MATSQUI NEWS

(From Fraser Valley Record)

Matsqui danced long and merrily on Friday evening Feb, 5, when at the home of Mr. H. R. Phillips, 24 couples gathered to enjoy a hospitable evening. The spacious dining and sitting rooms were prettily decorated in red, white and blue by Miss F. Martin, the flags of the allies being conspicuous. Mr. R. Mackintosh and Miss Mabel White, Mr. J. Tennant and Mrs. E. White, jr., opened the dance with the Highland Fling, and then the couples danced to their hearts content until four forty-five in the morning. At midnight refreshments were served, and the intermission was filled with patriotic airs on the gramaphone. The music for the occasion was furnished by Messrs C. and A. Lehman, Mr H. Ryder and Miss Mabel White, who gave several fine selections on the mandolin during the evening.

Mrs. J. W. Clark, of Sardis, was visiting at the old homestead for a few days.

Messrs Shields and Scott, formerly of Lulu Island, have leased part of the Hygenic farm.

The boys of Mt. Lehman have responded nobly to the call for men for the third contingent, eight having volunteered subject to the medical examination.

THE PASSING OF THE LATE MR. MEANS OF ABBOTSFORD

The death took place at Abbotsford on Sunday of Mr. Jackson V. Means one of the oldest settlers in the district, who passed away aged 76, from the results of senile decay. The funeral took place at Musselwhite cemetery on Tuesday in the presence of a large assembly of mourners the Rev. Mr. Campbell officiating at the final ceremony. The deceased gentleman, who leaves here only a widow, was one of the first loggers to enter Skagit. He owned a farm on Yale road, but in former years carried on successfully a meat business in Abbotsford. The land where the B. C. Telephone block is situated belonged to Mr. Means. He had been an invalid for the last two years.

The community will sympathise with the bereaved widow in this a time of sincere sorrow.

The deceased was one of the finest of men and his kindly advice while a resident of our town has been appreciated by many. He was fond of telling young men to be strictly honest and they would always live to be proud of it. He will be missed from among us as one of the pioneers of our town—one to be highly respected.

SUMAS MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

The regular meeting of the council was held in the municipal hall on Saturday, February 6th, 1915, with the Reeve in the chair and Councillors Roberts, Straiton and Lamson present.

The minutes of the previous meeting was adopted as read.

Question raised concerning incomplete election of trustees and consequent bye-election was satisfactorily explained by the clerk.

The following bills passed for payment:

School Salaries $370.00; Printing and advertising, B. C. Gazette $4.50; The Abbotsford Post $17.50; Blue prints $3.00; Itemized balance sheet $5.00; postage and phones 75¢; auritor $25.00; Clerk $30.00; G. Raulstin $10 Mrs. O'Donnell $9.60; Repairing culvert on Riverside road. Abbotsford T. & T. Co., $2.64 G. Hallett $1.50; D. J. McKenzie $3.35;.

Communication from the Department of Indian affairs at Ottawa stated that the Upper Sumas Indian Reserve was not for sale.

Several petitions totalling seventy names of ratepayers were laid before the council, together with a deputation headed by W. L. Blatchford requested a reduction in taxation for 1915. Messrs Blatchford, M. McGillivray, and A. S. Farmer addressed the council on this matter, while Messrs, J. A. Flett and J. R. Craig of Vancouver and F. Fooks spoke for a reduction in assessment; also Mr. Fooks demanded that taxes be cut in half, wages and salaries accordingly.

The Reeve strongly supported contention of the speakers, that a reduction was needed at this time. It would not be possible to cut them in half, but they might be reduced 25 per cent.

W. H. Fadden spoke against the reduction of taxes, and advocated an extended opportunity for ratepayers to work out their taxes maintaining present rate of wages.

A recess was called to allow a freer discussion of the matter, after which Councillor Lamson spoke emphatically against any reduction in taxes, as this would mean the corresponding reduction in wages, which with the present high prices of foodstuffs would work an injustice on the working farmer and he contended that if petitioners had this explained to them many would withdraw their names.

