BC forest renewal plan sparks concern, questions on Coast

by Darah Hansen

Representatives with Forest Renewal BC — the province's newest Crown corporation — kicked off their first week of business last week by answering questions and taking direction from communities around the province, including the Sunshine Coast.

Roger Stanyer, chief executive officer of the newly formed corporation and chair of its interim board of directors, was in Sechelt Thursday (July 28) to hear the opinions of local residents regarding the Forest Renewal Plan.

The plan, announced last April by Mike Harcourt's NDP government, is expected to pump two billion new dollars into provincial silvicultural programs at a rate of $400 to $600 million per year.

The money is to come from increased stumpage prices.

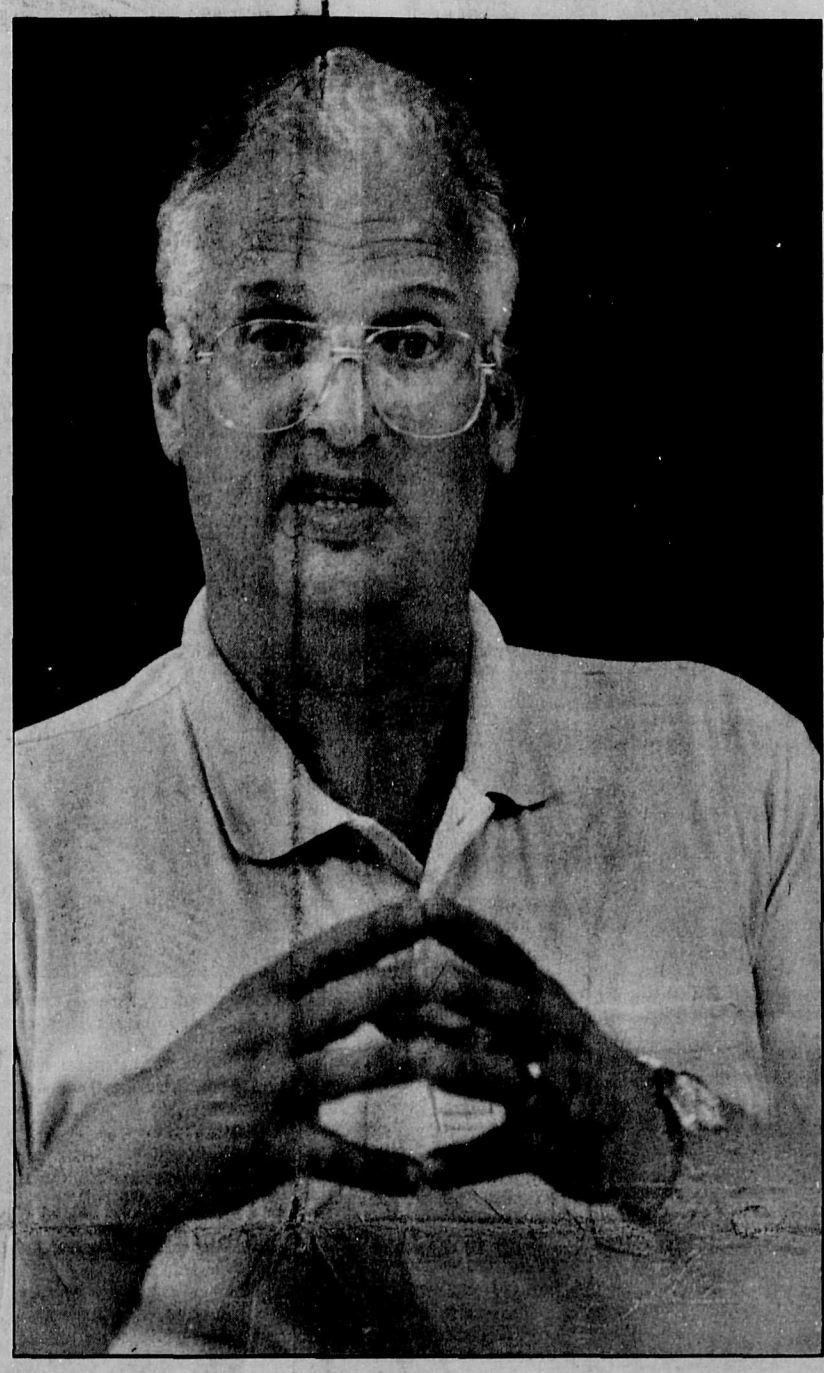
Questions from the Sechelt meeting last week ranged from general inquires into how and when forest renewal money will be distributed throughout the province to specific concerns regarding the restoration of former Coast logging sites such as the Chapman and Gray Creek watersheds.

