FOREIGN FLASHES

BRITISH CRUISER SERPENT GOES DOWN WITH ALL ON BOARD.

Frightful Loss of Life—Only Three Men Saved From a Complement of 276 Men—Anxiety of the Relatives and Friends of the Fated Crew for Details of the Wreck—Dr. Koch Will Publish His Formula to the World—Disgraceful Conduct of Lord George Hamilton—The Daily Grist of Foreign News, Etc.

LONDON, November 13.—H. M. S. Serpent was wrecked on Monday night twenty miles north of Cape Finisterre. Two hundred and forty-seven men were drowned, only three escaping. The Serpent went on the rocks during a severe storm on the Spanish coast. A heavy storm prevailed at the time. It was impossible to obtain assistance from the shore and the vessel remained in her helpless position until broken to pieces by the tremendous seas which broke over her. The crew were washed overboard in groups by the remorseless waves and drowned or dashed to death amid the rocks. News of the disaster was conveyed to Coruna, a distance of 60 miles on a mountain road, and when the relief corps was organized and sent to the scene of the wreck it was too late to be of any avail. The Serpent's crew proper consisted of 170 men, the remaining victims were relief crews which were being conveyed to other British men-of-war on the African station.

An official telegram from Coranas states that H. M. S. Serpent was wrecked off Cape Racy, near the village of Camarinas. Of 276 men on board only three were saved. The bodies of only three of the victims have been washed ashore.

Lord George Hamilton, first lord of the admiralty, on rising to speak at a Conservative banquet at Acton this evening, said he was sorry to announce that just before the banquet he received a telegram that H.M.S. Serpent was lost on the coast of Spain and he feared great loss of life. The Serpent, he said, was one of the best cruisers, and was a valuable vessel with excellent officers and crew. He could not tell the cause of the disaster. The announcement caused a sensation and it was evident that many of those present would have thought it proper to postpone the banquet, but no action being taken to that end, the entertainment proceeded and, after the guests had eaten and drunk heartily, Lord Hamilton led off in the toasts with an unusually jolly speech, his rollicking humor provoking peal upon peal of laughter. The news of this affair soon reached the London clubs and excited much adverse comment. It is considered certain that Lord Hamilton's conduct will cause as much scandal against himself and the Tories as was aroused against Gladstone and his political adherents by the alleged presence of the Liberal Premier at a theatre on the evening of the day when Gordon's death was announced in the London newspapers.

When the news of the disaster to H.M.S. Serpent reached Plymouth the Duke of Edinburg, who is one of the admirals, was attending a Patti concert. On being informed of what had occurred he hastily left the hall and went to the offices where despatches in regard to the sad event were being received. He was deeply moved and expressed his heartfelt sorrow for the victims and their unfortunate families. He did not return to the concert but proceeded to his residence. The papers comment on his conduct in contrast to that of his superior officer, Lord George Hamilton. The newspaper offices at Plymouth were besieged by crowds of relatives of the Serpent's crew. The lamentation of the women and children were pitiful. It was said that many of the Serpent's men had expressed fears of a disaster before leaving, but the cause of their apprehension cannot be learned. The admiralty has wired the British consul at Corunna to send details of the wreck and loss of life at once. The Queen has sent a message to the Duke of Edinburg asking for particulars and expressing her sorrow for the lost men and their relatives.

The Guards' Wellington Barracks are burned. The fire originated under the staircase in the quarters of the married men. All the adult inmates were rescued by means of ladders amid great excitement. A number of children suffering with measles were wrapped in blankets and taken to places of shelter, but two of the little patients are missing, and it is feared they were overlooked in the confusion and have perished in the flames. When the fire was discovered and the signal for "fire parade" was sounded on the bugles, the troops assembled promptly with splendid discipline and worked eagerly and effectively according to the manual. The officers were delighted with the intelligence and willingness displayed under emergency, and urged the men on in their heroic efforts to gain control of the flames.

The barracks were almost entirely destroyed before the flames were brought under control. The children who were thought to have perished have been found and are safe.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Manning, four dukes and many peers, commoners and college professors have signed the memorial to the Lord Mayor asking him to convene a meeting at the Mansion House to discuss the subject of the persecution of Jews in Russia. The Lord Mayor has accordingly called such a meeting for November 24th.

Advices from Buenos Ayres represent a serious condition of affairs at the capital, and that another attempt of the revolutionists is apprehended, the deposed President Colman having many supporters in the provinces who wish to see him restored.

The cabinet has deferred the opening of Parliament until the 25th, in order that Balfour could speak in Lancashire on the 18th, and Lord Salisbury on the following day, in Lord Hartington's constituency. Very little practical business, therefore, can be done by Parliament before Christmas. The Liberal journals comment on the release of convict Patrick K. Delany, and a payment of reward by the government for his testimony before the Parnell commission. Delany, it is said, will be assisted by the Government to emigrate to South Africa.

Madrid advices state that the Cabinet is framing a reciprocity treaty to be submitted to the United States and intended more especially to relieve the depressed industries of Cuba.

Consul New publishes an emphatic denial that Minister Lincoln intends to resign. He says that Lincoln will resume his duties in London some time in January.

The Standard is authorized to deny the St. James Gazette's statement that negotiations are proceeding for a settlement of the Newfoundland fishery question on a basis of surrender of the French shore to Great Britain, the cession of African territory to France and the repeal of the Newfoundland bait law.

The Lucky Trio.

MADRID, November 12.—The three sailors who succeeded in swimming ashore from the wrecked British cruiser Serpent have arrived at Camarinas. They express the belief that all the others were drowned.

The Mahdi's Ranks Disrupted.

CAIRO, November 12.—Advices from the Soudan describe a split in the ranks of the Mahdi's immediate followers. The trouble grows out of a quarrel between two brothers as to which one has the right of succession to the Mahdi.

All in the Family.

GALWAY, November 12.—Several fights took place here today between the military and police. A sergeant of police was severely injured in one of the encounters. The police were finally routed by the soldiers, who drove them back to their barracks. The Connaught Rangers, who were prominent in the disturbances, have been ordered away from Galway.

Immortalizing Himself By Perpetuating His Species.

BERLIN, November 12.—Professor Koch will publish to the world on Saturday the composition of his cure. Any physician who desires further information as to details may apply to Dr. Cores, Professor Koch's assistant, who has established hospitals for the treatment of home and foreign patients. Professor Koch will soon begin experimenting for a cure for diphtheria.

Oliphert Estate Evictions.

DUBLIN, November 12.—On the Oliphert estate the work of evicting tenants was today resumed. The weather was stormy. The Bishop of Raphoe, representing the tenants, had a conference with the agent of the estate, but failed to accomplish anything. It is hoped, however, that at another conference which the Bishop will have with the agent this evening, a settlement will be had.

A Belated Steamship.

NEW ORLEANS, November 12.—The steamship Jessie, of the Morgan line, eight days overdue, arrived this afternoon. The captain reports that his vessel sailed from Blue Field on October 30th, and encountered very heavy weather, which finally culminated into a hurricane on the 31st. On that day the steamer was driven over Cape Gracio bar. She pounded but little. Her cargo of bananas and rubber was thrown overboard, but she remained ashore six days and a half. The Jessie lost her smokestack and one life boat. The town of Cape Gracios is a complete wreck, every house in the town having been blown down by the force of the hurricane.

