

Lest We Forget

by George Cooper

Just what is remembered on Remembrance Days in other countries and here in Canada?

Holland remembers its liberation by Canadian and British soldiers from a fascist overlord. Their Commemoration Day on May 4 is a solemn occasion of remembered gratitude.

Normandy's school children on June 6 lay flowers at the white crosses that mark the graves of Canadian soldiers in the cemetery at Beny-sur-mer. And in the village where a bronze marker commemorates some Canadian soldiers killed in action, these same children sing O Canada en Francais of course, and all three verses. They hear of their country's liberation which occurred back in their grandparents' youth.

Here in Canada, at this time, we can reflect upon "What were they liberated from?" It is essential for our youth to know so that it can be prevented from arising again.

Fifty years ago Canadians had to begin to face a responsibility; namely, to stop force with force. To stop a regime intent upon suppressing nearby peoples after suppressing its own. A regime with a doctrine of racial superiority that led to the slaughter of six million unwanted persons and the enslavement of millions more. A regime with the doctrine of unquestioning obedience to the leader.

As you might guess much of this was sensed rather than clearly expressed by those of us then in our youth. We well knew war makes nothing right. But that war did clear the way, in the time of peace that has followed, to get on with making things right.

There is still so much to be done, that is certain, and November 11 can well be called "Take Heed Day".

Take heed that even in North America the germs of that disease that led to WW II merely lie dormant. Every cause of that war needs continual re-examining no matter how repellent any one of them may be.

And in that regard let us salute Elphinstone history teacher Marta MacKown for her condemning a newly prescribed text that barely mentions the death camps. Such appalling circumstances of WW II cannot be left untold or even dismissed in school courses nor in our Remembrance Day reflections throughout the community.

Along with the somber thoughts there are always the recollections each of us veterans has of someone he knows who did a near-heroic deed all in the way of duty.

One of these was Tom J. who shared his sandbox with me in our pre-school days, and for more than 70 years has been a close friend.

Tom piloted a Halifax bomber on a mission to Stettin, Berlin's seaport at the mouth of the Oder, in early 1943. A long flight from home airport in England.

A peaceful Hallowe'en

by Ellen Frith

As far as Sergeant Ed Hill of the Gibsons RCMP is concerned, this year's Hallowe'en in Gibsons was the quietest he has ever seen in any community during almost 22 years as a police officer. Considering that last year's trick or treating in Lower Gibsons was described by one observer as, "a real mob-scene", progress has obviously been made.

"We should be really proud of the community," Hill said, adding that the high school (Elphinstone Secondary) was "the best behaved I've ever seen".

As for the reasons everything went so well, "A lot of work went into the preventative side of it," Hill told the Coast News, and, he added, the students, themselves, patrolled the school buildings to prevent any vandalism.

It was the same situation in Sechelt where there was "zero-damage to Chatelech Secondary School and at the Pender Harbour high school, although in the latter case, "We don't have vandalism here at our school, at least not as long as I've been here," Principal Norm Gleadow said, adding, with a certain amount of pride, "and we didn't even need a patrol."

In Gibsons, not only did student volunteers patrol their school building but Bill Elson and Tanya Clark, both in Grade 12, went along with RCMP Constable Pat Murphy in the lower town area to help defuse any potential trouble spots involving students there.

Elphinstone Vice-Principal Lawrence Stoochnoff told the Coast News everybody was "willing to do their share." Prior to Hallowe'en, Stoochnoff had approached all the merchants in town asking them to not sell eggs to students who obviously wanted them for "tricking". What co-operation he asked for, Stoochnoff said, he got.

Both Elson and Clark were surprised and happy at the students' responses to their patrolling with Constable Murphy. Elson, who "wants to be a cop", said there were only a few very minor situations involving

We are facing energy choices

by Dave Fraser

Trade-offs and hard choices. That's what British Columbians will face in the future when it comes to balancing energy demands and protection of the environment, said BC Hydro Chairman Larry Bell, who spoke to 25 guests at a Sechelt luncheon, October 30.

It was the 41st talk Bell has given in the past year aimed at updating British Columbians on Hydro's various energy options, including resurrecting some megaprojects the company mothballed in the 1980s during a time of electricity surplus.

Bell said electricity paralleled other energy forms until the early 1980s when BC became more reliant on electricity.

Uncertainty, risk, diversity and flexibility are words often used in Hydro's planning process. External factors - including inflation, economic growth and the price of fossil fuels - often cause Hydro to constantly shift its projections.

He said BC still gets a great deal on electricity rates in relation to the rest of Canada and the United States. For instance, a Los Angeles household pays $165 a month for electricity that would cost $50 a month here.

But British Columbians also use a lot more hydro compared to the rest of the world. India and China, for instance, boast half the world's population but use only one per cent of the hydro consumed in BC per capita.

BC's consumption is twice that of the United Kingdom, West Germany and Japan. It is higher than California, even taking into account the state's huge drain from air conditioners.

He asked, what is the appropriate growth rate for our hydro resources? For the third consecutive year power demands in 1988 exceeded projections for the BC Hydro system, signalling the end of an energy surplus that existed through the 1980s.

Hydro demand is expected to double in the next two decades. Most of the 2.8 per cent annual increase in electric energy requirements will be on the Lower Mainland. How Hydro will deliver this power, economically and safely, will pose a huge challenge, Bell said.

Hydro's 10-year plan calls for the continuance of Power Smart programs, designed to reduce future demand growth by encouraging more efficient use of energy. The company's current goal is to achieve annual energy savings of approximately four times the amount of power now consumed by the city of Victoria.

Hydro's critics say conservation could result in 20 per cent savings while Bell said five per cent is a more realistic figure.

To reduce the cost of future electric service, Hydro plans to make its existing facilities more efficient; to coordinate with Alberta, Washington State and Alcan Aluminum power grids; and to promote independent power production, such as co-generation.

Most co-generation is presently in the pulp industry, where steam is harnessed to drive electrical turbines.

Howe Sound Pulp and Paper at Port Mellon is expected to generate 112.5 megawatts of electricity when mill upgrading is complete in 1992. Power will be produced from the burning of black liquor (a by-product of the pulping process) and wood waste.

The renovations were aided by a $108 million interest free loan from Hydro.

Bell said new regulations and pricing could be brought in to counter perceptions that the government rewards energy wasters. But how do you encourage industry to use alternative energy when Hydro is cheaper?

To save the environment, Bell said, Hydro is willing to fund co-generation at BC sawmills and pulp mills even if it costs more initially than building hydroelectric dams.

No lawn bowling for Hackett Park

In light of overwhelming opposition from the people of Sechelt there will be no lawn bowling allowed at Hackett Park.

That was the unanimous decision Wednesday by Sechelt District Council, which agreed to look at other options for lawn bowling in the area.

Mayor Tom Meredith said another petition presented by Georgina Sager showed considerable opposition to the proposal, although 10 per cent of the 299 signatures were from people outside the district and there "no doubt" was some duplication of names.

At a previous council meeting Sager presented an 1100-name list of people opposing the lawn bowling plan.

Alderman Michael Shanks said at no time had council made a motion to put lawn bowling in the park; there had only been a recommendation to consider such a facility.

Developer's hardship

In spite of a hardship argument from a property developer, the District of Sechelt will permit a maximum residential density of one unit per 120 square metres on Lot 7 on Teredo Street.

Kevin Ryan, speaking on behalf of the developer Janak Trivedi and Tricon Development Corporation, appealed to council at its November 1 meeting to have a dialogue with the developer before enacting Zoning Amendment By-Law No. 25-11. Nonetheless, council passed the motion to give the by-law first reading and take it to a public hearing.

Ryan said the by-law would, in effect, devalue the property, located next to Trail Bay Centre Mall, by 25 per cent. He said compared to other municipalities of similar size the by-law was "particularly hard and awkward." He said it "puts out a message that development isn't encouraged in Sechelt."

