Howe Sound mill strike, working the bugs in

Effluent-eating bacteria faced with starvation

by Stuart Burnside

The ongoing strike at Howe Sound Pulp and Paper (HSPP) has, among other things, caused a new ripple in mill effluent ponds.

Halting pulp and paper production has staunched the flow of effluent from the mill and, consequently, is threatening to starve millions of effluent devouring micro-organisms that are part of the facility's pollution treatment system.

Ron Wilson, technical services manager for HSPP, said the micro- organisms, affectionately known as 'bugs', are pivotal to the mill's operation and if they starve to death during the strike, it could take as long as a month to rebuild the population once the strike ends.

Wilson said a viable substitute for the bug diet of mill waste is molasses. A full tanker truck of the stuff every five days would keep the bugs alive "indefinitely."

Feeding molasses to micro-organisms might not be as easy as it would seem, as there are two hurdles that need to be leapt before the bugs can eat.

First, other striking mills also use bug-based pollution treatment systems, which means they also require bug food, and a resulting run on sugar producers has left BC strapped for molasses.

"We finally found a source of molasses in Alberta," HSPP spokesman Jim Foglietta said.

The second problem with feeding the bugs is getting the molasses across the picket lines.

Approval from the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU local 1119) is necessary and the CPU finds the idea a sticky point.

"I'd rather not comment on that situation," CPU local 119 president Terry Duffy said when asked about allowing molasses across the line, "except to say that whatever happens to the bugs won't harm the environment."

Foglietta indicated the situation was getting serious for the bugs. The mill has been using up all remaining effluent from its various on- site facilities to keep the micro-organisms alive, but that supply is expected to dry up in the next few days.

"The tanker is en route (from Alberta)," Foglietta said, "but whether it will do us any good has yet to be seen."

College transfer program reprieved

by Nancy Moote

Capilano College will go ahead with its first-year university transfer program at the Sechelt campus in 1992/93, even though the funding for the program is still up in the air.

John Waters, dean of academic studies, said the college is assured of $150,000 funding, and expects the further $90,000 needed will be forthcoming soon. However, the college did not want to delay announcing the program any longer because high school students graduating this week need to know the program is available in order to make plans for next year.

If the expected funding falls through, he said, "we would have to adjust in the spring," but the program will go ahead.

College officials visited Elphinstone and Chatelech secondary schools on Wednesday to announce the program, which will fulfill the first-year university requirements for a bachelor of arts or bachelor of education degree. The courses offered will also give students a start on a degree in social work, law, or business administration.

The fall program offers a course on time management and study skills called "strategies for student success," plus six introductory first-year courses: English composition, French, psychology, philosophy, economics, and environmental biology.

In the spring semester the college plans to offer a continuation of the fall program: contemporary literature, more advanced courses in French and psychology, Canadian economics, pre-confederation Canadian history, and human biology.

Two math courses - precalculus and calculus - can be taken by video.

Bob Sherrin, who taught the first-year English course at the college this spring, sees the program as a first step towards university and a job for Coast students. "The great advantage is that you don't have to leave where you live to get an education," he said.

Council debates Smitty barge operation

by Charles Hart

The thorny question of maintaining a 'working' harbour in Gibsons, and defining exactly what that term means, surfaced again at town hall Tuesday as council considered the merits of allowing Smitty's barge operation to continue operating in its existing location.

A definition for working harbour is being hammered out along with a review of the town's draft official community plan, now in the hands of consultants.

Having recently defeated a proposed expansion of Hill's Machine Shop, council wrestled Tuesday with a report about the Smitty's operation, which has worked from its current site in Shoal Channel since 1981 as a non-conforming use in a body of water zoned for public recreation.

A deciding vote by Mayor Eric Small finally approved a recommendation by staff to delay a zoning decision for two months while alternative sites for the business are investigated.

Alderman Ted Hume and John McNevin were opposed to the delay. "Smitty's is not that odious a problem," McNevin said. "I don't think it should be taken out and moved somewhere else."

Hume agreed, saying he did not believe that creating a spot zone for marine use would open up that section of the harbour to further commercial development.

However, aldermen Walter Bradshaw and Ed Steeves favoured negotiating with the applicant for an alternative location, forcing the mayor to cast a deciding vote.

"I think we require that additional information," the mayor said. "Having said that, I'm very much in favour of a working harbour and maintaining this business."

Bob MacKenzie, a Skyline Drive resident whose property overlooks the barge mooring, said he and other neighbors believe the business should locate elsewhere.

"We're not trying to put Harry Smith out of business or chase him out of Gibsons harbour," said MacKenzie. "But I can't see extending a zone just to accommodate an M-1 use ... We want to see it in the inner harbour where it's supposed to be."

Sechelt settles dispute with civic employees

A threatened strike by District of Sechelt employees has been averted.

Contract negotiations between the BC Government Employees' Union (BCGEU) and the District of Sechelt resulted in an agreement being ratified by union members last Tuesday.

Sechelt administrator Art Lew said council had also agreed to the contract and empowered him to sign on its behalf.

"All that needs to be done now is to have it approved by Victoria," Lew said.

Sechelt employees voted to strike over a month ago after talks with the district broke down following claims of intransigence from both sides.

It is the first union contract agreement for the employees, who joined the BCGEU less than a year ago after a brief stint as an employee association.

"I'm extremely please with the contract," said employee representative Judy Steele. "Things went much smoother after we resumed negotiations, and for a first time agreement, it's very good." She said the new contract was accepted by a 76 per cent vote (about 23 of the District's 30 employees).

The contract is to run for three years, until 1992, when it will have to be renegotiated.

Steele said she was optimistic the next contract would be easier to negotiate.

Heritage society seeks to save Irvine's Landing hall

Historic building threatened by vandalism, neglect

by Nancy Moote

The Irvine's Landing Community Hall, a former one-room schoolhouse across from Hotel Lake, isn't much to look at these days with its peeling paint and boarded windows. But if you spend a few minutes talking with Clara Lee, who taught grades at there in 1935 and 1936, or with her husband Frank, who helped clear the land when the school was built around 1932, the building comes alive.

> The project could pay for itself
> -Phil Makow

Clara recalls teaching children by the daylight coming in the windows and ringing a hand bell to call them in from recess in the days before electricity was installed. In the cloakroom the children washed using a pail of water and a wash basin, and in the middle of the schoolroom stood a big drum stove, stoked with wood every few hours by the older children.

"There was a lot of life on the Coast then that there isn't now," she said; Irvine's Landing was home to the herring girls' bunkhouse as well as the elegant Irvine's Landing Hotel, a popular steamboat stop torn down in the 1940s.

