THE CONDITION OF THE DISABLED OCEAN RACER

London News—The Hon. Lewis Isaacs receives a Resolution of Confidence—To Explore Alaska—Flack Sentenced—A Noted Desperado Shot in Nevada.

QUEENSTON, March 31.—The stern of the disabled ocean racer, City of Paris, is deeply sunk today, while her bow is high out of water. Her steam pumps are making little if any headway on the water in her hole. No increase in the amount of water has occurred since yesterday. The bottom of the steamship is believed to be uninjured, and it is supposed the water which submerged the engines found its way to them through the inlet and outlet pipes of the engine rooms. The giving way of machinery destroyed those pipes together with valves and other auxiliary fitting. This permitted of a free inrush of water. An examination of the steamer's hull is being made by divers.

London News.

LONDON, March 31.—In spite of the rose-colored reports of the officers of the City of Paris, calculated to show that at no time was the ship in danger, and the publication of obviously inspired articles arguing that the fact that the vessel did not go to the bottom, furnishes conclusive evidence of superior qualities of faster liners in respect of safety over slower ones. It is unquestionably the truth that the situation was regarded by all on board as very grave, though the passengers unite in testifying to the high qualities of seamanship displayed by the officers of the disabled ship, and their persistent efforts to quiet fears and conduce to the comfort of those under their care. There were many painful scenes and anxious hours, particularly when darkness would set in. Most of the passengers passed sleepless nights and sought relief from the storm of anxiety and suspense in the excessive use of intoxicants, indulgence in which was to some a new experience, while others gave vent to their feelings of utter hopelessness in shrieks and wails of anguish.

The Conservative Association of Walworth Division, of Newington, met today and passed resolutions of confidence in their member of Parliament, Mr. Lewis Isaacs, and adopted him as their candidate at the next general election. In view of the fact that Mr. Isaacs recently figured in the courts as the accuser of Miss Elizabeth Vincent, whom he had seduced and who, in retaliation for his subsequent desertion shot him in the arm, it would seem that he stood very much in need of an expression of confidence from some quarter. Nevertheless, the action of his constituents has caused general surprise and some Tory indignation. However, as Isaacs' majority in the last contest was less than 250, it is surmised that with a locally popular Liberal candidate opposed to him, the perfunctory vote of confidence passed today will be of little benefit to him.

The Chamber of Commerce has decided to appoint a permanent committee to deal with future strikes in a conciliatory spirit. The object of the committee will be to act as an arbitrating body as far as possible and in the settlement of disputes between employees and employers, particularly those which may arise in industries whose interruption would directly affect commerce.

Mr. Balfour's Irish Land Purchase Bill is one of the most elaborate and complicated measures that has been laid before Parliament in many years, and will have to undergo a great deal of pruning before it is presented to the Queen for royal assent. Already the number of amendments prepared, and in progress of preparation, is appalling, and the term of its committee stage promises to be protracted and exciting. The bill contains 75 clauses and covers 65 pages of foolscap.

The Brothers Wolf, conducting a prominent banking business in Berlin, have been arrested for issuing a swindling prospectus, setting forth the merits of certain electric lamps of American manufacture. It is alleged that they have victimized a large number of would-be speculators, who will be required to testify against them.

To Explore Alaska's Copper Country.

CINCINNATI, O., March 31.—The advance guard of the expedition sent out by Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper to explore the unknown copper country of Alaska, consisting of E. H. Wells, Alfred B. Shantz, and E. J. Glave, start tonight by the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad for St. Louis, thence to San Francisco, where they will meet the rest of the party and take the Government steamer Peterson for Alaska. The whole party, with the Indian carriers, which they will take at Chilkoot, will number 25 souls. The expedition will be under the command of E. H. Wells, who explored the Yukon country last summer for Scripp's League. Mr. Shantz was recently assistant astronomer of the Alleghany Observatory, and is at present connected with the New York Tribune. Mr. Glave was one of the artists with Stanley in 1883. The expedition will be gone about six months.

Clever Jim Corbett.

NEW YORK, March 31.—James J. Corbett, the clever San Francisan, who recently bested Jake Kilrain in a six-round glove contest at New Orleans, made his first public appearance in the East at a Brooklyn theatre tonight, and boxed three rounds with Prof. Mike Donovan, instructor of boxing at the New York Athletic Club. Corbett, with his six feet, one and a half inches, looked almost a giant beside the veteran middleweight, and his long arms were sent in against the Professor's diaphragm too often for the comfort of that well-preserved boxer. The Westerner is remarkably quick and uses both hands, and ducks, as a sporting man would say, "Beautifully." He "pivoted" to show the spectators how La Blanche knocked out Dempsey, but he does not consider the blow a good one. The set-to altogether was a livelier one than is usually seen in a theatre and the crowd applauded the Californian liberally at its conclusion.