A Customs Case.

WASHINGTON, November 12.—Secretary Windom, Secretary Blaine, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Spaulding and Solicitor Hepburn, sitting as a board, heard the argument today as the Treasury Department, as to whether merchandise sent by the Grand Trunk Railway to Western American points from Eastern ports should be sealed in the cars on the American or Canadian side of the line. Ex-Second Auditor Day represented the Grand Trunk Railroad and ex-Senator Conger and others the people of Port Huron, Mich.

Blaine Talks on International Relations.

WASHINGTON, November 12.—Secretary Blaine was the central figure in a dramatic scene here this afternoon. Grouped together in the office of the assistant secretary of the treasury were many noted government officials and three score of the leading railroad lawyers of the country. The occasion that brought them together was a public hearing about certain privileges granted to the Grand Trunk railroad in having goods for Canada sealed in cars at American ports and forwarded in bond to their destinations. Those who opposed this plan contended that the seals had been placed on cars at the United States port nearest the Canadian destination of goods. Around the table sat the officials of the board, Secretary Windom, Assistant Secretary Spaulding and Solicitor Hepburn, Secretary Blaine was also present. Several speakers had made remarks, and Secretary Blaine with members of the board had asked questions. When A. C. Raymond, who had spoken for an hour or so, had concluded, Secretary Blaine rose and said he was there simply as one of the spectators and not in any official character whatever. He wished to say, however, in answer to Mr. Raymond's suggestion that this might be a policy of retaliation, that he felt sure the government had no such thought, and that the mere supposition of such a policy and then arguing against it might create a serious misapprehension in the country as to such an intention on the part of the government, and that for this reason he interposed to prevent any such idea from going abroad, as a result of this hearing. Mr. Raymond, Mr. Blaine said, was himself a representative of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and if the Government of the United States had been desirous of throwing obstacles in the way of developing that great road it would not have given it the privilege of going through two states of the Northwest and crossing at the Sault, nor would his own State of Maine have given it the liberty of crossing its entire territory in order that its connections with the cities of the maritime provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia might be made, some 200 miles nearer. Mr. Blaine suggested that the best mode of resisting retaliation or unfriendliness was to make the system absolutely complete and perfect and he asked Mr. Raymond if he thought it was so. Mr. Raymond answered that he had so regarded it. Blaine said it would be much more satisfactory to the section from which he came if Halifax and St. John could treat New England as fairly and as generously as Portland and Boston had treated the Provinces. They might land any cargo of fish or anything else at Portland and ship it to their homes, but an American fisherman, making his catch hundreds of miles beyond the 3-mile limit, could not secure that privilege from the lower Provinces. Mr. Blaine suggested that Mr. Raymond would labor to a good end in making the system of which he spoke absolutely perfect if he could wipe out the inequality which was known and recognized over the whole country as far as Vancouver. Prior to Blaine's speech arguments had been made on both sides of the question. Those who addressed themselves to the question were ex-Senator C. D. Conger, of Port Huron, Mich., representing the interests of Port Huron; C. K. McClannon, representing the transcontinental roads; W. A. Dye, representing the Canadian Pacific; Alfred Russell, representing the interests of the Wabash railroad; A. C. Raymond, representing the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific railways of Canada, and Daniel Magone, representing the Ogdensburg and Watertown road. Several other persons were also present.

BIRCHALL'S LAST DAY

HIS COURAGE VANISHES AT THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Preparations Completed for the Final Act in the Melodrama—Particulars of Mrs. Birchall's Interview With the Minister of Justice—Blaine's Dissertation on Railway Freight in Bond—General Crook's Remains Laid at Rest—Minor Canadian and American News.

WOODSTOCK, November 12.—The preparations at the jail for the execution of Reginald Birchall, convicted of the murder of Bonwell, are now nearly completed. The execution will take place between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., on Friday, 14th inst., and not more than a dozen people will be present to witness the awful scene.

Birchall, it is said, has completely broken down, and no longer wears his careless, indifferent smile. Rev. Wade is with him much of the time, and is doing everything in his power to effect a change of heart, but so far without much encouragement. Birchall has not yet signed the affidavit in the case of Greame vs. the Toronto Globe, and it is doubtful if he will pay any further attention to the matter.

Mrs. Birchall, it is said, will bid her husband a last farewell tonight. Dr. Rice, the jail surgeon, visited the prisoner today and found him in excellent health. The doctor states that mental strain is making no impression on the constitution of the prisoner.

The particulars of Mrs. Birchall's interview with Sir John Thompson at Ottawa in behalf of her husband are now published. It was about 2.30 when the Minister of Justice returned from lunch. A few minutes later Mrs. Birchall, accompanied by her lawyer, crossed the hall from the deputy's room to that of the minister. Mrs. Jones remained in the deputy's room. The interview lasted just three quarters of an hour. Mrs. Birchall presented the petitions, and the grounds upon which commutation was asked were explained by Mr. MacMurchy. Then followed a very affecting scene, recalling some historical pictures of a woman pleading before a sovereign power for the life of a lover or husband. Mrs. Birchall herself addressed the minister in pleading tones and with visible emotion. She had passed through many ordeals since Bonwell's murdered body was found in the swamp and now stood face to face with the final arbiter of her young husband's fate. Going forward to the minister Mrs. Birchall laid the petitions in his hand, saying: "These, these are my petitions for the commutation of the sentence of death of my husband. I firmly believe he is innocent of the crime, and if you commute the sentence time will prove me right." Then, almost breaking down, she added, "If the terrible sentence is carried out it will blight my life and also the lives of two respectable families." Mrs. Birchall was leaving woefully was and worn out, and her appeal for a merciful view gave the case a pathetic aspect very different from the cold and unimpassioned arguments of the lawyers who usually go to Ottawa on such missions.

Sir John Thompson said he had been impressed by Mr. MacMurchy's address, and had personally the deepest sympathy for Mrs. Birchall. He would carefully consider the whole case and lay it before his colleagues. The interview then terminated.

The petition handed in by Mrs. Birchall contained 4,567 signatures, and made a total of over 8,000 names. There was no attempt made to see the Governor General, though there was some thought at first of doing so. Up to 1878, when Hon. Edward Blake had the Imperial instructions changed in this regard, the Governor General had a discretion in capital cases, but since then he has none, though, of course, the signature of His Excellency is necessary to the decision.

