WAS FROZEN TO DEATH

S. HOCKADAY LOSES HIS LIFE ON BONDHOLDER HILL.

Got Caught in a Blizzard—Camped in the Snow For Two Nights—Terrible Sufferings of His Companions—Body Recovered and Brought Here.

The city was shocked Saturday morning by the news that a miner had been frozen to death on Bond holder hill, about six miles from Slocan. Last Monday J. Stevens, M. Walls, Samuel Hockaday and W. G. Thomas, all of Nelson, started out for the Bondholder mine, they having taken a lease on the property. Having to break a trail to the mine from the Springer road, they found traveling pretty hard, and after 2½ hours of it and not being more than half way there, Walls decided to go back. After another four hours' struggle, Thomas played out, so the men decided to build a fire and rest. Then the three again pushed on, but had not gone far till Stevens got his foot frozen. They then camped for the night in a clump of bushes.

As soon as daylight came, the men pushed on for the mine, reaching it handily. Wednesday they set out for the road to bring up supplies, meeting two men on the way who h d come up to see if they were all right. The three men took heavy packs and started back. Before going far they missed the trail and became hopelessly lost They wandered around in all directions, and to add to their troubles a heavy blizzard sprung up.

The men were again forced to camp out for the night, digging holes in the snow for protection from the storm. Hockaday became delirious from his sufferings, but in the morning attempted to follow his companions to the mine. All were well nigh exhausted, their clothes being wet through and because of their being unable to build a fire. Hockaday became played out and his companions started to pack him. Seeing that it meant another night in the snow if they persisted in this and probable death for all, Stevens and Thomas decided to leave Hockaday in a sheltered position and strike out for the mine for food and dry clothes.

This they did and returned as quickly as possible with a sled for Hockaday. Sad to say, however, they missed him and it was not till Saturday morning that they found where they had left him. Poor Hockaday was beyond all help, having died from exposure. Word was sent into the city as soon as possible and Dr. Forin, coroner, notified. Early Sunday morning a number of men went up to the Bondholder and brought the body to town.

Stevens and Thomas underwent terrible hardship and it is a marvel they, too, did not perish. It is the first instance in the history of the Springer creek camp that such a fatality has occurred, though an Italian named Angelo lost his life from exposure on Ten Mile some years ago.

Monday morning Dr. Forin summoned a jury at the hospital, to view the remains of Hockaday and to hold an inquest. A verdict was given in accordance with the above. The body was shipped to Nelson for interment.

Wrighter Makes Another Deal.

Pittsburg, Pa., capital is being interested in a northwestern mining proposition that is attracting considerable attention. The matter has been under consideration for some time, W. D. Wrighter, of Spokane, being the moving spirit. The property is the Snowshoe, a silver-lead and gold producing mine in the Montana-Kootenai district. Originally the mine was owned and operated by an English corporation, but the owners recently sold out to the Rustler Mining and Milling Co., the principal managers of which are Mr. Wrighter and D. P. Bowers, a prominent mining expert. Pittsburg interests purchasing stock are to have representation on the board of directors and the mine is to be operated immediately. It is now equipped with a fine mill of 200 tons capacity, operated by steam or water power, and practically a complete outfit The main tunnel is 1700 feet long and runs 800 feet under the mountain surface. An immense amount of ore is now blocked out and will be milled as soon as operations begin again.

Mr. Wrighter is prominently identified with the Iron Horse.

To Fight the Boers.

A telegram was received here on Saturday from Fort Steele, stating that Messrs. Clarke, Lake and Law had been accepted as recruits for the Canadian Mounted Rifles for service in South Africa. The boys were to leave next day for Halifax, preparatory to embarkation for the seat of war. The well wishes of their fellow citizens will follow them, and may they have a safe return.

CITY COUNCIL.

Last Meeting of the Old Board on Monday Night.

Last meeting of the old city council was held Monday night, every member being present, which was, in itself, a noted event.

Accounts presented: T. McNeish & Co., coal oil, $4.25; H. Guest, stationery, $3.80; McCallum & Co., coal, $6.65; J. A. Foley, salary, $75; J. W. Clarke, salary, up to the time of his leaving the city, $87.50. Referred to finance committee.

Bills presented at previous meeting were reported correct from committee and ordered paid, on motion. The other bills were then passed by the finance committee and also ordered paid, thus winding up the financial business for the term.

Clerk Foley made a report of his tour of inspection of the city under the provisions of the fire limits by-law. He stated that in a number of instances it was impossible to get stovepipes 18 inches away from ceilings or sidewalls, and recommended that these should be protected by tin coverings.

After discussion the report was accepted and the recommendation passed on to the new council.

A lengthy report was read from H. D. Curtis, auditor, upon the condition of the clerk's and treasurer's books. He criticized pretty freely the system of bookkeeping in force, noting that some of the vouchers were not duly receipted for, and that other errors and mixtures existed. He found, however, that the clerk's and treasurer's books tallied to a cent. Mr Curtis gave a deficit for the term of $641.58.

The aldermanic board took up the report and discussed it fully, mutual explanations following upon the items touched on. The mayor concluded the remarks by saying that it was satisfactory to note that the books of Mr. Foley and Mr. Bolderston tallied, that the accounts were correct, and that everything was in honest shape.

Council adjourned.

A SINCERE TRIBUTE.

EDITOR DRILL:

Sir,—Samuel Hockaday, miner, dies on the trail going to his mine; caught in a blizzard in the snow, overcome by fatigue, becomes delirious, dies from exposure. What does this convey to the average mortal, who knows not the miner, with his good and bad qualities? His temptations under which the weaker ones fall, and over which the high principled ones prevail. This man was known to the writer, who counted him as a friend for 15 years.