Mr. Blatchford speaking in reply, stated that Councillor Lamson's arguments had modified his views somewhat on the labor question, and admitted that probably that some of his petitioners might have hesitated to sign had such arguments been placed before them Councillors Roberts and Straiton agreed that a reduction in taxation would be reasonable, if acompanied by a reduction in wages.

Further discussion was adjourned to next meeting.

Loan Bylaw borrowing two thousand dollars from the Royal Bank to meet current expenses, passed first, second and third readings.

J. P. Firlotte presented proposed plan of subdivision of S. W. 1-4 section 10. Council approved. Reeve and clerk being authorized to sign same when in order.

Estimates were received from School board showing requirements amounting to, $2150, asking for a rate of taxation to bring in $1600 for 1915

Mr. Chas. Bell reported that the home of Major Pottinger had been broken into and furniture carried away. He asked that he be given assistance from Municipal Constable to trace the thieves. It was scandalous that a man's home should be looted whilst he was away fighting for his country.

Council promised necessary assistance.

Meeting then adjourned.

"THE SPINSTER'S RETURN"

The playlet entitled "The Spinster's Return," given by the W. A. of St. Matthew's church was a success in every way.

The ladies all did their several parts with credit to themselves, and the VanTassel family were certainly very entertaining.

The recitation by Joe Davenport and the song "Tipperary" by little Marguerite McGowan deserve special mention.

The local hits were excellent and much appreciated by the audience.

The W. A. extends hearty thanks to all who assisted in making the entertainment a success.

THE B. C. HORSE REGIMENT

There are now some forty members signed on the roll of the local company of the B. C. Horse. The equipment and accoutrements are expected to arrive in the next few weeks. The recruits are drilled each Wednesday evening by Capt. Reid of Huntingdon. Captain Johnson, in charge of the new company, whose members are gradually attaining proficiency in their foot drills. The mounted drills will follow later.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S GUILD

The Young People's Guild of the Presbyterian Church held a successful concert in the Masonic hall on Wednesday. There was a large attendance and a capital program was rendered. Those contributing included the following artistes: Vocalists, Mrs. Jamieson, Mr. E. Chamberlain; elocutionists, Mr. J. A. McGowan and Miss Tretheway; pianoforte, Mrs. McGowan and Mrs. Barrett, who played a fine duet; accompaniste, Miss Nelson; celloist, Mr. E. E. Rix.

The dancing possibilities obtainable on the new floor of the boarding house of the A. T. & T. Co mill were tried out on Wednesday when an informal dance was held by the employees. The mill is again operating in full swing, all the departments but the planer being actively engaged.

LOOK OUT, LADIES

Two sketches "The Bachelor's Club" and "Too Much of a Good Thing" are being rehearsed, clandestinely by some of the gallant young men of Abbotsford, with a view to their dramatic presentation of the farces early in April, the subjects being a counterblast to "The Spinster's Return" given by the ladies a few days ago.

Our Shibboleth—Neither for nor agin' the Government

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1915

In reading the meeting of the Sumas council published elsewhere in this paper all we believe will come to the conclusion that the council came to a wise decision to not take immediate steps to reduce the taxes, thus the wages of the men who work on the roads, and probably lower the standard of the roads of Sumas municipality. During the past five years the roads of the municipality have all improved to a standard that makes them rank with the roads in an older province.

After a continuous residence in the West of nearly a quarter of a century, the editor of this paper visited Ontario last summer, and of course drove over some of the roads of various counties in the western Ontario peninsula—roads driven over in boyhood and later and saw the condition of the roads in June and July, two of the best months of the year for the roads to be in good shape. Since the visit the editor is proud to say that in his humble opinion, and he thinks he knows a well built piece of road when he sees it, the roads in Sumas municipality do not take second place to those in Western Ontario. After travelling over miles of main roads there were none to compare with the main artery of Sumas—the Yale road; and the side roads are every bit as good as the side roads in the older settled country.

