TO EXTEND THE LEAD BOUNTY.

Mine Owners Petition Government to Save the Situation.

MEETING OF NELSON BOARD OF TRADE AT WHICH ALL BACK UP STRONG CASE.

We, the undersigned, who have been producers of lead ore since the inception of the lead bounty act, respectfully address you, as representing the mining industry of the dominion, and request your favorable consideration of the following memorial and further, that you favor us by bringing the same to the attention of the right honorable, the premier and your colleagues of the cabinet:

1. That said lead bounty has, by insuring a stable minimum price, been most effective and beneficial to the lead mining industry, with it to the smelting and manufacturing industries and consequently to the general commerce of the dominion.

2. That such results have been produced by a relatively small expenditure, as was anticipated, and as was represented when the original request for consideration was made to the government. Out of $2,500,000 originally voted to be expended in the period of bounty terminating 30th June next, but $65,793.02 have been expended up to 1st December, 1907.

3. That on account of the high tariff on lead ores and its products, still imposed by the United States government (which it was anticipated might have been reduced or even removed) of the recent imposition by said government of a prohibitory duty on our zinc ores, a product of our lead bearing veins, thus depriving us of a source of revenue and of the fact that the lead consuming capacity of Canada has not increased proportionately to our output, since the inception of the bounty, we shall at the expiration of said bounty period, be still unable to rely on a stable minimum price for our lead, sufficient to justify its production in the form of ore and the large expenditures on exploration and development work necessary to maintain our mines and with them the entire lead industry of Canada.

That without such a stable minimum price we cannot produce our ores, and with such intermittent production the inducement to expend the necessary large sums in exploration and development will cease to exist consequently the present ore reserves in our mines will be exhausted and with them the lead mining industry.

5. That with the United States tariff and the consuming capacity of Canada as at present, the necessary stable minimum price can only be assured by a continuance of the present lead bounty or by an extraordinary increase in the existing Canadian tariff on lead and its products.

The undersigned therefore respectfully request that the lead bounty act be extended for a further period of five years with an expenditure not to exceed $600,000 in any one year.

T. G. Proctor moved that a resolution, carefully worded, be adopted, embodying the views of the memorial.

J. J. Campbell second asking, however, that such should not be lost of the fact that a tariff on lead would be the most logical way of treating the matter.

This passing, Messrs. T. G. Proctor, J. J. Campbell and L. Pratt drew up the following resolution which will be presented at the associated boards.

That this board approves of the petition which has been signed by all the principal lead producers of this section, asking the dominion government to extend the lead bounty for another period of five years after the expiration of the present term, recognizing that the attitude of the government is more favorable to this method of relief than to the readjustment of the tariff, which this board has always felt and still maintains would be the most effective assistance to placing both the local lead mining and smelting industries upon a firm basis.

Edward G. Tressider, an Ottawa young man, this morning pleaded guilty to bigamy by having in December married Miss M. S. Sinclair, seventeen years old, a native arrival from Scotland, while having another wife living, to whom he was married last April. He will be sentenced next Monday.

Hamilton, Dec. 13.—An unknown man supposed to be a farmer, was killed this morning by falling from the mountain while driving to the city.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—A moral reform deputation asked the government for an amendment to the criminal code to prohibit professional gambling in Canada. Lauier said as far as he knew the criminal code was enforced in Yukon against gambling the same as it was in other parts of the dominion, but an inquiry would be made.

CHAPTER IV.

"Scarcey were the words uttered ere Guy and the doctor both were with Madeline, the former holding her tenderly in his arms, while he smoothed the short hair, thinking even then how soft and luxuriant it was, and how fair was the face which never moved a muscle beneath his scrutiny. The doctor was wholly self-possessed. Maddy had no terrors for him now. She needed his services, and he rendered them willingly, applying restoratives which soon brought back signs of life in the rigid form. With a shiver and a moan Madeline whispered: "Oh, grandma, I'm so tired," and nestled closer to the bosom where she had never dreamed of lying.

