Road closure threat draws out protest

Hopkins Landing residents on visiting their store last Thursday were surprised to find on the notice board particulars of an application to be made by the Salvation Army to close that part of Burns Road which divides its upper and lower fields and ends at the bridge over Langdale Creek just up from the ferry ticket office.

Enquiry at the Court House found that the basis of the application was that this portion was a dead-end road, and too narrow for two cars. As this is a registered public highway, and a safe short-cut for pedestrians going to and coming from the ferries to Hopkins Landing, it is distinctly not a dead-end road.

As to it being narrow, the width on the plan shows 39 feet, but the width between the Army's fences on either side of the road is about 24 feet. Steps are being taken to oppose this application, and to have the road opened to its full width.

Woodfibre exchange on wheels

Woodfibre's new dial telephone exchange system arrived in the Howe Sound community this week — on wheels.

Banks of automatic switches and other telephone equipment necessary for providing Woodfibre's 125 potential subscribers with community dialing service in mid-June were installed inside a windowless, portable exchange building at the B.C. Telephone Company's workshops in Burnaby.

After a 60-mile tow by truck and a 30-minute piggy-back ride on the regular ferry across Howe Sound, the 12-foot-long trailer's wheels were removed and the threeton unit placed on a foundation of wood beams and concrete piers at its Woodfibre site.

Advantage of placing a portable type building in Woodfibre, points out the telephone company's North Shore District manager, E. R. Boyce, is that when the community outgrows it, both trailer and foundations can be picked up and a larger building erected in its place.

Woodfibre's new portable building was made windowless to help prevent dust from entering and reducing the efficiency of the switches and other delicate components of the automatic system. As a further precaution against dust, its single door has a rubber seal.

Because dampness and temperature extremes can also affect the efficiency of telephone switching equipment, air entering the trailer through filtered louvred vents is kept circulating by an electric fan. The desired temperature is maintained by building insulation and a fan-type electric heater.

Built to B.C. Telephone Company specifications, the trailer has an interior lining of quarter-inch fir plywood and an outer skin of aluminum sheeting, crimped for greater strength. The floor has a loading strength of 125 pounds per square foot, which is required to support the approximately two tons of telephone equipment inside.

In the event of a commercial power failure, a propane gas-driven power generator inside the trailer cuts into service automatically. Should the generator fail, batteries will keep Woodfibre's 125 telephones working for at least 10 hours.

Later ferry sought

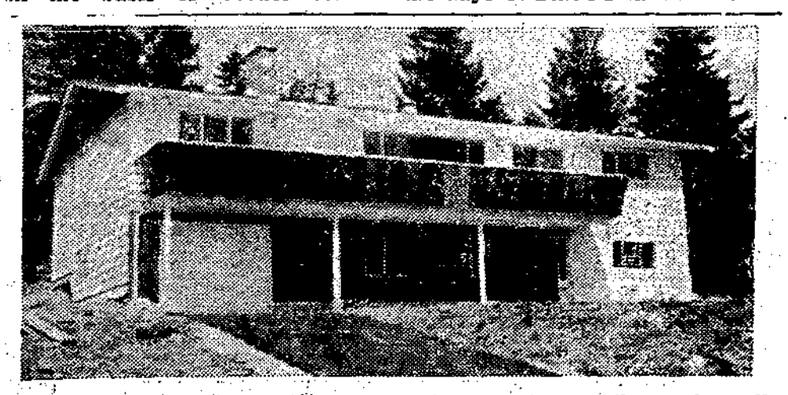
Gibsons Chamber of Commerce at Monday night's dinner meeting at Danny's Dining Room stressed the need for a later ferry than the present schedule allows and also urged that when loads pile up and one ferry breaks down, the other ferry abandon a fixed schedule and clear traffic as quickly as it can. A letter will be written to the ferry authority to this effect.

As regards establishing a ferry crossing at Furry Creek, landing somewhere north of Port Mellon, members of the chamber of commerce did not see sufficient merit in this idea to warrant its support.

