One hundred eighty five teachers and guests have registered for the Sechelt-Powell River Teachers Convention, to be held in Sechelt, Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28.

CNIB in fund drive

The area branch of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind is holding its annual drive for funds and canvassers will be calling on householders and businessmen of the area during the next few weeks.

Public response has been excellent in the past and it is hoped that this record can be maintained. Funds contributed through the local branch go towards maintenance of services to the blind throughout the province and within our own district there are some 15 persons registered and receiving benefits to some degree from the national organization.

Mr. Ted Henniker, chairman of the branch and Mrs. W. Duncan, campaign chairman are the persons to contact in Gibsons if the canvassers miss you on their calls. Mrs. Stockwell or Mrs. T. Lamb in Sechelt will be pleased to attend to any donations in that area.

Need uniforms

Uniforms for Girl Guides and Brownies are needed so if you have any part or complete uniforms available and unused, please telephone Mrs. W. Karateew at 886-9826.

If you are in need of either Guide or Brownie uniforms you can also phone Mrs. Karateew and she will do what she can to see the unused uniforms reach those that need them.

This arrangement is the result of a meeting of a Parent committee to Gibsons Girl Guides and Brownies recently when the problem of uniforms was discussed. So if you have any uniforms of parts stowed away, get them out and phone 886-9826.

ITEMS LEFT OUT

Installation of new machinery and the resulting upset the move has created has forced some news items to be left over until next week's issue. All one can say is: Sorry for the inconvenience.

CAREY CROFT

This year's Canada Savings Bonds Howe Sound payroll deduction plan chairman. Canada Savings Bonds or CSBs as they are known have been available to the public for the last 15 years and sales in that time have exceeded the 10 billion dollar mark. The bond this year, guaranteed by the federal government pays 4.6 percent if held for ten years. These bonds are redeemable at face value plus accrued interest at any time.

Find swan wounded

Five teenagers discovered a wounded whistling swan at Roberts Creek booming grounds. They took it to Mrs. Poole's at the wharf and it is now in the care of Mrs. Lissaman.

The wounded bird was brown in color and the size of a large goose. Some suggest it is a young bird still in its baby feather stage.

Two white whistling swans paid their annual visit to the grounds of Norman Hough on Pratt road. For several years these birds have visited him where they have been fed grains.

They remain around the area for two or three days then fly off. There have been other reports of whistling swans in this area but only one is reported to have been shot at. There is a heavy penalty facing any person caught shooting these rare birds.

Two were seen in the bay area of Gibsons Monday morning and they were kept under observation by the RCMP for a while.

From Halfmoon Bay comes word that Mr. and Mrs. Owen Edmunds who reside at Northwest Bay, looked out of their window on a recent morning and saw four white swans alight on the water. They spent a few days resting and feeding and then headed south.

Others on stalls will be Mrs. G. Begg, Mrs. M. Osborne, Mrs. W. Duncan and Mrs. H. Whiteside. Mrs. A. Rees, Mrs. Keen and Mrs. F. Robertson will convene the tea. Mrs. E. Lee is in charge of the sale of tickets. Mrs. F. French and Mrs. M. Strom, publicity. Receiving the guests will be Mrs. A. E. Ritchey. Mrs. D. Livingstone will open the bazaar. Mrs. S. W. Burt is general convenor and in charge of transportation.

Big turnout expected Sunday for go-ahead vote on hospital

A heavy turnout of Hospital Society members is expected at the special general meeting to be held on Sunday, Oct. 29. Due to the fact the society membership now exceeds 1200, this meeting is to be held in two locations, Kleindale High School at 11 a.m. and Elphinstone High School at 3:30 p.m.

St. Mary's Hospital Society members only will attend and vote on the motion which comprises the business of the meeting. This motion, put forward by a group of residents from the Pender Harbour area, seeks to postpone further work on the hospital.

All society members must be aware of the importance of this meeting. If the new hospital is to be built, this motion must be defeated.

