The Navy League.

It is generally admitted that a man is in a hard case when "his foes are those of his own household"; in such a case the officers of the Navy League of Victoria found themselves on Wednesday evening last. The President and Secretary, who have worked indefatigably for the cause, had arranged a meeting, in part to celebrate Trafalgar Day, and in part to advocate the interests of the Navy League. Captain Wolley had delivered a patriotic address which aroused the enthusiasm of his auditors. Other speakers had followed in the same strain when in an unlucky moment the conveners of the meeting entrusted a resolution to a gentleman descended from the United Empire Loyalists. One would have thought that such a man would have retained at least a remnant of the patriotic ardour which characterized his ancestors, instead of which he appears to cherish a deep-rooted objection to any practical recognition of the duty of Canada to the Motherland in respect of Naval defence. He made a long and rambling speech in defence of the loyalty of Canadians, which had never been questioned, and in glorification of the United Empire Loyalists, who had nothing to do with the case. But, worse than that, he threw cold water on the policy of the Navy League and tried his best to counteract the splendid influence which had been created during the former part of the meeting. Captain Wolley, full of indignation, read him a severe lesson and bluntly charged him with "drawing a red herring across the trail." The remarks of the critic were received in absolute silence, which showed how keenly the meeting resented what under the circumstances could only be regarded as an act of treachery, whilst the retort of Captain Wolley was loudly applauded. All of this goes to show that the degeneration of which Max Nordau treated in his great work might not inappropriately have been extended to degenerate Loyalists. It also teaches that conveners of Public Meetings should find out beforehand the attitude of intending speakers, at any rate those who are asked to support the objects of the meeting. Not content with a platform condemnation of the League, the speaker in question has resumed the attack in the editorial columns of the Colonist where he tells the Navy League that any success that attended their meeting was purely accidental, and due to the presence of Admiral Fleet who was not an invited speaker. All this can do no harm; it is instructive as confirming the popular opinion upon the much vaunted loyalty of the gentleman in question. There is an old parable which is peculiarly applicable to this case, its moral is "not everyone that saith—but he that doeth," which may be paraphrased "not everyone that prateth loyalty—but he that payeth the piper." There is no fear of the United Empire Loyalists being forgotten; their descendants will take care of that; nor is there any danger of the Motherland, or the Empire losing sight of their splendid contributions to the defence of Canadian territory in the glorious days of the past, but what has this to do with the responsibility of Canadians in the twentieth century? And how does it help the Motherland in a practical manner to conduct the defence of an Empire upon which the sun never sets, to tell of what was effected by the pioneers of early days. The position today is very simple, as Captain Wolley reminded the meeting, Canada has at any moment upon the high seas, $200,000,000 worth of merchandise depending entirely upon the protection of the British Navy, to the upkeep of which she does not directly contribute one cent. Other British dependencies have contributed in vessels and Admiral Fleet's suggestion is that Canada should do the same, there being insuperable difficulties in the way of a cash subsidy. There is no question of the loyalty of Canada to the British flag, neither can there be any question, in this our growing time, upon the very threshold of nationhood, of our responsibility to shoulder this portion of the white man's burden. It is only necessary that the cause should be championed by genuine loyalists and that a practical scheme, such as Admiral Fleet suggests, should be laid before the people of the Dominion to ensure its hearty acceptance, and the removal of that approbrium under which Canada must rest as long as she shelters herself behind the British forces without contributing to their support.

A Mare's Nest.

The investigation which Mr. MacKenzie King has been holding in Vancouver in connection with the Japanese influx has had an unexpected result, and has shown that the Asiatic Exclusionists had unearthed a Mare's nest. They have blatantly announced time and again, that the Japanese immigration had been engineered by Canadian Corporations who desired to employ cheap coloured labour. Mr. King has discovered that the irruption was due to the machinations of astute Japanese boarding-house keepers who established an agency in Vancouver, and contracted with similar agencies in Japan for Japs at so much per head. There was a rake-off at both ends, the earnings of the Japs on this side being paid over to the agency which deducted percentages varying from five to fifteen. It does not look as if the white man could give the son of Nippon many pointers in their mutual quest for the almighty dollar, but it does look as if the Exclusion League needs several pointers in the art of investigation.

Awaiting The Result.

Mr. Justice Martin still continues his vagaries, the latest being a refusal to hear motions in Chambers on the ground that this duty was not specifically enjoined by the instruction of a Senior Judge. In defending Mr. Justice Martin one daily paper does so on the ground of his sincerity. No one has ever questioned this, and no one who knows Mr. Justice Martin would think of doing so, but what his defenders fail to recognize is that a man who occupies a high public position may do infinitely more harm if he is sincerely wrong than if his wrong doing is actuated by base motives. In the former case he would probably persist even to the stake, regardless of public inconvenience and loss; in the latter, there would be a dozen methods ready to hand for bringing about a change in his attitude. The fact that Mr. Justice Martin believes he is right, while relieving him from any imputation, only increases the improbability that he will abandon a position which he has maintained so long in spite of the remonstrances of litigants and the instructions of his chief. It is hoped that the omnibus order just issued by the Chief Justice may solve the difficulty. Its provisions would appear to be as wide, and at the same time as precise, as the English language is capable of stating. But the same may be said of previous orders issued for a similar purpose which have appeared in the press, and therefore litigants will have to wait the pleasure of Mr. Justice Martin before they would know to a certainty whether the last instruction is to be any more effective than its numerous predecessors.

Calling The Bluff.

There is little doubt in the minds of those who have followed the disputes between the Victoria City Council and the C. P. R. on the Store Street matter that the section of the Council which has insisted upon the retention of Clause 15, has been trying to run a bluff on the Railway Company. Mr. Marpole, with an astuteness which those who know him would have expected, has called the bluff, and instead of renewing negotiations with the Council, he has notified the Mayor of his intention to refer the matter to the Railway Commission. On every ground but one this decision is a matter of congratulation to Victorians, because it will mean a judicial decision by an impartial tribunal. The unfortunate exception is that there will be a long delay which would have been avoided but for the vote catching obstructionist policy of those who think that it is always good play to bait a corporation.

A Renegade Politician.

In many respects the Montreal Star is the best newspaper in Canada. It is the largest; it is published in the Commercial Capital; it enjoys the best facility for acquiring information, and it pays more for cable and telegraphic dispatches than any other paper. It is the sole property of Mr. Hugh Graham, who for many years has played an important part in the politics of Eastern Canada. Under his direction it has advanced from a non-paying proposition to one which for at least six or seven years has yielded the lucky proprietor a clear profit of more than one hundred thousand dollars per annum. In spite of this, however, the paper has never secured the confidence of the Conservative party, although it has, ever since Mr. Graham assumed control, claimed to be a Conservative organ. The reason of this may not be known throughout the Dominion, but it is well understood in Montreal, Toronto, Quebec and Ottawa. Whilst masquerading as a Conservative, Mr. Graham has always been willing to sell his paper to the highest bidder, and has on several occasions, made direct bids for personal favours, the refusal of which has seriously shaken his party allegiance. It is an open secret that in 1896 when the Laurier Administration came into power, and again in the election of 1901, negotiations were well under way for transferring the support of the Star from the Conservatives to the Liberal party. It was understood that the price on each occasion was to have been the recommendation for a Knighthood. No one who was in Montreal in 1901 will ever forget the campaign which was waged with Sir Charles Tupper and Hugh John Macdonald as figureheads, Hugh Graham as Robinson Crusoe, and Mr. Dalby as Man Friday. It is now a matter of ancient history how the campaign ended in a fiasco, and its inner workings have been laid bare by certain publications of Mr. Dalby which, if hardly creditable to himself, are even less so to Mr. Graham. For sometime discontent has been seething in the bosom of the Montreal newspaper magnate, and he has now come out with a manifesto in which he attempts to wash a considerable amount of dirty party linen in public, and incidentally declares that he is not in sympathy with either political party. All this is very interesting, but will be taken at its true value by all who know Mr. Graham. There may be room in the Conservative party for a strong leader, but Mr. Graham is not the man. Neither political party has any use for a politician who changes his coat to suit his pocket. Such conduct does very little harm among the small fry because their influence is inconsiderable, but when it becomes the question of leadership, even politicians exact a little consistency from their nominee. Mr. Graham may rest assured that his manifesto will not even raise a flutter in the dovecotes of the Conservative party; it only furnishes another illustration of his vanity.

Hoist With Their Own Petard.

It looks very much as if the Fifth Regiment Band will be taught a very salutary lesson. The bandmaster must be exempted from any criticism in this matter, as ever since his arrival in the city he has endeavoured to overcome the contumacious spirit which appears to animate the members. Thinking that they were "the only pebbles on the beach" they have on every conceivable occasion played a hold-up game on the citizens of Victoria. Their charges have been ridiculous, and whenever they could occasion inconvenience, they have done so without any regard for the consequences. It may not be generally known that during the Fair week they held up the management on two occasions, under circumstances which rendered it almost imperative that their outrageous demands should be acceded to. They actually stopped one day just as the parade was commencing, and there would have been a parade without music if the management had not given way and paid them an increased fee. In view of these and many similar facts, it is good news to hear that there is a probability of a City Band being established.

