ergetic Business Men.

The P. Burns and Company, meat dealers, have been in business in Greenwood for the past ten years, and are located on the corner of Greenwood and Copper streets, in the building erected by I. Ostroski, when the town was first laid out. The meat business was originally carried on by Kerr Brothers, who sold out to P. Burns & Co. in 1899. There have been several managers of the P. Burns Co. since they started business. The last manager, C. J. Wilson, was extremely popular, and was moved to Vernon quite recently. King Reece is the local manager now and is an old timer, having come to Greenwood some time before the railroad. P. Burns & Co. have an abattoir just below Anaconda, Greenwood's suburb, in charge of Charlie Tucker, where the meat is dressed. It is a clean, well run establishment, and a credit to our local meat market.

The large store of A. L. White, on Copper street, contains everything from potato pans to pianos. Mr. White came to Greenwood in 1899, before there was any railroad, and built a store which he called the "O. I. C." next to the Pioneer hotel, on Greenwood street, with a small stock of everything conceivable in the housefurnishing line, both new and second-hand. Two years later he moved to Copper street, next to the Arlington hotel, and for eight years Mr. White has slowly but surely increased his business, and his stock. Today he has a stock worth close to $20,000, covering everything for home outfitters. Anyone starting house-keeping will find what is necessary at the store of A. L. White, the furniture and stove man.

The Greenwood City Waterworks company have a store on Copper street, and in spite of their title do not deal in water supply, but are the company operating the electric light plant at Boundary Falls, which supplies the town with light, under the capable management of Charlie Summers. Boundary Falls was originally owned by Robert Wood. He formed a small local company, whose first meeting was held May 17, 1897. They failed to do any work under their charter, however, and a new company, the Greenwood Electric Light Co., was formed two years later, which installed a steam plant, 300 horse power, in town. This plant was operated successfully for some years under the able management of E. G. Warren. Then the company sold out to Wm. Price, of Quebec, the steam plant was abandoned, and with an uptown office the Greenwood Electric Light company supplied the town, buying their current from the Cascade Power Co. until 1907, when, having bought out the old Wood charter (under which they are now operating and which accounts for the strange title), they installed a fine plant below the falls at a cost close to $60,000. The present directors are A. M. Whiteside, F. W. McLaine and E. G. Warren. The service is good, all necessary house wiring repairs being promptly attended to by Charlie Summers.

The Russell-Law-Caulfield Co. has a $30,000 brick block, on Copper street, and a $45,000 stock. They have the principal grocery business in Greenwood, and handle hardware and clothing as well. In the early part of 1897 Mr. Russell came to Greenwood from Brandon. He was interested in the Golden Crown mine, near here, and with J. Caulfield started a hardware business on Government street, close to where the present court house stands, which store was afterwards destroyed by fire. In November of that year Thomas Hardy bought out Mr. Caulfield. In the spring of 1898 the new firm moved to Copper street and carried on business in the Barrett block, afterwards erecting a new building of lumber where the present brick block now stands. Mr. Law started in the grocery business at Anaconda in 1896 but later moved to the Barrett block, next door to the Russell Hardware store. Caulfield & Lamont started their hardware store on Copper street in 1899, in the building adjoining T. M. Gulley & Co. In 1901 these several firms amalgamated, and Duncan McIntosh became the president of the new Russell-Law-Caulfield Co. Mr. McIntosh has since retired from the company. The present manager is Mr. James Russell. His three sons act as his assistants, Ernest looks after the grocery department, Charlie attends to the clothing department, Clifford occupies the office, and Mr. Russell looks after them all.

W. Elson, Merchant tailor, has been in business in Greenwood for the past nine years, and while there have been periods of financial depression in this town, Mr. Elson has always been busy. He is a first-class tailor, and visitors to his store on Copper street will always find a first-class up-to-date stock of suitings to choose from, and Mr. Elson himself, a most obliging gentleman, who is a first-class judge of human nature, will take your measure perfectly.

This article continued next week.

MILLAR-MOYER

When the former Editor of this paper left Greenwood last June he did not tell his friends of any approaching change in his quiet, every day, humdrum, bachelor existence, and yet the Granum Press of Sept. 17th contains the following modest announcement.

"A very quite marriage was solemnized in Calgary, Monday, when the Rev. J. A. Clarke united in marriage Mr. John M. Millar, editor of the Granum press, and Miss Anna Moyer, daughter of the late A. Moyer, of Bruce county, Ontario."

This does not establish a precedent for others bachelor editors.

All who knew Mr. Millar, and he has very many friends in Greenwood, will be glad to hear he has been so fortunate, and wish him all possible happiness. The Times takes this opportunity of congratulating Mr. Millar and wishing him every good fortune and success.