For some years, the existing hospital has operated at 100 percent of its capacity despite the fact that the BCHIS recommends that hospitals operate at only 75 percent of capacity in order to use facilities most efficiently. In addition, many more residents have been hospitalized in other hospitals instead of in the one which is supposed to serve them.

Society members in all sections of the Egmont-Port Mellon area are, therefore, urged to attend the meeting on Sunday. At this time, they will be able to hear both sides of the question and express their views. A new, centrally-located hospital to replace the existing is inevitable. If present planning is allowed to continue, the new hospital will be a reality in the next year and a half. A postponement would cause many years delay.

Payne delayed

Owing to circumstances involving federal government business, W. H. Payne, Coast-Capilano Conservative member in parliament will not speak before Sechelt's Board of Trade until Wed., Nov. 8.

He was to have addressed the meeting on Wed., Oct. 25 but a week's postponement was found necessary to allow Mr. Payne to attend other matters. All speaking engagements for the week were unavoidably postponed.

Unicef aides will knock

Gower Point residents are prepared for Hallowe'en because the Frank West family will be on the prowl on behalf of UNICEF, the organization which helps under-privileged children in many parts of the world.

These youngsters have taken part in this venture for the last two or three years and have collected sums which have been sent to UNICEF after each Hallowe'en prowl.

Guides and Brownies of Gibsons and Roberts Creek will also be collecting. Last year the combined total of all sources collecting on Hallowe'en for this fund was $173.61 which went to UNICEF. It is hoped that this year's response will be heavier than any previous year.

Sechelt Kinsmen will again put on a teenage dance on Hallowe'en in the Legion hall, Sechelt. With the help of teenagers it is hoped to have the hall decorated in the Hallowe'en theme. The dance will start at 8:30 and last until 11:30 p.m. All teenagers are welcome. Hot dogs and soft drinks will be served by the Kinettes. Everything is free so a good turnout is expected.

NEWSPRINT MILL

Work has started on a newsprint mill at Whitecourt on October 12 for Alberta West Newsprint Mills Ltd. The $30 million mill was designed by the Ferguson Company, a division of Morrison-Knudsen Company Inc.

It happened 13 years ago

The following letter was sent to the Hopkins Landing General Store by air mail from an individual who gave as his address, British Columbia House in London, England. Here is the letter:

"I am writing this letter to you today to repay the price of a small item which I shoplifted from your store in about the year 1948, during the summertime.

"It was a package of chewing gum I am almost certain and I was about 15 years of age at the time. However it has been on my conscience ever since so I enclose a booklet of Canadian stamps which I hope will cover the cost, the initial value plus interest."

The letter was signed but the name will not be mentioned for reasons which should be obvious.

Inquiry to come on census figure

A letter replying to a census complaint covering the municipality of Gibsons from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in Ottawa, informed Gibsons council Tuesday night the matter will be investigated.

The letter explained no mistake had been made in census records in Ottawa. However in view of the complaint the Ottawa bureau will ask R. M. Kincade, regional statistics officer in Vancouver "to make a field investigation to determine whether there is any possibility that any persons were missed in the census enumeration."

The letter adds that the bureau after receiving the investigation report will again communicate with council.

Clerk Jules Mainil reported he had 18 names not recorded in the census. (The Coast News request for omitted names resulted in 36 being turned in.) Council tabled the letter to await the result of the investigation.

A letter from Gibsons Recreation committee was passed to Councillor Fladager to check for further and more definite information.

Accounts totalling $1,848.63 were ordered paid with $1,522.43 going to road work, $206.20 general and $120 for fire purposes.

Building permits were issued for one new home and two additions for a total value of $8,500.

One was issued to Mrs. Lee Macey of Port Mellon for a $4,500 guest house on Georgia View subdivision. A second was issued to John B. Roy for a $3000 addition at Fletcher and Martin roads. A third went to W. D. and J. E. Scott for a recreation room addition to cost $1,000.

Councillor Fladager reported Gibsons merchants are going ahead with the Christmas street lighting with funds now being collected for the installation. The total cost will run to about $700. Council will pay for the power used during the period the lights will be in use.