Out in India under a boiling sun, working for John Taylor & Sons, a household word to miners in West Britain, they worked together as miner and manager. There all work is done by contract with native labor, as caste prohibited natives from mining. The white miners are in constant temptation to bribes of whiskey and presents from the contractors, to induce them to put in a good word to the manager. The white miners live together in a bungalow, having a common mess. One incident showed Hockaday's fearlessness for his principles. His wife in Devon sent him some wearing apparel of her own making. They were of the old fashioned make and were not as stylish as those made by the native tailors. The other miners laughed when the new garments were donned, though they wore the same pattern at home. Sam's Jane sent them, and he valued his wife's loving thought of him, so he wore them, and fought every mother's son who criticised—a worthy tribute in a little thing to the noble British women who have mothered the British empire, not forgetting the United States.

After leaving India, in due time Sam came to British Columbia, still advocating good over vice. A member of the Salvation Army, and cornet player in the band. Yes, because he recognized the daily good the Army is doing and wished to help. A member of the Miner's Union—yes, from the first in Devon, when he felt proud to be helper to his father underground, as a full-blown miner. However, fearless to criticise their policy if he thought such policy was not for the miners' best interest, but believing in the idea they were elevating the miners' condition of life. Died in harness, working a mine on tribute. This showed his dogged determination. He backed his own opinion that ore was there and though it took hard work to back it, he was not afraid of this. A typical Briton, possessing all the sterling qualities of these empire builders, fearless in upholding what he thought was right. These chivalrous traits inherited from a big-hearted mother, and kept up to the mark by an equally high-minded wife! What was good enough for his forebears, was good enough for him, though unconsciously marching on with progress.

When we see his funeral let us take off our hats to the earthly remains of a noble character in the less prominent walks of life, but whose spirit has gone to join his peers with the Supreme Spirit.

A type of a splendid specimen of British nobility, who have carved out an empire throughout the world. Let us lay his good qualities to heart and follow his fine example.

NOMINATIONS AND ELECTIONS.

A Short but Pretty Warm Municipal Campaign.

The campaign for the municipal elections was short, but pretty warm. Like every other event in the city, sides were drawn, one side supporting Mayor York for re-election, and the other Ald. Bradshaw for the position, the latter entering the field only on Thursday last. There has been more or less feeling aroused over the contest, but it will soon subside.

At the nominations on Monday, A. York and R. A. Bradshaw were put up for the mayoralty. The former lodged a protest against his opponent's qualifications. The old government assessment roll was the basis upon which the nominations were taken, and Mr. York maintained Mr. Bradshaw did not reach the necessary assessable property limit. However, Returning Officer Foley passed over the protest and accepted the papers.

Those nominated for aldermen were: D Arnot, A. Barber, George Henderson, J. G. McCallum, Dan Nichol, D. D. Robertson, A. C. Smith and W. E. Worden. For school trustees: A. Barber, J. G. McCallum, T. McNeish and A. York.

The campaign wound up by a public meeting in the Music Hall, Wednesday night, when a real nice time was put in.

The result of the elections yesterday are:

MAYOR,

Bradshaw	45
York	44

ALDERMEN.

Arnot	44
Barber	44
Henderson	42
McCallum	49
Nichol	50
Robertson	47
Smith	46
Worden	45

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

Barber	43
McCallum	48
McNeish	74
York	53

The new council, as elected, stands: Mayor, Bradshaw; aldermen, Barber (by vote of the returning officer), McCallum, Nichol, Robertson, Smith and Worden; school trustees, McCallum, McNeish and York.

Eighty-nine votes were cast in all, with but one spoiled ballot and that for the aldermen. A large amount of money changed hands over the result.

Trail Smelter Closed.

The lead and copper furnaces at the Canadian Smelting Works, at Trail, have been blown out and will remain cold till the first of February, or as soon thereafter as alterations, now well under way, are completed. The old sampler, with a maximum capacity of 1000 tons in 24 hours, is being replaced by a thorough modern automatic crusher and sampler of 1500 tons capacity in 10 hours. Surface, mason and carpenter gangs, with the operators for eight hand roasters, are the only men now at work. The surface gang is clearing a site 400 yards from the main works for the new refinery, on which work is to be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible. The sampler is being rushed through, as the Centre Star and War Eagle mines at Rossland expect to commence shipping on a large scale as soon as the machinery is in operation.

Hockey Club Organized.

Wednesday evening a meeting of the hockey enthusiasts of the city was held in A. David's tailor shop, when it was decided to organize a club for the season. A. York was elected president, R. Bradshaw vice, J. Pinchbeck captain, and W. Hicks secretary-treasurer. It is hoped to get on a friendly game here next week with the Bosun team of New Denver.

OUR ORE SHIPMENTS

SUBSTANTIAL SHOWING MADE BY THIS DIVISION.

Last Year's Shipments Were 6514 Tons—A Healthy Evidence of the Life and Wealth of the Camp—Arlington the Biggest Shipper.

The lack of snow has almost paralyzed the shipments from the mines in this division, there having been but 40 tons go out during the week. All the roads at the lower end have been laid bare, though the upper parts have splendid sleighing, and it is impossible to get the ore out. The Enterprise has not shipped anything this year and shipments from the Neepawa and Ottawa have been delayed. Ore is being brought down from the Arlington to the end of the snow and piled up there for the time being.

For 1900 the exports from this division amounted to 2847 tons, made up from 10 properties. Last year the exports totalled 6514 tons, from 14 properties. Following is a full list of the shipments this year to date:

MINE.	WEEK.	TOTAL.
Arlington	40	250
	40	250

MINES AND MINING.

Copper has dropped to 11.25 and silver to 55§.

About 40 men are now employed at the Enterprise.

The Goodenough mine, in the Sandon camp, has closed down.

An experiment is being made of concentrating the Enterprise ore by the oil process.

It is stated the Champion group, Twelve Mile, will be started up the first of February.

Two hundred and fifty tons of zinc ore is to be shipped to Europe shortly by the Minnesota Silver Co.

The main drift on the Transfer is in 100 feet and a crosscut is now being run through the ledge. The rock has become very hard.

Another report has arrived here from England that the Kilo and Chapleau groups, Lemon creek, have been amalgamated, and that the properties will certainly be worked next season.

MINING RECORDS.

Appended is a complete list of the various records registered at the local registry office, H. P. Christie being mining recorder:

ASSESSMENTS.

Jan 7—Elk for two years.

TRANSFERS.

