A Provincial Election

ALTHOUGH the date of the Provincial Election has been postponed, this is only for a short time, and within a few days the campaign will have begun in earnest. The delay in publishing the Premier's manifesto somewhat narrows the field in which useful comment may be made, but there are several outstanding features which are not affected by the delay. The first is that in spite of the War and the almost universal opinion against the holding of Elections before its conclusion, Premier McBride has seen fit to make an exception in the case of British Columbia. For this he has been criticised by the Liberal press, and no doubt there are thousands of Conservatives who are just as much disinclined for an election as the Liberals. The Premier must justify his action in making this departure, and until he has had an opportunity of doing so, it is impossible to say whether the reasons which impel him are sufficiently weighty to commend his decision to the general public. It is not conceivable that during such a crisis as the present a man who has shown himself above all things to be patriotic and Imperial should precipitate an election for the mere purpose of party gain. Such a course would be unjustifiable and would undoubtedly recoil upon any Minister who adopted it. There must be weighty reasons, and it is not difficult to conjecture that the course upon which Premier McBride has decided is one dictated by the urgent necessities of the times, rather than by political expediency. Sir Richard has never shown himself lacking in courage. Whatever other faults he may have, he has never shown himself unwilling to "face the music," or to take the most constitutional method of doing so. There are important enterprises, to the completion of which the Province stands committed. There may be a difference of opinion as to the best means of insuring their speedy completion. In such a case the people must be the arbiters, and to seek a mandate from them is the most constitutional course to follow. The Premier has stated that the appeal to the constituencies is expedited by war conditions. This is true in a double sense, for war conditions have not only reacted on the financial market in an unprecedented manner, but they have raised the question of Coast defence for British Columbia in an acute form. It is true that this is a matter for the Dominion Government, but the criticism which scouts the idea of the Province having any special interest in the subject is surely wide of the mark, and while it is true that the prerogative of acting rests with the Dominion Government, it is equally true that on this, as on many other matters entirely within its control a Provincial right of representation and appeal exists and has frequently been invoked. Those who think that there is no room for a Provincial representation on this subject are either ill-posted as to the facts or do not fully understand their significance. Even if the danger of German bombardment has past, it is not too soon to consider future contingencies, the importance of which are emphasized by the latest despatches from the Orient. Then it seems to The Week that there is at least one other important matter of policy, on which any Minister who is responsible for the conduct of the business of this Province would desire to have his hands strengthened at the present time. This is a Province still in the pioneer stages—a Province which, under the McBride administration, has launched great enterprises and has initiated a general system of development, under which it has become a large borrower, to the end that its great natural resources may be more speedily developed. There are some who think it is time to call a halt. There are others who believe that the best policy lies in continuing development to the fullest extent for which it is possible to secure the necessary funds. These are two distinct policies, and it is for the electors to say which they prefer. In furnishing the opportunity it can hardly be urged that the Premier is acting unconstitutionally or even ill-advisedly, especially as his administration has entered upon its last year. These are the considerations which, in the opinion of The Week, should be weighed in determining one's attitude in the matter of the Elections, and it can hardly be doubted that they have been fully considered by the Premier before he arrived at a decision which he must have known would be unpopular even with many of his own party at the present time, and which he would hardly have reached without the most cogent reasons.

