Port Mellon award

HSPPP safest

by Ellen Frith

From being what was once considered the worst mill in BC in regards to the safety of its workers, the latest pulp and paper industry statistics show the Howe Sound Pulp and Paper (HSPPP) mill at Port Mellon as being "the safest mill in Canada in its class".

An article in the December issue of Canfor News states: "As of the end of October, HSPPP has experienced just one lost-time accident in 1989, and had an accident frequency rate of a mere 1.1. That's the best of any mill in Canada in the 50,000 to 100,000 manhours per month category, as well as the best in British Columbia."

(Prince George Pulp and Paper stands fourth and Intercontinental Pulp seventh in the same group.)

Unfortunately, a back injury suffered by one of the mill workers on November 21 ended 193 consecutive accident-free days at the mill but since then, as of December 28, the mill has passed 37 days safely.

Bill Peterson, President of the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) told the Coast News he credits a "very active safety program between the union and the company" for the much improved safety record of the mill workers. "Safety is just not a negotiable thing with us," he said. "It's an issue that is on-going with and against the company."

He said that with all the construction going on at Port Mellon, it was an "extremely dangerous" site, and "congested to say the least". As a consequence, "the men are very conscious of their safety with the heavy construction around them and extra caution."

Wayne Greggain, Union Safety Representative and Co-chairman of the Industrial Health and Safety Committee points out that "statistics show, in the modernization of a plant, people tend to be safer". "You are aware you can be hurt easier," he told the Coast News.

"I think it (the new safety record) is because, over the years, we've put our programs on paper and invested in a lot of training," Greggain said. "And management is doing its discipline bit."

Greggain also gives credit to the Workman's Compensation Board for its input.

Both Greggain and Peterson said the safety record for the HSPPP construction site is not equal to that of the mill and Greggain puts the blame for that on the construction contractors themselves who, he said, put a lot of pressure on the workers for overtime and in spite of sometimes adverse conditions.

In spite of the recent safety record, Greggain still feels not enough is being done. "I'm the key safety person at the mill," he said, "and I put in only eight hours a week on safety. If they were really serious about it, they could do a heck of a lot more."