By this time both Mrs. Conner and Agnes had come out, asking in much surprise who the stranger could be, and what was the cause of her illness. As if there had been a previous understanding between them, the doctor and Guy were silent with regard to the recent farce enacted there, simply saying it was possible she was in the habit of fainting, many people were. Very faintly Agnes held up and back the skirt of her rich silk, as if fearful it might come in contact with Madeline's plain dress; then, as it was not very interesting for her to stand and see the doctor "make so much fuss over a young girl," as she mentally expressed it, she returned to the house, bidding Jessie do the same. But Jessie chose to stay by Maddy, whom they placed upon the comfortable lounge, which she preferred to being taken to the house, as Guy proposed. "I'm better now, much better," she said. "Leave me, please. I'd rather be alone."

So they left her, all but Jessie, who, fascinated by the sweet young face, climbed upon the lounge and, laying her curly head caressingly against Madeline's arm, said to her: "Poor girl, you're sick, and I'm so sorry. What makes you sick?"

There was genuine sympathy in that little voice, and it opened the pent-up flood beating so furiously, and roused Maddy's heart. With a cry as of sudden pain she clasped the child in her arms and wept out a wild, stormy fit of weeping which did her so much good. Forgetting that Jessie could not understand, and feeling it a relief to tell her grief to someone, she said, in reply to Jessie's oft-repeated inquiries as to what was the matter: "I did not get a certificate, and I wanted it so much, for we are poor, and our house is mortgaged, and I was going to help grandpa pay it."

"It's dreadful to be poor!" sighed little Jessie, as her waxy fingers threaded the soft, nut-brown hair resting in her lap, where Maddy had laid her aching head.

"Maddy don't know who this beautiful child was, but her sympathy was very sweet, and they talked together as children will, until Mrs. Agnes' voice was heard calling to her little girl that it was time to go.

"I love you, Maddy, and I mean to tell brother about it," Jessie said, as she wound her arms around Madeline's neck and kissed her at parting.

It never occurred to Maddy to ask her name, so stupefied she felt, and with a responsive kiss she sent her away. Leaning her head upon the table, she forgot all but her own wretchedness, and so did not see the gayly dressed, haughty-looking lady who swept past the door, accompanied by Guy and Dr. Holbrook. Neither did she hear, or notice, if she did, the hum of their voices as they talked together for a moment, Agnes asked the doctor very prettily to come up to Aikenside while she was there, and bring his lady-love. Engaged young men like Guy were so stupid, she said, as with a merry laugh she sprang into the carriage; and, bowing gracefully to the doctor, was driven rapidly toward Aikenside.

Rather slowly the doctor returned to the office, and after fidgeting for a time among the powders and phials, summoned courage to ask Madeline how she felt, and if any of the fainting symptoms had returned.

"No, sir," was all the reply she gave him, never lifting up her head, or even thinking which of the two young men it was speaking to her.

There was a call just then for Dr. Holbrook, and leaving his office in charge of Tom, his choy boy, he went away, feeling slightly uncomfortable whenever he thought of the girl to whom he felt that justice had not been done.

"I half wish I had examined her myself," he said. "Of course she was excited, and could not answer; beside, I raved if I didn't believe it was all humbug tormenting her with Greek and Latin. Yes; I'll question her when I get back, and if she'll possibly pass, give her the certificate. Poor child, how white she was, and what a queer look there was in those great eyes, when she said, 'I shall not take it.'"

Never in his life before had Dr. Holbrook been as much interested in any female who was sick as he was in Madeline, and determining to make his call on Mrs. Briggs as brief as possible, he alighted at her gate, and knocked impatiently at her door. He found her pretty sick, while both her children needed a prescription, and so long a time was he detained that his heart misgave him on his homeward route, lest Maddy should be gone, and with her the chance to return home the way he might have done.

Maddy was gone, and the wheel ruts of the square-boxed wagon were fresh before the door when he came back. Grandpa Markham had returned, and Madeline, who recognized old Sorrel's step, had gathered her shawl around her and gone sadly out to meet him. One look at her face was sufficient.

"You failed, Maddy?" the old man said, fixing about her feet the warm buffalo robe, for the night wind was blowing cold.

"Yes, grandpa, I failed." They were out of the village and more than a mile on their way home before Madeline found voice to say so much, and then were nearer home by half a mile ere the old man staggered back:

"And, Maddy, I failed too."

his first introduction to rosewater, velvet, and brocade, and it seemed to him as if he had suddenly been transported to fairyland.

"Maddy would like this—it's her nature," he whispered, advancing a step or two, and setting down his feet as softly as if stepping on eggs.