WESTFORK NOTES

Fine ore is reported from the Bounty Fraction.

Mr. Rambo is doing considerable work on a high grade vein on the Rambler and expects to ship soon.

The work on the shaft of the Buster claim is progressing favorably. After encountering a small break good ore has reappeared.

Bob Perry has started work on the Kokomo and uncovered a good looking vein of high grade ore in the old shaft, 30 feet deep. He will be shortly joined by Geo. Barrett.

Robert Wood is stopping a fine shoot of ore in the No. 6 tunnel of the Sally mine. Upper No. 7 tunnel continues to produce good ore and stopping is in progress. Lower No. 7 tunnel is in over 300 feet.

Millinery Opening, Friday and Saturday, 24th and 25th, at Barclay & Co's. Everybody welcome.

THE FORESTRY COMMISSION

Last Saturday the Forestry Commission sat at Grand Forks, with the Hon. F. T. Fulton, chairman, A. S. Goodeve, M. P., and A. C. Flumerfelt and R. E. Gosnell, secretary of the commission. J. A. Harvey, barrister, of Cranbrook, assisted the commissioners.

F. W. McLaine, C. P. R. land agent and Forest Ranger, of Greenwood, was the sole representative, from this town. He stated before the commission that he had no knowledge of locomotives starting fires outside of the company's right of way. Two men were kept constantly on fire patrol between Nelson and Midway on the company's line. He thought that there was an insufficient number of fire wardens and that they should be increased four to one and that the lumbermen should assist the government in handling the bush fires. There was a fire between Grand Forks and Midway which had destroyed over four million feet of standing timber up to the present time. The railway company had four men fighting this fire although it was not touching any of the company's property. Mr. McLaine thought that settlers should be prohibited from setting fires during the dry summer months without the sanction of the fire warden.

All of the witnesses were agreed on one thing, and that was that prospectors were not responsible for the starting of bush fires, but that campers and hunters were responsible for a large number of serious fires.

COAST NEWS

Mr. Tiederman will erect a four-story business block on Pender street, Vancouver.

The Hon. F. Carter Cotton opened the Central Park Agricultural fair last week.

The Canadian-Mexican line of steamers is to make New Westminster a regular port of call.

Cammell, Laird & Co., British warship builders, have secured license to enter into business in B. C.

John E. Hooper, formerly of Greenwood, and latterly of Rossland, is the newest arrival to embark in real estate in Vancouver.

F. C. Wade, K. C., of Vancouver, has been proposed as a possible successor to the Hon. James Dunsmuir, lieutenant governor.

Mr. Moreton Frewen, the distinguished authority on bimetalism, of London, has started suit against the Grand Trunk Pacific Townsite Co. for damages in an unstated amount for non-delivery of 1,000 lots at Prince Rupert.

MINNESOTA MOURNS

Gov. Johnson, three times elected governor of Minnesota, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president in 1908, and looked upon by many throughout the country as the probable Democratic national standard bearer in 1912, died at Rochester, Minn., following an operation last Wednesday.

OUR LOCAL RIFLE CORPS

In 1903, the Greenwood Civilian Rifle association was formed and started with some 50 members, of whom 42 were active participants in rifle practice for the following four years. During the bad times here, and the consequent withdrawal of many of our best shots, and the departure of those citizens who took an active part in the corps, the association declined. Strikes and other forms of local unrest thinned the ranks, but today a new interest has sprung up and Greenwood is putting her best foot forward to revive an interest in the gentle art of rifle marksmanship. The Annual Inspection of Arms and Equipment of Active Militia Units and Rifle associations brought Major Bennett, of Victoria, to Greenwood last Tuesday. He inspected Phoenix and Grand Forks brigades on Monday, and left on Tuesday, after an inspection of Greenwood arms and accoutrements, for New Denver.

An earnest appeal is being made for a revival of interest in this splendid work in the Boundary. Every man should, nowadays, have a knowledge of the modern rifle, and practice makes good shots, who can, in time of trouble, serve their King and country with pride and a sense of usefulness and service.

C. P. R. PRESIDENT

Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R. visited Vancouver on Monday, and will visit the Boundary on his return trip. Sir Thomas will run down to the Seattle fair. The proposed inspection of the Alberni branch has been abandoned. The personnel of the party consists of Wm. Whyte, 2nd vice-president, E. B. Osler, R. B. Angus, A. M. Nanton, J. E. Schwitzer and Grant Hall.

MINING NOTES

The deepening of the Le Roi Two shaft is making good progress. A winze is being sunk from the 16th level.

A large body of ore assaying $30 per ton in gold was broken into last week on the No. 4 ledge at the Lone Pine mine.

The New Republic company has obtained a three-year lease on the Tom Thumb mine, four miles north of Republic.

