Budget debate warm

One of the warmest debates that has taken place recently during a Gibsons village commission meeting occurred Tuesday night when the 1957 budget was before the commissioners to be passed.

Upshot of the meeting was that discussion occupied so much of the time the budget did not reach final passage and was held up for another meeting. The tentative budget was based on an approximate 13 mill basis. Last year's mill rate was 16. As the result of revised assessments the commission felt it would colect as much through the 13 mill rate as it did under last year's 16 mill rate.

When it came time to discuss the 1957 budget, Commissioner Mylroie objected to the haste in which the budget was being pushed through. He stated he thought an earlier committee meeting was for the purpose of passing a tentative budget which could be revised before completion, but here it was, he said, presented as a completed fact and he was opposed to having it passed as it stood.

Commissioner Mylroie was of the opinion that if the village wanted progress, the budget should not be cut and dried before the commissioners had time to revise their thinking.

Commissioner Wilson commented on the fact the budget was being pushed through by certain members of the commission without there being any choice in the matter.

Commissioner Crowhurst was of the opinion that water was just as important as roads. As a result the commission decided to transfer the estimated $451 budget surplus to be allotted to capital advance on water service. Commissioner Mylroie voted against the motion on principle, he explained.

Chairman Ritchey said that the manner in which the budget was presented Tuesday night was the way it had been done in past years and no complaints had been registered.

Firemen push wider fire area

In an effort to advance the fire protection area outside the village of Gibsons, Fire Chief Fred Feeney and Capt. John Bunyan of the fire department sought help of the village commissioners to allow an organized fire-fighting force to acquire by outright purchase or by lease the old fire truck now used as a standby truck.

They brought the matter before Tuesday night's commission meeting and the commission decided to look into the proposition to see what could be done.

The commissioners expressed sympathy with the objective of the firemen to allow them to fight fires outside the village but explained that under the Municipal act their hands were tied and equipment supplied by taxpayers' money could not be used outside the village.

It is the aim of the firemen to operate with the fire trucks under an agreement which would be on a reciprocal basis when required in the event of a serious fire.

The commissioners clearly stated there were implications involved which would have to be examined carefully.

Robert Ritchey, vice-president of Elphinstone Aero Club requested the village jointly with Sechelt pass a resolution to enable the commission to operate an airport outside the municipal boundary. The commission decided to approach the Sechelt village commission with this object in view. This must be done before machinery can be set in motion to allow members of the club to obtain the necessary land survey, financed partly by each village commission to the extent of $200 each, so they can get on the land.

Accounts totalling $1,129.45 were scrutinized and ordered passed, $584.46 to cover expenses involved in the recently acquired fire truck; $367.95 for roads; $25.63 for the water department and $19.39 general expense.

Neighbors awakened by the noise of the fire strived to save what they could but the fire had too great a hold.

Larger Library board suggested

A suggestion that Gibsons Library board be increased from seven to ten members in order to take in some enthusiastic volunteers who have done a considerable amount of work lately in keeping the library operation was made by Dick McKibbin, president. in his annual report of library operations for last year. He noted that with the seven member board there was usually some two or three unable to attend to library work for various reasons and he thought that with a larger board there might at all times be more persons available.

On the financial side the library board showed an increase in liquid funds of about $90 which included $36.73 acquired from fines on overdue books. Membership dues totalled $82 for the year.

There were 330 more books bringing the total to 5,850. loaned out during the year There were 4,409 books loaned to adults and 1,441 to juveniles Of those loaned to adults, the greater proportion. 3,862 were fiction and 727 non-fiction. For juveniles it was 1,017 fiction and 424 non-fiction.

There are now 1,263 books in the library as the result of the addition of 312 adult and 222 juvenile books during the year. Some 200 of these books were donated by friends of the library. Some seven or eight volunteers in work parties, carded, catalogued and prepared the books for circulation. thus helping the librarian to get through the work in a fraction of the time it would have taken if she had done it alone.

The president's report also contained information that paid membership had fallen off but this was regarded as being a matter of forgetfulness rather than a desire to not use library facilities. It is likely the library board will adopt some method of notifying members when their membership has expired.

The passing of David Donaldson in August of last year was noted with regret and the president's report commented on the fact the years he and Mrs. Donaldson spent in serving the original travelling library did much to lay the foun dation for today's library.