Happening to lift his eyes before one of the long mirrors, he spied himself, wondering much what that "queer-looking chap" was doing there in the midst of so much elegance, and why Mrs. Noah did not turn him out! Then mentally asking forgiveness for this flash of pride, and determined to make amends, he bowed low to the figure in the glass, which bowed as low in return, but did not reply to the very good-natured remark: "How d'ye do—pretty well, to-day?"

There was a familiar look about the round cap of the camelot cloak, and Grandpa Markham's face turned crimson as the truth burst upon him. "How 'shamed of me Maddy would be," he thought, glancing sideways at Mrs. Noah, who had witnessed the blunder, and was now looking from the window to hide her laughter.

Grandpa believed she did not see him, and comforted with that assurance, he began to remark upon the mirror, saying "it made it appear as if there was two of you," a remark which Mrs. Noah fully appreciated.

Every man or woman here in Canada who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print this remarkable prescription, in October of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities have made many announcements of it to their readers.

Edward VII Arbitrator of Peace

Great Britain, or, rather, King Edward VII, has taken the directorship of European policy. He has become the arbiter. That he works for peace no one can doubt, but that his policy tends unceasingly to strengthen the power and security of his own country is still more certain. We are thus led to believe that in relinquishing his attitude of hostility, as much personal as patriotic, toward William II, he calculated in advance the benefits that would accrue to Great Britain.—Grande Revue.

UNHAPPY SNAILS.

Yorkshiremen Now Include Them as an Article of Diet.

Sad tidings for snails comes from Yorkshire. Hitherto it has been commonly supposed that the virtues of the snail as an article of diet have only been appreciated by our French neighbors, but this is a mistake, in the coal mining village of Knottingley, Yorkshire, a few miles from Wakefield, the snail appears to be eagerly sought after as a table delicacy that a snail famine is feared. It is estimated that for many years snails have been consumed in Knottingley at the rate of nearly a quarter of a million. The origin of the custom is curious. The local medical dispensary was in need of funds, so an enterprising local publican hit upon the happy idea of offering boiled snails at six pence to his customers, the proceeds to go to the dispensary. The Yorkshire miner is not extraordinarily particular what he eats, and his sporting instincts are keen, therefore contests as to who could eat the most snails soon became popular. Other public-houses in the district took to making similar delicacies, and in this way considerable sums were raised, one public-house alone raising $45 a year in this way. Once started, the taste for boiled snails developed, and now Knottingley, Brotherton, Castleford, and many other mining villages in the district have their population of snail eaters. Interviewed as to the effect of the food upon the health of the people, one of the best known medical men in the district expressed the opinion to a press representative that snails were not clean creatures. "But I must admit," he said, "that they do not appear to have produced any ill effects upon the people." There is a firm local belief that a snail eaten alive is a certain cure for consumption if taken in the early stages of the disease. The snails are gathered from the walls and hedge sides, and so great has the demand been, one public house alone providing 13,000 of them last year, that they are now becoming scarce, and the dispensary funds are suffering in consequence. The dispensary authorities, it should be added, have no direct responsibility for the practice.

FOUND BONES IN TRUNK.

Workmen Discovered Cremated Remains of Woman in Tin Box.

Some excitement was caused in West Ealing, England, recently, owing to rumor that a tin trunk containing charred human remains had been found in a house in that locality.

Workmen are engaged in pulling down the house, and while examining a cupboard, they discovered a box about 16 inches long, 12 inches wide, and 9 inches in height. The box was sealed and conveyed to the police station, where it was opened by the divisional surgeon, Dr. Bennet, who pronounced the contents to be the cremated remains of human bones. The ashes were perfectly white, and among them were small pieces of bone.

The police at once instituted inquiries and found that the box belonged to a former tenant of the house.

It contained the ashes of his first wife, who had been cremated.

He was able to convince the police that everything was in order by producing a certificate of death and cremation. He said that the box had been left behind by accident.

It appears that upon the death of his first wife the tenant in question caused the body to be cremated. The presence of such a gruesome relic in the home evidently proved distasteful to the second wife.

The casket was taken to the gentleman's offices—part of the house in question—where it was placed in a trunk, which was locked and deposited in the back room.

"Novilatin" is the name of a new language created by Professor Bearman, of Erfurt, which, unlike Esperanto, says the author, fulfills all the conditions required as an auxiliary international language.