Dastardly Murder.

NEWARK, N. J. March 31.—A daring murder took place in Hemmon hat factory this afternoon. James Smith, alias "Fiddler," who has served a sentence in the State Prison, stabbed Frederick Butler and George Hastings, both men over sixty years of age. All parties are hatters. The wounded men were at once removed to the Hospital. There it was found that Hastings had been badly cut across the bowels. His condition was hopeless and he died at 5:15 p. m. Butler was cut in the breast and his condition is serious. The details of the affair is as follows. At 1:40 o'clock this afternoon eight men were working in the plank shop on the Cabinet Street side of the factory. Smith, the murderer, entered the room and addressing Hastings accused him of causing his (Smith's) discharge from the shop. After a few words he drew a long knife and plunged it into Hastings' abdomen, and then stabbed Butler in the breast as the latter was running to his shopmate's assistance. Smith was overpowered by the workmen and tied with ropes, and subsequently handed over to the police, but not until after a severe struggle, in which he attempted to draw another knife he had in his pocket.

The Redwood Lumber Trade.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—It is stated that the prices of redwood lumber have fallen so low that there is no longer any money in the business for millmen, and for that reason a proposition is on foot to form an organization in Mendocino County to unite with that already in existence for some three years past in Humboldt County, under which combine the manufacturers would unite in consigning their cargoes to one representative house here to deal with. This action will give redwood men the same advantages as those enjoyed by Oregon and Puget Sound mill owners, nearly all of whom are represented by the Pacific Pine Lumber Company, in this city, which takes charge of all cargoes arriving, fixes schedule or standard of rates, and secures uniform values for cargo lots.

Public Sale of Sealskins.

LONDON, March 31.—The first public sale of sealskins for year was held today. The agent of C. C. Shayne, of New York, reports that high prices were obtained, with the following results, as compared with those of last season: Middlings, advanced 5 per cent; middlings and smalls 2½ per cent; smalls, 2½ per cent; large pups, 10 per cent; middling pups, 20 per cent; small pups, 22½ per cent; and extra small pups, 17½ per cent.

Unprincipled Scoundrels.

LOUISVILLE, March 31.—In the very scene of disaster the unprincipled did not forget to ply their trade, and numbers of robberies of the dead and stricken are reported. Ed. Meyers, Isadore Lowenstein, A. Marks, and Ike Isleman, Russian Jews, were arrested this afternoon and charged with arson. The officers caught the men building a large fire in a demolished store on Market Street, which is in the midst of the shattered district. The men are charged with fiendishly wishing to set fire to the building with the evident intention of burning the already devastated district. The fire was extinguished before it had made much headway.

The Deputies Turned Loose.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Judge Barrett today sustained the demurrers of Deputy Sheriffs Walsh, Martin and Young, to the indictments found against them for bribery in accepting $7 from C. E. Francklyn, a prisoner in the Ludlow Street Jail, for certain privileges granted him. The judge decides that the deputies did not accept a bribe because they could legally have granted Franckyln privileges free, if they had chosen to do so. They could have been indicted for extortion, but it is too late to do that now, as extortion is a misdemeanor, and an indictment for a misdemeanor cannot be found after two years has elapsed since the offence. The deputies are therefore free.

Bismarck's Visitors.

In the evening 1,100 persons bearing torches and accompanied by bands of music playing national airs marched around the lake in the grounds of the castle. Preparations of unprecedented extent and magnificence are making for celebrating the ex-Chancellor's birthday tomorrow.

Richmond is a Dunkeu Acts County, where liquor is wholly prohibited from sale.

MURDER MOST FOUL.

Henry T. Sunbury Found With His Head Battered in.

