Sechelt commission to discuss milk bylaw

The Sechelt Board of Commissioners has received samples of bylaws on the sale of milk within the village, to be studied by the chairman of the Committee. Recommendations as to action which should be taken will be set before the next meeting, it was decided at the Oct. 3 meeting.

Correspondence included a letter of thanks from the Sechelt Volunteer Fire Brigade, for receipt of the grant amounting to $500. An agreement between the Union Steamships Co. Ltd., and the corporation, provides the leasing of a ravine adjacent to Porpoise Bay for garbage disposal.

The property comprises a little over one acre, and will probably be leased for a period of 5 years.

Accounts payable, amounting to $2,521, were approved for payment before the meeting adjourned. Next meeting will be held Oct. 17.

Winner of a special award of $200 presented by the Pulp and Paper Industry in British Columbia for post-graduate study at Edinburgh is Peter Hector Pearse, above. Two other awards each of $500 were made by the Pulp and Paper Industry to Robert William Kennedy who will study Wood Technology at Yale, and William Forbes Murison who will study Forest Ecology at UBC. Both of the latter are working towards a PH.D.

80th birthday

Mr John Reeves celebrated his 80th birthday with a family gathering at Velmore ranch, the old place where he took up the pre-emption in 1906. He and his wife, who came here 1914, have seen many rhanges take place on Roberts Creek. The latest improvement after 40 years in the farm house, being the installation of lights and phone two years ago.

The family presented Mr Reeves with an electric shaver, and during the evening celebrations pinned a red carnation on him in honor of a wonderful father.

New shop for Sechelt

Sechelt will soon have a modern Tom Boy Store.

Construction is progressing well, with the floor poured, and a new cement sidewalk reaching from one side of the present Clayton's Grocery to the far side of the new Tom Boy store. Plumbing and wiring outlets have all been installed.

A big parking lot, west of and adjoining the store has been paved.

CNIB drive gains strength

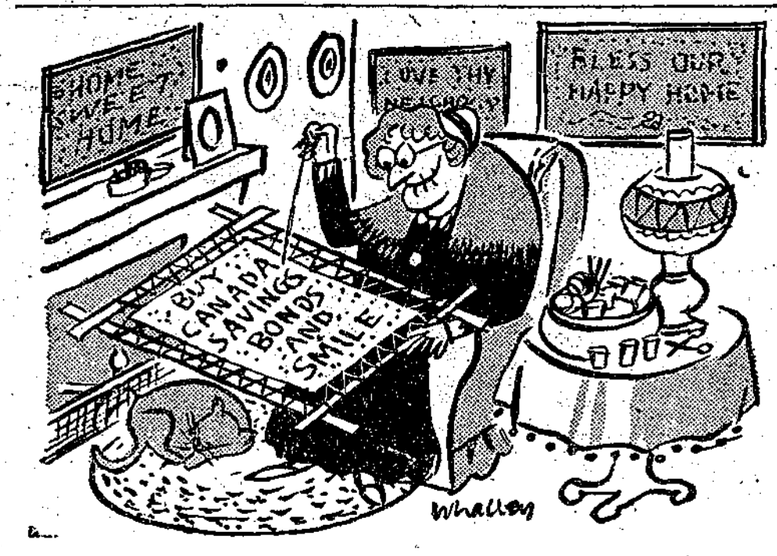
Mr Henniker, chairman of the Peninsula branch Canadian National Institute for the Blind, reports receipts totalling $160 for the first week of their annual campaign for funds.

Response from clubs and organizations on the Peninsula has been good and the house to house canvass appears to have been well received but with a target of $500 as its objectiye the local branch hopes the next two weeks will bring substantial response to their appeal.

Cook surprised

The cook at the Indian Residential school, Sechelt received a fright and was sprinkled with soot when one of the jets of the cook stove, which had become clogged, blew out and scattered the oily soot over her kitchen last Friday.

There was no fire, though the Fire Brigade was called and made certain all was well.



BETTER PRIZES OFFERED

Runners-up for the top thirty prizes in the Pulp and Paper Industry's tenth annual Essay Contest will receive a much better reward this year than an honorable mention. The Pulp and Paper Industry has designed and prepared an educational game which will serve as a consolation prize to the first 1500 runners-up.