Unless cigars when imported into India are enclosed in bottles or tins, they are apt to be spoiled by a tiny insect which finds its way into the boxes.

Most men cannot walk in a straight line with their eyes open, and none ever lived that could do so with his eyes shut. Try it. It is an aged saying that a man follows his nose, and there never was a nose since Adam that stood straight in front of a face. All of us are afflicted with either sinus-torsion or dextrotorsion—that is, in the best of moods, walking we veer either to the left or to the right. It cannot be helped. Set up two posts on the lawn and bet a million that no man or woman in the crowd can walk from one to the other without anfractuousness. There's a swell word for you. Anfractuous—that's where you get a wiggle-on-walk wabble.

"Your shoes won't hurt an atom come right along." Mrs. Noah replied, now in the best of moods, for except her cup of green tea with raspberry jam and cream, she enjoyed nothing more than showing their handsome house.

"You failed, Maddy?" the old man said, fixing about her feet the warm buffalo robe, for the night wind was blowing cold.

"Yes, grandpa, I failed."

They were out of the village and more than a mile on their way home before Madeline found voice to say so much, and then were nearer home by half a mile ere the old man staggered back:

"And, Maddy, I failed too."

Newspapers of the United States Speak Well of the Home Prescription Which Thousands Are Using

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A local druggist is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from our home drugists.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive Kidneys, overcoming Backache, Bladder weakness and Urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here in Canada who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print this remarkable prescription, in October of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities have made many announcements of it to their readers.

Canada, Be Glad.

The opening of the King Edward Sanatorium for Consumptives, near Weston, Aug. 28, 1907.

O Canada, be glad, be glad!

Bah! Bah! Bah!

A radiance tender draweth nigh,

A glory stealeth o'er the sky,

Dispelling night.

Dark, dark and long hath been the night.

O'er all the land,

To many daughter dear to thee.

Pale-veiled in wasting mystery

None understand.

A sweet girl graces wonder home,

Her cheek health-red;

The pale king comes and silent stoops,

He breathes on her, the fair rose

droops,

And she is dead.

Ten thousand homes the blight infale.

Of his chill breath:

Remorseless breathed as he goes by,

And joy and hope hoar-frosted lie

In withered death.

O Canada! hope, hope thou still—

The dawn has come,

A ray of gold has reached the sky,

A radiance healing draweth nigh

To every home.

On darkness dense the wasting plague

Shall prey no more,

The light to simple life has come,

The hopeless find a hopeful home,

As ne'er before.

God bless, thrice bless, the open hand—

Thy praise we sing;

And blessing come, with deathless fame,

On him that lends his gracious name—

God bless our King.

—Grant Balfour.

PLEA FOR INDIVIDUALITY.

President Falconer of Toronto on the Maritime Provinces.

In his recent address to the Canadian Club of St. John, N. B., Dr. R. A. Falconer, president of the University of Toronto, said: Individuality in countries, towns and persons is disappearing so fast that the interests and richness of life are probably less than they were. Let me urge you not to be over anxious to reproduce here the same type of living which is found elsewhere. These provinces, if they live their own simple and yet busy life, will enrich the total life of the Dominion more than by seeking to follow the example of large and wealthier provinces. The very variety of life here gives it character. Here there is no monotony of landscape, and you have the sounding sea running far and wide and bringing ships from foreign ports close to your own homes. You have the breadth and mystery of the ocean, here no one industry prevails over all others. You have farmers, miners, lumbermen, those who follow the sea, each with his way of looking at life, and as they co-mingle, each adding interest to the whole. You have many who by education and travel are able to impart their refinement to the community, making their influence the more sensible as their are no cities large enough to dissipate the culture of the few. In the towns and cities there are numbers of thoughtful, quiet people whose interest in the higher side of life extends far more widely than they imagine. The provinces would be distinctly the poorer were these people to be gathered out of the towns and centred in large and rapidly-growing cities. If anything has distinguished the Maritime Provinces in the past it has assuredly been their reputation for intelligence. Few countries of the new world have had a higher average of thoughtful competent citizenship. For generations the rights of the people have been understood, as also the necessity for intelligence in order that the privileges of a democracy may be exercised. This has partly arisen through the contest for political justice. In the Maritime Provinces it may not have been so violent as elsewhere, but it was very real. Our fathers understood what they wanted, and they learned to govern them selves.

