An Introduction

UBC Reports, which you've just picked up, is a weekly publication which will appear every Wednesday throughout the year in more than 30 locations around campus.

Starting from the back, it will tell you about lectures, concerts and events taking place on the campus the next week, in time for you to plan ahead, perhaps to take in a lecture in a field outside your area.

Inside you'll find articles on interesting research going on at this university, or interviews with members of the University community, or maybe even articles on UBC outside the campus. You can also find out here about major developments at the University which could affect your life on campus and in the future. You'll also be informed of some current changes on campus.

So pick us up. We don't take long to read. And we may change your plans. Or even your thinking.

This special issue of UBC Reports may help to pass the inevitable minutes of waiting during registration. And it will fill you in on what happened during the summer while you were gone.

Good to see you (again).

Summer news in brief:

Want to spend a few minutes while you're standing in one of those ubiquitous registration week lineups and catch up on the campus happenings during the summer?

Although the campus may look the same as when you left last spring, some interesting things have taken place, the Museum of Anthropology is open and worth a visit, and another successful Summer Session has come and gone.

The Museum of Anthropology opened to the public on June 2 and has so far attracted and surprised thousands of visitors with its collections of northwest coast Indian art and other collections from around the world. The museum was officially opened by the governor-general of Canada, Jules Leger, before more than 2,000 onlookers. Those who crowded into the building on Northwest Marine Drive after the ceremony were the first members of the public to see all the UBC collections gathered over the years.

Pacific northwest coast Indian artifacts make up about half of the total holdings of the museum, which also houses about 8,000 artifacts from Asian, classical and tribal worlds. And all the collections are on view in this museum in the visible storage galleries — well-lighted and dust-free cases designed for public access.

Before you get caught up in essays and reading this fall, or even as a break from all that, take an hour or so and wander through the new museum. It's open from noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday and from noon to 9 p.m. on Tuesday. It is closed to the public on Monday. Admission is 75 cents for students with cards every day except Tuesday when admission is free.

During the summer UBC was given all the audio-visual and print materials used at the United Nations Habitat conference held in Vancouver in May and June.

The material will be administered by the UBC Centre for Human Settlements, a new centre created during the Habitat conference and which now occupies space on the 2/UBC Reports/Sept. 7, 1976 fourth floor of the Woodward Instructional Resources Centre. The people there have spent their summer cataloguing and indexing the more than 10,000 audio-visual items and the printed materials from Habitat in preparation for the demands which will be placed on them in the fall. The centre hopes to be operating as a lending library for the public by October.

Summer Session was an enjoyable learning time again this year, especially for the more than 600 senior citizens who took advantage of UBC's senior citizen programs. Summer Session is now under the directorship of the Office of Extra-Sessional Studies, an office newly created to co-ordinate the administration of all part-time degree programs, Intersession and Summer Session. Named as head of that office in June was Dr. Norman Watt, the former director of Summer Session. Offices are located in the coach house at Cecil Green Park.

The new head of the Bookstore began his duties in the summer. John Hedgecock brings to UBC 23 years of experience in the book industry and is president of the National Association of College Stores, a North American organization for bookstore managers.

Two new deans and a new acting dean started their terms in the summer as well. Dr. Warren Kitts was named dean of Agricultural Sciences in July after being acting dean for a year. Kenneth Lysyk took up his duties as the new dean of Law in July, leaving his post as deputy attorney-general of Saskatchewan to come to UBC. And Commerce Dean Noel Hall stepped down at the end of June, leaving his duties to Acting Dean Stanley Hamilton while a search for a new dean of that faculty is carried out.

Four new department heads and a new director of TRIUMF also began their terms on July 1. New head of the Department of Biochemistry is Dr. William Polglase. Head of the Department of Pathology is Dr. David Hardwick. Both departments are in the Faculty of Medicine. The new chairman of the Department of Bio-Resource Engineering in the Faculty of Agricultural Sciences is Prof. John Zahradnik, who comes to UBC from the University of Massachusetts. Named as head of Creative Writing is Prof. Douglas Bankson. Taking his place while he is on leave of absence this academic year is Prof. Jacob Zilber. Dr. Jack Sample, a faculty member from the University of Alberta, has been named as the new director of TRIUMF, a nuclear research centre on campus, for the next three years.

CITR, the student-run radio station which operates out of the Student Union Building, was granted permission in August by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to link up to the cablevision system now serving Vancouver homes. This means that news of the campus has the potential of reaching more than 200,000 homes this winter. Any cablevision subscriber in the Vancouver area will soon be able to pick up CITR by having cablevision connected to an FM radio tuned in to 95.9 on the FM dial.

There is no firm date set yet for the switchover.

UBC was given several major grants for research and teaching this summer.