The Progress of the War

THE most important events of the past week are the successful bombardment of the Dardanelles and the retreat of General Hindenburg's army from the Niemen. The former is progressing satisfactorily day by day. The greatest land forts in the world are being demolished by the guns of the Princess Elizabeth and her sister War ships. At the moment of writing the biggest forts in the narrow part of the Straits are being reduced, and in the opinion of naval experts the Dardanelles may be clear to the fleets of the Allies by the end of the present month. This stupendous undertaking, with consequences so momentous, as to be almost incalculable has excited the interest and admiration of the world, and has demonstrated in a manner more conclusive than anyone could have anticipated the efficiency of the super-dreadnought. The retreat of General Hindenburg, who is once more hastening to the lines of defence which he originally constructed among the Mazurian Lakes, was fully anticipated by the military experts when the Russian armies were retreating to the Niemen. However much that retreat may have been a necessity of the moment, it was certain to lead to a resumption of the strategy which the Russians had on previous occasions resorted to with such success. Indeed ever since the commencement of the War there has not been a single Russian retreat which has not led to a "come-back" disastrous to the German forces. Whatever the outcome may be when the Russian armies assume a general offensive, it is certain that their policy of attrition has reduced the German and Austrian strength to a far greater extent than anyone anticipated. While there is no general forward movement at the moment on either frontier, there is abundant evidence that all the Armies are making ready for a general movement, which, however, is not likely to commence for at least a month. Meanwhile, the probability that Italy, Roumania and Greece will join the Allies is daily increasing, and may now be regarded as a certainty.

The Ministerial Resignation

AFTER serving the Province for four years in the dual capacity of Minister of Finance and Minister of Agriculture, the Honourable Price Ellison has resigned both portfolios. The immediate cause of his resignation was a political attack based upon certain transactions in cattle, which the Minister had purchased from the Colony Farm. The details are too well known to need recapitulation, and it is a matter of general regret that the circumstances should have necessitated the resignation of a Minister who is universally esteemed, and to whom the press of both parties has paid a high tribute. There is general agreement that while Mr. Ellison's transactions may have been unwise from the standpoint of public policy, they did not involve any suggestion of personal dishonesty, or in any way detract from the high reputation for integrity which he has enjoyed in this Province for many years. This is the testimony of Liberals and Conservatives alike. The Week has no doubt that it is a view which will be endorsed by Mr. Ellison's constituents.

Intelligent Criticism

A FORTNIGHT ago "The Yellow Ticket" was staged at the Royal Victoria Theatre. It was a clever play, well written, admirably staged and well played. Yet it attracted small audiences and received scant courtesy at the hands of the local daily press. It is safe to say that as a stage presentation it was infinitely better than nine-tenths of the plays seen in Victoria, and really reached a fairly high standard of dramatic representation. Yet the critics could find little to say about it except that it touched on the "White Slave" problem, and that there was a period of about three minutes, during which the incidents were "unwholesome." This is not criticism, nor does it do justice to the play. It was, in no sense, a "White Slave" play, although it dealt with a phase of the social evil in a manner characteristic of Russian life. The real objection to the play is that it represents a condition of affairs which no longer exists in the Russian Empire, and that especially in view of the friendly attitude of the Czar towards the Jewish race, as evidenced by his pronouncement at the outbreak of the War, a play which depicted the most sordid conditions of the past could hardly have been expected to appeal to a people who, at the moment, are in friendly alliance with Russia. Anyone who could forget the obvious lesson of the play and regard its dramatic features only, must have found it thoroughly enjoyable and entertaining, but as a propaganda it was open to strong objection on the grounds mentioned.

An Excellent Service

THE WEEK has pleasure in calling attention to the movement just started in Victoria by two of our most respected citizens for the cheaper circulation of English and American periodicals. The idea is simple and should be effective. Roughly it means that for five cents one may have the use of any one of a long list of the best illustrated periodicals for twenty-four hours, after which they are passed on to the next subscriber. This is a clear saving of ten cents, at least to the person who is content to use the periodical and has no desire to retain it permanently. In all, some thirty or forty periodicals and magazines are covered by the service which will undoubtedly be popular and should tend to a much wider circulation of English publications.

That Parker Williams may be a candidate in Victoria if the Socialists have their way.

That it is a pity so good a man should run to certain defeat.

That in any event A. J. Morley will be a candidate—but not as before, on the Liberal ticket.

That business cannot be so very bad in Victoria when twelve new eight-cylinder Cadillacs can be sold in one month.

