THE WEEK'S CATCH.

News and Gossip Gleaned by Asking many People many Questions

"The Story of the Cross," a Cantata in five parts, will be sung at the Anglican Church on Good Friday.

W. Sharp, representing the well-known Spokane firm of brokers, Sharp & Irvine, is touring the district. He was in town yesterday, and left for Sandon in the evening.

Rehearsals are now proceeding for a three-act drama to be staged by New Denver Amateurs on May 25th. The title is "Tom Cobb or Fortune's Toy." The author of the play is W. S. Gilbert. The author of the play is W. S. Gilbert. The author of the play is W. S. Gilbert.

Rev. Chalmers preached at Slocan last Sunday.

In view of the proposed incursion of mountaineers who will follow the crowd to the glacier, the hotel men will undoubtedly put their best leg forward to make the necessary preparations for many distinguished visitors. "Glacier Day" will be the resurrection day of the Lucerne.

IRIGATION ITEM.—A brilliant discovery has been made by a local thirder. The Three Forks Hotel has the biggest schooner in the district. Above the door of a saloon not a thousand miles from Revelstoke appears the following: "Try our 1896 Whisky. Once drunk, always drunk."

The present apology for a post-office in this town is a disgrace to the district. Just so long as no kick is registered we shall suffer in silence. Let your voices be heard—and kick!

Silver is 55 1/4 to-day. London lead is 214 1/2.

We were in error last week when we stated that J. D. Cavan has the contract for hauling Standard ore. Palma Angrierson informs us he has had the contract for some time.

When a preacher tries to be a star he is sure to blot out somebody's sunlight. The man who said Jealousy and Reason are not on speaking terms hit harder than he knew.

What's in a name? The foreman printer at the Nelson News refuses in the euphonious one of Ink. That's better than Mud, anyway. He celebrated his 41st birthday this week, and he has been in Nelson 18 years.

The political air is full of froth. Those likely ones spoken of as conservative candidates are W. A. Macdonald, K.C., and R. S. Lennie, of Nelson; James Schofield of Trail, the present sitting member for Ymir in the Provincial Legislature; Fred Starkey, of Nelson. Wm. Hunter, the provincial member for this riding, and A. E. Watts, of Watsburg. "Bill" Gallier, the present member, would be a hard man to unseat if he again contested the riding, but it is rumored that he will retire at the end of his term. F. J. Deane, Editor of the Nelson News, will likely be seen in the arena in the event of Gallier's retirement as a Liberal candidate.

Charles Delaney, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Delaney, of this town, arrived on Monday from Peterboro, Ont., to visit his parents. He is shortly going to Vancouver to enter an engineering works there as electrical engineer.

A mudslide came down on Wednesday near the safety switch between Three Forks and Sandon, bringing trees, etc., with it. The train from Nakusp could not get through that night, but the right of way was cleared this morning and the passengers who had been held at Three Forks were able to continue their journey.

The Cranbrook Herald last week celebrated its tenth anniversary. Although on the wrong side of politics the Herald is the best weekly paper in the interior, and under the able editorship and management of "Old Man" Fred Simpson it has become a power in the land. Ten years ago the Herald was printed on a Washington hand press. To-day the Herald Office is the most up-to-date office in the Kootenays. The Herald has made Cranbrook what it is, and its boast will be heard even after Gabriel has gathered the present staff home.

Fred Simpson will, in the happy some day, sit among the canonized editors of B.C., and the patron saint of Cranbrook will wear a golden banana.

The bridge crew had a hurry-up call to Nakusp on Tuesday, where a washing-out had occurred. The dump under a trestle bridge had slid away.

Another instance of our prolific soil and climate is worth recording. Last week, Mr. J. C. Bolander, a well-known New Denver resident, gathered a crop of asparagus in his garden. Also in his garden may now be seen stocks a foot high. Crocuses and snowdrops are plentiful everywhere.

Harold and Jimmy Baker have returned home to their parents at Vernon.

We are glad to learn of the good times around the Kaslo Kootenay office, and congratulate our esteemed co-tem upon installing a monoline typesetting machine. If the people of the Slocan will do their part we should be in a position to do likewise within twelve months.

Many of our citizens are contemplating a trip to the New Denver glaciers as soon as the snow has disappeared from the mountain, and we think that the Town Improvement Society should inaugurate a "Glacier Day," and upon that day invite the Canadian Alpine Club to make the ascent. Even were they not successful the first year in securing the patronage of that association, there would be many visitors who would be only too delighted to join the local party were they but invited to do so. Anyhow, our magnificent glacier needs exploring and exploiting.

A convention of the Sunday Schools of the Slocan district will be held at New Denver on April 21st. On Monday, the 20th, a special meeting is being arranged for in the evening, when Rev. Kenmore, Slocan City, and Rev. W. Muirhead of the Eastern B.C. Sunday School Association, will be present and deliver addresses. All interested in the movement are requested to attend the meeting on the 20th at the Presbyterian Church, when the object of the Convention will be definitely announced. The details of the program and session will be announced later.