VANCOUVER, March 31.—As William Anderson, who lives in a shack on Powell Street near the smelter, was going toward the Vancouver Saw Mill yard on a fishing tour yesterday morning at 7.30 o'clock, just at the side of the railway track met his view. There, beneath a small pile of broken pieces of lumber and scantling in a pool of blood, lay the dead body of a man in a semi-nude condition. He at once made the discovery known to the Barnard Castle Hotel, Powell Street; whence the information was telephoned to the police, and Chief McLaren and Coroner McGuigan were soon on hand and had the body conveyed to the city morgue where it now lies. The body had been stripped of all clothes except the shirt and was covered with blood about the head and hands. The wounds were chiefly bruises which had evidently been made with a club. The gash in the top of the head lay open to the skull, and had evidently been made by the angle of a club or a rough iron instrument, not by a knife. There were no marks in the vicinity to show a struggle, nor in which direction the body had been carried, as it evidently had been, to the place where it was found. Chief McLaren and Officer McLeod spent a busy afternoon and night tracing every possible clue, but could find little of an authentic nature. The deceased had been working for three weeks as a farmer upon the addition to the Vancouver Saw Mills, and boarded at the Barnard Castle Hotel, rooming with a young man named Chamberlain. Mr. Cartwright, proprietor of the hotel, said that he never knew him to take a drink at the hotel, and that he was a sober and inoffensive man of quiet disposition. He usually took a walk out after tea. He was last seen alive by any one except the murderer on Friday night. On that occasion he went out as usual for a walk in the direction of the sawmill and smelter. Just about 8 o'clock, at dusk, Mr. Hugh Ferguson, a young man boarding at the same hotel, met him with another man walking towards the city.

Seeing nothing out of the way, Ferguson did not take particular notice of the person who accompanied him and could give no description of him. A young man named Moorehouse, who lived at the What Cheer House, and who works at the sawmill, says he saw the man who was missing from the mill going past that hotel toward the water front along with an Indian. Except from these two parties, none was found who had seen him after he left the Barnard Castle after tea on Friday evening. By some it is thought that Sunbury got into a quarrel with the Siwashes, which resulted in his murder by them. The fact that the body was stripped of its clothing and carried to another place from where the foul deed was committed, a thing which the Indians have been known to do, seems to substantiate this theory. Sunbury had told his room-mate and one or two others of fears he had regarding a man he had met in this city. The story was that while in a hotel here he came across a person whose face appeared familiar to him. He went up and said: "It seems to me I should know you, your face seems familiar." The man addressed said with severe emphasis, "I know you, your name is Sunbury," and almost immediately left. Sunbury had said to several that he feared that man and the reason for the fear was that he believed him to be a man named Bowen who had committed a murder in Sherbrooke County, Quebec, twelve years ago, and had escaped from prison while awaiting trial and never recaptured. It was even hinted that Sunbury with another had been planning to secure the arrest of this man and get the reward. So far as known this is the only party in Vancouver who could have a motive in taking Sunbury's life, for it is certain he could not have had money on his person at the time. The police have taken charge of all his personal effects, among which are a number of private letters and business papers, which show him to have had possession of a flagstone quarry at Dadswell, Wolfe County, Quebec, in 1887, where he has a daughter married to W. A. Bloomfield. He has also a daughter married to a William Andrews, of Troy, Vt. He evidently lived in the most happy relations with all his family, for the letters from his daughters are of the most affectionate nature. He came to Vancouver on January 21st of this year and registered at the Oriental Hotel, where he stayed for three weeks, except for a day or two when he was absent

IN NEW WESTMINSTER.

He left there about four or five weeks ago without paying his board, stating that he was expecting money from the east. He was told that would be all right and to pay it when he was able. He then stayed at the Regina for a few days when he got work on the Vancouver Saw Mill, and then he went to board at the Barnard Castle Hotel. Last night some boys found the remainder of his clothing in a stump not far from where the body was found; they were not much torn. From the position in which the body was found it must have been placed there during Saturday night, else it would have been discovered on Saturday.

Coroner McGuigan empanelled a jury this afternoon on the case, and after viewing the body at the morgue further proceedings were adjourned till tomorrow at 2 o'clock.

At the meeting the City Council tonight it was decided to offer a reward of $200 for information that will lead to the conviction of the murderer.

Behring's Sea Losses.

OTTAWA, March 25.—Capt. Warren, of Victoria, B. C., who is here, said he had come down armed with power of attorney representing $300,000, claims of several owners for losses in the Behring Sea seal fishery for several years, in fact since 1887. "The Bearing Sea never was a private sea," said the captain. "When Russia owned the country the United States protested against their claim that it was a private sea, and were joined by Great Britain. In 1827 Russia seized a sealer belonging to the United States, and had to restore it, paying all costs for claims for damages. Of course, we do not admit, now that the United States own it, that they can make it a private sea to suit their own convenience. We certainly expect to receive recompense for our losses. One of my boats was seized last year with about $4,000 worth of furs on board. I have five boats which cost, some of them $16,000. A sealer is very heavily manned; five men would be sufficient to sail a schooner, but for sealing they have to carry about thirty men." Warren said that he intended giving some valuable information to Mr. Tupper regarding the Behring Sea question.

