Joseph L. Banks Passes Away.

The funeral of the late Joseph Lee Banks took place Monday last from Pillman's undertaking rooms. Service was held at the Presbyterian church by the Rev. A. M. Ross, and also at the cemetery. The pall bearers were, H. Young, R. B. Dixon, T. Hanna, J. Cartmel, M. R. Jamieson and H. Brown.

The late Mr. Banks was a native of Kentucky, born in the 50's. Since early manhood he has been engaged in mining, with the exception of a few years he was Indian agent in East Washington. For the last 12 years he was in Alaska and the Yukon, where he was well known. Australia, New Zealand, Africa, India, Burma and Japan had at various times been his home. His married daughter now resides in Australia.

He made a remarkably strong fight for life, and Saturday morning at three o'clock, had never, since the accident, been apparently so well and his chances for recovery brighter. He fell into a restful sleep from which he never awoke. He died at 5.30.

No one knew just how badly he had been hurt, until the examination held afterwards when it was found that three ribs had received compound fractures, the lung had been perforated in two places and the diaphragm punctured. The accident was so serious there was really no chance for recovery.

Work will be started in the mines at Conrad as soon as I go below, said Col. Conrad to a newspaper man, in Skagway, the other day.

There was no occasion for the mine being shut down. The winter supplies for the mines and the crews are all in camp. All the development work is on good rich ore.

Since the 1st of November a new and rich vein has been developed on the Big Thing mine, going from $50 to $200 a ton.

The mine does not owe a dollar and has a great quantity of rich ore in sight.

A Suggestion.

Our correspondent 'Tempus Fugit' calls attention to the need of greater precautions being taken in our mining work to avoid accidents which so often lead to loss of life and limb. No mining man of any real experience can fail to recognize the dangerous manner in which some of the properties are worked in this district. The most ordinary precautions are often entirely disregarded, and it is a wonder that fatal accidents are not more frequent. We are of the opinion that the government should have a qualified inspector of mines stationed in the district. Where most of the miners are mere novices, and the company managers sometimes but little better, it is very necessary, for the sake of all concerned, that the government should have surveillance over the mines where danger to life is involved. Then again, the office of inspector might include the official duty of verifying titles to mining properties. The inspector would keep up-to-date plans, showing every holding, whether lease, placer or quartz claim; and this alone would tend to obviate the continual necessity for litigation, the black spot on our industry, by which, we are advised most of the gold winnings of the individual miners are lost in the expensive payments of law costs. We do, therefore, ask those in whom is vested authority to give their attention to these urgent matters, and thereby take that which is passing by the forelock.

The Sandon Review says, re the 'Better Terms' controversy: "The Grit press would have registered a kick no matter what resulted. It is one of the planks of their platform. If the premier had not handed the bluff back to the dealers he would have been, in the eyes of the Grits and everybody else, a coward; a dastard, a weakling. As it was, he set out to secure better terms for the province, and he went strong. He played his cards for all they were worth and by this means secured a better offer than the conference was at first prepared to concede."

To the Editor:

Sir.—Considering the serious accidents which have occurred in our mines, through want of proper supervision, or by carelessness on the part of the miners,—is it not time that remedial measures be devised to lessen these recurring accidents? If any such accidents are due to insufficient management, or incautious mining, or inferior fuse, or by any other cause, by which life is unneceessarily jeopardized; then, possibly, some safeguard may be found in investigating the cause and effect of every accident; and giving publicity to the same for the guidance of miners, who, perchance, are risking their lives unknowingly.

With the able but limited means for treating accidental cases in the local hospital, it seems all the more important that a mutual effort should be made by the authorities and the mining community to minimize as far as possible the causes which lead to these deplorable accidents.

Synopsis of Canadian Homestead Regulations.

ANY available Dominion Lands within the Railway Belt in British Columbia, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres more or less.

Entry must be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land is situated.

The homesteader, is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of the homesteader resides upon a farm, in the vicinity of the land entered for, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

Six months' notice in writing should be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands, as a notice of intention to apply for patent.

Coal Lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Hurrah pour Canada!

The actual extent of the wonderful development and growth of Canada, particularly the western portion, during the last few years, can hardly be realized by the every-day busy man unless it is placed before him in a concise and compact form. Here are a few interesting facts from the first number of "The Last West," just to hand. It is a magazine, published in Winnipeg, devoting itself to spreading abroad the beauties, natural advantages and abounding resources of Canada's western provinces. More power to it's arm and the brain behind it.

Canada has the biggest elevator in the world; capacity, 6,400,000 bushels.

Canada has the biggest lift lock in the world, at Peterboro, Ont.

Canada has the biggest bridge span in the world, at Quebec.

Canada has the biggest nickel mine in the world, at Sudbury.

Canada has the biggest zinc smelter in the world, at Frank, Alta.