Donation for hospital plumbing

St. Mary's Hospital Auxiliary Gibsons Branch, held its October meeting at the home of Mrs. R. Macdonald on Glen Road.

Mrs. L. Inglis spoke about the Hospital Auxiliaries' Regional meeting, at the Lions Gate Hospital in North Vancouver.

A donation of $150 was made recently to the plumbing improvement fund for the hospital.

The new project of this group is to place boxes of mystery parcels in some of the local stores. These parcels will be sold at various prices.

Members can turn in their mystery parcels at the November meeting or to Mrs. Wallis at Welcome Cafe.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. David Fyles on Point Road, Hopkins, on Nov. 9 at 8 p.m. New members are always welcome.

The only fire that is out is the one that is dead out.

Llords Puppets are to appear in Gibsons as one of Overture Concerts events of the season. You can get your season tickets now.

4-H Club is praised

At the Farmers' Institute meeting Oct. 6, members heard a first hand account of the operations of the 4-H Calf club from Mr. Norman Hough.

Since taking over sponsorship of this club almost a year ago, the institute has been interested in junior work and Mr. Hough's presentation of the year's activities of the boys and girls outlined how they cared for their animals and also the high degree of interest the parents took in their activities.

The recent visit of members to Cloverdale where they met and competed with members of other districts resulted in a broadening of their outlook and has encouraged a greater confidence in their work.

The appreciation of institute members for Mr. Hough's efforts with the club resulted in his being congratulated with the hope that the 4-H members will continue to have success as well as pleasure in their operations.

Council will also extend its efforts to establish a national council of pulp and paper mill unions. They will also conduct amongst the affiliated unions a vote on nuclear arms for Canada.

Car pool!

Sechelt and Gibsons Kinsmen clubs held a joint meeting in the Peninsula Hotel on Oct. 17 with Ed Rennie of Sechelt Club in the chair. Plans were laid for the teenage dance in Sechelt on Hallowe'en.

It was agreed that the Sechelt club form a car pool to drive anyone down to Gibsons on Sunday, Oct. 29 to vote on the hospital motion. After the business meeting, games were arranged by Sechelt Kinettes.

Painting for prime minister

A painting of Prime Minister John Diefenbaker which was painted by a Gibsonite was presented to the prime minister during the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities at Vernon recently.

The painting, the work of Wesley B. Hodgson, a member of Gibsons municipal council, was three-quarters life size and conveyed to Vernon by Mr. Hodgson who hoped to quietly present it to the prime minister. Mr. Hodgson was one of three delegates from Gibsons to attend the annual convention, the others being Chairman A. E. Ritchey and Councillor Sam Fladager.

Word of the fact Mr. Hodgson had the portrait for the prime minister reached the executive of the municipal organization so at the dinner at which Mr. Diefenbaker spoke, Mr. Hodgson was called to the head table to make the presentation.

The prime minister was quite pleased with the portrait and not only offered his thanks personally but later sent a personal letter to Mr. Hodgson again thanking him for the portrait which he thought was excellent.

Scout council annual meeting

Sunday's hospital vote

Add up the number of columns the Coast News has filled to explain the hospital situation in this area, including opposing argument from a segment at Pender Harbour, number the meetings which have been held to give first-hand explanations, then read and ponder on the following:

> "At last the people of Pender Harbour area are to have their chance to express their views on our tangled hospital situation — and perhaps more importantly they'll have the opportunity to vote their convictions."

The heading over this reads "The 29th is the day — You'll have your say." It was mailed from Garden Bay, where the present hospital is situated and to a fair-sized mailing list. It went on to explain where and when two meetings for voting purposes would be held next Sunday.

As far as the Coast News is concerned this move "to express views on the tangled hospital situation" is one of deliberate self-manufacture and if there is any tangled situation it is in the minds of a small minority in Pender Harbour region.