In his argument Mr. MacMurchy dwelt on the fact that no food was found in Bonwell's stomach, although he had several separate opportunities of eating from the time he left Niagara Falls, at 6 in the morning, till 4 o'clock on the fatal 17th of February, the hour it was claimed Bonwell was murdered. He pointed to the evidence of Bonwell's brother, who refused to admit that the boots found on Bonwell belonged to his dead brother, and to the absence of sand on the boots. In support of the theory of Birchall's innocence and of the idea that the deed was committed after he parted from Bonwell, Mr. MacMurchy recalled the fact that the Crown was unable to account for the revolver, money and watch. The last pencil was not sufficient evidence to hang a man upon. Public opinion, he asserted, hanged the man before he was tried, and every juryman was prejudiced by reading the public press. In support of this view he pointed to the belief which he said existed in Quebec Province in Birchall's innocence, proved by the prominent names on the petitions from there. Then the defense, with a truth of the Crown's expenditure at the trial, was brandished unfairly. Mr. MacMurchy went into many details of the evidence. There was no positive proof that two men were seen going into the swamp. One man swore to it, but he was some distance away, looking through a window. He laid stress on Birchall's remaining in the Province a week after the finding of the corpse. This was the conduct of an innocent man.

ANNEXATION TAKING ROOT.

HALIFAX, November 12.—In a speech at St. John's, N. F., in the election campaign just closed, Scott, the defeated Opposition candidate, stated that for many months past the bitter feeling of resentment against British negligence of Newfoundland's vital interests have been taking deeper and deeper root into the hearts of Newfoundlanders, and annexation with the American republic was beginning to be regarded by a vast number of Newfoundlanders as the only remedy for their sufferings.

WEAVING A WEB OF EVIDENCE.

RICHMOND, Que., November 12.—Rev. George Brown, at one time pastor of the Melbourne Congregational Church here, may yet figure in the court of justice on the charge of murder. Sufficient evidence has been found to bring home to Brown, alias Waters, the murder of Miss Powell at Danville, some fifteen miles from Richmond, three years ago. The girl, as some may remember, was first outraged and then strangled to death. When last heard from Brown had sailed from New York for Australia.

Burglars at Nanaimo.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., November 12.—John Dillon and T. P. O'Connor were received in this city at 4.15 o'clock this afternoon. They dined with Joseph Benigas, president of the Woonsocket Rubber Company and in the evening after the parade, in which the second regiment and civic societies took part, appeared in the Infantry Hall. Fully 3,000 people were in this hall, and in the smaller hall, where an overflow meeting was held. The guests were received with great enthusiasm and contributions for the Irish cause to the amount of $5,000 were pledged.

Wreck on the Reading.

LEBANON Pa., November, 12.—The passenger train going west on the Reading road this evening jumped the track at a frog one mile east of Annville and was thrown down an embankment. Pollock, baggagemaster, both of Reading, were most seriously hurt. They are badly crushed but are not fatally injured. Others were but slightly hurt.

Gould on Adams.

NEW YORK, November 12.—W. B. Somerville, of the Western Union, who is in the confidence of Jay Gould, said today that Gould told him that he had never made the assertion that William and John D. Rockefeller were concerned with him in the scheme to secure control of the Union Pacific Railway Company, nor had Gould adversely criticised C. F. Adams' management of the property. All he had said was that any man taking a stroll through Wall street could hear the people were not satisfied with his (Adams') management of the road.

Fresh Water Fish Free.

WASHINGTON, November 12.—The Treasury Department has decided that fish caught in fresh waters can be imported into the United States duty free, provided the nets and boats used in the catch are owned by citizens of the United States. If such nets and boats are simply loaned or hired by Canadians of Americans for the purpose of evading the law the fish carried in such boats are dutiable and collectors on the Canadian frontier have been instructed to keep a close watch on "suspects."

General Crook's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, November 12.—The remains of the late Major General Crook arrived in Washington at 10 o'clock this morning, from Chicago, over the Baltimore & Ohio road. They were accompanied by Colonels Corbin and Stanton, U. S. A., and Mr. Webb Hayes, who were met at the depot by General Scofield and Assistant Adjutant General Brock. The remains were placed in a hearse and, followed by the officers named and a few personal and official friends of the deceased general, they were conveyed to Arlington cemetery. At the west end of the Aqueduct bridge over the Potomac river the funeral cortege was met by two companies of mounted troops from Fort Myer, and from this point, under military escort, the remains were taken to the cemetery. Arriving at the cemetery the remains were interred on the side of the hill, apart from the other graves, in a spot selected by General Crook when he visited this cemetery last year. As the grave was filled in a military salute was fired. There were no religious ceremonies at the cemetery, these having been performed in Chicago.

The Truth

Daily Edition.

FEARS WELL FOUNDED.

The farmers of the American Northwest are evidently much alarmed at the possible results to them of the McKINLEY legislation, as likely to be largely prohibitive of British trade with the States. The Northwestern Miller, of Minneapolis, quoted in the last issue of the Winnipeg Commercial, voices this fear as follows:

"The question which millers should consider, not as Democrats or Republicans, but as millers, is: 'Will she (Great Britain) retaliate on the McKINLEY Bill by seeking elsewhere (than in the States) for her breadstuffs?' If she does, the boycott conferred by this legislation upon the protected classes will be but light compared to the damage inflicted on the farmer and the miller and all others connected with them."

Great Britain is, as the Winnipeg Commercial correctly asserts, unlikely, for the present, to retaliate on the States by imposing tariff duties on American imports. But a country's import trade naturally seeks to balance itself by exchange, i. e., by a return export trade, and as this return export trade of British wares is now all but prohibited by the States, so too will American imports into Great Britain be correspondingly lessened. Nor is this all. Popular sentiment, quite apart from tariffs, does much to affect a market, and the public opinion of the people of the United Kingdom is now setting strongly against buying so much American breadstuffs, and advocating instead purchase of them from Canada. An instance of what popular sentiment can effect in this direction was afforded in England a few years ago. German dress fabrics had then largely ousted the productions of Yorkshire manufacturers from the English dry goods market, and Germany was, for the while, increasing her tariff upon and reducing her imports of British manufactures. Then arose throughout England a loud outcry largely incited by patriotic Englishwomen: "Buy no more German dress fabrics at the shops. Insist on English made materials or take none." The appeal was effectual; the Yorkshire manufacturers obtained large and valuable new orders and they encouraged set about improving their methods and style with permanently good results. A similar appeal to England in favor of breadstuff purchases from Canada, rather than the States would take effect, like that just quoted, for thousands of British householders would at once urgently impress their views on those from whom they bought their food, and through them on the importers of it. This appeal is by no means unlikely to be made, if one may judge by the tone of the British press. Indeed it would certainly be made almost universally throughout England, Wales and Scotland, if only Canadian farmers and their friends spread such a suggestion by means of appeals to British householders, which would be readily inserted in the popular press of the United Kingdom. Whether this is done or not, it is certain that McKINLEYISM should, for the ordinary economic reasons to which we have referred, cause a large diversion of British breadstuff purchases from the market of the States to that of the Dominion. The fears of the Minneapolis farmers' journal are therefore by no means unfounded.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Marquis of Salisbury and his great opponent are in accord on one point. Both, as friends of commercial freedom, rejoice over the recent condemnation of the McKINLEY tariff by the people of the States. Mr. GLADSTONE, however, differs from the British Premier in taking a more sanguine view than he of the chance of an early overthrow of the high protective policy of the States. The "grand old man" believes that "British interest in the McKINLEY tariff is secondary, except for the community-tendency of trade between two countries." Lord SALISBURY says, on the other hand, "Americanism must not be rashly drawn from the recent Congressional elections. The prospect of a prohibitive tariff must still be faced" by British traders. These utterances are characteristic of the respective temperaments of the two statesmen. Mr. GLADSTONE is enthusiastic, and an optimist; Lord SALISBURY cautious and slow to conclude that early success awaits anything for which he hopes.

