White Men To Receive Independent Licenses

A circular letter has been sent to several of the white fishermen of the district by F. H. Cunningham, chief inspector of fisheries for British Columbia, asking for suggestions in regard to the proposed change in the regulations governing the disposal of licenses in the Skeena district.

The proposed regulations provide that if white men to the number of 20 per cent. of the bona fide fishermen of the district owning their own boats and gear apply for licenses before March 15th their applications will be favorably received by the department. These are independent licenses and the holders of them may sell their fish to the highest bidder. After that date the licenses will be disposed of as usual in respect to the rating of the canneries.

In this district there are about 850 licenses, the majority of which are held by Japanese. It is reported that about 600 Orientals were license holders last year. Twenty per cent. of the total liconses, if taken up by white men within the time specified, will mean 170 independent boats, while 680 boats will be given fishing privileges after that date. Most of these will be Japanese, but the independent fishers will be white men and will have the benefit of the highest price paid.

G. T. P. Contracts.

J. W. Stewart, managing director of Foley, Welch & Stewart, says that every foot of the uncompleted portion of the G. T. P. in central British Columbia will soon be occupied by graders and grading outfits. Sub-contracts for the last section between Fort George and Frazer Lake, a distance of 140 miles, have just been awarded.

Sub-contractors are now building construction camps and moving in their outfits from both ends of the completed grade. The work was let in sub-contracts varying from five to thirty miles. The work referred to is heavy, but not to the same degree as the section along the Skeena river.

The management of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has expressed the opinion that all rail communication will be established early in 1914, or in less than fourteen months.

To Get Hero Medal

Captain Kerr, of the steamer British Empire, owned by the Northern Steamship Gompany, is to get the Carnegie hero medal as a reward for a very plucky deed he performed when an officer on the steamer Princess Ena. The incident occurred nearly two years ago, Captain Kerr diving overboard after a sailor and reseuing him from drowning. The temperature was five below zero and both men suffered severely from the chill.

The Dead Letter office during the past year returned over half a million letters to the writers, and nearly 14,000 of these had articles of value enclosed. Victoria grown holly was widely distributed this Christmas. The leading florists of that city worked overtime attending to orders and dispatching boxes of the Christmas decoration to all parts of America. These orders covered practically the whole continent. It used to be the case that practically all the holly came from England, but now the market is almost wholly supplied from Victoria.

Lighting pipes and lamps with five-pound notes of the Bank of England, is a piece of fine indifference that is rarely met with even in books, but it has been done in Winnipeg within the past two weeks. A package of notes from Threadneedle street was found in a taxi a short time ago by the driver. Not knowing their value, he passed them freely about among his friends. When he was told the notes were genuine money it was too late, for he had only one left.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones entertained a large number of friends on Friday night at the Indian village. Several went from here and report spending an enjoyable time.

One of the most enjoyable dances of the season was that given by Professor Solomon on New-Year's night. Considering the inclement nature of the weather during the day a fairly large crowd attended, and Aliford Bay and Skidegate were well represented. The dance music was tuneful and catchy, and was supplied by Professor Solomon and Mr. Ed. Stevens. During the course of the evening several popular songs were rendered and at midnight refreshments were served.

Fraser Bros. had an exciting experience on Thursday night while making for Aliford in their gasoline boat. When midway between Skidegate and Aliford Bay the engine broke down and for several hours the boat drifted helplessly in the channel, there being no oars on board. With the aid of a board and the tide the boat was eventually beached near the Indian village, the occupants having suffered much from exposure.

Premier McBride announces that a re-distribution bill will be considered during the session opening this month, and will be passed before the present parliament is dissolved.

The Skidegate Inlet Conservative Association will hold a meeting on Saturday evening, January 11th, at Qeen Charlotte. A full attendance of members is requested.

The large fertilizer plant for the British Columbian Fisheries at Aliford Bay is being rushed by the contractors, the Westholm Lumber Company, and it is expected to have everything completed and the plant in running order by the end of this month.