Telling picture story of Forestry and forest utilization right from the seedling tree to pulp and paper, the game, which requires judgment and skill on the part of the players, concentrates on the forestry theme throughout. It's appeal is based on he natural fascination of young people for the spectacular equipment and the magic appeal of the scientific technology employed by the industry.

Regular prizes valued at $1.750 will still be given for the top 30 essays, first, second, third in five zones, junior and senior divisions.

The 1956 essay topic is 'Why British Columbia's Pulp and Paper Industry Depends on Export Markets'. To help essay writers with their work, a complete set of information is available from the Pulp and Paper Industry's Essay Headquarters, Forest Industries Building, 550 Burrard Street, Vancouver 1, B.C.

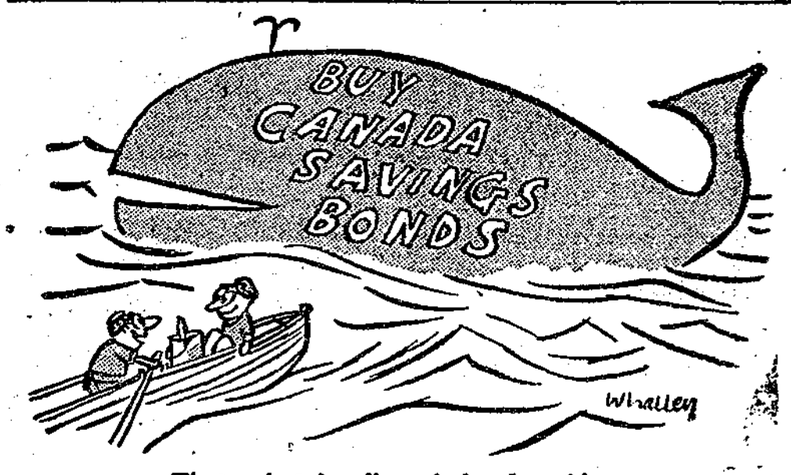
Prices cut

Price reductions in a portion of the fir plywood list were announced to the trades by MacMillan & Bloedel Limited. The cuts are mostly in finishing grades and range from 5% to 13% off existing carload prices delivered to eastern points.

A spokesman for MacMillan & Bloedel said that while his companys mills are working on good order files, the major factor in the decision to reduce prices now was the break in the United States plywood market. American plywood is being imported into Canada, even over the 20% tariff.



Thats what I call a whale of an idea.

A REMINDER FOR ALL

In case some people have not seen the October Reader's Digest it might be advisable to print here a short passage from an article headed Seven Economic Fallacies.

As we are interested mainly in the first one because of the pie in the sky type of government the voters have elected, here is the first fallacy of the seven printed in the Reader's Digest:

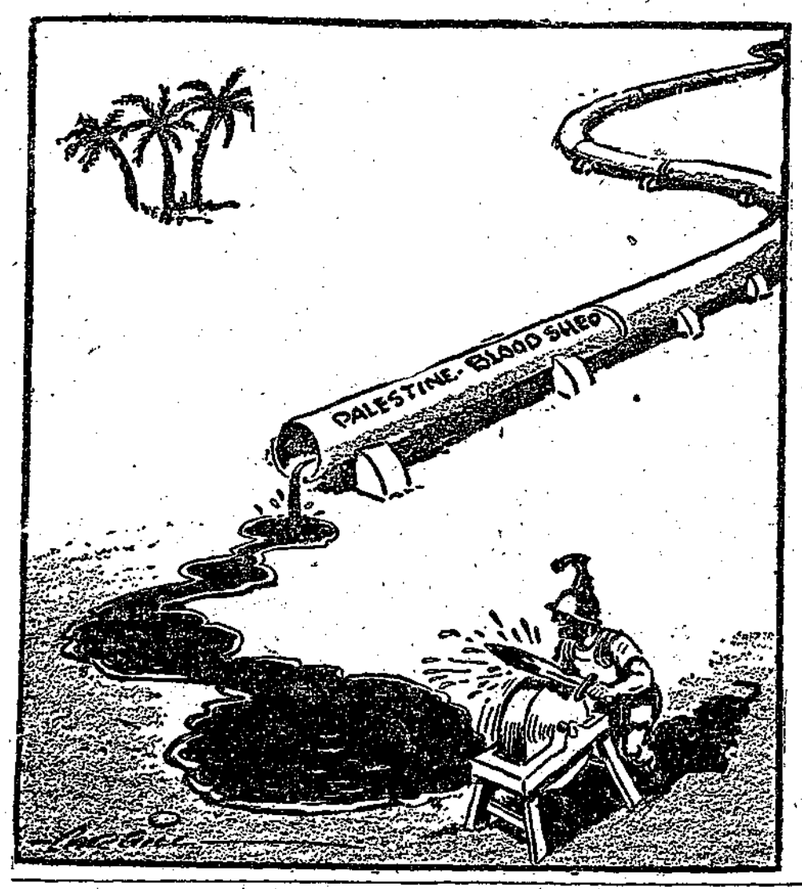
'The government has something to give the people which it does not first have to take away from them.