The American committee for relieving the threatened Irish famine has withdrawn its appeal for funds at the request of Messrs. O'BRIEN and DILLON, who state that "the British Government has been spurred to investigate the matter and undertake a system of public works in the distressed districts, which, by affording partial relief, will at least postpone the famine." The fact is therefore admitted whatever the cause—as to which opinion will of course differ—that the British Government is doing what is needful to meet the Irish necessity. Meanwhile, the appeal made by Messrs. O'BRIEN and DILLON, for funds for the Home Rule propaganda in Ireland seems to be meeting with considerable success in the great American cities of large Irish population.

DR. HASTINGS, in the Victoria Times, emphatically denies all the allegations there made against the British Columbia medical council, to which we alluded yesterday. The examination papers were it seems, well and carefully set and, in every case correct. The bad grammar and spelling, quoted by the complainant, who is said to have been a student "plucked" by the examiners for incompetency, were due to newspaper reporting and did not appear in the paper of questions actually set to candidates. Dr. HASTINGS seems to have completely vindicated the capacity of the council.

The English municipal elections show a net gain of 31 seats to the Liberal party. The Liberals and Home Rulers secured a total gain of 97 seats, the Conservatives one of 66. The change is not very marked, as there were contests in some 250 constituencies, involving possible changes in about 2,000 municipal seats. The result indicates some advance towards the Gladstonian policy on the part of voters in the English town constituencies; but does not show a change marked enough to alter the balance of parties in England very materially. The Unionist party has, at present, a strong majority in England, but is in a minority in Scotland, Wales and Ireland. Hence any decisive change of opinion must make itself specially felt in England.

The following little journalistic effusion appeared in a recent issue of the Bellingham Bay Express. Things politically have evidently been very lively lately in that young city, where there seems to be no great local veneration for the bench:

"About 6 p. m. Justice Brooks met the editor of the Express in front of his justice dispensary, and throwing his hands around like a Dutch windmill and casting off the judicial ermine, demanded gore, blood and revenge. His grievance was that we, as a Republican journal, wanted to know if he was a Republican. He did not propose to tell anybody his politics, it was 'office,' 'office' that he wanted. He cursed, swore and tore around at a great rate. Officers Larwell and Gunster thought seriously of arresting him for using profane language on the street.

"The Express still lives and suggests that nobody vote for him, as apparently he is neither a Republican or a Democrat; he is a Republican. Vote for Latta and Falconbridge is a Republican and the other a Democrat. Brown seems to will thump us if anything appears in the Express. We have written our obituary; our office closed and set it up.

CLIFTON, Cal., November 12.—A severe sandstorm continues this section today. The telegraph wires are demoralized, cutting off communication with Arizona.

Prices Budged.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 12.—C. E. Anderson, a stock broker, failed today, owing to the decline in the market. Liabilities estimated at not more than $10,000. Assets unknown.

An old man named Bernard Vogel, a flower vendor, committed on his wife's grave this morning with strychnine.

Only four new cases of diphtheria are reported to-day. The reduction is due to the flushing of the sewers.

Of the whaling fleet from this port all but fourteen have returned. Of this number, two, the Grampus and the Mary D. Hume, are wintering at the mouth of the Mackenzie river, and are not expected to arrive here until next year. The remaining twelve are now on their way to this port and may arrive at any moment.

James O. Johnson, who was arrested in this city last evening upon a warrant issued in Seattle charging him with embezzlement, strenuously denies that he is guilty. It is on account of buying goods away with funds of the firm of Tobias, Sugerman & Co., general merchandise dealers of Seattle, with whom he has been connected. He was born and raised in this city and has always had a high reputation in the community for honesty. He has many friends here who are convinced that his arrest comes under the head of unfair prosecution.

The parlky times on the New York and London stock markets have caused a more cautious feeling among banks and money lenders and that is all. Call continues to be abundant at 15 per cent on the right kind of security.

This morning H. M. S. Warspite arrived in port from Esquimalt, B. C., on her way south to Coquimbo. The Warspite is the largest vessel that ever entered this port.

Discoloration of the Skin.

Between the cuticle—the epidermis, that is, or scarfskin—and the true skin is a layer of cells which secrete from the blood a dark coloring matter. The black races have this feature most fully developed, but even the lightest are not wholly destitute of it.

Its complete absence characterizes the albino, giving us occasionally a chal's white negro, the hair, of course, participating in the defect. As this pigment is also wanting in the albino's choroid coat of the eye—normally a dark background for the retina, and essential to clear vision—he is nearly blind except at night.

There is often a local absence of pigment, causing white patches on the limbs and different parts of the body. Such a patch on the head may give rise to a solitary white lock amid a full head of dark hair.

Some parts of the skin are naturally darker than the rest, and the darker color may extend far beyond the usual limit and still be purely physiological, but dark colored spots often appear on the body as a result of some diseased condition or of exciting causes.

The simplest and commonest of such spots are known as freckles. Their remote cause is a peculiarly sensitive skin; their direct cause is the light and heat of the sun. Persons with fair skin and hair are most subject to them. The pigment, which in others is uniformly distributed, seems to gather into small rounded spots.—Youth's Companion.

Badly Crippled.

A party of Americans, including three or four boys and girls, were not long ago visiting an ancient church in a French provincial city. An aged beadle showed them the objects of interest.

"Whose portrait is this?" asked one of the girls, indicating an ancient canvas upon which the face and form of a man in armor could barely be made out.

"That," said the beadle, after stopping to take a pinch of snuff, "is the celebrated Grand Duke Anatole, the founder of the church."

"Was he a great soldier?"

"Yes; but he had the misfortune to lose a leg or an arm in every battle in which he took part."

"How many battles did he take part in?" asked one of the boys.

The beadle, who was expecting a sneeze, looked skyward a minute, then sneezed violently, used his handkerchief, and answered:

"Twenty-four!"—Youth's Companion.

A Sagacious Collie.

On Saturday forenoon, while a gentleman was being driven in his private carriage past the Cross, Paisley, a little girl ran in front of the horse and would inevitably have been seriously injured but for the sagacity of a large collie dog which was running behind the carriage and saw the danger. The animal seized the child's dress and actually swung the little one round about in his efforts to extricate her from her perilous position. She was knocked down, but was not much hurt.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Bubach Plantation.

The work of gathering and drying the bubach blossoms is in full blast at the bubach plantation. About one hundred men are scattered through the fields picking the blossoms. As fast as they are picked they are stowed away about two inches deep in wooden boxes, the boxes being 2½ feet square. Wagons are employed in hauling the boxes to the drying house. Probably it is called a drying house because it is alongside of the spot where the drying is done. Certainly no artificial heat is needed at the bubach plantation to dry anything at this time of the year.