That additional police supervision is badly wanted in a place that shall be nameless but should be easily recognized by the authorities.

To the Anglo-Saxon, Celtic, and Roman races all that is denoted by the word "spying" is abhorrent. Among the Prussians alone is spying regarded as an honourable profession. It is no exaggeration to say that every German is a potential spy and pimp. This glorification of the pimp is a measure of the degradation to which Prussian militarism has reduced what was once believed to be a great nation.

THE SALUTE

(By Frank Ellis) He was a British sailor, And he stood the decks between, And Duty came and called him, With smiling face and mien, Said Duty, "Are you ready? You may have to fight and die." And he touched his cap, saluting, And answered, "Aye, sir, aye!"

He was a British sailor, And the guns were booming loud, And Danger came and spoke to him, He stood erect and proud, Said Danger, "Are you ready To put ease and safety by?" And he touched his cap, saluting, And answered, "Aye, sir, aye!"

He was a British sailor, And the foe her shots got home, And Death came near and spoke to him, The ship reeled thro' the foam, And Death said "Are you ready For the death that sailors die?" And he touched his cap, saluting, And answered, "Aye, sir, aye!"

He was a British sailor, And the ship was settling fast, And the sailor's God came near to him, And spoke to him—the last, And God said, "Are you ready To meet Eternity?" And he bowed his knee, saluting, And answered, "Aye, sir, aye!"

EXCHANGE NORMAL

Information has been received that the Sterling Exchange with the United Kingdom has now become normal, and the additional commission of two pence per pound sterling, formerly charged on all Money Orders, payable in the United Kingdom, has been discontinued.

The restriction limiting the amount of Money Orders on the United Kingdom that could be issued to the same person on the same day to $100 has also been removed.

The exchange of Money Orders with France, which was suspended on the 7th August, 1914, has been re-opened, and Money Orders will be issued under the same conditions and at the same rates of commission as formerly.

Prominent members of the Navy League smile quietly to themselves as they listen to the band that now plays in Trafalgar Square to stimulate recruiting. For the Navy League pleaded hard with the authorities to allow music at the base of Nelson's column on each succeeding Trafalgar Day in order to attract men to the Fleet, but permission was never forthcoming.

"Yes, your reverence, I did, but—but I had only the price of one."

BY THE LOUNGER

A HIGHLY valued subscriber to The Week, in renewing his subscription, has written a very entertaining letter, which the Circulation Manager, not being a contributor to our pages, has handed over to me. After speaking in complimentary terms of The Week and stating that he has no intention of discontinuing his subscription, and incidentally enclosing a cheque, he goes on to say that this is done conditionally, and that unless the conditions can be complied with, the cheque is to be returned. The condition is: "That you will refrain from using the word 'English' when 'British' is meant, and that you will also use the word 'Britain' and 'Brito' instead of 'England' and 'Anglo.'" The misuse of these words, while they may appeal to the national vanity of Englishmen, are a direct slight on the other nationalities which go to make up the British Empire. We are all Britons, but not all Englishmen. With regard to my own native country—Scotland, the misuse of these words is more than a slight. It is a direct insult, implying, as it does, that Scotland is a conquered Province of England. The Treaty of Union 1707 provides in its first article that the two countries of Scotland and England shall be called forever after "Great Britain." To ignore this most momentous Treaty would be to treat it as a "scrap of paper." The misuse of the above words is completely inadmissible and to me extremely obnoxious. I have given this quotation at full length, in order than my readers may know how some good Scotchman feel on the subject. It is surely unnecessary to point out that in continuing to use the words "England" and "Anglo," no reflection is intended on our brother Scot. The highest authorities have agreed that in spite of the Treaty of 1707, these terms may still be used in ordinary conversation or writing, without any impropriety, because they are used in a comprehensive sense. Some of Scotland's greatest poets and writers have continued to use them, and these at any rate cannot be accused of an intentional slight upon their fellow countrymen. I have no doubt the editor of The Week will go as far as possible, in order to meet the wishes of our subscriber, but that it will be possible to comply with his request, literally, I very much doubt. How, for instance, would he himself appreciate the term "The Brito Saxon race"?

