," said Mrs. Darcy.

"You have a beautiful face," said Dr. White.

"I am tired of it!" said Mrs. Darcy.

"How do you pass your time?" said Dr. White.

"I don't pass it," said Mrs. Darcy. "It passes itself. I am too tired even to pass the time! My hands are too tired to embroider. My eyes are too tired to read. In fact, my brain is too tired—to think!"

"And what makes you so tired?" said Dr. White.

"That is what I want you to find out!" said Mrs. Darcy.

"I have already found that out, my dear lady," said Dr. White. "I found that out very quickly. In fact, I found it out as soon as I looked at you. I might even say I found it out before I loked at you. I suspected it as soon as I looked at—you. I suspected it as soon as I looked at—your home!"

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Darcy. "And what is the matter with me? What is the name of my complaint?"

"You are quite right to call it a—complaint!" said Dr. White. "It is not a disease. It is merely a—complaint. But it is a serious one—for you. I will not name it. It might offend you. The name is not a pretty one!"

"And can you help me?" said Mrs. Darcy.

"I can try," said Dr. White.

"Oh, can you only try?" sighed Mrs. Darcy. "And must you leave the rest—to nature?"

"Yes, I must leave the rest to—your nature!" said Dr. White.

"Will you make out a prescription?" said Mrs. Darcy.

"If you like," said Dr. White, and he wrote a few words on a crap of paper.

"Oh, the pills I have taken, and the powders!" sighed Mrs. Darcy.

"I will give you neither pills nor powders," said Dr. White.

"Must I take your—prescription inside or outside?" said Mrs. Darcy.

"Inside!" said Dr. White, with a strange smile.

He handed the scrap of paper to Mrs. Darcy, and left immediately.

Mrs. Darcy gave the prescription to her secretary.

The secretary gave it to the maid.

The maid gave it to the butler.

The butler gave it to the page.

And the page took it to the chemist.

The chemist looked at the scrap of paper, and read what was written on it, appeared very much surprised and then handed it back to the page.

"This is not for me,' said the chemist. "It is for—Mrs. Darcy!"

So the page took the prescription back to the butler.

The butler gave it back to the maid.

The maid gave it back to the secretary.

And the secretary gave it back to Mrs. Darcy.

"The chemist says that this not for him," said the secretary. "He says it is for you!"

"For me!" said Mrs. Darcy. "What a nuisance! I am so tired. I am so bored. I am so weak. I am too tired to read it. You must read it for me. What does it say?"

The secretary looked at the scrap of paper and became very red in the face.

"What does it say?" demanded Mrs. Darcy. "Why don't you read it to me?"

"I—I don't understand it!" said the secretary.

"Well, it is not necessary for you to understand it!" said Mrs. Darcy. "If it is for me, you are not supposed to understand it! If it is for me—I will understand it! What does it say?"

"It says," said the secretary, 'Prescription for Mrs. Darcy, with Dr. White's compliments: Do something for somebody!'"

"What does that mean?" cried Mrs. Darcy.

"I—I told you that I didn't—understand it, Mrs. Darcy!" said the secretary.

"Well, why don't you understand?" cried Mrs. Darcy. "What do you suppose I have you for? I am too weak to open my own letters, so I have you to open them for me! I am too weak to understand my own letters, so I have you to understand them for me! And if I get crazy letters from crazy doctors, and my secretary is too crazy to explain the situation to me—I shall go crazy myself!"

And Mrs. Darcy worked herself into violent hysterics.

But all the rest of the day and all through the night Mrs. Darcy heard the words ringing in her ears, saw the words dancing before her eyes—"Do something for somebody!"

She almost wondered if there was anything in this advice, in this strange advice, this peculiar "prescription."

But then her old doctors came with their old remedies, Dr. Black with his pills and Dr. Green with his powders, and she soon forgot the new doctor with his new notions and his impertinences and his insults.

"Do something for somebody!"

The idea! When she was too sick even to do anything for herself!

"You have been staying with James lately, haven't you, John?"

"Yes."

"They say his new wife has an awful temper. How did she strike you?"

"With anything that came handy."

The Old Stand-By.

"Funny," remarked the man who was touring the rural sections, "I have met hundreds of farmers in the last few weeks and all wore a broad grin."

"Always wear broad grins this time of the year, mister," laughed the man with the pitchfork.

"H'm! How can they be in such a good humor when we are just over a money panic?"

"Farmers don't think of money panics or anything else this time of year, stranger; they are too busy reading the good old jokes in the 1908 farmer's almanacs."

A WORD TO THE SPRING BRIDES

All those who do not should know the comfort, convenience and cleanliness attendant upon the use of Gas for cooking purposes. You will then realize why the housewife with a Gas Range takes pleasure in doing her own cooking and baking. You can regulate a Gas Range to a nicety, it will boil, broil or bake better than either a coal or wood fire. With Gas there is no kindling to chop, no coal to carry, no ashes to sift,—no worry, none of the old-time difficulties to contend with. Be sure to try a Gas Stove or a Gas Range in your new home.