Frank, who grew up in Irvine's Landing, said people on the north side of Pender Harbour had to row to school at Donely's Landing during the 1920s, so Frank's mother made sure he learned how to swim before she let him start school.

When the new school was to be built, there was an argument over whether it should be in Irvine's Landing or Garden Bay; finally residents compromised and chose the site below Pender Hill at the corner of Hotel Lake Road and Irvine's Landing Road.

Phil Makow of the Sunshine Coast Heritage Society says it's the rich history of the area that his society wants to preserve, as much as the humble school building itself.

"It's so precious," he said of the stories older residents can tell about the buildings on the Coast. "They're just hollow structures without that history behind them."

Irvine's Landing Community Hall

He hopes to buy the building from the school district, who still own the property, and restore it as a schoolhouse museum.

The hall could then be a focal point for the heritage society, Makow said, as well as a community meeting place. "It's a place that could be used very socially," he said.

Since the grounds include some beautiful apple trees and dogwoods, Makow said, "it would be nice to draw people in who are interested in gardening."

There is also room on the grounds for bringing in smaller buildings, such as old boat sheds or a typical small cottage. Presently, he said, old buildings such as the log house jail which used to sit in front of the Wakefield Inn are often torn down and lost forever.

As a restored historical site, the project could pay for itself, Makow said. "It wouldn't have to rely just on charity. We could create something where people would pay admission."

The building is sound, but vandals have broken light fixtures and tried to light fires inside.

"It seemed like it would be at the mercy of kids wandering around," Makow said, so he asked the school district to board the windows and lock the hall while its future is decided.

The school district is considering the heritage society's request to buy the hall, but the regional government, who have been considering the site for a park, may have a prior claim.

Hush-hush teachers negotiations begin

by Nancy Moote

Contract talks have begun between the school district and the Sunshine Coast Teachers Association, but neither side will say just what they're talking about.

The teachers and administrators have agreed not to comment on the talks until negotiations are concluded, said school district Secretary-Treasurer Tim Anderson, but he would not speculate on when that conclusion might be expected.

The two sides met June 15 to present their bargaining positions, in what Anderson described as "quite a cordial meeting." The next meeting will be on June 25.

Sharon Woods, president of the teachers association, kept an equally rigorous silence. A month ago, however, she identified the major bargaining issues as class sizes and integration of special needs children into the classroom.

Scarce funds and a booming student population are likely to make an agreement difficult.

The school district will get three per cent more money from the provincial government next year, for a total of $21.7 million dollars. However, enrollment is increasing so fast that the funding per student is going up by less than one per cent, or $36 per student.

The school district will have fewer staff next year: two positions at the board office will be eliminated by program director Colleen Elson's retirement, two and a half maintenance positions will be chopped, and two support staff in continuing education will go.

Saving buildings society goal

The Sunshine Coast Heritage Society grew out of a group which formed two years ago to save a homesteader's log cabin which was going to be burned at Wilson Creek. The dismantled logs are presently in storage, and the group is rebuilding the cabin on the property of the wildlife rehabilitation centre in Halfmoon Bay, where it will serve as an office and eventually as an interpretation centre if the zoning of the site can be changed.

Makow said there are many other unique structures in the region "just asking to be done," such as the forest fire lookout on top of Mount Hallowell in the Caren range, but he's concerned about the time it takes to acquire and then restore them. "There's a list of buildings on the Sunshine Coast that are at a point that if something's not done with them, they will just disappear," he said.

Interested volunteers can contact Phil Makow at 885-3835.

Sechelt urged to buy beach property for park

by Jane Seyd

A group of Sechelt residents concerned about development plans to build a 96-unit condominium complex on the Sechelt waterfront have asked council to consider buying the land for a public park. But council members told the group that scenario is unlikely.

Appearing before the council on Wednesday night, Pat Chamberlin, Marg Gooding and Nancy Baker said they were "deeply disturbed" about the prospect of the Beachcomber development, and urged council to look seriously at buying the property.

The land slated for development is one of the last blocks of unspoiled public waterfront, said Gooding. "We urge you to think of future generations and to consider how pitifully small are our few remaining public spaces."

According to Chamberlin, a 1989 parks study shows Sechelt is low in public parkland per capita in comparison to other municipalities. "Green space encourages a quality of life," she said.

By Wednesday night, the group had also collected close to 500 signatures from Sechelt residents supporting Sechelt purchasing the property.

But Sechelt mayor Nancy MacLarty said the matter was out of council's hands.

"This is privately owned land," said MacLarty, "...and the owners have the right within our bylaws to do with it what they want to do with it."

MacLarty noted a legal offer on the property has already been made by the Beachcomber developers. And if that falls through by the expiry date of June 30, another offer for "even more money" is waiting in line, she told the group. She added that the cost of the property would be prohibitive.

"We're talking close to $2 million," said MacLarty. "I don't know where the district would get that kind of money."

Councillor Bob Wilson added that Sechelt had not been "unconscious" of creating public parks and green spaces.

Chamberlin said the group would present a completed petition and further research on the issue to council in two weeks time.

Council scuttles new pavilion lighting booth

by Jane Seyd

Betty Keller, founder and organizer of the Festival of the Written Arts, may have just won a national award for her efforts at cultural promotion, but some Sechelt council members didn't display the federal government's enthusiasm for accommodating events at Rockwood pavilion when they turned down a request from Keller this Wednesday to relocate the "power room", from which the stage lights are run.

Keller had asked to relocate the power room from its current location in the corner of the pavilion to a lean-to just outside the same building. The new room would be 20 feet long and six feet wide, and would allow for operation of both stage lights and sound equipment.

In a letter to council, Keller said the new arrangement would allow for an additional 21 audience seats in the space now taken up by the sound equipment, and improve access to the fire exits. It would also allow for installation of the Festival's new lighting control system, said Keller, which is needed to properly put on shows like the upcoming "Anne of Green Gables".

In her letter, Keller asked council for "early approval" of the plans, so work on the new room could begin in time for the opening of the play.

But a slim majority of councillors voted down the plan, after objecting to manner in which in was presented.

"The Festival of the Written Arts waits for the 11th hour to do anything," said councillor Bob Wilson. "It puts this council in the position that if we vote against it, we're voting against motherhood."

Following the decision, Keller said she was "extremely disappointed" with council's reaction. "We feel what the festival is bringing to Sechelt is of value and we hope for their support," she said.

gibsons council notes

Council began the process of tightening the town's burning regulations, adopting recommendations from administrator Dan Legg to prohibit burning of construction waste, give the fire department the authority to charge persons who don't obtain a permit or allow fires to burn out of control, and to prohibit open garden waste fires and restrict times when such fires would be permitted.