Stanyer said the corporation is currently up and running but would likely not begin to process applications for forest renewal programs until later in the year.

He said before any money is distributed, discussions among the corporation's board of directors will take place to determine the criteria on how local funds will be spent.

"This is not a social program," Stanyer said to the crowd of approximately 50 people present at Thursday's meeting.

"We want to get money back into the communities...(but) first of all, the work has to be valuable, work that needs to be done."



Roger Stanyer, chief executive officer and interim chair of the recently created provincial crown corporation in charge of BC's forest renewal plan, talks about how his office will operate. Stanyer was at Greenecourt Hall Thursday evening with MLA Tom Perry to present the plan and field questions.

Stanyer urged community residents to support the Forest Renewal Plan, warning if they didn't, the government could choose to "back off" the plan and use the anticipated $2 billion from stumpage increases in other programs.

Meanwhile, members of the interim board of directors for Forest Renewal BC say they are hopeful the plan will serve to increase employment in the BC logging economy as well as benefit the environment.

"It's obvious there is some potential here to make significant changes in the way we care for the forests in BC," said Ann Hillyer, a lawyer with the West Coast Environmental Law Association.

Joanne Kineshanko, mayor of Lumby and member of the Okanagan Forestry Community Coalition, added, she's "excited" with the plan.

"For once (the government) is saying stumpage should actually be returned to the (logging) industry."

The interim board currently consists of nine people selected from around the province as well as two government cabinet ministers.

According to a government press release from the office of the premier, its make-up is intended to reflect a "broad geographic and sectoral cross section of the province."

The board — which represents Native, environmental and logging concerns — does not have a member sitting from the silvicultural community.

That's an omission Dirk Brinkman, president of the Canadian Silvicultural Contractors Association, said he hopes to remedy by next year's establishment of the permanent board.

Sechelt wrestles with fire, land clearing issues

by Jane Seyd

The idea of banning open land-clearing fires in the District of Sechelt is back on the front burner.

Following complaints from residents about smoke and falling ash, Sechelt Council is once again looking at alternative ways to get rid of wood waste.

Last week, a group of local contractors hoping to combine business with more environmentally-friendly methods attended a meeting at the district to explain their proposals for hoggers, chippers and air-curtain burners.

Several sites would be needed around the Coast to collect wood from land-clearing, they told environment committee chair Rosina Giles.

Operators of those sites would charge fees to drop off material.

The wood waste would then get disposed of by chipping or hog-fuel machines which would probably be rented and transported around to different sites.

Already two operators in Sechelt, including Robert Stockwell and another contractor with property on Norwest Bay Road, have said they're interested in setting up a business.

On the lower end of the Coast, contractor Ken Fiedler is seeking approvals for a site which would involve a combination turning wood into hog fuel for Port Mellon and burning it in a special air-curtain burner.

The burner incinerates wood at between 1800 and 2000 degrees F, reducing it to five per cent of its original volume but with much less smoke than conventional burning, said Fiedler.

Some concerns about the new disposal methods were also raised by district residents at the meeting.

Sheila Fletcher said she is concerned about the potential fire hazard in accumulating wood waste on the sites and about the possibility of accidental burns.

Several residents said operators of the sites should be required to put in fire protection measures.

Linda Williams also raised the issue of noise from hoggers and chippers operating near residential areas: "They're very large machines."

Sechelt Fire Chief Bill Higgs said the alternatives to land-clearing fires are heading in the right direction.

So far, though, cost is still an issue.

An acre of land which costs $2,000 to $3,000 to clear by open burning might cost $12,000 to be cleared through chipping and a special burner, said Fiedler.

The sites are also not cheap for operators to set up.

Currently, the Port Mellon co-generation plant has a surplus of free hog fuel from wood waste already available, says mill manager Don Stuart.

If Coast contractors got disposal sites up and running, however, the mill would likely be able to make some arrangements for using the material.

Sechelt council recently voted to re-consider its burning bylaw which currently allows for land-clearing fires.