So far no one has been found to do the incidental janitoring at the library so it has been necessary for members of the staff to do what they could in keeping the place ship-shape.

J.L. Gordon was complimented for his work in placing the shelving and in making benches for the children to use plus a registration table and record boxes, all made by Mr. Gordon and donated by him.

Analyzing the circulation of books, the president commented on the fact that almost 25 percent of the circulation was in children's books. A curious feature was that in total circulation of books there was an increase at July 31 of 880 books over the previous similar period but that when the year-end tally was made the increase totalled only 330.

The report wondered why there should have been a falling off in the wintry months, a period it was thought would have produced a greater number of books taken out.

Students enjoy concert

BY JEAN HAGUE

Students of the Elphinstone High School were given a musical treat on March 26 when a quintet, drawn from members of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra presented a concert in the Schdol Auditorium. The group under the leadership of Mr. George Zukerman, was composed of Mr. Zukerman, bassoonist. Mr. Tait, cellist; Mr. Dufresne, oboist; Mr. Polson, violinist; and Mr. Brown, pianist.

The concert was under the sponsorship of the Music Performance Trust Funds of the Recording Industries. This fund provides for the presentation of free live music for activities of an educational nature. Details were arranged through the co-operation of Local 145, American Federation of Musicians.

Mr. Zukerman introduced the musicians, and using a coke bottle and a rubber band, explained the principle of each of the instruments and its function in the orchestra.

The program consisted of a duet for oboe and bassoon in the form of a sonata by Newman, the last movement of a concerto by Haydn, and a part of a ballet, "The Toy Box" by Debussy This last number was the first public performance of this arrangement and proved very popular. Mr. Zukerman explained that the piano was the orchestra, while the violin represented the doll, and the oooe through a lilting military air suggested the soldier. Other toys were suggested by the other instruments.

The program was well presented and held the attention of the audience throughout. Most students enjoyed it thoroughly.

Jukebox Radio

The Fowler commission report on radio hit one nail on the head very definitely when it termed a good deal of private radio broadcasting as being "juke-box radio." Mr. Fowler could have gone on to say, and maybe he has somewhere in his report that it is because of private radio stations' actions that the CBC exists.

True, private stations, like the Coast News, are commercial ventures but to be purely commercial is the surest way of alienating the public mind.

The air is filled wth western style music because radio stations admit they get more letters askng for it than any other type. The average newspaper gets plenty of letters from sane and not so sane people but newspaper policy is not based on the letters received. Do radio statons ever stop to think there is a great mass of people who never, no never, desire to write to a radio station or a newspaper? They are by far the great bulk of listeners and deserve some attention.

Vancouver could help itself towards easing the crime situation if its radio stations and newspaper refrained from playing "cops and robbers." Radio and the press should (but this might be heresy in the accounting departments) have something more than money in mind when broadcasting or publishing.

These observations are not intended as biting criticism against prvate radio. There are some good men in private radio. Some day private radio will come around to the viewpoint that a certain amount of quality should go into quantity. "Juke-box radio" is well named.

Thousands crippled

This month, Canadians are being asked to make their annual contribution to help defeat cancer, a disease which has killed and crippled thousands of people.

Since 1947, cancer has claimed the lives of 190,000 Canadians, but each year the death toll is being lowered.

In just a few years, cancer research projects have been started, treatment centres established and welfare services for patients have been greatly expanded. The majority of the cost has been paid for from contributions to the annual campaign. Canvassers will be out on April 15, 16 and 17.

Last year 20,000 persons died as a result of cancer. Of those, 6,500 were under 65, and more than 400 were children under 15. A startling fact about cancer is that the disease kills more than seven times the number who die as a result of automobile accidents.

In British Columbia the objectve of the current campaign is $250,000.

What's wrong with work?

Prof. A.W. Lewis, University of Manchester professor of political economy told UBC students, if the Vancouver press can be believed, that there is no virtue in hard work.

The professor forgot to tell the students that it was by virtue of hard work by others in the past that he was able to stand before them and utter the foolish remarks attributed to him.

Perhaps it might be better if we could read the professor's complete speech. It might place him in a better light than the news stories depict.