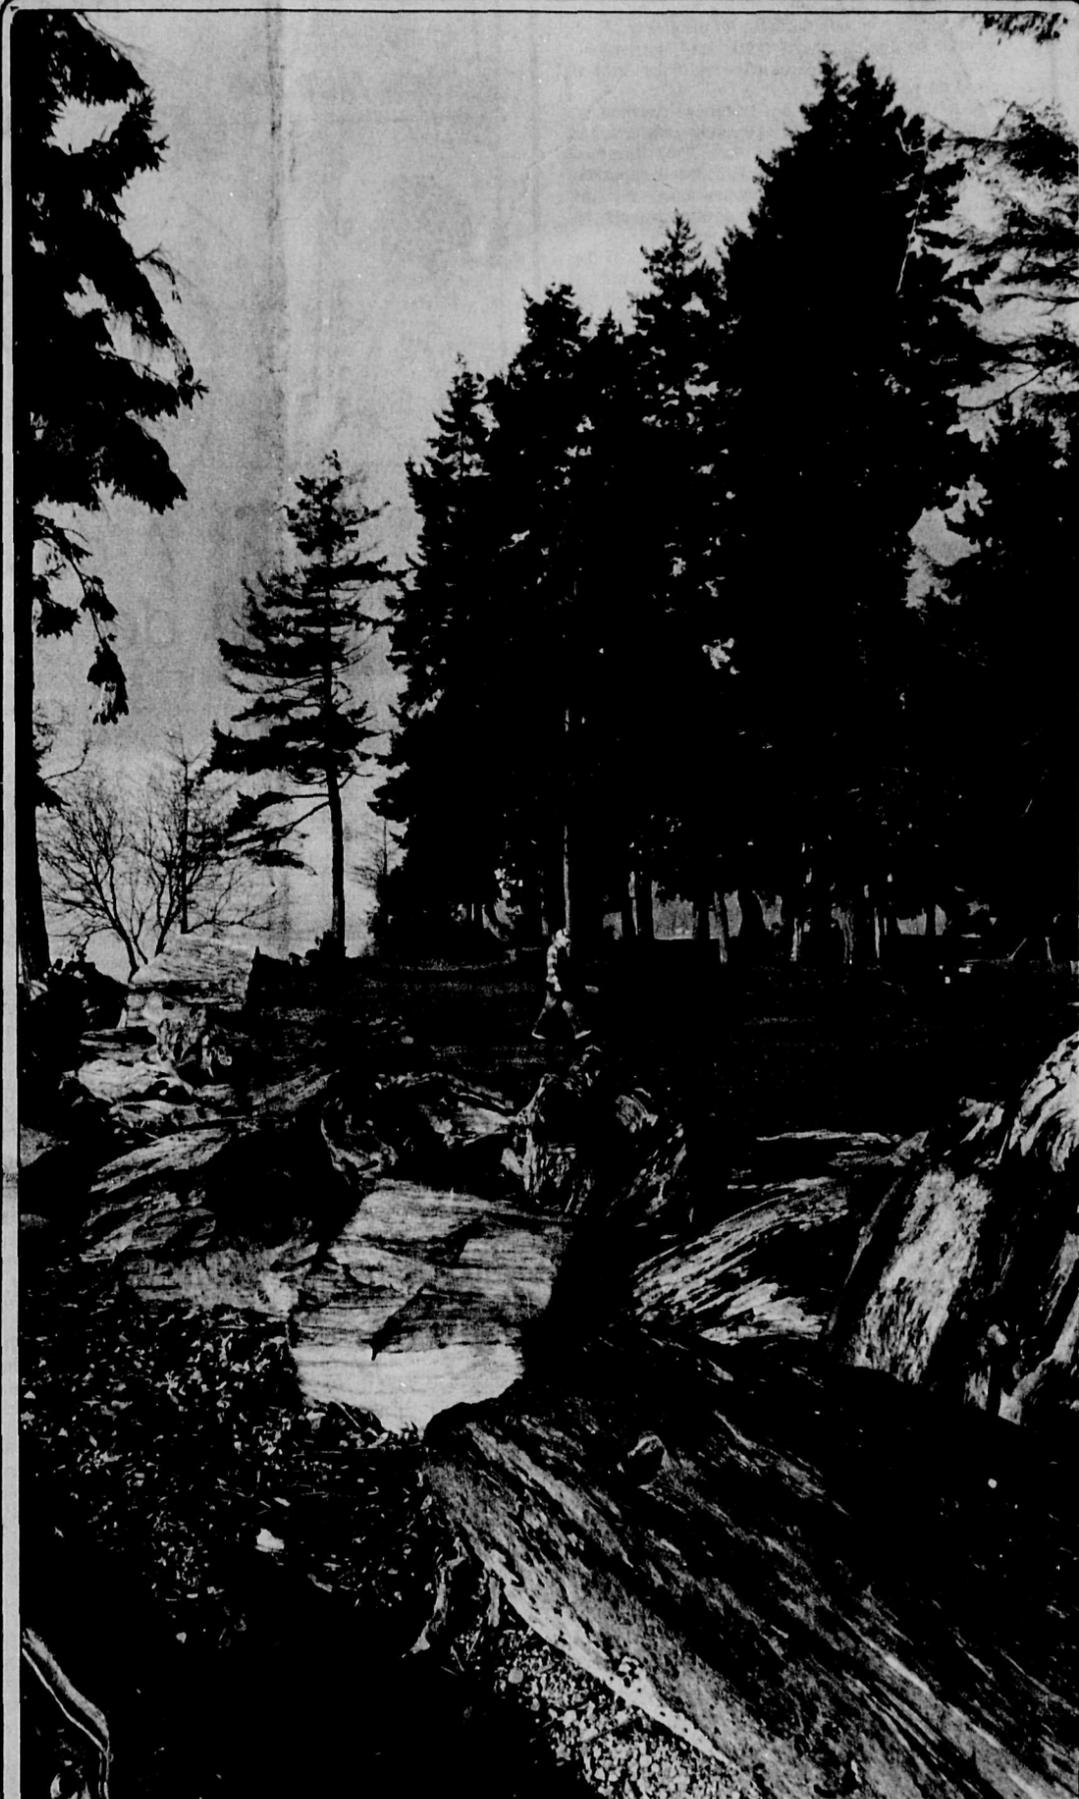

Neither management nor the unions are pulling their full weight, Greggain said. "We both turn our heads when the small unsafe acts happen. All the little ones add up after a while."

Greggain sees his involvement in the safety of the mill workers as one that is "very frustrating and very gratifying".

"I just want to see people go home safely after work," he said, adding "I only wish I knew the real reason (for the new safety record)."

The other co-chairman on the safety committee is Pierre Lamarche HSPPP Production Manager, Pulp. ("He's the one good thing management has done," Greggain said.)

Lamarche and other HSPPP managers were unavailable for comment last week but Lamarche is quoted in the Canfor News article as saying, in regards to the new safety record: "We have been running a close second for this position all year and we finally made it. That's just a superb performance by everyone in the mill."

1989 Bird Count

The Christmas Bird Count for 1989 was not favoured with ideal weather. A temperature inversion caused considerable fog and low cloud at sea level and was particularly bad in the Port Mellon area.

Despite this hampering visibility the annual count turned up 92 species, tying 1983 for the second highest number of species counted in the area. The highest number of species was recorded in 1988 with 101 species counted.

New species to this area this year were a flock of rosy finches spotted above the fog on a logging road in the Port Mellon area by Doug Brown and Sean Van Strepen. Brown, from the Okanagan, was participating in the local bird count for the eighth straight year.

Dan Bouman also added a new species to this year's count when he spotted a pair of barred owls in Cliff Gilker Park. Also new to the count was a ring-necked pheasant.

SCRD turns over sewage plant

by Penny Fuller

At its final meeting of 1989, the Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) Board gave reconsideration and final adoption to a by-law which transfers the ownership of the Sechelt Sewage Treatment Plant to a commission. The plant has been an issue since Sechelt became a municipal district in 1986.

The official transfer of ownership did not occur without a brief exchange of heated words, although the by-law has been in the works for over a year and has already received first, second and third readings.

The debate arose when Sechelt Alderman Bob Wilson objected to the wording regarding the selection of members for the commission. Under the new by-law the five member commission will comprise of two representatives from Sechelt Municipal District, two from the Sechelt Indian Government District (SIGD) and the fifth member to be chosen from the SCR D board. If the four members cannot agree on a SCR D director, they may choose the last member from the general population of the area served by the treatment plant.

Wilson stated the wording that his council had accepted did not specify that the fifth member had to reside in the service area.

Clerk-Administrator Larry Jardine explained he had assumed the wording, which he borrowed from other similar agreements used around the province, reflected the wishes of the government bodies.

Wilson's objection prompted an angry outburst from Area C Director Stan Dixon. Dixon pointed out that the SIGD had been very happy with the arrangement they had with the regional district, and it was only in a spirit of co-operation that they had gone along with Sechelt's decision to restructure the ownership of the treatment plant. As the meetings went along, Dixon maintained, Sechelt had continuously chipped away at the SCR D's participation in the proposed commission.

"Now," he said, "I'll bet anyone that one of the first things that will happen is the rates will go way up."

Director Jim Gurney, who for many years chaired the committee which oversaw the running of the plant, reacted with less emotion. He expressed pride in the efficient and economic way the treatment plant and sewage system has been run over the years, expanding to provide service to an increasing area while avoiding major deficits or high service charges. He stated his hope that the new commission would be able to maintain the standard of service without excessive increases.

The by-law was given final adoption and the new commission took over the reins on January 1, 1990.

Lagasse withdraws

Recent federal NDP leadership hopeful Roger Lagasse will not run provincially in the next election, but will support Howard White's nomination in the riding of Powell River-Sunshine Coast. "I will continue to be involved as a grassroots NDP activist," said Lagasse, who plans to return to teaching.

Aldermen to the island

Aldermen Ken Collins and Lilian Kunstler of Gibsons will be attending a January 26 meeting in Courtenay hosted by the Executive of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities (AVIM).

The meeting has been called to discuss the proposed franchise agreements for natural gas distribution from Vancouver Island Gas.

Comment

We're all in this together

It is often true that a community is a microcosm of the larger world, epitomizing the events of the greater whole, but, in the last few months of 1989 at least, the Sunshine Coast appeared quiet compared to the rest of the world, at least on the political front.

Still the ailing health of our immediate environment around Howe Sound, in reflecting environmental concerns planet-wide, became a focus for many. Crab fishermen may have been hit most directly with a shot at their pocket-books but there is an uneasy feeling now among even the most blinkered that the clear waters of our ocean may be mere illusion. Chemical soup simmers below the blue.

Militant environmentalists cry for the closure of the Howe Sound Pulp and Paper mill at Port Mellon until it "cleans up its act". The truth is, and this extends only as far as research has progressed, of course, that the damage has been done. The dioxins and furans spewed out unchecked over the years now sit in the sediment at the bottom of the Sound. Shutting the mill down now will not clean them up; only time and a covering of clean sediment will do that.

