

Strachan to Oppose Fee Hike Favors Bursaries For Needy

Radsoc Programme Dropped By Station

UBC Radio's programme, "Digest," has been dropped by an interior radio station following last term's general release of a talk by H. L. Briggs.

Mr. Briggs, the ex-General Manager of the B.C. Power Commission, was sponsored by the Special Events Committee.

His talk was taped by UBC Radio and released on "Digest" with extracts from Premier Bennett's speech to Victoria College students the same week.

The station, CKPG in Prince George, stated that "Digest" had carried "more comment by Briggs than by Bennett."

"Digest" Production Manager, Ben Trevino, commented that "the problem was that Bennett had very little constructive to say."

Trevino said that 13 BC interior stations regularly carry "Digest." "CKPG is the only one who ever complained," he said.

In his reply to CKPG, Trevino said he felt UBC Digest "should be more than just the usual pap you hear from University public relations officials" and suggested perhaps the Prince George station would resume carrying the program next year "when someone more concerned with presenting a rosy picture all the time" might head the UBC Radio production staff.

"Digest" is heard locally over Radio CHUB, Nanaimo, Saturdays at 8:15.

UBC Withdraws From Evergreen Conference

Students' Council Monday night voted to withdraw from the Evergreen Conference Students' Association.

President Charles Connaghan stated "the privileges that we enjoyed under ECSA are now covered adequately by the National Association of College Unions, which UBC joined last year."

"By our withdrawal we are not cutting our contact with the U.S., but maintaining it through NACU," Connaghan added.

NACU also provides the AMS with essential information on the operation of Student Union buildings.

WEBSTER TO PROBE MORALITY IN B.C.

"Who cares about political morality in B.C.?"

That's what CKNW radio personality Jack Webster will ask students Friday noon in the auditorium.

"It should be a grrrand meeting," the outspoken commentator said. "U.B.C. students are grrrand hecklers."

Meeting is sponsored by the Ubysssey. Come and munch your lunch.

Students To Write M.L.A.'s For Support

"Is the Social Credit government giving the university the support it needs to do its job today, in our present circumstances?"

This question was proposed by Robert Strachan, provincial leader of the CCF party, to a small group of students Wednesday noon in the auditorium.

Strachan said that he did not know what Premier Bennett had told the students on his last visit, but that he could imagine that it went something like this: "your Social Credit government is doing more for UBC than any other previous provincial government, and in fact, more than the other provincial governments are doing for their universities."

MUST BE RIGHT

Strachan's topic was: "politicians are necessary," "but," he added, "they must be the right politicians."

He said that he believed a proper politician was one who studies the art and science of government and that it was up to the people to see that they get this type of politician to represent them.

"With the threat of Russia on the economic, scientific and educational fronts," he continued, "we will have to do what that country is doing and guarantee to every young man and woman of ability the opportunity to attend university."

Strachan said that he would oppose any effort of the government to raise the universities' fees.

REALISTIC POLICIES

His policy, he said, would be to increase government bursaries so that those who had the ability but not the money could attend university.

He added that it was important that the students write their MLAs to oppose a fee hike.

Regarding unemployment in the province, Strachan said this problem was the result of the unrealistic policies of past governments which created large labor forces to build up industries, without regard to the province's ability to accommodate them.

"When this labor force had completed its job," he continued, "capital went on strike and unemployment was the outcome."

He said: "We of the CCF party believe that the resources of this province should be publicly controlled so that private monopolies such as Wennergren and the B.C. Electric can't misuse them and capital could be regulated within the limits of the population."

SECOND TERM FEES MUST BE PAID NOW

Students who haven't paid their second term fees by January 16 are liable to be excluded from classes.

H. C. Craven, UBC accountant warned Thursday that students must pay their second term fees.

They were due on the first day of lectures, he said.

Shame

The decision of radio station CKPG in Prince George to discontinue UBC Radio's "Digest" programme reflects the attitude held by many British Columbia citizens towards UBC.

CKPG officials dropped the programme after auditioning a tape of last November's Briggs-Bennett controversy here. In a letter to UBC Radio, the tape was criticized as "poor presentation of an issue. You had more concrete talk by Briggs than by Bennett." The letter continued, "if you do not have both concrete pro and con information it is better not to use (the material), otherwise the programme will sound in favour of one side."

This would be all right had the premier countered Mr. Briggs' charges. But he could not see his way clear to visit UBC and reply to the charges, although UBC Radio tendered him an invitation to do so.

So all UBC Radio could do by way of presenting the Premier's side, which was to procure third-hand tapes of a Bennett address to Victoria College students.

But, as both CKPG and UBC Radio agree, the Premier had "little constructive to say" in that address.

Even in the light of these circumstances, however, CKPG rejected the UBC Radio tape. Why?

"Because it contained strong, unanswered criticism of the provincial government."

Voters outside the Lower Mainland do not wish to antagonize the provincial government. It builds them roads and bridges. It promises to wipe out the provincial debt by 1960. In short, it bribes them.