The sun's rays come down within the inclosure of big poplar trees with a force that makes it pleasant to stand from under. The trays are allowed to lie there, the blossoms being stirred up by a force of men until they (the blossoms) are fairly cured. Afterward they are placed on a large platform about sixty feet square, where they remain until dry, and then are sent to the reduction works, where they are ground into dust. This is done by men who are proof against sneezing, otherwise it could not be done at all. Whether or not it makes flies and mosquitoes sneeze we don't know, but it is certainly the best preventive in use to keep those insects at a distance.—Merced (Cal.) Star.

A Living Skeleton.

A living skeleton, who rivals some of those who figure in the museums, was found by the police in a garret in Allegheny. He is six feet high and weighs but forty-five pounds. He can't account for his loss of flesh. He declares he feels all right, though very weak, and has had no serious illness. He is a foreigner and unable to speak English. About two years ago, he says, he first noticed that he was getting thin, but as he felt well he paid no attention to it. He continued, however, to lose flesh, and the past spring, finding himself nothing but "skin and bone," he went to the country, but neither the change nor doctors did him any good, and about a week ago he returned to Allegheny. Being without relatives, he went to the garret to await death, but neighbors hearing of the case directed the attention of the police to it, and the man was removed to the station house and subsequently to the city home.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A New Kind of Cotton.

A new variety of cotton plant, producing a much larger proportion of cotton to seed than any other known kind, and having the additional advantage of being earlier and less susceptible to atmospheric influences, sounds like good news for the Lancashire mills. The newcomer is known as the mitafifi. It was discovered a few seasons ago at Benha, in Egypt, though it has only lately been planted on anything like a large scale. Mitafifi is admitted to have its faults. It is shorter in the staple and not quite so good in quality as the ashmouni plant, but for all that it appears to be driving the ashmouni plant out of the field. Vice Consul Alban reports that last year's experience was so encouraging that in some provinces of lower Egypt it has this year been almost exclusively sown.—London News.

THE OLD CHIFFONIER.

Louis XV chiffonier is a very hand- and graceful piece of furniture. It aid and polished, with locks of bur- d copper, and always seems to be ng, as if its red and white mosaics mercy rosy lips.

was given to me by my grandmoth- who inherited it from her grandfa- and I verily believe that it once d in a boudoir of the palace of Marly. ver was an innocent little piece of tures abused and rated so merciless- my chiffonier was when I chanced ink of it one day during my sojourn ge Perseus in Greece. You will no t ask why I thrust my trembling through my hair and cried out, erable idiot," without stating ther the epithet was applied to my- er to my chiffonier. Good heavens, only wonder was that I left a single on my head! Judge for yourself.

had been so fortunate some time re as to be loved by the most charm- of women. I shall not attempt to ribe her, not even by the color of her ; it is sufficient to say that for two s I called her "my angel" and ght image of my dreams." At the of that period I allowed one of my ds to say to me in speaking of her ow could you be such a fool?" She me back my letters, and I neglected return hers, but put the whole let a drawer of my old chiffonier, hout thinking to turn the key.

hat chiffonier was in my room; my s was in my mother's chateau; my her's chateau was eight hundred gues away, in the middle of Pro- nce. In setting off unexpectedly on diplomatic mission I had completely gotten to destroy those remains of an achment which had been delightful— long as it lasted.

When I accidentally called out the mory of those letters from some ob- re corner of my brain, I started up surprise and shame, for I knew that thoughtlessness might seriously com- mise a woman who had done noth- to deserve such treatment at my ds. I felt that my conduct had been worthy of a gentleman, and in a fine my I rushed out of the house, in- med for the first steamship bound for ncilles, took passage, and listening nothing but the voice of my con- ence returned to France.

A week later I arrived at the maternal tle, and I will spare you a recital of r ejaculations, the "What! You? ere! Why! So soon?" which greeted as soon as I appeared. My mother ugly stifled me with her embrace, and I saw that something dreadful had pened to me, and I had great diffi- lty to reassure her. When she had wer calm I said in as indifferent a ner as possible:

"Will you have my valise sent to my om, mother dear?"

"Certainly, my son; you must be tired ," she answered. Then summoning servant, she said, "Take my son's lug- ge to the blue room, Pierre."

"You mean the green room," I added.

"No, the blue room," persisted my mother.

"But the green room is my room."

"It was yours once, George," she said haughtily.

"And whose is it now?" I asked in sur- prise, and my mother pointed to the door, saying coldly:

"Here comes the present occupant."

Gabrielle!" I cried, going to meet my man, the loveliest and most charming of girls, with abundant blonde hair, eyes e azure as heaven, a smile of childish nocence and teeth like pearls. It was e, of all persons, who was occupying e green room, and who no doubt had ansacked the drawers and cupboards.

Unfortunate, thrice unfortunate man that I was!

Gabrielle, gay, artless and confiding, ough a trifle shy, gave me her hand th delicious as she said:

"How do you do, Cousin George?"

My face must have betrayed my con- sion as I took her hand, and looked ourningly for some sign of dissimula- on in her soft eyes. Had she found the letters, had she read them? To tell the uth Mrs. —— had loved me ardently, d had been so imprudent as to express r sentiments in writing, running the gers of fire and sin with plentiful ex- lamation points attached thereto. And ppose little Gabrielle had read them! shuddered at the thought.

But quite calmly she said, "How do you do, Cousin George?" That was all, and to my great pain lay a soft, cool ssibly little hand.

Ah, but what abyss is deeper than a oman's heart? as the psalmist says; uppose she had read the letters! The only way to make sure was to go into e room and look for them. Gabrielle's om! What sweet melody in the words, yet I felt that I dared not enter that sanctuary, although I had known my ousin since she was a child.

"Come, George, and see how prettily I have arranged your room," she said ruthlessly.

Ah, bliss, ecstasy filled me as she spoke. I was saved. Innocence had come to the rescue of depravity!

Lightly and gracefully she ran up the staircase; what a pretty figure she had! I followed her like a culprit, feeling al- most afraid to go, but yet I must at all hazards get my letters.

My former room was perfectly charm- ing, decked out in blue and white, and with no odor of cigars anywhere. The little bed was modestly draped with snowy curtains which looked like the wings of guardian angels. I looked round anxiously for the old chiffonier; there it stood as usual.

"May I have some water, Cousin Ga- brielle? I am dying of thirst," I said.

She took up the carafe, but I, artful fiend, had already observed that it was empty.

"Wait a minute. I will get you some water," she said, and left the room.

I rushed to the chiffonier and opened the drawer. Horror! It was empty.

The next instant my cousin returned, gave me a glass of water, then showed me her album, and then we talked mer- rily, just as we used to when we were playfellows.

But where were my letters? Had she found them, and hidden them away, or had she burned them? My head seemed to swim as I wondered.

As soon as I could think of a pretext I left Gabrielle, and in the hallway I met my aunt, her mother. She greeted me joyfully, then shook her finger at me in a mysterious way, and with a very know- ing air whispered:

"Come with me, you naughty, careless boy." I followed her into her own room, where she opened a drawer, saying mean- while:

"When we first arrived here it for- tunately occurred to me that before putting a young lady into a bachelor's room it would be well for me to look about it a little. I have had some experience of young men and their ways."