These acts were recently disallowed at Ottawa.

John Hazelwood, a farmer, was struck on the track near Deloraine, and instantly killed by a C. P. R. train.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There is much disappointment felt by the public that the rumor contained in our last issue, regarding an agreement between the Southern Railway and the C. P. R. to build the Southern road to a terminus on English Bay, has not been either contradicted or explained by the Southern Railway officials. Our chief object in publishing the rumor was to give them an opportunity, if they desired to take it, of speaking out on the subject. We made an effort yesterday to reach Mr. BEXXETT by wire with the object of questioning him on the subject, but were unable to ascertain exactly where he was. It will surely be incredible to most people that these gentlemen could come to this city asking certain very valuable concessions and offering in exchange the promise that this was to be practically the terminus of the road, or as they put it, "the home of the railway," and at the same time be in actual communication with other people to locate the terminus elsewhere. But there is no questioning the fact that the rumor which we published had for two or three days previously been current in Vancouver among a circle of men who are always well informed on such matters. We think that before the new proposition of the Southern Railway is further discussed by our municipal authorities they should take means to ascertain what there is in the rumor. It has always been believed by the people of this city that the Southern Railway would sooner or later go on to Vancouver, and it has never been thought that the building of it on to that point would do this city any harm. It is not now believed that if the rumored agreement with the C.P.R. should turn out to be true that it would do any material injury to New Westminster. The point is this: They are asking a great deal from the city in the way of terminal facilities, right of way, grants of land, etc., and they are giving us to understand that in return for these they will make this the "home of the railway," meaning that the general offices and workshops will be located here, and that the main line of traffic will be run directly through the city, or along its water front. To be assured that these advantages would be obtained, the city might be inclined to grant what is asked, or a great part of it; but if the company is really making other arrangements whereby it will be impossible, or at least highly improbable, that we will obtain these benefits, it is well that the city should know these facts before it becomes committed to definite proposals.

The rumor that is prevalent is of such an extraordinary nature, involving conditions that hitherto have been undreamed of, and apparently combining the interests of two roads which have all along been considered hostile to one another, that we felt almost assured that there would be an immediate official denial of the rumor. That denial may come yet. For the sake of the good repute of these gentlemen of the railway, we sincerely hope it will. Once we have that denial, coupled with what must accompany it, namely, an explicit statement of the intentions of the company regarding New Westminster, then the city will be in a position to deal with the new proposal that has been made, and, it cannot be too strongly urged, the city should deal in the most generous spirit with that proposal.

But whatever else the Southern Railway may contemplate doing at Westminster, one thing is beyond question, they have no intention of building a bridge here. That, at least is definite, now, our greatest necessity at present is a bridge, and the city must set itself energetically about the work of supplying that necessity. Mayor Brown, a gentleman for whose good judgment and zealous care of the city's interests we have much respect, thinks that a ferry might be made to meet the needs of traffic for the present. But a ferry is only a half-measure, and while we appreciate the Scottish canniness of the Mayor, we don't believe that in this age of rapid advancement New Westminster can afford to do things by halves. The ferry idea is antiquated and slow-going. It is not in keeping with the reputation for dash and rapid progress which this Province has attained within the last decade. Westminster should not be content with a ferry if it is possible to have anything better. Why, the very building of such a great public work as a bridge here, would in itself, give the city such an advertisement as would probably attract more foreign wealth and consequent enterprise to the city than would make up for all the expenditure. Nothing at present would give the city and its interests a bigger boost ahead than a bridge. Enterprise is infectious. A place where public spirit is strong is the place where capital and industries concentrate. The spectacle of progress promotes progression. One big idea begets a score of others, and the forward motion becomes accelerated motion. If a ferry is put on now, the bridge question will be shelved perhaps for years, and at all events the fact that public money has been spent in boats and wharves will always be an argument against doing anything that will supersede and render useless expenditures already made. Now is the opportunity. Let New Westminster be known as a city that does not flinch from a great undertaking.

REPORTS.