Health unit reduces 'traditional' services

by Ian Cobb

Over-worked staff and extra programs are forcing the Coast Garibaldi Health Unit to restrict services.

Citing an ever increasing workload and added "priority" programs (ie. tobacco sales legislation)," the health unit warned the Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) that "response times" on services and programs will be cut back.

The warning came through a letter received by the SCRD during a July 28 board meeting.

"At present, Environmental Health Officers are spending a disproportionate amount of time on land management programs and miscellaneous services to the detriment of our health related regulatory mandates in such areas as food, drinking water and swimming pool safety," reads the letter, signed by R.D. Watson, chief environmental health office.

The announcement was greeted with scorn by Gibsons mayor Eric Small.

"Quite frankly, it really disturbs me we have a letter from a government agency saying they can't do their job," he said.

'Quite frankly, it really disturbs me we have a letter from a government agency saying they can't do their job'

-Eric Small

SCRD chair Peggy Connor defended the health unit saying it is only battling along with what the Ministry of Health has given them to work with.

"These people are run off their feet," Connor said.

Both Small and Area E alternate director Dick Derby scoffed at the health unit's statement that having to deal with new tobacco sales legislation is keeping them from providing more traditional services.

"They're trying to pass their problems on to us," Small said.

"They've got to monitor who is selling tobacco to whom," Connor noted.

Among the services restricted by the health unit are, as outlined in their letter: investigation into sanitation complaints (garbage, rats, etc), enteric (intestinal) disease investigation unless association with outbreaks, reduced participation in local area committees with the exception of Waste Water Management Planning, and a reduction in routine school inspections. The health unit will also reduce the number of routine inspections of personal service establishments such as tanning and hair facilities and cut back on the routine inspection of summer camps and industrial camps.

Response to referrals from other agencies and sewage disposal complaints (unless there's a health hazard) will see reductions as well.

In addition to cutting back service, the health unit is asking local governments to assist them in providing water quality sampling programs for area beaches which have a history of "significant risk." These will be the only beaches tested for water quality.

"In order to attempt to provide a reasonable level of service in high priority health programs, as no additional resources are anticipated, we had no alternative but to consider these actions," Weston said.

Small suggested the SCRD write a letter to MLA Gordon Wilson noting dissatisfaction with the expected delays in service.

SCRD backs dog control guidelines

by Ian Cobb

The pounding continues.

During a July 28 meeting, Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) directors supported a recent decision by dog control officer Stan Jones to stop using the SPCA shelter in Gibsons.

In a July 13 letter to the SPCA, Jones informed the SPCA the regional district will no longer use the SPCA to impound stray or problem dogs.

Jones has arranged to place impounded animals in Magus Kennel, located in Roberts Creek on Highway 101. He also outlined a new set of proposed guidelines "to be used by the SCRD to release impounded dogs to the SPCA for them to adopt back into the community."

The list of guidelines Jones has presented are "illegal and inhumane," said SPCA president Lynn Hauka in a July 20 letter to the Coast News.

However, SCRD administrator Larry Jardine said guidelines need not be legislated and Jones developed his plan based around guidelines adopted in "another area."

"I think the thing is really getting out of hand," said Electoral Area D alternate director Harry Almond. Almond refuted the notion that all animals picked up by Stan Jones will be euthanised and chastised the SPCA for their "policy of not euthanising any animal.

"They keep every animal, no matter what its condition is. They have 90 cats in there because they don't believe in putting them down." Almond, a former SPCA member, chastised the group for not doing anything about such things as noise complaints while they maintain a no-euthanasia policy.

They have the attitude "we are here, we have complete control—the rest of you can go jump," he said. Almond defended Jones, saying the dogcatcher to be "very helpful and he's very gentle with animals."

Among Jones' guidelines for dogs the SCRD will not release to the SPCA for adoption include dogs that have bitten or show signs they could bite, "extremely" old dogs, fence jumpers, dogs turned into the SCRD for euthanasia, dogs the owners don't want turned over to the SPCA, dogs deemed "repeat offenders" and slightly injured or with health problems (with consultation).

According to Almond, however, the ratio of animals that fall into Jones' guidelines concerning biters and vicious dogs are "one in 500," he said.

Gibsons mayor Eric Small said in his view it is "extremely unfortunate" the board has become involved with the issue and asked if the board is duplicating an existing service with the SPCA and Magus Kennels both keeping stray and unwanted animals.