Chamber members did however support the building of a guard rail at the sharp turn at Soames Creek bridge. It is at this point that most accidents occur. The department of highways will be approached regarding this. It will also suggest that a foot path be added on one side as there is not sufficient space on the present roadway for a walk.

William Kerr, town planner of Richmond, who arrived by helicopter spoke on town planning problems and offered the suggestion that increased population was not the sole answer to area problems. Increasing the size of the community must be justified on the basis of economics. A large residential population creating expensive school problems without sufficient taxation base to take care of it would not be wise.

Members were informed that on June 13 a party of editors from prominent United States publications will be taken on a tour of the Sunshine Coast. This is an annual event continued since the days of Black Ball Ferries.



New type homes are springing up not only in Gibsons but all along the Sunshine Coast. Here is a sample home in Gibsons. It is situated on Abbs road and was constructed for Gus Schneider. Real estate operators report that older homes are becoming slower to move because of the increase in the number of new homes in the area.

250 Scouts at Camp

(By MADGE NEWMAN)

Byng Camp, from Friday to Sunday, echoed the sounds and voices of some 250 active young scouts and their leaders.

The Scoutorama was engineered by the Dunbar and Point Grey groups and the local troops were invited to attend.

Each patrol had its own camp spot, the Roberts Creek boys choosing one near the beach. To attest to the high spirits of their hosts their tent was de-pegged during the night. To attest to the sleeping qualities of the local lads they knew nothing of the raiding party until morning when they wakened to complete darkness and a certain stuffiness and found themselves to be cozily covered by their fallen tent.

During the days the leaders put the boys through their paces and tested them in their various fields of scouting knowledge and accomplishments. At night a huge fire on the beach was the focal point for entertainment such as singing, story-telling and so on.

The 102nd Troop won the shield for which the city boys were contending and a shield for points for local patrols went to Gibsons.

Each patrol had its own cooks. In the case of Roberts Creek they were Jim Naylor and Doug Gibb. Mike MacDonald was the patrol leader. Scoutmasters N. Ball and L. MacDonald looked in occasionally but were not present for the whole session.

Local ball team in two thrillers

Peninsula Hotel gained a share of first place in the North Shore Senior B Softball league on Sunday with two thrilling one run victories at Norgate Park.

Ron Godfrey's scorching single through the middle broke a 4-4 deadlock to give the locals a 5-4 decision over previously unbeaten Avalon Hotel in the afternoon game. Godfrey also had a solo home run in the first inning. Terry McClaren pitched his second complete game, allowing only two hits.

On the nightcap, some great clutch hitting in the final inning turned defeat into victory as Peninsula Hotel dealt Deep Cove their fourth defeat in as many starts, 6-5.

With two out in the seventh inning, first baseman Dick Gaines rifled a double to left field scoring McLaren from second and tieing the game 5-5. Godfrey then hit the next pitch over second base to score Gaines and win the ball game. Rightfielder Bill Wells had a first inning home run for the winners.

Peninsula Hotel will host Engineering and Plumbing this Sunday in a doubleheader at Port Mellon. Game times are 2:30 and 6:00.

Land deal before board

Threat of a lawsuit involving a piece of ground adjacent to the present recreation field behind Elphinstone Secondary School was placed before Sechelt District School Board at its Monday night meeting.

The property owned by Ernie Reitz borders the school area and when it became necessary to obtain a piece of land 100 by 150 feet from Mr. Reitze, a sum of $2,000 was mentioned which the board accepted.

Monday night's meeting heard a letter read from a legal firm which maintained the board has been trespassing on Mr. Reitze's property and has asked for $2,000 to cover the land value and $1,000 as recompense to cover the trespass. The board has turned the letter over to their lawyer in the case maintaining that there is no trespass. The $2,000 plus survey fee is still offered.

A more reasonable attitude

A pamphlet bearing the title Don't Judge a Man's Worth by His Date of Birth has been issued by the federal department of labor in Ottawa. Added to the title is the phrase Let's Eliminate Age Barriers in Hiring.