HSPP is a profit motivated company which, perhaps through foresight or perhaps mere chance and good luck, happens to be at least one step ahead of some of the other pulp and paper mills in Canada in this very new game of adopting environmentally sound practices. The making of bleached pulp is, after all by its nature, a dirty business.

If the lax environmental laws of the government are ignored with little penalty to the profit motivated company, it shouldn't be a surprise to anyone. However, as things must change, any more recent attempts by that said company to "clean up its act" by whatever means should be applauded and acknowledged.

We should not, as a community, slack off in pressuring HSPP to continue in its present efforts to eliminate dioxins and furans in its waste; we should not accept the very limited research now being done on the problem and we should demand more from our politicians on enforcing what laws exist and in instituting necessary new ones. But at the same time, we should give some credit where credit is due.

That is, credit to the unions whose members' jobs are on the line; to the management split between the demands of the unions and the distant upper echelons of a multinational company; to the environmentalists who strive to educate a sometimes indifferent populace; and to the rest of the community for whatever its efforts are in saving this bit of the world and Howe Sound.

In the '80's "People Power" changed the course of history around the world. Do Canadians have what it takes to maintain our standards and rights in the '90's?

A cautious sniff at democracy's new roses

Headly days these, headly days. I mean the wine of political excitement is sweeping over Eastern Europe and entire populations are drunk with delight and joy at their new found political freedom and at the thought of all the delights that will bring.

What a wonderful way to begin a new decade, with democracy in sudden flower in tracts of political landscape which until just very recently seemed immune to its birth and development.

Like all intoxicants, new found freedom, however, can be very misleading and it is best just when the joy seems giddiest and the exuberance without end to take thought of the morrow.

To mix metaphors shamelessly into our very own figurative cocktail, it might be well if we all sniff these sudden passionate blooms of democracy with appreciation mixed with more than a soupcon of caution.

Despite the wild hopes that attend their birth, revolutions have a way of proceeding along paths not entirely foreseen. Along with political repression, there have been released in the nations of Eastern Europe unlimited hopes for material improvements in the standard of life heretofore enjoyed.

Already, there have been expressed misgivings about what will become of the sorely harried Third World countries if the attention and aid of the developed and fortunate world is diverted to Eastern Europe.

In truth, without the diversion of the hopes of Eastern Europe, precious little has been done to alleviate Third World War suffering. Some World Bank figures indicate that there has been an increasing transfer of wealth from the struggling nations to the wealthy in recent years.

Meanwhile the birth rate continues to explode and the spectres of famine, disease and desperation still loom on the horizon of the global stage.

Exploding along with the numbers of people on the earth is the realization that we cannot continue to lay waste our environment with the kinds of take-no-heed-of-tomorrow abandonment which has characterized our activities in the past 200 years. But this laying waste is also exponentially exploding along with the world's populations and the rising tide of expectations and demands being made by those populations.

Balancing these diverse factors is going to be a feat of no mean achievement, quite enough of a challenge to occupy us through the decade of the 90's and well into the 21st Century.

That the balance must be sought and found is sure. Desperate people are dangerous people and if there are dangerous people in immense numbers we will pass on to our offspring a dangerous world indeed.

In Eastern Europe, totalitarian bureaucracies have been found incapable of governing efficiently and justly; in the rich nations of the West, wealth has been created at a cost to the environment which cannot for long be sustained.

In addition, the rich and powerful nations of the West have shown little interest or success in distributing the produced wealth in a manner which is designed to keep a balance in the world.

So it's best not to feel too smug about what's happening. Neither rigid and centralized control nor free-market forces are liable to give us a sustainable future. That may not be apparent at this present heady moment for western democracies. The chances are it will become apparent long before the close of the next decade.

What's being won in Eastern Europe is the right to select or reject a government without violence or without fear of state-run terrorism. What all the governments of the world are going to do about our mounting problems after they have been democratically elected is by no means clear.

So let us sniff the new roses of democracy with delight and appreciation. There's a major victory for the human spirit being won on some considerable fronts. There are, however, some daunting challenges ahead of us with which we have not yet come properly to grips.

At home with the handbooks

The beginning of a new year is always a time for reflection and resolution, of recalling past events that may prove relevant to the facts as they stand at the end of the old year and which may, therefore, feed the zeal for change eminent in the entering of the new.

In other words, at the beginning of January every year most of us, bloated and exhausted from the festive season, tend to look back at our lives, pinpoint where we figure we've gone wrong and determine to do better - starting tomorrow.

It came to me this year, as I sat blank and uncomprehending before my son's new computer game waiting for divine revelation on how the thing worked, that where I've obviously gone wrong in life is in continuing to fail to read the instruction manuals that come with things.

Everything I buy, it seems, comes packaged with a neat little booklet or, in the case of my word processor, a tome weighing a good five pounds, and I never read them. In fact, I've always taken a certain perverse pride in admitting that, although all are filed neatly away, these manuals are never, ever opened or even removed from their clear plastic packages.

I guess I've always thought anything worth bothering with should be immediately understandable or, maybe, I always liked the challenge of figuring it out myself.

But that, I reflected this new year's, was when times were simpler and, although it took longer, putting together an Ikea chair without instructions, for example (one of my proudest moments), was indeed, possible.

Now understanding our everyday household gadgets requires either a careful perusal of the accompanying manuals or a degree in electrical engineering.

I resolved, therefore, to begin reading all the manuals in my house starting tomorrow.

I will begin, I think, with the manual for my camera which is, after all, a tool of my work. It was bought several years ago in the flush of a sale of a freelance article and guaranteed for life, the salesman said. He painstakingly explained how it worked, handed me a booklet ("Worth looking into," he said) and I was on my way.

Unfortunately, it isn't a camera that is foolproof and when it petered out several months ago I took it to the shop and complained the thing had broken for no apparent reason. Had I changed the battery recently? What battery? So I was handed another manual and, starting tomorrow, I'm going to read it.

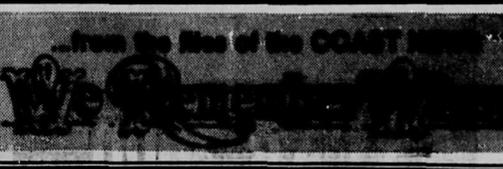

Last year's family Christmas present, after another freelance article sold, was a VCR. This was absolutely essential to our household, I said, for the taping of all the brilliant programs on Public TV, the only channel worth watching after all, but which we never seemed to get down to doing.