Dana J. McDougall is safely emerging from a critical illness. On Saturday last he was in a very dangerous condition, and Drs. Bruce and Gomm held a consultation on Sunday and agreed that appendicitis was the trouble. All will be pleased to learn that Dan is now out of danger, and is improving.

Hermann Clever is entering the lists with a brand new 22 feet gasoline launch, and he has erected a splendid boat-house for its reception when it arrives. Albert Owens is also building a boat house for his new launch. Evidently Eddie Angrierson will have to get a wiggle on if he means to hold the club's trophies this year.

Anglican Services next Sunday: St. Stephen's, New Denver—Matins, 11; Union Church, Silverton—Evenson, 7-30.

Wednesday evening Services during Lent: St. Stephen's Church, New Denver at 8 o'clock.

Three bandits, on Monday last, held up a rig at Reno, Nev., in which was $45,000 belonging to a mining company. They don't do such thing in the effects Slocan. The printer is the only man held up.

With regard to the recent Tory landslide in New Brunswick, we have read with great amusement the "reason why" in the Nelson News. Umka!

A raffa for a bull has caused some fun this week. The animal has a long pedigree and the widow for whose benefit it has been promoted, is disposing of many tickets. Many have been sold here.

No apology for purloining Denver's beautiful scenery has yet been forthcoming from the Nelson 20,000 club.

Murdoch McLean has returned from an extended trip to Nelson on business.

Angus McInnes, mining recorder and road-inspector, paid a visit to Watson's Siding this week to inspect the cribbing which has been constructed there to protect the bridge against spring freshets.

Chas. F. Nelson went to Nelson on Tuesday to meet a representative of a well-known North of England angler's supply house. It is Mr. Nelson's intention to lay in a stock of sporting goods that cannot be surpassed in the Kootenays.

Dunc. McKinnon has been superintending the construction of the extensive cribbing at Watson's Siding. He returned to town Monday.

As announced in our columns recently, the Wakefield mill is shortly to be put into commission on Hewitt ore. George Gordon left for Silverton on Tuesday to get the mill in shape to treat the first ore to come over the new tram.

Host Anthony Madden, of the Madden House, Slocan, is going to considerable expense in renovating the annex to the hotel. The bar has now been transferred, and its present location is miles ahead of the old order of things. In a few weeks the Madden Hotel will be a palatial rendezvous for tourists.

Signs of prosperity are to be noted around the hotels. Several card tables have been renovated. Seven-up is harder on some tables than poker, but poker promises to become the leading excitement.

Harold and Jimmy Baker have returned home to their parents at Vernon.

Slocan Lake Fruit Lands

Mrs. Matheson, who has been indisposed during the greater part of winter has decided to retire from business. All will be pleased to learn that she is now able to walk around. All the general groceries and fancy goods at the store she has run for several years, are now marked down to quick sale prices.

Can any reader give an intelligent solution to the crude hieroglyphics upon the rocks on the other side of the lake. They are evidently messages from an Indian tribe, but so far no one has been able to decipher them.

Brydges, Blakemore & Cameron, the well-known land agents of New Denver and Nelson, this week sold a parcel of land to two settlers in the Slocan.

We regret to report the death, from pneumonia, of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hicks, which sad event occurred at Slocan City on Monday, 15th inst.

Mr. and Mrs. John Atherton and infant daughter arrived from Manchester, England, on Saturday last, and will make their home at New Denver. Mr. Atherton is a first cousin of "Jay-Jay's" and he will take charge of the mechanical end of this paper in future. They travelled across the herring pond on the Empress of Britain, and made the trip through in fifteen days. Mr. Atherton is an AI crackjack printer, and a perfect glutton for work. Bring in your ads.

Now for tall stories. Trout season has opened.

Charley Nelson returned from Nelson, Wednesday. The people who strewed rice and confetti in front of his store, have another think coming.

The Silverton Lumber & Power Co., Ltd., of which Wm. Hunter, M.P.P., is the managing director, will have their new sawmill completed by the 1st of May. It will require some tall rustling to do this, but Mr. Hunter informs us that, given good weather, it will be accomplished in that time. The new railway track is graded, and logging is proceeding at the camp opposite Silverton. The company has a big tie contract for the C.P.R., but they will also market general lumber.

Owing to the heavy fall of snow between Alamo and Sandon, the train service has been discontinued this week. This is the season when the rollicking snowslide gets fresh and asserts itself.

D. J. Nicholson, the brilliant violinist who has delighted Slocan audiences of late, has left for Greenwood. Whilst here he was the guest of Rev. Gifford.

For the English Football Cup there were over two hundred entries. There were first rounds, second rounds, third rounds, fourth rounds, and semi-finals. Whoever wins has yet to meet Sandon, champions of the Selkirk, before they can lay claim to doing something big.

The K. & S. traffic has been disturbed this week owing to a couple of bridges having been washed out by mudslides. A new bridge near McGuigan will be constructed this year, work upon which will be begun about the 1st of May.

If this should meet the eye of any home-seeker, we can honestly advise Slocan Lake for a location. Investigate our fruit lands—none better.