A. W. Hodges, manager of the Granby smelter, has returned from the Queen Charlotte islands, where he is interested in copper properties.

SMELTERS WANTED

The government of Brazil has determined to develop iron smelting and the iron and steel industry generally. There are vast deposits in existence in the country, and as Brazil has imported in the last three years some $100,000,000 of iron and steel, manufactured or otherwise, the development of the industry will be an item of some little importance to the growth of private capital to exploit and develop the ore deposits and will bring as their share an offer of a subsidy to one or more companies undertaking the establishment of smelter plants.

NEW TIN DEPOSITS

An important tin mining area is opened to Americans by the passing of the Anglo-Siamese treaty. Mining concessions on very attractive terms are to be had by all coming under the treaty. Some two-thirds of the tin of the world comes from the Malay Peninsula, and it is quite probable that the deposits of Siam are equally as rich as the British, Dutch, or East Indian possessions. It will be a case of first come first served.

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The Hon. Thomas Taylor states that the Provincial Government has decided to build a trunk road across B. C., 400 miles, from the coast to Alberta. What the Dewdney trail was to the earlier settlers in southern B. C., this important road, when carried to completion, will be to the many settlements in the same southern part of the province and Mr. Taylor is to be congratulated on a proposal, which when completed, will make him remembered as one of B. C.'s benefactors. This road will mean the linking up of the several wagon roads already built and enhance inter-communication between the many interior towns.

TEN YEARS AGO

(From Boundary Creek Times of Sep. 23, 1899.)

F. W. Hart has purchased Thos. Miller's lots at the corner of Deadwood and Copper streets for $7000.

J. Empey has bonded the Washington, Idaho, Montana, Rambler, Sampler and Columbia claims on Wallace mountain, on behalf of Barbarian Brown, for $100,000.

VICTORIA EXHIBITION

Last Monday His Honor, Lieut. Governor Dunsmuir, formally opened the Forty-ninth Annual exhibition at Victoria under the auspices of the B. C. Agricultural association. The feature of the week was the airship flight made by Prof. Stroebel daily, the first to take place in British Columbia.

BIG LAND DEAL

A 6,000-acre tract of first-class valley land on the North Fork, 19 miles from Grand Forks, changed hands last week. The new owners are a Minnesota syndicate. David Whiteside, of Grand Forks, negotiated the deal. The consideration has not been made public.

WELCOME HOME

Dr. Cook arrived in New York on Monday. A grand reception was given the intrepid explorer and a monster banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria. "It's good to be an American; it seems that I have been gone ten years," he said.

ARRESTED IN NEW YORK

The three young bank clerks who recently absconded from Victoria, having secured about $700 by overdrawing their accounts, were arrested on Monday last in New York.

King Leopold's magnificent collection of 250 modern paintings was sold by auction in Brussels recently. A short time ago the King sold all his old masters. Public sentiment is stirred up at this disposal of what was considered as partially public property.

FIRE!

Last week a fire started close to the C. P. R. tracks in this city and spread up the north side of Jubilee mountain, but owing to the hillside having been frequently visited by similar heat waves not much damage was done. The question of who is responsible for fire-fighting expense is one that needs airing.

The C. P. R. is often responsible for causing fires through their engines, but they deserve great credit for the systematic methods employed by them in extinguishing fires. Their local laud agent, F. W. McLaine, with his band of fire wardens, have opened their purse and spent money freely to undo any damage caused by them, and that not only on C. P. R. lands.

But while the Forestry Commission, a most useful and ornamental government institution, is acquiring information re our provincial timber reserves, advising the planting of new forests yearly, a great deal of valuable government and private timber property is being destroyed by fire, and the government purse strings are tightly drawn.

We acknowledge that the C. P. R. has possibly more money to expend than has the provincial government, but they spend it, and are doing locally much of the work that provincial fire wardens should do for the preservation of our timber.

NORTHERN FIGHTS.

The first round of the Cook-Pearry fight is over. It consisted of long distance wireless vituperation on one side, and gentlemanly consideration on the other. Round two at short range, and through the medium of newspaper vilification, will be more bitter. Reams of paper will be used and abused. Entrance to witness the snarling can be secured by a subscription to most of the large city dailies.

Your sympathy may be for the man, who, on learning that a fellow explorer had reached the goal before him, immediately and without waiting for particulars, wired that his rival was a liar. Or your sympathy may be with the man, who, having reached the goal himself, returned to civilization to announce his success, and on hearing a week later of a rival's likewise successful trip to the north pole, immediately wired his congratulations and good wishes.

It will be an interesting controversy to witness, and will at least add to our knowledge of the north country. For our part, we favor the claims of the man, who acted as a man, rather than the pretensions of a naval officer, who left his manners in the frozen Arctic circle.