The Post is proud of the roads of the Fraser Valley, including the roads of Sumas Municipality. These are indeed hard times for the raising of taxes for road building, but it will soon be over we all hope, keeping this in mind then let us not fail to do our part in maintaining the present high standard of the roads of our Valley. A reduction in taxes is a sure foreruner of less work being done on the roads, and lower wages, all are human, will probably mean not such a good day's work. As they say let us "See this thing through" and carry on our share of the "Business as Usual"

In his condemnation of Russia as a land of tryranny says the Victoria Colonist. Mr. Place, M. P. P., for Nanaimo, undoubtdly expressed what is in the minds of a great many people, and yet we venture to say that he and other Socialists would find things more to their liking in Russia than in any other part of the world, provided they were content to leave out of their consideration what we may for convenience call the field of higher politics. Perhaps we ought to define what we mean by this. The national form of government in Russia is autocratic. It is an autocracy which determines the foreign policy of the country and the larger question of domesic administration. Autocratic power was vested in the Czar by the nobles at a time when the country was in a state of transition and weakened by internal disorders. It may be of interest to state that until the time of Peter the Great the Crown of the Czar passed from one of its wearers to anther only by pupular vote, as that term was at that time understood in Russia. Even Peer did not claim that the crown passed by right of descent but only that a Czar had authority to name his successor. At the time Western Europe was endeavoring to shake itself clear of feudalism. Russia, in part at least, enjoyed democratic institutions. The republic of Novgorod was of unknown antiquity; the princes of Keiv, Sousdal, Moscow and other jurisdictions, although invariably chosen from the princely family of the Varangians, were elected. The necessity of driving out the Mongols compelled the several princes to consolidate their interests and led to the ascendency of one of them, andby imperceptible degrees his power increased until it was nominally supreme, when by the request of his co-rulers the Prince of Muscovy proclaimed himself Czar. The Russian aristocracy is descended for the most part from the ancient families and there is no doubt that they look upon themselves as far apart from the merchant, artisan and peasant classes, and this is and always has been recognized by the mass of the Russian people since the days of Rurik and his brothers, which was more than a thousand years ago. The system of aristocratic government prevailing in Russia has unquestionably been oppressive in many cases, and terrible wrongs have been perpetrated under it. But thse things do not perceptibly touch the lives of the great majority of Russia's millions.

The rank and file of the people of this great empire live under conditions that can be generally described as communal. In no other part of the world do guilds flourish as in Russia. In no other part is the communal occupancy of land more general. Millions of people there live under conditions which the advocates of the system of single tax regard as ideal, for no man is allowed to occupy more land than he requires to support himself and his family. Of these land owners, the merchant and artisans, only a very few concern themselves in any degree whatever with the political life of the nation. The rest are content to live under conditions, which Socialists, at least, would regard as nearly ideal, and which are perhaps as nearly so as could be looked for in a nation, where education is not general. They are content to cultivate the soil or carry on their business, raise large families and live devoutly and simply. Their attitude to other things is expressed in the saying. "God is in Heaven and the Czar is far away."

The Cossacks are not included in the above observations. The very essence of their existence is freedom. Their conception of what freedom ought to secure for them may not be our conception, but they live their own lives as we live ours. Apparently they are more content with theirs than we are with ours. A Cossack would hardly understand what Mr. Place was driving at when he spoke of Russia as a land of tyranny.

We have mentioned the lack of general education in Russia; but it is not to be understood that this is because of any desire on the part of the Czar to keep the people in ignorance. No rulers in the world have done anything like as much to encourage education as have the Czars during the past three centuries. But we must remember that the Russian renaisence is only two centuries old. It was only in the reign of Peter the Great that the empire emerged from the status of an Orienal nation and set its feet upon the paths of Occidental civilization. We must also remember that for the greater part of this period the mass of the rural population were serfs. It was in 1861 that the Czar abolished serfdom, indemnified the landed proprietors and declared each village community to be the owner of its land. This measure had been in contemplation for some time before it was proclaimed Education is making progress, slow of course, for the habits and ideas of millions cannot be changed in a generation.

In her communal system, in the operations of her guilds, in the wonderful development of her literature in her effort to restore by way of the Duma the powers of the ancient democracy, in the simplicity of her rural life and in her boundless resources, Russia possesses the basi upon which a wonderful superstructure can be reared. We must not let ourselves be misled as to the character of a nation because such monsters of cruelty as Ivan the Terrible, and the Empress Catherine, have ruled the land. We must not judge of Russia by the tyrannies practiced by an aristocracy fearful for its own privileges. We must not be in haste to conclude that the terrors of Siberian exile are so much worse than imprisonment in Western Europe was before John Howard, in 1773, began his great work for prison reform. As citizens of the world, and we all claim to be that, and especially do our Socialist friends claim it, we ought to learn to look upon Russia as she really is, as a country of immeasurable possibilities, which is building her future upon a solid foundation, consisting of a profound faith in religion and, in her social life, the basic principles of democracy.