Secondly, the town would ask the public utilities commission of the SCRD to look for a long-term solution for the disposal of land clearing waste from urbanized areas.

Money matters

The Town of Gibsons will throw open its doors and its financial statements in a public open house scheduled July 14 from noon to 7:30 pm. However, there will be no opportunity to make changes to the budget or the town's financial commitments - the tax notices will have already been mailed out.

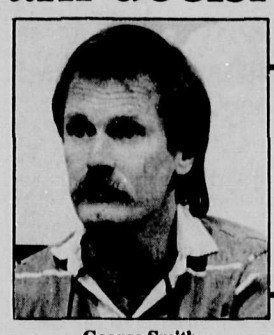
The meeting will provide an opportunity to find out and comment on how taxpayers' money is being managed and spent.

National park decision hailed as 'victory'

by Jane Seyd

Local environmentalists were claiming victory with others across the country last week following what was described as a landmark fedral ruling on an environmental issue handed down June 15.

The lawsuit, filed Jan. 31 against the federal government and the Minister of Environment by the Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society concerned logging in Wood Buffalo National Park, located in Northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories. In the suit, the society said the lease allowing Canadian Forest Products to log in the park was a breach of public trust given to the government to manage national parks and was in violation of the National Parks Act which states the parks shall be left "unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations."



George Smith

'The underlying principles are very important'
-George Smith.

In its decision, the court agreed with that point of view, saying both CanFor's 1983 logging lease, and the 1983 cabinet order which authorized the logging is invalid.

The decision is seen as highly influential, because the case was the first challenge to logging or other industrial developments in a national park.

Local environmentalist George Smith, who is executive director of conservation for the society, said the decision is welcome news for all groups fighting for preservation of wilderness areas.

"The underlying principles are very important," said Smith. "Behind that decision is no more logging in national parks, period, because there's been a precedent set."

Smith said not many people know that logging and other resource extraction industries like mining have been allowed to date in Canada's national parks. The ruling may have implications for the two national parks in BC: Pacific Rim on the west coast of Vancouver Island and Haida Gwaii on South Moresby.

While the ruling will have no direct effect on the Tetrahedron, Caren Range and other areas on the Sunshine Coast, said Smith, it may eventually have implications for what is permitted in provincial parks.

"It won't have an immediate effect," said Smith, "but it will put the writing on the wall."

Pill theft nets one-day jail term

by Nancy Moote

A 45-year-old Sechelt man is facing one day in jail after he admitted stealing Demerol pills from a paraplegic friend, but denied that he regularly bought the prescription painkillers from the same friend and sold them at the Lighthouse Pub in Sechelt.

Robert Campbell pleaded guilty to unlawfully trafficking in a narcotic and possession of stolen property after an incident on April 19, 1991 when Campbell stole some Demerol pills from the Wharf Street home of James Davidson, who took the prescription pills for chronic pain. Campbell, who used to live in the house with Davidson, had been doing his laundry there with Davidson's permission.

Later that night, Campbell said, he gave several of the pills to another friend to pay off a debt of around $15. He then took the rest himself.

Davidson, who is awaiting a liver transplant, was brought from St. Mary's hospital to testify.

The two men gave conflicting testimony during the sentencing hearing, which concluded Monday. Campbell said he stole nine or ten pills, while Davidson said almost his entire week's supply of 70 pills was missing.

Davidson, who was earlier sentenced to three years probation for trafficking in relation to the same incident, said that from January to April 1991, he sold Campbell about 25 Demerol pills a week for $5 a pill.

Davidson said Campbell never took the Demerol himself. "He said he was going to sell them at the Lighthouse Pub," he told the court.

Davidson said he later stopped the arrangement because he felt guilty. "I knew it was wrong," he said. "It was greed."

Campbell denied any such arrangement, and suggested that Davidson made up the story because of a "little dispute over money I owe him" - $150 for Christmas presents.

Judge Shirley Giroday said the question was the degree of guilt, but "I lean more towards Mr. Campbell's version of events," she said. She sentenced Campbell to one day in jail, six months probation, and 20 hours of community service work.

The hard road of learning

The tragic death of a promising Gibsons' teenager in a car crash on Highway 101 last Sunday sent a wave of sadness through the community. The pain, grief and desolation of the victim's family and friends are tangible to all when such tragedies strike close to home.

And yet there is nothing new in the circumstances surrounding the untimely end of Eric Trudel's life: a story of youthful bravado, of perceived invincibility fueled by the false courage of alcohol and the thrill of speed.

There are countless such tales lingering in the pained memories of bereft families in small towns and cities across the land. We have read about them from a distance many times, and we have experienced the sense loss more profoundly when such loss occurs on our doorstep.

And yet the stories of carnage and woe continue because we humans have a way of growing inured to painful events, of persisting in the mistaken belief that catastrophes such as Trudel's happen only to somebody else.

It's a self-delusion so powerful that it seems inconceivable that the whole precarious balance of life can come crashing to finality in a matter of seconds.

It is a hard lesson which has a bitter poignancy at this time of year, when Grads are revelling in commencement ceremonies and preparing to take their first bold steps into the world beyond the school gates.

That first step has in the past too often led down death's road as the tragic consequences of drinking and driving are pounded home once more. Dry grad events and volunteer drivers offering transportation to and from wet grad parties have helped to reduce the carnage in recent years, but the pointless waste and suffering continues.

A moment's thought, the strength of conviction to intervene for a friend, maybe all it takes to save a life.

It's a lesson never too late for the learning.

At bat for the bugs

There are 'bugs' at Howe Sound pulp and Paper. Not listening devices designed to allow one side in the ongoing labour dispute to eavesdrop on the other, but microorganisms, living in mill effluent ponds, that devour the toxic waste produced through regular operations.

Now that pulp and paper production has been indefinitely postponed at HSPP, and effluent has stopped flowing, the bugs' are in danger of starving to death. It is possible to feed them (molasses) but it would mean allowing a tanker truck to cross picket lines once a week. And the CPU isn't interested.

Suddenly, with a stance that is all too high-handedly human, these beneficial bugs, these microscopic environmentalists, have been elevated by the CPU to bargaining chip status in the no-holds-barred world of labour strife negotiations.

And for what? To emphasize a point that is already made? The union's action may not only harm the bugs, but, if the bugs die, it will mean a possible additional month of shut down after the strike ends.

There is an effluent present in this scenario and the workers union is being stained by it. But it's a verbal effluent, and no organism in the world could be sustained by it.

Area A's rights being trampled

Jane Seyd's coverage of the second public hearing on the SCRD's Bylaw 337 in the Coast News on June 15 clearly illustrates both the amount of opposition to the bylaw in Area A and the fact that the SCRD has consistently refused to take the concerns of Area A seriously with respect to the future of their community.