Ever since the result of the plebiscite which showed 85 percent of the voters in favor of forming a hospital improvement district, which the Coast News supported fully and still does, nothing has arisen in developments leading towards construction of a hospital to make the Coast News change its mind. It has, as it has done for the last seven years, worked for the betterment of all facilities and attitudes in this finest of all areas in which to live.

So residents of this hospital improvement district remember, you too will be able to vote next Sunday according to your convictions.

A rose is a rose, etc.

A news story from Ottawa reveals a resolution to have employees of the government of Canada described as such rather than civil servants.

The Civil Service association's Ottawa-Hull local representing 12,000 civil servants approved the resolution.

If it will really improve internal and external relationships between the civil service, their employers, the government and the populace which supplies taxes to pay salaries, such a move could be worthwhile.

However in view of past experience in the changing of names, one can wonder why such changes are made. Saskatchewan's CCF government some years ago changed the name "night schools" to "lighted classrooms" without there being any noticeable resulting difference in such education. Many other such name changes have occurred without anything else happening.

Gertrude Stein's unusual type of writing which contained such phrases as a rose is a rose is a rose might have been a form of protest against change for the sake of change. In her era of writing she was looked upon by many as being a weird one. Maybe she peered into the future more than one suspected.

If the civil service rose will smell any sweeter for being called the "employees of the government" rose maybe the name should be changed but is there any hope the change will have any such result?

The trend today is to try and bury the past but like Banquo's ghost, which bothered Macbeth somewhat, it will also hover over the actions and deliberations of the "employees of the government."

4,000 miles without a mistake!

By ERIC THOMSON

One day we were over the hills to Aberfeldy, some 50 miles north of Perth, by bus. The heather was still in full bloom and we had a sunny day. Burns wrote about the Birks of Aberfeldy.

There weren't any and there aren't any, but the name has been given to a wooded glen, now a park, at the entrance to the town but the trees are beeches not birches.

As we climbed up the Sma Glen on our way to Aberfeldy, we could trace here and there on the hillsides the course of the road built by General Wade in 1725 from Perth to Inverness and beyond. This road was made by English soldiers with pick and shovel. It was at best a gravel road just wide enough for one cart, but before it was built, no wheeled vehicle could be used in the northern half of Scotland and journeys were made on foot or on horse or by sea.

This old road has long been abandoned or cevered by the modern road, and in many places all that shows is a double rut in the heather or a narrow stone bridge over a burn. This road was used by the soldiers; The highlanders, for spite, walked on the heather alongside.

Another day we took the morning bus to Pittoebry, about 40 miles north of Perth. There is a hydro-electric plant there turning out 15,000 hp., one of a series using the same water over some 30 miles. The plant covers the former Falls of Tummel, and the hydro board has installed a dam and generating station which has indeed added to the amenity of the place. The plant has gardens around it and a fish ladder which at one place is glassed in so that the fish can be seen, and there is also an electronic counter which can distinguish between a salmon and a trout.

The public are not allowed in the turbine room, but otherwise have complete freedom to see how things work, and there are notices at appropriate places giving history and explanations, and a big map of the whole generating area, from which it is clear that the Scots squeeze the last watt out of that watter.

In the afternoon we went to the Pittoebry Festival Theatre and saw an excellent play, Mary Rose, by Barrie This theatre was started about 15 years ago by a Mr. Stewart, now deceased, of Pittoebry. It was first in a large tent but is now in a permanent building, which was built over the tent, and it now includes all the conveniences of a really modern theatre, plus a tea room in a beautiful garden, where a yellow tomcat engagingly panhandles on matinee afternoons for saucers of milk.

This undertaking started with great enthusiasm, but as the years passed and the novelty of it wore off, the operators and Mr. Stewart were faced with difficulties much the same as grew up with our "Theatre Under the Stars." What has happened at Pittoebry is that the management has now decided to run a relatively simple program and raise its own talent. People come by car from 50 to 60 miles to see a play and have lunch or supper at the theatre, as one of the highlights of a visit to Scotland.