Jan 6—Truro, notice by J P Driscoll that he owns a half interest.

8—Independence ½, J Crawford to A York.

10—Lady Franklin, Crazy Jane, Colby and 49, ⅓ in each, M Manley to Oscar V White.

Port Hope ¾ and Vernon all, T J Baty to J P Driscoll.

Midnight, J Law to W E Lee.

Damaging Reports About Arlington.

There have been a great many wild stories in circulation recently about the Arlington, one being that the mine had run out of ore. It is satisfactory to note, however, that there is not the slightest foundation for any of the statements made. On the contrary, the mine has two parallel chutes to draw upon and is in excellent shape. It has been in hard luck with its shipments, owing to the bad roads, but there is nothing to fear from the mine because of the want of ore. Other stories of the mine being in a bankrupt state are the outcome of pure spite and malice. The Arlington is capable of and will meet all its obligations. It is quite probable the mine will pay a heavy dividend this year.

Scared of Bondholder.

The Nelson outfit that had the lease on the Bondholder did not stay long at the job, the disaster of last week having taken the heart out of them. Their stuff was brought down to the city on Tuesday. Next day James Livingstone and P. McGuire went up to the mine to take a look at it preparatory to getting a lease.

In the several Dominion bye elections Wednesday the Liberals won five out of eight seats. They captured the Tory stronghold of West York by 150 majority.

AN HUMBLE HERO

BY THOMAS P. MONTFORT

CHAPTER XIII.

ONE MELVIN FEARED.

Turner knew that Melvin was not going to Beckett's Mill. He was as well assured of that fact as he would have been had Melvin told him so. He knew, on the contrary, that he was going to Hi Jenkins' place. Why he was going he did not know further than that he knew the new stranger had something to do with it.

The important information possessed by a little coterie at Beckett's Mill concerning Melvin had not reached Jonathan Turner. In fact, and for a wonder, it had not spread beyond the few persons to whom Sam Morgan had related it that night at Hicks' store.

The reason it had not spread, and the only reason doubtless, was attributable to Hicks. With an eye single to business he had seen a likely chance to turn a few honest dollars only if they would all keep quiet and patiently await the development of events. Taking the others fully into his confidence, he had said:

"If that feller's done somethin dretful for which he has to hide out from the law—which, of course, he has, or he wouldn't 'a' said so—why, it stan's to reason thar'll be a reward out for him, if it ain't out already. Now, most giner'ly when a reward is offered that a-way circulars are sent out to all the postoffices round whar the feller is likely to go, givin the amount of the reward, the feller's name an description an tellin whar he's wanted an what he's wanted for."

"Jest so," Pap Sampson had agreed. "I've seed them papers a-stickin up in the postoffice here lots of times."

"Now," Hicks resumed, "my plan is for us all jest to lay low an keep our mouths shet, not sayin a word of this to nary a livin soul, an wait to see if one of them circulars don't come along here putty soon 'bout Mr. Melvin. Then when the circular does come we'll jest nab Mr. Man an rake in that reward."

They all saw the wisdom of Hicks' plan and readily agreed to it, and for awhile they kept sacredly to their agreement. The temptation to talk was great, it must be admitted, but that reward was a greater temptation yet.

So it had come about that Turner was still ignorant of everything concerning Melvin and in forming his opinions was acting altogether on mere surmises. He had never changed from his first formed opinion that there was something back of Melvin that was not exactly right, but he had never succeeded in getting beyond that point.

He readily conceived the idea that there was a connecting link somewhere between Melvin and Waite, but what that link was he could not tell. He had no idea whether the link was one of friendship or enmity, but he was inclined to the belief that it was the former. In fact, he labored under the impression that the two young men had been associated together in the commission of a crime or were leagued together for the purpose of committing some crime at a later date. He did not place their crime or contemplated crime beyond robbery, however, but he fixed it at robbery on a large scale.

When Melvin rode away from the house that night, Turner believed he had gone to meet and confer with Waite, but he was partially mistaken. Melvin had gone to Jenkins' place, and it was on account of Waite that he had gone, but if his surmises were correct Waite was one of the last men in the world he would care to meet or with whom he would seek a conference.

As Melvin had told Mrs. Banks, he had taken the life of a human being. In the heat of a quarrel he had shot down and instantly killed a young man named Marchand. He justified himself for the act on the ground that he had acted in self defense, and in a way his claim was true. Just at the time of the killing it was merely a question of who could fire first, and if Melvin had not killed he would have been killed. But, on the other hand, Melvin was responsible for the misunderstanding, for Marchand was seeking to avenge the honor of his sister, whom Melvin had betrayed.

While Melvin might justify his act, he knew public opinion nor the courts would justify it, so he fled from the scene to escape arrest. Having met Louisa Banks and learned to love her while she was a girl at school, his first thought when he began his flight was to go where he could be near her. That she had married mattered little to him, except to the extent that it removed her out of his way, for he had no very high regard for marriage nor a very strongly developed sense of honor.

His plan was to induce her to elope with him, if possible, and, though she had refused to marry him when she was free to do so, he had no doubt of his ability to influence her now since it had become known to him that she had learned to regret the step she had taken when she had declined him for Sim Banks. If she would elope with him, they would go to some out of the world place out west and there lose themselves to every one who had ever known them, as well as to the law.

In all his planning Melvin did not lose sight of the fact that the man he had killed had a younger brother living and that the brother was a determined, desperate character who was not likely to wait for the slow process of law to right his wrongs. From the first Melvin had feared Robert Marchand more than he feared the law, and day and night he had been haunted with a dread that that man would hunt him out and kill him. He had covered his flight well, he knew, but he was also aware of the tireless energy and set determination of young Marchand, and this, added to the anxiety a criminal always experiences, kept him in a continual state of uneasiness.

His purpose in going to Jenkins' was to discover, if he could, without making his own presence known, whether the man giving his name as Waite had stopped there and whether or not it was Robert Marchand. The way he had planned to do this was very simple and at the same time comparatively safe to himself.