An Amazing Cartoon.

The pictorial artist of the Victoria Times is said to be related—distantly—to Sir John Tenniel. Some of his productions have been fearfully and wonderfully made, but a recent achievement surpasses them all; it appeared in the issue of Thursday week, and at first the public supposed that it had some reference to the water question. Enquiry at the Times office elicited the information that such was not the case, although no one on the staff was able to tell what it really referred to. Subsequently, a friend of the artist confided to The Week that it had to do with the observance of Trafalgar Day, and represented Nelson putting the telescope to his blind eye, with Hardy looking on. After careful inspection through a microscope The Week fails to confirm this latter suggestion, and believes that the sketch is intended to represent "Sunrise at Chamounix." In the midst of this uncertainty The Week has decided to adopt the course frequently persued when there is a difference of opinion about the work of any master; it offers a prize of "two bits" for the first correct solution.

Pantagruel Peppergrass.

Kipling.

By Pantagruel Peppergrass.

A hall with overhead galleries; banners, lanterns, streamers, making a blaze of colour; gaily dressed women crowding the balconies; a gathering of men seated at tables strung the length of the hall; plates, glasses, unconsumed viands showing that the feast had been partaken of; music playing, and the scent of flowers hanging heavy in the air; silence reigns, then a low musical voice is heard, speaking slowly, distinctly, impressively. "I am overcome with pleasure at the reception given me by the people of Victoria, and would be more overcome did I not know that it is not me who is being honoured, but the things I write about." "No! No!" from a roaring multitude —"I have been fortunate enough to write about things which are of interest to us both," and so went on the quiet voice, every word dwelt on by the breathless crowd, the voice of the man who has done more for British Imperialism, for the binding together of the Nation,—Rudyard Kipling.

Women hung on his words enthralled; men looked on him, not as Kipling the man, the author, the poet or Imperialist, but as the essence and personification of the British Empire, the spirit of loyalty itself. A small dark man, dark weakly eyes guarded by large glasses, moustache trimmed square above the firm mouth, chin square, short, assertive; one felt as one looked, the over-powering personality of the genius who has cemented together, in undying bonds, a vast empire by force of language. Later, when one grasped the friendly hand, looked into those kindly dark eyes, then one felt the influence of the Man, and one could understand the secret of his power of winding himself into the very heart of Tommy Atkins, of the Indian Nabob, of the Hindoo Coolie, and from these people wrest secrets which, when transferred to paper by pen wielded by his masterly hand, sent fame ahead to the four corners of the earth, and caused men to wonder, and say—"what manner of man is this?"

Kipling is to British Imperialism what Bonaparte was to French military prestige. Yet unlike, for Napoleon fell; Kipling lives today, tomorrow, and down the cycles of years, a path of undying fame. He is to England and her Colonies what Theodore Roosevelt is to the United States of America. Again unlike, for where Roosevelt forces conviction through shear power of will, by downright dominance of character, by the resistless rush of a strong man, who, choosing a path, knows it is a good one, and treads that path regardless alike of the weak, well-meaning advices of pandering friends, and the fierce, ominous threats of powerful enemies, this little gentle-eyed man with feminine hands writes in soft, gentle language a few things he knows in a manner all his own, casts the written sheet to the four winds, and a mighty nation reads, heeds, and follows his lead. "Wonderful!" you say; not a bit of it. Just get the chance to hear the man talk, and to look into his eyes, and the thing becomes plain as A B C, only—I wouldn't advise you to try to copy him in writing, or in being a Nation leader, you might find it a little bit difficult at first; Nations are plentiful, Kiplings are not—there is only one, so you and I will go back and sit down on a big stone and quietly ponder on how many little things like bees, and ants, and Kipling, manage to do such wonderful things, with such little noise.

Quietly and easily though Kipling may speak, yet, as a meteor is formed from nebulous particles, so does his point shape itself out of little shadowy bits of language, until, when ready, perfectly pointed and tempered, the shaft is driven home with resistless energy, the more sudden because unexpected—the meteor shoots to earth. "Your ranks are being largely recruited from countries where law is feared, where Government in power is looked on as an oppressor who kills them. They may make good citizens in time, when their children can teach them, but the class you should have must be of British stock. You may think that you can dally with the question—take time to study the problem, but I think the time for you to choose between good citizens of sound British stock and undesirable aliens from countries you do not know, is NOW!"—and in the breathless pause that followed, when women strained eyes in nervous eagerness, and men started as if struck a blow, the little Man, who had risen to his feet a few minutes before, sat down a mighty Giant.

Here was a stranger to the country saying in a dozen words, what ninety-nine one-hundredths of the people of British Columbia had felt and known in their hearts, and yet been afraid to speak of, pharisaically hoping their neighbour would first say it, so that they could then be ready to jump to the right side of the fence.

This stranger told us our duty, pointed out to us our danger, warned us of consequences, and he knows Asia, and most of Europe better than we know his well-beloved books. His words were not merely ones of advice, between the lines there was a warning of a menace foreseen by the keenest pair of British eyes that ever yet penetrated Asiatic inscrutability, a menace which has been divined by the brightest mind that ever yet fathomed the mysteries of Oriental intrigue, a warning which if neglected, may result in harm difficult to remedy, the onus of which will lie at the doors of the rulers of British Columbia's destinies.

John W. Gates says that not all women, but some of them, are very poor speculators, and poor gamblers, and recalled this incident: "A young friend of mine has a pretty cousin. He was going to the races the other day, and she called him up on the telephone, and asked him to put $10 on Forest King for her. 'Very well,' he said. 'I'll do it if you'll pay me back.' 'Of course I'll pay you back, you horrid thing.' 'All right,' said he. 'You didn't last time.' 'Oh, well,' said she, 'last time the horse didn't win, you know.''

One of the officials of the Indian office at Washington was visiting a reservation in Montana on government business when a certain chief, who had taken a fancy to Uncle Sam's agent, invited him to attend the wedding of the Indian's daughter. The Indian Office man was, to his regret, unable to be present at the festivities, but the Indian laconically described the function subsequently, in order to indicate what the agent had missed "Five dogs," said the chief, "and plenty pie."

What strikes the London Spectator as being among the things that are most extremely funny are Mark Twain's stories of his editing an agricultural paper; of how, in the columns of that paper, he advised that: "Turnips should never be pulled; it injures them. It is better to send a boy up and let him shake the tree"; and of his putting forth the information that "the guano is a fine bird, but great care is necessary in rearing it."

Two Canadian medical students recently left a boarding house in which they had found cold comfort and meagre fare. Their landlady was considerably startled to discover after their departure that they had pinned beneath a hideous crayon portrait of herself a card begging this pious wish: "Peace to her hashes."—Canadian Courier.

Professor Koppay, the Austrian painter, has just passed through Paris on his way to Vienna from New York, where he did several portraits, among them that of John D. Rockefeller. Professor Koppay, it is understood, received $55,000 for portraits in America, which is not a bad return for six months' work.

Dear Sir,—I have watched with a great deal of interest the movements of the people calling themselves the "Anti-Asiatic League," and though I am with them heart and soul in the principle which they advocate, I am very far from coinciding with the methods employed to gain the end which they seek.

I think that it will be conceded that to fight a wrong successfully an individual or state must conform to the fundamental principle of man's constitutional right. We as Anglo-Saxons claim the right to go to whatever country or state we please and as long as we are willing to conform to the laws of the country we should certainly appeal to our respective flags to enforce that right should we find ourselves confronted by any exclusion act. It is admitted that we must grant to every other human being the same right which we claim for ourselves. Any act which interferes with man's constitutional right must sooner or later fail. Do I therefore claim that we must be overrun with these orientals? By no means! We are interfering with no man's right when we insist, either by local, provincial or Dominion legislation that all the dwellers in our country must conform to our manners of living. There are unwritten laws which set the standard of dress and manners; why not insist that foreigners must comply. We have laws that insist that our citizens must conform to the laws of health and yet we permit these foreigners to live in a state of filth and overcrowding which would not be tolerated in our own people. Compel them to conform to these laws and the nuisance will abate itself. If the Chinese were compelled everywhere to erect decent houses instead of shacks and then occupy them according to the street laws of hygiene; if they had to part with their queue and dress like a European or American how long will it be before we are rid of these pests? If these Orientals were compelled to build houses like white men and pay taxes in the same proportion they would have a greater difficulty in competing with white labour.