From Perth we went to Callender for a few days. This is quite a small village at the entrance to the Trossachs and is the overnight stopping place for many of the long-distance tours. The Saturday and Sunday nights we were there, we were treated to two of the worst thunderstorms that Scotland has had for many years. The lights went on and off, as the pylons were struck, for several hours, very home-like, only the interruptions were shorter.

We visited Loch Katrine during our stay and took the ordinary Saturday bus to a point some miles down one side of the loch. We should have walked three miles back to our end, but through a misunderstanding, walked the other way to the steamer landing at the far end, ten miles in three hours. The road was a private water board road, for Loch Katrine supplies Glasgow with water, and there was no traffic and only two farms. The road passed through evergreen plantations and heather slopes, and the tops of the hills were shrouded in mist. We made the distance in nice time to catch the steamer, but both of us had to get new heels on our shoes when we came to Glasgow. Altogether, it was worth it.

This has been partly written on the Queen Mary II on a trip down the Clyde from the Broomielaw to Tigh na Bruaich. When the big Queen Mary was named it was found that this Clyde steamer already had the name and on the Queen Mary II there is a brass place inscribed with the thanks of the Cunard Company to the owners of the Queen Mary II for allowing the name to be transferred to the big sister. We saw our own ship, the Laurentia, waiting for us down the river.

Yesterday we went on a trip up Loch Lomond, thence by bus across a two-mile isthmus to Loch Long and home by another steamer down Loch Long. It was a nice sunny day and Loch Lomond looked exactly like the paintings of it. Across Loch Long from Arrochar, the steamer landing, was the hill called the "Cobbler" of which we have a painting over our mantlepiece at home.

The incoming paddle steamer, loaded with trippers, made three unsuccessful attempts to reach the pier, just as bad as anything that the old Union Steamships could do up Howe Sound on an off day.

On our way home we had a distant glimpse of the U.S. nuclear submarine base in the Holy Loch

There have been sporadic picketings of this base by peace marchers, but the Dunoon magistrates have been gaoling the picketers and that has pretty well put an end to their antics.

This concludes the account of our wanderings. We have made our way across England and Scotland by easy stages and have just nicely used up our 4000 miles of rail tickets, that is 2000 miles of travel, without making any mistakes.

Our hotel accommodation, chosen mostly by guesswork, with one exception, has been very good, and so has everything else. The weather has been rather cold, though we have had only one wholly wet day, but this has been more than made up to us by the fine friendly way in which we have been treated from Land's End to Orkney, and even in Glasgow, douce and dirty, the sun has shone for us.

The Three-Step Approach

FOOTWORK COUNTS ON THE APPROACH

To get from your starting point to the spot where you'll release the ball, just in front of the foul line, requires a certain number of steps. Exactly how many steps you need depends on your personal style of delivery. It can vary from one step to five steps.

A three-step and a four-step approach are by far the most common, however. These two approaches are used by 90 percent of bowlers. The one-step, two-step and five-step approaches are unorthodox. Still, some good bowlers do use them. In addition, some of these approaches may be best for handicapped people, many of whom are able to bowl well.

Find the number of steps that seems natural to you, then use this type of approach. Only in this way can you develop the proper rhythm of movement so important to good bowling.

After deciding the number of steps you are going to take, here's how far back from the foul line you should start off:

You want to complete your delivery with your forward foot about six inches in front of the foul line.

So, stand with your back towards the pins, and place your heels six inches from the foul line. Then with an imaginary ball in your hand, go through the entire delivery, taking the number of steps you plan to use, and sliding at the end. Do everything, just as if you were bowling a real ball toward the pins instead of toward the benches.

Notice where your forward toe stops. This will be your starting point when you actually bowl.

You can fix this spot in your mind by noticing where it is located relative to the standard marker dots that are spotted in three lines from 12 to 16 feet back of the foul line. A more exact way of fixing this spot, however, is to check where it is in relation to the balls on the return rack — for example you may start out opposite the third (or fourth, or fifth) ball on the rack.

Be sure not to try this experience with a real ball. A number of display case windows have been shattered by bowlers who have done this. Almost certainly the ball will slip out of your hand, perhaps injuring someone.