Here is the reply to that fallacy: 'Government is never a source of goods. Everything reproduced is produced by the people, and everything that government gives the people it must first take from the people. Government benifits are first raised through taxes and, as Franklin D. Roosevelt said in 1932 'taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors.'

That is the end of the quote from the Reader's Digest. There will be many people who will say 'Who cares?'

Inflationary eras bring on loose thinking. We are living in an age of prosperity with a very strong tinge of inflation. Monetary officials in Canada and the United States see the danger ahead and are doing their best to fend it off. With labor continually asking for higher wages which must be supplied by the consumer there does not appear to be an end in sight at the present moment. Labor is entitled to a fair wage for fair production but to continually ask for greater numbers of dollars is definitely not the same as seeking greater value for the dollar.

To get back to the pie in the sky 'there ain't no such animule.' It might look like pie in the sky but it is a mirage. It is a case of taking it away from the public and giving it back with the aid of mirrirs.



Why a demand for gold? Reason outlined by bank

The changing status of gold in Canada and throughout the world is discussed in the recent Bank of Montreal Business Review. 'The lifting of all restrictions on gold trading in Canada may be considered a logical, if sudden, culmination of the gradual relaxation of the past few years,' says the B of M.

Pointing out that the free-ing of gold was one of the few surprises of the Budget speech last March, the review says the move nevertheless appears to have been justified by the profound changes that have occurred in the international patterns of both the supply and distribution of gold.

The bank points out that, on the supply side, there has been a significant increase in South African output, and sales of gold by Russia, thus bringing about a rise in the quantity of gold available to the non-communist world, while at the same time, there appears to have been a decline in the demand from private sources.

The review points out that in the early postwar years there was a heavy demand for gold, with the free market price rising to more than $50 per fine ounce in European markets in 1949. But since the beginning of 1951, free market prices have declined steadily, and by 1954, were only nominally above the official price of U.S. $35.

This fall in private demand can be attributed to the pronounced improvement that has taken place in the economies of most European countries, says the B of M, which continues, 'The result has been to instil a greater confidence in domestic currencies, and hence to reduce the desire to hedge against possible currency devaluation by buying gold.'

The review also observes that, in contrast to the immediate postwar period when the United States was virtually the only country to increase its gold holdings, there has been a wide-spread accumulation of reserves by other countries and a net outflow from the U.S. 'These trends have, if anything, encouraged the tendency for countries to relax their restrictions on trading in gold,' says the B of M.

To the question of why there should be any demand for gold, the review explains that so far as the central banks and governments are concerned, the answer is simply that gold, along with U.S. dollars, is the only medium that is accepted throughout the world in settlement of international balances. For the private holder, the review says, 'Its main characteristic is stability of value, and private demand derives mainly from this feature.'

In addition to stability of value, there is the purely speculative consideration that the United States Treasury might increase the official price, the review points out. Such a move has been urged by gold producers and others who see in it a means of increasing gold reserves and of strengthening the pattern of international trade. The review adds, on the other hand, the U.S. is opposed to this on the grounds that it would entail an inflationary expansion of the monetary base of the U.S. banking system, and would be unintentionally selective in its effects on individual countries — benefiting mainly those countries with large gold reserves, and those with a large output.