Whoever is nominated for the Slocan riding to contest the seat at the next Dominion election, should be a clean man. He should be free from corporation intrigues, an enemy of graft, and no wind-jammer. He should be a man whom the division will respect for his conscientious labors in his sphere of usefulness at Ottawa, and he should be beyond reproach as a friend of labor. He should be unbiased when capital and labor clash, and he should through his weight with the right. It would be a sacrifice of interests to send a man whose voice is heard only on behalf of capital, and by the same common law, it would be unjust to return a man whose vote and interest is selfishly devoted to labor alone. The division requires the services of a broad-minded energetic man, whose interests are our interests, and the division should see that the real article is returned.

Publicity will do much for Slocan Lake towns. Slocan fruit lands are the cream of Kootenay. Hammer that in; it is the most profitable kind of knocking.

According to an eastern dispatch, "A white wolf has been captured near Ottawa." Now, who let Laurier out.

Nelson has sneak thieves who carry off meat, provisions and all kinds of small goods from doorsteps.—Vide Nelson News. They might, have added, "scenery."

The extension of the lead bounty has not yet been made. Nobody in the Slocan is losing much sleep over it, despite reports in subsidized papers to the contrary.

In the forthcoming Dominion elections, which, by the way, we prognosticate will take place next November, much will be heard locally of "wage slaves" and the "capitalistic press."

The "wage slaves" of B.C., however, can get happily "yump their job" if it doesn't suit, and the man that says the "Review" is subsidized by capitalists, is a liar.

Drury Lane theatre, the home of English drama, was completely destroyed by fire yesterday.

LATER.—The fire proof curtain was lowered and the auditorium was saved.

A recent dispatch from Montreal says that Mr. Howard, of England, is coming out West to revolutionize oat growing. He says it is a mistake to say that English oats will not produce good results in the West, and he is coming to show us how to do it. We have had lots of Englishmen in the West sowing oats hitherto, but they have been of the wild variety.

Presbyterian services will be held at Sandon on Sunday next at 7-30. Cody at 2-30. W. M. Chalmers, Pastor.

The Slocan Gun Club are practising with the new Ross rifle.

A wag has nicknamed the Town Improvement Society the "T.I.S." T.I.S. is this; yes 'tis, you bet 'tis. 'Tis bringing New Denver out of the rut. Also 'tis an aggregation of pessimist knockers, and an all-round boosters club.

Next Friday the "T.I.S." holds a Cafe Chantant in the Boson Hall. We look to seeing a big crowd there, as the proceeds go towards building new sidewalks. We also expect the Chantant will be the means of unearthing much new good local musical and dramatic talent. Everybody dig 4 bits for this! Join the triumphant army of boosters!

A kind Providence sent a shower of angle worms over the town one day this week. It is suggested that they were sent to feed the chicks in embryo in Bolander's incubator. They came two days too soon.

Three mining claims, the property of the defunct "Pioneer Mining Company," were sold by public auction at the Strathcona Hotel, Nelson, on Wednesday. The purchaser was Clement Bell, and he paid $6,543.

We congratulate our old friend A. E. Becker upon entering the ranks of Benedict, and we wish Tony and his life's partner all kinds of joy and prosperity. The bride is Mrs. Pinkney, who for some time was cook at the Reco hotel, Sandon, but was latterly of the Sandon Hotel. Robt. Cuning accompanied the happy couple to Nelson, to witness the tying of the nuptial knot.

There will be a Leap Year Ball at Sandon this Friday night. New Denver visitors are especially invited.

Rev. Baynes has been confined to his room this week with an attack of rheumatism.

Some extra fine-looking fir timber, cut on Slocan Lake, went out on yesterday's barge for the C.P.R. The logs will be used for wharf and bridge piles. They were cut by J. Jost and D. McPherson.

Rev. W. G. Brown, for some years Presbyterian minister for this district, has accepted a call to Red Deer, Alta. He goes to his new mission April 8th.

Our Fruit Growers' Column.

It will be well for us to take stock of the country and carefully consider along what lines it can best be developed, and for what crops or class of stock it is best suited. We can grow the small fruits to perfection, as Mr. Vanstone has so well demonstrated at Rosebery, and we have a local market that can take a good deal of fruit if it is properly looked after, and regularly supplied, but as regards the big outside markets we must confess that at present we are at a considerable disadvantage. To overcome this disadvantage, if we decide that we wish to grow the small fruits we must co-operate. Our trouble lies in the fact that we should have to grow the fruit on a very large scale and make regular shipments of car loads right from the neighbourhood, otherwise our fruit will suffer from the delay and rehandling at some distant point.

If we do manage to ship by the car load, and we are careful to grow the right sort of fruit and pack it in the right way, the small extra distance that we are from the North-West, compared with such points as Nelson, will not be a very serious disadvantage.

If we wish to grow strawberries for outside points, we shall need to get together and decide on the variety to grow; then each must agree to plant and look after a certain quantity, for it will not pay to go for the outside markets in any half-hearted manner.

We can grow peaches here, but there are places where they can grow them much better, I believe; whereas I also believe that there is no place where they can grow better apples, pears, or plums. Therefore, it seems plain to myself that we had better concentrate our efforts on these.