But, even though you are not using a ball, include all the motions you will have in your regular delivery.

Of the two "orthodox" approaches, the three-step is the one most popular with 5-Pin bowlers, and the one to try first if you are just starting to bowl.

2nd Step: Right foot forward, swinging the ball smoothly backward to shoulder height.

3rd Step: Left foot forward for slide. As the arm swings forward, the right knee drops, and the ball is released a few inches from the floor. Follow through with your arm.

The Four-Step Approach

The four-step approach is the second most popular one with bowlers.

Many four steppers, however, take only a half step on their first step, giving themselves more time for the pushaway; then they go through the rest of the sequence as if doing a three-step approach. This gives them a fuller pushaway and a longer backswing than an ordinary three-step approach.

For a full four-step approach, however, the sequence is this (reverse, if you are left-handed):

1st Step: Right foot forward; and give the ball its pushaway.

2nd Step: Left foot forward; and half the backswing is completed.

3rd Step: Right foot forward; backswing is completed.

4th Step: Left foot forward for slide. As the arm swings forward, the right knee drops and ball is released a few inches from the floor. Follow through with your arm.

Remember, choose the type of approach that feels best to you. It is not the number of steps you take which is important. The important thing is co-ordinating the movement of your arm with the movement of your feet for a smooth, accurate delivery.

Family allowance cheques go to 2,600,000 families

One of a series of articles describing the federal health and welfare services Canadians get for their tax dollars.

A young mother walks into a supermarket with her two pre-school age children, selects several dollars worth of groceries from the shelves, goes to the check-out counter and endorses a small strip of cardboard. The Family Allowances program has helped one more Canadian family.

Millions of times a year, in clothing shops, pharmacies, department stores, this scene is repeated.

The battle for freedom from want is fought on many fronts. A key weapon is — and must be — money. The means to house, clothe, feed and educate children is basic armament in this fight.

Each month more than 2,600,000 Canadian families, large and small, receive Family Allowance cheques. The rates are $6 for children up to 10 years of age and $8 for older children up to 16 years of age. The average family has two or three children for whom allowances are paid. This money is designed to assist in maintaining a healthy, happy living standard. Surveys have shown that the money, except in rare instances, is spent wisely. Many welfare and other authorities believe that one big reason for this is the fact that most cheques are made payable to the mother.

The program, now 16 years old, has earned widespread acceptance.

Canada is one of many countries (38 in 1958) which endorses with action the belief that families with children, especially young ones, should be aided financially.

Around the world various nations have established family-aid programs ranging from schemes which provide funds for families with one child or more to plans which assist only families with eight or more children!

Some programs allow more money for the second child than for the first, more for the third than the second and so on. Others specify an increase in allowance as the child grows older. All have one thing in common—the recognition that the family unit is vital to a society and must be maintained.

Canada's program, though comparatively new, was considered long before 1945 when the Family Allowance Act was passed. One of the spark plugs of the Act was the Marsh Re- the need to bolster the finan- port in 1943 which spelled out cial position of low-income families.

The money which the government, through the Department of National Health and Welfare's regional offices, distributes in the form of Family Allowances cheques, is obtained from various federal revenues. It is the money of Canadians being used for Canadians.

When the postman delivers Family Allowances cheques each month, he is opening the door to a fuller life for the young people of Canada!

A redesigned Envoy

The 1962 Envoy is a completely redesigned car, General Motors of Canada announces. The four-cylinder British-built Envoys are lower, wider and slightly longer. They have been engineered to provide a more relaxing ride and more passenger room.

They have more headroom, hip and shoulder room, as well as wider doors. The trunk, too, is spacious with the spare wheel out of the way in the right side wheel arch.

The 92 cu. in. engine is basically unchanged, though an increase in compression ratio to 8.1 to 1 and a re-designed inlet manifold increase horsepower and torque.