There are thus powerful arguments on both sides of this question says the B of M which concludes, 'In the meantime, there seems good reason to believe that, with continued growth in their gold and foreign exchange reserves, other countries may follow the example of the Benelux Union, Germany and Canada, and gradually relax their restrictions against private transactions in gold.

There is a new line to be seen in this tweed coat, a line that balances nicely the fitted silhouette with easy cut; the result is a smart semi-fitted look. The seaming curves from under the arms down either side of the front in a princess line that is broken by the flaps of the pockets. Drop shoulders and narrow sleeves are other details. The fabric, a loosely woven, fine tweed, makes this a coat that is new, attractive and youthful.

SPORTS

BY CHUCK TOMPKINS

From information I have received officials of all B.C. sports and athletic organizations have been called upon by the B.C. Centennial Committee to assist in 1958 celebration planning. Professor R.F. (Bob) Osborne, chairman of the Centennial sub-committee on athletics and sports said, 'We hope to contact as many officials of the sporting fraternity as possible. We also want to hear from any local Centennial Committee, anywhere in the province, which hopes to include sports events in its local celebrations.'

The committee is anxious to encourage the holding of important sports events such as national and international championships in B.C. during 1958. It will assist in, and encourage the development of present or new provincial championships. New events in various sports will receive support with the ultimate aim of publicizing B.C. as a sportman's paradise

Besides promoting national and international events, the committee hopes to assist in arrangements for inter-city competition and special appearances of outstanding athletes and sports figures.

Special Centennial awards for the various fields of sport are under consideration.

Professor Osborne says no province-wide program will be possible without the assistance and suggestions of leaders in sports in every town, village or district as well as in the cities where sports enjoy the limelight.

Fourteen corresponding members have been appointed in various communities to act as liaison in their areas. These include; J.A. Lundie, Powel River; Russ Dyer, Chilliwack; Bruce Humber, Victoria; Lester Patrick, Victoria and Pete Maffeo, Nanaimo.

October, always a lovely month, outdid itself for the Thanksgiving weekend, the red and gold of the maples combined with brilliant sunshine was something we could all be thankful for.

Car loads of visitors drove up the highway, some to visit friends ond relations others to close their summer cottages until next spring.

Most of the men went fishing before hauling in their boats and came in with some nice salmon and fat grilse. Among those closing their cottages until next year were Mr and Mrs Piper and family, Mr and Mrs Greenall and children, Mr and Mrs Dave Pearce, Mr and Mrs Hunt Jun and Barry, Mr and Mrs Bill Thom Gerry, Charles and their guests Mr and Mrs A. Preston.

Mr and Mrs Alan Greene jr. had as their guests Mr and Mrs Saunders, Dr K. Argue and Richard, Dr and Mrs Richmond and family. Noro and Don Macdonald of New Westminster, Mr G. Nairn, while weekending with the Frank Claydons were Mr and Mrs G. Claydon, Lynda and Frank jr.

Some 150 students from UBC spent the weekend at Port Mellon and had a very successful hike into the mountains on Sunday. On Monday they were taken over the mill. The Harbour Navigation M.S. 'Hollyburn', and old friend of Port Mellonites prior to the opening of the road three years ago, transported the students from Vancouver.

BETWEEN OURSELVES
BY
Archer Wallace

Within the covers of almost any hymn book are hymns written by men and women of various denominations and holding widely different views. Probably here, more than anywhere else, is to be found the broadest basis of church union.

'Onward Christian Soldiers,' was written by Baring Gould, a widely known Anglican clergyman and a vigorous leader of his day. 'Abide with me,' which, according to a recent poll in Britain, is the best loved hymn of to-day, was also written by an Anglican, the Rev. Henry F. Lyte. 'Lead Kindly Light,' written by Henry Newman, who left the Anglican Church to become a priest and eventually a Cardinal in the Roman Catholic Church, is a favorite in all churches. 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' was written by Charles Wesley, brother of John Wesley, originator of Methodism. Henry Ward Beecher considered this the finest hymn in our language and many would agree with him.

* * *

Sara Flower Adams, author of 'Nearer My God to Thee,' was a Unitarian, and John Greenleaf Wittier, who wrote 'Dear Lord and Father of Mankind;' 'When on My Day of Life the Night is Falling,' was a Quaker. Isaac Watts, perhaps the most prolific of all hymn writers, was a theologian, holding evangelical views. Many of his hymns are among the best known in our language. Among others, he wrote: 'O God Our Help in Ages Past,' which was the most popular in the first World War. In an age of bitter controversy, Watts remained charitable and tolerant. More than seventy of his hymns are in constant use.