Here she put a package into my hands. Heavens and earth, my letters!

I threw my arms around my aunt's neck, kissed her rapturously and con- fessed everything. Oh, how happy I was! My dear little cousin Gabrielle— how happy I was!

A week passed. One morning when I got up I found a tiny piece of paper ly- ing on the floor, as if it had been slipped under my door. I picked it up. It was a letter.

"What does this mean?" I thought, and then I unfolded it and read:

"DEAR COUSIN—Why do you not tell mamma all about it?"

"All about it!" What does she mean? "Dear cousin." It is from Gabrielle.

I did not understand it at all, and waited anxiously for the breakfast hour. When I heard my cousin go down stairs I darted out and was going to speak to her, but she blushed, turned her face away, and putting a piece of paper into my hand said hurriedly:

"Take back your letter and speak to mamma."

My letter! I rushed out into the gar- den and read the missive. Thunder and lightning! it was my writing, my style, my name.

"You are adorable, therefore I adore you. Will you listen to me? Will you let me devote my life to you? A word from you and I throw myself at your feet—

GEORGE."

It was indeed my letter—it was num- ber one of my effusions to the ex-queen of my heart. It had slipped out of the package of letters, and Gabrielle, find- ing it in the chiffonier, thought that I had placed it there for her, and her an- swer was, "Speak to mamma." The result of the accident was I spoke to "mamma," and I married Gabrielle. I adore her and am the happiest husband in the world.

The christening will take place next month. Thanks, thanks, old chiffonier! —Translated for Epoch by Isabel Smith- son from the French of Jules Lermina.

AN IMPRESSION.

A cypress dark against the blue,
That dozens up to such a hue
As never painter dared and drew;

A marble shaft that rises in shine
Above a wreck of sculptured stone
With gray grass across overgrown;

A hill side scarred with hollow color
Through ages long work of summer rains
As purple as with vintage stains;

And rocks that stride the hours run
Below all the forests, one by one,
For pastime of the summer sun:

A crescent sail upon the sea
So calm and fair—not ripple free
You wonder that one can ever be;

A shore with deep indented bays,
And o'er the gleaming waterways
A glimpse of islands in the haze;

A face tanned dark to red and gold
With mountain eyes that seem to hold
The freshness of the world of old;

A shepherd's crook, a coat of fleece,
A grazing flock—the sense of peace,
The long sweet silence—this is Greece.
—Bennett Rodd.

Indefensible Injustice.

About one-fifth of all males in Massa- chusetts average less than $1 per day. The females working at this low scale of wages comprise 72.94 per cent. of all the workers. No intelligent reader will fail to realize what this fact means. As the scale of wages rises the number of fe- males enjoying them grows steadily less. Of a total of 7,251 workers receiving $20 a week and over, only 208 are females. The figures simply show that in the em- ployments in which the very lowest wages are paid women constitute over 70 per cent. of the workers, while in the employments where as high as $20 a week are paid they constitute hardly over 3 per cent.

In addition to all this—to the humiliating fact that in the same occupations, stand- ing side by side with men, the females are paid less wages for the same work; or, what amounts to the same thing, a woman of 20 years or upward is made to work side by side with a boy of 10 at the same wages. Women are compelled, then, to fill most of the cheap places, and paid less wages for the same work at that. We have no hesitation in saying that this is an indefensible injustice, and one so grave as to shame civilization.

Why do legislators sit passively under such discriminations of sex in the matter of work and wages? Simply because they know that the women carry no votes, and that mere sentiment, however just, can neither seat nor unseat a politi- cian. But it will not always be thus. —Boston Globe.

It Took Him a Long Time to Decide.

"Just watch this crank," said a man in a restaurant. "He comes in here every day, and goes through a whole act be- fore he gets up courage enough to ask for fried onions. He always finishes by ordering them, but he never avows his real purpose until he has beaten around the bush for ten minutes. The waiters know him well and humor him."

The lover of onions seated himself, and looked over the dinner card with a languid, bored air.

"How are the soft shelled crabs dev- iled?" he asked.

"They are very nice, sir."

"It's a little late for crabs, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is a little late, sir."

"Hm. Let's see. How is your can- vasback?"

"That's very nice, sir."

"But come to think of it I don't care for any duck," and he knitted his brows and carefully scanned the menu card.

"There doesn't seem to be anything here that I care for."

"How would you like a nice piece of roast lamb?"

"No, that doesn't strike my fancy."

"A chop?"

"No. Perhaps you would better bring me a bottle of St. Julien and a slice of cold roast beef. I have no appetite to- day."

"Very well, sir," and the waiter start- ed off slowly.

"Oh, Gaspard."

"Yes, sir."

"I have an idea."

"Yes, sir."

"I might as able to eat a good steak with a few fried onions."

"They would be very nice, sir."

"Only a few onions, but have the steak good."

"Yes, sir."

"That will be all. You needn't mind the claret."

"Yes, sir." But the lover of onions leaned back in his chair, as innocent ap- pearing as a child.—New York Tribune.

Swimming Devices.

A Spaniard has patented an invention relating to the manufacture of gloves, having webs between the fingers, like those on the feet of water fowl, so that on spreading out the fingers during the propelling stroke in swimming a com- paratively large surface will be present- ed to the water, and consequently the propelling action will be greatly in- creased. Apparatus heretofore devised as aids to swimming have been in most cases of a cumbrous, heavy character, fatiguing to use and subject to become defective. The inventor claims that his apparatus is exceedingly simple, besides being portable and reliable and easy to use, affording a firm and sure hold on the water, and enabling the swimmer not only to keep himself above the wa- ter, but also to perform rapid evolutions with facility.

Another method of facilitating swim- ming is reported from England in the shape of an invention of a swimming boot. The boot consists of canvas tops and wooden soles, attached to which are two blades of mahogany (some are made of steel), which close with the forward motion of the legs and open with the backward strokes. The sur- face measurement of the two blades on each shoe is about 144 square inches, while the total weight of a single com- plete shoe is about thirty-one pounds, it being loaded with lead to prevent too much buoyancy. A public competition of swimmers provided with this device and those without it is said to have re- sulted much in favor of the former.—Chicago Tribune.

Locusts Easily Digested.

The people of Zanzibar should stand high for the comprehensive character of their cuisine. Among other delicacies are small monkey and fruit eating bats. Locusts are relished by the Bedouin of Mesopotamia and some other eastern tribes. They are placed on strings and eaten on journeys with bitter and un- leavened bread. The Hebrews, who were prohibited eating many kinds of food which our larger experience teaches us are palatable and wholesome, as well as some that we do not venture to touch, were permitted to have their fill of lo- custs.

The locust is an article of diet to this day, but only of the very poor; it is thrown into boiling water and eaten with salt. To live on locusts and wild honey conveys a more accurate picture of extreme poverty and frugality to a traveler in the east than to any one else. Locusts, however, are not always cooked, sometimes they are eaten fresh. They are said to have a strong vegetable taste, the flavor largely depending, as might be expected, on the plants on which they have been feeding. Dr. Living- stone, who showed his common sense by not being fastidious, considered them palatable when roasted.—Scottish Re- view.