The valley of the Slocan River has always appeared to me to be admirably suited for dairying. There is a large amount of land that is flooded in the early summer, but which should make splendid pasturage at the time when the benches are getting dried up. We can grow red clover to perfection here; with the aid of irrigation we should be able to get two crops per year. We can also grow splendid roots if we keep the cut-worms well poisoned off, the summer nights are cool and there is abundance of good water. Now these are the conditions that make a good dairy country. When we consider the splendid local market for butter and the high prices we pay for very inferior butter, we shall wonder how long it will be before the farmers down the Slocan River get together and build a creamery.

But if this country can be made a good dairying country, it is even better adapted to poultry—and poultry raising and fruit growing go better together than dairying and fruit growing. There is no reason why eggs, chickens or turkeys should be imported to this neighbourhood, and we will look forward to the time when the Slocan is self supporting in this matter.

We are not likely to become famous for wheat or oats, but we may hope to raise a great part of our chicken feed, and by letting the hens do their own thrashing, we shall keep them well exercised and healthy during the winter. Mr. George Williamson planted some fall wheat last September, at the same time sowing the land down to clover, and it appears to me that we are likely to find this plan profitable, though care will have to be exercised where the wheat is grown amongst fruit trees, that the land is well cultivated round each tree.

J. C. HARRIS.

Geo. Bruder, the man that brews the hops that have made Sandon famous, returned from a trip to the east. He returned alone, rumor to the contrary notwithstanding.

LAND ACT.—KOOTENAY LAND, DISTRICT.

Take Notice that I, Jesse T. Tipping of Slocan City, B.C., occupation, miner, intend to apply for permission to purchase the following described lands:

Commencing at a post planted about one and a half mile south east of Slocan City, B.C., near the north boundary of W. C. E. Koch's land, thence north 60 chains, thence east 60 chains, thence south 60 chains, thence west 60 chains and containing 360 acres more or less.

JESSE T. TIPPING
Slocan City, B.C. March 2nd, 1908.

Where they Stand.

Now that the Liquor Licence Act has been amended, it will perhaps be instructive to publish a survey of the amended Act, as all hotels, with the exception of those directly within the jurisdiction of municipalities, come under the amended law. Primarily, all districts under "Liquor Licence Act, 1900," have been abolished. This does away with License Commissioners, and all powers are now vested in the Superintendent of Provincial Police, but it is lawful for the superintendent of provincial police to grant licenses to sell liquor in localities not in any municipality, and not included in any license district, and all persons obtaining the same shall be subject to all the provisions of the Act as far as applicable. The superintendent shall be guided by the provisions of the Act in granting the licenses, except when the circumstances of the case render it impossible or inconvenient to do so, provided that no application for new licenses or a renewal has been granted, and then only can the application be entertained, provided that the applicant has advertised his intention of applying for such license, such advertisement shall be published in a newspaper published and circulated in the district for a period of one month.

The superintendent of provincial police may at any time cause any license granted or renewed by him to be cancelled upon satisfactory proof that the licensee is not keeping his premises in accordance with the provisions of the Act, or is keeping his premises in a disorderly manner.

D. J. McKenzie Killed.

The sad news reached town yesterday of a fatal accident at Tunnel, B. C., a flag station in the boundary, between Cascade and Robson. From the information of the sad event which is at our command, we learn that Mr. D. J. McKenzie, the highly esteemed C.P.R. bridge superintendent of this division was crushed to death by a falling derrick. The sorrowful news has cast a gloom over this district, where Mr. McKenzie was well known. He was one of the oldest timers in this section, but when at home he lived at Nelson. He was in New Denver a few days ago, and his genial presence was as sunshine to cloud. To his sorrowing relatives we extend the sympathy of this district.

Leasers Get Decision.

Judgment in the suit of Forrest et al versus Smith and Traves has been handed in by Justice Martin. The case has excited a great deal of local interest and the finding of Mr. Justice Hunter is being fully criticized throughout the district. The suit was heard at Nelson on Friday, December 18th last, and the hearing occupied a day, all parties then agreed to the suggestion of the learned judge to hand in his judgment in writing at a later date.

The defendant, Walker Smith, had a lease upon all the Payne mine workings, and from him the plaintiff, A. C. Forrest, and partners secured a sub-lease on No. 5 level. Plaintiffs were to receive 75 per cent. on all ore extracted by them during their tenure, the remaining 25 per cent. being divided between the company, Smith, and the Government. Smith, it was asserted, was in financial difficulties, and prior to granting the sub-lease he borrowed money on a chattel mortgage from E. C. Traves, the well-known meat merchant, of Nelson. Plaintiffs strenuously denied knowledge of this mortgage.

The mortgage covered all the ore taken out by Smith, and upon the plaintiffs making arrangements to ship some $3,000 worth of silver-lead they were threatened with legal proceedings. Plaintiffs asked that the chattel mortgage be set aside. The judgment given is in favor of Forrest and Partners for the amount claimed, but they will have to collect from Smith, as the learned judge has decided that the mortgage holds good. The action against Traves was dismissed with costs.

It is probable that an appeal will be made. S. S. Taylor for plaintiffs, R. W. Hannington and R. M. McDonald for defendants.

SOMETHING WRONG WITH THIS EDITOR.