The power schooner yacht La Viajera, of Victoria, with Captain John Irving and a party of friends on board, while on a trip to Seattle recently, drifted helplessly in the Straits for 24 hours before being picked up. A mishap to the engine was the cause of the trouble.

The obselete fishery cruiser Kestrel, after lying at Esquimalt for about two years, was sold recently by the Dominion Government to Armstrong & Armstrong. She has been overhauled and will proceed to Honolulu shortly and operate between Washington and Fanning Islands and Honolulu.

Here is a tale of the difficulties of translators as told in the West Sussex Gazette. Someone who was at work on a Christian hymnal for the Zulus was unable to proceed with the line, "Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing," because the language has no equivalent for "dismiss" or "blessing." The nearest he could get was, "Lord, kick us out softly."

It is expected that the Moresby Island Lumber Co. will start operations on a large scale shortly. The sawmill will be thoroughly overhauled, and it is reported that additional machinery for making boxes and laths will be installed. Mr. J. E. Corlett, the managing direc- of the company, will arrive here soon, and, no doubt, he will make some announcement as to the plans for the coming season.

School Inspector Pollock, in charge of the Northern Coast District, has been transferred to New Westminster. Inspector Gower succeeds him.

The Queen Charlotte Land and Stock Company, Ltd., has been incorporated with a capital of half a million in fifty thousand shares. Its head office is Victoria.

The Masset Inlet Lumber Company have started their sawmill in operation. This is the largest sawmill on the northern end of Graham island. The company is comprised of members of a Seventh Day Adventist colony that has taken up land near Sewall, the new town soon to be placed on the market by the Star Realty Company of Vancouver and Masset. The lumber will be sold at Vancouver prices.

The Victoria Times is running pictures of coasting skippers, and in a recent issue a very good one of Capt. Wearmouth, of the G. T. P. steamer Prince John, appeared. Capt. Wearmouth is the senior skipper in the G. T. P. service on this coast, and his popularity was shown the other day when he was presented with a testimonial.

Having carefully considered the demand of the halibut fishermen for an advance in pay from one cent a pound to a cent and a half, the New England Fish Company and the Canadian Fishing Company, have come to the conclusion that they can not see their way to agree to the request, and this decision was made known to the men.

Mr. Katsura, of Prince Rupert, kindly remembered the local school children during the festive season by sending over several boxes of oranges, which were distributed by Mr. J. L. Barge. It will be remembered that a little over a year ago Mr. Katsura's daughter, Keyo, was murdered by a Chinaman. The girl attended school here and was a general favorite with the scholars. This act of rembrance was appreciated very much by the parents.

Prince Rupert News:—Graham island is inhabited by the greatest set of boosters in the country, and if the island does not go ahoad it will not be for want of optimistic teachings by the settlers there. Last night in the rotunda of the Central hotel a gentleman from Skidegate was telling of the vegetables produced there. In describing the recent exhibition at Lawn Hill he said, in speaking of the string beans: "A gentleman said to me, 'What large cucumbers you grow here!'"

Haidas and Their Legends.

By Mr. Charles Harrison.

Article XXVIII---Customs That Existed Formerly Amongst The Haidas.