In his day William Cowper was considered by many, the most popular poet of his time; the critic, Charles Lamb said Cowper was, 'the wisest and best of Britain's poets. His fame as a hymn writer is most enduring. Among his best-known hymns are: 'Hark My Soul it is the Lord;' 'Sometimes a Light Surprises,' and 'God Moves in a Mysterious Way.' When the British magazine, John O'London's Weekly, queried its readers for their preferences, this last hymn was ranked very highly. His religious views were similar to those od Wesley and Watts.

A hymn, found in hymn books of nearly all denominations, is 'Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee,' written in the twelfth century by the French Monk, Bernard of Clarivaus. He was founder of the monastery of Clarivaus and author of many theological treatises. The hymn was translated from Latin into English over a century ago.

The hymns just mentioned were written by men who were far apart in their theological views but absolutely one in their deep devotion to God. And this devotion is recognized by every religious group who sing the hymns without giving a single thought to their authorship.

* * *

We forgot to mention the Calvinist, Augustus Toplady, author of 'Rock of Ages.' Who, for instance, ever stops to inquire about Toplady's views before singing that deeply moving hymn? And so it is with all hymns. We sing them because they do something to us and we recognize the spirituality of the author apart altogether from their views.

When we attend a religious service, no matter what the denomination may be, we sing and enjoy the hymns because we feel in the same spirit as the man who wrote them. When a hymn is announced no reasonable person would think of looking in the hymn book to see who the writer was or find out what system of theology he believed in. We find that we centre our minds on the words of the hymn itself. Perhaps we are nearer to God in such a mood than at any other time. It may be Christion people will be united through the medium of hymns more than any spoken word.

Police Court

The first prosecution on the Peninsula, under section 75 of the Government Liquor Act, found Benny Joe, Henry Paul and George Paul charged with illegally entering a Liquor store, being Indians. Defended by Chief Andy Paul of North Vancouver, the three pleaded not guilty. They had not purchased anything, were ignorant of the legislation, and according to the defense, there is a consideration being given to legislation to permit Indians to enter liquor stores. Nevertheless, the three men were found guilty as charged and fined $50 and costs each.

Murray Kornaga of Vancouver, who drove his vehicle without due care and attention and without a current driver's license, paid a fine of $75 and costs.

Francis French of Sechelt, charged with driving while his ability was impaired, was fined $150 and costs.

The first victim of the police radar cars was George A. Burrows, of Vancouver, who paid a fine of $25 and costs for exceeding speed limits near Granthams Landing.

Others found guilty and fined $25 and costs for speeding were: George Warwick, North Vancouver, Ewart McMynn, Vancouver, Albert Cranswick, Kamloops and Robert Eccleston of Port Moody.

Former Gibsons teacher at UBC

The editors and their wives attending the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association convention in Vancouver October 4,5, and 6, were the luncheon guests of the University of British Columbia in Brock Memorial Hall, after which they were taken to the Chemistry Building and a tour of Library. The editors then attended a clinic on photography.

Ladies of the party were taken on a tour of the Home Economics building by Prof. Charlotte Black, then through the school of nursing, the women's residence, practice house, and had tea at the Faculty Club.

The editors wife had the pleasure of meeting Miss Cunliffe, who taught school, and was the principal of the elementary scool in Gibsons from 1924 to 1929. Miss Cunliffe has recently returned from England, where she assisted in the setting up of a school for social workers, for the United Nations. She was much interested in Gibsons, and sent her regards to any who remember her and especially mentioned Dr. Hugh Inglis, Mr Eric Inglis, Mrs Helen Shoebottom, and Mrs Maud Fisher.

Now, we "build in" telephone wiring in your new home

We call it pre-wiring, and it costs you nothing extra. Pre-wiring means we install and conceal telephone wiring while your home is being built. It saves drilling holes in finished surfaces and lets you plan for extra phones, but the necessary extra wiring will never show. For full pre-wiring information, call the business office of the Telephone Company.