I am a great eater of apples. I like the best, and I like to buy them as cheaply as possible. This combination of requirements has often led me to wonder why it is sometimes difficult to get apples of first quality in Victoria, and also why they are so dear. During a recent visit to Vancouver, I have come near to solving the problem, and am bound to confess that the solution has occasioned me much surprise. It came about in this wise. Passing down Granville Street, I saw some very fine New Town Pippins, such as were recently on sale in Victoria at $2.00 a box. They were marked $1.25, and were imported from Washington State. Now I imagine that the freight and duty on these apples from Seattle to Victoria would be precisely the same as from Seattle to Vancouver. Then why should there be such a difference in the retail price? A spirit of curiosity led me to carry my enquiries further, when I learned that there is in Vancouver a certain firm which makes a speciality of handling American fruit. This firm recently imported a number of carloads of the best grade Washington apples at 30c a box. No wonder, therefore, that after paying duty and freight, they can sell them in Vancouver at $1.25 retail and make a good profit for wholesaler and retailer. To my surprise, I was informed that the American commission agents make a slaughter market of Vancouver, and that fruit is not governed by the dumping clauses of Mr. Fielding's Act, because there is no standard price in the country of origin. One would think that this matter could be dealt with by the Government, but if not, it is certain that fruit growing can hardly become a profitable industry in British Columbia, and as the American commission agents care nothing for the price which the surplus produce realizes, they will carry on the game as long as they are allowed. This is certainly "one in the eye" for our fruit growers.

I cannot refrain this week from saying a word or two on a subject which has been brought under my notice in an impressive manner. I refer to the good work being done throughout the Province by Women's Institutes. Of their technical work, I know very little except that they are hives of industry, and that they take a deep practical interest in securing expert lecturers and furnishing reliable instruction to the young women and such of the older ones as need it. There is, however, a phase of their work which appeals to me strongly, and when I find ladies of education and culture, some of them graduates of our best universities, with honourable degrees attached to their names, taking an active part in this work, I realize that it rests on a substantial basis. I refer more particularly to the concerted effort to render life in rural districts less monotonous. There is a universal cry: "Back to the land," but there has been a universal movement away from the land. The glamour of the cities attracts our young people, and we are bemoaning the fact that farming is neither as popular or progressive as the demands of the country require. There may be many reasons for this, but among them, I am sure, one of the most potent is the dullness and drabness of life in an average rural settlement, or a scattered agricultural district. Among the many excellent things aimed at by the Women's Institutes, to relieve this is one of the most praiseworthy, and it is meeting with success.

WILLIAM BLAKEMORE.....President and Editor

Victoria—A City Asleep

By Wilson Macdonald

THESE are two Canadian cities at whose doors opportunity has knocked loudly and often, but in vain. Halifax, the Sleeping City of the East, and Victoria, the Sleeping City of the West, are these two couches of civic lethargy. There is no reason today (and there was never any reason in the past) why Victoria and Halifax should not be the key cities of the two Canadian Coasts.

If the City of Victoria had welcomed her opportunities with the zeal of Saskatoon, Edmonton or Regina, she would stand today one of the mightiest forces on the Great West Land.

The greatest asset which a city can possess is a congenial climate. Saskatoon advanced, not because of her long winters, but in spite of her long winters. Winnipeg struggled up to the sunny slope of prosperity with the icy fingers of the North about her throat. Montreal stole a march on the ancient city of Quebec as the latter city lay dreaming of her past achievements. But Victoria, the city that never knew a frown of the gods, that never saw the spectre of the snow in her path, has been long asleep and the hands of opportunity have grown weary at her doors. What sunny slope on Mount Olympus ever knew the magical charm of the climate of Victoria, what cup of Ganymede, stained with purple wine, ever surpassed the beverage borne to her lips by the maid of the North Pacific. She has mixed California's sunshine and the vigor of the Great North into a health-giving brew, and in her hands is new life for the countless weary hosts of the tempest-tossed lands.