A GOOD PRESCRIPTION

At last a good prescription for extreme Suffragetteism has been discovered. Last Friday, Premier Asquith, of Great Britain, addressed a great budget demonstration at Birmingham, and many women were present, whose unruly conduct was marked by the throwing of toy bombs, tiles and brickbats.

If men had been the disturbers, thirty days for disorderly conduct would soon have stopped this form of unmannerly behaviour, but jail has no terrors for the suffragette, so the fire hose was used with evident effect. The females appeared, after one application, like an array of wet hens.

We highly recommend this prescription. It is guaranteed to dampen the ardor of any deranged suffragette and is easily taken. After repeated doses the patient can be turned loose to the populace for a treatment of dry humour and will be cured of any prevailing bad habits.

Women will sooner or later have the right to vote, but rodyism is not hastening that "Woman's Day."

NO CLAIM-JUMPING

There is no fear of Uncle Sam removing the north pole, even if it has been located by an American. It is one of Canada's land marks, planted by Canada a great many years ago, recorded by her in the international record office, and an attempt to displace it for an American stake would be a gross breach of neighborly etiquette. Besides, it is chained down, and both Westminster and Ottawa will see that every link of the chain is forged true.

The south pole is a similar story. Shackleton and Scott, both Britishers, have trudged to within 100 miles of that landmark, and their next visit within a short period will undoubtedly see their efforts rewarded. It is safe to say that neither of them will return to discredit the other's achievements.

AN EXPRESSION

We need an up-town Dominion Express office, and need it badly. To post a letter to any part of the Dominion, or U. S. A., or elsewhere, it is not necessary to walk over to the C. P. R. station and deposit our effusion in the postal car on the passenger train, for the Mother government provides suitable offices to receive the missives on the main street; although it is true in this regard that our local P. O. building is not a credit to the town, but it is a distinct convenience.

But have we a parcel to send to some distant relative, or friend, or a sample of ore to elicit admiration from some would-be investor, we have to express it at the depot, half a mile away.

An up-town office is what we want, and now, to express it correctly.

American homeseekers are flocking into the Canadian northwest. A recent party of 25 Iowa farmers, with $2000 apiece in actual currency have settled in Saskatchewan. Several similar parties are arriving daily. These men make good settlers and have money to purchase large holdings.

Quaker Oats Griddle Cakes
Try them today!

The family that hasn't eaten Quaker Oats griddle cakes has a delightful surprise coming to it. Besides the delicious flavor, there is the pleasure of knowing you can eat all you want, and the more you eat the better for you. The best of all foods for anyone wanting more strength and vigor.

Hundreds of thousands of packages of Quaker Oats are consumed in Germany annually and almost all of it is eaten in the form of Quaker Oats griddle cakes. In the cereal restaurant of the Quaker Oats Company, located in one of the large cities, these griddle cakes are very popular.

Here's the best recipe for making them:

2 cups Quaker Oats (uncooked); 1 1/2 cup flour; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 teaspoonful soda—dissolve in two tablespoonfuls hot water; 1 teaspoonful baking powder (mix in flour); 3/4 cups sour milk or buttermilk; 2 eggs beaten lightly; 1 tablespoonful sugar; 1 or 2 tablespoonfuls melted butter (according to richness of milk).

Process: Quaker Oats over night in milk. In the morning mix and sift flour, soda, sugar and salt—add this to Quaker Oats mixture and quantity of melted butter; add eggs beaten lightly—beat thoroughly and cook as griddle cakes—they make your mouth water for more.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

"If your dealer offers something 'just as good,' it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit; so there's nothing 'just as good' for you. Say so."

The Copper Handbook is concededly the WORLD'S STANDARD REFERENCE BOOK ON COPPER
The Miner needs the book for the facts it gives him regarding geology, Mining, Copper Deposits and Copper Mines.
The Copper Consumer needs the book for every chapter it contains. It tells what and explains how and why.
The Investor in Copper Shares cannot afford to be without it. The Copper Handbook gives statistics and general information on one hand, with thousands of detailed mine descriptions on the other, covering the copper mines of the entire world, and the 40 pages of condensed statistical tables alone are worth more than the price of the book to each and every owner of copper mining shares.
Price: $5.00 in Buckram with gilt top, or $7.50 in full library morocco.
Terms: The most liberal. Send money, but order the book sent you, all carriage charges prepaid, on one week's approval, to be returned if unsatisfactory, or paid for if it suits. Can you afford not to see the book and judge for yourself of its value to you?

Under her breath, clenching her cold hand, "I must hate you! You stole my love and put it under your feet! You have disgraced my present and ruined my future! What if you have forgotten the past—your crime? Does that make you the less guilty or me the less wretched?"