The Health Committee submitted the following report of the medical experts chosen to investigate the old Royal Hospital, and recommended that they be paid $25 each for such report:

1. The front of the building comprising the main entrance, hall, &c., and two wings, is practically safe, and may be utilized as residence. We would urge and insist, however, that all this portion of the building be plastered and painted throughout, and that no papering be used on the walls or ceiling throughout.

2. We would urge that all the above portion of the building be disinfected by burning sulphur, under the supervision of your health officer, and that the sulphur be burned under the building after the basement has been closed in.

3. The entire back portion of the building, and also the out houses, are condemned, and we would insist on their complete destruction by fire.

4. The outbuilding where at present the family named Campbell resides is excepted in the above. We consider it practically safe.

[Signed] I. M. McLEAN, M. D.
A. M. ROBERTSON, M. D.
W. A. DEWOLF SMITH, M. D.

Ald. Sinclair said that if he remembered rightly Dr. McLean was the party who first called attention to the building, saying it was utterly unfit for tenancy.

Ald. Lyal said the last speaker had been invited to accompany the investigating committee, but had declined to do so.

Ald. Johnson wished to know how the back portion of the building was to be burned without destroying the whole.

Ald. Batchelor thought the building should have been pulled down before it was sold.

On motion the report was adopted.

BY-LAWS.

The Council went into committee on the Sanitary By-Law, Ald. Shiles in the chair.

The committee rose and reported the by-law complete without amendment. It was read a third time, passed, ordered signed, sealed and published.

Council went into committee on the Fire By-Law, Ald. Sinclair in the chair. On motion of Ald. Johnson, clause 3 was struck out, and the by-law was reported complete with amendments. It was read a third time, passed, ordered signed, sealed and published.

Moved by Ald. Johnson, seconded by Ald. Batchelor, that a competent person be employed to assist the City Engineer when necessary. Carried.

NOTICES.

Ald. McPhaden gave notice that at next meeting of the Council he would introduce a by-law regulating the placing of electric light, telephone, telegraph, and electric tramway poles, and for painting the same.

Ald. Johnson gave notice that at next meeting he would move to amend the Fire Limit By-law by the insertion of a clause appropriating the sum of $300 to the fire department for the payment of service firemen at fires—during the present year—$150 payable 1st June, and $150 on the 1st December.

The Council then adjourned.

Nothing Saved.

A little boy was walking with his father one day. As they trudged along the father saw an old horseshoe lying in the road, and bade the boy pick it up and take it along.

The lad looked at the shoe carelessly and replied that it was not worth carrying, whereupon the father said nothing more, but quietly picked it up himself. He pretty soon sold the old iron for a penny at a roadside smithy and invested the coin in cherries.

The day was hot, and presently the man noticed that his son was beginning to cast longing eyes upon the box of cherries, but did not offer any to his son. He made pretense of eating them, and dropped one to the ground as if by accident.

The boy picked it up quickly and ate it with a relish.

A little further on another dropped, and this, too, the lad lost no time in securing. So, one by one, all the cherries were dropped and picked up.

"Well," remarked the father, when the last one had been eaten, "it did not pay to pick up that horseshoe perhaps, but if you had stooped once for that you wouldn't have needed to bend twenty times for the cherries."

The moral of the story is an old one, but more generally known than heeded: "Lazy folks take the most pains."—Youth's Companion.

HOW HEADS ARE CUT OFF.

of the Conjurer's Most Startling Tricks Easily Explained.

For a number of years the masterpieces some conjurers have been the cutting of heads. The most common one, perps, is that where a countryman with sorter buzzing" in his head has it red by cutting off the offending mem-. The subject takes a seat in a high k, upholstered chair. The long back the chair is thickly padded and has o silk cords running crosswise on it, e from the inner edge of either arm up the top corner of the opposite side. us making a broad X.

The subject being seated in a chair, a ce helmet or "receiver" is placed on s head. This helmet is made of any ight metal, has a vizor in front, and is pen at the back. After it is placed over s head the vizor is lifted to show that e head is there, but in reality a dum- head is seen, made up to represent e subject. As the performer closes the zor he tilts the helmet forward a little, hile the subject at the same moment ws his head out of it and presses it gainst the back of the chair, which ives way under the pressure and a tri- ngular space opens, the two sides of hich are formed by the lower portion f the X in the padding, the base being n a line with the chair arm, where this swinging portion of the back is hinged on. On this flap, the opening of which is concealed by the receiver and a towel placed in front of it to hide the blood (?). rests the head of the subject.