Speaking of the rotten shows that come over the Crow's Nest line, the Fernie Free Press thinks it is due to the fact that performers of merit do not have to suffer the trials of an itinerary through the smaller towns of the growing west to make a living. It says: "We have seen the trusting public of Fernie put up a dollar per chair to see a so-called vaudeville combination that had been forced out of the dime theatres of the Coast cities for lack of patronage. We have heard voices that are eminently suited to the useful service of calling the cattle home, murdering everything from a coster song to grand opera, and these people were heralded as artists in their 'line,' but we would rather pay a dollar to be fooled by a stranger than to lend the countenance of our presence to an entertainment composed of home talent that can entertain. Pass the singer, please."

ALPINE SOCIETY IS INVITED.

Town Club will Prepare For A Specially Organized Trip to Glacier.

Again the Town Improvement Society has showed its business acumen, and the latest step toward bringing New Denver to the front is one that will meet with the commendation of all. It is, in short, a combined effort to attach to the New Denver glacier the importance in the world of sights that it warrants. The glacier overlooking the town of New Denver has rightly been looked upon as an asset to the town. Its wonders have for ages remained unrecorded, and it was only quite recently that foot of civilized man first trod upon the veritable sea of ice. Isglories will be known more fully; the dark canyons and moraines, which have frowned upon the advances of man to seek farther, will be conquered, and the united hand of mountain climbers who will make the ascent under the auspices of the New Denver Improvement Society will see much to marvel at. This ascent is proposed to be made about mid-summer, and all details will be announced later. The trail to the glacier by that time will be in good shape and substantial cabins where the travellers will spend the night will be established. Invitations will be extended to the Canadian Alpine Club and representatives of the press, and the expenses of the actual trip to the glacier will be borne by the T. I. Society.

Whilst in town the visitors will be the guests of the society, and an effort will be made to supersede all previous hospitality. It is indeed a comprehensive style of advertising our scenic beauties to the world, and all will vie in giving the visitors the time of their lives.

The above was mooted at the regular meeting of the executive committee held on March 25th and the matter has been taken up with an earnestness that is commendable.

Other business transacted was as follows:

The Secretary (H. Cue) reported having written to L. O. Armstrong, C.P.R. Advertising Manager, relative to including New Denver in the list of tourist resorts upon C.P.R. literature.

The Secretary of Fishery Committee reported having written to Mr. Gallier, Brouse-Moeran. That a mass meeting of the citizens be held on April 7th next to arrange for the celebration on May 25th.

Several requests having been sent into the Society that they take up the matter of a better post office accommodation, it was decided to bring the matter up at next meeting.

The entry and prize list for the Fall Fruit Fair will be discussed at next meeting.

Literary contributions were submitted and arrangements made for their reproductions in magazines, etc.

The meeting adjourned until April 8th.

Mariners and Landlubbers.

There was a jolly time at Slocan City on Tuesday evening last, when the officers of the Strathcona Hotel, under a Program Ball to the fashionable quota at the end of the lake. The venue was the recently renovated Odell's Hall, where about thirty couples described the poetry of motion until chancier heralded the morn. Wm. Hicks made a gallant M.C., and Northey's Orchestra achieved further laurels.

The mariners provided an excellent supper, which was a feast for the gods. At the conclusion the guests gave three cheers for the boat crew.

WHAT AN EDITOR THINKS.

The Nelson Canadian, of 21st inst. makes some remarks which all merchants and business men in the Slocan should carefully ponder over. It says: "The Slocan Mining Review, of New Denver, has in view the extension of its facilities for getting out a better paper, and this will mean an additional expenditure of $100 per month. The publisher appeals to the residents of the Slocan to increase their patronage, so that he will not have to stand all the expense. The Review is one of the brightest weekly papers published in British Columbia, and if the people of the Slocan district consult their own interests, they will respond to the appeal by increasing the revenue, not $100 a month, but five times that amount. Every dollar spent that way will return many fold."

J. W. M. Tinning, of Silverton, who returned from a visit to his old home in Ontario, is in town to-day.

It was rather uncomfortable at the table after that, and rather quiet, too, as Maddy did not care to ask anything more concerning her faint, while the others were not disposed to talk.

Breakfast over, the two young men repaired to the library, where Guy indulged in his cigar, while the doctor fidgeted for a time, and then broke out abruptly:

"I say, Guy, have you said anything to her about—well, about me, you know?"

"Why, no, I've hardly had a chance; and then, again, I concluded it better for each one to speak for himself"; and carelessly knocking the ashes from his half-smoked cigar, Guy leaned back in his chair, with his eyes, and, to all appearance, thoughts, wholly intent upon the curls of smoke rising above his head.

"Guy, if you were not engaged, I should be tempted to think you wanted Maddy Clyde yourself," the doctor suddenly exclaimed, confronting Guy, who, still watching the rings of smoke, answered with the most provoking coolness, "You should?"

"Yes, I should; and I am not certain but you do, as it is. Guy," and the doctor grew very earnest in his manner, "if you do care for Maddy Clyde, and she for you, pray tell me, before I am turned out of myself."