But with a silent voice within her gave the lie to her vehemence. Some element of her character that had been rigid and intact was crumbling down. An old sweet something that a dreadful mill had ground and crushed and annihilated was rising whole and undeffled, superior to any petty distinction, regardless of all that lifted combative in her inheritance, not to be galsaid or denied.

She leaned closer, listening to the incoherent words and broken phrases borne on the turbid channels of fever. But she could not link them together into meaning. Only one name he spoke clearly over and over again—the name Hugh Stires—repeated with the dreary monotony of a child counting a lesson. She noted the mark across his brow. Before her marriage, in her blindness, she had used to wonder what it was like. It was not in the least disfigurement. It gave a touch of the extraordinary. It was so small she did not wonder that in that ecstatic moment of her bride's kiss she had not seen it.

Slowly, half fearfully, she stretched out her hand and laid it on his. As if at the touch the mutterings ceased.

She bent and touched her lips to his forehead. The eyes opened, and a confused, troubled look crept to them. Then they closed again, and the look faded out into a peace that remained.

A thrill ran through her, the sense of moral power of the weak over the strong, of the feminine over the masculine. A rising flush stained her cheeks. With a sudden impulse and with a guilty backward glance she bent and touched her lips to his forehead.

She drew back quickly, her face flooded with color, caught her breath, then, drawing her hood over her head, went swiftly to the door and was lost in the darkness.

When toward midnight the fever ebbed, Sanderson had fallen into a deep sleep of exhaustion, from which he opened his eyes next morning upon the figure of Prendergast sitting, pipe in mouth, in the sunny doorway.

He lifted himself on his elbow. That crafty face had been inexplicably woven with the delirious fantasies of his fever. Where and when had he known it? Then in a great tide welled over him the memory of his last conscious hours—the scene in the saloon, the fight, the music, the sudden appalling discovery of his name and reputation. He remembered the sickening wave of self-disgust, the fierce agony of resentment that had beat in his every vein as he walked up the darkening street. He remembered the thrown quartz. No doubt another missile had struck home or he had been set upon, kicked and pommelled into insensibility. This old man—a miner probably, for there were picks and shovels in the corner—had succored him. He had been ill, there was lassitude in every limb, and shadowy recollections tantalized him. He retained a dim consciousness of a woman's face—the face he had seen on the balcony—leaning near him, bringing into a painful disorder a sense of grateful coolness, of fragrance and of rest.

As he stared again at the seated figure, the grim fact reared like a grisly specter, deriding, thrusting its haggard presence upon him. In this little community, which apparently he had forsaken and to which he had by chance returned, he stood a rogue and a scoundrel, a thing to point the finger at and to avoid.

The question that had burned his brain when he was flamed up again. The town despised him. What had been his career? How had he become a pariah? And by what miracle had he been so altered as to look upon himself with loathing?

He lifted himself upright, dropping his feet to the floor. At the movement the man on the doorstep rose quickly and came forward. "You're better, Hugh," he said. "Take it easy though. Don't get up just yet—I'm going to cook you some breakfast." He turned to the hearth, kicked the smoldering log ends together and set a saucepan on them. "You'll be stronger when you've got something between your ribs," he added.

"How long have I been lying here?" asked Harry.

"Only since last night. You've had a fever."

"Where is my dog?" "Dog?" said the other. "I never knew you had one."

Harry's lips set bitterly. It had fared more hardly, then, than he. It had been a ready object for the crowd to wreak their hatred upon, because it belonged to him—because it was Hugh Stires' dog.

"Is this your cabin, my friend?" The figure bending over the hearth straightened itself with a jerk, and the blinking yellow eyes looked hard at him. Prendergast came close to the bunk.

"That's the game you played in the town," he said, with a surliness. "It's all right for those that take it in, but you needn't try to bamboozle me, pretending you don't know your own claim and cabin! I'm no such fool!"

A dull flush came to Harry's brow. Here was a page from that iniquitous past that faced him. His own cabin! And his own claim! Well, why not? "You are mistaken," he said calmly. "I am not pretending. I cannot remember you."

Prendergast laughed in an ugly, derisive way. "I suppose you've forgotten the half year we've lived here together and the gold dust we've gathered in now and again—slipped it all, have you?"

Harry stood up. The motion brought a temporary dizziness, but it passed. He walked to the door and gazed out on the pleasant green of the hillside. On a tree near by was nailed a rough, weathered board on which was scrawled, "The Little Paymaster Claim." He saw the grass grown gravel trenches, evidence of abandoned work. He had been a miner. That in itself was honest toil.

"The claim is good, then," he said over his shoulder. "We found the pay!" Prendergast contemplated him a moment in grim silence, with a scowl. "You're either really fuddled, Hugh," he said then, "or else you're a star play actor and up to something deep. Well, have it your own way—it's all the same to me. But you can't pull the wool over my eyes long!"