These "Anti-Asiatic Leaguers" remind me forcibly of the man who sought all kinds of patent nostrums for his health and took a bath but once a year whether he needed it or not. My serious advice to them is quit making laughing stocks of yourselves by crying for what you are not sure you can get and sensibly go to work to employ the means easily within your reach. Personally I should be very sorry to have my name appear in connection with any society which directly or indirectly gave its endorsation to such acts of ruffianism as burning the effigy of the Lieutenant-Governor, howling down respectable citizens whose views differed from theirs, or such childishness as calling upon the premier and members from Victoria to resign. Be men and act like rational beings with a policy which will commend itself to serious thought before buttonholing individuals on the street corners to sign your petition.

EDW. E. HARDWICK.

Editor Week:

Dear Sir,—I send one dollar to pay for your very intelligent paper. It is an intellectual treat.

Very truly yours,
JAMES KNIGHT.

The Canadian Magazine.

The Canadian Magazine for November is an unusually strong number, containing contributions from Dr. Louis Frechette, Wilfred Campbell, Judge Savary, H. S. Scott Harden, with verse from H. Isabel Graham, Owen E. McGillicuddy, Minnie Evelyn Henderson, Donald A. Fraser, and others. The illustrated articles are attractive and well written, and the short stories first-class.

In an article entitled "The Romance of Milling" in the November number of The Canadian Magazine, the supremacy of the Canadian West in the milling industry is strikingly shown, and it is incidentally observed that credit for having the largest flour mills operating under the British flag is claimed by a Canadian concern, the Lake of the Woods Milling Company. The daily output of this great concern is 10,500 barrels. That it represents 47,000 bushels of wheat, which at twenty bushels to the acre represents the product of 2,350 acres. But that is for only one day. Take a year of 300 working days, and we have a representation of 705,000 acres. A Canadian Northwest homestead consists of 160 acres, so that the annual output of this milling company would consume the aggregate crop of 4,400 homesteads, even if every acre was cropped with wheat. The average crop of each homestead is perhaps eighty acres, so that the annual output really represents the aggregate crop of 8,800 homesteads.

Ten thousand five hundred barrels a day make a yearly aggregate of 3,150,000 barrels. One barrel of flour will make 140 two-pound loaves of berad, and therefore the annual output of 3,150,000 barrels will make 441,000,000 loaves. Giving the average family ten loaves a week, this output would supply 882,000 families for a whole year. Allowing two loaves a day to every man, it would maintain an army of 10,000 men in fighting form for seventy-three years.

An average loaf is about eight inches long. If, therefore, the total output of these mills was reduced to loaves of bread placed one in front of another the line would reach twice around the world, with enough left to connect Winnipeg with Liverpool.

Socialist Equality.

A good story is told about a well known Socialist leader who is supposed to be a potent factor in provincial politics. A few days ago the gentleman in question went home to dinner expecting to meet only his wife. As he sat down he noticed that the table was laid for three.

"Are you expecting anyone," he asked of his wife.

"No," she said; "are you?"

"No," was the reply.

His wife thereupon went into the kitchen to make enquiries, when she was informed by the cook, a white woman, that the third place was for herself as she intended dining with the family all times.

"Are you going to allow it?" asked the Socialist husband.

"Certainly," said his wife. "We must either change our politics or lose our cook.

"Done," said the husband, and they lost their cook.

This is a delicious comment upon the insistent clamour of the Socialists for equality, and should be noticed by those who would feign change the sincerity of Socialist leaders.

Kipling's Bantling.

The first literary effort of Dudyard Kipling has been unearthed. It was written when he was a schoolboy in knickerbockers at Westward Ho! and is modelled on Browning. The "poem," which was preserved by a schoolmate, runs as follows:

The Jampot—tender thought,
I grabbed it; so did you—
"What wonder, while we fought
Together, that it flew
In shivers," you retort.

You should have loosed your hold
One moment; checked your fist.
But as it was—too bold,
You grappled—and you missed.
More curtly, you were sold.

"But neither of us shared
The dainty"—that's your plea?
I answer . . . Let me see
How have your trousers fared?"

Their admirers call the Japanese "the Yankees of the Orient." Well, there is no denying that they are away down—East.

The engagement is announced of Miss Eleanor Crawford, eldest daughter of Marion F. Crawford, the novelist, author of "In the Palace of the King," "Corleone," "Saracinesca," and many other interesting stories, to Pietro Rocca, of Sorrento, Italy. The wedding will take place in the early part of the New Year at Sorrento. Miss Crawford has just returned to her home in Italy from a visit to her aunt, Mrs. Hugh Fraser, in London, England. She is a very charming girl and made her debut three years ago at a New Year's eve ball given by the King of Italy. Miss Crawford's mother was Miss Elizabeth Berdan, whose father was the inventor of the percussion cap.

A double wedding was performed at the Methodist church in Cranbrook, B.C., recently, when Mr. William J. Payne of Marysville was united to Miss Nellie E. Curtis of Bristol, England, by the Rev. R. Hughes, pastor of the church. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. Henry R. Bidder also of Marysville was married to Miss Edith A. Watson of London, England. The two contracting parties acted as witnesses for each other. A fact of interest in connection with this event is that both ladies came across the Atlantic on the Empress of Ireland to meet their husbands in this city, one arriving by train just twenty-four hours ahead of the other. They will both reside in the same city.

Sporting Notes.

As was expected the Victoria United defaulted the match to the Y. M. C. A. and will in all probability not be seen in action again this season. As yet no official announcement has been made of their withdrawal but it is confidently expected that this will be forthcoming before this afternoon.

The Victoria Rugby team suffered a severe defeat at the hands of the Nanaimo team in the Coal City last Sunday. It was a matter of great surprise that the local team should set a precedent of playing on Sunday and it is to this cause that several of the regular members were unable to accompany the team. The team that was taken up was not a representative one of this city and in future some effort should be made to secure a fifteen that will stand some chance of winning.

The members of the Dawson Basketball team have arrived in the city and are rounding into form at the J. B. A. A. Several games have been arranged and it is expected that the venture will prove a financial success.

The Vancouver Rugby Football team has already met with one reverse in California and unless a better showing is made in the next games there will be more defeats registered.

The first hockey match of the season was played at Oak Bay on Saturday last when the South Park girls played a draw with the High School. The game was stubbornly contested, both sides trying hard to score a win. The South Park girls are very anxious to win the cup this season for by doing so will give them the trophy for keeps. The cup was presented by the Colonist Printing and Publishing Co. and is highly prized by the opposing teams.

The organization of the Victoria Hockey Club is a welcome addition to the sporting clubs of the city. For a time it was thought that the club would not organize, but some of the more active members got to work and are now ready to defend their place in the Provincial League. It will be a good thing if Seattle can be induced to join the league. A club has been formed in the Sound metropolis and is anxious for games.

Although the Victoria Rugby Football team defeated the Nanaimo Hornets at Oak Bay on Thursday, the players did not show that form that will entitle them to win senior honors and if the local club expect to make any showing against a first class fifteen they will have to do more practice than was done for the match against Nanaimo. The only try that was secured was made by Meredith and it was a lucky try. The game was very loose from start to finish and many of the local players require the rough edges rubbed off before they go up against another team. The only redeeming feature of the game was the play of the three-quarter division. The forwards hardly formed a good scrum during the game, and as for the halves another few years with the intermediates would be very beneficial. Gellespie at full back was sure, but he trusted too much to drop kicks instead of punting. In addition to this the team was not as strong as it might have been; players who would have made it stronger were left off and others put in their place. The Nanaimo team includes some very good players, but they do not appear to work together. With practice both clubs can put good teams on the field, but it will only be by practice that these teams can be developed. Before the local club lines up against Vancouver it is hoped that the players will exert every effort to obtain that practice that is absolutely necessary. For the benefit of those attending to the management of the club it has to be pointed out that it reflects very little credit on those in charge and in addition to this it is not a fair deal to the public to advertise the game at 3 o'clock and start half an hour earlier. If the public pay to see the game they are entitled to see all of it and not find half the game gone when they enter the grounds on advertised time.

Miss Beatrice Gaudin left on Wednesday by the Princess for Vancouver to take a course in the General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Holt are spending a few weeks with the latter's mother, Mrs. Hickey, Cook street, before proceeding to Vancouver, where Mr. Holt will fill his new position on the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

At The Street Corner

By THE LOUNGER

LOUNGER—

I was delighted on Monday night o see one of the city police haranguing a gang of young toughs, ranging rom about seven to fourteen years f age, for being out on the streets fter the curfew bell had rung. If here is one thing which is necessary or the advancement of a nation it is he proper supervision of the youth. Parents, both in Canada and the tates are notoriously careless in this espect. One reason is to be found, think, in the fact that i nmany ases the child, be he boy, or be she irl, is sent out to work in order to well the family exchequer. I know f one case here in Victoria, where he children, all under twenty, suport the parents, though the man is ell able to work. Not unnaturally, he child thinks that he or she has right to some word in the family ouncil, and resents being treated as "kid." If I felt that I was helping keep my parents in board and lodgg, I should most strenuously comt any show of authority on their art. The luxuries of life incur reponsibilities, and of no phase in life this more true than in the married ate. The man or woman, who for he sake of a few dollars per month willing to allow the children to ow up without a due regard for displine, is totally unqualified for marage.