If you use Gas for cooking purposes you will find your kitchen pleasantly cool, your fuel (just a match-scratch) ever ready and your expenses greatly lessened. A Gas Stove or a Gas Range is a boon all the year round, but in the heat of summer it is indeed a blessing. Why not make your new kitchen an ideal one with a good Gas cooking apparatus?

If you have not hitherto looked into the merits of Gas for cooking, we cordially invite you to call and inspect our large stock of new Gas Ranges and Gas Stoves. Visit our warerooms and let us show you the different styles and explain their merits and their price-reasonableness. It is a pleasure to us to explain the simplicity of cooking with Gas.

The result of the five-mile race at Oak Bay last Friday must have been very encouraging to the members of the J. B. A. A., who were instrumental in ocnducting the race. With a field of ten starters, five went the full distance, while the majority of the others went more than half way. The winner, E. Coleman, proved himself a good five-miler, much to my surprise as hitherto he has been content with a mile. Second went to Leo Sweeney, while third was fought for by E. Carrol and C. Thomas, the former eventually winning out. The dark horse of the race was J. Sweeney but he proved somewhat of a false alarm as he was one of the first to drop out. Two very important lessons can be taken from this race. The first is that they will be popular not only with lovers of racing but also with the contestants. Secondly, there are two or three young fellows belonging to the Bays, who with a little attention will develop into good long distance men. I particularly refer to Carroll and Thomas, both of whom are not out of their teens and with a little coaching from older runners will certainly make good.

I am pleased to see that the Bays are arranging for another race on May 1st and if it proves as exciting as the first did the spectators will have no kick coming. The fact that Colema, the winner of last Friday's race and Baylis are matched, should tend to draw a good crowd.

The result of the football match between the Victoria Wests and California was a great disappointment to the many people who journeyed to Oak Bay to see the match. The California team is composed of a well-balanced bunch of players, the majority of whom learnt to play in the Old Country and who know the fine points in connection with the game. The Wests on the other hand depend on a kick and rush game which on Monday was useless against the Southerners. The weakness of the Wests lies in their forward line, which on Monday failed to register a single shot against the opposing goal tender. On several occasions openings were given for shots, but the locals endeavoured to rush the ball through in a bunch. In some instances these tactics may be alright, but it is a cinch that goals cannot be scored unless the forwards shoot.

The lacrosse players are now considering the advisability of forming a purely amateur league, which will include teams in B. C. which do not intend to play professional. After the disclosures that have been made in connection with B. C. Amateur Lacrosse Association, which have proved that practically every team on the Mainland has been dishing out the coin, ti would be well for the locals to make haste slowly otherwise the same conditions as existed in the old league will creep into the new.

It is very amusing to read in some of the local papers of finds that have been made by the Victoria Baseball Club. I am not referring to the management of the baseball club in the least, but when the statement is made that a new catcher in Brock Robertson has been unearthed it only goes to show that somebody is talking about something of which he knows nothing. Robertson has been playing around Victoria ever since he was a kid and last year he did the greater part of the receiving for the locals and this year he is a find. The same might be said of Johnson, who impressed some of the older heads by his work last Sunday. Although this is his first attempt to gain senior recognition he has been putting up a good game in the school matches. I hope the locals do make some finds in order to strengthen their team, but don't unearth wonders who have been public favorites for some years.

It is rumored on good authority that the Victoria Yacht Club is endeavouring to have the International cup race take place in Victoria this year. This would be a great boom to yachting in this city and I hope they may be successful in their efforts.

It is with regret that I learn of the loss of Champion Pointer, Victoria Boy, owned by Jack Wolfenden. Boy was the king of all Pointers now being exhibited in B. C. and his loss will be felt very keenly by all breeders of Pointers.

Editor The Week.

Sir,—I was pleased to find your correspondent, Clement Cane, agrees with me about the Irish Flag, as exhibited here on festive occasions, and allows "it is only a rebel flag, as it does not bear the Crown above the harp." In his own words, "such is the Irish national flag." Your correspondent goes back as far as Henry VII for support of his opinion, that no mention can be found of the "Crown above the harp."

Surely in all those years, the Government has been compelled to make many changes in Ireland.

The rebellion of 1798, for instance, which it is supposed gave the idea (shortly afterwards) of adding the Crown to the Irish flag. I hold, the so-called "flag of Ireland" is not acknowledged (in the United Kingdom) by law and order unless properly qualified by the "Crown," to go heart and hand with the Union Jack; the brightest and most "cleanly" flag in the universe. I would like your correspondent to bear in mind I mean no offence when writing in this way, especially as the "National party" in the British House of Commons, and throughout the country do not at all resent being designated "rebels," but quite the contrary,—they glory in it!