Now that manual, which came in at least four languages and which was illustrated with complex line drawings of our machine, was substantial. As a precautionary measure, I didn't file that one away but rather tucked it under the VCR itself thinking, perhaps, that some sort of osmosis would take place, but it didn't.

Consequently the only time I attempted to tape a Channel 9 program, I ended up with 15 minutes of 'Married...with Children' and 13 commercials.

As for the new, allegedly indispensable (potentially, that is) household computer, it comes with enough manuals to begin a library. Thank goodness, 1990 has a lot of tomorrows.

Pedestrians in Lower Gibsons gingerly forged a river on December 20 when this break in the water main transformed School Road hill into a mini 'white water' obstacle. Construction abruptly came to a stop when heavy machinery struck the water main which was unusually close to the surface at this spot. The water in Lower Gibsons was shut off for several hours while town crews fixed the leak and reinforced the pipe with concrete.

$100,000 donated to St. Mary's New heights for auxiliaries' aid

In 1989, the six branches of St. Mary's Hospital Auxiliary - Pender Harbour, Halfmoon Bay, Sechelt, Roberts Creek, Gibsons and Hopkins held many fund-raising events which were given full support by their community residents.

This resulted in the auxiliary being able to make a 'first time ever' donation of $100,000 to the hospital to assist with the purchase of equipment not otherwise funded by government grants and to supply extra patient comforts.

The donation was presented to St. Mary's Hospital Board Chairman Al Harbord by Peggy Gallo, president of the St. Mary's Hospital Auxiliary, on December 19.

Attending the ceremony held in St. Mary's were: Alison Steele, Erika Wright, Mary Bannerman, Carol Rigby, Chris Ward, Mary Macdonald, Vivian Tepeorten and Hospital Administrator Ted Wright.

Members of each branch have worked diligently all year, be it at home, knitting, sewing or cooking or staffing the auxiliaries' hospital Gift Shop and Thrift Shop.

The Gift Shop with its sales of patient toiletries and beautiful knitted items raised over $6000 while the Thrift Shop now open five days a week raised $80,000.

Besides these activities, branch members also gave volunteer time to in-hospital services. They provided hair care, attended to patients' flowers and plants, distributed reading material and helped out in many ways at Totem Lodge.

The hospital auxiliary is an organization that is working for the community and appreciates and acknowledges the generosity of all those who helped to make this donation possible.

New anti-stain treatment safe

by Ellen Frith

The development of Ecobrite, the first environmentally safe, anti-stain treatment for lumber, has won Canfor Corporation a silver trophy in the Invention Category of the 1989 Canada Awards for Business Excellence.

According to Minister of Industry, Science and Technology Harvie Andre, Ecobrite, "has considerably improved environmental and health safety in the lumber and pulp and paper industries."

Unlike other anti-stain products which utilize harsh chemicals, including Chlorophenates, to kill stain producing mold and fungi, Ecobrite is a mixture of inorganic salts (Borax and soda ash), which can be found in many common household products. It acts by simply creating a barrier between the lumber and mold and fungi so they cannot grow.

As a result, a recent Canfor press release states, 'tests show that Ecobrite is thousands of times less toxic than some other anti-stain treatments.' The press release also states that regulatory officials say 'storm water run-off is therefore not an environmental concern.'

Canfor's Director of Research and Development, Dr. Suezona Chow, who led the development of Ecobrite, says there have been a "very positive response from mill workers who apply Ecobrite."

The product is presently being used at 36 Canadian sawmills representing around 25 per cent of the market for anti-stain products.

According to Teri Dawe of ORCA, the newly formed coalition which includes various environmental groups such as ORCA, Environmental Watch and Greenpeace, as well as trade unions such as the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, the IWA and the BC Federation of Labour will be meeting on January 5 to discuss Ecobrite and to study the validity of the claims made in its support.

Regulations for fish drugs

Consumer confidence in the quality of BC farmed fish will be enhanced by the implementation of a new regulatory framework for the use of drugs in aquaculture, Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries John Savage announced recently.

The new regulations add to other aquaculture licensing requirements which govern aspects of fish farming such as siting and management.

"Antibiotics are sometimes used in the farming of fish, just as they are in the raising of other farm animals," said Savage. "In normal practice, fish are only treated early in the salt water rearing period many months prior to harvest.

"This government has now enacted guidelines which include a prescribed, lengthy withdrawal period following a drug treatment, before fish can be harvested," Savage continued. "These regulations will ensure responsible use of these products by aquaculturists under the direction of veterinarians."

"These are the first comprehensive regulations on therapeutic antibiotic use in fish farming to be introduced by any Canadian province," he stated. "Consumers of BC farmed fish can continue to depend on the excellent quality of this high-protein food."

The following requirements are contained in the new regulatory framework:

a) An aquaculture license holder shall keep records of any drugs administered to his/her fish.

b) When fish are delivered to a processing facility or to a fish buying station, the shipment will be accompanied by a statement which details the most recent drug treatment which has been administered to those fish.

c) No finfish can be harvested for 105 days after a drug treatment, unless:

1) that drug is registered under Canada's Food and Drug Act and the holder has complied with the standards set out by the Act; or

2) a veterinarian prescribes the drug and a mandatory minimum withdrawal period. The aquaculturist must comply with all veterinary instructions relating to the prescription.

d) Finfish processed for sale in British Columbia can only be processed at an establishment that holds a valid certificate of registration issued by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (Canada).

The federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans has implemented increased inspection and sampling of farmed fish. In addition, the laboratory services necessary to conduct residue testing have been established.

Peer counselling works

by George Cooper, 886-8520

"Will you two boys pretend to have a problem so we can show our visitor how peer counselling works?" the school principal said.

"We don't need to," said Brandon, "because a real problem has just come up between us."

"Oh. Then can we try to solve the problem now?" They nodded. "You remember the steps to be taken? No interrupting or blaming the other person; you agree to listen to each other and to try some solution." Both nodded agreement.

And so the problem came out before the mediator who happened to be the school principal this time. Paul, it turned out, had loaned 25 cents to Brandon and 25 cents to a third boy. Brandon thought the third boy had got much easier terms of repayment. The problem was addressed by both Brandon and Paul and a solution selected that each could accept.

Ann Skelcher, the principal of Langdale Elementary, had unobtrusively and effectively mediated this dispute between Brandon and Paul. She said the pupils of Langdale School had developed mediation they call peer counselling over the past three years whereby playground disputes are successfully settled by the pupils themselves if they wished, or by pupils and teacher. In this system teachers and principal are not remote onlookers but, from the sidelines, closely observe the operating of the system to guide and encourage the pupils' participation. Without the earnest support of the teachers the system would soon wither and come to nothing.