This is a switch from the earlier attitude that a man over 40 should not be hired. The pamphlet explains this change of attitude by pointing out that because of low birth rates in the 1930s the age group, 30 to 40 will become proportionately smaller on the labor market.

This means, the pamphlet continues, employers will have to draw a large part of their manpower requirements from the older and younger age groups but will be forced to depend in large measure on the mature group for skills and experience required.

The pamphlet also records that the turnover among older workers is low and absenteeism is also on the low side for the older worker. Other points in the pamphlet reveal that hiring on the basis of ability, not age, can bring about a proper balance for efficient operation.

The department also found that pension plans were not the main factor against hiring people over 40. A study of 117 pension plans showed 69 had no age limits for entry. Only six plans specified age limits under 50.

So perhaps we may be hearing less about the 40 year age limit regarding jobs. There are some men at 40 not worth hiring and others at 60 with experience galore who should be utilized as long as they are capable of doing their job. Age should not be a factor.

Monstrous affectation!

At the turn of the century there must have been a form of decadence in art on which one prominent Spanish critic, Armando Palacio-Valdes had this to say:

'Art seems to me like an acute attack of nerves, the artists sometimes like madmen, sometimes like charlatans, who hide their want of power under monstrous affectations, and cleverly profit by the general perversion of taste, whilst the public, depraved by them and the prevailing utilitarianism, is without a criterion to distinguish between the beautiful and the wholesome, the ugly and the absurd."

Those words were written more than 60 years ago. They could have been written a few days ago after Vancouver's Art Gallery exhibited the works of some individuals. Judging from the first and second prize winners, the minds of the judges could be referred to as "charlatans who hide their want of power under monstrous affectations."

Apparently originality rates higher than does beauty and when originality displaces beauty there is no end to the monstrosities inflicted on a public which deserves better.

Palacio-Valdes recalls an epigram of Goethe's on originals which goes like this: "I do not belong to any school, there exists no living master from whom I could take lessons, and as to the dead I have never learned anything from them," which if I am not mistaken means "I am a fool on my own account."

Today's abberrations called works of art are just as much a racket as the popular song mill which grinds out today's hit parade numbers with the same cold calculation as a loan shark counting up the collected interest. We hear songs which are plugged without shame for cash. We see alleged works of art which are also plugged without shame and for cash. There appears to be no beauty in the present. It is all in the past. Some day beauty will become the rage when it reaches the hit parade of the arts.

Rocking chair exercise

Exercise is something people think will atone for eating too much. A century ago when most men got a living with an axe, rifle, and hoe they didn't worry about expanding waist lines. Suspenders and belts served a utilitarian purpose instead of an ornamental one.

Naturally a society that's smart enough to invent atomic bombs and lawn mowers that operate by their own power has been able to develop many forms of exercise. A man can whack a little white ball and then chase it into ravines and woods. That stirs up his feelings as well as his muscles. He can work himself into a lather over the political situation.

He can raise vegetables that won't cost much more than he could buy them for. He can sit on the porch steps and sprinkle the lawn; that's good for the arms and wrists. Many men have discovered that reading the paper is excellent exercise. After all, mind is superior to matter, and mental exercise, if taken in a rocking chair on the porch, is comfortable and pleasant.

Which is the largest animal in the deer family?

The moose, grotesque giant of a graceful clan. Adult bulls weigh up to 1800 pounds and their fighting antlers may span over six feet. The ungainly creature is a gourmet of the wilds, feeding on water-lily tubers and other aquatic plants in the summertime and on hardwood twigs and shoots of hazel and honeysuckle in the winter.

What happened to Canada's first Moravian mission?

Nobody knows. In May 1752 the Moravian Brethren, a protestant church founded in the 15th century, sent four missionaries from London, England to Labrador to start mission work among the Eskimo. They went ashore in Labrador — and were never heard of again.

Who's B.C. job covered road building to postage stamp design?

His name was Richard Clement Moody. A military engineer, he acted as commissioner of lands and public works in the colony of British Columbia, back in 1859. During five tireless years, Moody supervised exploration, mapping, surveying, road building — including the Cariboo wagon road, an epic in itself — the printing of government documents and the designing of schools, churches and even postage stamps.