An Odd Bird That Likes Fishing.

Away up on the mountain side, where the numerous streams find their way through deep, dark canons down to the pulse beat of old ocean, is the natural summer home of the water ouel, the strangest of all strange birds. You sel- dom see more than one of them at a time. They are of a dark blue color, and are easily recognized by a peculiar, quick, jerking motion, which they never seem to tire of. And as they flit from rock to rock they are continually bob- bing up and down, performing such a polite little courtesy as would cause you to smile to see it.

Owing to their peculiar habits and the isolated spots they select to build their nests no one but the most ardent sports- men and naturalists succeeds in finding them. Hence a water ouel's nest, with two of their eggs in it, has a commercial value among nest collectors of $25. They always build their nests just back of some waterfall or under some overhang- ing bank, where they have to go through or under the water to get to it.

Another strange habit of this bird is the deliberate manner in which they ap- pear to commit suicide. They will start slowly, very slowly, to wade right down into the water until they disappear from view, but if the water is clear and you have a sharp eye you can still see their little dark forms clinging to the bottom in search of their morning repast, which consists of periwinkles.—Tacoma Ledger.

A Beautiful Vienna Girl.

Standing, sitting, leaning; sad, smil- ing or simply meditative; arrayed in a variety of chic costumes; smoking a cigarette, peeping over a mask, etc., she has challenged comparison with every fresh rival. A few years ago she won a $5,000 prize at a beauty contest. Then she was simply Miss Mertens, "of for- tune and to fame unknown." After that she became a fixed star in the theatrical firmament, and is now an actress at the Eden theatre in Paris. She is a distract- ing beauty, perhaps the most beautiful woman in Europe. Her skin shows the smooth, dead white of the magnolia blossom, a tint seen to perfection among the Austro-Hungarians. An Oriental langour softens her large, white lidded eyes. She is tall, of generous build and very graceful.—Philadelphia North American.

A Trick of the Wires.

A prominent Denver man was married recently with great eclat, but he is al- ready unhappy. He is unhappy because an Associated Press dispatch announced that he had married a hand- some Colorado woman was mixed in transmission, and he now has the reputa- tion of having married a handsome col- ored woman.—Detroit Free Press.

HISTORY OF A DAY IN THE ROYAL CITY.

Numerous Cases Disposed of in the Assize Court Yesterday—Slumach Will be Tried Today—Our Marine Commerce With Eastern Canada to be Fostered and Increased—Local Briefs and Personal Mention.

ASSIZE COURT.

Several Important Cases Disposed of—Slumach's Trial to Commence Today.

(Before Mr. Justice Drake.)

The fall assizes commenced in the Court House in this city yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock. The first proceeding was the selection of the Grand Jury, which resulted as follows: R. H. Alexander, W. R. Townsend, Joseph Dockerill, Chester Chadsey, H. V. Edmonds, J. G. Cook, W. H. Bayley, Peter Cordiner, Fred Eickhoff, John Hendry, John C. Henderson, William Elson, C. G. Major, W. E. Fales, G. R. Ashwell. Mr. H. V. Edmonds was chosen foreman.

His Lordship then proceeded to lay before the Grand Jury the facts of the various cases that were to come before them for consideration. Most of them were charges of a more or less grave nature, and they would probably find little difficulty in finding true bills in all the cases. The Court was then adjourned until the afternoon, at the beginning of which session the Grand Jury returned true bills in the cases of Jesse Plant, for larceny, and John Johnston, for robbery.

Mr. Eckstein, representing the Crown, moved the arraignment of Plant for larceny, and the prisoner was accordingly placed in the box. Upon reading the charge the prisoner pleaded "guilty." He was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

The next case was that of Johnston, for robbery. He also pleaded guilty, to the charge of stealing watches and other jewellery in Vancouver. His Lordship asked whether any one knew anything concerning the previous character of the prisoner. Mr. Eckstein replied that he had but a few minutes before discovered something, whereupon the prisoner was remanded for sentence.

The Grand Jury having returned no more bills, the prosecuting attorney asked that the case of the prisoner, Ah How, for embezzlement, be postponed until the spring assize court. He was willing to accept bail. His Lordship granted the request.

The Grand Jury here returned a true bill against J. A. MacDonald, for burglary. Mr. Eckstein moved the arraignment of the prisoner. The prisoner pleaded "not guilty." The following jurymen were then chosen: R. Blackstock, Archie Campbell, C. E. Butler, J. H. Quigley, R. E. Johnson, Alex Mitchell (foreman), S. W. Letman, C. J. Newton, W. H. Burns, E. Matheson, J. W. Campbell, A. Evans.

The first witness was Jasper, the man in whom the money and blankets were stolen. He missed the two $20 gold pieces and the blankets from his cabin when he returned home from the mill where he worked. The door had been broken open. The prisoner was undecided, and here gave the witness a rigid cross-examination about an Indian woman named Cigarette Lucy, who made frequent visits to the residence of Mr. Jasper.

The next witness, a colored man named Anderson, saw the prisoner and another man coming out of the house the day on which the blankets were missed by their owner. He had a bundle of blue blankets with him. Saw that the door of the cabin had been broken open, and asked prisoner what he had done it for, and prisoner asked whether witness was a policeman to go watching around.

This finished the case for the crown, and the prisoner having no witnesses, His Lordship charged the jury in a clear and precise manner.

The jury were obliged to trudge up to a room in the City Hall there to consider their verdict.

The Grand Jury then returned true bills in the cases of Peter Liberty, robbery, and Charles Alexander, attempted murder. Mr. Eckstein then moved the arraignment of Liberty for stealing $100 from a Frenchman. The prisoner pleaded guilty.

His Lordship said that though there was a plea of guilty yet because the prisoner stole money from the man with whom he was living and who had been kind to him, a sentence of eighteen months' imprisonment would be imposed.

The principal witness in this case, the man from whom the money was stolen, was here placed in the witness box and identified the money, which was then returned to him. He took his money and looked happy as he left the court house.

The case of Charles Alexander, for attempted murder, was then brought up. Mr. Morrison, for the prisoner, here asked for a remand until today on account of the fact that his learned friend, counsel for the Crown, had told him that the case would not likely be brought up until today. It was of great importance because he had told the witnesses for the defense not to come until that time.

His Lordship said he had no objections, and that as there were a number of Indian witnesses who generally occupy a considerable time, and as he disliked very much to lock up a jury over night, he would postpone the case until 10:30 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Atkinson, who will defend Slumagh, the alleged murderer, obtained the consent of His Lordship to allow any physicians whom the defense might name to examine his client as to his sanity. The court then rose.

Provincial W. C. T. U.