The receiver is now removed and placed on a small cabinet, the towel being left at the neck of the subject in the chair. In a moment the receiver is taken from the top of the cabinet, and the head is seen resting there; it moves and speaks and is the head of another person made up to represent the first one, and who sits behind the mirror in the cabinet and pops his head up through a hole in the top of it as soon as the receiver is placed there. This cabinet is shaped like a safe, and contains several apparently deep shelves. In reality the shelves are shallow, a mirror of proper size being placed in it in such a position as to leave about four-fifths of the cabinet vacant.

The very latest decapitation is one now used by Herrmann. The stage is peculiarly set, the interior, from the first to the third groove, being completely hung in black velvet or felt, back, top and sides. In place of the ordinary foot-lights a row of gas jets is usually placed across the stage just on a line with the inside of the boxes, and another row carried around but outside of the arched entrance to the black chamber.

The effect of this arrangement of light and shadow throws the stage into impenetrable gloom. Herrmann appears suddenly clothed in white. Then Mephistopheles appears so suddenly that it seems as if he had jumped out of space, but really coming through an opening in the black cloth. Then comes a light cloak and a pretty woman in evening dress. This latter first wraps herself in a black domino of the same material as the stage hangings, leaving her arms and head free. Over this she now slips a framework of light wire, covered with a fine evening dress. This framework has no back, and she can slip out from it behind, leaving the shell with dress.

For the lady to sit on, two pedestals suddenly appear. These are white, and appear by having a cover of black pulled from them quickly. One of these is about two feet high and the other about five feet high. The lady sits on the smaller one, and Mephisto orders Herrmann to cut her head off.

After some demurring he finally seizes a carving knife, places a light cloak over the lady's shoulders and cuts off her head.

Taking it with one hand under the chin and the other holding her hair, he carries it across the stage and places it on the other pedestal, she walking along with him, having slipped out behind the framework, leaving it upright on the small pedestal. She walks across the stage in her black domino or behind a black screen shoulder high, only her head showing, and finally stopping with her head on the pedestal that is about five feet high. To replace, the same gliding back is again employed, and she again resumes her dress case and the trick is over.—New York News.

A Bridge Over the Bosphorus.

The most recent proposal for a huge bridge is for one across the Bosphorus, a project for which has been made out by a French engineering company. The historic and picturesque channel between the shores of Europe and Asia, which connects the sea of Marmora with the Euxine, is 872 yards broad, and it is proposed that the bridge to span it should be of one arch only. In these days of huge bridges this should not offer serious difficulties from an engineering point of view, if the financial ones can be got over. Various projects have been put forward to the same effect during the past twenty years, but it was not considered that the bridge would be useful enough to justify the enormous expense which it would entail. Railways have, however, developed very much during recent years, and it is now thought that, if constructed, it would act as a link in the local railway system, and eventually pay a fair return on the money invested in it.—Toronto Globe.

Gas for Air Purification.

Gas jets may be made important auxiliaries to ventilation. Inserted in the bottom of air shafts, they establish active currents which withdraw the vitiated air. A cubic foot of illuminating gas can be utilized so as to cause the discharge of 1,000 cubic feet of air, and a common gas burner will consume nearly three feet of gas an hour, so that the quantity of contaminated air that would be extracted from a apartment during that time would be 3,000 feet. By suitable contrivance gas lights, the effects of which are at too often pernicious, may not only become self ventilating, but may also be made to contribute materially to the purification of the air of inhabited apartments.—New York Telegram.

What a Reporter Saw in a New York Insane Asylum.

In a New York State Insane Asylum, a reporter recently noted these incidents: In one of these pavilions, a demented barber was shaving a fellow patient, using a safety razor, while a score of other lunatics were awaiting their turns. In the midst of the operation, the barber quietly wiped his razor, laid it aside, and taking a seat by the window, fell into what was apparently a brown study, with his dull, dry eyes sweeping the distant forest, and his finger-tips drumming a tune on the window-sill. The man in the chair, one-half of whose face was still lathered and unshaved, gave no evidence of impatience or vexation with the unpleasant eccentricity of his barber, and the other occupants of the room did not appear to observe any thing unusual in the course of events. After an interval of at least ten minutes, the half-shaven individual arose from the chair, and with the lather still sticking upon one cheek, walked out to resume his work on the farm. Not a ripple of amusement disturbed the empty faces of the other customers in the shop. One of them, a huge fellow in brown jeans, arose and remarked quietly: "I should like to pull down Brooklyn bridge." The barber, by this time, had recovered from his fit of abstraction, and, walking to the chair, said "Next!" in a perfectly business-like tone, but all his customers had wandered away. In a neighboring laundry, half-a-score of men were busily engaged with suds up to their elbows. One gentleman quietly lifted a dripping undergarment from the tub, and wrapping it around his shoulders like a soldier's coat, announced that he was Napoleon Bonaparte. A fellow-lunatic informed him that he was crazy, and he immediately returned to his washing as though nothing had happened.—San Francisco Argonaut.