I grant that the children of the New Vorld are far more practical than ose of The Old; but are they as edient Are they as polite? Are ey as well trained in those little cial ethics, which mean so much to e development of the perfect genman? I am referring, of course, the class which is of gentle origin, t of reduced circumstances. The ry poor will be the same all the orld over; so will the very rich. It the middle class of Canada which ntrasts so strongly with their conres over the sea.

I had the pleasure of a long conrsation with a friend of mine who ils from Sweden, the other day. He verely criticised the Anglo-Saxon actice of sending bad boys and girls Reformatories. Very few per cent. reformatory children ever turn out decent citizens. "Why don't you ople," he said, "follow the example Sweden, and have practical agricul-al education; the boys learn farmg in all its branches; the girl learn use-work, including milkng, dairyg and domestic economy. The inriable rule is that the eldest son ays by the farm, and when he mars, the daughter-in-law lives in the me house as her husband's parents, d takes full control of the househld. If she were ignorant of the use-wife's work, there would be nstant friction between her and the wager; but she isn't; she has been ained."

Of how many Canadian girls could is be said? Of how many English rls? In the Old Country it is the rvant who does all the work; in nada it is the mother. The daughter re goes out to make a little money, her as a stenographer or a teleone girl; the son does odd jobs. th make enough money to pay mething towards the expenses of e home, and have a surplus which kes them independent. But in st cases the girl hasn't had time learn how to cook, and the boy s not had the amount of home inence which is so necessary in deloping his character.

Well, enough of moralizing. I ve allowed myself to harp on a vourite subject of mine, viz., the ucation of the young. We will now scuss the Dominion stamps.

Has it ever occurred to you, gentle ader, that the quality of gum placed the back of a Canadian stamp is tremely bad? That there is a strong ndency of the said stamp to refuse adhere to the envelope, and that in consequence it is advisable to keep a bottle of paste in your writing-room? These things are so, but why? Surely there is enough gum in the country to secure to the population adhesive stamps. If not, I would recommend that a law be passed making it a criminal offence, punishable with a minimum penalty of seven years, for anybody to chew gum.

I often think that if people, young men and children, old men and maidens, realised how repulsive their appearance is when they indulge in this particularly hideous and disgusting practice, they would eschew it for ever. Go to the theatre and watch the mouths of your neighbours; young girls make themselves absolutely loathsome with this chewing habit; it looks worse on a girl than on a boy or man, but in either case it is indefensible.

The condition of affairs on Oriental Alley has not improved in the slightest degree. This by-path is a positive menace to the public safety; the planks on the sidewalk are broken. The owner of this property, Mr. McKeon, has apparently no regard for the limbs of those unfortunates, who in their ignorance traverse the confines of his domain. This is a matter, however, which is not left entirely to the discretion of the property owner, and the city has a right to insist that the thoroughfare be kept in safe and decent condition.

"Tell it not in Gath; publish it not abroad in Askelon"; the Johnston ravine is being cleansed. Every cloud has its silver lining, and the bubonic plague has procured a wholesale demolition of filth which ought to have taken place ten years ago. I believe I am right in saying that the Vancouver Province came out with a special number about seventeen years ago, in which was printed one view of Victoria. This view depicted the above-mentioned ravine, and there has been no alteration up to date. Mr. Wilson, the Sanitary Inspector, told me last Sunday, that at last he had got the ball at his foot, and that he was going to kick it, and kick hard, too. Merrily burns the huge pile of rubbish which has been collected by the co-adjutants of the worthy gentleman, and there really seems to be a positive assurance that within a few days a state of purification will prevail, which will astonish our Celestial neighbours. Who said "rate"?

What Ailed Him?

Andrew Carnegie tells of an old Scotch lady who had no great liking for modern church music. One day she was expressing her dislike of the singing of an anthem in her own church, when a friend said:

"Why, that anthem is a very ancient one. David sang it to Saul."

"Weel, weel!" said the old woman. "I noo for the first time understan' why Saul threw his javelin at David when the lad sang for him."

The Middle Class.

Having been born and reared in the fold of the Church of England, I am quite prepared to take my Theology from Canon Beanlands who is an orthodox priest of that church. There are, however, other matters upon which, judging from his recent correspondence in the public press, he is hardly as infallible a guide. I should hesitate to accept his dictum on professional etiquette, and logic

It is usual when replying to a letter which has appeared in a newspaper to tender one's reply to the same paper, and only to resort to another if insertion is refused. Canon Beanlands, who is not lacking in courtesy, cannot have been aware of it or he would not have replied in the columns of the Colonist to an article which appeared in The Week.

On the matter of logic, of which I think everyone will agree that Canon Beanlands should know something, having regard to his scholastic attainments and his position as a preacher and teacher, I can only say that when he expected the public of Victoria to deduce from his remarks about the Middle Class, made at the Canadian Club luncheon to a Canadian audience at a distance of seven thousand miles from the Old Country, the conclusion that they were intended to apply to England and not to Canada, he was proposing an obvious "non sequitur."

In a letter which appears in the Colonist of the 29th inst. the Canon tries, not very successfully, to defend his attitude on this question, and in doing so allows himself to fall into methods of controversy which one is more apt to find associated with politics than polemics, and which in any event are sadly out of place when used by a scholar and a gentleman. The commonest stock in trade of the political demagogue is the substitution of inuendo for argument, and the imputation of unworthy motives.

It was hardly ingenous to take exception to the fact that the article which appeared in The Week criticising the Canon's views on the Middle Class was signed by a nom de plume. There might have been a little force, though not much, in the objection if the correspondent had been a casual one, but as a valued subscriber to The Week, no one knows better than Canon Beanlands, that Bohemian is a regular contributor on our permanent staff. To speak of "Assurance" and to suggest that I pooh-pooh his views and theories because I did not enunciate them is an unworthy method of discussion. It is also illogical to charge me with "gratuitus assumption" when I conclude that his remarks were intended to apply to Western Canada. Of course I freely accept Canon Beanland's statement that such was not the case, but I do so simply because I believe his statement, and not because any intelligent man could possibly draw that conclusion from his remarks. In fact, I think his letter which was intended to clear up this point would leave it in greater doubt than ever if its logical meaning were taken. He says: "I am not speaking or thinking of Western Canada when I protest against the suppression of the Middle Class; it is just as noticeable a feature of British politics, AS IT IS OF ANY LITTLE PUDDLETON OF THE PACIFIC COAST"; this sentence at any rate rather includes the Pacific Coast, even if England was primarily in the speaker's mind, and if so my remarks on the subject were quite in order.

As a rule Canon Beanlands is a clear and forceful speaker, but on this occasion he has woefully failed to convey what he meant in the first instance, and his explanation can only be accepted at the cost of his reputation for logical reasoning.

As a humble worker in the field of literature I feel that I am justified in entering a protest against the decadence of style exemplified in Canon Beanland's letter. Such phrases as "it is all fudge"—"just as the anarchists GO for Kings"—"it is quite time that decent people speak openly and not in terrified whispers or SNEAKING SNUFFLES"—are such as one would hardly exepct from this source, and cannot be considered as raising the tone of debate.

Personally, I think that the discussion about class differences is out of place in Canada, and especially in the Canadian West. There are such distinctions, but they are very much less in evidence than in the Old Country, and the number of people who draw their skirts about them and exhale the odour of sanctity in an air of "I am holier than you" form such a small minority that they are practically a negligible quantity. They have little influence and nobody worries about them.

If Canon Beanlands still wishes to maintain that his reference was to the Middle Class of England alone, then I respectfully suggest that the only interest which Canadians have in the subject is a purely academic one. Three are other subjects of real importance which claim their attention and upon which they stand in need of guidance. The Middle Class in England is well able to take care of itself. Neither the Scylla of capital on the one hand, nor the Charybdis of labour on the other can injure or cripple it more than momentarily. These extremists may have the ear of Governments, but still under the British Constitution the people have the power, and hitherto that power has always been exercised under the intelligent control of the Mildle Class.

I think I ought to explain to my readers that on reading Canon Beanlands' letter I requested my editor to deal with it in his own columns, but he insisted that I had the right of reply and that in spite of the formidableness of my opponents I should exercise it.

Prospective Suitor—Sir, I love your daughter.

Her Father—Well, don't come to me with your troubles.

Impressions of Old Land.