There are thousands of good and true "Irish Loyalists" in the dear old land, who have long since grown heart sick and weary of sham patriots (?) and martyrs (?), who have a keen eye for the main chance when they flaunt the "green flag,"—too often with deadly effect! Of this no doubt your correspondent is aware, but "to the pure all things are pure."

I have sound and reliable, living authority (in support of my own knowledge) for saying the correct Irish flag is "green with the Crown above the harp." And more power to it,—long may it remain so!!

When Ingram was a student at Dublin University (Trinity College), he became a "young Irelander" and wrote his celebrated poem which caused such a furore in those days (somewhere in the forties); commencing—

"Who fears to speak of ninety-eight?
(the rebellion)
Who blushes at the name?
When cowards mock the patriot's fate,
Who hangs his head for shame?"

In a few years, upon more mature consideration he was unable to resist becoming a "loyal Irishman" and "hung his head for shame" when any reference was made to his celebrated poem! To use his own words the "bombast was more than he could endure," and he came to the conclusion "Repeal of the Union would be a grave mistake, with men who talk so much and did so little!" The "Loyal Irishman" was never more proud of the Union with England than he is today; and will continue so until Ireland is blessed or cursed by "Home Rule." Which it is to be time alone can tell. Then the "Lord keep between us and harm";—the Atlantic and the continent notwithstanding.

"Well," he said, brightening visibly after a period of profound thought, "his life was a useful one, after all. He once planted a tree."

Salome.

My friend J. J. Edwards of Springfield, Ohio, sends me this touching note concerning a presentation of the play of Salome given in that city: The stage was set representing the vestibule of a medieval cathedral with about a half-mile perspective to the apse. Herod's throne was a Gothic chair from Queen Bess' front room and his robe was papal, probably Sixtus IV or even Alexander VI while the slave to chop John's koko was dressed a la toreador de Madrid. Salome had a pink jersey, two brass medals, and a girdle with deep but scanty fringe, a la Sam T. Jack's Princess. After her winning the signet of favor from Herod, the toreador exited for a minute, during which a gurgle and thud was heard, when he entered from the left with a tray under a green rag with a hump in the middle. This grusome outfit was deposited upon a table, the rag lifted exposing John's head bearded Svengali style and as Salome wiggled before it, a sepulchral voice, hoarsened by nicotine and barleycorn, said bheware! It makes "Three Weeks" seem like McGuff's First.—Elbert Hubbard.

How to Prepare a Husband.

A good many husbands are utterly spoiled in the cooking. Some women set them constantly in hot water; others let them freeze by carelessness and indifference. Some keep them in a pickle all their lives. It is not reasonable to suppose that any husband can be tender and appetizing treated in this way, but they are really delicious when properly prepared. In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying mackerel, nor by the golden tint, as in picking salmon. Be sure to select him yourself, as tastes differ. Do not go to market for him. The best are always brought to your door. But it is far better to have none unless you will patiently learn how to cook him.

A preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is best; but if you have nothing but an earthen pipkin, it will do, with care. See that the linen in which you wrap him is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons and strings securely sewed on. Tie him in the kettle by a strong comfort cord. The duty cord is breakable and apt to let him fly out of the kettle and become burnt and crusty on the edge. Of course, you know that like a crab or lobster, you have to cook him alive. Set him near a clear, steady fire of love, neatness and cheerfulness. If he sputters and fizzles, do not be anxious. Some do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form of what confectioners call kisses, but no vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice will improve him, but it must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instruments into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir gently, watching the while lest he lie too flat and too close to the kettle, and so become flabby.

If thus treated you will find him digestible, agreeing nicely with you and the children. He will keep as long as you like, unless you become careless and set him in too cold a place.—Ethel Weiland, in Woman's Home Companion.

A reporter of the Cincinnati Enquirer—John R. McLean's newspaper—was once sent into a small town in southwestern Ohio to ge the story of a woman evangelist who had been greatly talked about. The reporter attended one of her meetings and occupied a front seat. When those who wished to be saved were asked to arise, he kept his seat and used his note-book. The woman approached, and, taking him by the hand, said: "Come to Jesus." "Madam," said the newspaper man, "I'm here solely on business to report your work." "Brother," said she, "there is no business so important as God's." "Well, maybe not," said the reporter; "but you don't know John McLean."—Argonaut.

The teacher was giving a geography lesson, and the class, having traveled from London to Labrador, and from Thessaly to Timbuctoo, was thoroughly worn out.

"And now," said the teacher, "we come to Germany, that important country governed by the Kaiser. Tommy Jones, what is a Kaiser?"

"Please 'm," yawned Tommy Jones, "a stream o' hot water springin' up an' disturbin' the earth!"—Argonaut.