"Doctor," returned Guy, throwing the remains of his cigar into the grate and folding his hands on his head, "you desire that I be frank, and I will. I like Maddy Clyde very much—more, indeed, than any girl I ever met—except Lucy. Had I never seen her—Lucy, I mean—I cannot tell how the chances are, however, that much as I admire her, I should not make her my wife, even if she was willing. But I have seen Lucy. I am engaged to be married. I shall keep that engagement, and if you have fears of me as all as a rival, you may fear me no longer. I do not stand between you and Maddy Clyde."

Guy believed that he was saying the truth, notwithstanding that his heart beat faster than its wont, and his voice was a little thick. It was doubtful whether he would marry Maddy Clyde, if he could. By nature and education he was very proud, and the inmates of the red cottage would have been an obstacle to be surmounted by his pride. He knew they were good, far better than himself; but from his earliest remembrance, he had been taught that blood and family and position were all-important, and by virtue of them Remington was a name of which to be proud; that his father's foolish marriage with a pretty governess was the first misalliance ever known in the family, and that he was not likely to follow that example was a point fully established in his own mind. He might admire Maddy very much, and, perhaps, his built castle of what might possibly have been, had she been in his sphere of life; but, should he verily think of making her his wife, the olden pride would certainly come up a barrier between them. Guy could not explain all this to the doctor, who would have been tempted to knock him down, if he had; but he succeeded in quieting his fears, and even suggested bringing Maddy in there, if the doctor wished to know his fate then.

"I hear her now—I'll call her," he said; and, opening the door, he spoke to Maddy, just passing through the hall. "Dr. Holbrook wishes to see you," he said, as Maddy came up to him; and holding the door for her to enter, he saw her take the seat he had just vacated. Then closing it upon them, he walked away, thinking that last night's party, or something, had produced a bad effect on him, making him blue and wretched, just as he should suppose a criminal would feel when about to be executed.

CHAPTER XVI.

Now that they were alone, the doctor's courage forsook him and he could only stammer out some commonplace remarks about the party asking how Maddy had enjoyed it, and if she was sure she had entirely recovered from the effects of her fainting fit. He was not getting on at all, and it was impossible for him to say anything as he had meant to say it. Why couldn't she help him, instead of looking so unobtrusively at him with those large, bright eyes? Didn't she know how dear she was to him? He should think she might. She might have divined it ere this; and if so, why didn't she blush, or something?

At last she came to his aid by saying, "You promised to tell me about the bracelets and necklace, whether I ought to keep them."

"Yes, oh, yes, he believed he did." And getting up from his chair, the doctor began to walk the floor, the better to hide his confusion. "Yes, the bracelets. You looked very pretty in them, Maddy, very; but you are always pretty—them—yes, but you were engaged to Guy I should say it was proper; but if not, why, I don't know; the fact is, Maddy, I am not quite certain what I am saying, so you must excuse me. I almost hated you that day you sent the note, talking me you were coming to be examined; but I had not seen you then—I did not know how, after a while—a very little while—I should in all probability—well, I did; I changed my mind, and—I guess you have not the slightest idea what I mean." And stopping suddenly, he confronted the astonished Maddy, who replied:

"Not unless you are going crazy." She could in no other way account for his strange conduct, and she sat staring at him while he continued: "I told you once that when I wanted my bill I'd let you know. I'd ask for you. I want it now. I present my bill."

With a scared, miserable feeling, Maddy listened to him, wondering where she should get the money, if it were possible for her grandfather to raise it, and how much her entire wardrobe would bring, suppose she should sell it. The bill had not troubled her latterly, for she had fallen into a way of believing that the doctor would wait until she was graduated and could earn it by teaching. Nothing could be more inopportune than for him to present it now; and with a half-stifled sob she began to speak, but he silenced her by a gesture, and sitting down beside her, said in a voice more natural than the one with which he had at first addressed her:

"Maddy, I know you have no money. It is not that I want, Maddy; I want—I want—you."

He bent down over her now, for her face was hidden in her hands, all sense of sight shut out, all sense of hearing, too, save the words he was pouring into her ear—words which burned their way into her heart, making it throb for a single moment with gratified pride, and then growing heavy as lead as she knew how impossible it was for her to pay the debt as he desired.

"I can't, doctor; oh, I can't!" she sobbed. "I never dreamed of this; never supposed you could want me for your wife. I'm only a little girl—only sixteen last October—but I'm so sorry for you, who have been so kind. If I only could love you as you deserve! I do love you, too; but not the way you mean, no, doctor, I cannot."

She was sobbing piteously, and in his concern for her the doctor forgot somewhat the stunning blow he had received.

"Don't, Maddy, darling," he said, drawing her trembling form closely to him. "Don't cry, Maddy, but tell me, and I was a fool to ask you. I am too old; but, Maddy, Guy is as old as I am."

The doctor did not know why he said this, unless in the first keenness of his disappointment there was a satisfaction in telling her that the objection to his age would apply also to her. But it did not affect Maddy one whit, or give her the slightest inkling of his meaning. He saw it did not, and the pain was less hard to bear. Still, he would know certainly if he had a rival, and so he said:

"Do you love someone else, Maddy? Is another preferred before me, and is that the reason why you cannot?"