But Alderman Bob Graham, chairman of the district's planning committee, said the density is more than adequate considering the area is zoned for commercial use and is close to the waterfront and backs onto other residential housing. He said it is in line with Gibsons zoning by-law which permits a density of one unit per 110 square metres.

The developer's original proposal was to build one unit for every 88 square metres. In April the district had zoned the area for a maximum of 150 square metres per apartment unit. Recent amendments, will permit a total of 56 apartment units to be built on the site.

Pleasing no one

Ottawa's new abortion bill pleases neither opposing side in the issue of unwanted pregnancies but it will probably find favour with the majority of Canadians who are sick to death of the subject and willing to go along with anything just to get it over with. Unfortunately, this new abortion law is likely to do just the opposite.

It is open to challenges from all sides and therefore assures Canadians of years and years of media-reported cases of litigation and court battles.

The challenge of whether fetuses have constitutional rights has been left unresolved and the bill now provides Winnipeg anti-abortionist Joseph Borowski a case with which to base his contention of fetal rights.

Doctors will be particularly vulnerable to litigation if they are accused of rubber stamping abortions and the bill fails to prevent husbands or boyfriends from pressing charges against a woman and her doctor for performing an abortion.

An abortion is, the bill states, a criminal offense subject to a two-year maximum prison sentence.

Summed up best by a Toronto professor, the bill is anti-choice but not pro-life.

Issues begged

With all due respect to Arts Council President Therese Egan, whose letter appears on page three, we feel she begs the issues.

First, if the argument is that Hunter Gallery is less needed because there are private art galleries in the area, doesn't this apply equally to the Arts Centre?

And again, a body entirely dependent on grants and unable to keep to its budget would be well advised to discourage one of its directors without discernible financial background from going around making wild assertions about the financial responsibility of other and better qualified members of Coast society.

If the Arts Council is content to allow itself to be perceived as a narrow and insensitive bureaucratic elite it must not be surprised to find a diminishing of its traditional support.

Towards energy efficiency

by David Fraser

Ever wonder why modern office buildings are lit up like Christmas trees 24 hours a day?

In downtown Vancouver there is an office tower in the Bentall Centre. When workers are finished for the day they don't flick off the lights. It's not that they're forgetful or lazy, it's just there's only one light switch for every three floors.

Number-crunching developers figured it was cheaper to leave the lights on forever rather than wire the building for separate light switches.

Canadians, and especially British Columbians, are the biggest consumers of electricity in the world and the reason is our cheap hydro rates and ingrained attitudes.

Hydro Chairman Larry Bell, speaking at a Sunshine Coast luncheon last week, says he would like to think that our wasteful attitudes will change fast enough to avoid going ahead with the expensive megaprojects. But he says only eight to 12 per cent of our population has a conservation ethic.

Although Hydro is making great strides in more efficient utilization of available resources the company recommends, among other projects, bringing the controversial Peace River Site C project on line by 1999.

Hydro says it is forced to resurrect these projects, which it shelved during the surplus days of the 1980's, to meet future economic growth.

And this is sad, for few power users on the populated Lower Mainland realize the implications of such megaprojects on the hinterland's landscape, and on the economic well-being of our children.

Dams are very, very expensive and once built their damage is irreversible. The Site C project will lead to the flooding of 8000 hectares. Bell said he recently visited the area and was struck by its splendid autumn beauty.

Also in jeopardy is prime bottom land to be gobbled up by transmission lines delivering power to users in the Lower Mainland, about 100 square miles, Bell estimates. And then there's the herbicides necessary to control vegetation along the right of way.

Of course, we don't think of all these things when we use more electricity than we ought to - when we put off insulating or buying that new energy-efficient appliance.

It's easy to blame a regulated monopoly-like Hydro when we get a rate-increase, never mind that electricity rates have lagged behind the cost of living for many years.

But much of the finger-pointing comes for urban environmentalists who, while criticizing Hydro, indulge in a hedonistic lifestyle relying heavily on cheap hydro rates.

Bell, a likable and articulate man who seems to care about the environment, describes the flak Hydro is getting for recently building a transmission line past the Whistler Ski Resort.

The hedonistic yuppies don't like it because they have to gaze on unsightly power lines after a long day riding the (electric-powered) chair lift up their favourite slope and soaking in hot tubs.

Ironically, Hydro estimates the amount of electricity consumed by hot tubs in the past ten years could have served 1000 BC households.

Bell says government and business leaders can help encourage wiser use of electricity, but it's often with some resistance.

When BC Hydro started offering $50 rebates on energy-efficient refrigerators they encountered a problem. The only such fridges available were luxury models. Retailers, however, couldn't turn away prospective customers wielding rebate coupons. So they appealed to manufacturers to make more affordable energy-efficient models.

The result was an angry letter directed at Bell by the head of the refrigerator manufacturer's association, accusing Hydro of threatening Canadian jobs. But Bell says the message finally sunk in. Now, there are four energy-efficient models available.

Surprisingly, it cost very little for manufacturers to make appliances energy-efficient - an additional $12 per fridge and $5 per hot water tank.

In a nutshell

Remembering the wars

by S. Nutter

A friendly producer (as in kindly old coach) called me in at the Film Board one morning and said like Stu, we'll get you something better next time but they want a film about the war graves. I mumbled something about cine meaning movement and the war graves being essentially...but he said there was a meeting in the deputy minister's office in the morning and I caught the train.

What they wanted was a 20 minute film about the cemeteries as they remain, beautifully tended, near all the battlefields of World War II. On mountain slopes in Italy, in working wheat fields in Flanders etc. Principally the film was for people who couldn't go and visit the graves of their husbands or sons.

They gave me some books of photographs, splendidly produced coffee table books, and really it seemed to me that that was the best for the purpose that could possibly be done. A film, it seemed to me, could only be a kind of travelogue, with very similar and quite short scenes, since if you were to do it you would pretty well have to try to cover them all. Twenty minutes of serried graves would be really too much, but what to put in between, and anyway I was loath to treat the subject in this way.

I walked around with this for longer than a producer would think it should take to write a 20 minute film of the war graves; and indeed was getting the kind of lingering look a producer can lay on you, across the floor of the cafeteria, say. Eventually I gave them a 20 page treatment for a 50 minute film called 'The Meaning of Sacrifice'. I just dropped it on the secretary's desk and went off and hid out for a few days.

Well it passed. It got shunted about to the other producers and there was even some enthusiasm. It went off to the deputy ministers with the director's blessing.

There, of course, it met a rather startled reception, but the board was advisor to the Queen on all matters to do with film, so they started moving it about, with all the other paper, to anyone at all who might have any comment. This went on for nine months, and by that time I'd left the board and gone to Toronto.

When it got made, it was by a young writer-director of the post war generation, who was what I called (sotto voice) a doctrinaire pacifist. For him there was no 'meaning' to be looked for in anything to do with war; war was just hell.

The theme of my treatment had been that through the experience of wars and the remembering of them, the attitude to war of whole societies had changed. Notions of 'splendor' and in a way 'gallantry', the light hearted marching off to fife and drum, were things of the past; and a sober, citizen-soldier sort of attitude was in its place - reluctant to the ninth degree, but not pretending that wars couldn't happen at all. In the treatment the comparison between World War I and II came in film from World War I, with the voice ever read in various voices from collections of 'Letters from the Front'.

The film that got made, 'Fields of Sacrifice', had a big premiere in Ottawa ('Monty' came over), won a number of international awards, and is very much worth seeing to this day. But the comparisons, and the 'meaning' were, of course, gone.

I still, of course, think that the theme was a valid one. I still do not think that it was all in vain. I think we're very much better for remembering the wars.

