HISTORIES OF LARGE TREES

A black pine 89 years old, 3 feet 4 inches wide. It started in 1811 and enjoyed 70 years of good times. Two years before the end of its life, forest fire burned off the bark, and two rings of sap-wood grew over it and then the bark grew again. The tree died of old age. Some of the stump was seen in the evening incurving bark. The tree grew near Mr. ... house.

ABOUT TOWN.

Mrs. Mc Kinner is down with typhoid fever at the No. 7 mine.

The building over the smelter pump is nearing completion.

The News is late this week and no ads appear, owing to an injured wrist, caused by a fall. The Editor hopes to be in the ring next week.