Which Canadian fish has a particularly toothy smile?

The mooneye. These freshwater 12-inchers have a great many teeth located in their jaws and on the tongue itself. The species is found in the lakes and rivers of Manitoba, northern Alberta and northern Ontario.

Fourteen years — from 1923 to 1936. This star of the Montreal Canadians won the Hart Trophy, as the National Hockey League's most valuable player, three times. In his 14 seasons in the League he scored a total of 270 goals. His daughter married Bernard "Boom-Boom" Geoffrion.

Who were the first native born Canadian Priest and Nun?

Germain Morin, born 1662, was the first Canadian ordained in Canada to the Roman Catholic priesthood. His sister, Marie, born 1649, was the first native-born Canadian nun.

Probably James Morris. He became Canada's postmaster general in 1851 and reduced the letter rate from 16c or thereabouts to a flat 5c.

What Canadian became a top British diplomat?

Which is the oldest church in Montreal?

Notre Dame de Bonsecours, a small church facing the harbor beside the old open-air market. It was built in 1657, later destroyed by fire and rebuilt in 1771. Notre Dame Church, nearby, is one of the largest churches in North America. It has one great bell that weighs 27,780 pounds and is rung only on special occasions.

Who was Canada's first monopolist?

Fresh water pinks, chums

Two fisheries scientists at the University of British Columbia have succeeded in maturing two varieties of commercial salmon, pinks and chums, in fresh water.

"I've been writing for ten years or more that pinks and chums could not survive indefinitely in fresh water," says Dr. William Hoar, professor of zoology and fisheries. "Now I have to eat my own words."

Not only have the pink salmon completed their normal life cycle in fresh water but half of them have spawned and a second generation of pinks is now on its way to maturity.

Dr. Hoar and PhD student John McInerney began the experiment in the fall of 1960 when pink salmon eggs were obtained from the Skeena river system and chum eggs from Cultus lake.

The tiny fish, when hatched, were fed a special diet of commercial trout food three times a day in open pools beside the biological sciences building.

The special diet and the near natural surroundings are probaby the two factors which kept the fish alive, says Dr. Hoar.

There are notable differences between the captive pink and chum salmon as compared to those existing in the wild state. The captive pinks, for instance, average a pound in weight and a foot in length, whereas a wild pink averages three to four pounds and usually grows to two and a half feet in length.

The same applies to the chum. Wild chum average nine to 11 pounds and grow to more than three feet in length. UBC's fresh water variety to date weigh less than a pound and are about a foot in length. No attempt has been made as yet to realize their full growth potential in captivity.

The pinks, which have a very precise two-year life cycle, were closely watched last fall when the spawning period approached. To the scientists's surprise half of them spawned, and Dr. Hoar hopes the balance will do the same this coming fall.

"In any case we have three-year-old pinks swimming around in our tanks," he says, "and that means we have a pretty rare animal on our hands."

Dr. Hoar and Mr. McInerney are more concerned with an understanding of the biology of the species than the possible commercial applications of their research. They thought their rearing methods might have some applications in the trout farming industry. The value to sports fishing can not be overlooked, either.

"The most important thing for us," says Mr. McInerney, "is the fact that we can take the fish through its entire life cycle in captivity. And that makes it an invaluable aid to research in all fields of fish science."

Read Acts 5:1-11

Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required. (Luke 12:48.)

The above verse speaks to us of our accountability to God. We have been, and always are, recipients of God's love and blessings. Unfortunately, we do not give Him back the best and the most that we have. We tend to become like Ananias and Sapphira; we try to hide from Him what we can give and ought to give to advance His cause.

It is very easy to sing: "Had I a thousand hearts to give, Lord, they should all be Thine."

Yet we find it very hard to give Him the best that we have in life — talent, time, strength, service, money. Often we give Him only our scraps.

In consideration of all God is ever doing for us, we need to recognize our accountability to Him and think what it means. If every Christian would be willing to give himself and his all in advancement of God's kingdom, what a different world this would be!