Canada has the thickest coal seam in the world, 47 ft., Stellarton, N.S.

Canada has the biggest wheat field in the world, 900 miles long and 300 miles wide.

[Canada has the biggest possibilities in the world, all over it.—The Claim.]

The Last West has 100 million acres of grazing land.

Canada has 6,000,000 cattle and 2,000,000 horses.

Twenty thousand ranching brands are registered in the Last West.

Canada has 24 annual round-ups.

Canada exports $10,000,000 worth of cattle every year.

Canada has 1,000,000 sq. miles of unexplored area.

Canada is larger than the U.S. by 250,000 sq. miles.

Canada has enough land to give each inhabitant 400 acres.

One-half of Canada's total trade is with the United States.

Canada's canals are free of tolls, and three times greater a tonnage passes through the Sault canal than through the Suez.

Canada produces annually 300,000,000 bushels of grain. Eighty-seven per cent of Canada's farmers own their own holdings.

Canada exported last year $30,000,000 worth of agricultural products.

Canada exports hundreds of tons of honey.

Canada gives 160 acres of land free to every adult male applicant.

Winnipeg exceeds Chicago and Duluth as a wheat-shipping centre.

Last year 4,000,000 acres were sown in wheat in Canada West.

The Last West has 300 flour mills and over 1,000 elevators with a storage capacity of 50,000,000 bushels.

Mr. 'Bob' Wilson tell us in a letter that those who went out on the last boat had a very enjoyable trip on the Princess Beatrice. A concert was held on board and the Atlin talent showed up strong, Messrs. Lumsden, Fisher, Sullivan, Wilkison, Hawkins, Switzer and Grime taking part.

Her Letter.

My Dear Vera:
I want to tell you something. The best that life can give has come to your little girl. Jack—my Jack now—has told me that he loves me.

It is almost too beautiful to realize that it's true, and I wonder if it's really I, and not another girl who has stumbled into Heaven by mistake and will soon be told, "You belong to earth, not here."

Well, dear, I'm so happy I could take the world in my arms and hug it—all because a certain very good-looking mortal has crowned me with his love.

You will say I'm a silly, romantic girl—but think, dear, what it means to me. To have the man I've loved so long tell me he cares for me! Now life seems so beautiful, the air so sweet and the heavens so blue, and I—why, I'm happy, that's all, so very, very happy, dear. I suppose, though, you are curious to know how it all came about.

It happened as we were drifting along in our little boat, with only the splash of the water to break the silence of two people who understood without words—and a great silvery moon looked down upon us. We had talked of life and love—then he said he was going away as the summer was over—and then there was a silence—and we drifted along and the moon seemed blurred with the tears that blotted out everything as I realised what life would be without him. All the endless interminable days that must come, each burdened with its weight of hopeless love and longing for him.

I stole a glance at him. He was looking up at that great molten ball of silver in the sky, and his thoughts must have been high and beautiful to judge by the soulful expression in his eyes. I turned hastily away, for, as he sat there with that spiritual, distant look, he seemed so far away from poor, commonplace me—and I tried to choke down the tears that came to my eyes in spite of myself. And then he spoke to me—and half unconsciously I looked up and tried to pretend I did not care. But perhaps my love looked up at him through my eyes—because he took me in his arms, and then—ah! then—the gates of Paradise were opened, and one more poor mortal was bidden enter.

Dear, you do not mind my telling you all—and opening my heart's sanctuary to you! I have been used all my life to come to you with all woes and pleasures both small and great as unconsciously and trustingly as a child whispers to herself in the dark to gain added courage and faith.

And now, I have a favor to ask of you. Something in which I will not be denied. I want you to be with me on the day that is to me the consecration of life. You will come, won't you?
Be glad for your little girl. She is so happy—and—to-night before you pray for me, say "God bless Jack."

Yours, oh, so thankfully,
Marguerite.

Sport is not dead in Atlin not by a long shot. The wonderful victory of Sherring at the Marathon races has sent a thrill of pride through every good Canadian. Two local gentlemen have started training for the next Greek race. To this end a course was laid out, between the Leland and the rink, and the first trial of speed took place Saturday night. Copying the Spartan style both gentlemen shed their footwear and although their course was covered with some six inches of snow the time made was very satisfactory. The race is not always to the swift.

Last Saturday night Jessie Moore and Ann. Busch caused the residence of Mr. Goings to be burglarized. A hindquarter of moose was taken. They ransacked the house for liquid refreshment but were disappointed, the owner carrying that with him. In their rage they broke some costly furniture. The matter was reported to the police, who, after a couple of days and nights untiring efforts, and after thrice taking the dimensions of the small dog, at length discovered a clue by following the footprints and sleigh tracks. The culprits were apprehended and brought before the bar. The heavy fines imposed staggered most of those present. The police deserve great credit and have proved vaccination a necessity.