VORACIOUS WOPMS.

Their Gluttonous Appetite Satisfied Only with Steel Rails.

For the past two years the German Government has been making inquiries into the life, history and ravages of one of the most remarkable worms known to exist. This wonderful creature, whose gluttonous appetite is only satisfied after a feed on common steel, was first brought into general notice by an article in the Cologne Gazette, in June, 1887.

For some time preceding the publication of the account mentioned the greatest consternation existed among the engineers employed on the railway at Hagen, by accidents which always occurred at the same place, proving that some terrible defect must exist either in the material or the construction of the rails.

The government became interested and sent a commission to the spot for the purpose of maintaining a constant watch at the spot where the accidents—one of them attended with a loss of life—had occurred. It was not, however, until after six months had elapsed that the surface of the rails appeared to be corroded, as if by acid, to the extent of over one hundred yards.

The rail was taken up and broken, whereupon it was found to be literally honey-combed by a thin, thread-like gray worm. The worm is said to be two centimetres in length and of about the bigness of a common knitting-needle. It is of a light gray color, and on the head it carries two little sacs, or glands, filled with a most powerful corrosive secretion which is ejected every ten minutes when the little demon is lying undisturbed. This liquid when squirted upon iron renders that metal soft and spongy, and of the color of rust, when it is easily and greedily devoured by the little insect. "There is no exaggeration," says the official report, "in the assertion that this creature is one of the most voracious, for it has devoured thirty-six kilograms of rails into fortnight."—St. Louis Republic.

BISMARCK'S SECRETARY.

How He Obtained His Position Under the Chancellor.

Herr von Rottenberg, who is sometimes introduced by Bismarck to foreign diplomatists as his right hand, while he facetiously adds that he keeps his right arm for himself, owes the high position he enjoys entirely to his own genius and the keen perception of the Prince, by whom it was discovered. Count Herbert had been a college chum of Herr von Rottenberg, and had maintained a friendly correspondence in after life. One day Prince Bismarck, on finding on his son's desk a brochure entitled "An Ideal State," put it in his pocket, curious to see the subject of Count Herbert's studies. The Chancelor was delighted on perusing the work and inquired with much interest concerning the author. On learning that he was engaged in commercial pursuits, much against his wishes, his taste being wholly devoted to science and literature, the Prince immediately exclaimed: "Then let him come to us. The author of that brochure is just the man wanted in our Chancelerie: just the man I should like to consult—the man to give valuable advice in state difficulties. Write to him at once." This was done. Young Rottenberg eagerly accepted the offer, and deserted his uncle's counting-house with delight, although warned by his friends that the post would be a hard one. Such it has proved with a vengeance. Bismarck is a man to whom fatigue, whether of soul or body, is unknown. He can work from seven in the morning until night, scarcely allowing himself time for meals; and then, again, will supplement the labor of the day with another spell of work till midnight. And never yet has Herr von Rottenberg failed to keep pace with his giant patron. He has indeed become indispensable to the great master, who can not bear his absence for a moment. It is a common saying among the Germans that Bismarck's eyesight, hearing and memory are all represented by Herr von Rottenberg.—London Letter.

Killing of Joseph Le Paige at Kootenay—The Steamer Yosemite Brings a Large Freight—Pound Regulations—The Young Men's Christian Association Anniversary—The First Residence to use the Electric Light—Telephone Matters—The Mission Branch—Funeral of the Late J. M. Whiteside—Local Brevities.

Killed in Kootenay.

A letter received from Kootenay gives the following account of an unfortunate conflict which took place there, resulting in the death of one of the parties. On the 7th of March, a man named Prevost, had an altercation with a man named Jos. Le Paige, over a game of billiards, when Prevost took a cue and struck Le Paige twice over the head, inflicting a scalp wound. At first it was thought that the wound was not dangerous, but four days afterward the man died. An inquest was held by a coroner's jury, Mr. D. Griffiths acting as foreman. The jury found that Le Paige's death was caused by a blow from a weapon in the hands of F. Prevost, who was afterwards fully committed by Mr. Phillipps, J. P., to stand his trial at Donald and will be sent out in charge of Constable Huegenin, as soon as the trial is open.