PRAYER: Our heavenly Father, help us to be aware that Thou art the giver of every good and perfect gift. Thou hast continued to bless our lives, though we do not deserve Thy divine blessing. Forgive us of our selfishness and self-centeredness. Grant that we may give our best and do our best for Thee. In Jesus' name. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: God continuously gives us blessings day by day. What do we give Him in return? — Dorinda Umengan-Guillermo, Student (Philippines).

SPCA phones kept busy

At the SPCA branch executive meeting on Friday evening, May 17, in the Webb home on Reid road, several interesting reports were presented. The President Mr. Bert Cope reported that he has been kept exceptionally busy with phone calls which totalled 121 in April and to May 17. A number of these calls were from people complaining of dogs straying into their gardens and causing damage.

It has been pointed out that SPCA stands for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals but that where trouble to humans is involved then that is a matter for the RCMP. A committee was appointed to go ahead with the necessary work involved to establish junior work, a phase for which great need is felt. There have been a number of replies to letters sent out with educational booklets to those engaged in youth work and requests have been made for further supplies. The Branch is happy to oblige in this regard. Homes have been found for four dogs this month and the Inspector, Mr. Len Wray, has answered calls to Sechelt, Hopkins and Irvine's Landing. The Treasurer, Mrs. T. G. Smith, is on a month's holiday with friends in Vancouver and during her absence Mrs. Bert Cope has undertaken her duties after having been duly appointed a Committee Member.

To meet the demand for something different and practical, here is another in the series of "Agency" houses created by the Building Centre Design Department. Featuring the new trend in post and beam designing with split entry, and open planning . . . the living room runs the full depth of the house with large picture windows at each end . . . creating a new space concept for the limited area allowed under the N.H.A. agency loan which limits three bedroom homes to 1050 square feet.

This practical and economical home should appeal to even the most discriminatory of house owners, constructed as it is from our own native woods, and would look well in any setting . . . town or country.

Its split entry makes it particularly desirable, lending itself to open planning not only on the main floor, but throughout the basement area, with plenty of space for extra bedrooms, recreation room, laundry facilities, etc. Even though the area is limited to the 1050 square feet allowed under the Agency Loan, through careful designing, the rooms are large and spacious, with a good sized kitchen-family-dining room opening off the large living room, nice bedrooms and a sun deck accessable from dining or family room.

Working drawings of this lovely family home are available from the Building Centre Design Department. To obtain a copy of our free plan booklet, "Select Home Designs" send 50c in coin to cover cost of mailing and handling, to 96 Kingsway, Vancouver 10.

4-H convention

The 32nd annual meeting of the Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs, recently at the Royal Alexandra Hotel in Winnipeg, was recorded as one of the most important in the history of 4-H in Canada. As well as deliberating on the present and future, council members reflected 50 years of progress.

The four-day meetings commenced with special ceremonies at Roland, Manitoba, on Sunday, May 12. The first official 4-H Club in Canada has been traced to Roland and its active agricultural community. A cairn commemorating the event was unveiled by Carol Preston and Ross Pritchard, 4-H members from Roland. Speakers at the ceremonies were the Hon. Duff Roblin, premier of Manitoba, and Reeve A. E. Wakely. J. R. Racine, president of the Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs, was official chairman

Salmon are tagged

A salmon tagging program aimed at finding out new information on the movements of coho and spring salmon in the Gulf of Georgia and the Strait of Juan de Fuca has been launched by the Department of Fisheries of Canada.

In announcing the program, W. R. Hourston, director of fisheries for Pacific area, said tagging operations would cover a wide area extending from Victoria to Campbell River. "There are increasing demands upon the coho and spring salmon stocks in this region and the Department intends to compile information to define the movements of these stocks as they relate to fishing pressures," he said.

The department has assigned an experienced biologist to the tagging program which probably will continue for a number of years. This year, the commercial seiner Naughty Lady has been chartered to catch fish which will be released after tagging. Tagging started in mid-May and will continue until early July.

Mr. Hourston stressed that the success of the whole program depends entirely upon the cooperation the Department receives from commercial and sports fishermen in returning tags recovered in their catches. The department needs information on where fish move from the tagging areas and under what circumstances they were taken.