The Law Foundation of B.C. granted $51,750 to the UBC Legal Clinic, a program offered by the Faculty of Law, to expand the clinic to accommodate 20 students each term, up from 12 students each term last year, its first year of operation.

A major grant from the W. K. Kellogg Foundation of $265,965 to UBC will aid in the establishment of a new organization that aims at further professional development for educational administrators in the province. The new organization is the British Columbia Council for Leadership in Education.

A team of UBC economists was granted more than $806,000 over the next five years from the Canada Council for an integrated study designed to throw light on the management of world natural resources. That grant will allow up to 45 graduate students to be involved in the study over the next five years.

And the Department of National Defence has approved a $250,000 grant to UBC to enable the further development of research and teaching in the area of strategic studies. The grant will be paid at the rate of $50,000 a year for five years and will be made to the Institute of International Relations at UBC.

Now that you've gathered up all your course cards, deposited them in the appropriate place, smiled for your library picture and been stamped as enrolled, you may have some questions. If this is your first term at UBC, you'll have a lot of questions. This page, we hope, will provide a few answers to the basic needs you'll have during the year.

Orientation. A program for new students to UBC is held on Thursday, Sept. 9, from 10 a.m. to noon in the Ballroom of the Student Union Building. Following welcoming remarks from the president of UBC, Dr. Douglas Kenny, representatives from each faculty will be available for discussion and questions concerning their faculty. All welcome.

Money. If you're wondering why that loan you applied for hasn't come through yet, you probably applied after the deadline date of July 2. The Awards Office, which processes the Canada Student Loans, says most students who applied for loans before the deadline date have now received their documents. (If you haven't, but applied before the deadline, go to the Awards Office, Room 50, General Services Administration Building, or call them at 228-5111.)

Students can apply for Canada Student Loans until the fourth week of classes.

The Awards Office is now beginning to notify students who have been awarded University scholarships and bursaries, so if you haven't heard about that yet, don't panic.

The Library. Tours of the library system are available from Monday, Sept. 13, to Friday, Sept. 17, at 10:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Those interested in getting a good start on the year should meet in the Main Library entrance hall. Tours of Sedgewick Library, which begin at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., start from the main foyer of that building.

For those who can't spare the time to go on a regular tour, the library this year is offering an eight-minute slide-tape program which explains the library system. It will be shown daily at 11:20 a.m. and 1:20 p.m. in the orientation room of Sedgewick Library, lower floor.

Hours for each branch library in the system differ but winter hours for most begin Sept. 13. Hours for the Main Library are Monday to Thursday, 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 11 p.m.

A special feature of the library is the Wilson Recordings Collection. Students are welcome to use the records in the library itself and can buy a borrowing card for $5 which allows them to take records home.

Transportation. Bus schedules for the three lines which serve the campus are available in the main foyer of the Student Union Building on the Speakeasy table. Buses come to campus along 41st and 49th Avenues, Broadway and West 10th Avenue, and 4th Avenue and Chancellor Boulevard. Revisions to the schedules and service are expected, the most prominent of which will probably be increased service in the mornings on the 41st and 49th Avenue lines. Transit information, 324-3211, has more details.

Parking stickers are available to students through the Traffic and Security Office. During registration week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., a kiosk will be set up in B Lot to issue parking stickers. Cost of B Lot stickers is $6 for the year. Preferred parking for fourth-year students or higher years is $20.

Books. Every year the Bookstore sets up a gigantic stock of textbooks for sale in the Armory as well as in its regular premises. This year the Bookstore itself on Main Mall will stock all third- and fourth-year Arts texts, as well as texts for Medicine, Rehabilitation Medicine, Dentistry, Dental Hygiene and English 100. Law texts will be sold in the Law Building. Everything else will be available in the Armory.

Hours: Sept. 7 - 10, Armory and Bookstore open 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Sept. 13 - 16, Armory and Bookstore open 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Sept. 17, 20 - 24, Armory and Bookstore open 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Housing. An off-campus housing office operates in the north alcove of the Student Union Building. It's open during registration week from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. if you need assistance. The listings are posted in notice boards and offer a fair number of self-contained suites, apartments, and houses for students.

Recreation. This year the Recreation UBC program is free for students, although staff and faculty must pay $10 for a Recreation UBC card which enables them to use the recreation facilities and equipment on campus.

Facilities are open to staff and student use beginning Sept. 13 and instruction begins in early October for those who want it.

For more information and booking, go to the Recreation UBC office in Room 203, War Memorial Gymnasium, or call 228-3996 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Graduate students, staff and faculty interested in forming volleyball teams for intramural competition this fall should call Frank Maurer at 228-4329.

Counselling. The Office of Student Services, Ponderosa Annex F, is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. throughout registration week to provide counselling services to students. No appointment is necessary. Faculty counselling centres for course approval are listed in the Registration Guide sent to each student.