Nurse explains symptoms of polio

(By Julie Meston, R.N.)
Public Health Nurse

Poliomyelitis or Infantile Paralysis is a communicable disease. It occurs most often in the summer months and early fall, no longer only commonly among children.

In the beginning it resembles other contagious diseases. A person who has been well becomes restless or drowsy—doesn't want to be moved. He he is feverish, irritable and may vomit once or twice and complain of headache or pain in the back or back of the neck. He may be either constipated or have diarrhea. More significant are a sore stiff neck and spine and pains in the back, arms and legs. The most serious sign being the stiffness which makes it impossible to bend the spine and neck forward.

Sometimes these early symptoms may be very mild and yet within 24 to 72 hours the person may be unable to move an arm or leg. Again he may be unmistakably sick in the first stage of this disease but develop little or no paralysis Sometimes a person may have so mild a case that the attack is scarcely noticed and yet he may spread the contagion to others.

It is most important that early cases and all suspected cases should have complete bed rest from time of onset of symptoms, since continued activity during the 24-48 hours of the first pre-paralytic symptoms is associated with a greater incidence and severity of paralysis.

One should not go around in fear that all cases with these symptoms have incipient poliomyelitis, but any infection during a polio epidemic season should be viewed suspiciously until proven not polio. It is the safest course to call your doctor as soon as possible for the sooner treatment can be instituted the greater are the chances for complete recovery.

Poliomyelitis is a virus disease. A virus is a causative agent of disease which is much smaller than a bacteria of which you have all heard. The virus is so small that it cannot be seen by the ordinary microscope. It is recognized by its particular characteristic behavior to certain laboratory tests and can be seen with the aid of a special microscope.

There are three main types of the virus known in Canada. These are known as: The Lansing - Type I, The Brunhilde - Type II, and the Leon - Type III. Infection by one type of this virus does not produce immunity to infection by the others.

The virus enters the body by the nose and throat and the digestive tract. It is carried from person to person by droplets from the nose and throat and by bowel and bladder excretions. The incubation period for this disease is usually between four and 10 days.

After entering the body the virus first proliferates in the wall of the intestine then enters the blood stream and finally settles down in the central nervous system. Here it may cause a localized non-paralytic type of disease or may spread more widely and cause paralytic disease. At the time the germ is in the blood stream is when it is exposed to attack by circulating antibodies and is thereby neutralized and destroyed, hence the value of Salk Anti-Polio Vaccine.

We know that the polio virus is spread by flies. that it is found in infected sewage and that such sewage can contaminate drinking water. We also know that extreme fatigue uncleanliness and chilling all predispose to making an individual more susceptible to a polio infection. It is as yet unknown why so many cases make a complete recovery without specific treatment nor why more boys are affected than girls.

Some suggestions which may help to avoid a polio infection during the polio season are:

1. Avoid contact with known cases.
2. Keep out of crowds during an epidemic.
3. Remember that the active child is most susceptible if allowed to play to the point of exhaustion.
4. Avoid physical fatigue and exhaustion.
5. Do not swim in polluted water.
6. Avoid chilling by staying to long in cold water.
7. Pay special attention to cleanliness of hands.
8. Keep garbage and waste covered so as not to attract flies.
9. Insure proper disposal of human excreta.
10. Protect food from exposure to flies and insects.
11. Wash all fresh fruits and vegetables before eating.
12. Avoid operations for tonsils and adenoids during epidemic season.
13. Remember that summer complaint or any infection of the bowels may predispose to a polio infection.
14. And above all get yourself and your children innoculated with Salk Vaccine.

The recent introduction by Dr. Jonas Salk and his collaborates of a tissue culture vaccine, specific to poliomyelitis represents the fruit of nearly 50 years of toil by many workers in many countries.

The first discovery in the history of the production of this vaccine was made 50 years ago when two scientists demonstrated that polio was caused by a virus and that the infection could be trasnmitted to monkeys. No steps were made toward formation of a vaccine at that time because of the high cost of obtaining monkeys.

Discovery No. 2 came in the early 1930's when it was shown that monkeys could be immunized against polio by means of a vaccine made of a suspension of central nervous system tissue taken from infected monkeys. This suspension was treated by Formalin to render the disease properties of the virus inactive. This work reached such an advanced stage that several thousand children were inoculated with the vaccine but unfortunately a few cases of paralysis developed and no further experiments were carried out for many years.