He proposed to tie his horse somewhere in the woods near Jenkins' house, then creep cautiously forward under the cover of the fences and shrubbery until he reached a position commanding a view of the house and its surroundings.

He was well aware that it was a universal custom among the people of Possum Ridge to sit out in their front yards after supper on hot summer evenings, and he felt assured that he would find Jenkins and Waite so sitting if the latter was there. In this way he could satisfy himself as to whether Waite was the man he feared, then steal softly away again.

And if that man should prove to be Robert Marchand there was but one thing for Melvin to do, and that was to flee from the section. He had that all planned out too. He would return to Turner's for his things, claiming he had received a letter calling him back home, and he would go that night. There would be no waiting for the morrow, not an hour's delay, if Robert Marchand was there.

However, he was saved all the trouble of putting his plans into execution, for as he passed along the road a mile from his destination a voice hailed him from the woods, and, looking around, he saw old Hi Jenkins sitting on a log.

"My Lord, young feller," Jenkins said, "but I'm pow'ful glad to see you shore. I been settin here for two mortal hours, an I got to thinkin thar wa'n't nobody never goin to come along."

"Why have you been sitting there all that time?" Melvin asked.

"'Cause I couldn't do nothin else. Reckon I was doin it for fun?"

"Why can't you do anything else?"

"'Cause I can't git a-loose from this dad burned log, an I ain't big enough to walk off with it."

"Are you fast to the log?"

"Waal, sorter, I guess. Leastwise I been kinder under that impression the last two hours."

Melvin rode over near the old man.

"How did you happen to get fast to the log?" he asked.

"Why, I was fixin to split it up for rails," Jenkins replied, "an I'd drove a wedge in, startin a right smart crack in one eend. Feelin sort of tired, I 'lowed I'd set down on the log to rest, an like a durned fool I set right on that crack. I'd been settin thar a little bit when the fust thing I knowed that mis'able sneakin wedge flew out, an the crack closed up, a-ketchin the seat of my pants an a-holdin me thar so fast an tight that I couldn't move."

Melvin laughed. The situation was so ludicrous that he couldn't help it. He would have laughed if Jenkins had been dying. There was nothing funny in the situation to old Hi, however, and when Melvin laughed it made him angry.

"Reckon you think it's durned smart to stand thar that a-way an laugh like a blame fool at a poor, helpless, suffer-in feller critter, but I bet if I was out of this I'd make you laugh out of t'other side of your mouth."

"I can't help laughing," Melvin replied. "The idea of a man getting into such a pickle as that! It's the most ridiculous thing I ever knew."

"Waal, you'd soon hear of somethin a doggone sight wuss ridiculous," Jenkins said, "if I was jest loose from here for 'bout a minute. But, say, dad burn your onery hide, ain't you goin to do nothin but stan' thar an act a fool a-laughin at me? Ain't you goin to help me out?"

"Couldn't you get loose in any way?"

"You reckon if I could I'd 'a' set here all this time waitin for some durned idlot to come along an help me?"

"Did you try to get loose?"

"Did I try to get loose? Geemenetty! Did I try? Lord, what senseless questions a blamed fool can ask! Reckon if you'd 'a' seen me tryin to tear my pants off an a-wigglin round here till I most wore myself out a-tryin to git out of 'em you'd 'a' had some notion I tried to git loose. Did I try? Lord, sich a question!"

"But you couldn't make it, eh?"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

According to recent arrangements some of the new British postage stamps will be issued early in the New Year. The original intention was to put them on sale at the principal postoffices on the King's birthday. This, however, was found to be impossible, a sufficient number of sheets not being ready at the time. The designs of the new stamps have been prepared by Mr. Emile Fuchs, a sculptor, some of whose work was exhibited at last year's Academy. As with the Victorian stamps, the head of the Sovereign will figure on each stamp. Merely the head of the King is shown, and he has been drawn bareheaded without the crown. This is a departure from the accepted custom when her late Majesty was on the throne, Queen Victoria always being portrayed as wearing a small crown or diadem. King Edward's choice, however, is in accordance with the general practice of reigning Kings and Emperors, though the young Queen of Holland follows the example of Queen Victoria. The design of the stamps has undergone changes also in matters of detail, and it has been decided to abandon some of the colors formerly in use. The halfpenny stamps will be green, as hitherto, but the design that Mr. Emile Fuchs has prepared is of a more elaborate character than that with which the public is familiar, and the effect is to give the stamp the appearance of being in a green of a deeper shade. In the penny stamp the existing mauve color will no longer be used. Its place will be taken by stamps of a dull crimson, a color which has been found by experiment to be the most suitable for the purposes for which it is required. It is in contemplation, in fact, to use the color for other stamps of higher value, the price being plainly indicated in figures to prevent confusion. But this is a matter that is understood to be still under consideration.

At Dickens' Grave—A Boy's Tribute.

On Christmas Eve last year a little fellow, apparently about 10 years of age, was seen to enter Westminster Abbey shortly before evening prayers. Going straight up the main aisle towards Poets' Corner with a directness that showed his knowledge of the position by custom, he stood bareheaded and reverently over the grave of Charles Dickens. Then, looking around in evident doubt as to whether his action might give offence to the authorities, he produced a tiny bunch of violets with an envelope attached, and, kneeling down, placed his tribute tenderly upon the tombstone. The little fellow hovered affectionately round the spot for a few moments, and, glancing round to see that his tribute remained undisturbed, went with a happy, satisfied look and took his place for the service. Curiosity led a newspaper man, who happened to be present at the time, to examine the childish offering, and this was what he found written in half-formed characters on the envelope attached to the unassuming violets:

"For it is good to be children sometimes, and never better than at Christmas, when its mighty Founder was a child Himself."—Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

Singular Transmission of Sound.

A member of the faculty of Moscow Imperial Technical School recently discovered that a microphone attached to an electric arc lamp by wire will transmit sounds through the medium of another electric arc lamp. Repeated experiments were made in which the two lamps were separated by a thick wall. The inventor read in a low voice a lecture on his discovery and his words, spoken to the microphone, were comfortably audible in the next room. With characteristic carelessness the Russian newspapers failed to state whether the lamps were burning, but it is probable that this is to be assumed.