San Diego enervates, Los Angeles robs you of ambition, San Francisco is a pendulum betwixt fire and ice, Vancouver lies too long under her winter canopy of smoke, but Victoria sits upon a throne where neither storm nor flood nor cold nor heat have power to disturb her repose.

And I say that if the fire that burns in the breasts of the civic fathers of many a Prairie city burned for one day in the souls of Victoria's "Pink Tea Councillors," this city would find herself the Mecca of the Western World and the very darling of song and story on the lips of the whole West.

In a few hours the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be open and San Francisco will be a vortex that sucks in the wealth of the pleasure-loving world. And if Victoria were not a "city asleep" she would have doubled her appropriation this year for publicity instead of curtailing it. But the governors of this city, being of somnambulistic nature, have reduced the dose of medicine because hard times has made their city sick. If Victoria spent $10,000 last year in publicity, she should spend $30,000 this year. It is not her burden to do so, but, rather, her opportunity. With proper literature; with a special edition of one of her local papers, superb of garnishment and richly veined with description, she should fairly flood the City of the Golden Gate. And her reward would be such an influx of pilgrims, each with the pleasure-seeker's pot of gold in his hand, as no city in Canada was ever before called upon to entertain.

I have seen all the cities of the Coast, and, speaking from an artist's standpoint, I would crown Victoria, Portland and San Diego with the first crown of loveliness. And of the three, Victoria stands supremely first, because she energizes while the Southern cities enervate, and the first law of beauty is the vigor to assimilate that beauty.

How long shall Victoria continue her siesta. The problem of unemployment is on her hands, and here is the answer: The open pocket-book of a wealthy tourist public can be fairly poured upon this city if present parsimony does not cover the light of this glorious city under a bushel.

Out of the mouths of fools sometimes comes wisdom, and, although I am a poet and artist and know little of the ways of the counting house, yet many times in the past has the word of a poet fanned the sleeping fires of a leggard commercialism into flame.

Waken up, Victoria! The roosters have been crowing at you since dawn, and it is now high noon.

THE WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB held their semi-monthly meeting last Tuesday afternoon, when an extremely interesting paper on India was read by Dr. Annie McKenzie Cleland, M. D. "India and her place in the Empire," was the subject of Dr. Cleland's address, her paper proving one of the most suitable, as well as interesting and instructive, that has been heard before the Canadian Club this winter. It was all too short, and it is to be hoped that Dr. Cleland will again address the Club and give her audience a little more of her personal experiences among the ladies behind the purdah, among whom she mingled as a medical woman in a land where so much suffering is rife among women and girls through lack of medical assistance. Miss Eva Hart very kindly sang two charming songs which were greatly appreciated by those present.

The marriage took place at Christ Church Cathedral, on Tuesday, March 2nd, of Lieut. Richard Cecil Hoyle, 5th Regiment, R.C.G.A., elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hoyle, recently of London, England, and Lillian Winnifred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grubb, Victoria. The Bishop of Kootenay officiated. The bride, who wore her traveling dress, was given away by her father. Miss Kathleen Grubb acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Aubore Hoyle as best man. The bridegroom expects to leave shortly for the West Indies on active service.

Members of the press gallery of the Legislature were entertained at luncheon on Tuesday by the honorary president, the Hon. W. J. Bowser, K.C., Attorney-General. Besides the pressmen, there were also in attendance the Premier, Sir Richard McBride; Mr. Speaker Eberts and the Hon. W. R. Ross. The function proved thoroughly enjoyable, and the members of the gallery much appreciated the thoughtfulness and generosity which prompted the Attorney-General to arrange the luncheon.