There were mockery and threat in his tone; but, more than both, the evil intimacy in his words gave Harry a qualm of disgust. This man had been his associate. That one hour in the town had shown him what his own life there had been.

What should he do? Forsake forever the neighborhood where he had made his blistering mark? Fling all aside and start again somewhere and leave behind this disgraceful present, with that face that had looked into his from above the dusty street?

If fate intended that, why had it turned him back? If such was the will he had made, he would lie in it. He would drink the gall and vinegar without whimpering. Whatever lay behind he would live it down. This man at least had befriended him.

He turned into the room. "Perhaps I shall remember after awhile." He took the saucepan from Prendergast's hand. "I'll cook the breakfast," he said. Prendergast filled his pipe and watched him. "I guess there are bats in your belfry, sure enough, Hugh," he said at length. "You never offered to do your stint before."

Mrs. Halloran shook her head. "I never knew anything myself," she said judiciously. "I reckon the town allus counted him just a general low down. The rest is only suspicion an' give the dog a bad name."

There had been comfort for Jessica in this interview. Mrs. Halloran's story had materially increased the poignant force of her pity. What had seemed to her a vulgar brawl had been in reality a courageous and unselfish championship of a defenseless outcast. Thinking of this, the self-blame and contrition which she had felt when she listened to the violin assailed her anew, till she seemed a very part of the guilt, an equal sinner by omission.

Yet she rode homeward that day with almost a light heart.

As Harry stood in the cabin doorway looking after Prendergast toward the town, glancing far below in the morning sunlight, he thought bitterly of his reception there.

"They all knew me," he thought. "Every one knew me—on the street, in the hotel. They know me for what I have been to them. Yet to me it is all a blank. What shameful deeds have I done?" He shrank from memory now. "What was I doing so far away, where was I going, on the night when I was picked up beside the railroad track? I may be a drunkard," he said to himself. "No, in the past month I have drunk hard, but not for the taste of the liquor. I may be a gambler. I may be a cheat, a thief. Yet how is it possible for bad deeds to be blotted out and leave no trace? Actions breed habit if they do not spring from it, and habit automatically repeated becomes character. I feel no inherent propensity to rob or defraud. Shall I? Will these things come back to me if my memory does?"

In the battle that he fought now he turned, even in his weakness, to manual labor, striving to dull his thought with mechanical movement. He cleaned and put to rights both rooms and sorted their litter of odds and ends.

But at times the inclination to escape became well nigh insupportable. When the conflict was fiercest, he would think of a girl's face once seen, and the thought would restrain him. Who was she? Why had her look pierced through him? In that hateful career that seemed so curiously alien could she have had a part?

He did not know that she of whom he wondered in the bitterness of those hours had been very near him; that on her way up the mountain she had stolen down to the Knob to look through the parted bushes to the cabin with the blue spiral rising from its chimney.

Though the lonely task to which he turned failed to allay his struggle by the nightfall, Harry had put the warring elements under. When Prendergast returned at supper time, the candle was lighted in its wall box, the dimmed ten kettles was singing over a crackling fire and Harry was perspiring over the scouring of the last utensil.

Prendergast looked the orderly interior over on the threshold with a contemptuous amusement. "Almost thought I was in church," he said. He took off his coat and lazily watched the other cook the frugal evening meal.

"Excuse my not volunteering," he observed. "You do so nicely I'm almost afraid you'll have another attack of that forgettery of yours and go back to the old life." Presently he looked at the bunk, clean and spriggy with fresh out spruce shoots. He went into it, knelt down and thrust an arm into the empty space beneath it. He got up hastily.

"What have you done with that?" he demanded, with an angry snarl. "With what?" Harry turned his head as he set two tin plates on the bare table.

"With what was under here." "There was nothing there but an old horse skin," said Harry. "It is hanging on the side of the cabin."

With an oath Prendergast flung open the door and went outside. He reentered quickly with the white hide in his arms, wrapped it in a blanket and thrust it back under the bunk.

"Has any one been here today since you put it out there?" he asked quickly. "No," said Harry, surprised. "Why?" Prendergast chuckled. The chuckle grew to a guffaw, and he sat down, slipping his thigh Presently he went to the wall, took the chainskin bag from its hiding place and poured some of its yellow contents into his palm.

"That's why do you remember that, eh?" Harry looked at it. "Gold dust," he said. "I seem to recall that I am going to begin work in the trench tomorrow. There should be more where that came from."

Prendergast poured the gold back into the bag with a cunning look. The other had asked for no share of it. At that moment he decided to say nothing of the evening before, of the girl or the horseback journey, lest Hugh, cudgeling his brains, might remember he had been offered a hair.