As is customary in tagging programs of this nature, a nominal reward of fifty cents is paid by the department for the return of the tags. In addition, those who qualify for the rewards will receive a report on the results of the tagging operations at the end of the season.

Tags recovered may be returned to any Fishery Officer, posted marinas, or to the Area Director of Fisheries, Department of Fisheries, 1155 Robson Street, Vancouver 4, B.C.

No Fairy Godmother Need Apply for Job

Everyone has his own special dream — a place in the country, a trip back home, college for the boy. But, for many people it's just plain hopeless.

But there's no magic involved to make your particular dream come true. You don't need a fairy godmother to do it — just a little determination.

Simply plan to set aside part of your income in a Bank of Montreal savings account. Do it regularly, and watch the balance grow. Watch the B of M's three percent interest help swell the amount too.

Regularity is the secret, as hundreds of thousands of the B of M's more than three million customers know. They save as much as they can spare each pay-day, and their dreams are turning into reality.

Ask Keith Baker, accountant at the Gibsons branch or D. V. Den Hoed at the Sechelt branch of the Bank of Montreal about it. They'll show you how easy it is — and how profitable to open a savings account. See them soon!

Rebekah Lodge 82 paraded to St. John's United Church, Davis Bay where Rev. R. R. Morrison welcomed the Rebekahs and Odd Fellows to a service commemorating the 144th year of the founding of the order. He delivered a stirring address in keeping with the works of Odd Fellowship.

A chartered bus of senior citizens from Vancouver on a tour of the area admired the beautiful flower arrangements of Eldred's Flower Shop. All were presented with a corsage by the Eldreds. They will remember Sechelt and said they will be back.

Edwin Walker is back home from Shaughnessy Hospital. Mrs. J. McCrea is also home from hospital. J. Gibson and Frank French are still at Shaughnessy Hospital.

TIMELY HINTS

The evaporation of water from ice cubes is the cause of large quantities of frost collecting in a refrigerator. To avoid this, try wrapping ice cube trays with polythene film immediately after the water has frozen.

Save the polythene bags you receive vegetables in and use them to store a reserve of ice cubes the next time you entertain on the grand scale.

TRUE TALES

It was an ideal weekend to hop the ferry and close up the summer cottage. How quiet and peaceful everything was. No excited shouts from the raft, no roar of outboard motors — just the squawk of gulls and the russle of fallen leaves. The beach that had been a clean stretch of sand when we left on Labor Day, was now littered with debris and huge chunks of beach bark.

Getting into old work clothes, Ted — that is not his real name, but we'll call him that — first tackled the long promised repair job on the back porch, next he sawed off the large branch of the gnarled old apple tree. He then raked and burned garden debris. By this time, a man-sized meal sort of appealed to him, but first he would gather a load of bark from the beach. His eye spotted a large galvanized wash-tub at the back door — just the thing to gather bark in.

Stacking the tub high with the bark he hauled it into the corner by the fireplace. Soon the crackling of a cheery fire in the large stone fireplace mingled with the sound of sizzling bacon coming from the kitchen. Crisp bacon and eggs. Beans and new bread and strong coffee. A meal fit for a king. Feeling drowsy with the day's work outside and the heat from the fire, he soon fell asleep.

He awakened to the sound of crackling. Crackling meant fire. Where? The red embers in the fireplace looked harmless enough. He dashed outside with visions of the roof blazing. Nothing there. With the aid of a flashlight, he peered into every nook and corner, and crawled on all fours under the porch wondering if a cigarete stub might have dropped during his repair job. All's well. With a feeling of relief he turned back to the house. Strange; still no sign of fire. There was no doubt about the crackling, that was very real.

It must be in the woodwork. Carrying the small oil lamp, he made closer inspection, there he found it.

Not fire — but fleas — A tubful of hopping fleas. Big ones, medium ones, small ones. Hundreds of them all jumping as madly as jolly little jumping beans. Round and around. Up and down. Bashing their hard little bodies with a resounding crackle against the galvanized tub.