Last Friday evening and Saturday afternoon a dinner dance and dansante was held at the Empress Hotel. Mr. Bowlby and the Misses Bodwell and McBride gave charming interpretations of the one-step, hesitation, maxixe, and fox trot. On Wednesday evening a supper dance was given on which occasion Mr. Bowlby was joined by his usual partner, Miss Le Grand. A dansante will be held in the ballroom this afternoon.

A meeting of the United Service Club, I. O. D. E., was held on Tuesday at the Temple Building, when an amount of routine business was transacted. It was reported that the club-rooms were now open from 4 to 10 p. m. every day, except Saturday and Sunday, when they will be open from 1 to 10 p. m.

A delightful concert was given on Thursday by the Ladies' Musical Club. Among those who took part in excerpts from the well-known oratoria were Mrs. J. D. Helmeken, Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Hicks, Miss Eva Hart, Robt. Mackenzie, Mrs. R. B. MacConnan, William Hicks and Howard Russell, and Miss Norah Dod, A. R. C. F., a clever pianiste who made her first appearance here.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent last Friday at the studio, 514 Fort street, when Mrs. J. D. Gordon read a paper on Nietzsche, the Philosopher. At tea a delightful hour was spent discussing Mrs. Gordon's clever and interesting paper, for which her hearers were much indebted.

Victoria society is expressing much sympathy toward Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont Boggs, on the death at the front of their gallant son, Lieutenant Herbert Boggs.

Mrs. J. D. Reid, Rockland Avenue, entertained at bridge and tea on Thursday afternoon.

A marriage of interest was celebrated on Tuesday, March 2nd, at St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, by Rev. G. H. Andrews, chaplain to the forces, when Nancy Esten, third daughter of H. H. Nash, of 664 Battery Street, and Arthur Inglis, a gunner in the R. C. G. A., and recently of Pender Island, were joined in wedlock. The bride wore her traveling suit of navy blue. The bridegroom anticipates leaving shortly for military service in the West Indies.

THE STAGE

ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE

WHEN Michael Morton's drama of life in modern Russia, entitled "The Yellow Ticket" was produced in New York City, there was much discussion as to the truth of the apparent facts upon which the play is founded. Someone wrote to Alan Dale, the New York critic and asserted that Mr. Morton was guilty of furnishing these "facts" out of his own imagination, and went on further to say that no Russian girl of decent family would ever apply for a yellow ticket. The letter was signed "A Russian." Mr. Dale published the letter, and Mr. Morton replied to it, showing that many Russians are surprisingly ignorant of conditions in their own country, and that the truth is even stranger than the dramatic events upon which his play is formed. "The Yellow Ticket" appears at the Royal Victoria Theatre on Friday and Saturday, March 5 and 6, with a special matinee on Saturday.

THE PRINCESS

Large audiences have been entertained by "Get Rich Wallingford," at the Princess this week. The Cohan play is an amusing representation and skit on certain "get-rich-quick" types of humanity, and a host of funny incidents result.

Next week, "My Lady Nell," a pretty comedy drama, will be presented. "My Lady Nell" concerns a young girl who has been left to grow up under the rather doubtful and erratic tutelage of some miners in a California mountain town. No more picturesque upbringing did any girl ever have, resulting in a fascinating mixture of boyish camaraderie and unexpected femininity. Of course Miss Felton will play the title role, and Mrs. Allen will have an Irish part as Moll Casey, a part in which her admirers will not miss the chance of seeing her.

GOOD BILL AT PANTAGES

Comment has often been made recently on the highly-improved character of the vaudeville now being shown at Pantages Theatre. This week has been an excellent example. The show, a very long one of seven acts, is high class right through, and so varied in its appeal as to win the approbation of every type of playgoer. The headliner is a sparkling musical comedieta, with Henry B. Cleveland in an inimitable role as a "darky" servant.