"There's plenty more where that came from, all right," he said, "and I'll teach you again how to get it one of these days."

Prendergast said little during the meal. When the table was cleared he lit his pipe and took from a shelf a board covered with penciled figures and scrutinized it.

"Hope you remember how to play old sledge?" he said. Harry did not move. As they ate he had been wondering how long he could abide that sinister presence. As

MINES AND MINING

Cobalt's ore shipments last week totalled 438 tons.

Active work is going on at the collieries at Princeton.

The Mollie Hughes at Silverton is shipping to the Granby.

The Hedley Mining Co. is the name of the new operators of the Nickel Plate mine.

Russians have located a rich placer field in Mongolia, about 60 miles from Kiskita.

W. Fleet Robertson, provincial mineralogist is visiting the mines in the Sheep creek district.

The Stewart Island Development company is doing a lot of work on Portland Canal and getting good results.

Lady Sibyl Grey, daughter of Governor General Grey, when at Dawson, herself located a placer claim which she will work.

The blacksmith shop at the Bonanza mine, near Fish lake, was burned down last week and will impede the work for a few days.

The Mollie Gibson group of claims at Paulson, B. C., in the Burnt Basin district, has been bonded to a St. Paul and Spokane syndicate.

Mining is brisk at Portland Canal. The Portland Canal Mining company has blocked out 50,000 tons of ore worth from $15 to $20 a ton.

A payment of $10,000 was made this week on the Golden Fawn claim, at Salmo by a Vancouver syndicate to the fortunate owners.

Jack McBain, an old timer visiting Greenwood, and now a resident of Superior Junction, Ont., has located a fine native copper showing on the line of Ontario's new railroad.

F. H. Keffer has purchased the West Beaver mine in the Silver mountain district, near Port Arthur, Ont., and will proceed with the active development of the property. The shaft is down 50 feet and good ore has been encountered.

The First Chance mineral claim, being operated by Leon Lantier, of Greenwood, situated near the Porter ranch below Anaconda, is about 2 1/4 miles from Greenwood. The ore is rich in mineral, copper predominating. A 40-foot shaft has been sunk and a drift 5x7 feet run at that depth. Jim Hickey and Jim McGillivray have been working there all summer.

Next week the Granby company intends to put a number of more drills to work in the mine in preparation for the increased shipments of ore which will start with the completion of the enlargement of the furnaces at the smelter. There will be employment for 30 more experienced miners on the hill. It is expected that shipments will commence next month from the new Monarch ore area.

The month of February, 1866, was, in one respect, the most remarkable in the world's history. It had no full moon. January had two, as had March, but February none. Such a thing had not occurred since the world's creation and will not occur again for two and a half million years. We won't see it, that's sure.

ANCIENT BANK NOTES

The oldest bank notes are the "flying or convenient money," first issued in China, 2,697 B. C.

They were in all essentials similar to our greenbacks, bearing the name of the bank, date of issue, note number, signature of the issuing official, value in words and figures, and a pictorial representation, as well as notice of penalties for counterfeiting.

Above all was a laconic exhortation: "Produce all you can; spend with economy." The note was printed in blue ink on paper made from the fibre of the mulberry tree.

One issued in 1399 B. C. is still carefully preserved in the Asiatic museum at St. Petersburg.

Lord Northcliffe, proprietor of the London Times, Daily Mail, and many other British newspapers announces that he will secure the paper for all his publications in Newfoundland.

Great Britain owns 45 per cent of the world's shipping, with the United States second. A splendid testimony of Anglo-Saxon commercial strength.

Anemic women and children who frequently feel chilly, are pale and exhausted, will derive great benefit from the use of Ferrovin, the invigorating tonic, which consists of Iron in a form they can assimilate, fresh lean beef and pure Sherry Wine. Nothing could be better than this combination of strength giving agents in such cases $1.00 per bottle.

FALL SKIN DISEASES

An Article for Mothers

When the children "breaks out" with eruption and skin diseases, so common in the fall, don't run to useless and nauseating medicines. Zam-Buk is what is needed. It is a skin food as well as a healing balm.

Mrs. Chas. Levere, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says:—"My baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were fearful, and the little ones plight was so fearful, that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off."

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain, until we had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good."

"As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were at last working in the right direction. We preserved with the treatment until we used thirteen boxes, and at the end of that time I am glad to say Zam-Buk effected a cure."

Mrs. Holmes, of 30, Guise Street, Hamilton, is quite as eloquent in her praises. She says:—"Zam-Buk cured my boy of boils and eruptions when he was so bad that he had been unable to mix with other children. Prior to the boils breaking out he had had a bad eruption, but Zam-Buk cleared this away too, and made his skin clear and smooth. It is a wonderful preparation and mothers throughout the land should always keep it handy."