Dulce et Decorum Est

*Bent double, like old beggars under sacks,
Knock-kneed, coughing like hags, we cursed through sludge,
Till on the haunting flares we turned our backs,
And towards our distant rest began to trudge.
Men marched asleep. Many had lost their boots,
But limped on, blood-shod. All went lame, all blind;
Drunk with fatigue; deaf even to the hoots
Of gas-shells dropping softly behind.
Gas! Gas! Quick, boys!—An ecstasy of fumbling,
Fitting the clumsy helmets just in time,
But someone still was yelling out and stumbling
And flound'ring like a man in fire or lime.
Dim through the misty panes and thick green light,
As under a green sea, I saw him drowning.
In all my dreams before my helpless sight
He plunges at me, guttering, choking, drowning.
If in some smothering dreams, you too could pace Behind the wagon that we flung him in,
and watch the white eyes writhing in his face,
His hanging face, like a devil's sick of sin,
If you could hear, at every jolt, the blood
Come gargling from the froth-corrupted lungs
Bitten as the cud
Of vile, incurable sores on innocent tongues,—
My friend, you would not tell with such high zest
To children ardent for some desperate glory,
The old lie: Dulce et decorum est
Pro patria mori.*

President defends Arts Council

Editor:

In response to your editorial of October 30, 'Not A Good Year' I would like to point out that it was the Sunshine Coast Arts Council, not the Arts Centre, which made the decision to discontinue operating the Hunter Gallery. The Arts Centre is, as the Hunter Gallery had been, one of the many programs of the Arts Council.

The following information may help to dispel what appears to be serious misunderstandings about this decision.

The Arts Council subsidized the gallery for several years as a measure of support for Coast artists and artisans. Hunter Gallery revenues were not sufficient to cover its costs. In the last two years the level of subsidy required to maintain this retail outlet rose sharply while Arts Council grant revenues declined. (In 1987/88 the subsidy was approximately $7000). For Arts Council Directors to ignore these trends would have been fiscally irresponsible.

Our recent decision to close the gallery was not taken lightly. The Hunter Gallery's future had been under review for over a year. Gallery staff, volunteers, artists and craftspeople were consulted and involved in the review process.

In early 1989 major administrative changes were introduced to make the Hunter Gallery more autonomous and financially viable. The objective was to increase revenues so that the subsidy could be reduced by 50 per cent. Regrettably we were not able to attain this objective.

In closing the gallery, the directors also considered alternate and less costly ways of supporting artists and artisans through craft fairs, seasonal art sales, etc. in the Gibsons area. Funds were included in our budget for that purpose.

The Arts Council is delighted that a group of artists will continue to operate the Hunter Gallery, in its present location, on a voluntary basis. As an initial gesture of support the directors have agreed to lease Arts Council's assets in the gallery for a nominal $1 a year.

Should the newly formed Hunter Gallery Society take out a group membership in the Arts Council it would also become eligible for yearly grants through our Outreach Program.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to clarify this situation.

Therese Egan, President
Sunshine Coast Arts Council

Know the back country

Editor:

Often environmental issues come and go like passing winds, soon to be forgotten, often before the public fully understands the ramifications.

It is only when the public can appreciate an area's value that preservation (or a preservation movement) can take place. The biggest problem facing environmentalists is educating the general populus about the merits of a given area and the alternatives to its destruction through logging, mining, damming of pollution.

Support for preservation of areas seldom comes from sectors of the populus that do not utilize the lands in question for some non-consumptive pursuits ie: fishing, hiking, cross-country skiing. This is the crux of the problem, except in rare cases like the Stein and Carmanah Valleys which have been brought to the public's awareness through the publication of books and expensive campaigning. Most areas facing destruction are destroyed before people know what they have lost.

I am one who uses the Sunshine Coast's back country extensively. I am familiar with its great beauty and diversity and realize the goldmine of spiritual and recreational opportunities that are there for any of our residents. Many people are not. Alternative to logging scream to be realized.

Tourism can only grow as lower mainlanders look north for recreational opportunities that have all but disappeared on the North Shore. Most of the available recreational lands on the Coast are slated to be logged. If the wholesale logging of these areas takes place it will be the death of possible recreation and tourism. These areas will be lost if they are not used and appreciated by the public. Many areas, including Tetrahedron Park are accessible by car and on foot to everyone from children to the elderly. If you are not familiar with their beauty you will never know why people are trying to save them.

Go forth and use the back country; appreciate the millions of years it took to create, and if you like what you see raise your voices and your hands in support of preservation.

Herbicide protest

Editor:

I am writing to protest the proposed plan to use the herbicide called Vision (round up) on logged areas in Roberts Creek and Langdale. Studies have shown it has an ingredient in it which causes cancer in animals, possibly humans.

I don't want my family to become a statistic 15 or 20 years from now when our government says, "Sorry we goofed". Look at the government's track record.

Our oceans are polluted with dioxins, women of child-bearing age have been warned not to eat fish from the great lakes, acid rain is destroying our environment, chemicals have been found in the eggs of some birds, the list is endless.

When there's a doubt regarding chemicals containing carcinogenic properties why use it? I am protesting this spraying on behalf of my children and all wildlife living in our area.

It's time to say no to spreading chemicals over our land.

Thanks

Editor:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the Gibsons and District Public Library and its membership I wish to express appreciation of your support and press coverage over the lengthy period preceding the referendum held September 23.

The substantial turnout of voters and their overwhelming support was largely due to continuing favourable publicity in your paper.

On behalf of the community we thank you.

In Lower Gibsons

Vancouver resident charged with break and entry

by George Cooper

In the very early hours of October 29, the night clocks were turned back, six businesses in Lower Gibsons were broken into and a varied assortment of goods taken.

A Vancouver resident, locally employed, was arrested and charged with six counts of break and enter and one count of possession of stolen property.

At a hearing on Tuesday, October 31, Thomas McEvoy, age 26, was released on bail to appear November 14 when date for trial will be set if he pleads not guilty.

Requirements of his bail are that he stay in camp while on the Sunshine Coast and otherwise to reside with his mother in Vancouver. Further, he is not to drink alcoholic beverages, nor enter a licensed premise during the time of his bail. And he is to report as required to a bail supervisor.

Smitty's Marina was one business broken into. Here one of the shop crowbars was used on the cash register to yield only the change as the register did not open fully. Items removed from the shop were lugged up the wooden stairs and deposited in front of Molly's Reach.

These items were a couple of bilge pumps, a depth sounder, an oil blender and a case of oil which, a spokesman for Smitty's Marina said "Must have taken several trips. The cash register took a beating but the other stuff was okay. Worth well over $1000."

The Sunshine Coast Slipper Company's store was entered by first breaking a window in the back. One of the proprietors said a sheepskin rug was taken, and some wooden boxes made of burl, and a white Teddy Bear.

Entry to the Landing Unisex Hair Design was made through a rear washroom window. The cash float, said a spokesman, of $50 was taken along with some soaps and hair brushes. "Then," said the spokesman, "a hole was cut in the wall to give access to Hunter Gallery."

From Hunter Gallery, 17 framed paintings were taken, along with silver jewelry. One of the artists whose work is displayed in the gallery said that two ceramic pieces of hers, two small kittens, were found in the pockets of the man arrested.

The office of Shell Canada products across the lane from Molly's Reach had a door window broken but the door remained locked. "Probably no entry was made," said a spokesman.

A break-in of the Tourist Information Booth at Pioneer Park was also reported by police.

All stolen property was recovered. The picture frames, Hunter Gallery reports, were damaged.

Lest We Forget

machine but could barely fend off one fighter let alone the two ME 109's that caught us near our target.

"Once aflame all we could do was get overland immediately to get the crew out. Our rear gunner was already dead from a burst of machine gun fire.

"When my turn came to get out I found myself pinned to the cockpit wall by the speed of our descent and I had a struggle getting my chute on. (The pilot sat on his chute while at the controls since there was not enough room to have it on.)

"When my chute did finally let me down in a ploughed field in the pitch dark I lost one of my boots in the soft soil. I did all the drills of hiding my chute and just started walking. Soon picked up by a patrol who first said to me that I shouldn't be out in the air raid and then they recognized my uniform.

"My burned face was treated by a doctor in some kind of underground hospital. Found out much later it was their secret rocket research site which explained why they blindfolded me on the way into it."

Tom was POW in Stalag Luft III and his number to go out the escape tunnel the prisoners had dug over months of work was 70.

"Only 50 got away in that attempt and then were all captured and shot."