Although residents were assured that no downzoning would take place, many feel that their property has indeed been downzoned as a result of the bylaw.

A real estate agent present at the public hearing confirmed what many people had suspected: some property values will be adversely affected by the new zoning bylaw.

Although the SCRD has insisted that the bylaw is necessary, that the current bylaw is legally indefensible.

(When challenged on this point, one of the planners present could only mutter that the SCRD was obliged to give a permit to a fish-processing plant because there was no clear position with which to refuse it. No other examples were given.)

That an Official Community Plan would take too long although people have been formally requesting such a plan since 1989 to my knowledge and possibly longer; these requests have been ignored. Many people feel that Bylaw 337 does not adequately address the central issues facing Area A.

The fact that the SCRD is insisting on the necessity of passing the bylaw as quickly as possible and against the wishes of a significant number of residents whose lives and livelihoods will be affected by it seems not only irresponsible, but patronizing as well.

A preliminary lakes study, which is obviously of vital importance to the future of Area A, comes to a public meeting in July.

By that time the SCRD will almost certainly have given third and final reading to the bylaw, an example of the lack of foresight and concern that has characterized this bylaw process from its inception.

The fact that Area A continues to be represented on the regional board by an unelected alternate director while Gordon Wilson hides out from the consequences of his bad judgment only adds insult to injury.

I urge concerned residents of Area A to write directly to Robin Blencoe, Minister of Municipal Affairs, Room 305, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, BC V8V 1X4.

Assault sentences too lenient

Re: Suspended sentence for spousal assault, Coast News, June 15

A man who gashes his wife's jaw with a dinner plate gets a similar sentence to that of a teenage girl who damages a wall or a teenage boy who vandalizes.

Imagine for a moment that I am a teenage boy who has read these recent court decisions and have now read this current report. Here is what I have learned: Hitting my wife or girlfriend is no different, in the eyes of the law, than hitting an inanimate object.

My dad could kick my mom repeatedly in the face. I could call the police but my dad might not be charged with assault.

"Drinking" and "financial pressure" are excuses for assaulting another person.

If my wife or girlfriend dares to argue with me, she is provoking me. Therefore, she would "deserve" the assault.

My dad can beat up my mom many times but as long as she "reconciles" with him, the relationship will be "somewhat back on track" and everything will be okay.

Judge Giroday has now said several times that she takes a serious view of assaults on women; yet, her actions do not match her words. I guess judges can do that. In fact, lots of adults say one thing and do something else.

If I beat my wife or girlfriend up, as long as I can get her to believe I am sorry and say so in court, I won't go to jail.

If I beat up my wife or girlfiend or if my dad beats up my mom, it's really not very serious after all.

Those women from Transition House who came to talk to our class this year must have been mistaken when they told us: Assault is a serious crime.

No one "deserves" to be assaulted. If you have been assaulted, call the police. Assault is not part of a loving relationship between people.

Some reluctant confessions of a longtime Trekkie

It was 1966 when the virus first hit me. I believe I was in the beer parlour of the Fernie Hotel in the Crowsnest town of that name the first time that Captain Kirk, Mr. Spock, Dr. McCoy, Chief Engineer Scott et al first floated into my consciousness.

Through the beer fumes and the laughter, there was much laughter in that time and place in my life, I became aware that something was happening on the screen of the bar's television set the like of which I had not known before.

In very short order during that first series, I was enough a fan to make sure that I was safely and quietly home when Star Trek came on to watch the daring doings of the crew of the Starship Enterprise without interruption.

I suppose, looking back over more than 25 years, there was something decent and hopeful being presented in the guise of entertainment. And it was a time sadly in need of it.

Whatever else the sixties were, or were to become, there was for many a great underlying pessimism. The end of innocence for many had come with the assassination a few years earlier of the most impressive President of the United States that any of us had ever known.

After the brutal assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy in Dallas, the nightmare drift into the tragic adventure in Vietnam was well and truly underway, and by the time Gene Roddenberry's science fiction was being aired the world's most powerful nation and leading democracy had assassinated the most popular President in recent memory and was mired deeply in tragic and brutal military adventurings.

Then onto the screens of North America and the world for the first time came the crew of the Enterprise. Theirs was a world of the future where most of the desperate failings and shortcomings of man had been overcome. It was a bath of liberal optimism and though it was but escapist entertainment it generated a loyalty which has outlasted the much publicized and celebrated Hippie years which were just about to burst upon us.

It's easy now to see the machinery behind the success. Canada's own William Shatner, no mean Shakespearean actor, became Captain Everyman, the hero of heroes, his valour well couched in humanitarian and democratic virtues. Leonard Nimoy, the pointy-eared Vulcan was everybody's favourite second-in-command and the irascible Irish ship's doctor Doctor McCoy and the stalwart Scottish engineer with the deplorable accent, Scottie to one and all, rounded out the stellar cast of carefully variegated heroes.

Less the liberal point be lost, there were stalwarts of colour, black and yellow, and we were given to understand that this ship was symptomatic of an earth on which man had learned to love his fellow man, woman her sister woman, and each in absolute egalitarianism the other.

The outstanding success of the show could not have been foreseen nor, indeed, was it properly understood at the time. The nabobs of programming cancelled the series after just three short seasons.

A quarter of a century later after a million reruns and six full length feature movies, the faithful collect at Trekkie conventions all over North America and Shatner and Nimoy have given up being persuasively anything other than Kirk and Spock for the rest of their acting lives.

I am and always have been staunchly anti-cult, whatever the cult. No doubt I lack the fervour and fidelity of the more devoted followers, went to no conventions, hung no posters, bought no memorabilia.

Yet I was faithful, in my fashion. I went to see all the feature movies and looked in with pleasure and approval on many reruns.

I was especially staunch in my loyalty when I became aware a few years ago that there was something called Star Trek, the Next Generation being aired. With haughty contempt I refused to contemplate this offshoot; with disdain I learned of the existence of Captain Jean Luc Picard and Commander Reicher; the android Mr. Data seemed a poor substitute for the Vulcan Spock. I was loyal to my original heroes.

All that has changed. I'm watching the new generation of enterprising heroes with more fidelity than I ever watched the old. It is possible to see two episodes a day, six days a week and most days when I am home there is nothing on the available cables that I am drawn to more than this new generation of galactic wanderers.

The popularity is astonishing and I suspect the root is the same. We see an image of mankind in action in the future which is more hopeful and comforting than most of us can imagine.

Just the thought that our species will boldly go into the future with intelligence and compassion is a comforting illusion, is it not?