The third discovery came when in 1939 it was found that one strain of polio virus could be transmitted to rats and mice. The animals being cheap and easy to get made it much easier to study polio.

Discovery No. 4: It had been suspected for some time that polio strains were not all alike. Over 200 strains of polio virus isolated from various parts of the world were studied by many different methods and it was found that they fell into three main types, one, two, and three, the names of which were mentioned earlier, Type one being much the commonest. At this time also the workers found that infection by one type of the polio virus will not confer immunity to infection by the other types. It became evident that any vaccine to be effective against poliomyelitis must contain all three types of virus.

It was discovered in 1949 that polio virus could be grown in living tissue of dead monkeys. kidney tissue being the best medium. Arising out of this has come a simple method for the diagnosis of poliomyelitis and also for the mass production of polio virus for incorporation into a vaccine. No longer is it necessary to inoculate live monkeys, but at the same time monkeys are needed in larger numbers than ever before as a source of kidney tissue for culture. Before, one monkey could be used in a single test only, now one mon-

The first aid kit and insurance both have important roles to play in the event of accidents.

Each year, the companies writing accident and sickness insurance in Canada pay out more than ninety million dollars (not including automobile accident costs) to policyholders—a mighty bulwark against unusual financial strain.

It is far better, though, to prevent accidents and mishaps, rather than to deal with the treatment of their serious—and often tragic—after-effects. That is why insurance companies are constantly seeking ways to stem Canada's mounting accident toll.

Safety pays dividends . . . saves lives, helps to lower your insurance costs. Be Careful.

Kiwanis notes

Easter Seal campaign is in full swing with all proceeds for crippled children of B.C., towards the Kiwanis sponsored Summer camp for these unfortunate children. It will be at Wilson Creek — first of its kind in B.C. Contributions are still urgently needed.

Ray Stevens, lieutenant-governor of Pacific Northwest district of Kiwanis paid his first official visit to the club Tuesday night, bringing an inspiring message of Kiwanis projects and growth.

Kiwanis motto is "We Build" — not only physically but mentally. The constant aim is to increase goodwill among members and in the community.

Bingo is exceeding all previous records and every cent of proceeds is used for actual welfare work on the Sunshine Coast. Kiwanis thank all who attend and help make it the success it is.

The big variety show will be here April 26th at the High School auditorium, two hours of unusual entertainment with every cent of proceeds for the Crippled Children's Camp.

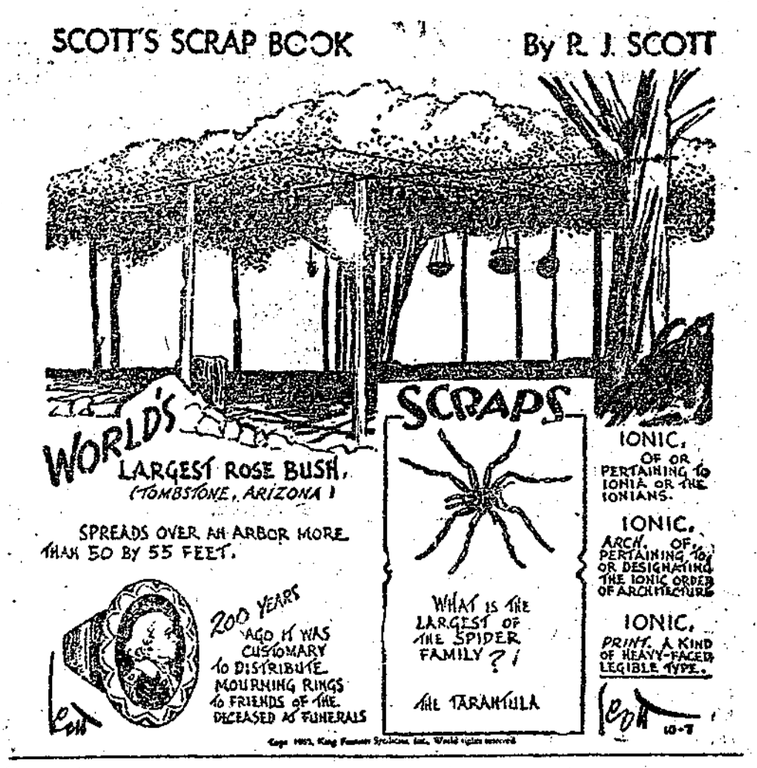
New booklet about Canada

A completely new edition of the Canadian Government Travel bureau's principal publication, "Canada — Vacations Unlimited" has been produced to further promotion of travel to Canada from other countries. The 50-page, four-color booklet describes Canada's travel attractions in pictures and text.