I said, quoting the British newspapers of the time, "Weren't you glad your number was not somewhere between 1 and 50?"

"Not then. All I could think about was to get out of there and take my chances."

Battles on the eastern front moving closer to their camp forced them to march for days and then ride box cars for days to get away. Sometimes strafed by their own planes as their train moved out in daylight. In time Tom simply walked away from a scarcely guarded camp and found his way to some British army positions.

And it took almost 50 years to get that account out of him.

any students and Clark added: "I was really surprised. Nobody was really rude or anything."

Although Sechelt itself was quite a quiet, nothing at all happened to Chatelech school which last year suffered some spray-painting on its brick walls which "cost a lot to take off", Vice-Principal Jim McGowan told the Coast News.

In Chatelech's case, the school board's maintenance department paid $500 to the Grad '90 fund to have that class do the necessary patrolling of the school. There happens to be a couple of adult students in the class, McGowan said, and they spent the night at the school, and there "was also a fair bit of co-operation between us and the police."

McGowan also added, when he heard of Gibsons involving the merchants of the town as well, "that was a good idea on their part."

How did he feel when he saw the school the next morning free from any vandalism at all? "It was great!" he said.

Apparently many Sechelt merchants unwittingly sold egg-throwing ammunition as five dozen eggs were confiscated by the Sechelt RCMP on Hallowe'en night and there were two calls regarding egg throwing.

There were also six seizures of firecrackers under the Explosives Act but there were no charges.

Feathered visitors

by Jean Robinson, 885-2954

Marg Pearson reports seeing a flock of Pine Grosbeaks in her yard recently. These birds are a Winter Finch, from eight to 10 inches long and are often very tame. The male is dull rose-red, dark wings with two white bars. The female is gray with two white bars.

Marg and the Teddy bears have also spotted a pair of Snow Geese feeding at the south end of Tsawcove in what is commonly called Jacksons dumping grounds.

There were a flock of Pine Siskins in our cedars last week. At least that is what I believe they were.

Our resident seagull was attacked from above by what I assume was a type of hawk. Not as big as a Red Tailed Hawk and very agile in flight, it had our gull screaming and flying for its very life. The hawk in turn was pursued by two equally agile crows. The gull got away, saved by the intervention of the crows.

This is the first time I have perceived adult seagulls actually attacked. Thought maybe humans and seals were their only enemies.

On November second I had occasion to observe a pair of Red Shafted Flickers while they first explored a telephone pole nearby, then took a good look at our roof. They are the first I've seen this year.

The Stellars Jays are front and center anytime but especially now when feeders for the smaller birds are being put out. These saucy fellows are beautiful to behold and so interesting to watch.

Along these lines, local 'wildlife saver' Joanne Dickeson, thanks everyone for donations to help feed and care for the injured animals and birds. Only she does have a proper address.

Please send all donations to Joanne Dickeson, Box 1384, Halfmoon Bay, B.C. V0N 1Y0. Please state whether you require a receipt for income tax purposes.

Senior's complex queried in Sechelt

by Dave Fraser

Could property being given to Sechelt seniors on Block 7 be better utilized?

That question arose at the November 1 meeting of Sechelt Council. The point of contention was the proposed senior's activity centre, which is to be built on a seven acre parcel next to Trail Bay Centre Mall belonging to the district.

Local resident Grace Hopkins asked council why such expensive land was being signed over to the Senior Citizen's Association when it could raise valuable tax revenue for the district.

The seniors group would pay only one dollar for a 99-year lease on its centre, which would be located in a comprehensive development which would include new government offices, library, leisure centre and public safety building.

Nancy MacLarty asked council whether granting seniors tax-free status on their centre would set a precedent. Mayor Tom Meredith replied that already one charitable organization, Rockwood Centre, enjoys tax-free status.

As for what the donation of land is in dollar terms Meredith estimated its value at approximately $67,000. Meredith said no commercial use is planned for Block 7. "We don't want to compete with other retail merchants."

Alderman Michael Shanks said some commercial space may be vacated when government offices relocate to the complex but the local businessmen have indicated there will be no problem replacing tenants.

One mother of three said, with 400 students at the local high school, there was a pressing need for some kind of drop-in centre for youths in the area.

Meredith said the Block 7 complex included plans for a leisure centre with a 25 metre, six-lane pool. And a building would be available to groups for nominal rent. But he said the district "can build facilities until the cows come home," but, without input from parents, efforts to organize youth activities will continue to fail.

Members of the public agreed a public pool in Sechelt was a good idea.

Dock improvement seen Catch-22 case

by Dave Fraser

It's a classic Catch-22 situation.

The federal government has agreed to give $15,000 to District of Sechelt for sprucing up the floats and wharf at Porpoise Bay. But is the Small Craft Harbours department waiting for the district to assume responsibility for the government dock there?

Alderman David Wells said it would be foolish for the district to sign an agreement with Small Craft Harbours establishing a harbour authority until the feds have come through with funding promised last February.

Wells made the remark at the November 1 meeting of Sechelt Council, where the state of the dock came into question. He noted there are only two harbour authorities operating in BC at the present time.

At the meeting local resident Trevor Kirby complained about the presence of live-aboards at the dock, and the dumping of refuse into Porpoise Bay waters. He noted none of the boats had holding tanks for sewage, and even if they had there was nowhere to dump waste.

Kirby said lack of dock space is also a deterrent to tourism.

Ex-alderman Nancy MacLarty said if a harbour authority was established by-laws could be enforced prohibiting live-aboards in the area.

Prepare for bazaar

by Margaret Watt, 885-3364

The Sechelt branch of the hospital auxiliary is holding its monthly meeting on Thursday, November 9 at 1:30 pm at St. Hilda's Church Hall. Please come and help us with the final preparations for our upcoming bazaar.

The auxiliary has this message for you: Look in Marlee's as you pass, there behind the window glass. Note the handmade goods on show, and we hope within you'll go. For these items are for you before our big bazaar comes due. Just a foretaste of the fun you'll have when the bazaar's begun - November 18, 1 to 3. We hope our goods you'll come to see. Bring your cash, come one, come all to Sechelt's big Indian Band Hall.

I know the ladies of the hospital auxiliary have worked very hard to make this event the success it usually is every year.

WRITERS' FORGE

The regular monthly meeting of the Suncoast Writers' Forge will be held on Wednesday, November 8 at Rockwood Centre at 7:30 pm.

At this meeting, the members will concentrate on each other's various projects for their upcoming book about the people and places of the Sunshine Coast. Of course, visitors are always welcome. Refreshments will be served. Why don't you come on out and see what we're all about?

LEGION NEWS

You can dance the night away every Friday and Saturday night at the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 140 from 9 pm to 1 am with live music. Members and guests welcome.

The legion is also open Sundays from noon to 6 pm.

CRAFT & BAKE SALE

The hospital auxiliary, Hopkins Landing branch will be having its famous Craft and Bake Sale on Friday, November 17 at 9:30 at Sunnycrest Mall. Reliable sources tell me that the items for sale are just beautiful, and for you bridge players out there, they have just your kind of bridge cards for you to buy. Again, all these ladies work so hard, they deserve your custom.

WEST SECHELT SCHOOL

The students are very busy right now with various projects. The student council just put on a very successful Hallowe'en party, where the haunted house was a hair-raising success. A reading blitz was started November 5 and will run for six weeks. The goal is to have 80 per cent of the students read every evening for 15 minutes. There are challenges to be met every day during the blitz. Good luck, students!

Mr. Doyle and Mr. Grey's classes will be selling fruit snacks to raise funds for their trip to North Vancouver Outdoor School. November 14 to 24 there will be a library book sale at the school. This also ties in with the reading blitz.

Wilson nominated

Area A Director Gordon Wilson, who is also leader of the BC Liberal Party has accepted the nomination to run as the Liberal Party's candidate in the next provincial election.

Wilson who was nominated at a Powell River meeting on Saturday night says he expects the next provincial election will be held in May of 1990.

We listen to you. And we act on what we learn.