The quiet of the night was shattered with the sound of the galvanized tub rolling toward the beach, and Ted sat down to a hearty laugh to think of the swarms of sand fleas resting dormant on the bark, all set for a long winter. Those that escaped the fate of roasting had been revived by the heat of the fire and were really having themselves a ball. Not even the July sun could have stirred them to such activity.—P. M. H.

World problem

Arthritis is a world-wide problem and is one of the most serious of all the disabling chronic diseases. More than a million Canadians are affected in varying degrees. It is responsible for more than nine million days' lost annually.

Since C.A.R.S. first came into being, its objective has been to wipe out arthritis. This can only be done with the aid of an aggressive medical research program. The conquest of arthritis in our time is something which will benefit all Canadians. For further information write to: The Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, B.C. What happened, Dear?

When you need an ELECTRICAL CONTRACTOR find him fast in the YELLOW PAGES of your Telephone Directory.

Scouts at P R Camporee

Scouter Hank Barendregt, who after a forced absence of nearly a year, has rejoined his old troop and took the Falcon Patrol of 1st Gibsons Scouts to the Powell River Camporee on May 17, 18 and 19.

This annual event, in which Gibsons participated for the fourth consecutive time, was held at the site of an old farm, magnificently located between high mountains on the shore of the Gordon Pasha Lake near Lang Bay. Once again D.C. Art Ross proved to be a wise and capable camp chief.

The theme of the camp was S.O.S. 48 days, and all activities in the field were based on last winter's heroic struggle of Miss Helen Klaben and Rev. Flores in the Canadian North.

A total of 12 patrols, including one from Burnaby Stride and one from Britannia, battled for high honors, which went to Beaver Patrol of the 3rd Powell River Troop.

Gibsons boys finished with a high B-rating of 593 points out of a possible 800, a remarkable score considering that three members were still Cubs five months ago.

In charge of Falcon Patrol was P.L. Wayne Swanson, with Second Geoff Oram and Scouts David Kennett, Trevor Johnson and Richard Gibb.

A CANADIAN FIRST

A Canadian dry cleaner was the first on the North American continent to use polythene garment bags. That was in 1956. Today, the use of plastic bags by dry cleaners and launderers is widespread in both Canada and the United States. In fact, 3,000,000 pounds of polythene go into their production each year, in Canada alone.

The Davis Ottawa Diary

By JACK DAVIS, M.P.
Coast-Capilano Constituency

The first vote in the House of Commons was of unusual interest. It took place over the nuclear issue, perhaps the only issue that might have brought about the defeat of the government so early in the session.

That defeat was possible may be seen in the closeness of the vote, 124 to 113. The three opposition parties opposed the new Liberal government with the exception of a few of their members. It was these exceptions that saved the day.

The four western members of the Social Credit party voted against the non-confidence motion; so did two Conservatives, including Mr. Harkness, the former minister of national defence. Eleven Conservatives, eight Liberals and one Social Crediter were absent.

If the 11 Conservatives had been present, and had voted with their party, there would have been a tie.

Yet this does not mean the government is in a weak position. On the contrary, its position is strong for there is no other problem in sight that is likely to cause the three opposition parties to combine. The Liberals are in the fortunate position of knowing that, although their minority position means they could be defeated, their Opposition does not want to defeat them. The two small parties certainly know that the electorate would deal harshly with them if they precipitated another election at this time.

The Liberal government can, therefore, act during the present session as if it had a majority. It can bring in the legislation to which it has committed itself, and can otherwise carry out the task of administration, without fearing that every day may be its last. But it must make every effort to govern well. Hence the Liberals are not likely to give way to inertia, or highhandedness or any of those other effects that sometimes accompany a government with a secure, overall majority.

The present parliament is finely balanced, as Tuesday's vote showed. Yet a fine balance is not necessarily flimsy or frail. It may mark a real strength and soundness. To be strong if sound seems to be the opportunity presented to the Liberal government. It is a combination from which the country may hope to benefit.