Non-Lower Mainland voters are far from ready to bite the hand that feeds them. So they don't want to hear an anti-Bennett radio programme.

Worse, they don't want to associate themselves with the views or the causes of University administration, faculty and students. They know the University is hostile to the provincial government.

It is this attitude that we must overcome. We must convince the people of British Columbia that what is good for the University is good for the province as a whole and for its citizens. This is the most effective way in which we can convince their elected representatives of this truth.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Council Gambled On YOU

By JOHN HELLIWELL, A.M.S. Treasurer

The Students' Council has initiated a campaign by mail to convince the members of the Legislature that the University must have further financial support. A campaign by mail, although nominally an integral part of the democratic process, is far more difficult and risky to operate than any other type of lobby because it requires direct positive action by every student.

The student body must be prodded into action; but the essential goal (the size of gap between the present provincial grant and the amount required for next year's operations) cannot be used. It is perhaps significant that the Council members, who know, but are unable to reveal, the actual size of the increased need, have undertaken this ploy in spite of the obvious risks attendant to its use. I would like to present some of the considerations we studied before arriving at our conclusion. These same points might also be useful in the preparation of letters to government members, who must after all be convinced that their constituents are making requests on the basis of reasoned decisions rather than blind selfishness.

1) Any increase in tuition fees would emphasize financial qualifications at a time when many students are missing a university education through lack of funds. In Canada, only 7.2% of students of university age go on to study there, while the corresponding figure in the United States is over 30%. In a recent survey, 48% of B.C. high school students not intending to go to university gave financial inability as the reason.

2) All students attending university on a "marginal" basis—forced to obtain money through loans or bursaries in order to continue their studies—would have to increase their borrowing by the amount of any fee increase. The pressure created by a sizeable fee increase on available funds would be untenable. Last year there were approximately 1500 students obtaining funds through loans and bursaries and thus considered to be, among many others, on a "marginal" basis. This year, with the difficult summer job situation, the pressure is much worse and there is no telling what the future may bring.

3) Principal James of McGill has stated that "a young Canadian from a family of modest circumstances has less chance of getting a university education than a youth in any other country with which I am familiar". This regrettable situation would certainly not be alleviated by raising the financial barriers blocking the paths of our present and potential students.

4) It is true that U.B.C. has lower fees than most Canadian universities. (The average Arts fee in ten major institutions was $275.00 in 1957, while it is $246 here.) It is also true that fees have been providing a lessening share of total income in recent years. But we have more students paying their own way than any other university. In British Columbia more than any other province, there is a need for trained leaders and technicians and the supply can only be provided if the barriers are kept as low as possible. In Britain, where it is said that every bright boy now has the chance to go to university, the share of the cost borne by the fees-paying student has dropped steadily. It was 31% in 1919, 25% in 1938, and only 11% in 1953.

5) In many ways a fee increase appears to be justified. The decreasing value of the dollar and rising wage scales mean that any student lucky enough to get a summer job finds it easier to pay his fees than did the students in years past. There are many students who feel an obligation to pay a certain share of the costs of their university training in view of the many personal benefits received, and thus would be willing to accept modest periodic increases in order that they might continue to pay a "reasonable" share of costs. These students (and citizens and government members, for that matter) are totally unmoved by a call to arms for the purpose of avoiding a fee increase. But what they do not realize is that while they are thinking in terms of an increase of at most forty or fifty dollars, the gap in the budget is so large that a "reasonable" increase would provide only a fraction of the necessary funds. There is ample reason for every student to be concerned, if not for his own sake, for the sake of those who are less fortunate, and for the Province as a whole.

6) It must be realized that the government will find it difficult to increase the university budget. In these recessionary times there are many increased demands on finances—for unemployment benefits, for public works, and for social welfare. And all these needs must be provided from a greatly decreased income. Nevertheless it is absolutely essential that the basic investment in human resources be maintained through adequate support of higher education, as it is only in this way that sound long-run provincial development can be achieved.

There is no government member who could fail to be impressed by receiving a large number of articulate letters from his constituents containing reasoned suggestions for government policy. At the very least, the problem would be brought forcefully to his attention. The problem is clear and soluble. One means has been suggested; the rest is up to you.

FOOD STUDIED

Action is again being taken on Food Services organization at UBC.

AMS President Charles Connaghan has struck a committee to study the problem in very specific terms of reference.

"There have been a number of investigations of the 'coffee-tasting' variety, studying only the day-to-day problems; but with UBC's fast growth and the present Food Services problem, a study must be made to make the Services' presence on campus useful," Connaghan said.

Terms of reference are to be:

- 1) to study the various administrative aspects of present food service facilities.
- 2) to study the costs of meals, light lunches, and other food in the light of comparable costs at other university cafeterias.
- 3) to investigate the adequacy of service in terms of physical equipment, cafeteria space, and quality of food.

According to Connaghan, the committee will "talk to various people, hear students' complaints, and try to make a thorough investigation which the University can use."

The committee consists of Chairman George Feaver, two other council members, and four non-council members.