You wanted auto insurance rates set on a basis that was fair to everyone. ICBC introduced Canada's first Claim-Rated Scale, with premiums based on the vehicle owner's claims record, rather than discriminatory factors such as age, sex and marital status.

You wanted us to do something about B.C.'s mounting toll of traffic accidents. We responded with a traffic safety education program that has been cited as one of the most advanced in North America.

You wanted the option of policies that were shorter than a full year. We now offer policies providing protection for any period from six to twelve months.

Also, we were amongst the first Canadian insurers to provide underinsured motorist protection, replacement coverage for new cars, Dial-A-Claim reporting and a U-drive policy.

No company is perfect. But we are working on it.

Together, we can drive insurance costs down.

General meeting

by Ann Cook, 883-9907

At the Community Hall this Friday, November 10 at 7 pm a general meeting will be held. Doug Silvey is the president; Fritz Gros, vice-president; and the directors are Don Marshall, Cliff Silvey, Jack Williams, Ben Silvey, Ann Cook and Betty Silvey. Betty is also secretary-treasurer.

The inside of the hall is starting to take on a new look - nice big kitchen; new bathroom; new flooring in the hallway; etc. Maybe by Christmas Santa won't recognize the old place.

Education Minister at new school

by Ruth Forrester, 885-2418

Don't forget that tomorrow, Tuesday, November 7 is the big day at the new Halfmoon Bay School when the Minister of Education, together with local dignitaries, will be in attendance for the official opening ceremony. This is due to take place at 1:45.

involved in some good works, take the opportunity to show up at that meeting. You will make new friends who you can get to know over a friendly cup of coffee after the meeting.

For those of you unable to attend the day-time event, there will be an Open House in the evening from 6:30 pm. Do try to attend one or both of these and show your support and enthusiasm for the big step which has been made in our local school system.

GOBLINS ON THE GREEN
It was a gala evening at Coopers Green on Hallowe'en night as hundreds of spectators of all ages lined the beach to watch the great fireworks display. Some of the smaller kids didn't take too kindly to the loud bangs and hid behind Dads and Moms. But the big brave kids thoroughly enjoyed the spectacle.

The question heard throughout the display was "who's out there on the rock setting off the fireworks?" Turns out that they were all members of the Halfmoon Bay Volunteer Fire Department, the group responsible for the whole Hallowe'en party.

The chief fireworks man was Jerry Berthelet, ably assisted by Colin Philips, Ron McFarlane and Bob Merrick. Contrary to what we all thought, the fellows were not freezing to death out there, and were, in fact, too hot with the combination of their fire outfits and the heat from the torches. They did a fine job out there and our appreciation goes out to the whole fire department for a job well done.

The ever faithful Roy Hill carried out his annual difficult task of judging the costumes and came up with the following winners: For those up to six years, Cory and Nicole Pinkster together with Claire Stanhope; for the six to nines it was Troy and Adam Mercer; 10 to 12 were Willie Brooke, Wendy Kleig and Jeff Pinkster and over 12 were Bill Schofield and Maureen Barrach.

Among the adults, the California Raisins were outstanding and nobody seemed to know who they were. Anyway, thanks for adding to the fun of the evening.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY
A reminder to all members and prospective members of the Halfmoon Bay branch of St. Mary's Hospital Auxiliary that the next meeting is on Monday, November 13 at 10 am in the Welcome Beach Hall.

This hard working group are always happy to welcome new people to their midst, so, if you are new to the area, or if you have some time on your hands and would like to become in-

Fisherman's Homecoming Ball

by Myrtle Winchester, 883-9099

The 25th annual Fishermen's Homecoming Ball will be held at the Pender Harbour Community Hall on November 18, and tickets are available from Cheryl Jensen at 883-2436. Note that tickets are reserved for commercial fishermen until November 7. Any left are on sale to the general public after this date.

Norm Jones and his band will provide the musical entertainment, and the smorgasbord dinner will be "bigger and better, with lots of seafood and other stuff."

Doors open at 6 pm, "baiting hour" starts at 6:30, dinner is at 7:30 and the dance starts at 9 pm. The Fishermen's Homecoming Ball is one of the two main Community Club fundraisers.

HALLOWE'EN THANKS

Hallowe'en is over for another year, and once again the Pender Harbour Volunteer Fire Department put on a great fireworks show in Madeira Park for kids of all ages. The boys even arranged a perfectly clear sky for the event, and they deserve a big round of applause.

VHF LAWS

It is illegal to operate a VHF marine radio without an operator's certificate, and the Pender Harbour Power and Sail Squadron is offering a short course for those interested in obtaining certification.

The course will be held on November 21 and 22 from 7:30 to 9:30 pm at the Madeira Park Legion Hall. The course fee is only $5 and you can call Jock Hermon at 883-2745 or 883-9525 for more information.

TUX HUNT

The Harbour Lights' Great Tuxedo Hunt Raffle will be over this coming Saturday, and if you want a chance at the prizes (including $150 cash), find a tux to trade for a raffle ticket with your name on it.

All the tuxedos collected from the raffle will be used to outfit members of the Harbour Lights band in performances and you can enter at the Paper Mill or Protech, or by calling band leader Les Fowler, who will pick up your tux.

Les had an interesting call from someone who read the ads in last week's papers. They asked Les to pick up their tux, because they didn't figure they'd have time to drive all the way to Port Mellon (to the paper mill). Yes, it's the Pender Harbour Paper Mill that's accepting entries.

LEGION NEWS

Branch 112 of the Royal Canadian Legion will begin Remembrance Day ceremonies at 10:30 am at the legion.

MUSIC NOTES

The Pender Harbour Music Society is organizing a bus trip to the Vancouver Symphony on November 30 to a 2 pm concert at the Orpheum, the last of the Tea & Trumpets program, called Viva Espana. Refreshments will be served at the concert which is reportedly 'a beautiful musical travelogue with flamenco dancers.'

To book a seat, call 883-9678. The bus will leave Madeira Park at 11 am and return in late afternoon. The $25 cost includes transportation and a concert ticket.

POETRY & JAZZ

A Harbourside Poetry and Jazz Evening will be held on November 24 at the Pender Harbour School of Music. Details next week.

No logging moratorium for Tetrahedron

by Dave Fraser

The Sunshine Coast Forest District is not prepared to place a moratorium on logging in the Tetrahedron Plateau area. But the Ministry of Forests is concerned about the "important values such as water and recreation" in the area.

That word comes from district manager Barry Mountain, who was responding to Paul George of the Western Canada Wilderness Committee, who recently pointed out concerns about resource management in the area.

"It is our position that these values plus others including forest and wildlife, can be protected and even enhanced through careful integrated management," wrote Mountain in a letter of reply to George.

Recently, discussions have gone on between the Sunshine Coast Regional District, Ministry of Forests, Jackson Brothers Logging (which holds the cutting rights in the area), the Ministry of Environment and concerned residents about the preservation of the Tetrahedron wilderness.

George Smith of the Tetrahedron Ski Club recently compiled statistics on the usage of four back country cabins at Mount Steele in the area in question. Between November 1987 and April 1989 a total of 1575 people signed the cabins' logs, representing 23 clubs or organizations, 32 BC towns and numerous provinces and countries.

Visitors, in fact, amounted to 58 per cent of the cabins' users.

A nice cup of tea

by Ellen Frith

As the daylight hours grow fewer and the winter winds and rain move in to chill this Coast, nothing combats the bleakness of the weather better than, ah yes, a nice cup of tea. At least that's what the Tea Council of Canada believes in support of the millions upon millions around the world who imbibe the brew daily and so, in its latest issue of The Tea Digest, the council published some "tea trivia". What better reading could there be to accompany that hot, soothing "cuppa".

The world's champion tea-drinking nation, apparently, is the tiny country of Qatar, part of the Arab Emirates. People there consume approximately 12 pounds of tea each per year. That translates into 3000 cups of tea a year or eight cups a day. Canadians in comparison, consume a paltry 400 cups a year or not many more than one a day. Newfoundland is out front as the province in Canada drinking the most tea and, not surprisingly, Quebec consumes the least. But among Canadian cities, Victoria leads the tea drinking parade.