Put a little adventure into your life

in a nutshell

Back at the start of the modern age (don't ask me) there was a whole chorus of moans going up about how flat and essentially uninteresting it was all going to be. Society as a whole, top to bottom, was to be levelled. The lowest common denominator would prevail. A kind of universal domestication of everything was what we were in for. Eliot wrote The Waste Land.

The inevitability of all this was seen, or in fact felt, due to the reality of the fact that an excessive amount of artificiality had come into the society and of course, the idea of the time that it was possible to develop a new kind of Man (and/or, of course, Woman) who would put the concerns of some society-as-a-whole first.

Looking at this some 50 years later it is clear first that the Russian push, involving so many deaths and so many individual sacrifices, to develop a Soviet Man, has made scarcely a crimp in the character of the people. This, probably, ought to tell us something, but it will take a while I guess for it to trickle down. Meanwhile, here we are chaps, with massive domestication and little end in view.

In the schools boredom is often cited as a continuing bedevilment to it all. Boredom, for heaven's sake, at age about nine, I am not a particularly religious type, but to bore people at that age I would take to be some sort of sin. How in the holy old Dickens can they manage to bore them?

Four years ago, as noted in these pages, the then USSR convened an extraordinary convention. It was to review their school's curricula, heavy as it was then with current social studies. It had become clear that the women took quite happily to it, but the men were dropping out at increasingly early ages. My information was coming from the Moscow correspondent for the Manchester Guardian and I never heard any results from this key convention, which was par anyway for Russian information of this sort at that time.

In the UK they have changed the school's curriculum in part by Act of Parliament. In France there is a lot of talk going on and changes are being made. In the US of A the president almost made school's education his principle plank in the last election. Everyone is aware that this is perhaps our main concern, but down there they are saying that it is the teacher's association itself that is blocking changes in education.

Boredom is really a very tough word. Here we are with this one life each for his own and what are we doing, we are getting bored. God's sake, brothers and sisters, surely there is something we can do about this.

Little kids on the street here are the liveliest things about, and they speak a lively language. Later on they tend to fall silent. The likelihood is that if you are bored at age about nine you are likely to stay more or less bored for the rest of your tick. Something happens somewhere in here and this I would suppose is what we are after.

What kids are very good at is noting things that are phony. In the old way of education they were getting Latin and Geography and Ancient History and the language and there was nothing phony to be found anywhere unless you made it up.

It may be, as I believe, that our children are getting hit with quite heavy social stuff at a too early age. This kind of thing can sure as hell be boring, man.

My son dropped out at age 17. He wrote a film that the film board produced called No Reason To Stay. The Protestant School Board in Montreal, at which he was a student in their number one school, the jewel in their crown, did everything possible to stop this production, but it went on and the board hired Christopher as the youngest writer ever, to do additional dialogue.

What he was saying in the film was that if you stayed in the classes there was a point beyond which you weren't learning anything. This was as a remark as unpopular then as it is now, and now is 30 years later.

Are we going to carry on forever in this dumb way? Are we not ever, when we're young, going to realize how bright and amusing is our past?

We now have the reports from the Sullivan Commission and one hopes that there is a lot of thought going on. If one was a praying type one would be certainly praying for those fellows.

Alien, native plants standoff

Bev Shipley's Roberts Creek column of June 15 is about escaping alien plants with imperialistic style. She talks about Foxgloves and Mulleins - two imports. These are fine plants, but they are not native plants.

When the distinction is made between native and alien the predictable response is "They're all nature so what's the beef?" The beef is that we escaping, alien, imperialist humans never pay our respects to that which is native. We wipe out native plants, animals and humans wherever our exploring spirits carry us.

We see our managed alien additions as more beautiful; superior in every way. When we find something native that is useful to us we isolate it, focus on it, manage it and kill all "competing" native species.

Here in Roberts Creek our fights against pesticide use have been to protect us as humans. We haven't questioned our assumed right to destroy that which was established and functioning just fine before we came. Bev - why not pay attention to the fabulous stands of flowering Fireweed and Thimbleberry happening now. Or pay tribute to the Skunk Cabbage - floral emblem of the nation of Roberts Creek.

A constitution for politicians

John Burnside, in his Musings column, says and I quote: "When you think about it, the constitution of the United States has been an admirable document. In a remarkably short time, nearly 200 years ago a group of country gentlemen and farmers and Yankee traders in the original 13 colonies met, discussed and hammered out a workable document."

Herein lies the rub: A constitution by gentlemen and farmers and traders, for gentlemen and farmers and traders!

And here in Canada we are observing the spectacle of a constitution being concocted by politicians, for politicians, and the needs and aspirations of the citizens be damned!

This would be half as bad, if our politicians, and their parties, had any modicum of philosophy to guide them. But all their principles can be summed up in four words: get elected, stay elected! Is this not at the root of our politicians' inability to bring this matter to a long overdue conclusion?

Would anyone be surprised, when, after "success", they will reward themselves with an increase in their indemnity and/or pension benefits?

The efforts of the volunteers, combined with the generosity of the community, enabled us to increase our revenue by 17.9 per cent this year. To date, over $720,000 has been raised provincially.

The monies raised by the Kidney Foundation support local patient services, provide public education about kidney disease and support other programs such as organ donor awareness. In addition, the foundation funds 75 per cent of the current research into kidney disease and related disorders.

On behalf of those with kidney disease, thank you for your participation in, and support of, our March drive.

LE PAGE GLUE FACTORY

The LePage Glue Factory was a Gibsons Harbour landmark for many years. The building was built in about 1900 by a member of the LePage family. It was planned to manufacture glue from locally fished dogfish. The plant ran for only a short time and then stood empty. In 1923 the Corletts renovated the structure into an apartment block. The old glue factory disappeared from the waterfront in the early 70's.

Walk, bike on Journey for sight

The Lions Club is preparing for another Journey for Sight.

Registration will begin at Porpoise Bay Wharf at 9 am Saturday, July 4. This is a 10-kilometre walk or bike journey to Porpoise Bay Provincial Park entrance and back, finishing at Hackett Park.

It is an easy walk; last year two white cane club members and their guides completed the walk in just over two hours.

Check points will be set up along the walk, where entrants can have their registration cards signed by the marshals to verify how many kilometres have been completed.

We have a limited number of T-shirts or caps to be handed out to the entrants on a first come, first served basis.

Funds raised by entrants' pledges will go to the local White Cane Club, CNIB and Lions Sight First program. Pledge sheets are available at locations displaying the Lions Journey for Sight posters. This event is open to all ages. Take part in the Celebration Day events and help the Lions with their world-wide Sight First program.

george in gibsons

by George Cooper

There is a postscript to Gibsons Heritage Week when we remember George and Charlotte Gibson, the founders of our town; for a year ago this June 23 their last surviving grandson died here in Gibsons in his 88th year.