In regard to the traditions and legends of the Haidas, there are so many different versions in connection with each one that it is a most difficult task to decide which one to adopt, consequently having listened to all their various versions as told to me by their old chiefs many years ago, I have partly amalgamated their differences in the following narratives, and am convinced that as nearly as possible they are the correct and old time traditions and legends that existed amongst these people hundreds of years ago. The Haidas have never had a literary language but only a spoken one and on this account is due the seeming contradictions apparent in some of their best legends. The incidents stated in these legends were so frequently affirmed and so seldom denied that the Haidas eventually came to believe them, not because they were true but because they were so often repeated. The secret as we all know of conviction is not facts but reiteration. Repeat a statement again and again and you will gain evidence for propositions that are not only false but which are palpably false and thus it was with the old Haidas and their legends. The differences referred to are only in regard to the minor points, and do not in any way affect the true meaning supposed to be contained in each legend and story and the moral if any thereof. Where, however, there seem to be two distinct accounts of the wonderful things that took place in Haida land before the arrival of the whites, I shall in these cases give both versions, but if, however, they seem to be partly contradictory in regard to the way and manner in which these events took place, I hope that the readers will not blame me for these discrepancies. The first legend I shall refer to is in connection with the Haida Deities. The ancient Haidas believed in two important gods, one as Hierarch of the celestial sphere, and the other as sovereign of the lower regions. These two gods formerly lived together in happiness, attended by other inferior gods, until a dispute arose as to light and darkness. Sha-nung-it-lag-e-das always wished for light in their abode of happiness and was never sleepy or tired. On the contrary Het-gwau-lan-a was never happy unless it was dark. He said that it was impossible to sleep if it were always light. So one day he was very angry and demanded that it should always be dark. Sha-nung-it-lag-e-das would not listen to this proposal and consequently a contest arose as to who should be the most powerful monarch in this land of the gods. A battle accordingly took place and the Chief of Light and his attendants prevailed and cast forth the Chief of Darkness and his followers into the lower regions. Thus it happens that where Sha-nung-it-lag-e-das is supreme it is always light, but on the contrary, where Het-gwau-lan-a is the Chief it is always pitchy dark, and he is allowed to sleep undisturbed by the faintest ray of light. It was fully believed that Sha-nung-it-lag-e-das was the possessor of the sun and moon, and he was also credited with being the creator of the stars and all the other luminaries that were supposed to exist in the kingdom of light. As I have already stated these two supreme deities had minor gods to assist them. All fevers were attributed to the god who had his residence in the sun. When he was offened by some action of theirs he was supposed to visit this earth with the pestilence of smallpox and fevers. They tried during these times of serious sickness and pestilence to propitate him with offerings of berries cast into the fire, and if they failed to regain his goodwill, they then took some portion of their daily food, chiefly smoked salmon or dry halibut, and threw it as far as they could into the salt water in order to gain the influence of the god of the sea whom they then believed to be more powerful than the god in the sun, and would keep them. It was customary formerly whenever the Haidas camped near the beach, before they commenced to ereet their tents and cook their food to invariably take some dry halibut and berries and cast into the fire to propitate the god of the earth and so secure his influence to protect them from danger during the night. The god of the earth did not require this food for himself, but carried it to the friends of those encamped who had died during the previous year. In case they should happen to be greedy and throw but a scanty portion of their food into the fire, their deceased friends were supposed to become very angry and within the next twelve months they all would most assuredly die. The god of the clouds was another Haida deity who inspired a feeling of awe and dread in the bosom of the bravest warrior. On a dull day when the clouds were hanging low down, they firmly believed that this god was in search of a meal, and anyone caught out on such a day was bound to die before the expiration of six months, so as to form a dish for this anthropophagous god. As the people were afraid of his cruel threat to catch all who came out on such a day, they always almost with the exception of slaves remained indoors. This god seemed to have a novel way of securing his prize. He was accustomed to come down on the clouds and sat watching for any stray Indian that might by chance pass where he was. As soon as one came near him he did not pounce upon his body. No this would be too vulgar an action for a god to do. He merely seized the spirit of the Indian, i.e., he drew the spirit out of the body and took it with him on high; and in a very short space of time the body had to go in search of his spirit, and so became an easy victim of this cannibal god. The Haidas did not fear the two great spirits as much as they feared the minor deities. They believed that Shanung-it-lag-e-das and Het-gwau-lan-a were too great and independent to care very much for them while on earth, but were busy preparing habitations for them to live in after death. These two great gods were worshipped but not not feared, and I have never met any Haida that was able to give a definite answer as to what they believed they were or how they came into existence. These two gods were supposed to have created all the inferior gods to assist them in their original united kingdom above the clouds. If, however, the Haidas were in any very great trouble they would invoke the aid of the Spirit of Light, and if they wished to bring an eternal curse on their enemies they would pray and offer sacrifices of fish to the Spirit of Darkness.