The steamer left at 3 o'clock p.m., on the arrival of the eastern express train, for Victoria with a large number of passengers and a good freight.

The Yosemite consignees list yesterday was as follows: C. T. Millard, J. Harling, G. Co., Walworth & Sexsmith, Woollen Mills Company, A. J. Tolmie, Banster & Co., C.P.R. Co., C. Woods, D. Lyal, G. R. Pound Regulations.

Clerk Robson thinks there will likely be a procession of stray animals to the pound this morning. The section of the pound by-law pertaining to tagless dogs will not be enforced until tags are procured by the clerk, which will be in about two weeks.

Y. M. C. A. Anniversary.

The Young Men's Christian Association will hold a public anniversary in the Methodist Church tonight at 8 o'clock. The orchestra, which was organized in connection with the association, will render several selections. The work of the association in the past year will be reported, also the work it will undertake in the present year. The treasurer will make a financial statement showing how the money subscribed for the work last spring has been disbursed. The object of the meeting is to inform the public what the Young Mens' Christian Association is, what the community has a right to expect from the association, and what the association has a right to expect from the community. There will be no collection or appeal for money whatever.

The First.

Mr. H. V. Edmonds is having wires and apparatus placed in his new residence for the introduction of electric light. The Electric Supply Company are doing the work. This will be the first residence in the city to be illuminated by electricity. The first business place will be Woods & Polley's real estate office.

Telephone Company.

Messrs. J. C. Armstrong, president of the Vancouver and New Westminster Telephone Company, Hon. Dingles, and Thomas Mowat of New Westminster, were in the city on Saturday attending a special general meeting of the Telephone Company, held here. Mr. Armstrong reports the Company making good returns and rapidly extending its lines. In the two cities new subscribers are being received at the rate of about twenty a month. They returned by the evening train.—World.

On to the Boundary.

Superintendent Stangroom, of the Cornwall Railroad Company, has received a letter from General Superintendent Abbot, of the Canadian Pacific, saying: "We are pushing work on our Mission bridge vigorously, and I hope you will effect a junction with our railroad branch at the boundary as early as possible." The Cornwall railroad is now completed to the Nooksack River, only five miles to the boundary.

Funeral.

The mortal remains of the late J. M. Whiteside were brought up from Ladner's Landing by the steamer Rainbow Sunday, and were conveyed to the residence of his brother on Montreal Street, from whence they were taken at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and interred in the Masonic cemetary at Sapperton. Many carriages containing relatives and friends of the late pioneer, followed his remains to their last resting place.

Chinese Boarding Houses.

EDITOR TIMES—Sir: Not being a member of the Labor League, it may be untimely for me to suggest, through your valuable journal, to that organization the advisability of a resolution restricting members and others in their power from patronizing Chinese boarding houses and restaurants with which New Westminster is so abundantly supplied. Nomenclaturically this designation is the most significant, since they contain their complement of cooks, scrubants, meats, vegetables, filth and original practices in the culinary art of concoction. It is unnecessary to rehearse the methods resorted to in their hot beds of contagious filth. Not being an adept in the cookery art, it is inconsistent to criticize, but any one unaccustomed to their peculiarities in varieties of original dishes may have their curiosity and a gormandizing appetite satiated by investigating the ingredients used, particularly in desserts, made after the old time bread or rice pudding sewn together with a single pig tail hair. To short-sighted people they are "very nice," though dangerous, in mastication, as they sometimes cause unpleasant sensations.

J. WHITESON.

New Westminster, March 31st, '90.

The steamer Rainbow arrived Sunday afternoon from Victoria with the following passengers: W. H. Steves, H. Tofield, J. Barnes, Mrs. Byron, Mrs. T. E. Ladner, J. Goodfellow, W. J. Whiteside, J. Whiteside. She had about 55 tons of feed and general merchandise for local merchants. She left at 7 o'clock yesterday morning on the return trip.

The Gladys.

The tug Clara Port came down Sunday, having in tow the disabled steamer Gladys. The latter had been securely fastened between large scows by means of large timbers, and was taken down to the ways, just west of the Royal City Mills, where she was lying yesterday. She is listed considerably, and has about four feet of water in her hold. It is the intention of the owners to repair her at once.