"Pin Money."

In days long ago pins were so expensive that husbands gave their wives certain allowances just for the purpose of the costly luxury.

Hence we call the money given to a woman for her own special use "pin money." Five centuries after pins were invented the peddlers sung the following rhymes as they went through the streets in London:

Ten rows a penny, O!
Isn't that a many, O!
Silver heads, golden points,
Ten rows a penny, O!

The Height of Waves.

At the Glasgow meeting of the British Association For the Advancement of Science Mr. Vaughan Cornish read a paper on the size of waves at sea. He gave the following table as the average of the heights of a number of successive waves: Hurricane, 28.54 feet; strong gale, 20.60 feet; gale, 15.42 feet; strong breeze, 10.83 feet.

Atmosphere of Planet Jupiter.

Mr. Percival Lowell, director of the Flagstaff observatory in Arizona, has recently published a determination of the refraction of the atmosphere of the planet Jupiter obtained from occultations of the satellites. The resulting value is eight minutes of arc for the exterior layers of the atmosphere. It also follows from the observation that the atmosphere is of great depth.

Latest London Fancies.

The ladybird is the latest fancy in trinkets in London. "Lucky ladybird" brooches are selling very rapidly. The insect is imitated in colored enamel on the centre of a gold safety pin. Mauve and pink furniture is the latest fancy of the artistic—mauve wood, pink satin brocade and curtains which are shot with both colors and figured with a pattern of sweet peas.

OUR GRANDMOTHERS

Thousands Who Went Out Only to Attend Religious Services—A Radical Who Recommended the Skipping Rope.

In looking over a file of old Connecticut newspapers I came across the following excerpt from an English treatise on "Diet and Regimen" that warmed the cockles of my heart:

"The skipping rope, a toy which is discarded by the young girl when entering a premature womanhood, but which ought to be looked upon as a necessary article in every boudoir or a private room occupied by a woman of civilized life and civilized habits, is one of the best if not the very best kind of gymnastic exercise that I know. It exercises almost every muscle in the body. There are few women who do not neglect exercise. Thousands upon thousands of English women never cross the thresholds of their houses oftener than once a week, and then it is to attend to the public worship of their Maker. And it is seldom that in town the distance to the church or chapel is such as to occupy more than ten minutes in going thither."

It may be presumed that this extract is intended to draw the attention of American women not only to their neglect of physical exercise, but also to the superiority of the skipping rope as an implement to assist in stirring their sluggish circulation.

From the lips of an old lady who was in her early girlhood at the time this treatise was written (1835) I obtained the following graphic description of one article of dress worn by women in every station of life at that period:

"I was a vigorous, romping girl of thirteen, who hated restraint of any kind, above all that of dress, and was commonly in disgrace because of my careless habits in regard to clothes. However, my older sister, Martha, was determined to bind me into a proper shape with 'stays.'

"One Sunday, in spite of protestations, I was laced into that cruel instrument of torture and started on a two mile walk to 'meeting.' Did you ever see a pair of stays?"

From a drawer in a mahogany chest the old lady drew out a pair of old fashioned corsets beautifully made out of a kind of buckram, covered with fine white linen. Small gussets were set in the front, and it was stitched between the materials. The opening was in the back, where ivory or horn eyelets were provided for the lacings. The front was re-enforced with a sort of pocket two inches wide, open at the top for the insertion of the "busk" or "board," which was literally a piece of thin board, a "straight front" such as we never dreamed of. The stays measured sixteen inches around the waist.

"Such agony as I endured before that long morning service was over!" continued my old friend as she carefully replaced the stays. "Noon came at last, however, and when I went out to eat my cookies I rushed behind the meeting house, jerked out that board and, after breaking it in two, threw it away. I was soundly whipped for doing it, but children in those days expected whippings.

"When I was fifteen or sixteen years old, my sister and I used to help each other lace our stays on Sunday, and we did not take them off until the next Saturday night."

An examination of the fashion books of that period confirms this story of tight lacing. The imagination conjures a comical spectacle when it pictures those tortured matrons, with their wasp waists, tiny caps with flowers "drooping in the neck" and voluminuos skirts "gauged with one or two rows half an inch apart with care that they hang evenly and well," solemnly skipping the rope in the privacy of their boudoirs.

The prevalence of recipes for lotions and pastes for the complexion and the universal use of paints and powders leads to the conclusion that there were defects to be covered that might have been removed by the use of the skipping rope or other exercise assisted by the lavish use of soap and water.

The girl or woman of this generation, moving about with the glorious freedom made possible by the short skirts, loose waist and stout shoes, is as different physically from the woman of preceding generations as the bird that enjoys the full freedom of the heavens is different from the one that is caged and whose wings are clipped.

The ten minute walk taken once a week in "prunella shoes" has lengthened to a ten mile walk taken in shoes her brother might wear. The skipping rope wielded in the privacy of her boudoir has been replaced by the golf stick wielded in the open air. The sixteen inch waist has expanded to twenty-five inches. It is within the power of this fine creature to overcome her inheritance of weak nerves and the tendency to hysteria, the natural revolt of nature against tight lacing, thin shoes and lack of physical culture. It is also within her power if she will cultivate repose as assiduously as she cultivates out of door exercise to eliminate "nerves" and "hysteria" from her vocabulary, and the children of future generations might search with curiosity for the meaning of those obsolete words in old dictionaries that have found a place by the side of the "stys" and the "Treatise on Diet and Regimen" in the ancient chest of drawers.—Agnes E. Blanchard in New York Times.

THE HAIR AND THE SCALP.

Some Valuable Suggestions as to the Use of the Brush.

In washing and brushing the hair it is well to remember that the epidermis and corium of the scalp are not supported by a thick layer of subtissue, as is the rest of the skin of the body. So in washing and drying the hair one's eagerness to be clean should not cause one to scrub the head as if strength were the one essential in obtaining good results.