New 3-point engine mounts provide even greater smoothness and flexibility. The use of lightweight alloys on clutch housing, induction manifold, transmission cover and other parts has resulted in important savings in weight

Optional at extra cost on all new Envoys is a 4-speed transmission controlled by a short floor-mounted level. Standard equipment is the 3-speed all-synchro transmission with steering column change and a much-improved control mechanism.

Routine maintenance costs on Envoy have been cut because there are only four lubrication nipples, needing attention at intervals of only 12,000 miles. Intervals for other service items are 3,000 miles apart. Brake adjustment is simpler; engine access much easier.

Hectic buying spree

A White Elephant settled itself on the porch of the Roberts Creek School Wednesday ably assisted by Don MacKenzie, Charlene Berdahl, Kathie Turik and Don Marsh as sales people and members of the three classrooms as buyers. It was the successful effort of the Roberts Creek Helps, Jr. Red Cross, to raise money for their project which is to assist the Elphinstone High School branch of Jr. Red Cross in their adoption of a Greek School.

The Helps, enthusiastic in their first effort at fund raising, went all out for the cause. One lad decided that his parents' collection of favorite books would be a likely contribution to the sale but was persuaded to compromise with a bag of oddments of a different nature, while another boy, under the impression that clothing was the thing, was busily cleaning out his bureau drawers when parental authority changed his course.

However there was a hectic buying spree when the goods were assembled and beads, brooches, books, much-used comics, toys and the surviving half of an elderly salt and pepper team changed hands. Who knows if there are many more such sales, the salt shaker may one day be returned to the original owner's shelf.

Letters to the editor

Editor: The surest way to keep the country and ourselves out of war is keep out. Keeping out becomes extremely difficult when every conceivable means are used to get men — especially the youth — to volunteer to fight for democracy, to join the war to end war, etc.

The young man was brave indeed who during the last slaughter suffered the ignominy of the white feather, and the cruel vilification and abuse of a crazed populace overwrought with hysteria Having recognized the uselessness of war as a permanent solution of any question, let us definitely determine there shall be no more war. Let us with Beverly Baxter publicly proclaim "my desire to be shot in the nearest backyard within 24 hours of the declaration of war rather than shoot, or gas, or drown, or otherwise murder any of my fellow men."

Reader, can you take the oath and with me conscientiously declare you will not commit murder? Governmentally legalizing murder by calling it war does not change its moral aspect. War with attendant diabolical degeneracy can only be made possible by peace-loving people permitting themselves to become stampeded by the vicious and insidious propaganda of the armament manufacturers who profit by the sale of ingenious devices designed to kill in hitherto undreamed of proportions.

Rather than have science bent on providing new methods of destruction, let us have world cooperation for the purpose of eliminating cancer, tuberculosis and other dreadful diseases. Let the message, WE WILL NOT KILL ring out from press, pulpit, rostrum and radio. If this is treason, then better treason than murder.

Now is the appointed time to wage this propaganda. Delay is dangerous. Once war is declared we are forthwith charged as pro-enemy providing we oppose it. The magnitude of the task of keeping our country out of war depends entirely upon ourselves. We have but two choices. We can take the easy going apathetic and indifferent attitude and piously hope that all will be well. Or we can conscientiously resolve to do everything that lay in our power to so quicken the conscience of the general public that Mr. Public will see to it that he does not repeat the error of 1914-18. If our conscience can justify us murdering those we love with impunity, then we may go to war and kill those who are loved by their kin. Reader, you cannot justify slaughter. Therefore let me repeat, the way to keep out of war is keep out.

The above remarks come as the result of delving into some old files and books dating back to the First World War. They should contain a message for the average person to consider.

Dave Rees.

MORE WOMEN DRIVERS

The number of women who drive or own cars has increased tremendously. A Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce estimate reveals about a quarter of the country's licensed car drivers are of the fair sex. And about 20 percent of Canada's automobiles are owned by women.

WRONG PERSON

Last week's police court news mentioned Joseph Latham as being before the court. This was incorrect. It should have read David Latham. Incomplete naming of the person charged resulted in the error.