Tea, as most people know, originated in China and the first consignment to Europe was transported there by the Dutch in 1619. The first known reference to the sale of tea in Britain appeared in the London Gazette on September 9, 1658.

If one wanted to buy tea in Britain in the 1600's, there were only two places where it was obtainable. It could be bought by the cup and in leaf form in coffee houses or in the local apothecary's shop. Many tea drinkers in those days looked on their drink as a medicine.

The first tea to arrive in Canada was carried by the Hudson Bay Company bringing it to the company's various trading posts as early as 1716 and tea soon became one of the most important trading commodities.

Throughout the centuries, taxes have been a good reason for much unrest and tea has been one of the products often singled out for taxing. The world's first recorded tea tax was imposed in China during the eighth century and who can forget the Boston Tea Party at which citizens protested the tax on tea by dumping a shipment of the stuff into Boston Harbour and thus began the American War of Independence. And during the American Revolution, people made a point of refusing to drink tea because such a refusal was the mark of a patriot.

In Britain, tea's popularity led directly to the rapid development of that country's pottery and porcelain industry and to speed the transportation of tea from producing countries to consuming nations, a new type of sailing vessel was developed, the Clipper Ship.

In 17th-century England, tea became almost an obsession. King Charles II collected finely crafted tea cups, bowls, saucers, trays and caddies in pewter, silver and pottery. The Queen introduced tea as a breakfast drink to replace ale. Those who didn't bother to brew tea, chewed the leaves.

The tea bag, of course, is an American invention and it evolved like so many other ideas that have caught on, by chance. One inventive merchant sent samples of his tea wrapped in a piece of Indian silk to his prospective customers and many of his customers endorsed the idea by reordering these "tea bags". The silk bag soon proved too expensive and a less costly porous material was found.

We can also thank the Americans for iced tea. This drink was "discovered" when a tea promoter at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair, having difficulty selling hot tea in the summertime heat, added ice and reintroduced the beverage as "iced tea". It was a sellout and a new beverage treat was launched.

The first tea pots on record are those found near Shanghai and date back to around 1500 AD. The Russian version of the tea pot is called a samovar and combines a boiling water heater with a pot and can thus serve up to 40 cups of tea at a time. And in Australia, as told in the song, Waltzing Matilda, a true bush man boils tea in a billy can.

Of course, to make a cup of tea on a winter afternoon even more pleasant, it's nice to have something sweet to go with it. In Canada, as elsewhere, such "afternoon tea" aficionados, owe this practice all to a duchess who was hungry late one afternoon while her duke was still hunting. It was in the late 1800's that Anna, the Duchess of Bedford, conceived of a ceremony of serving tea and food together.

One day at Belvoir Castle, Anna was entertaining and five o'clock came and went. The Duke was still hunting which meant dinner would be late. So Anna proceeded to entertain her friends with cakes, pastries and a pot of the best tea.

As they say in Canada, "Enjoy!"

There's nothing like a hot "cuppa" to warm the bones on a chilly fall day. This local tea-lover would no doubt heartily agree.

No time for fall seeding

There will be no seeding of fall rye at the Gibsons/Sechelt Airport or at a new golf course at Kinnickinick Park.

The scheme was approved as a method of weed control by Sechelt District Council but the idea was scrapped because the company could not guarantee germination of the grain before the onset of winter.

In other airport news 12 lots created by runway extension work will be rented out as serviced commercial lots, bringing in $1500 annually, which will go towards airport maintenance and construction of aircraft hangars.

New school horizons

by Rose Nicholson

In August 1988, Barry Sullivan, after lengthy consultation with teachers, students and parents throughout BC, presented his report to the Ministry of Education.

Ever since then, anyone with any stake at all in the educational system has been wondering what the result of the Sullivan Commission Report will be on their lives and careers.

On October 30, Trustees and Administrators of School District 46 and their featured speaker Susan Close, explained the effect that the report will have in this district.

The Sullivan research team examined education in the province from the perspective of school and society.

One of the most interesting facts to emerge from the study was that students from Grade 3 to 12 were not seen to be highly motivated to work at learning and felt that there was insufficient challenge in the tasks given to them at school.

Yet many of these same students were found to have absorbing interests outside school and were willing to spend much time and effort in pursuing these interests.

To meet the perceived needs of students, the report recommends the provision of comprehensive health and social services to children.

The rigid use of age grading in schools is seen as a limitation to the individual development of students.

The report recommends that a core curriculum designed to cultivate the minds of students be required until the end of the junior secondary years. At the successful completion of the common curriculum, students will be admitted to the graduation program of their choice.

The report sees that one of the most important functions of the educational system is to teach students how to think, rather than merely learn by rote. It recommends that students with special needs be accommodated within the regular school system.

And finally, the role of teachers is seen as one that provides an environment that creates the optimum opportunity to learn.

King of Safecrackers Voices in the Dungeon

by Peter Trower

Wilson, with his quiet-spoken manner and scrupulously-neat habits, fits easily into his new role as hospital orderly. He relates well to most of the inmates and the highly-efficient staff members. Off duty, he continues with his writing and initiates correspondences with several authors on the outside.

One of the hospital inmates is a former Hearst reporter and Pulitzer Prize winner, Clarence R. Snethen. Snethen has read all about Wilson's sensational criminal career in the newspapers and is surprised to find him refined and knowledgeable - quite unlike the stereotypical underworld character he had envisioned. The two men find they have much in common and soon become close friends.

Snethen reads some of Wilson's writing and is impressed by the material - if not the florid, sometimes obsequious style. He urges the ex-safecracker not to let up in his efforts to become a published author. Wilson, ever susceptible to flattery, basks in the praise of this acknowledged 'man of letters'. He applies himself to his typewriter with even greater enthusiasm.

Clarence Snethen is scarcely typical of the usual prisoner who comes under Wilson's care in the prison hospital. Most of them are unlettered men with long criminal records and little patience for books they can barely read. But there are some remarkable characters among them.

A number of San Quentin's inmates are well-known personalities who distinguished themselves in legitimate fields before committing the offenses that brought them here. A good case in point is Norman Selby - better known as Kid McCoy - former middleweight boxing champion - one of the greatest pugilists of all time.

McCoy was serving 22 years for the murder of his mistress, - a death, he always insisted, was wholly accidental. Wilson finds McCoy an intelligent quiet-spoken man - and they strike it off well. For a time, McCoy hires Wilson as a secretary to handle his voluminous correspondence.

Another fallen celebrity enters the prison, soon after Wilson's transfer to the hospital. Unlike McCoy, who is a hero to most of the cons, this new arrival is anything but. He is Asa Keyes, former chief deputy district attorney for Los Angeles, the man responsible for putting many members of the present San Quentin population - including Herb Wilson - behind bars.

Keyes, found guilty of conspiracy in an oil swindle, is obviously in a most unenviable position. He is assigned to the hospital complex for his own protection. Wilson, oddly, feels no animosity towards the man who set him up. He knows too well the feeling of being in jeopardy from the vengeful attacks of fellow prisoners. Wilson is cordial to the disgraced lawyer and helps him adjust to the sparse stringencies of penitentiary life.

One day, Wilson is surprised to see another face he recognizes among the newly-admitted convicts. It belongs to a man called Paul Ernst, once a senior deacon at Wilson's San Diego parish - and one of those chiefly responsible for his summary dismissal.

Deacon Ernst is so embarrassed to meet his former minister under such circumstances, that he simply turns his head away and refuses to speak. When Wilson learns the charge that has brought Ernst here, he can understand the man's discomfiture. After self-righteously condemning and dismissing him on unproven charges of sexual indiscretion, the deacon himself had been convicted and given five years - on a well-substantiated charge of rape, involving a Sunday School pupil.

A night to remember

Rocking with the Stones

by Bev Cranston

What a rush! What an incredible rush! Mick Jagger and The Rolling Stones booming out their heavy-duty rock and roll for three solid hours at Vancouver's BC Place Stadium, November 1. I was lost in time and space.