"No," Maddy answered, through her tears. "There is no one else. Whom should I love, unless it were you? I know nobody but Guy."

That name touched a sore, aching chord in the doctor's heart, but he gave no sign of the jealousy which had seized him, and for a moment there was silence in the room; then, as the doctor began faintly to realize that Maddy had refused him, she awoke within him a more intense desire to win her than he had ever felt before. He would not give her up without another effort, and laying her head upon his bosom, he pleaded again for her love, going over all the past, and telling of the interest awakened when first she came to him that April afternoon, almost two years ago; then of the little sick girl who had grown so into the heart never before affected in the least by womankind, and lastly of the beautiful woman he called her, sitting beside him now in all the freshness of her young womanhood. And Maddy, as she listened, felt for him a strange kind of pity, a wish to do his bidding if she only could, and why shouldn't she? Girls had married those whom they did not love, and been tolerably happy with them, too. Perhaps she could be so with the doctor. There was everything about him to respect, and much which she could love. Should she try? There was a great lump in Maddy's throat as she tried to speak, but it cleared away, and she said very sadly, but very earnestly:

"Dr. Holbrook, would you like me to say yes with my lips, when all the time there was something at my heart tugging to answer no?"

This was not at all what Maddy meant to say, but the words were born of her extreme truthfulness, and the doctor thus learned the nature of the struggle which he saw plainly was going on.

"No, Maddy, I would not have you say yes unless your heart was in it," he answered, while he tried to smile upon the tearful face looking up so sorrowfully at him.

But the smile was a forlorn one, and there came instead a tear as he thought how dear was the fair creature who never would be his. Maddy saw the tear, and as if she were a child wiped it from his cheek; then, in tones which never faltered, she told him it might be in time she'd learn to love him. She would try so hard, she'd think of him always as her promised husband, and by that means should learn at last not to shrink from taking him for such. It might be ever so long, and perhaps she should be twenty or more, but some time in the future she should feel differently. Was he satisfied, and would he wait?

Her little hand was resting on his shoulder, but he did not mind its soft pressure or know that it was there, so strong was the temptation to accept that halcyon promise. But the doctor was too noble, too unselfish to bind Maddy to himself unless she were wholly willing, and he said to her that if she did not love him now she probably never would. She could not make a love. She need not try, as it would only result in her own unhappiness. They would be friends—just as they always had been, and one need know of what had passed between them, none but Guy. "I must tell him," the doctor said, "because he knows that I was going to ask you."

Maddy could not explain why it was that she felt glad the doctor would tell Guy. She did not analyze any of her feelings, or stop to ask why she should care to have Guy Remington know the answer she had given Dr. Holbrook. He was going to him now, she was sure, for he arose to leave her, saying he might not see her again before she returned to New York. She did not mention his bill. That was among the by-gones, a thing never again to be talked about, and offering him her hand, she looked for an instant earnestly into his face, then, without a word, hurried from the room, while the doctor, with a sad, heavy heart, went in quest of Guy.

"Refused you, did you say?" and

Guy's face certainly looked worse than it had before since he left the doctor with Maddy Clyde.

"Yes, refused me, as I might have known she would," was the doctor's reply, spoken so naturally that Guy looked up quickly to see if he really did not care.

But the expression of the face belied the calmness of the voice; and, touched with genuine pity, Guy asked the cause of the refusal—"preference for anyone else, or what?"

"No, there was one whom she preferred. She merely did not like me well enough to be my wife, that was all," the doctor said, and then he tried to talk of something else; but it would not do. The wound was yet too fresh and sore to be covered up, and in spite of himself the bearded chin quivered and the manly voice shook as he bade good-by to Guy, and then went galloping down the avenue.

Great was the consternation among the doctor's patients when they learned that their net physician—the one in whose skill they had so much confidence—was going to Europe, where in Paris he could perfect himself in his profession. Some cried, and among them Agnes; some said he knew enough already; some tried to dissuade him from his purpose; some wondered at the sudden start, while only two knew exactly why he was going—Guy and Maddy; the former approving his decision and lending his influence to make his tour abroad as pleasant as possible; and the latter weeping bitterly as she thought how she had sent him away, and held that distant land as the one in which, if he might befall him on the sea, or in that distant land, she would be able to find him. Once there came over her the wild impulse to bid him stay, to say that she would be his wife; but, ere the rash act was done, Guy came down to the cottage, and Maddy's resolution gave way at once.

It would be difficult to tell the exact nature of Maddy's liking for Guy at that time. Had he offered himself to her she would probably have refused him even more promptly than she did the doctor; for, to all intents and purposes, he was, in her estimation, the husband of Lucy Atherton. As such, there was no harm in making him her paragon of all male excellence; and Guy would have felt flattered could he have known how much he was in that young girl's thoughts. But now for a few days he had a rival, for Maddy's thoughts were all given to the doctor, who came down to see her once before starting for Europe. She did not cry while he was there, but her voice and her hoarse words gave him messages and all that day her face was white and sad, as are the faces of those who come back from burying their dead.