The Cossacks, whose name has gone abroad as signifying all that is cruel, only ask one question of a man who seeks to join their ranks. It is: "Do you believe in Christ?" If the answer is in the affirmative he is told to pitch his tent or occupy any house that may be vacant. The Cossacks are terrible in battle, but one of their cardinal principles is respect for women and children. The ideas of most of us concerning them have been based upon the reports given out about them by those whom they have overcome in battle. The remainder of the Russian people look to the Czar as their spiritual head, and a e devout to a degree that would be unthinkable in a Canadian community. They seem likely to emerge from this war fitted for a career of progress in which spiritual thoughts will play a prominent part.—Ex.

The movement set on foot on Saturday last by the action of the Mission Council on the letter of Reeve Lougheed of Maple Ridge should be the beginning of great development on the north banks of the Fraser River, resulting in better trasportation facilities, and the greatest impetus in the "Back to the Land" movement in the Fraser Valley yet received by that movement in any part of the province. Now after the land speculation has spent its energy; and as the demand will be great in the coming years for food stuffs now is the time to get and keep the settlers on the land.

A FEW INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT KATSIE INDIANS

Chief Joe Isaacs' Band are a Progressive Bunch Who Appreciate The Value of Education. An Indian Concert at the Hammond Reserve.

Katsie Indians are of the Salish tribe which with the tribe known as the Shuswaps, have long inhabited the Fraser Valley. At Hammond the Katsie band occupy a reservation of over three hundred acres. There are sixteen families. In the fishing season they fish for the Fraser River canneries, in the winter their homes, gardens, cattle and horses claim their earnest attention. Their chief is well known. Chief Joe Isaacs his name, he is an Indian of the oldest and best type. In the words of one at the reservation he is "as wise as a serpent and gentle as a dove" Through his uplifting influences the band is wisely directed along progressive channels. At Katsies, education is an important feature of the daily life. Thanks largely to the good offices of Indian Agent Peter Byrne, of New Westminster, a school for Indians was started in September last when twenty pupils were enrolled The attendance, usually the greatest stumbling block to the education of the Indian children, has been very satisfactory. Considerable progress has been made under the able tuition of Principal J. J. Murphy so encouraging, in fact it is hoped that the Dominion government will soon build a permanent school in place of the temporary one now in use. Such good progress have some of the pupils made it is also probable that in the early future they will be seen as candidates at the local High School entrance examinations.

In an interesting newsy letter to the Review, Principal Murphy informs how the "Epipany" or "Three Kings Day" was celebrated a few weeks ago with a concert. A welcome visitor on the occasion was the Rev. Fr. Cherous, O. M. I. missionary priest to Indians of the Fraser Valley, who is a guide, philosopher and friend to the local Indians. Items rendered at this concert included a masterly duet, guitar and violin, by Messrs F. Johnson and W. August. Then followed a sweet chorus by little girls entitled "Beautiful Angels Are Guiding Me" After Master Vincent August had finished reciting "Lead Kindly Light" the applause was so intense there was a concerted chorus by the large number of canines, which, unaccustomed to such talented music, had assembled in force outside the hall. "Probably the prettiest item on the programme" writes Mr. Murphy, "was a figurative and display march to music by ten their raven locks being encircled with silver coronets. Mr. Murphy, who is gifted with a sly and cunning vein of humor, next tells how "Joboys" August, a toddler of three years, who acted a small part, nearly fell onto the footlights when he was gazing upwards in silent communion with some of the Indian juveniles who, intent on not missing any of the show were perched on the rafters of the roof. The minstrel troupe did fine work, Simon Pierre proving a star artiste, in the laughter producing line. Much of the credit for the enterinment is due to Mr. W. August who organized it to provide a happy evening for the band. Others will likely follow.