Finding and buying tickets was difficult enough but the really hard part was getting to and into the stadium. We were part of a flowing and growing river of laughing, screaming and ecstatic fans rolling down Robson Street in Vancouver's West End. A taxi could not be hailed. All the buses were full. Who cares anyway, as the night is chilly, stary and magic!

As we neared the stadium, the crowds grew. There were only two small entrances to screen the hordes. As the crowd surged forward, everything slowed to a crawl, but a happy exciting one. I didn't mind. It wasn't raining. No one pushed or shoved. No police hustled. No fights broke out.

At last we found our seats which were on the floor, front and centre, what luck. The crowds of people amazed me. 50,000 plus. It was all very sane, organized and heavily supervised, but no one was frisked.

When the show was about to begin, everything was hushed for about one minute. Then the waves and screaming, roaring and whistling started. Then it was dark and where are they?

That's when the incredible rush happened. All of a sudden the whole front of the dome exploded with gigantic red explosions, not just lights, explosions! And then the whole stage (which took about half of the front of the dome) burst into a fantastic light show, and there they were. Mick Jagger and The Rolling Stones started their first number, Start Me Up. The sound, the bass was incredible. Your whole body, chest and neck vibrated and choked with the boom.

No one was sitting. You had to stand on your seat to see. This lasted for three numbers, then the crowd only stood.

This group is amazing. They are in their late forties and early fifties and they perform better than anyone, and have been doing it for more than 25 years. They are 'the world's greatest rock 'n' roll band'. There is no doubt.

Mick Jagger has endless energy. Every move he makes is a fast, jerky, rhythmic reaction. He danced, pranced and strutted from one end of the stage to the other, screaming, shaking, and waving his arms wildly at the crowd.

He is infectious. What is his secret? Is he wired, or is he on a natural high that he never comes down from? Whatever it is, he is truly an amazing performer.

Every number they played had a different light show to go along with it. Sometimes the lights were cascading all over the ceiling of the dome. It really was awesome. Mick didn't just do a quick medley of his tunes. He put his all into every number they played.

My favourite had to be Midnight Rambler, no Satisfaction, or maybe Ruby Tuesday. I don't know. About halfway through the show, the Stones played Honky Tonk Woman, when suddenly in each front corner of the dome, gigantic balloon dolls were blown up. One of the dolls was cross-legged, looking very sultry. She had a cigarette in her hand the size of a person. That's the only way I can describe how big they were.

The show went on and on, never a dull moment, they never stopped. Three hours later, Mick said good night after You Can't Always Get What You Want. But the show still wasn't over. Everything went black for a few minutes, then the whole front end of the dome exploded again, this time with gigantic gold flairs shooting for the ceiling. And back came the Stones.

They did an encore, and that's when we climbed over seats and headed for the exits fast. All the way up Robson Street for blocks you could hear the booming of his last number, so if you didn't care if you saw them, you really didn't need tickets, anyway.

It was a fantastic show and one I'll never forget.

DINING GUIDE

A listing of restaurants and pubs

Toast of the Coast

Some nights you feel like going out for dinner but you don't feel like a full-course formal dinner. However, you're still in the mood for a friendly atmosphere, good service and a tasteful setting. That's exactly how we felt a few nights ago and we decided to dine at Irvine's Landing Marine Pub.

Up until last year Irvine's Landing Marine Pub was the Irvine's Landing Restaurant, and I can assure you that the change of style hasn't lessened the excellent quality of food at the establishment.

We started the Caesar salads, perfectly tangy and made with the crispest, tastiest lettuce available. Croutons aren't usually a notable part of a meal but the ones that graced our salads were worth commenting on: toasty/crunchy to provide an ideal texture combination with the creamy dressing.

Next was a big plate of nachos that could be a meal on its own for one person and was perfect for two to share as a second-course appetizer. Lots of cheese, lots of guacamole, and lots of sour cream on a bed of fresh, crunchy chips. There were lots of black olives, too, but I allowed my companion to have all of them to himself.

One and one-half appetizers sated my appetite but my companion was especially ravenous. Despite my warnings that he wouldn't be able to handle it, he ordered a steak sandwich. I was wise enough to know when I'd had enough.

His sandwich arrived in a few minutes and the delicious aroma of broiled steak on garlic toast convinced me that I had room for a little taste. Perfect! I was tempted to order my own, but restrained myself and enjoyed sharing my companion's.

Please note, that although I seemed to be carried away about the food at Irvine's Landing Marine Pub, that's not all there is to the place. Stop by and see for yourself.

SPORTS

Bill Garland, referee-in-chief of the Sunshine Coast Minor Hockey Association, has some sage advice for aspiring officials in the often rough and tumble game of hockey. Garland brings 40 years of experience to his new role as chief arbiter of local puck-chasers. He will evaluate 12 referees who recently passed a referee's clinic put on by the BC Amateur Hockey Association.

Hockey referees can have it rough

by Dave Fraser

Referees should never worry about getting evaluated. Ask Bill Garland, referee-in-chief for the Sunshine Coast Minor Hockey Association.

Garland says he has been evaluated two or three times a year for most of the 40 years he's been a referee and he will evaluate all 12 referees who recently passed a course put on at the local arena by the BC Amateur Hockey Association (BCAHA).

Besides being inspected by Garland, referees from levels one to six are expected to take clinics every year to keep on top of the various rule changes.

Garland, who moved to the Coast from Calgary last year, has refereed in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Quebec and BC. He played senior men's commercial hockey until he was 38. A goalie all his life, he says he never wore a mask. As a player he was injured only once, when he was 17 years old during a practice, which required four stitches.

Over the past six years as a referee he's had 25 stitches, some teeth knocked out and numerous other injuries, usually from flying pucks and butt-endings.

He says attitude is the most important quality a referee can have. "You're a policeman on the ice. You've got to maintain respect on and off the ice. But that doesn't mean you've got to play the heavy."

Referees also need understanding, education and composure to deal with intimidating situations, he adds. Much of the abuse comes from off the ice.

Garland says after a recent referee's course in Calgary one of the 400 in attendance stood up and asked a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association official: "We've covered high-sticking, unnecessary roughness, fighting. But when are you going to get a rule controlling mothers in the stands?"

Garland says there is a need for experienced refs and their time will be paid for. Call him at 885-3753.

Minor hockey coaches are also required. A BCAHA coaching clinic will be held on November 18/19. For more information call Jim Steele at 885-5332.

Coast Soccer

by Jim Brown

Well you'll probably wonder about the point standings in the 12 and 13-year-old division. I didn't realize the 12 and 13-year-old schedule started on October 14. So this week the revised standings will be published.

In the 8 and 9-year-olds Gibsons Red and White team beat Roberts Creek by a score of 3 to 0. In the other game in this age group Cedar Grove defeated Shop Easy by a score of 5 to 0. In the 10 and 11-year-old age group there was only one game, in this game Sechelt Pharmsave beat GBS by a score of 4 to 2.

In the 12 and 13-year-old age group there was also only one game and that was between Sechelt Yellows and Sechelt Reds. The game ended in a 2 all tie.

The over-30 soccer league had two games played on the weekend. One game was between the Lighthouse Keepers and Sliammon (a Powell River team).

In this game, the first half was pretty one-sided in the scoring department (Sliammon 6, Lighthouse 0) but in the second half the Lighthouse Keepers scored five goals with Sliammon scoring one more. The final score of the game was Lighthouse Keepers 5, Sliammon 7.

The other game in the over 30 league was between Wakefield and Powell River. The score in this game was 5 to 3 for Wakefield. I would give you more of a description of the game but seeing as I play for the Lighthouse team I can't be at two places at once. So the other teams will get more of a writeup as they play the Lighthouse Keepers.

Minor Hockey

by Dave Devitt

Sunshine Coast Minor Hockey is off to an exciting and busy start this year with exhibition games planned in Powell River, November 11 and 12 for the Pee Wee division and West Vancouver visiting last weekend.