Canada's Hunt For Trade.

The people and politicians of the United States should take care lest they underestimate our neighbor on the north. The Canadian people are displaying a remarkable spirit of enterprise and are reaching around us for trade through the south that should naturally come to us. This friendship of Canada has been met halfway by the Mexican Government, and a subsidiary Pacific Coast steamship line has been established as a result.

Ships of this line are not permitted to sail for freight at any port in the United States, but must carry only revenue.

There are two methods of treatment—the

A SHORT HISTORYA Serious Case of Chronic Catarrh Gradually Overcome By Pe-runa.A REMARKABLE CASE.*Mr. Arthur Tremblay

Mr. Arthur Tremblay, 8 St. James street, Mont Pleasant, Que., Can., writes:

"About three years ago, catarrh in its most serious form assailed me.

"I consulted a specialist, who prescribed medicines as constitutional treatment and a liquid to use locally.

"This gave me relief for a time, but soon afterwards the disease returned."

"I was then suffering very much, my appetite had left me and I was growing weaker."

"I had frequently read pamphlets regarding the cures made by Paruna, and although somewhat dubious as to its doing me any good, I decided to try a few bottles."

"I had not taken Paruna for more than two weeks before a marked improvement was perceptible.

"As I continued taking the remedy the disease gradually disappeared, and in a few months I was entirely rid of the nauseous malady."

FAIRMOS BRIDGES.

The Zambezi bridge in Africa is 450 feet in height.

The famous Niagara suspension bridge was begun in 1852 and completed in 1855. It is 249 feet above the water and 821 feet long.

The highest bridge in the world, the trolley bridge across the famous Royal Gorge in Colorado, is 2,627 feet, half a mile, above the river below.

The Forth bridge, over the Firth of Forth, near Edinburgh, has two cantilever spans, each 1,710 feet in length, the longest in the world. The total length of this structure is one and four-sevenths miles.

One of the most peculiar bridges in the world is the tubular suspension bridge across Menai strait. This bridge consists of two lines of immense tubing, each 1,500 feet long, supported by three granite towers, besides the shore abutments. This strange bridge is 100 feet above the sea and weighs 11,000 tons.

The steel bridge the Portland and Seattle railroad is building across the Columbia at Vancouver will be a mile and a half long, the longest steel bridge in the world. It will be finished next January. Twenty thousand tons of steel will be used in it, not including the weight of the double track. The drawbridge is 404 feet long.

Pitcher Waldon Henley, farmed out by the Brooklyn club to the Rochester team, holds the strike out record in the Eastern League so far this season. He fanned twelve men in a recent game.

CATARRH CANNOT BE CURED, with Local Applications, and they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Catarrh takes kindly to cold, damp, and active diet. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It was first invented in 1803, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best emollients, and is applied directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send to F. J. CHENEY & CO., Provo, Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, price 75c. Take Hall's Family Pill for constipation.

A German traveller who tried to pass a meal ticket on the train was told by the conductor that he would have to pay the regular fare of 35 cents. The German argued and refused to pay more than a quarter, whereupon the conductor stopped the train and put him off. In a twinkling the traveller ran ahead of the engine and started to walk on the track. The engineer blew his whistle, but the irate German turned, shook his fist and called out: "You can't stop all you want to. I won't come back."

WHAT HE GETS.

He spends his money, likes to blow his coin—in fact, to burn it—To his bad friends, although he knows they don't return it. Great admiration they evince When they incur such debts. They all declare that he's a prince. That's what he gets.

Each time he in his pocket does He shows his money's power. On finkies, one and all, his tips Fall in a golden shower.

To plunge at something his forte; He makes most foolish bets; But people say, "Well, he's a sport!" That's what he gets.

He thinks that it is worth his while, But I can see his finish, For day by day his little pile Will woefully diminish.

You notice how the world will cool To fortune's sobs; You'll hear them say, "That silly fool!" That's what he gets.

TO MAKE FRIENDS.

Fight against the feeling of restraint, reserve, the feeling of shrinking away from people, shyness, over sensitiveness or the feeling of antagonism.

When you greet people with a handshake let your heart run out to your finger tips.

Do not be afraid of giving too much of yourself to the people you meet.