Devotion to An Idea.

Watt Gozup—Isn't it something startling for old Hunks to be dropping into extravagant habits at his time of life?

Muskum Downe—Yes; he has just found out that there is an inheritance tax, and he's opposed to it on principle. He says he is going to see to it that his heirs don't have to pay any such tax.

Her Way.

"When a young man tries to kiss you, you should give him a smart smack on the ear."

"Charlie tried it last evening mamma, and I gave him a good smack on the mouth; at least, I think it was a good one, because he teased me for another."

The Color.

Miss Knox—Yes, he actually said your cheeks were like roses.

Miss Passay (coyly delighted)—Oh, come, now, that's laying it on rather thick.

Miss Knox--Yes, he remarked about that, too.

Disappointed.

Sympathetic Friend—Well, never mind. Cheer up, old chap. Don't look so glum. She'll be out in a fortnight.

Disconsolate Husband (of imprisoned suffragette)—Yes, but hang it, some of 'em got a month!

Pardonable Curiosity.

"Rivers, what brand is that cigar you'de smoking?"

"It's a Flor de Ranke. Making a memorandum of it, Brooks? I'll tell you where you can——"

"I'm writing the name of it, old man, in my list of 'Things to Be Avoided.'"

A Trust Buster.

Teacher—Tommy, what is a trust-buster?

Tommy—Pa is.

Teacher—In what way, Tommy?

Tommy—Well, ma told him when he went to the club last night that she'd trust him to come home sober, and he didn't.

Loaded.

Judge W. L. Walls, of Cody, Wyoming, has a sarcastic humor which has made many culprits squirm, and among the number was a defendant in a recent cattle-stealing case who was trying to explain that it would have been quite impossible for him to bring into town the beef he was accused of having stolen and butchered, owing to the fact that his two pack-horses were heavily loaded with other things.

One horse, he had told the jury, was packed with his fur overcoat, mining implements, etc.

"And what was on the other horse?" inquired the judge.

"Well, there was a gallon of whiskey—there was a gallon of whiskey ——" The flustered defendant could think of nothing else.

"I knew a gallon of whiskey was a load for a man," said the judge dryly, "but I didn't know it was a load for a horse."

A Sufficient Reason.

Brooke—"Cheeplee doesn't think it's proper to wear a watch with a dress suit."

Lynne—"He has never both at the same time."

The New Way.

"I understand you kissed your wife several times on leaving the house this morning?"

"Yes, that is a fact."

"Why! You haven't kissed her for a long time before, have you?"

"No, but we are about to get a divorce and I want her to feel pleasant about it."

Just Punishment.

The "open door" in China
May be quite proper, but—
If could only catch the "mutt"
Who leaves the door wide open when
The Mercury is down to ten
We'd chain him to the knob with glee
And with a red-hot pitchfork we
Would make him keep it shut.

"Advertising is to business what steam is to machinery."

IT IS A FACT

that in the neighbourhood of

$20,000,000 Is Invested

annually in advertising in North America.

The two principle reasons for this enormous waste are:—

(1) Chosing of mediums which DO NOT CARRY CONFIDENCE and DO NOT REACH THE BUYERS.

(2) Advertisements not carefully written—too crowded, bad display, poor composition.

It is our business to know where to place your advertisements and how to write them, in order that you may obtain the best possible results.

We are quoting SPECIAL RATES for writing series of 12, 25 and 100 advertisements.

Monday and Tuesday

the 19th and 20th, at Institute Hall, View Street. Some of Victoria's leading amateurs have the principal parts in the caste and each member is furnished with a most effective playing part. The plot the complicated is most interesting from start to finish.

The story is briefly this: Lysand Lyon was in his infancy deserted his mother and taken care of by bachelor uncle who grew immense rich in California. Lysander is ma his uncle's heir and goes to Euro to study. To inculcate economi habits he is restricted to a small a lowance and meeting a rich wido whose hold on life is slender, he ma ries her unknown to his uncle. Aft his marriage he finds himself ste father to a fleshy old maid to who on her mother's death, the expecte fortune reverts. Meantime, the unc has become guardian of Nellie Go dengate and decides that his tw wards should marry. Unknown Lysander he crosses the continen at a time when that young gentlema is paying a surreptitious visit to Am erica. Lysander meets Nellie an scrapes acquaintance with her, bu owing to Francisco's blunder, think her name is Prudence—the name o her friend. In order to avoid a mar riage with Nellie, whom he thinks h has never seen, he invents a stor to the effect that he is already ma ried and then the complications en sue. Finally he is forced to confes all his deceptions except one—th truth about Baby. Nellie forgive him and so does the uncle for hi fibs and also his first marriage bu both imagine Baby to be a little child Then the truth comes to the surface when, by an almost superhuman ef fort of nerve, he marries his step daughter to his uncle and himse weds Nellie.