Following Langdale school's crisis of several years ago, a crisis that left three victims devastated and many others shaken, school staff and two successive principals have striven to build up morale.

Consequently when elementary school counsellor, Fran Jovick, outlined her peer counselling program whereby pupils could learn to mediate playground disputes by themselves, the Langdale teachers gladly supported it.

Now three years later not only are playground disputes mediated but also various other situations within the school. By trail and error Langdale school has developed a program that is now a model for other schools in the district.

Cedar Grove has 26 pupils now trained as peer counsellors, Gibsons and Sechelt are training pupils, and in Roberts Creek the staff is taking training in conflict resolution.

Fran Jovick's program, which deals with communicating clearly, managing anger, and resolving conflicts, has been drawn from a number of sources, among them a program in San Francisco.

From Simon Fraser University comes "The purpose of teaching conflict-resolution skills is not to show the right way to respond, nor is it to suppress conflict...but to look at conflict and find something beneficial arising from it."

Throughout Langdale school large posters list the eight steps to be taken in its problem solving sessions. Added to those already mentioned are these: each person tells what his or her best solution is, then after some discussion both accept a solution; following that the two work out a way to implement the solution, and if that doesn't work out to come back later to the counselling table.

Co-operation, responsibility, positive action and respect are the key words in this school's program.

In an article she published in the BC Teachers newsmagazine, Fran Jovick quotes a comment by a Grade 7 pupil in Langdale. "I came from Roberts Creek and peer counselling was new to me. When I walked around the school grounds, I saw problems being solved...like a miracle."

Do we have to wait until these youngsters grow up to have thoughtful public meetings without fisticuffs? And if in time this system replaces the adversarial law courts, where will all the lawyers go? We hope.

One thing appears certain that until the small neighbourhoods of the world can handle problems without anger and bitterness, world peace is a mere dream.

In the school yard the principal pointed to two boys picking up rubbish. "Yesterday," she said, "another pupil persuaded these two to settle a difference by having a fight at the far end of the play field. After a session of counselling, they came to the conclusion that a fight's not the way to resolve a problem at Langdale. They voluntarily decided to pick up the rubbish as a kind of penalty they set for themselves."

Blood needed

During the holiday season, the Canadian Red Cross is often faced with a shortage of blood donors.

On Tuesday, January 2 the next Sunshine Coast Blood Donor Clinic will be held in the Sechelt Legion from 3 to 8 pm (please note the change in time).

Healthy adults, weighing more than 45.5 kilograms and who are between the ages of 17 and 60 are eligible first-time donors. Any donor who has given blood within the last two years, may continue to give blood up to 71 years of age, with the permission of the clinic medical staff.

Peace group prepares for '90's

by Bev Cranston, 886-2215

Peace on earth and good will towards men. That was the message given to men on the first Christmas. This is also the message of the local chapter of the Sunshine Coast Peace Committee.

Lynn Chapman, a well known and outspoken Roberts Creeker and Peace Committee member since its inception spoke to the Coast News about this local group.

Last spring was the group's fifth anniversary. It all began at the Creekhous Restaurant when 60 to 70 people turned out for their first meeting, headed by and organized by the late Michael Burns. To date there are 15 regulars who attend monthly meetings with a much larger membership of 50 and a readership of Peace Committee newsletters of approximately 100.

Public awareness is very important. And how do you get the message of peace across? Meetings include guest speakers, videos and the circulation of Peace News promoting world disarmament. Lynn encourages people to join their group; "write letters to your MP's and newspapers protesting the arms race and expenditures on arms."

As Canadians we must clean up our own backyard. The Sunshine Coast group is working closely with the Canadian Peace Alliance Campaign. One of its long term protests has been to support the campaign against nuclear subs in Nanoose Bay.

Protesting low level flights by fighter planes in Goose Bay, Labrador is on the agenda for this year. Keeping Canadian air space Canadian and free of planes designed to deliver nuclear weapons is the purpose of this protest.

This year's Peace Walk will take place April 21 in Vancouver. It begins at Kitsilano Beach and ends up at Sunset Beach. This is a very popular event and the Sunshine Coast has always had a very large and enthusiastic turnout of locals take part in this walk. PEACE CAPRICORNS

Happy birthday to all you Capricorns out there, especially the ones born on Christmas and New Year's. May you all get many presents. If not, make your rightful demands in the summer for parties and presents, which you deserve.

Winner of the 1990 Chevrolet Lumina raffled off on December 23 by the Festival of the Written Arts, is Rob Jardine of Roberts Creek seen here with his prize. The car, Rob says, is now for sale. The second prize of a four day trip for two to Reno went to Janet Powell of Sechelt while Barb Yates of Gibsons is off for a romantic weekend for two at the Vancouver Pan Pacific Hotel as winner of the third prize. Jardine winner of Festival raffle

by Fran Burnside

Rob Jardine of Roberts Creek didn't believe the phone call he got on December 23 telling him that he was the winner of the metallic red 1990 Chevrolet Lumina in the Festival of the Written Arts' $100 per ticket raffle.

"I thought someone was pulling my leg," he told the Coast News as he was picking up the car keys at Sunshine GM. "I said, 'Ya, sure'. Then the woman caller said she could tell I didn't believe her, and gave me a number to call to confirm it. I even looked up the Festival of the Written Arts number before I dialed it to make sure.

And what did Rob do next? "I immediately went out and bought lottery tickets! But I didn't win."
Not a bad Christmas present to take home to the family. What did Rob say to his wife, Jackie?

"Well, first I told her I had bought a raffle ticket. Then I told her the good news."

Pender Patter

Stop sign vanishes

by Myrtle Winchester, 883-9099

The up-again, down-again stop sign at the entrance to the Madeira Park Shopping Centre is gone again. Officials are mystified and Motley has a solid alibi.

THE BEST

Christmas decoration effort was judged to be the Oak Tree Market with its impressive outside tree and cedar boughs, and they will be presented with a planter (including plants) by the Pender Harbour and Egmont Chamber of Commerce.

Second place in the competition was a tie vote for both Pender Harbour Realty and Marina Pharmacy.

Congratulations to the winners and to everyone else who helped Madeira Park look cheerful and Christmassy. Next year the contest will be expanded to include a category for residence decorations.

BOTTLE DRIVE

A bottle drive will be held on January 6 in Pender Harbour by the Beavers and Scouts, and they would like you to save your holiday empties for them. For more information call Tom Martin after 5 pm at 883-9434 or Ron Malcolm at 883-9015.

Egmont News

Egmont celebrated

by Dixie Percy, 883-9206

Well, phew! There goes another Christmas and Egmont celebrated, by all accounts, with one of the most enjoyable Christmas parties yet. Pity the few who missed it, like myself.