Editor Week:

I see that my somewhat mild criticisms of a few of the idiosyncrasies of Londoners in general have stirred up the bile of your correspondent, "Briton," and that he has, to relieve himself, emptied the vials of his wrath upon my devoted head. Poor Briton. How I pity him. He evidently belongs to that class of Britisher who considers "English you know" to be synonymous with perfection—who thinks that things English cannot be improved upon; in fact that an Englishman is only one degree removed from the Deity—and that therefore it is rank heresy for anyone, more especially a "Colonial" to make derogatory remarks upon England and its ways. He also appears to imagine that my observations are based purely upon this present trip over here, being ignorant of the fact that for the last ten years I have devoted the whole of my profits derived from raising the despised corn on the Squamish ranch to travelling, and that consequently I am in a fair position to express an opinion about his countryfen. He takes great exception to my sizing up of the Londoners. I can only reiterate what I said, and nine travellers out of ten agree with me. It is a City of Graft in all its different phases. What does "Briton" think of the employers of a Hotel instead of receiving wages, paying large sums weekly to the proprietors for the privilege of being allowed to graft payment for their services from guests which they (the guests) are again charged for in their bills under the heading of attendance. In some instances as much as £500 a year is paid for this privilege. As for the business community they live by "rakeoffs" on the greater portion of the business transactions of the world.

Now as regards marmalade, I really must apologize to Briton for my remarks on the sacred subject. I try to avoid as much as possible hurting anyone's personal feelings. He evidently is a high priest at the shrine of the great God Marmalade. Seventy-five per cent of Englishmen are worshippers of this Deity, consequently if when I wrote the letter in question I had known the cult was so strong, and the believers so earnest, I probably would have been a little milder. To escape the penalty of being excommunicated by bell, book and candle, and to be ostracized from all decent English Society, I am trying to cultivate a taste for the mixture and have succeeded so far as to be able to eat about a teaspoonful so that there is some hope for me. Possibly by the time I return I shall have developed to such an extent that Briton and I may join forces and organize a "Society for the Proporgation of Marmalade" with a subsidiary one to exploit "his hogwash known to the Canuck as Corn." That would only be decent reciprocity on his part.

RAMBLER.

A Neat Retort.

He was one of the smart men who like to show their cleverness. "Watch me take a rise out of him," he said, as the tramp approached. Then he listened solemnly to the tale of hard luck. "That's the same story you told me the last time you accosted me," he said, when the vagrant had finished. "Is it?" was the answering question. "When did I tell you it?" "Last week." "Maybe I did, maybe I did," admitted the tramp. "I'd forgotten meeting you. I was in prison all last week."

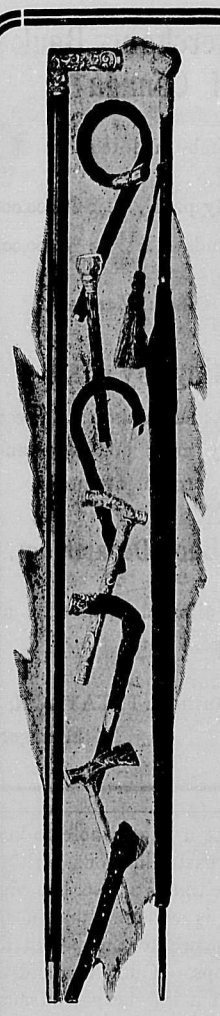
A Misprint.

Jinks—I hear that Cupid is barred at some Summer resorts this season.

Finks—Haven't you an "r" too many in that word "barred"?

"Why did you throw that poet out?"

"I wanted him to learn something about the poetry of motion."



UMBRELLAS

Nothing better to lay up for a rainy day than one of our choice Umbrellas. There's an individuality about our Umbrellas from the fact that we purchase tops in gross lots from manufacturers who make tops only: our handles, too, are purchased in this way—no two handles alike. We assemble them in our own factory, so that an umbrella purchased here is unique — distinctly different from others. Every frame we use is the famous Fox "Paragon"; materials also the highest grade.

Did you every think that an Umbrella is the very thing for an Autumn Birthday or Wedding Gift? You would be pleasantly surprised at our price-reasonableness.

One of the ladies in fancy dress was, though fair enough, a trifle fat, and we will not say that she did not look well out of the thirties. And there spake to her a reporter. "May I ask what character you represent?" Helen of Troy," she answered. "W did you think it was?" "Well," murmured, ungallantly enough, weights and measures confused brain and he gazed on her ample p portions, "I thought you might Helen of Avoirdupois!"

Sporting Comment.

The competition in the Victoria District Football League goes merrily on and every Saturday witnesses an improvement in the play. The result of the games last Saturday developed two surprises on the followers of the game. The defeat of the Fifth Regiment at the hands of the Garrison was entirely unlooked for. The Fifth having defeated their rivals the Saturday previous it was only natural that they should repeat, but much to the surprise of their followers the regulars managed to slip in the odd goal and get the decision. The second surprise was the victory of the James Bay over the Esquimalt team. The majority of the followers of the game of soccer were of the opinion that the boys from the naval village would win, but what they based their opinion on is hard to determine. The Bays had shown that they possessed a well-balanced team which is in good condition and in their previous matches had always made a good showing. They had met and defeated every team in the league with the exception of the Garrison, which they have yet to meet, and as they had strengthened their team from the previous Saturday they should have been the favorites. The Esquimalt team on the other hand had not made such a good showing. A tie was the best they could get with the Y. M. C. A. over which the Bays registered a win by the score of 2—0, and it was only at the last minute that they won from the Fifth Regiment. Under these conditions it is hard to understand why they were selected to win, although after the exhibition they put up it is recognized that they had all the qualifications to win the match except staying abilities. In the first half they made a very brilliant showing and had by far the better of the play and the hopes of their admirers rose when sides were changed with their favorites in the lead. During the first part of the game the Esquimalt boys played good football and had they been in better condition it is hard to say what the result would have been. During this half the Bays were being pressed hard and it was only by the barest fluke that they registered a goal. The Esquimalt boys were always on the ball and showed in their style of handling it that they well understood the game. In the second half, however, after the Bays had been severely criticized by their followers a different aspect was put on the game. From the call of time the Bay forwards played faster football than has been witnessed in Victoria for many a day and they had their opponents powerless. The exhibition they gave during the first portion of the second half was very pleasing, but after scoring two goals in one minute and a half they slackened ofi, but still the Esquimalt boys were unable to prevent them from scoring and another tally was made. The Bay forwards then grew somewhat careless and overlooked some fine chances. It was apparent that they were not exerting themselves and appeared content to let the back division do the work. This is very bad form and if the Bays expect to win the championship they will have to score as often as possible and then one or two goals more. This idea of laying back with one point to the good is a bad thing to do and the management of the Bays should impress on its representatives that they need every point that can be secured. With a little exertion the Bay forward line will give any back division in the league some trouble, but the players should play from the start and not allow their opponents to commence the scoring. The final score of the game was 5—3 in favor of the Bays.

The Garrison in their match against the Fifth showed much better form than they have done on previous occasions this season and their victory was somewhat unexpected. Their playing throughout the game was good and should they improve as rapidly during the next few weeks they will be a decided figure in the race for the league championship. The Fifth Regiment have been very unfortunate this season and it has been a rare occasion on which they have presented their full line up. This certainly has a great deal to do with their failure to win more games, but with matches being played every Saturday it is rather hard to expect the same players to get away to every match. Despite this set-back they are showing great pluck in continuing in the race and it is expected that they will not be last when the season closes.

The team from the Shearwater signalized their first appearance in the District League by defeating the Garrison at Work Point rather handily. The naval team shows great promise and will give all other teams in the league a hard run. The line up is well balanced with hardly a weak spot but several shining lights. From the showing that was made in this match it is expected that the sailors will be well up when the season closes.

According to the reports that are going around the Egeria will place a strong team in the field and with the Shearwater, both should prove hard nuts to crack.

The referees who are appointed to officiate in the regular league fixtures should show their authority by dealing severely with those players who are inclined to indulge in rough-house tactics. Provision is made for this in the rules and there is nothing whatever to prevent the enforcement. Another point that should be attended to is the incessant chatter among the players. Of course some claim it to be impossible to play the game without calling to one's partner, but this is all buncum. In all big matches in the Old Country there is only one person who talks and that is the captain. In addition to this the players are too anxious to claim fouls and from the manner of some it appears as if they think they are refereeing the game as well as playing. The referees are far too lenient and if an example was made of some of those players who are continually yapping in his ear there would be less trouble. It is true that the players have not the same opportunities to practice combination as the players in the Old Country, but still there is no need for them to try and imitate a flock of magpies. By cutting this practice out the players will not only confer a favor on the public but in time will play a much better game. While on this subject it might be pointed out that it is very bad form for members of other teams telling the referee what to do from the side lines. If the referee is not competent to act without advice from the side-line he should be there and it is the duty of the league officials to see that a person is in charge who understands the rules and is prepared to enforce them, but he is not expected to accept the advice of every person who thinks he knows the rules and is continually yelling at him from the side-lines.