This act is closely followed in order of merit by the "turn" presented by Menomee Aiken & Co., "In Crocodile Isle." Picturesque stage settings and highly attractive costumes from the trappings for the most sensational contortionist act ever seen on local boards.

Another feature of the bill which has a strong appeal at this time is the exhibition and competitive drill by the Fifth Regiment.

Next week more attractive features are offered by Manager Rice, and these include the Tasmanian Van Diemens, in their imperial acrobatic and aerial sensation; the Great Lester, America's foremost ventriloquist, and that sensational dramatic playlet "The Devil, the Servant and the Man." Added to these attractions will be Bernivici Bros., in "A Night in Venice," a beautiful offering; Green & Parker, the "blue ribbon pair of polite comedy; the Juggling Barretts, as "aviation hatters"; and a first-run comedy on the Pantagescope.

The following films from the Famous Players Film Co., will be produced at the Variety Theatre next week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be featured Edward Abeles in the melo-dramatic farce "The Million", teeming with continual mirth, to be followed Thursday, Friday and Saturday by Mary Pickford in the historic drama "Mistress Nell". These productions are of the very highest standard, and deserve a patronage equivalent to the efforts of the management of the Variety Theatre to give its patrons only the best films that money can buy.

Mrs. H. M. Fullerton was hostess at a delightful luncheon last Friday.

THE INEVITABLE WAR

Perhaps the best article that has yet appeared on the root causes of the War, and the sudden explosion of the declared hatred of Germany to Great Britain, appears in "The Navy" for February. "The Navy," we may remind our readers is the organ of the Navy League. The article is written by Dr. Thomas F. A. Smith, who has been for eight years lecturer on English in the University of Erlangen, Germany, and therefore knows that country better than most Englishmen, so we will give our readers a brief abstract of his argument.

The seventy million Germans are unanimously behind their leaders in this war. Such unity is the result of a long period of education, nothing else could secure this solidarity. The foundation of all is the philosophy of Immanuel Kant, enunciated in the end of the Eighteenth Century. Kant desired to secure the highest development of the individual, and therefore from the shackles of the most rigid, or, as he declared it, the most cramping tradition, the Church. Seventy years later came Nietzsche, whose philosophy deals with "the freed individual or "superman." Man is trammelled by religious and moral conventions or rules. From these the superman thinks of himself as freed. He is not bound by public opinion, his only limit is his own strength; the law is stronger than he, he must obey it. But strength is virtue, weakness is vice, and the weak are harmful, indeed vicious; they have no claim to protection, rather should they be squeezed or beaten out. Clearly this theory is entirely antagonistic to the Christian religion (which Nietzsche detested), and subservient of all we consider best in civilization. Yet this theory is widely held in Germany where the rights of others are only considered so far as they are formally protected by the law. Consequently, in the words of a German professor, "All Germany is suffering from an epidemic of greed." Later, when the doctrine that might is right had come to be accepted as the rule of conduct for the individual, there came Von Treitschke, who taught that might was right for the State in and through which only had the individual himself any rights at all. All was for the State, the Nation. The Nation had the right of aggression, which used to belong to the superhuman, no laws or promises could bind the State, only its own will. The individual exists only to benefit and increase the State and to sacrifice himself in war, that the State may impose its will on its neighbours. Weakness has now become the deadly sin of the State, and weakness is shown in humanitarian scruple, attention to inconvenient treaties, and so on. The principles of German conduct could not be more different from those England has been educated to hold and practice.

The struggle for existence, the fierce law of tooth and claw, which we hold to dominate everything only amongst the brutes, is now proclaimed as a gospel for the solution of human, especially international affairs. On our side, pitted against this is the British ideal, fair-play, which, as we have lately learned, the Germans despise.