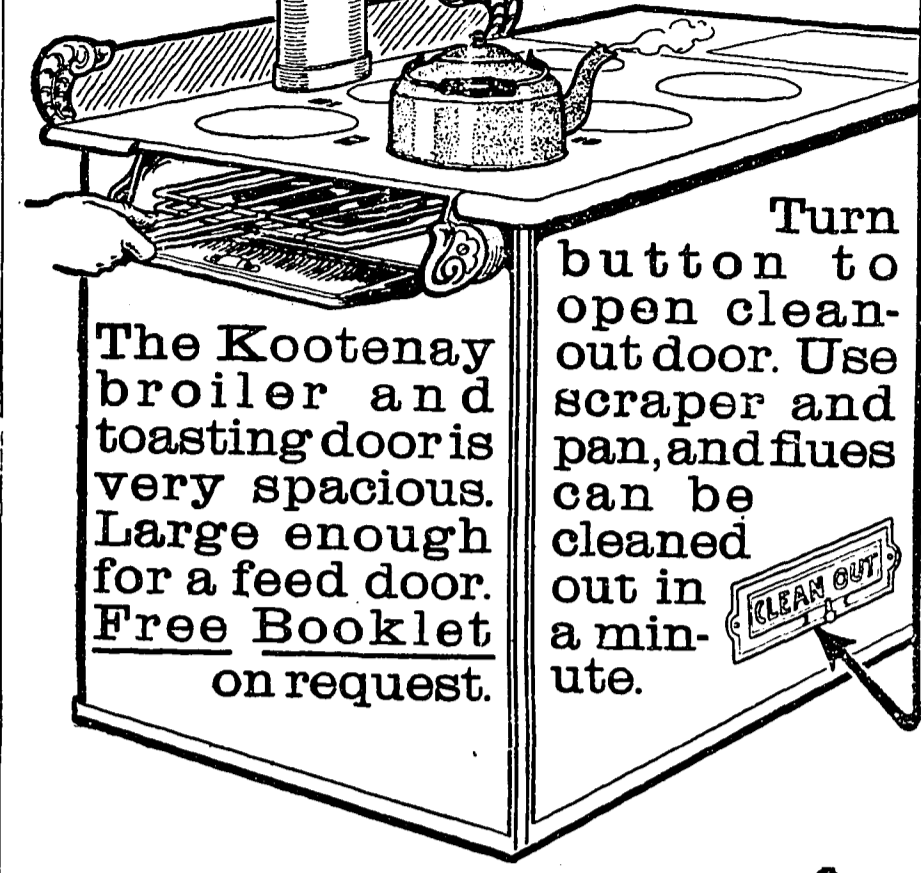

For eczema, eruptions, rashes, teething, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood-poisoning, etc. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

UNDER And by virtue of a writ of Fieri Facias issued out of the Supreme Court of B. C., and a Warrant of Execution issued out of the County Court of Yale, holden at Greenwood, both dated the 11th September, 1909, at the suits of George E. Greev and R. G. Sidley, respectively, requiring the levy by the sale of the goods and chattels of the defendant, The Lemon Gold Mining Company, of British Columbia, the sums of $7,140.85, with interest at 6 per cent, and $105.00 and costs, respectively, there will be sold by public auction, at the Court House at Greenwood, on Monday, the 4th day of October, 1909, at 5 o'clock p. m., a five-stamp mill, saw mill, hoist, boilers, engines, crusher, steam fittings, tools, etc., more particularly described in an inventory, a copy of which can be had on application to the undersigned.
The said goods and chattels are situated near Camp McKinnay, B. C., about seven miles from Bridesville, on the V. W. & E. Railway, where they can be inspected. The above are all in good condition, having been only worked about three weeks.
F. S. BIRNIE, Deputy Sheriff.
Greenwood, B. C., 23rd September, 1909.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS
IN THE MATTER of the estate of Ola Johnson, late of Midway, in the County of Yale, deceased.
NOTICE is hereby given pursuant to the Revised Statutes of British Columbia, Chapter 187, that all creditors and others having claims against the estate of the said Ola Johnson, who died on or about the 10th day of December, 1906, are required on or before the 22nd day of October, 1909, to present and prove their claims, by depositing the same with the undersigned, Solicitor for Andrew Sater, the executor of the last will and testament of the said deceased, their Christian names and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full description of their claims and the nature of the securities, if any, held by them.
And further, take notice, that after such last mentioned date, the executor will proceed to distribute the assets of the deceased among the parties entitled thereto, having regard to the claims only of which he shall then have notice, and that the said executor will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, to any creditor or persons of whose claims notice shall not have been received at the time of such distribution.
Dated at Greenwood, B. C., this 20th day of September, 1909.
J. P. McLEOD, Solicitor for the Executor.