Arnold "Ted" Winegarden, born October 23, 1903 in Gibsons, was the son of George Gibson's daughter Emma-Jane and her husband Arnold "Chuck" Winegarden.

Ted had an abiding interest in boats and their engines, an interest that began in his boyhood days on the Gibsons waterfront.

As a youth during World War I he worked for Stolz Logging in its operation on Mount Elphinstone above Cemetery Road. First in cutting firewood for the cookhouse with the then new gas-engine drag saw, and later as the donkey puncher's helper.

In the 30s, Ted worked on tugs along the Coast from Squamish and Vancouver to the Charlottes.

When World War II began, Ted escaped being 'frozen' in his job on a fishpacker out of Steveston by immediately enlisting in the army. He soon transferred to the Royal Canadian Engineers and served overseas throughout the campaign in Northwest Europe and in the occupation forces.

His son, Nelson, recollects his dad telling him about building a bailey bridge on pontoons across the Rhine.

On his return from war service, Ted met and married Violet Husdon, a granddaughter of Roberts Creek pioneers in 1947.

During his long years in retirement, Ted enjoyed his hobby of ham radio operator, using the call name 'Lone Wolf.'

He is survived by his wife Vi and his two sons, Ted and Nelson.

davis bay news

by Jo-Anne Sheanh, 885-3629

The purpose of a community column is to inform readers about coming events, folksy news items and special mentions: i.e. birthday, anniversaries, weddings, etc. However there is another side to column-writing, one that requires us to reach out to the community and ask for your help. Will you?

Cathy is a young woman, age 25, who is living in hospital completely paralyzed, able to move only her eyes after suffering from heart failure two weeks ago. The only way she can communicate is by blinking her eyes. Less than four years ago, Cathy was an energetic, outgoing girl attending university with a wonderful future ahead of her.

Suddenly she was struck down with a rare condition that left her paralyzed from the waist down. She has adapted well to her affliction up to now, but this last catastrophe has left her so depressed that her parents feel this may deter her recovery.

Cathy needs moral support, prayers, and above all, she needs to know that people out there care. Will you take the time today to send Cathy a card with perhaps a few words of encouragement? Will you let her know that we in Davis Bay care and in caring, we will share with her our thoughts, words and prayers?Cathy will be in hospital for months to come, but her mom and dad will deliver the cards to her personally. Please send cards to: Cathy Frenken, RR #1, C34 Heather Site, Sechelt, BC V0N 3A0. I would ask that everyone on the Sunshine Coast remember Cathy.

Greetings

Birthday greetings to our stained glass expert, Ernie Wood who will be celebrating his 82nd birthday on June 25. Oodles more Ernie!

halfmoon happenings

by Ruth Forrester, 885-2418

Lots of family and friends showed up at Halfmoon Bay school last Friday to enjoy a pleasant Open House morning. Entertainment was provided by some very talented students who had taken part in the recent talent show. There were exhibits of some of the work accomplished, particularly interesting were the results of time spent at Sargeants Bay collecting marine and woods materials which were turned into works of art.

There are certainly some very creative young minds in this school. As the school year comes to an end, all the fun things are happening. The annual sports/fun day was last Thursday and there will be a Farewell Assembly to the Grade 7 class next Thursday, June 25. It will be followed by a luncheon, then a dance for the intermediate students.

We wish all the students and staff of this first rate school a very happy summer holiday time.

Despite the fact that school is over, there are still lots of activities for young people. A new one this year is a Childrens' Theatre Workshop in association with the Driftwood Players and led by Maggi Kalve-Guzzi. This will take place at Coopers Green Hall from July 6 to 11. It is a week-long morning workshop, where ages six to 14 will create a performance piece on the theme Neighbours Meeting Neighbours, culminating in a performance event on the afternoon of July 11 at the Halfmoon Bay Country Fair. Fees are on a sliding scale, $50 to $75 for the workshop. For more information call Maggi at 885-5527.

Bocci at the fair

Something different this year at the Halfmoon Bay Country Fair will be a bocci tournament. This is a game which resembles the old lawn bowling type of match and looks like a lot of fun. If you are interested in having a go at this, give Maggie Moore a call at 885-4532. The tournament is scheduled from 1 pm to 4 pm on Saturday afternoon, July 11.

Table space for booths is rapidly going, but there may still be some available if you hurry and call Fiona at 885-3483. Another favourite at the fair is the family dinner on Saturday beginning at 5:30 pm.

Then on Sunday morning there is some more food. This will be at the pancake breakfast at Coopers Green Hall from 9 am to 11:30 am, the cost $4 for adults and $2 for children. The 'celebrity chefs' are from IGA and Shop Easy.

There will be lots of contests, raffles, bingo, beer garden, childrens' games, races and much more.

To prevent parking problems there will be a bus service to the fair site. Call 885-3234 for the schedule.

by Margaret Watt, 885-4406

The 10th anniversary meeting of the Writers' Forge was well attended by a lively bunch of people last Wednesday evening in Rockwood Lodge. It wasn't a meeting in the business sense, it was a party. A marvellous cake, baked by Sylvia from Shop Easy, disappeared quickly, as did all the other great food brought along by everyone.

The Writers' Forge's latest Suncoaster was on sale at the meeting. The book is filled with the works of local writers. It is in the book stores now for any of you who would like a copy. Special guest at the meeting was festival co-ordinator, Betty Keller.

Seniors craft sale

Don't miss the Seniors Craft Sale being held Saturday, June 27 at the Seniors Hall on Mermaid Street. It will run from 10 am to 2 pm and there will be a bake table, crafts and refreshments. Make a point of being there early so you can get the pick of the goodies.

Flea market, bake sale

Another one you shouldn't miss is the ladies auxiliary to the Sechelt Legion, Flea Market and Bake Sale. This one starts at 11 am and goes on until 2 pm. A wide array of goods will be for sale. Check it out, you never know what treasure you may find. I almost forgot, the Flea Market will take place in the Sechelt Legion hall.

Sechelt elementary

If you didn't know already, the last day of school for the kids and the last day of peace for the parents, is June 25.

There will be an assembly on that morning to say farewell to the Grade 7 students.

During the assembly, parents and children will get a chance to reflect on the past, listen to the band and choir. Everyone is welcome.

The Grade 7s have elected to bring their elementary schooling to a close by picnicking at the Porpoise Bay Campsite following the assembly. School re-opens September 8.

Holidays

As you read this, I will be away for a few days R and R. If you have something for this column you may hand it in to the Coast News and they will see to it. Thank you.

harbour watch

by Jacalyn Vincent

When I went with a girlfriend to Ruby Lake to enjoy the great weather we were both appalled to see the vandalism that had taken place at the Danny Bosch Park. Especially seeing a huge fir tree chainsawed down for a couple of rounds of campfire wood. The park is apparently closed now until further notice until they can clean up the area.

