BUILDINGS ARE GOOD INVESTMENT.

Is the present a good time to build?

The question is answered by Modern Building, a Detroit publication, as follows:

Many a man of means has asked himself: "Is now the right time to build when construction costs are so high?" To seriously consider this question from all standpoints is the object of the following analysis:

As has been frequently pointed out, all prices are only relative. When we speak of building costs as high, we are referring to the pre-war period. The basis of comparison, however, should be present day prices of other commodities. On such a basis, the cost of building today is low, as is clearly evident in the Department of Labor comparison.

Most any commodity today will buy more square feet of building than it would before the war. In other words, building costs have not increased as much as commodity prices. It is clear then, as an investment, building offers better value than almost anything else that can be bought. Other questions, however, suggest themselves. "If I build now at high cost, how will my investment stand in later years if building costs go down?" The answer to this query is that there is an absolute shortage of buildings now and the abnormal demand has created high rentals and large revenue returns. So, even on the basis of high building costs, the revenue for some time to come is sure of being considerably above normal.

Nor should it be necessary to consider the bogey of decreased prices for a number of years. Prices are sure to remain high for many reasons, principally because the value of the dollar has been reduced by the tremendous sums used up in the war. The cost of the war must be met in the coming years and this means a continuation of the cheap dollar until the expense of the war has been fairly well wiped out. Wages will undoubtedly continue high and cannot be reduced without serious complications; and labor enters into practically every commodity.

Once it is realized that the revenue from buildings is extra large and generally amply sufficient to compensate for the high cost of construction—unless present prices should take an abnormal jump—and that there is no apparent possibility of any marked reduction in building costs for a few years at least, the answer clearly seems to be that the present is not only a good time to build, but that it offers one of the best investments of the present times.

MINING

There are now six different sets of leasers at work in the upper stopes of the Whitewater mine. The total number of men employed is twenty-two. All are reported to be making good money on their respective ventures. lower level the ore shoot is about 450 feet in length and its average width is about six feet.

The Bluebird and Rawdon claims on Reco mountain, near Sandon, B. C., have been purchased by Clarence Cunningham and Sidney Norman, according to Mr. Norman. Operations will be started next week under the direction of Mr. Cunningham. The property was acquired from the Montgomery heirs in New Yorks for $35,000 under a bond and lease for three years.

school board at its meeting on Wednesday night. The board decided to submit a bylaw for $60,000 to the electorate on that date, the sum mentioned to be expended in the erection and equipping of a new high school in the Kitsilano district. The school itself is estimated to require at least $50,000, and an additional $10,000 will be required for chemical laboratories and equipment in existing high schools.

In order to be in a position to afford some immediate relief in the matter of high school accommodation the board decided to call for tenders for the erection of a temporary high school in Kitsilano, of either 8 or 16 rooms, and also for the erection of three other temporary one-rom buildings for school purposes.

WATER POWERS OF PACIFIC PROVINCE SUBJECT OF REPORT

The report on the water powers of British Columbia, which is about to be published by the Commission of Conservation, places the total estimated 24-hour horse power of the water powers of that province at about 3,000,000 horse power, in round figures.

This report completes the series of water power reports which the Commission in 1910 undertook to publish. The investigation of the water powers of British Columbia, of which the present report is the result, was commenced in 1911 by the engineers of the Commission, as stated in the report.

CALLS LONDON HOUSES "DREARY BRICK BOXES."

LONDON, Eng.—The English Building Review in its last issue contains a scathing indictment of the prevailing style of architecture on English houses and make an appeal for strictly modern and new world ideas of construction and architecture in the houses to be built under the extensive housing scheme that is now under way.

"Miserable and monotonous rows of little brick boxes with slate lids, only fit to be burned down or otherwise dissipated into thin air, having a dreary and soul-deadening effect upon the people who are forced to reside in them," is the way the Review describes what it claims amounts to about five million of the eight million British homes.

The first year of the London house building campaign calls for the construction of between 5000 and 6000 houses of moderate size, and a strong effort is being made by prominent architects to embrace in their design some of the Canadian and American ideas such as are common on the other side of the Atlantic.