Ofttimes one reads that brushing the hair every night will develop the muscles of the neck and arms, and at once the woman who wishes to be beautiful seizes a hairbrush and even takes one in each hand for symmetry's sake and goes through a regular Indian club exercise on her head. After some months' faithful devotion to the cause of muscles she proudly shows a finely rounded arm; but, alas, the hair is but a wisp! It is friction of the scalp, gentle and regular, that acts as a tonic. Brushing the hair will not affect the scalp, and the old saying that "you cannot brush the scalp too much or the hair too little" is to be heeded. Hair needs air as well as brushing. The custom of braiding it at night is conducive to bad results. It may be a little uncomfortable to have one's tresses flying around the face, but if one throw them over the pillow they will not interfere with one's comfort after the first few nights. It will be surprising to find what good results will come from this habit of allowing the hair freedom from twists and braids and hairpins.

Whims and Moods.

If we want to be liked, we must not allow moods, emotions or whims to come always to the surface. The friend who meets us with, "Oh, I'm so annoyed, I must tell you how I've been worried!" and such like exclamations is not half so welcome as the one who comes to us telling only of the bright happenings, who seems to give rather than to draw from us. And from this face we can learn one obvious lesson.

And another great secret of charm is charitableness and scrupulousness in not saying behind a person's back what one would not say to their face. It is so easy to make unkind fun, and sneering and witty remarks about others sometimes evoke much laughter, and people are deceived into fancying that such laughter means popularity. It may amuse us for the moment, but these are not the people one is anxious to meet again, for one feels that the chances are that we may serve at some time or other as material for other witty stories. And, deny the fact though we may, there is no doubt most of us do object to be held up to ridicule.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Mrs. Alderman's Big Apple Orchards.

Out in a country of large things even such an apple orchard as that owned and managed by Mrs. Laura A. Alderman of Harley, S. D., stands out in the first rank. It contains 130 acres in full bearing of the finest fruit that the latitude affords. The land was taken up in 1876 and was gradually converted to the business of fruit raising. A scourge of grasshoppers which nearly destroyed all other crops in South Dakota left the country nearly poverty stricken for a time, and fruit dealers suffered with the rest. But pluck and energy saved the day for Mrs. Alderman, and for the past fifteen or twenty years her work has been a continuous success. The apples from the Alderman farm are gathered with special care and never fail of a good market. From 8,000 to 10,000 bushels are gathered each year, and in the harvest season forty or more persons are employed in the business. Mrs. Alderman's father was closely related to Colonel Ethan Allen of Vermont. She is now a resident of Detroit, Mich.—Leslie's Weekly.

Facts About Old Lace.

In fixing the approximate date of any given piece of lace it is well to remember that machine made thread was not used until after the beginning of the eighteenth century. Before that time the threads ran in lengths of about twenty inches, for the worker could stretch no farther than her distaff and had to break off and join again; if after unraveling some twenty-five inches of thread no joint is found, the lace is surely after the introduction of machine made thread. The "bride's ornee" alone are enough to go by; in the fifteenth century the bar had only a knot or dot as ornament; in the sixteenth, a double or single loop; in the seventeenth, a star. The edging also helps; a sharp angle in the scallop fixes the date in the middle ages; the rounded scallop came in with the nineteenth century; with the seventeenth century a dotted scallop; the eighteenth one is more elaborate, a large alternating with a small scallop and dots along the center of each.—St. Louis Republic.

Beauty Hints.

Cultivate expression of the eyes. In a short time they will speak more eloquently than your tongue. Do not draw your eyelids together or pucker your face when exposed to a strong light. This makes wrinkles. Shade your eyes with your hand. Dark eyebrows and lashes are marks of beauty. When lighter than the hair, they may be made darker by applying green walnut juice with a small camel's hair brush. Do not pencil them. A slight arch and a fine line may be given to the eyebrows by pinching them between the fingers several times each day.

Never bite the lips to make them red. It not only makes them dark and sore, but it makes your face look drawn and distorted while you are biting them. If you bathe your lips occasionally with a little alum dissolved in water and apply glycerin, with a few drops of water of benzoin, the lips will be kept fresh and red and without injury.—Exchange.

Women and the Rifle.

The picturesque old Surrey town of Farnham, England, has taken a step toward encouraging marksmanship among women. It has the Ivy House Rifle club, to which women are admitted, and the first lady member was the Lady Mary Arkwright, a daughter of the house of Strafford.

There are hours on two days of the week during which the use of the range is specially reserved for women, and at all other times it is open to them in competition with the men.—Philadelphia North American.

Expensive Wedding Presents.

One of the most striking features of an up to date wedding is present giving and receiving. Wedding presents of late have become a positive tax on society.

They are not given because the donor is fond of the bride or the bridegroom, but simply because it is the fashion, and each year as luxury increases wedding presents become more costly.

The Invention of the Panorama.

The panorama was invented by a Scotchman named Robert Barker, who obtained a license in London in 1787 and erected a rotunda on Leicester square. He was associated with Robert Fulton, the practical inventor of the steamboat, who introduced panoramas into Paris in 1796, but resigned in favor of Thayer perhaps in order to give his attention to the application of steam to boats. Thayer raised a rotunda on the Boulevard Montmartre, whence comes the name of the Passage des Panoramas. Bonaparte caused plans to be drawn up for eight panoramas in which his conquests were to be shown to the Parisians, whom he always tried to impress with the magnitude of the achievements in order to keep them faithful to his star. But these projects were never realized.

His Clever Scheme.

The best piece of toast was about half way down the pile, and he started to take it.

"Willie," said his mother, "you shouldn't do that. Take the top piece always."

He made a hasty mental calculation.

The Parrot.

With the ancients the parrot was not a bird to be revered, so far as can be learned. It is not depicted on any of the sacred scenes in stone that tell the strange stories of the religions of the nations of old, nor has it ever been found mummified in the tombs of Egypt. Most likely the ancients thought it an uncanny bird and also a dangerous one, with its capabilities of repeating what it heard.

"Just Like a Woman."