Along the highway mail boxes and road signs were all pushed over or pulled up recently. Acts of senseless vandalism are definitely on the rise in our area. If you see any persons or person destroying property, whether public or private, you are urged to contact the RCMP immediately.

Fishing derby just around the bend

The annual Lord Jim's Fishing Derby will be held this year August 1, from dawn to 4 pm. Since there are only 300 tickets being printed, it's a must to get yours now.

Tickets will be on sale at Lord Jim's and Sunsport in the AC Rentals complex in Pender Harbour. Your entry fee will be $150 and there will be a limit of one fish per ticket.

First prize is $5,000; second prize is $1,500; and a hidden weight prize is airline tickets for two anywhere in the world that Air Canada flies.

After the derby, a barbeque with door prizes will be held at Lord Jim's. Good luck to all. A reminder that proceeds from the derby are designated to go to the Salmonid Enhancement Society.

Garden Bay loss

Garden Bay residents have recently lost two very well-respected persons. Our thoughts go out to the families of Martin Lueck and Glen McLean. Any remembrance donations may be made to St. Mary's Hospital, the Cancer Society or the BC Cancer Fund.

Reception open to public

The artists of the Harbour Gallery in Madeira Park are hosting an open reception Friday, June 26 at 7:30 pm. Here's your chance to browse around and truly enjoy the works of our local artists.

As the tide changes

Congratulations to all the grads this year. Tea buffs - tea was first introduced in our country in the 1600s. It was more of a food than a beverage for tea leaves were boiled, the liquid discarded and the leaves eaten with salt and butter or sugar and milk.

Until next week - be good to yourself.

golden lifelines

by Joyce Ostry

Tuesday afternoon, June 16 saw the Senior Citizens Hall on Mermaid in Sechelt full of joyful people. Len Herder, branch 69, greeted all the guests and introduced the musical group, the 89ers. The Ivory Rag was the first on the selection, followed by the Piano Roll Blues with Connie Wilson tickling the ivories on both the rag and blues. The song Shenandoah was heard next and it's a much-loved tune because when heard it always brings a rush of memory of any river of our youth.

A very tasty lunch was served and then Jean Sherlock, our hostess, greeted her guests.

The 69ers continued with Getting to Know You, followed by the rousing 76 Trombones. The group consists of Walter James, Robbie Robson, Bernie Ackerman, Larry Grafton, Don Henderosn, Birk Teeporten, Ed Matthews, Ron Huggins, Eric Huggins and Bob Grimsdick. Nikki Weber continued accompanying the songsters for After the Ball, Take Me Out to the Ball game, Cruising Down the River, Daisy, Daisy, Forever and Ever and Let Bygones be Bygones Forever.

Bob Grimsdick and Larry Grafton sang a duet of the verse of Drifting Along with the Tumbling Tumbleweed, and back again to Remember the Night.

There was a rousing tune called Viva L'Espania and then the program closed with a personalized version of I Dream of Jeannie sung to Jean and Bert Sherlock.

Jim Bannerman, 81, was the youngest man of the over 80s group and Rene Crowell at 80 was the youngest of the ladies. Mary Shannon at 89 was the eldest lady and John Forbes at 92 was the oldest gentleman. The remaining celebrants were Ken Alexander, Amy Bryant, Stan Bryant, Madge Bell, Bob Breadner, Ruby Breadner, Adele DeLange, Margaret Espley, Millie Forbes, Very Head, Eileen James, Walter James, Alf Lucas, Mildred Moore, Sam Shore, Jean Sherlock, Bert Sherlock, Frances Southwood, Bert Slade, Ruth Slade, Helen Talbot, Marily Wigard, Jim Derby and Elizabeth Derby.

Plan on attending the Craft Fair June 27. Baking donations can be dropped off at the Derby residence at 5737 Pebble Crescent on Friday evening and on the 27th at the hall on Mermaid Street by 9:30 am Saturday. The fair begins at 10 am. See you there!

Amnesty urges death penalty abolition

by Roxanne Gregory

A small group of Amnesty International (AI) supporters met Wednesday night at Sechelt elementary to hear guest speaker Vicky Reynolds. Reynolds is the Vancouver co-ordinator for Amnesty's Death Penalty Abolition Network.

A former member of the US National Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Reynolds spoke for about an hour on the abolitionist movement in the US and on AI's work in Canada. It was news to many to discover that Canada is considered a "retentionist" nation by AI.

Canada is unable to be a signatory to the United Nations Protocol Against Executions, because our military laws still retain the death penalty as punishment for a variety of offences, although no one has been executed under military law since 1946. Of interest is the Deparment of National Defence's wording which allows for the death penalty for seven different offences and does not exclude offences committed during peace time.

Reynolds painted a grim picture of judicial malfeasance in US courts. She talked about the case of Ronald Kollman, who was recently executed in Virginia. Kollman's court-appointed public defender was a real estate law specialist, who failed to file an appeal within 21 days of Kollman's sentencing. Although an appeal was filed on the 22nd day, Kollman was denied the right to appeal.

According to Reynolds, the new US crime bill will eliminate the right of Habeus Corpus appeals for capital crimes, as well as impose the death penalty for 50 other crimes, many of which are drug-related. This increase in the number of crimes which will warrant the death penalty and the suspension of Habeus Corpus appeal, is in contravention of Article 42 of the American Convention on Human Rights.

> 'Get involved and make a difference on death penalty issues'
> -Vicky Reynolds

Leading the world in the number of state-sponsored executions is China, with more than 1,000 in 1991. Iran came in second with its execution policy partially determined by fundamentalist Islamic law. Executions in Iran included death by stoning. Closer to home, the US has 2,547 people awaiting execution in 34 states. In the first six months of this year, more than double the number of prisoners executed in all of the US last year have been executed by the State of Texas.

Reynolds urged local AI members and supporters to "get involved and make a difference on death penalty issues. We should not be debating whether we are for or against the death penalty. We should be working everywhere for abolition."

egmont news

by Lynn Mees

Another fast-paced week whizzed by in the Mont, coming to a climax on Saturday. As the rains proceeded to pour down upon us, we proceeded to get ready to have fun.

Egmont Days started off with the annual kids fishing derby. Kids show up no matter if the rain pours down. There were about 21 little monsters with baited hooks.

First prize went to Russel Silvey, who won a rod and reel set, which was donated by Sun Sport. Second prize went to Ryder Noble, who won a badminton set, donated by Tom and Sherry's Family Restaurant.