Visions of sugarplums dance in my head whenever someone tells me what a great time they had. Not only was there more delicious food than you could shake a stick at, there was musical entertainment provided by our own quartet of Denny, Sue, Janet and Dave.

Santa was on hand, of course, with presents for all the kiddies - no mean feat, and Ted and Bobbe Erby were there to everyone's delight. What a pleasant note to end the year on. Thanks to everyone who contributed their time and efforts.

Now it's 1990 and time to work on all of those New Year's resolutions. I have a few myself, I just hope I can stick with them for longer than two weeks.

There have been some big boats passing through Egmont lately but it's hard to miss the new boat in town, the Nordic Rand. Welcome to her owners, Marty and Deb Tucker and their little baby Laura May. They are putting their own finishing touches on and moving into Ky and Olga Silvey's old place.

The folks at the Fritz Family Restaurant are doubly thrilled at the arrival of not one but two new little granddaughters. John and Cheryl Fritz of Fort McMurray, Alberta had Chelsea Lynn, on December 21 and Peter and Denise Fritz of Madeira Park had Kayla May on December 23.

I may be hard to reach during the month of January so if you have any information you would like to pass on, just leave me a note at the Egmont Post Office.

That's all for this week. A happy and prosperous New Year to all.

NO FINES

No fines for overdue books returned to the Pender Harbour Reading Centre this month, regardless of when they were borrowed because January has been designated overdue book amnesty month.

MESSAGE

A message from the skipper, crew and passengers aboard the carol ship Reefer. 'A big hooray and seasons greetings to Larry Barnes, who played, edited and recorded with special effects, the Christmas tape so much enjoyed on December 23'.

ELECTION RESULTS

Election results from Branch 112 of the Royal Canadian Legion are as follows:

President, Geoff Crowther; past president, Jim Murphy; first vice-president, Jim Summer; second vice-president, Harold Clay; treasurer, Bob Jaggard; secretary, Joyce Clay.

The new executive is Dave Pritchard, Joe Adams, Doug McCleod and Alfred Berg.

King of Safecrackers

Deported to disaster

by Peter Trower

The word has spread quickly about Herb Wilson's release. At almost every stop, the by-now half-legendary crime boss is besieged by a fresh phalanx of excited reporters. More flattered than annoyed, he answers their queries patiently in the precise scholarly voice that suggests far more education than he actually possesses.

Some of the other deportees - small time hoods for the most part, with no flashy reputations to boast, look on with a certain respect. They are travelling with an underworld celebrity.

At Chicago, the Canadian deportees are transferred to a Grand Trunk train, bound for Windsor, Ontario. Wilson has time for a brief reunion with his sister Violet and her husband before his train heads for the Detroit border crossing.

He also becomes friendly with a reporter named Barney Armstrong who has been sent down from a Toronto newspaper to interview him. Armstrong elects to ride back to Canada with Wilson.

A hitch develops at the Detroit border however. Official consent for Herb Wilson's re-entry to Canada has not yet been received from Ottawa. As a result, he is forced to remain at the Immigration Offices while all the others pass through. For four days he hangs in legal limbo - quite literally a 'man without a country'.

The frustrating delay gives Wilson plenty of time to think. Gazing through the window at the outskirts of Detroit, he remembers wryly how his whole criminal odyssey began here with Herb Cox and Lou, almost two decades before.

What a strange and prophetic turning point that had been. Now Cox is long dead on the Bridge of Sighs and Lou, who was never apprehended perished in a shootout during an abortive robbery, a few months after the others were taken.

What a crazy waste it all was. What did it gain any of them in the end? Shaking his head, Herb Wilson turns away from the window.

Finally the necessary papers on Wilson come through from Ottawa and he receives the news with a great deal of relief. Shortly after, Herb Wilson sets foot on Canadian soil again for the first time in many years. He boards another train and heads for London, unaccompanied at last, by either guards, other ex-prisoners or police. It is a heady feeling to take charge of his own destiny again.

Talent at Chatelech

by Laura Russell

Chatelech Secondary School students were astounded and amazed by the unimaginable talent displayed by their fellow students who appeared in the school's Christmas "Gong Show".

Extroverted pupils who sang, acted, juggled, and danced, drew roars of laughter from the crowd and relatively few gongs from the three teachers who were acting as "Honourary Gongers".

School was suspended from 1 to 3 o'clock to allow for the show in celebration of the two week long Christmas vacation.

Sechelt Seniors

Block 7 site discussed

by Larry Grafton

The first meeting with regard to negotiations on the proposed lease site on Block 7, between the Municipality and Branch 69 was held in the Municipal Hall at 9 am on December 14. Those on the negotiating team, and present, were Mayor Tom Meredith, Alderman Bob Graham, Administrator Malcolm Shanks, Seniors' President Mike Timms, President-elect John Miller and Len Herder.

To date of course, nothing is carved in stone. Discussion centred on conforming building design, use of the multi-function centre, terms of the lease, start-up of building construction after the referendum (to be held in early 1990) parking, landscaping, sewer, water etc. Further meetings are planned early in the New Year.

The new activity centre will remain a Seniors Activity Centre administered by Branch 69.

HEALTH DROP-IN
Our new first vice-president, Gerry Chailier is in the process of initiating a new health drop-in centre. For a start it will be held in our present hall.

The plan is to enlarge the program when our new activity centre is completed. Such a program can be quite beneficial to all seniors, whether members or not, and particularly to our 'older seniors'.

This will be a mutual aid program focussing on self-care and will offer seniors a place to get information and support for keeping well. The program will probably be held once a week, and at the same place and time, which will be governed for a start, at least, by available space in our present hall.

A variety of professional and retired resource people will be sought to give individual counselling. When developed, this program can help all seniors of the community to obtain referral information to appropriate community services.

They will, in turn, be able to obtain the support necessary to develop a personal plan for keeping well.

Rhythms of Life

Into the 1990's

by Penny Fuller

Welcome to the last decade of the 20th century. Lots of people believed we'd never make it, for lots of different reasons.

Sometimes I get the feeling that if we can make it to the year 2000, everything's going to be okay - rather like the bridge in the Legend of Sleepy Hollow. If we can just make it over that bridge without the spectre of nuclear war, pollution or natural disaster catching us, we'll be safe. The bridge is now in sight.

The last two months of 1989 was replete with world-changing events which I can say with absolute certainty (in retrospect) I could have predicted.