Do not hold yourself back as though you are afraid you would give something away that you ought to keep or that you would say something that you would be sorry for.

GERMAN NOTIONS.

Square Tiles Like Painters' Palettes Used For Breakfast Plates.

For breakfast, instead of plates, long tiles are made in Germany, something like a painter's palette made square. Instead of a thumb hole there is only a small hole in the middle of one end to hang this tile on a hook or peg. These tiles are thick and glazed with white, like any stoneware. One seen blue and white, and one red in pretty flowing designs.

They are used for bread and butter served with a cup of coffee. Doubtless in Germany they are taken to the garden on bright mornings. Here they are used as curios. It is said that old gentlemen used to them would feel quite "put out" if given a round plate instead of this tile, with a good piece of butter on it, and a couple of fresh rolls for breakfast daily.

German ways of setting the table are at variance with those of other countries. The knives for dinner parties are arranged out at an angle into the middle of the table. Knives and forks are laid obliquely to the plate with the tips touching it. Finger bowls have spoons in them by which to dip the water over the fingers. This idea is not out of the way.

Quite gaudy glassware for wine is shown, purple, blue, orange and yellow, with decanters to match.

A bunch of violets is on every plate at the beginning of a formal dinner.

REAL BEAUTY SLEEP.

A Vienna Specialist's Ideas on This Fascinating Subject.

The old fashioned definition of beauty sleep was the sleep that is taken before midnight. Beauty sleep is the sleep a woman gets after she has slept seven hours and before she has slept nine, says a Viennese specialist.

A woman needs all of seven hours' sleep for the building up of her system. Then she needs two hours more for the recuperation of her body, and the extra two hours will restore her complexion, make her eyes bright, take the wrinkles out of her face and keep her form elastic.

The woman who wants to derive the fullest benefit from her beauty sleep will compose her mind before sinking off into slumber. She will think pleasant thoughts. Worrying makes furrows in the brow and sets lines around the mouth. A little light in a bedroom is a good thing for some people, for it will act cheerfully upon the nerves and drive away nightmares.

Do not allow yourself to be awake in the morning if you mean to get beauty sleep, or if you must be aroused let it be ever so gently. Do not wake up with a start, with an alarm clock or in consequence of a bell ringing, for any of these sounds will jar the nerves and destroy some of the good the sleep has done you.

She Deserves Ibsen.

The late Henrik Ibsen upheld the superiority of women in his dramas, but in real life he considered them inferior to men in many lines of usefulness generally classed as feminine. For example, his friend, John Paulsen, in the London Times says that one of Ibsen's maxims was: "No woman can write a cookery book, and no woman can sew a button on fast."

Within one month the membership of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs has doubled in membership. Up to a few weeks ago its roster showed only 14,000, but now there are 30,000 subscribing to the federation.

Some one has been looking up the subject and finds that most of the successful woman writers have forsaken city flats and are doing their work on farms, hired men doing the work while the authors write in peace and quiet.

The proprietor of a oilnard and pool room in West Philadelphia was annoyed by a certain customer who, though he was a regular, had a bad habit of putting the chalk in his pocket and walking off with it. The proprietor decided to put a stop to this man's carelessness, so one day last week he went up to him and asked:

"What business are you in?"

"Me! Why, I'm in the mill business."

"Thought so," said the proprietor, "from the amount of chalk that you take away with you. Any time that you want a bucket of water come around, as I may as well let you have that also!" —Philadelphia Ledger.

SEIZED WITH SOUVENIR FEVER.

Tourists' Craze to Possess Mementos of Foreign Travel.

A party of Americans recently went over St. Paul's Cathedral. They explored the crypt, stared at the statue, and then climbed the stairs to the topmost gallery.

There one of them hung back from the party. He was presently discovered trying to chip flakes of stone from one of the ornamental pillars.

"I guess I only wanted a bit of St. Paul's to take back with me to America," he drawled by way of explanation.

Souvenir hunting has developed into a craze, and there is no institution of any size that has not suffered from the ravages of the souvenir hunters.

The late Mr. Wall, when librarian of the Stratford Memorial Theatre, used to tell of a visitor who offered a substantial sum for a few pinches of the dust that reposes upon Shakespeare's tomb. Now the souvenir collector is not satisfied with purchasing or bribing. He appropriates.