Third prize went to Sasha Hunt, who won five video rentals donated by Rob's Video. Fourth prize went to Garrett (Frank and Louise's grandson) who won a velcro handball set, which was donated by the Egmont Fish Plant.

The consolation prize for the smallest fish went to Melanie (sorry, don't know the last name, but Frank and Louise's granddaughter), donated by the Backeddy Pub. It was great.

Games and face painting took place in the hall and the hot dogs eventually showed up and ice creams all around. Big buckets of ice cream were donated by Terry and Dave Craig.

While everyone went home to cook up their favourite dish, the band set up and the dinner was packed. There was just enough grub to go around. The music was 'hot', the crowd was cool and everybody danced! With Brent and Annet's wedding the night before, you would of thought everyone was tired of dancing, but NO! I heard complaints there wasn't going to be a dance next weekend, 'cause they'd really want to dance once more. That's it folks, we're moving right into Egmont.

ADVERTISING FOR TENANCY
British Columbia legislation prohibits advertising which discriminates in the rental of property. For example a person who stipulates "No Children" as a condition of rental would be in violation of the Family Status and the Human Rights Acts. The landlord who places the advertisement and the newspaper which publishes it would both be in contravention of the legislation and could have a complaint filed against them. The Coast News will therefore not accept such discriminatory ads.

Soundwaves Orchestra tuning up

by Autumn Dykstra, Bill Forst

We all know the fame of Lucy Maude Montgomery's Anne of Green Gables novels and have seen the films. Now in the final stages of preparation by the Sunshine Coast Music Society is the musical version, for presentation at the Festival Pavilion in Sechelt in the first two weeks of July.

A musical needs music and the society's orchestra, the Soundwaves, has been busy rehearsing the fun, upbeat music for the production with conductor and musical director Lyn Vernon. The orchestra has 16 members from the Sunshine Coast and you may recognize your local doctor, teacher, physiotherapist, retailer, dentist, accountant, X-ray technician, high school student, builder, medical administrator and domestic engineer.

As with past music society productions, the substantial local talent will be supplemented by a few students from UBC - in this case two violinists and a cellist.

The role of the orchestra in a musical theatre production is quite different from a concert. There are exclusively orchestral pieces in the prelude, but the orchestra must also accompany the many choral numbers and provide the interludes which connect the musical and dramatic scenes together.

The challenge is to temper the dynamics of the orchestra to allow the singers to be featured at just the right intervals. The orchestra is, in effect, on stage for the whole two-hour performance.

Tickets for Anne of Green Gables are available from the Festival of the Written Arts box office 885-9631.

Columbia Chorus to visit Pender for music society performance

The Pender Harbour Music Society welcomes the Columbia Boys and Columbia Girls Choir, Sunday, July 5. The choirs, which are attending the International Choral Kathaumixw '92 in Powell River from June 30 - July 4, will perform at the Pender Harbour Community Hall at 3 pm.

The Columbia Boys Choir, which includes boys ages eight to "voice change," was the first choir established by the Columbia Choirs and has been the recipient of numerous awards and honours. Previously, the boys choir toured the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Committee for Children's and Adult's Initiative for Peace of the USSR. They were the first non-Soviet-block group to be invited to the Tchaikovsky Music Festival, in the town of Chaikovskuy, USSR.

In 1989, the choir was honoured to participate in the International Musical Eisteddfod in Llangollen, Wales where it placed eighth out of 38 choirs. The choir also competed in the Bournemouth Music Festival in Bournemouth, England, where they were named Choir of the Year over competing choirs from Germany, Great Britain, Scandinavia and Switzerland.

Other awards include a special award for choral excellence in Vienna, Austria in 1987; and top placing boys choir at the International Choral Kathaumixw in Powell River in 1988.

Columbia Girls Choir includes girls from 8 to 14 and was formed in 1988. The choir's first tour was to Spokane in 1989 in addition to numerous local performances.

In 1990 the girls choir was invited to compete in the Heritage Music Festival in Anageim, California where they earned a gold award for scoring 97.4 on a scale of 100 points! There were 17 high school groups (bands, orchestras, jazz ensembles and choirs) from Arizona, California, Canada, Oregon and Texas. The girls were the youngest aged group, but with 97.4 rating they also won the prestgious Adjudicators Award presented to the most outstanding group in the festival.

Tickets are $5 members, $6 non-members, available at the door.

Thomas' celestial art expresses ancient magic

by Belinda MacLeod

"Celestial Visions", an exhibition of intaglio prints by Lionel Thomas, is on show at the Arts Centre until June 28.

Lionel Thomas is a former Associate Professor Emeritus of the Department of Fine Arts and the School of Architecture at UBC, and was on the faculty there from 1950 to 1958. He is also a dedicated, prolific and extremely successful artist who has exhibited in major art galleries in Canada and the USA, and is represented by over 800 works in collections world wide. He is an artist whose energy drives him to experiment with different media - sculpture, painting, printmaking, enamelling - and who, like many artists today, strives to combine the mechanistic present with the mythic past.

He is an artist whose energy drives him to experiment with different media

For the last 14 years one of his projects, which he has now completed, has been to interpret the universe and the 88 constellations using the medium of enamelled copper plates and, what is shown here, intaglio relief prints.

It is a wonderful subject, the Constellations of the Celestial Sphere, mysterious, legendary, traditional but extremely relevant to the present, as we see the earth becoming increasingly fragile and the universe increasingly coldly (or hotly) real.

Mr. Thomas has tamed the subject into a series of designs, many with the overtones of a map or chart, using soft, pastel colours, mostly monochromatic. Of these I found the blue ones most effective. Realizing that colour is used symbolically in these works, it still has to fulfil, I feel, the decorative function of pleasing the eye as well as supporting the idea.

The most immediately attractive for colour are the larger works such as "Circinus" or "Vulpecula" with their discs of vivid colour on a white ground. These boldly designed and clearcut larger works are a good foil to the complicated smaller works. Within the unifying framework of medium, subject and use of colour lie a diversity of styles. They range from the seeping linear treatment of "Andromeda, Perseus and Pegasus" to the geometry of "Horolgium", from the childlike "Fornax" to "Centaurius" reminiscent of cave paintings.

Thomas says his fascination with the stars began during the US 1969 moon trip, and led him to pursue considerable studies in geophysics and astronomy, but not, he adds, in astrology. Like modern scientific man, he has no use, except aesthetically, for the ancient mythology of the stars. However, he must surely envy the conviction of the myth believers when the simplest pictograph could often convey a magic stronger than any elaborate idea or technique of today.

So it is, that for me, the most appealing work in the show is one that comes nearest to expressing the ancient magic of the myths of the stars, namely the small work of "Chameleon" and "Musca Australis".