"Just like a woman." What's just like a woman? Oh, everything that is small and narrow minded and childish and irrational, evidently. Pooh! How about men? You never heard of a man who told little white fibs or looked under a bed for a burglar, did you? Oh, no! Perish the thought! The truth is there are women and women just as there are manly, splendid men and men of little contemptible souls. If you ever hear any one say, "That's just like a woman," light into him and tell him a thing or two or three or four or eight or ten.—Elmira Telegram.

Drink Water Regularly.

If you do not accustom yourself to drink water regularly, you are liable to have the waste products of the tissues of the body form faster than they are removed. Great weakness and languor on rising in the morning is generally due to a large secretion of these waste products, and the remedy is to drink a tumblerful of water, either hot or cold, just before retiring. This materially assists in the process during the night and leaves the tissues fresh and strong, ready for the active work of the next day.—Oregonian.

Running No Risk.

He took a plate in his right hand, passed it around, and a large sum was collected, every one meanwhile wondering what he held in his left hand.

"Why, it's very simple," said the leader when questioned. "We are all subject to temptation, and to be sure of the fidelity of our collector he has to hold five flies in his left hand, and we count these first when he returns to make sure of the money."

Poverty is no crime; but, nevertheless, it is punishable by hard labor for life.

Helps to Education.

A zoological garden is a great ornament to a city and a most desirable adjunct to school education. The child who can see and study a moose, an eagle, an alligator or any other strange beast of the field gets what no book can teach.—Meehan's Monthly.

IS YOUR CHILD IN DANGER?

Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Severe Chest Colds are Threatening.

It is the old story of wet feet, exposure to cold and dampness and chilled bodies. Towards night the hoarseness comes and the hollow, croupy or tight chest cough. Then mother's anxiety, for she knows the danger and the suddenness with which the little ones are sometimes snatched away. When you think of the thousands of times that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has saved the lives of the little ones it is scarcely to be wondered at that mothers look upon it with confidence and satisfaction.

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

It is an ideal medicine for children because it is remarkably pleasant to take and is perfectly free from Morphia. It is one of the few remedies for diseases of the throat and lungs which thoroughly cures the cold as well as the cough. There are other preparations of linseed. Be sure you get Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, with portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase on the bottle. Price, 25 cents; family size, three times as much, 60 cents. THE DRILL.

SLOCAN, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Didn't Care if He Did.

Over in West Virginia on one of the railroads is a little town called Sawyer. Close to the town the train passes through a tunnel. One day a nice looking young couple were on the train, and they never seemed to know that there was anybody else on the train. Oblivious to their surroundings they were like two souls with but a single thought. While the train was passing through the tunnel those near the young couple heard a succession of suspicious smacks something like a kiss with a dozen echoes. After the train had passed through the tunnel the brakeman came through the car and called out, "Sawyer," and the timid looking young man looked up and said: "I don't give a durn if you did. We are married."—Bristol Courier.

CRYING BABIES.

Babies never cry unless there is some very good reason for it. The cry of the baby is nature's warning signal that there is something wrong. Every mother ought to get to work immediately to find out what that something wrong may be. If the fretfulness and irritation are not caused by exterior sources, it is conclusive evidence that the crying baby is ill. The only safe and judicious thing to do is to administer Baby's Own Tablets without the slightest delay.

For indigestion, sleeplessness, the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth, diarrhoea, constipation, colic, and simple fevers, these marvellous little tablets have given relief in thousands of cases and saved many precious baby lives. Do not give a child so-called "soothing" medicines; such only stupefy and produce unnatural sleep. Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed to contain no opiate or other harmless drugs; they promote sound, healthy sleep because they go directly to the root of baby troubles. Dissolved in water these tablets can be given to the youngest infant. Mrs. Walter Brown, Milby, Que., says:—"I have never used any medicine for baby that did as much good as Baby's Own Tablets. I would not be without them." Baby's Own Tablets are for sale at all drug stores, or will be sent direct on receipts of price (25 cents a box) by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Getting the Musical Pitch.

Musical pitch has a curious tendency to creep up. It is said that Bach's music sounds much differently now from what it did when Bach wrote it, because the instruments are now pitched higher. In 1882 it was found that the pitch of high A at the Vienna Court Opera had crept from the prescribed 435 double vibrations a second to 443, and in 1885 this number had further increased to 450.

Accordingly a musical conference was held, and a resolution was taken to re-establish the old pitch of 435 vibrations per second. Upon this announcement the Reichsanstalt, the imperial physical and technical institute of Germany, set up standard instruments and has since tested and corrected many hundreds of tuning forks, shortening them if they are too low in pitch and thinning the arms if they are too high.

All the military orchestras of Germany are pitched alike, and the Reichsanstadt keeps the tuning forks correct. This solicitous care of the government in preserving standards is one reason why the world now goes to Germany in musical matters.—Pearson's.

Truth and Repose.

A self denial no less austere than the saint's is demanded of the scholar. He must worship truth and forego all things for that and choose defeat and pain so that his treasure in thought is thereby augmented. God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose. Take which you please—you can never have both.

Between these as a pendulum man oscillates. He in whom the love of repose predominates will accept the first creed, the first philosophy, he meets, most likely his father's. He gets rest, commodity and reputation, but he shuts the door of truth. He in whom the love of truth predominates will keep himself aloof from all moorings and afloat.

He will abstain from dogmatism and recognize all the opposite negations between which as walls his being is swung. He submits to the inconvenience of suspense and imperfect opinions, but he is a candidate for truth as the other is not and respects the highest law of his being.—Emerson's "Essay on Intellect."

CROSS QUESTIONED

Suffered With That Dread Malady for Fifteen Years—Treated by Five Different Doctors—Literally Rescued From Death by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Middleton, P. E. I., Dec. 30.—Mr. M. B. Connick, the well known blacksmith of this place, known all over the Island as the man whom Dodd's Kidney Pills saved from death as by a miracle has often been interviewed regarding his case and is ever ready to supply the facts.

"I had been a victim of kidney trouble for fifteen years before I took Dodd's Kidney Pills," said Mr. Connick in a recent conversation.

"Did you know it was Bright's Disease, Mr. Connick?"