The booklet's various sections deal with the seasons, highways, sport fishing, beaches, special events, out-of-doors enjoyment, historic places, holidays afloat, the National Parks, the ten provinces and Canada's northland, shopping facilities and travel information sources. A new map and mileage guide are included.

The booklet's format differs from that of its predecessor in that fewer but larger pictures appear and considerably more space is devoted to color illustrations than to editorial matter.

As has been the practice for a number of years, "Canada — Vacations Unlimited" is intended for distribution outside of Canada, with the primary objective of attracting tourists from other countries.



Women can win bonds

A new program designed to reward achievements by women in the field of traffic safety is announced by the Canadian Highway Safety Conference, Ottawa.

Canada Savings Bonds totalling $1,750 will be awarded the three women's organizations judged to have developed and directed the most efficient traffic safety programs during the previous year. The board of judges will be composed of prominent Canadian women.

These awards will be administered through a grant of Shell Oil Company of Canada, Limited, and will be known as the Carol Lane awards. Miss Lane is women's travel director for Shell.

The awards will be presented each year starting in 1958, at the annual spring meeting of the Canadian Highway Safety Conference with a representative of each of the winning organizations attending as a guest of Shell.

Weddings

PINCHIN - BAKER

Miss Margaret (Betty) Baker niece of Mr. and Mrs. T. Ayton of Porpoise Bay was married March 30 to Edwin Barry Pinchin, in Vancouver. The bride is well known on the peninsula which she has visited for many years.

Rev. McInnes performed the ceremony at the United Church, Vancouver Heights, North Burnaby. The petite blonde bride wore a satin, nylon and lace bouffant dress with the Queen Anne sleeve. The headdress held a long train veil in place. She carried red roses mixed with lily-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaids, sisters of the groom, were Donna and Mabel Pinchin. Maid of honour, Miss M. Gaddy is a close friend of the bride. The little flower girl, Heather Pinchin, wore a long yellow dress and carried blue carnations. The bridesmaids and maid of honour were very spring-like in pastels, and carried dainty nosegays.

Best man attending the groom was Robert Pinchin. An uncle of the groom, who has sung with the Theatre Under the Stars group, Victor Pinchin, sang "O Promise Me."

Mother of the groom was most attractive in peacock blue with white, and a lovely corsage.

The young couple are sailing on the liner Orion, to San Francisco, Los Angeles and way points for three weeks. For the trip the bride chose a beautiful navy suit, set off by a dainty feather hat.

If you handle your organization's publicity please send it in promptly to assure early publication.

Multiple listing plan is favored

Directors of the B.C. Association of Real Estate Boards voted strongly in favor of a Multiple Listing Service to encompass all B.C. communities at their annual meeting in Vancouver.

Most affected by the service would be auto courts, resorts, hotels and similar businesses, as well as homes offered for exchange between communities. It would operate under the auspices of the Association.

The matter was referred to the Association's new directors

Retiring president of the association, A.H. Read of Capital City Realty, Victoria, reported on the past year's activities, terming them thoroughly successful.

New officers elected by the association were Herbert R. Fullerton of Vancouer, president; M.G. Klinkhammer of Cranbrook, first vicepresident and M.G. Zorkin of Nanaimo, second vice-president.

When frying eggs, shake a drop of pure garlic juice on each yolk as the eggs begin to simmer.

While cooking corn-on-the-cob or other vegetables, a few drops of pure garlic juice added to the water will impart a uniquely different, yet pleasing, taste.

BY MRS. M. NEWMAN

Some 40 members of the Order of the Eastern Star met at the Wilson Creek Hall, March 22 to honor their retiring worthy matron, Mrs. Molly McColl

Heading the committee in charge of arrangements was Mrs. V. Franski, who had a delightful program of games, music and dancing planned.

Following supper, Mrs. McColl was presented with a gift, with James Wardil, worthy patron, acting on behalf of the members. This was followed by the reading of a poem written especially for Mrs. McColl.