The new Liberal government plans to set up an Economic Council of Canada to help steer the nation to the highest possible levels of employment, efficient production and economic growth.

Legislation to establish the economic council was promised in the Speech from the Throne read at the opening of parliament. It should be established and in operation by mid-summer.

By bringing together government and the public — management, labor, farmers, small businessmen and others — the council would act as a powerful brains trust to devise economic goals and propose means of reaching them.

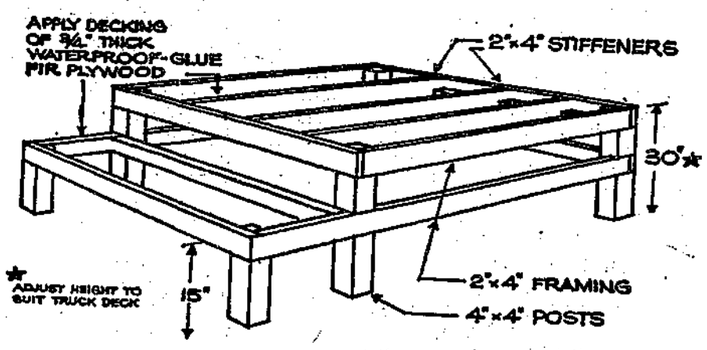
It is understood that the government plans to put some top men on the council on a full-time basis and to provide for a high-powered research staff to draft the economic targets.

Their job will be to see one step ahead of the economy at all times, and to keep the government and the public informed on where the nation seems to be heading.

Emphasis will be on consultation apparently in terms of selecting the members of the council as well as in permitting the council to receive the best available advice in every field.

The Liberal government is expected to give its economic council a larger role in the planning function on a long-term basis than the previous Conservative government envisaged for its National Economic Development council.

The plan for the Conservative council, unveiled during the last session of parliament, but not passed before dissolution for the election, was criticized because its members were to be part-time and because it did not seem to have independent research facilities. Machinery which would ensure continuous and effective liaison with industry was also lacking.



Simple loading platform

Since you can't get the back of a truck down to ground level, the next best thing is to get ground level up to the back of the truck.

A simple loading platform such as the one shown here will go a long way toward making life more bearable for your back. Heavy material, such as milk and other produce, sacks of seed or cement, can be transferred horizontally to or from a truck or other conveyance. Carrying it up or down is done in two easy steps instead of one spine-cracking hoist.

A little more than half a sheet of three-quarter-inch fir plywood, some two by three lumber and four by four posts are all the materials needed to build the platform.

Assemble the frame as shown in the diagram, nail on the plywood for the platform and step and there is a loading platform. It won't be so heavy that two men can't move it to whereever it is needed.

Since it will be used outdoors, be sure the plywood you use is the type manufactured with completely waterproof glue. It has a brand on the edge of every panel: "PMBC Exterior."

To assure long life, give the platform a couple of coats of good exterior house paint, making sure the edge grain of the plywood and lumber is well sealed.

SOCCER

(By GOALIE)

International soccer will be on hand on Saturday evening, June 15 at Empire Stadium, Vancouver when Wolverhampton Wanderers of the English 1st Division display their many varied talents against the scientific South American soccer approach of the Bangu F.C. of the Brazilian Premier division, Wolves vs. Bangu. This game would draw up to 60,000 spectators at the very least at Molineaux or Rio.

We hope to fill our three buses which are leaving Gibsons at 5:30 p.m. and returning at approximately 12 midnight the same night. There are still seats left, not too many, on this special excursion trip so hurry and let us have your order. The fare is $6 for adults and $3 for juveniles. Orders can be filled at any of the following:

T. Conner, 886-2572.
D. McKay, 886-9382.
W. Sneddon, 886-9398.

The price of a ticket is all inclusive, bus transportation to the Stadium, ferry fares and game ticket. You can't beat that money wise, says Scotty Sneddon, so come along and enjoy the fun.

NEW INDUSTRY

A new industry has sprung up in Gibsons and it is that of sign painting. Before taking up sign painting he passed a commercial arts course at Washington State university. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ridgewell live at Roberts Creek.