A hundred years ago the serfs in Germany were freed, then for seventy years Prussia strove for German unity. Since that has been gained united Germany has been planning for a German world. The only apparent obstacle has been the British Navy, and so the Germans have been taught that that splendid weapon of defence was the greatest instrument for bullying the world has ever seen. So the Pan. Germans have been preaching that the British were the robbers and villains of the world. That doctrine every one could understand, even if Von Treitschke's philosophy was beyond them. The few teachers who may have known better kept silence, for all teachers are Government servants, and this was the official view. Hence this view is held in Germany in every rank of society, by every man and woman.

Every sacrifice was made to make Germany more fit and increasingly more powerful, while at the same time Britain has been proclaimed ever more and more effete, incapable and contemptible. The Hague Conference was derided and described as "dust for English Eyes." No arrangement could be made with British limiting armaments; any German Government arranging such a betrayal would have perished in a week. "The sea is our birthright," said a German professor, "If we are the stronger, and can ruin you; well! it is our right and duty to do so. In fact, we believe that that is Germany's mission in the world. No compromise! Only the sword can decide."

To sum up, he says, Germany's swelled head, her desertion of Christianity, her acceptance of brute force, or the only standard of measurement for the fittest, her uncompromising character, the vile poison of her current philosophy, have all together made the present war inevitable.

WHAT ONE WOMAN HAS DONE

Being An Extract From a Letter Received in Victoria

The Cottage
Esther, Surrey,
February 7th, 1915.

"...and now about the war. That is the one and only thing just now that occupies our mind, thoughts, time and our very existence. Nothing else matters. What is the use of business or anything if our country is defeated, and we have a terrible relentless enemy who will stop at nothing, right or wrong, to get his own ends together. Its going to take every man to bring this war to a finish, at least the only finish that is any use to us, and I feel unless we can soon dislodge them out of Belgium and certainly if they get Warsaw, it will be a long war.

"I have been so busy, thank God, looking to the wants of our men, and it is not an easy matter when one has no money. We have equipped all the men at the guns on two Destroyers, and we have sent fifty equipments to the Indians fighting in Belgium, and 120 to my pet regiment, The Highland Light Infantry. They have been out since war began, and I am still sending parcels of shirts, flannel belts, socks, scarves and mittens, every month. Then I have sent 18 hampers to individual Tommies whose people have applied to me. Then I decided to appeal to the public for clothes for the Belgian soldiers fighting in France, and I sent within ten days of my appeal 60 complete hampers to Commandant B— in the trenches and have had several cheering letters, photo, etc., from the Belgian soldiers.

"Yesterday brought a letter from His Majesty the King of the Belgians, thanking me from the bottom of his heart for my kindness and asking me to send my parcels direct to him, as he wished to distribute my gifts to his dear soldiers himself. So we sent off another 75 parcels and another 50 go off next week, and I have promised to procure His Majesty 200, and I shall do it.

"This work, all from the beginning of war, has been done without any committee whatever, just by me and my organization. I am having my accounts audited by my own wish, as so much money has passed through my hands.

"I work all day and far into the night, but for this work I should have gone mad. My life is wrapped up in my country and it is little enough we women can do for our dear men or help in any war, but just work for their comfort in every possible way, and there is no excuse for anybody saying: 'There is no money.' All this work, and mind it has been a great work, has cost Andrew and myself £2, given in dribbles; so you see what can be done by one woman, alone, without money, but with plenty of energy. All my letters from soldiers, sailors, Indians, Belgians, Airmen and the King are going into a book, which, if I live to be an old woman, will bring some comfort to me with the thought that at least I did my best for my dear men and country in the greatest struggle the world will have ever known."

NOTE—The author of the above letter, Mrs. Andrew Russell, will receive gifts or money with which to carry on her work. All communications will be personally acknowledged by her.

Announcement has been made in London, Eng., of the engagement of Captain James Peters, of the Tenth Lancers, eldest son of Colonel Peters, of Victoria, to Gwendoline, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Jones, of Rhyl, North Wales.