Close to $400,000,000 was spent on advertising in Canada during 1954, according to official figures. This is almost four times as large as the total in 1944.

IN THE

Legislature

BY TONY GARGRAVE, MLA

Many affairs of interest to the labor movement have been discussed at this session. The Workmen's Compensation board, for the first time in many years, has come under direct attack from many sides of the House. Rae Eddie (CCF New Westminster) has called for the resignation of the chairman, Mr. E. Eades.

The main criticism was that the board was placing a strictly legal interpretation on many sections of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Eddie felt that a worker who was injured on the job during the ordinary course of his duties should be protected by workmen's compensation.

The New Westminster member was referring to interpretation of the word "accident." He said, "Workmen who receive muscle and back injuries while carrying heavy objects have to lie to be covered by the act." He said that trade union officials were advising these men to say that they had "slipped" in order to make a valid claim. He said that this was not good law and that workers are entitled to be covered for such injuries without making misstatements

Robert Sommers (S.C., Rossland-Trail) also criticised the board and felt there should be some kind of appeal from the board's decision. Members from the mining areas such as Ran Harding (CCF, Kaslo-Slocan), Leo Nimsick (CCF, Cranbrook), and Tom Uphill (Ind-Labour, Fernie) have also criticised the board, especially on silicosis.

It appears that a workman must be able to prove conclusively that he is disabled from silicosis and no other lung condition. When tuberculosis is present in the lung over and above the silicosis, it makes medical diagnosis difficult and quite often the sick workman is denied coverage.

Mr. George Gregory (Lib., Victoria) has also criticised the board concerning recommendations of a specialist in the appeal section of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Gregory was referrng to the board's handling of the Jack Zucco case, in which a 45 year old miner was refused coverage though he claimed he was disabled wholly from silicosis.

Mr. Gregory attacked the government for failing to issue a petition of right allowing Mr. Zucco to sue the W.C.B. "The obvious duty of the cabinet is to introduce this petition with those famous words — 'Let right be done,'" said Gregory.

It must be remembered that when the Workmen's Compensation Act was made law, the worker agreed to give up his right to sue his employer in return for the coverage given him under the Act, and therefore workman's compensation coverage is a right and not a privilege.

This is my last column from Victoria. I will be looking forward to seeing many of my constituents on my annual visit around the riding next month.

Polio symptoms

Discovery No. 6 was Canada's contribution to the formation of an Anti-Polio Vaccine. Workers in Toronto discovered that a medium that they had been working with in other experiments would grow polio virus. This medium is prepared from various chemicals and does not contain any organic materials such as horse serum to which so many people develop reactions. This medium is added to the monkey kidney for nourishment and greatly increases the amount of virus that can be produced by the kidney tissue.

With discovery No. 7 we come to Dr. Jonas Salk's specific role in the development of the vaccine that bears his name. The anti-polio vaccine had to be rendered inactive as far as its ability to cause disease and yet at the same time not to destroy its immunity producing ability. The process of treating this vaccine with formalin to achieve this result was evolved by Dr. Salk. Dr. Salk was also the driving force in organizing the large scale trial carried out in 1954 with the support of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

It has become increasingly evident from studies of how Poliomyelitis attacks the body that inoculation by Salk-type vaccine is the obvious method of producing antibodies to poliomyelitis in the human. It is only by mass inoculation of the public against polio will we stamp out this dread disease as has been nearly done in the same manner for Dyphtheria and Smallpox.

In an evaluation of the effects of the anti-polio vaccine, Dr. Salk has stated that reduction in incidence of the disease in children vaccinated was approximately 80%. The vaccine proved absolutely safe and there were very few reactions attributable to the injection. In British Columbia, there has been no case of polio occurring in an individual who has been vaccinated with the Salk vaccine.

The thinking now on the administration of the vaccine is that the first dose sensitizes the body to the vaccine's immunity producing properties, the second dose given within seven months of the first produces the immunity to polio and a third dose within seven months of the second injection reinforces that immunity. It is recommended that a booster dose be given within three to five years of the series of original inoculations.

The medical men are still experimenting with this vaccine and feel that the future looks full of promise toward eradication of poliomyelitis.