"Well, one day a customer and I found it out I was startled, I can tell you. In those days, you know, Bright's Disease was incurable. I went to five different doctors. They could do no good. Finally my wife and I went together to one who told us right out there was no use taking our money. I could not be cured. I felt that it was all over."

"How did you come to take Dodd's Kidney Pills?"

"Well, one day a customer and I were talking of the death of a neighbor, and my customer said he was quite sure if he had taken Dodd's Kidney Pills he would have been cured. That set me thinking. For the last six years I had been forced to hire a man to do my work. Well, I began to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and before I had finished the third box I was again at work. I can shoe a horse as well today as ever I could in my life."

"Do you mean to say that three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured you of Bright's Disease of fifteen years' standing?"

"Yes, sir, that's exactly what I mean. I was so stiff and sore I could not stoop to pick up anything—couldn't put on my shoes. If my wife was here she would tell more about Dodd's Kidney Pills than I can."

Mr. Connick is now 57 years old and the picture of health and strength.

It Stands Unrivalled.

Shagreen, now made from the skins of sharks and rays, was a name originally applied to a substance made from the hides of horses and asses.

The Brightest Flowers must fade, but young lives endangered by severe coughs and colds may be preserved by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, in short all affections of the throat and lungs, are relieved by this sterling preparation, which also remedies rheumatic pains, sprains, bruises piles, kidney difficulty, and is most economic.

If we could see ourselves as others see us all oculists would have to work overtime.

REGAIN YOUR HEALTH

How many men are suffering miseries for the want of a simple remedy? They do not live; they simply exist. In the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because there vitality is being sapped. Varicocele, wasting drains have exhausted nature's electrical forces and left them wrecks upon the shores of life.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt

Is the grandest remedy of the age for building up wrecked humanity. It fills the exhausted nerves and organs with the fire of life. If you will use it while you sleep for two months it will restore youthful vigor to every organ of the body. It is the only electrical body appliance in the world to-day that will infuse the life force into the weakened parts.

It is curing thousands. I can furnish you with testimonials from those whom I have cured. Perhaps some of them your neighbours.

Read these Encouraging Cures

I am still wearing it, and will tell you about the result. I have gained about fifteen pounds, and my back does not bother me now.—D. CRIBBIS, Guelph, Ont.

Your belt has helped my nerves, and I have gained in flesh, and my joints are looser.—CLAUDE COOPER, Box 182, Chatham, Ont.

Before using your Belt I was given up by eight doctors, and was reduced to 98 pounds, and confined to my bed as weak as an infant. It is now five months since I started the use of the Belt, and am completely cured, and have gained 62 pounds.—T. N. BROWN, Collingwood, Ont.

I have been wearing your Belt nightly for nearly a month. I am using it for constipation, and I am also applying the suspensory with good results.—W. F. GRAHAM, Pettipiece, Man.

The pains and weakness have left my back, and to tell the truth I have no pains or aches at all since using your Belt.—T. J. PATRICK, Rockton, Ont.

CAUTION—If you value your health, do not accept an imitation of my Belt. There are many on the market Old style, blistering scorchers, whose only merit is their ability to burn and scar the flesh, are being offered with a cheap imitation of my Cushion Electrode. But it is a sham. Don't accept it. The is none too good when you want your health, your vigor; so avoid imitations. The cushion electrode is my special invention. Without it all electric belts blister and burn holes in the flesh and can do no good. I take the other belts in trade.

FREE BOOK—Every man who admires the perfection of physical strength should read my beautiful illustrated book. It tells how strength is lost and how I restore it with my Electric Belt. I will send this book, closely sealed, free upon request if you will send this ad. If you are not the man you should be, write to-day.

EDITORIAL CROPPINGS.

February 13 has been set as the date for the assembling of the Dominion parliament. The session is expected to be short.

Hon. Mr. Dobell, a member of the Dominion cabinet without portfolio, was killed on Saturday, by being thrown from his horse. The accident occurred at Folkestone, England, where deceased had gone for the benefit of his health. Much sorrow is expressed over the sad event.

The provincial legislature has been summoned to meet for the dispatch of business on February 20th. This disposes of the cry that Premier Dunsmuir was afraid to face the house and would not call the members together till the last moment. What will happen after the house assembles is a subject for spirited speculation, the odds being in favor of an early dissolution.

The Vancouver Province has just sprung a real surprise of its own on the public, to the effect that the Liberals mean to absorb the Labor party throughout the province. Interested Liberals are said to be pushing the scheme for all they are worth. There is just one little weak spot in the proposition—the Labor side of it has not been heard. But two to one they tell the Liberals to go chase themselves. The Labor party intend to do a little skirmishing in the next provincial election, and the Liberals had better "go 'way back and sit down."

Premier Dunsmuir has come out of his hole and given the public a four-column letter, explanatory of his past actions and outlining the intentions of his government. He denies Joe Martin's controlling influences and holds to it that all parties should work together for the best interests of the province, which was rapidly becoming the most important section of the Dominion. In his outline of the government's programme, Premier Dunsmuir advocates to a limited extent the state ownership of railways and promises a fair and just redistribution bill at the approaching session of the legislature. He also favors the re-adjustment of the two per cent tax on the mining industry, and aims at a lessening of railway freight rates throughout the province. The encouragement of the shipbuilding industry, control of the fisheries, and various other matters are touched on. Mr. Dunsmuir puts up a strong talk and now it remains to be seen what the legislators will do about it.

Managing Director Frecheville of the Le Roi Mining Co. has submitted his report on the situation at Rossland and Northport to the stockholders. In it he goes rough shod for Barney McDonald and Bela Kadish, ex-managers for the company at the respective places named. He remarks, "My investigation shows that there has been very great extravagance and loose management, resulting in unwarranted expenditures and high working costs; also that under proper control your property would have paid dividends from the start." After other kindred strictures, in which he accuses Bela Kadish of being nothing short of a common boodler, Mr. Frecheville says of the labor troubles between the company and its employees "I am of the opinion that the strike was mainly brought about by the injudicious and arbitrary action of Bela Kadish." Now, who's the liar? Certainly not the Miner's Union, for thus, after many days, have their earliest assertions been verified.