A special meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held yesterday in the Homer Street Methodist Church, Vancouver, to revise the constitution, especially that part relating to the representation of the districts of the Province. Mrs. Cunningham, of New Westminster, president, was in the chair, and Miss Mellbourgill acted as secretary. The others present were Mrs. Chadsey, Mrs. Ashwell, Chilliwack; Mrs. Major, Mrs. Sivewright, New Westminster; Miss Empey, Mrs. Sexsmith, Mrs. Wood, North Arm; Mrs. John Johnstone, Mrs. Schooley, Mrs. J. W. Young, Miss Bowes, Mrs. Motrie, Mrs. Foxley, Mrs. Thain, Mrs. Munro and Mrs. Wilson, Vancouver. A number of Vancouver ladies and members of the Y. W. C. T. U., were also present. The members of the convention were entertained at luncheon by the ladies of the local union. Among the others partaking of luncheon were the Rev. Messrs. McLaren, Maitland, Pedley, McLeod, Weir and C. Watson, of Victoria. During the afternoon the clergymen met and held an informal discussion on the proposal to adopt unfermented wine for sacramental purposes, but no definite action was taken.

The District Election.

The official recount in the late bye-election in Westminster District was made before the returning officer yesterday with the following result: Sword, 470; Ladner, 275; Thompson, 145; Greer, 57. As will be observed, Messrs. Thompson and Greer, not having polled one-half the number of votes cast for the successful candidate, they lose their deposits of $200 each. There were only five spoiled ballots.

Better Shipping.

In conversation with a gentleman lately arrived in this city from the Province of Nova Scotia, a TRUTH reporter yesterday learned that many of the ship owners of that important shipping province were beginning to turn their attention towards the loading of their vessels to this province for cargoes. It is a well-known fact that but few of the vessels that have departed from this province loaded, come from the Atlantic provinces, the majority of them having been owned by either British or American shipping houses. The reporter was led to believe, for his informant was a gentleman well experienced in shipping matters, from what was said, that some of the large lumber firms on the Fraser River were about making arrangements with maritime provience firms for a liberal supply of vessels to take cargoes to foreign lands. Some important developments in this respect may very shortly be expected to be made public. There are already quite a number of Nova Scotia vessels either loading or on their way to be loaded in this province.

The Steamer Victorian.

The new Union Pacific steamer Victorian, now being finished at Portland to go on the route between Victoria and Sound ports in December, is 256 feet in length, beam 35 feet—without the guards. She has seventeen feet depth of hold, and draws about twelve feet. A speed of twenty miles an hour or even more is expected of her. On the lower or main deck are the social hall, diningroom, engineroom, ice, mail, lamp and first and second engineers rooms, and the toilet rooms. On the upper or passenger deck are the ladies cabin, gentleman's smoking room and 48 state rooms. Beneath the main deck there is berth accommodation for 34 second-class passengers. The feature of the boat is the elegant interior fittings, all of which are of wood. The diningroom, the handsomest part of her, is expected to be the finest of any boat on the coast. The exterior of the boat will be done in white, and as she glides through the waters she will present an exceedingly beautiful appearance with her trim and graceful lines. Electric lights and annunciators are to be placed in every stateroom. The motive power is a triple compound engine with cylinders twenty-six, forty-one and sixty-eight inches in diameter, and with a thirty-four-inch stroke of 2,500 horse-power. The four-bladed propeller is twelve feet in diameter with an eighteen-foot pitch. It will turn up 120 revolutions per minute. Darling—English.

Last evening, at the residence of Mr. W. M. English, Merrivale street, an event of an exceedingly important nature took place, it being the occasion of the marriage of his daughter Virgie to Mr. V. E. Darling, the well known assistant to the postmaster in this city. The wedding has been looked forward to in society circles for some time past, and the popularity of the young people added greatly to the interest taken therein by their many friends. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock, in the presence of a few friends, and was performed by the Rev. Father Dontenville, who read the short but exceedingly impressive service of the Roman Catholic Church in a manner that rendered sacred the happy moments. The bride looked more charming than ever in a handsome white silk gown, over which was thrown a large tulle veil, and was supported by Misses Laura English and Bessie Rogers. Mr. James Ellard acted as best man. Immediately after the solemnization of matrimony had been performed a reception was held, when the newly made twain were recipients of the congratulations and well wishes of a host of friends. Among those who attended the reception were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Ewen, Mr. and Mrs. W. Wolfenden, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. S. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Gibeer, Mr. and Mrs. Parkes, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. —ttson, Dr. and Mrs. DeWolf Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bell, Mr. Malins, Mr. Brymner, Mr. Fraser, Mr. Finlayson, Mr. McMartin, Mr. Thompson and others.

After a pleasant hour had been spent in handshaking, general conversation and toasting, the happy couple drove off to spend the honeymoon, amid a perfect shower of rice, which poured forth from all directions from the front door to the carriage in waiting. The wedding presents received by the bride were very numerous, handsome and costly, and fortunate is the fair one who receives half as many upon her wedding day. TRUTH joins the host of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Darling in wishing them fair voyage through the troublesome sea of life.

Whether or not the sloop with its human freight reached shore safely or went to the bottom is yet unknown.

A GRAVE MATTER.

Extraordinary Nature of a Discussion in the Nanaimo Council.

A short time ago we printed the particulars of the outrageous delinquency of a grave digger at Nanaimo. The matter came up in the Council of that city the other day, and the following passage occurs in the report of the Free Press of the proceedings:

The communication from Mr. H. Chambers, the late grave digger, was read, in which he denied the reports made that he was drunk and neglected his duties. That the reason the grave was not down to its full depth was owing to the delay of Mayor Hilbert sending out the box, which was larger than he expected.

Mayor Hilbert explained that when the funeral arrived at the grave, the grave was only down three feet, and for the last twelve months Chambers had not dug a grave six feet deep. In some cases he would pile planks up eighteen inches high above the surface of the ground and measure from the top of the planks. He had frequently urged Chambers to commence the graves earlier and get them down to their required depth, but he would only commence them three or four hours before the funeral and often they had to wait to get the box in.

Mr. Chambers here handed in certificates from Rev. J. A. Buxton and Mr. H. McAra stating that Mr. Chambers, had, as far as they had been concerned, always had the graves ready and given satisfaction.

Ald. Baker said according to report both Chambers and the men sent to complete the work were drunk. The men were furnished liquor by Chambers so that they would get drunk and not finish the job, and he dared Chambers to deny that fact, for the men would be had to prove it. He said a grave digger should keep sober, attend to his work, and show some respect for the dead. From what he had heard the proceedings in connection with digging that particular grave were simply disgraceful. The graves should be sunk into the solid earth fully six feet, and the $5 for the work is excellent pay.

Mayor Hilbert said he could bring witnesses to prove that Chambers was not sober, and even if so, was it a proper thing for Chambers to go away from the graveyard and leave the coffin with the body on the surface in a pouring rain. The relatives, fearing that the grave was not completed, went out at 9 o'clock at night and found the body above ground. They then got another man, and Mr. Gough and himself assisted in digging the grave to its proper depth, working in the pouring rain till 2 o'clock in the morning. On the occasion of a recent Masonic funeral he had to take hold of Chambers to keep him from falling into the grave. Had the same thing occurred in some places Chambers would have been tarred and feathered.

It was decided to lay the matter over one week.