There is no question that we are all in a time of accelerated change - both internationally and individually. In August 1987, an event occurred which saw millions of people all over the world congregate in the face of media mockery and ridicule to mediate and pray for world-wide healing. The 'Harmonic Convergence' on August 16 and 17 of that year, was said to be the time indicated by Hopi legend and the Mayan calendar marking the beginning of a five-year period of rapid change and polarization of energies.

Mid-February, 1990 marks the halfway point in that time frame. On a world-wide basis, the slower-moving outer planets (Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto) which indicate generational as well as personal trends, reflect the major house cleaning that is taking place all over the world.

As Pluto continues to grind its way through the middle of Scorpio, we will continue to see long-concealed abuses of power exposed. Meanwhile, Uranus and Neptune move through Capricorn indicating that structures (such as the Berlin Wall, banks, churches and governments) will either dissolve or blow-up.

No, I am not suggesting that by this time next year we will not have any banks, churches or governments. But those aspects of the structures which are corrupt, dishonest and restrict the fulfillment of individual's potential will continue to be exposed and discarded.

At the same time during 1990 Saturn, which upholds established structures and social orders, will also be in Capricorn as we're likely to be dealing with some backlash until it moves into Aquarius in 1991.

On a more personal basis, as the pace of change increases and you are confronted with situations you would have preferred to avoid, you may feel overwhelmed by events in your life during the upcoming year.

There's no point in trying to keep things the way they have been, or hold onto things that may have been restricting your personal development (whether or not you're aware of it). It will have about as much affect as stopping to reason with the 'Headless Horseman'. If you can allow the changes, let go of things, situations, people, etcetera that seem determined to change and/or leave, the void which is left will be filled. The indications are, for most of us, that it will be filled with something much better and much more life supportive.

It doesn't matter whether it's a job, a dream, a relationship or your self-image. During the next year, when you're confronted with the possible loss of something you value, it will be important to let go, look within yourself, and try to make whatever changes are necessary to open yourself to the full potential of the 21st century.

Six months ago, if I had written that the Berlin Wall would come down, you would have thought I was full of hot air (at best).

Now I am saying that your potential is more vast than you can possibly comprehend at this moment. If you will allow changes to take place in your life without extreme resistance, if you find the courage to look into your own dark corners this year and acknowledge that you're not a saint yet, you will break down the restrictive barriers within yourself allowing an infinite range of possibilities to surge in.

Happy 1990.

DINING GUIDE

A listing of restaurants and pubs

Toast of the Coast

When you have a car full of hungry kids too boisterous and untamed to bring inside a restaurant, and you definitely don't want them in your home, bring them to Ernie and Gwen's Drive-in on Highway 101 in Gibsons and feed them right there in the car. Or, on those rare but wonderful sunny days, sit at the picnic tables provided and let the youngster (and everybody else too) dig into hamburgers, hotdogs, fish and chips, pizzas, chicken, thick and delicious milkshakes and all kinds of ice cream desserts. Actually, Ernie and Gwen's is a great place to go even if you haven't got a car full of kids!

And Ernie and Gwen's also provides free delivery after 6 pm on a minimum order of $10 which is a handy service to have when you are too tired to cook and too tired to go out. In our household, it's used a lot.

The other day, for example, we were celebrating a birthday, which is an exhausting process at the best of times but after a full day at the office...well, time to call Ernie and Gwen's! We ordered a fish burger, a deluxe cheeseburger, a medium vegetarian pizza, a large order of onion rings, one small order of fries and three chocolate milkshakes. It was delivered promptly right to the door and we dipped into our pockets a mere $17.25 for what seemed like a feast with pizza left over to microwave the next day.

The food at Ernie and Gwen's is consistently good, the service provided by the young staff is friendly and helpful and the drive-in's convenient location and home delivery makes it a much appreciated alternative to a sit-down restaurant or a homecooked meal.

Try it, you'll like it.

SPORTS

The Gibsons scrub football Grey Cup was played out on the afternoon of December 24 at Gibsons Elementary School. Penalties and rules were in force: with offensive and defensive passing, no straight-arming and, of course, no running plays at the fellow with the camera standing benignly by the sidelines. The final score is unknown as the photographer promptly left when the latter rule was completely ignored by the football enthusiasts.

Starting tomorrow, January 2, a ride on the BC Ferries is going to cost more.

On major routes, the regular passenger fares are going up 25 cents; care fares, 50 cents; commercial vehicle fares, 15 cents a foot; and bus fares will be raised 10 cents a foot.

The new fare for overweight vehicles will be $23, a 50 cent increase for a one-way trip, and the cost for a car and driver on a round trip to the Sunshine Coast will be $22.50, up from $21.75.

made the rate increase announcement last month, "for the second year in a row, there will be no increase in the regular fare for children ages 5 to 11." On the major routes it will remain at $2.25.

"It is essential that BC Ferries maintain a sound financial base for the on-going and future operation of the fleet," Johnston said.

A Guid New Year

by Ruth Forrester, 885-2418

This is the time of year when there is only one way in which to start off this column. And that is, to wish a Guid New Year tae one and all, and money may ye see...translation is not necessary since it is toned down from the original and can hopefully be understood by everyone.

May you all have a healthy and happy year as this new decade begins.

This is the first Christmas that I have missed the Halfmoon Bay School Christmas concert as we were away for that week. Sorry to have missed what was probably a delightful evening.

We spent the week with family in the San Jose area and heard some quite hair-raising stories about earthquake experiences as well as viewing some of the damage incurred.

But among all the dreadful tales there was one which really didn't have anything to do with earthquakes but which turned out to be a good one.

This friend owns a big golden retriever, a gentle well behaved dog. Their next door neighbour with whom the family are very friendly, had a pet white rabbit. One day the dog came home with the rabbit in its mouth, not blood stained, but dead.

They didn't want to tell the neighbour that their dog had killed this special rabbit so they cleaned it all up and in the evening slipped over to the house and placed the rabbit in its hutch.

Next morning the rabbit owner appeared at the neighbour's door, a stiff drink in hand and trembling sightly. "Something very wierd has happened. A couple of days ago the rabbit died and I buried it in the yard," says he. Needless to say, the dog owner did not confess the true story and the rabbit owner is still mystified.

As the saying goes - 'only in California'.

AT THE HALL

Welcome Beach Community Hall has been a busy spot throughout the Christmas and New Year period. A noon time Christmas dinner was served to some 30 people during which the Sunshine Choristers gave a selection of carols and Christmas songs. Santa presented everyone with a little gift and a most enjoyable afternoon was had by all.

Special thanks are due to the couple who make this event possible, Bill and Marg Vorley. This good pair cooked the whole dinner for this event as well as arranged for entertainment. Bill even donned the red coat and white beard.