The spectators at the match at Oak Bay last Saturday enjoyed a long wait for the game to start. The match was advertised for 2.30, but it was exactly 3 o'clock before the referee put in an appearance. To the credit of both teams it can be said that every player was on the ground ready to play, but lacked the official who was in charge of the match. If this was to happen in the Old Country the referee would be severely fined and as the Victoria District League is affiliated with the English Football association it would not harm any if the provisions of that body were put in force in this city.

The Esquimalt players had the largest number of supporters at the game on Saturday and did considerable rooting for their team. The members of the J. B. A. A. have so far shown very little interest in their team. With their representatives at the head of the league there should be a big turn-out from the club every Saturday afternoon. No matter how good the team is, there is always room for them to receive encouragement and the efforts of the team from the club across the Bay are deserving of better treatment at the hands of the club members.

The members of the Ladies' Hockey club, the Victoria Hockey club, and the Old Victoria United Football team did not overlook the marriage of B. P. Schwengers and Miss Jay and sent handsome presents.

Music and The Drama.

Olga Nethersole.

On Tuesday evening Olga Nethersole appeared at the Victoria Theatre in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." The support she received from her Company may be dismissed in a word—it was indifferent. Aubrey Tanqueray was essayed for the first time by a minor member of the Company who did not even know his lines, and was like a fish out of water all through the play. The part of Helene was rendered ridiculous by the young lady who attempted to walk through it. She was old enough to be Helene's mother and could not disguise the fact. The actor who played Cayley Drummle was a caricature of the capable actors who have previously been seen in the part. He had a cockney accent and his style altogether was more suggestive of Whitechapel than Kensington, but he was funny without knowing why and raised a laugh.

All this, however, could not spoil so powerful a play, nor diminish the force and attractiveness of the portrayal of Paula Tanqueray by Miss Nethersole.

It may at once be conceded that the play is morbid, and people who go to the Theatre only to be amused would be disappointed, but the same objection may be urged against all the dramatic works of Tolstoi, Ibsen, and George Bernard Shaw. Yet they have a great vogue, and by common consent fill a recognized want in the dramatic world. One could not stand a course of such plays, but any student of human nature would find rich food in an occasional visit to any theatre where problem plays are presented. After all it is the human interest in the play which constitutes its fascination.

In criticising the Second Mrs. Tanqueray on the grounds of morbidity or unwholesomeness it must not be forgotten that all the critics, outside Victoria, are agreed that it is Pinero's masterpiece, and as a study in psychology it has few equals. No play, ancient or modern, has a finer moral or a more inevitable and logical conclusion. The gilded vice is never allowed to appear attractive; there is no moment throughout the play when Paula excites longing or desire, the gewgaws and trappings of her profession are always in evidence and differentiate her beyond the possibility of mistake from women of good reputation. The look in her face which always repelled Helene and which rendered close companionship impossible was none the less evident to the audience. In every mind the uppermost thought was, how could any man be such a fool as to tie himself to such a woman, and the further query was ever insistent, how could the man or the woman be fool enough to suppose that they could succeed in rehabilitating Paula's reputation.

Few plays approach the crisis with such certainty and inevitableness. Each act deepens the gloom and renders the impossibility of the task more apparent. Neither the touching friendship of Aubrey's acquaintances, nor the easy toleration of Paula's could avail against the inexorable logic of fact, and the end constitute a fitting climacteric both to poetic justice and dramatic fitness.

In view of local criticism it may here be remarked that Paula deserves no credit for going behind the scenes to die as the critic sapiently suggests. She had to do it because Pinero wrote it so, this by the way.

I said last week that among good judges there was a doubt whether Mrs. Patrick Campbell or Miss Nethersole gave the finer representation of the part. I had not then seen Miss Nethersole as Paula, but based my judgment upon a long acquaintance with her in other parts I said that Mrs. Campbell's study was more psychological, and Miss Nethersole's more human. After seeing her work this must be my final judgment.

There is a touch more of humanity and of pathos in Miss Nethersole's rendering; she touched more hearts and dimmed more eyes. In physique she suffers by comparison with her great predecessor, but her artistic manner, perfect naturalness, and her glorious voice make one forget her shortcomings. There is infinitely more sympathy in her tone, and in the last great scene where the essence of the whole play is compressed into a few pregnant sentences, when seated upon a chair, carelessly drawn up with the back toward the audience she tells Aubrey the truth and depicts in a few vivid sentences the hopelessness of the struggle, she used her magnificent voice with splendid effect, and plumbed a depth of human feeling to which Mrs. Campbell is a stranger.

No one capable of understanding all that is great in dramatic art could fail to appreciate Miss Nethersole's Paula. At the same time I am convinced that her greatest successes have been, and will be scored in other plays. Her art approximates more and more to that of Blanche Walsh, and although she has made Sappho practically her own, the one part of all others which I should like to see her play is, Maslova.

The popular manager of the New Grand, Mr. Jamieson, has been presenting a peculiarly good all-round show this week. I will not venture to name the star turn where all are good. Mr. Elverton has a wonderful spinning act, in which he manipulates brass rods in a truly miraculous manner. Messrs. Morgan & McGarry are singers and dancers, both dressed alike in every detail, and both amusing to the audience; in addition they dance well. It is an unfortunate thing that there are few people in Victoria who understand anything about dancing; I have seen Dan Leno, the recognised champion, and I have no hesitation in saying that the above couple are good. Miles & Raymond present a very amusing sketch in which the "nigger" plays the part of the "baby" excellently; the piece is full of wholesome fun. George A. Noble and Camelia Appy put up the best musical turn I have seen in Victoria. The man has a grand voice and uses it well; the lady plays the 'cello my favourite instrument, well. The last player I heard who was in her class, was Noel Johnson in the Old Country. The "Sully Family" are great. I wouldn't like to discriminate between the two "kiddies," I will only say that they are both good and that their dancing would eclipse the performance of many a grown professional. The sketch in which they appear is amusing, but the real fun comes in when the boys come on the scene.

Before I start criticising the show at Pantages Theatre I want to call the attention of the management to the style of pictures which they have been presenting in "The Illustrated Song." Last week they had an absurdity in the shape of an American soldier, living in Ireland, leaving home to the tune of the bag-pipes. This week the song is badly illustrated this casts no reflection on Mr. La Rose, who nobly does his best to redeem what is sent him on the circuit; still I think that Mr. Ormond would be well advised if he "kicked" on the quality of pictures sent to him. I should like to assure Mr. Charles G. Carrolton that both I and my baldheaded friend have paid our board bill; his turn as a black comedian is sufficiently amusing, and he has managed to put quite a new termination to the old story of the boy who was kept behind by the lady teacher. Gilson & Toland put up a very pretty turn; the lady is dainty and dances well, and her partner is an excellent support, and a good singer. I think that I have seen Edward and Nettie Masse before in Victoria; they have lost nothing of their cunning. Their turn is both extremely comic and extremely clever. As juggling comedians they excel, and I wish that a couple like them would appear every week. The star feature at Pantages Theatre, however, is "The Bell Trio." A high tenor, a baritone and a basso comprise the troupe, and their singing is immense. They sing in part and singly; and they do both well. It is a good thing for all cities to have men come round the music halls and sing good, clean song in right royal style once in a while. It does more to civilise and make a man think of the Old Home than any amount of preaching. To "The Bell Trio" I tender my heartiest compliments, and my best wishes for their future success. The Moving Pictures are good and instructive, but for the benefit of the ignorant I would point out that the plot is as follows—two Germans are seeking plans of a French fort; a woman helps them and then repents, revealing the identity of the foreigners. I make this remark because on Tuesday night there were two men behind men who audibly announced that they couldn't make head or tail of the business, but came to the conclusion that it had something to do with Russia.

Imperial Mothers.

The activity and independence of Colonial children are wonderful; even at the earliest age they become self-reliant, and find out how to shift for themselves. The Colonial mother is undoubtedly fashioned of the same metal as the mother of the Gracchi, and the children are doubtless of the same tempered steel.—The Empire Review.

The British Soldier in India.

A British soldier is fair game in the Delhi bazaar. The very urchins in the gutter abuse him to his face. The British soldier sooner or later will curse his own countrymen, who are such degenerate poltroons that they would take away from the man who guards the country the right of vigorous self-defence in a private quarrel.—Capital, Calcutta.

Awakening Orient.

The calm, disdainful East of the poet, which let the legions thunder past, has gone for ever. In its place is steadily rising an East alive to all the industrial and social problems of the day, an East which, immemorially aware of the truth that man cannot live by bread alone, is now awaking to the equally powerful truth that philosophy, however exalted, will not feed a nation.—Englishman, Calcutta.

Where Daughters Marry Well.