Only once after the party did she go up to Aikenside, and then, summoning all her fortitude, she gave back to Guy the bracelets and the necklace, telling him she ought not to wear them; that ornaments as rich as these were not for her; that her grandmother did not wish her to keep them, and he must take them back. Guy saw she was in earnest, and much against his will he received again the ornaments he had so gladly purchased.

"They would do for Jessie when she was older," Maddy said; but Guy thought it very doubtful whether Jessie would ever have them. They were something he had bought for Maddy, something she had worn, and as such they were too sacred to be given to another. So he laid them away beside the picture guarded so carefully from everyone.

Two weeks afterward Aikenside presented again a desolate, shut-up appearance; for Agnes, Maddy and Jessie had returned to New York; Agnes to continue the siege which, in despair of winning the doctor, she had commenced against a rival on Madison Square; and Maddy to her books, which, ere long obliterated, in a measure, the bitter memory of all that had transpired during her winter vacation.

THE SCULPTOR TURNED.

His Answer to the Art Critics in Paris.

At Chalons-upon-Saone stands the monument executed by Moreau-Vautier and Berard to commemorate the national defense—a superb cuirassier who carries across his saddle the body of a color bearer who yet clasps in his arms his broken standard.

On the eve of the unveiling the municipal council, presided over by the mayor, repaired to the foot of the statue to examine and see if it should be accepted.

"Are you not going to clean off this green mold?" asked the mayor of the sculptor.

"But, monsieur," replied the sculptor "that is verdigris."

"Verdigris! Verdigris!" said the mayor. "I understand that very well. But I know that this is verdigris but it is dirty. If I had a kitchen outfit of that color I would have it scoured. That must be cleaned up. You'll have to make that shine."

"But, monsieur—"

At that moment, a member of the council having struck the body of the bronze horse with his cane, they all cried out, "This sounds hollow!"

"Your bronze is hollow, monsieur," said the mayor.

The unhappy sculptor then took great pains to explain that all bronze statues were hollow. The mayor maintained an air of defiant incredulity and, as he passed around the monument he detailed the hair in the tail.

"This was too much for the sculptor. 'I washed,' he said, 'to screw natural hair into his tail like the hair used in children's bobbed-horses. It would have taken six months to have done so, and I reflected that it would have cost you too much.'"

And the municipal council of Chalons agreed with the justness of this observation.—Paris Cor.

The Eagle on the Coins. The new coins made from models by Saint Gaudens are not the first on which the American eagle is shown with plumage furled or at rest. Among the "individual coins" which were issued in the days of the civil war, there was a gold and silver famine, a one cent piece issued by a grocery concern in this state bore on one side the inscription, "Good for one cent—D. L. Wing," and on the reverse side had an eagle much like the Saint Gaudens bird. Another "good for one cent" coin put out by a New York restaurant had an eagle at rest perched on a beer barrel.—New York Tribune.

A Bad Guess

A spiritualist medium came to a house and claimed to be able to locate lost friends. The residents had an old horse which they had sold years before and the old lady wanted to know where he was. She began:

"We had a very good friend who always did all our work. He passed from us several years ago and the last we heard of him was that he was in Los Angeles." The medium made a few mysterious motions, knocked on the table, and then said:

"Your friend is in Los Angeles and is married to a rich young woman."

PINK PILLS WILL CURE RHEUMATISM.

It is easy to make the statement that a medicine will cure rheumatism, but the rheumatic sufferer must have more than mere statements—he must have both reasons and proof. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all forms of rheumatism. Here is the reason: Rheumatism is a disease of the blood. Every dose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually makes new, rich red blood. This new blood drives out the poisonous acids, loosens the aching joints, and rheumatism is banished. Thousands have testified to the truth of these statements, and here is further fresh proof. Mr. Raoul Montigny, of St. Jerome, Que., says: "For many years I was a victim of rheumatism. This new blood drove out the poisonous acids, loosened the aching joints, and rheumatism is banished. COUNTY COUNCILLOR SPEAKS HIS MIND

An Important Message That Carries Conviction The importance of a statement by a gentleman in whom the people repeatedly express their confidence by electing him to a position of honor and trust, cannot be overlooked in a question of life and death.

Thousands of others have borne similar testimony to the power of Psychine to not only cure coughs, colds, the grippe, catarrh, bronchitis, chills, night sweats, but also consumption and all wasting diseases.

The Agricultural College, Tokio, recently announced that it had discovered a method of making pulp from bamboo grass, sassa, which the highest results are claimed.

Prof. Edmund Burke of the College of the City of New York, received a letter from a press clipping agency this morning.

THE QUEEN'S MAIDS OF HONOR.

Four of Them, All Young and Pretty—Their Duties at Court. Queen Alexandra's household consists of only fifteen ladies and six men, in striking contrast with that of the King, which includes more than a hundred individuals.

Queen Victoria had eight maids of honor, of whom two were always waiting, but Queen Alexandra's known desire for a less stately life has prompted her to reduce the number to four.

Queen Alexandra delights to surround herself with quite young, bright and clever people, and all four maids are still in their early youth.

At state balls they occupy the same position. They relieve Her Majesty of her bouquet or her fan if necessary, and adjust her great ermine cloak or sable wraps when draughty corridors are traversed or on the staircases.