On the following evening the ladies of Welcome Beach Community Association cooked and served a wonderful turkey dinner to some 60 people. John Slater kindly played Christmas carols which were sung lustily by all. Dancing followed to the music of the big bands.

Thanks to all who worked so hard.

Although things are a bit more quiet at the hall, activities are due to start up again. On Friday January 5 all those who enjoy a game of bridge will be made welcome starting at 1 pm.

POST OFFICE

The latest news on the Halfmoon Bay Post Office situation is that Uli Lucas, who is presently acting postmistress has received a letter from the head office confirming her last day will be January 10.

An extension of time has been requested for further discussion by the local people and if this extension is granted there will be a public meeting some time in mid-January, date to be announced.

Priest mourned

Many long-time residents of the Sunshine Coast will be saddened to learn of the death in Vancouver on December 22 of Father Fred McWade.

Father McWade served as a missionary priest here in Sechelt from 1957 to 1961. He then moved to Ottawa where he had been ordained in June of 1957. Later he returned to BC to serve as a Pastor in Hope.

He retired in 1981 due to failing health. Father McWade is buried in the Oblate Cemetery in Mission, BC. He was 64 years old.

As our son reached the top of a blind hill there was a car stopped about 3 car lengths ahead. Thanks to your "Brake and Avoidance" teaching, our teenage son avoided an accident that could have resulted in serious injury to a mother and young child. When he needed to know what to do in a split second, he had the knowledge because of you. Keep up the good work, and God bless you.

Guess Where

The usual prize of $5 will be awarded the first correct entry drawn which locates the above. Send your entries to reach the Coast News, Box 460, Gibsons by Saturday of this week. Last week's winner was Christopher Lee of Gibsons who correctly identified the cross lit up on St. Bartholomew's Anglican Church in Gibsons. Last week's winners of the Bonus Guess Where were Margo, Niki, and Amy Hursche of Madeira Park who correctly identified the sign at Ruby Lake Resort in Pender Harbour.

Police news

Since December 18, the Gibsons RCMP have conducted Counter Attack road checks and during this period, two impaired driving charges were laid. Four roadside suspensions were also issued.

On December 18 in the late morning a truck driven by the new owner/operator of Turenne Concrete Pumping stalled on the steep slope of Abbs Road near Winn Road at the site of a new driveway pour for a house under construction.

With no brakes operable the truck began to move back down the hill. The driver cranked hard on the steering wheel to set the truck on a course towards the roadside, and jumped clear. He sustained a sprained ankle and wrist.

The truck ended on its side in a planting of azaleas, part of the gardens of a residence on Abbs Road. No other vehicles or pedestrians were on this stretch of well used street at the time.

A police spokesman said the incident is considered accidental and no charges have been laid.

SECHELT RCMP

The Sechelt detachment of the RCMP are pleased to report that it has been a quiet week in the Sechelt area. They also appreciate the co-operation which the public has given towards helping keep the holiday season a safe one.

Correction

Editor:

I would like to correct a misunderstanding that was printed in your newspaper some weeks ago, that the SPCA owns property, gives shots and deworming. We encourage people to have this done but we certainly do not own property. It would be very nice if we did.

We do give out certificates that pay part of the cost of spaying and neutering. It is to encourage people that cannot afford to get it done, to do so.

Frances Ayres, Director
SPCA

In praise of Halfmoon Bay Post Office

Editor:
Re: Halfmoon Bay Post Office.

As former Postmistress I feel compelled to add my comments. The Halfmoon Bay Post Office serves over 700 households, a remarkable increase of over 60 per cent in five years, and it appears there is no end in sight.

The post office is ideally located to serve area residents. If Canada Post wishes to enhance its service by adding rural franchises, fine, but not at the expense of reducing existing service.

Notwithstanding the transfer of mail sortation to Sechelt, Mrs. Lucas is still required to have trained staff on duty to provide all the counter services of any other post office. Her workload is not substantially reduced, and in my view, the compensation offered is grossly inadequate.

The post office has been an integral part of this community for many years, and the public have been generally well served. Canada Post was aware of my pending resignation three months ago.

The typically bureaucratic manner in which they have handled this whole matter, and resulting controversy is most upsetting. In the unfortunate event the post office closes it will be Canada Post's fault for not paying Mrs. Lucas a fair wage for all the work she is required to do.

For obvious reasons, I urge any retailer contemplating a postal franchise to very carefully consider all the pros and cons before entering into any contract.

Halfmoon Bay, BC

Guide commended

Editor:

I should like to commend to your readers The Canadian Green Consumer's Guide, prepared by the Pollution Probe Foundation and published by McClelland & Stewart Inc. For only $14.95 one can possess in a single easy-to-read volume as complete a summary of the basic elements of our environmental problems as the average citizen would wish to know plus a practical guide to what that same citizen can do about it in everyday life.

Written in practical, unbiased straight-forward language with plenty of illustrations and encapsulated summaries, the book explains the various types of pollution we face (land, water and air), the waste or overuse of resources, and the threat to our food from direct and indirect chemicalization and contamination.

In each case, it relates these problems to the things we do, the goods we buy and the food we eat and offers suggestions as to how we can make a difference by changing our consumption habits.

This eminently readable book is subdivided in such a way that it can be picked up for casual reading at any time at virtually any page with the guarantee that five minutes reading (or even skimming) will yield interesting and useful information.

The book should be on every book and magazine stand, in every library, waiting room and classroom, and on every home book shelf.

Harold G. Brandreth
Halfmoon Bay, B.C.

Editor:

The Peace Committee raffle was drawn at our potluck supper on Sunday night December 17. I would like to announce the winners.

They are: K. Beamish of Vancouver, first choice of the prizes; D. Drachh of Madeira Park, second choice; and Ed Hobertz also of Madeira Park, third choice.

The Peace Committee would like to publicly thank the local artists and craftspeople who have so generously supported our raffle each year. This year our prizes were donated by Mary Christmas, Greta Guzek and Gail Woodhouse.

Thanks also to those who purchased our raffle tickets. Your support enables us to continue our peace work.

At this time we would also like to thank Super Valu for supplying our food for the Arts Council Craft Fair food booth held December 2 at a discount. Their continuing generosity is much appreciated.

In closing, may I wish you, your staff and your readers a Happy New Year where peace is a way of life all over the world.

Down the creek

Editor:

Have you ever stopped beside a little creek

In the thickest part of the forest.

Watched the cool rich water

Slip along the lime moss banks.

While beneath the flow, life teems

Among a potpourri of leaves and things.

That heavy scent of life and warmth

Aching in your senses,

Would twirl your thoughts on a leaf.

Down, down the little creek.