The fear that a sound education cannot be easily acquired in the Dominion prevents many well-educated Englishmen with families from settling in a land which provides more and better opportunities for giving boys a start in life and marrying daughters well than any other country on the face of the globe. But this is a groundless fear. In point of fact, Canada, is one of the best-educated countries in the world.—Canada.

"Scrap" Heap Yachts.

Sir Thomas Lipton is entitled to the gratitude of all British yachtsmen for his attempt to make lead and canvas cup-hunting machines ineligible for international racing. The most virtuous class in the country is the great middle class; they are about as good-living people as you will find anywhere in the world.—Bishop of Norwich, in the Christian Commonwealth.

A Terrible Experience.

A Lutonian has had a weird experience. He spent an afternoon in a cornfield, and became smothered with ants. When the time came for him to take the train back to his native town the irritation was unbearable, and as soon as he found the seclusion of a railway carriage he divested himself of his clothing and shook the garments vigorously out of the window. Unfortunately, while he was doing so the train entered a tunnel, and the wall caught an important garment and tore it from its owner's hand. The luckless man, free of ants, but void of necessary clothes, waited until the train stopped at the next station, and then plunged from the carriage into the waiting-room. The officials, horror-stricken, flew in pursuit, but when they heard the man's story their indignation merged into sympathy, and they provided him with garments, in which he was able to continue his journey.

Five Brothers as Doctors.

In presenting the medals and prizes to the students at Charing Cross Hospital, the Earl of Kilmorey referred to the fact that three brothers named Hallinan had carried off nine prizes between them. The headmaster of Archbishop Tenison's Schools, where they were educated, told him that there were five brothers Hallinan destined for the medical profession.

Nulli Secundus.

Unquestionably the event of the week was the successful voyage of the British War Office airship Nulli Secundus—a full account of the remarkable achievement will be found in our news columns—on Saturday last from Aldershot to London. The airship made a trip of fifty miles in the air, and a part of the while a speed of twenty-four miles an hour was maintained. The culminating point of the trip was the sail round St. Paul's Cathedral. We have recently been reading so much about the performances of the French airship La Patrie, of Count Zeppelin's "dirigible" over Lake Constance, that we had begun to fear that this country was being left behind in the battle of the air. In both Germany and France experiments have been taking place for many years, and I recollect seeing Count Zeppelin's monster airship in its shed on Lake Constance over seven years ago. The Balloon Section of the Royal Engineers may well be proud of their achievement. Although practically newcomers in the field of aerial flight, their vessel fully deserves its title "second to none." Needless to say, during its sojourn in the grounds of the Crystal Palace the airship has attracted many thousands of sightseers.

Claim for £20,000 Damages.

One of the most noteworthy cases to be heard during the approaching Michaelmas sittings of the Law Courts is indicated by the brief entry in the list, "Atherton v. Yarde-Buller." This is an action for breach of promise of marriage, in which £20,000 is claimed as damages.

The defendant is the Hon. John Yarde-Buller, M.V.O., son and heir-apparent of Lord Churston, and late an officer in the Guards, who was recently married to Miss Denise Orme, the well-known actress. He is thirty-three years of age.

Mrs. Atherton, the plaintiff, is a sister of Sir Aubrey Deane Paul, and was divorced last year by her husband, Colonel Atherton, the present defendant being the co-respondent. Mrs. Atherton's marriage took place in 1892.

Notice.

"LOOKOUT FOR THE "SLUSH DODGER," the new patent safety convertible Life-boat-Airship which will shortly start running on Government street between the Brown Jug and the Imperial Bank, calling at the Grotto, Trounce Alley on the voyage for Oil and Things. Fare, 15 cents, or the round trip can be made for two bits if paid before reaching the Grotto.

An experienced pilot will be engaged as Coxswain. Applications for this post should be made to the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Secretary of the Navy League, or TO THE EDITOR OF THE COLONIST.

Season tickets available for six weeks or two years, OR UNTIL GOVERNMENT STREET IS REPAVED, will be issued at a reduction.

The Imperial Bank on the arrival of the Slush Dodger will cash the cheques of the passengers, who have got any money there. HURROO! FOR "THE SLUSH DODGER."

The New Grand.

The feature act on a strong bill arranged for next week will be J. Royer West and Ida Van Siclen in a novel comedy musical act, and the other numbers will include The Sharrocks, in a comedy sketch and mind reading; Wilbur Amos, comedy juggler and plate manipulator; the American Trio, in a character comedy playlet, "The Bell Boy"; Jessie Livingston, singing comedienne; Thos. J. Price, a new ballad singer, in the Illustrated Song, "In After Years When I Am Old"; New Moving Pictures, and selections from Flotow's "Martha," by the orchestra.

Pantages Theatre.

For the week commencing Nov. 4, 1907, Pantages Theatre will present Herr Jensen, the renowned magician and illusionist; the great "Kelter," the king of the slack wire in a wonderful act; Al Watson & Co., three people, in their laughing success, "The Dog Catcher"; Hardie Langdon, character singer and entertainer; Tommy La Rose, Song Illustrator, and Pantagescope in new motion pictures.

The Week is indebted to T. N. Hibben and Co. for a splendid street map of Victoria. It is on a large scale, is distinctly legible, and shews the latest sub-divisions.

Lovely Fiji.

Perhaps no possession is less known to the bulk of the British public than the island colony of Fiji. One steams in from the blue Pacific in the early morning, confronted by a high mountain peak, bare and gaunt towards the summit, based by forest growths of beautiful greens, its shores edged by graceful coconut palms merging into the swell of the ocean, whose white waves break on the coral reef.

Such colour! Hedges of hibiscus nodding full scarlet heads at us, gorgeously tinted crotons, mosses and ferns massing in the ditches, on the walls of fences, peeps of bright salvia bushes gay with yellow blooms unknown to us, a house swathed charmingly in a robe of glowing gold convolvulus, and everywhere stately crimson dracoenas, bamboos, palms. Ch! such colour and such luxuriance of life!

The islands of Fiji, in number some two hundred, cover an area of 7,433 square miles, an area greater than that of the British West Indies, and hold a population of 2,675 Europeans, 1,649 half-castes, 25,952 Indians, 2,047 Polynesians, 2,281 Rotumans, 452 classed as "Others," and 86,816 Fijians, in all a total of 121,872, and with this the colony is but partly developed.

The writer was present at a social function in Suva, the capital, on Viti Levu, an island of the size of Jamaica. At this were assembled over three hundred children, and a healthier, sturdier crowd of little ones could not be seen. There was every reason to judge that Fiji is a white man's land, which, instead of having under three thousand, should be peopled by ten times the number of Britishers.

WOMAN,

VICTIM OF HER OWN GENEROSITY.

By Nora Laugher.

Even in this enlightened twentieth century of ours, woman in political and professional life is not considered upon an equality with man. The ancient theory of her mental and moral inferiority to man has hardly turned. It must eventually turn like many other popular beliefs into a popular fallacy.

The dependent position of woman in the earlier ages, through the laws of heredity, still shows itself conspicuously, even in countries where she is allowed almost the same freedom and privileges as man. I say "almost" because woman is not allowed the same rights and privileges as man. It is rightly held that woman should be good morally, but the loose morals and customs of to-day—laws made by man—indicate that man be as immoral as he chooses. Woman, in her unselfishness allows this law to remain, thus making her the victim of her own generosity. I maintain that man is as truly bound to a life of purity as a woman; that the written law of purity should be as necessary for him as for her. Why should the selfishness of man predominate as it does to-day in its injustice of punishing the woman and letting the man go free? This injustice to woman is the hardest and most heartless evil of the age. It contradicts the principles of all true religion and human nature; it owes its source, its birth, to the selfishness of man.

In Judea a woman was arraigned for a certain act. "Shall we stone her, according to the law?" cried the Pharisees. "Let him only who is without sin stone her," was the just reply of the Nazarene, who lived far in advance of his day. No stones were thrown, and if this rule had become the law of the earth woman would have had infinitely more justice. To-day the stoning of woman has ceased, but the guilty woman is cast out of society, she is stoned figuratively, while the man is loved and petted.

The old Persians used to place the guilty man and woman into a sack and throw them into the river and drown them together; they showed more justice than do the Christians to-day; they never punished the woman without punishing the man.

The Egyptians used to behead them both upon the same block at the same time, but to the shame of our Christian countries, the woman who is the weaker vessel physically—is beheaded while the man goes free.

This injustice, I affirm, springs from the selfishness of man and the generosity of woman.

Woman's unselfishness owes its origin to her dependence upon man. From the earliest time woman has looked up to man as a stronger and nobler character than herself; this dependence upon man has tutored her to greater fortitude and self-sacrifice than he, by reason of his earlier freedom and independence will ever be capable of feeling or expressing in the same degree. His selfishness, as her unselfishness, is hereditary.