No Midget division (ages 16-17) could be put together this year due to a lack of players but their sweaters could still be used in another division.

If anyone knows last year's Midgets could they remind them to turn in their sweaters.

The Atom division had a very exciting first exhibition game November 2 between the Jets and Devils. The score sawed back and forth with the Jets finally clinching the victory 7 to 6.

By-Law passes

by Dave Fraser

A by-law exempting I3 and C4 property owners from installing on-site services passed final reading in a close vote at Wednesday's meeting of Sechelt District Council.

The amended subdivision control by-law applies to properties on Field Road and East Porpoise Bay Road, and arose from complaints from Appa Seafoods that the requirement was unfair since other industrial and commercial property owners on Field Road had not been required to install on-site services, such as storm sewers, curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

Planning Committee Chairman Bob Graham, who opposed the amended by-law, said variance permits would have been sufficient to deal with the inconsistencies in the subdivision control by-law.

He said council reconsidered its decision to include C4 (commercial) properties in the amended by-law at Thursday's Planning Committee meeting. Graham says he is confident exemptions for C4 properties will be quashed when council meets November 15.

Kiwanis Care Auxiliary

The residents of the Kiwanis Village Care Home have spent a busy and happy summer and we have much to be thankful for as we go into winter.

Outings during the summer have included trips to the Science Centre and Queen Elizabeth Park in Vancouver, as well as tours through the beauty spots on the Sunshine Coast. Many people help to make these outings fun and we are grateful to our volunteers.

We also appreciate those people who have continued to entertain and visit throughout the summer.

Now that fall has arrived, the residents enjoy the Church services that are brought to their home. It's good to keep in touch with matters spiritual as well as temporal. Heartfelt thanks to the ministers and congregations of the Gibson Fellowship Church, Calvary Baptist Church, St. Bartholomews Anglican Church and the Salvation Army who share with the residents throughout the month.

After a successful Halloween party everyone is looking forward to Christmas and all the excitement the season brings. This year along with the residents of the village apartments, the care home residents and staff will be lighting up the big tree in the courtyard. We think this will be a friendly way to greet our friends and visitors at Christmas.

The Kiwanis Village Care Home would appreciate any strings of outdoor lights that the public might want to donate. Please contact the care home at 886-9183.

Many groups both young and old brighten up the days before Christmas for our residents with their Christmas programs. We all look forward with great anticipation to this time of year.

It has been a good year for the residents of the Kiwanis Village Care Home. We have, of course, lost some friends, but have welcomed others to our home. The support of the community is important to all the residents. We extend a big thank you to all our friends and supporters.

Gibsons Auxiliary

The meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary, Gibsons Branch, was held November 1. Nominations for the 1990 executive took place and the following ladies are our new executive:

Jennifer Skea, president; Verla Hobson, vice-president; Jean Clarke, secretary; Zetta Sanborn, treasurer; and Marion Alsager, publicity.

The auxiliary held its Christmas Bazaar on October 28 and wish to thank everyone who supported us. The winners of the Raffle were:

First prize, Grace Jamieson; second prize, Mrs. J. Blake; and third prize, Mrs. Nita Poffenroth.

The members decided to donate $2000 to the Executive Treasurer of the Hospital Auxiliary. Also $250 for a bursary to an Elphinstone High School Grad who plans to go into the medical field.

The ladies have knitted and stuffed Teddy Bears which will be given to each baby born in the month of December and also for the first baby born in January 1990.

Our Christmas Pot Luck Luncheon will be held December 6 and every member will bring a wrapped gift which will be donated to the Elves club. The members are also to bring items to be used for prizes at the Totem Lodge Bingo night.

All the auxiliaries on the peninsula put in many volunteer hours to support the St. Mary's Hospital. For the month of October, seven of our members worked 21 hours at the hospital gift shop and five volunteers worked 27 hours at the thrift shop. All monies raised help to buy necessary and/or needed equipment for our hospital.

Joan Rigby attended the area conference in Coquitlam and gave an excellent report with a punch line that "the volunteer work is part of the health dollar".

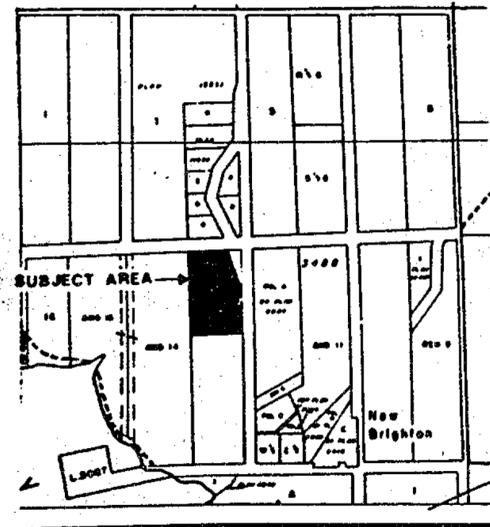

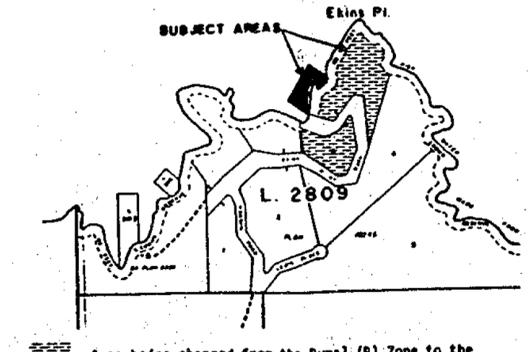

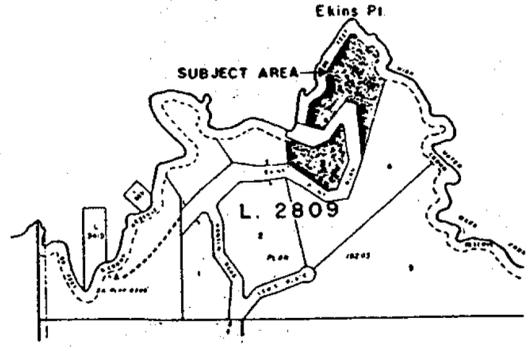

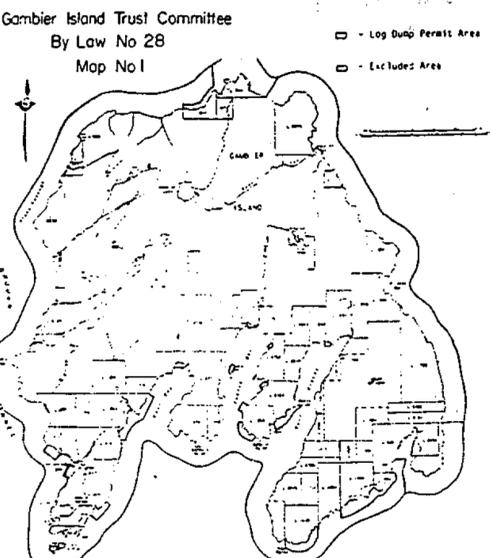

Anyone interested in joining the auxiliary, just call anyone on the executive and they will inform you of where and when the meetings are held.

Thank You

I would like to publicly thank Mr. and Mrs. Karl Schroers the proprietors of Variety Foods in Lower Gibsons. I left my wallet on the counter of their store. They contacted the RCMP and my wallet was returned to me intact. I greatly appreciate the Schroers' honesty and integrity, and the friendly, good service in their store.
 Mrs. Elliott #44

I would like to express my appreciation to all my relatives and friends for their support during my recent loss. A flower, a touch and an embrace or just being there - helped me through a very difficult time in the loss of my dear husband Frank. My sincere thanks for all the flowers, cards, letters and for the donations to the Gidon Bible Society. Many thanks to the staff and nurses of St. Mary's Hospital for the care given to Frank. A special thanks to Dr. Petzold and Dr. Burlin. Also a special thank you to the ladies of the Pentecostal Church for giving their time and lovely refreshments.
 Jean #45