HISTORICAL and OTHERWISE

By ROBERT BURNS

(Article 12)

The first mail service was probably a casual affair. mail being carried more or less as a courtesy by tow-boats. etc.. and dropped off as convenient. With the inauguration of regular boat service, of sorts, a more os less regular mail service came into being.

I think Mr. Gibson was the first postmaster. At any rate, he was the postmaster when we came here in 1900. Later others took over the work; for some years, however, the post-office was merely a corner of a general store. Some time about 1920 a rural mail service was opened, a great convenience to people living at distances from the wharf. About 1938 the postal business had attained proportions that it was moved "out of the store" into a building erected for the purpose.. About 1950 this building was replaced by one much larger and better designed to handle the steadily increasing traffic.

Some time about 1920 the Federal Government added this district to their rural telephone system; possibly it was earlier than that.. This service was carried on, with some improvements and extensions from time to time, until about 1953, when the service was turned over to the British Columbia Telephone Co.

The first lighting was of course by oil lamps. or in some cases in the real early days. candles. Cooking and heating was by wood fuel, of which there was plenty right at hand for the cutting. Power, except for one or two rather inefficient overshot water wheels, was by steam engine, with later installations of gasoline and deisel engines.

About 1938 the Columbia Power Co. came into the district and installed a deisel-electric plant near Sechelt, with transmission lines to Gibsons, and some few branches. Some connections for service were made, though not a great many domestic users. Rates were fairly high. power was subject to frequent outages, and fluctuations in voltage resulted in many burned out motors.

In 1945 the Columbia Power was taken over by the B.C. Power Commission, a government board. which replaced the deisel plant with one of much greater capacity, and built a hydro-electric plant at the head of Salmon Arm, at Clowhom falls. They also rebuilt the transmission lines, adding a number of branch lines. A transmission line was built through the Sechelt peninsula to supply power to the Pender Harbour area, and way points.

In 1956 these installations and services were turned over to the B.C. Electric Co., who were to place a transmission line to carry power from hydro plants in the Squamish River water-shed to the Powell River area, crossing over Jervis Inlet being effected by way of Nelson Island and two over - head suspensions, one quite long, I have heard one of the longest in the world.

Both instances of the advent of privately owned utilities was accompanied by an increasse in rates charged. Certainly true in the case of telephone service, and I believe true, in total, as regards electric power. In the latter case the domestic service rates are in most, but not all, cases reduced, sometimes by a considerable percentage. But the heavier users of electricity had their rates very drastically increased. I think, though I have not suffciently reliable information to form a final opinion, that the net result is that the district is paying considerably more for a like number of kilowatts consumed..

Meanwhile, the residents had been growing older, and they and sometimes the young came to the end of the trail. There was no established burial ground, and the interment was done wherever was best possible. As a kid roaming the country I knew of quite a number of these more or less casual burial places, and I think even yet I could find the approximate locaton of some. There is nothing whatever to indicate the places, mostly the woods have taken over. A group led by the Farmers' Institute decided this was not good enough, and something should be done.

Mr. Gibson had made provision for burial ground, limited, I understand, to members and descendants of that family; there was no other ground reserved, land cost money, and money was scarce. A further consideration was the knowledge that just any type of soil and sub-soil would not necessarily be suitable to the purpose.

The Farmers' Institute took the matter in hand, along with Mr. W.W. Winn, who had acquired a business here about 1913, and was destined to play a most active part in much of the future progress. A committee appointed for the purpose located several possible sites that seemed suitable, and in 1916. or thereabouts, the Institute members examined the choices. With, I am informed, one dissenting vote they selected a site, and after long negotiations the land was acquired, and a part of it divided into plots, and fenced.

During succeeding years there were quite a number of burials there, about 100 all told, and these burials are representative of a large number of the actual pioneer families of the district.

Later a group formed and opened another cemetary, the Seaview cemetery. which is much easier of access.
The road to the old cemetery was never developed beyond almost a "trail" stage. During more recent years the great majority of burials have been in the Seaview cemetery.