Doubtless Adam commanded Eve to give him the apple (the Bible does not tell us), and she obeyed him. But Adam was not brave enough to tell the Lord that he had ordered Eve to give the fruit to him. Instead of bravery and unselfishness, he showed cowardice and selfishness in his reply, "The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree and I did eat." The woman, even then full of fear, braved it out by stating the simple truth, "The serpent beguiled me and I did eat." Observe, she did not say "Adam ate, too." She only said "I did eat."

It is a strange thing that when a man is overtaken in wrongdoing he is invariably ashamed and almost speechless, but a woman always becomes bold and in some cases indignant. This is perhaps because a woman lives in extremes. She is always either better or worse than man.

A woman lives, moves and has her being in extremes. Yet of all classes, from the purest and highest type to the lowest and wickedest of her sex, self-denial and fortitude to endure suffering for the sake of the man she loves is inherent in her. Take from a woman whatever you will, but you cannot rob her of her unselfishness. She may become unsexed; she may lose her true charm of femininity, her beauty, her modesty, her purity; but self-denial for the object of her love or veneration will always assert itself.

How ably does Shakespeare, in his character of Lady Macbeth, illustrate this, as "holding the mirror up to nature," he shows us woman in all her ambition, woman in all her courage, woman in all her wickedness; yet this great master of the human heart does not allow her, co-murderess though she is, to lose the true charm of her womanhood by curtailing her one good trait—unselfishness.

In Macbeth we have a brave soldier, but a weak moralist. Perhaps his warrior's lion-heart somewhat blinds us to the extraordinary weakness and selfishness of his moral character.

While the undaunted Lady Macbeth cried, "Infirm of purpose, give me the dagger," her husband's morbid imagination and selfishness was conjuring up all the ills that cowardflesh is heir to.

These morbid fancies appeared to weigh Macbeth with all the punishment of guilt he was capable of feeling; he was too utterly selfish to entertain remorse, and he knew no fear whatever of a heavenly justice.

"We still have justice here," he observed, but yet his faith in this, as in almost everything else, bade him fall a ready victim to his wife's suggestions, showing him as he fondly hoped, a way to the king's assassination without detection; and he replied, "I am settled and bound up each corporal agent to this terrible feat."

Perhaps never has atheism, with all its utter blackness and despair, been more faithfully depicted than in Shakespeare's delineation of Macbeth, carried out, as it is, to the end when "like a man he died."

Unlike his wife, Macbeth never dreamed of retribution; his soul was unlit by her better and nobler thoughts, and darkened instead by an almost devilish, preternatural belief in the evil spirits, conjured up by his own disordered brain, and whose awful power showed their supreme sway so clearly over his weak mind.

Dealing in Death and Mischief, the two things Macbeth appeared to have a perfect belief in, these awful shapes "which might appal the Devil," came to his side in the fogs and rains, in the lightning's flash, amid the thunder's roll; as whatever and whenever they choose, "melting like breath into the wind."

The character of Lady Macbeth is totally the opposite of her husband's. Wicked as she undoubtedly was, her's was infinitely the higher nature of the two, because it was her unselfishness that caused her to fearlessly dare crime for his sake. The crown that she covetted, and blackened her own soul in the attempt to gain, was to adorn the brow of the brave soldier, the man she loved; her ambition and interpidity was for him alone.

With what heartfelt sorrow she exclaimed, "All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand," as in a state of somnambulism, caused by her remorse, she walked candle in hand into the presence of the doctor and her attendant.

Unlike Macbeth, whose only desire was to "hold fast the mortal sword" and become "a devil more damned in evils," the unspeakable grief of their joint crimes not bringing happiness to her husband, and an ever-gnawing repentance to her woman's heart, caused her to put an end to her life.

Macbeth, grown more cruel and hard, whined hourly over his own afflictions, and having none of the leaven of his wife's unselfishness to "raze out the written troubles of the brain," and sharing none of her remorse "to cleanse the stuffed bosom of the perilous stuff which weighs upon the heart;" with all the spirit of a true warrior desired to die in harness, yet with his strange notion of death and eternity exclaiming:

"All our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle,
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his weary hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

No author, it seems to me, since the days of Shakespeare, be he dramatist, poet or novelist, has done more in portraying self-sacrifice and courage of woman, as compared with weakness and moral cowardice of man, than Hawthorne, in his sublime illustration of the noble-hearted Hester Prynee and the puny, inferior nature of Arthur Dimsdale.

Here we find the highest form of unselfishness in woman, and the meanest and most contemptible of all evils, hypocrisy, in man, in the sin acknowledged and the sin concealed. That is sin-concealed until the remorse-stricken man could bear it no longer.

Take the first scene of this wonderful life-drama, one of the truest ever written: Here was the old-fashioned marketplace of the Puritan settlement, where all the townspeople of Boston were assembled to gaze at this woman, set up in public shame upon the scaffold of the pillory; her infant, the object of their scorn, clasped tightly and tenderly to her breast.

"Speak out the name," they cried, "that thy repentance may avail to take the Scarlet Letter off thy breast."

"Never," replied Hester, "it is too deeply branded, ye cannot take it off, and would that I might endure his agony as well as mine."

"Speak, woman, speak," they cried, "and give your child a father."

What heroic determination, what womanly self-denial is then displayed in her brave reply:

"I will not speak, and my child must seek a Heavenly Father; she shall never know an earthly one."

"She will not speak," murmured the agitated young minister, Mr. Dimsdale, who, with his hand upon his heart, hung breathlessly upon the result of the appeal. "Oh, wondrous strength and generosity of a woman's heart! She will not speak!"

She will not speak! Those four words, solemnly, breathlessly uttered by the minister, sum up all the love, the faithfulness, the courage, the unselfishness of the woman; the weakness, the cowardice, the hypocrisy, the selfishness of the man.

There she stood, the victim upon the scaffold of the Puritan pillory. Those in righteous judgment over her might destroy her body, might torture her soul; but she would not betray the name of the man she loved. And she did not speak.

Oh, woman's wonderful love! Oh, unselfishness, greatest and best of gifts! Thou art the key-note of heavenly harmony, thy soul-stirring voice revives the dying heart, instilling it with greater fearlessness in the courage of daring to live.

Thus, in this beautiful romance, Hester Prynne took the whole of the shame, the burden of the suffering upon her own brave shoulders, showing by her noble self-sacrifice an angelic determination to save, at any cost to herself, the saintly name of the man, who pale and trembling, stood most prominently upon the judgment seat of the marketplace.

Surely no soul could be more thoroughly cleansed from its sin than that of this true woman by reason of the generosity of her heart.

To this I seem to find answer in the dying words of Arthur Dimsdale, "God knows and He is merciful."

PLANNING TO BUILD.

I want you to write for my new Book "COUNTRY AND SUBURBAN HOMES." It is especially prepared for prospective home builders and is full of valuable, practical and useful information on the subject. Each residence is illustrated by half-tone plates of the original, showing exactly how the building will look when completed. There are complete descriptions of each home and accurate estimates of cost. This book will cost you nothing, but will be worth a great deal of money to you. Write to-day. I prepare at low cost special designs and plans for new work or for remodelling old buildings.

On Friday of last week a farewell dance was given by the many friends for Miss Beatrice Gaudin on the eve of her departure for Vancouver. The supper table was very tastefully decorated by the Misses Hickey, Johnstone, Drake, Irving, Moresby, Lawson; scarlet being the predominating colour. A streamer of scarlet fastened by a bow at opposite corners with dahlies, salvia and dainty sprigs of trailing greenery with candle shades of crimson gave a very cosy effect the supper room. Miss Heater and support supplied the music for the evening. Among the many friends of Miss Gaudin, who gathered to bid her au revoir were the Misses Hickey, King, Lawson, E. Browne, Johnstone, Mason, Monteith, Newcombe, Newling, Blakemore, Little, Perry, Heyland, Moresby, Irving, Gillespie, Eberts, Page, Loenholn, Mrs. Courtney, Miss Blackwood, Mrs. Johnstone, Mrs. Hickey, Mrs. D. Janion, Mr. Janion, Mrs. McCauley, Mrs. Gardulo, Messrs. Wilby, Meredith, Mason, Monteith, Lawson, Ward, Prior, Moresby, Caine, Rithet, Gillespie, McDougal, Wright, Hagerty, Hall, McKay, Brown, Fraser, Berington, Bridgman, Scott, Bray and Eaves.

When Mr. T. Benjamin Bogg
Arrived on the wharf in a fog,
He said: "Will you tell
Me the best Hotel?"
They all answered "THE POODLE DOG."

This most popular of Victoria's hostelries presents all the varied attractions and comforts that go to make up a complete and modern resort hotel. Its proprietors have well studied the desires of their patrons and have gradually added to the attractions of the house until they feel that nothing now remains undone that would tend to add to the pleasure and comfort of the guests.

The Poodle Dog cuisine has been universally lauded by transient visitors from coast to coast.