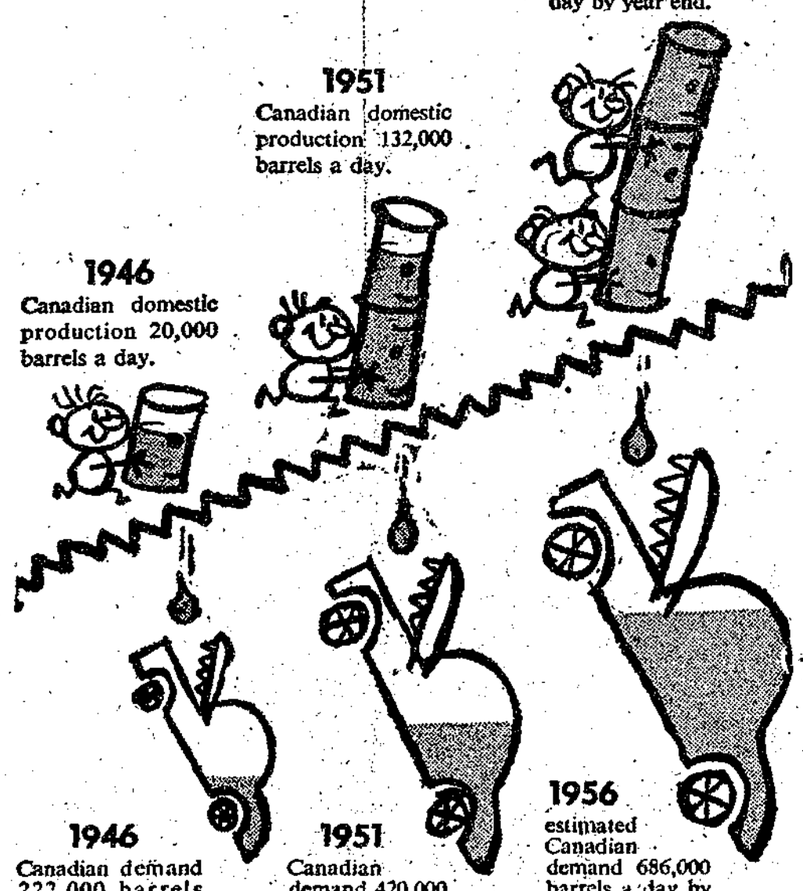
Oil Production and Demand
Ten Years Since Leduc



Canada's demand for oil has risen rapidly in the 10 years since the discovery of oil at Leduc, but Canadian oil production has risen even faster. In 1946, Canada was producing less than 10 percent of her total oil needs; in 1951, about 31 percent; and by the beginning of this year, nearly 70 percent.

Pender Hbr. Credit Union reports excellent year

BY STAN BOWDLER

The tenth annual meeting of Pender Harbour Credit Union attracted a good turnout in spite of a rainy evening and competing TV.

Despite the setback suffered this winter when the Credit Union office was burglarized and a 400 pound safe containing many of the records removed, the organization reports were complete and showed a favorable position from every standpoint.

A steady growth in memberships and savings was reported, with total assets amounting to over $88.000. The year was also noteworthy insofar as, despite increasing cost of operation the Credit Union's low interest rates were maintained.

A recommendation that a dividend of 3% be declared on shares, was passed by the meeting.

President Jim Cameron called for reports from committee heads John Daly and Len Larson and their reports were unanimously endorsed.

Following the report of the Board of Directors read by Jim Cameron and the treasurer's report by J. Tyner, John Daly moved that the incoming board of directors compensate the treasurer, Mr. Tyner, for the long and arduous job of reconstructing the accounts upset by the robbery. This motion carried unanimously.

Before proceeding with the election of officers, President Cameron paid tribute to Harry Reiter and the fine work and hours of time he had devoted to the advancement of the Credit Union movement and expressed the regrets of all concerned that Mr. Reiter was leaving to open his own business in Vancouver.

The election of officers followed with Jim Tyner being reelected to the board of directors and Lars Olsen, elected; credit committee, Dave Gregerson for a two year term and Ron Pockrant, three year term; supervisory committee: Alex Gray re-elected.

The business portion of the meeting was concluded by a talk by Milton Culbert, chief inspector of credit unions in B.C. Mr. Culbert congratulated the members upon the fine showing for the year.

Entertainment preceding the meeting was enjoyed by all. A sound and color film on B.C.'s forest resources prepared by MacMillan, Bloedel Limited, and a U.S. government film on Halibut fishing in Alaskan waters were shown. Refreshments, provided by the wives of members, were plentiful, varied and delicious.