A tentative meeting between SPCA and SCRD dog control committee is planned for August.

Proposed mental health facility raises questions

by Jane Seyd

For one man in Davis Bay, a group home for mentally ill people in his neighbourhood would save him seven hours of travel to Vancouver every day to visit his wife in hospital.

But for others, the possibility remains a threat. They say they're worried about safety, and they're not happy with the way the plan's been brought to their community.

Both sides had a chance to speak and ask questions at a public forum Wednesday night at the Davis Bay/Wilson Creek community hall.

Marie Belle Bulmer, director of mental health services for the Sunshine Coast, explained the proposal is to build a six-bed group home for the mentally ill on the Kirkland Centre site in Davis Bay.

The residence is for people who aren't dangerous and don't need to be in hospital, but still need supervised care they can't get at home, she said. Money from the project comes from downsizing at the Riverview mental hospital on the Lower Mainland, based on the idea of taking people out of institutions and instead providing health care in their communities.

If the project goes ahead, it would provide four long-term beds and two emergency beds.

The plan is to build a two-story house on the site, which would be looked after by BC Housing.

A group home on the Coast has been a goal for about the last five years, said Bulmer.

Currently mentally ill people from the Coast who need this kind of care have to go to group homes in the Lower Mainland.

That can be hard on local families.

The man who visits his wife in Vancouver (and asked that his name not be published) already knows that.

Staff, volunteers, program members and residents of Totem Lodge, Shorncliffe, Kiwanis Care Home and Kirkland Centre enjoy annual Porpoise Bay group picnic Thursday. Joel Johnstone photo

"People who are mentally ill need family support," he told the meeting. And unfortunately, "out-patient care isn't good enough." The situation is similar for several other families on the Coast, he added.

Bulmer said no one who is criminally insane or dangerous will be accepted at the group home. Most residents would likely have schizophrenia or a bipolar disorder.

But for several people at the meeting, those assurances weren't good enough.

"It seems at the most, this community is looking at five or six at-risk people on the Coast," said Bruce Milne.

Some wanted to know who will be responsible if there are problems with the home and how guidelines for admitting residents will work in practice for emergency placements.

"What's going to happen at the late night decisions - when it's midnight and the police arrive at the door?" asked Carin Amber.

For Amber, chair of the Davis Bay parents advisory group, and other parents at the meeting, safety of children was also a concern.

"I don't think my concerns about supervision and childhood safety have been fully addressed," Amber said.

"We're talking about a school a block away that has 185 kids under the age of twelve."

Rob Chetwyn, hired to be manager of Kirkland House if the plan goes through, said residents are free to walk around in the community or take the bus into town. For a home with six residents, two trained staff members would usually be at the home during the day, with one staff person there at night (and a manager on-call). Mental Health also has a 24-hour assessment phone line,

Since March this year, two residents with mental illness have been living at Kirkland Centre, taking part in a program run by Chetwyn.

Several people at the meeting said they're upset by what they've seen as an attempt by Mental Health to sneak the group home in, without consulting people in the community.

Several also thought the issue should go to referendum.

A decision on whether the home will be allowed on the site has not yet been made.

Day in court for last of Coast Clayoquot protesters

by Jane Seyd

The last group of Clayoquot protesters from the Sunshine Coast have finally had their day in court.

One year after leading a group of local environmentalists to protest logging in Clayoquot Sound, Peter Light, along with four other Coast residents, appeared before BC Supreme Court Justice Wong in Victoria July 22 for sentencing.

All got 21-day terms, to be served under electronic monitoring.

This week, Light said looking back he doesn't regret taking part in arrests at the Clayoquot last summer.

"In one way you can say we failed," he said, because logging is still going in the sound.

He said if the protests had been planned differently perhaps the logging could have been stopped. "As an environmental movement, we have a lot to learn."

But he added with each protester's actions, "there are untold ripples that flow out from that."

Also sentenced July 22 were Shad Light, Ryan Dalrymple, Grant Olsen and Scott Harris.

The last group of Sunshine Coast environmentalists to make it through the court system were part of trial 36 of the Clayoquot protesters. There were 38 trials in total.

One unusual twist for Light and the four other protesters sentenced July 22 is they haven't actually been required to wear the ankle bracelets.

Bill Bayly, spokesman for the electronic monitoring office for the Vancouver region, said recently they've run out of the electronic monitors. "A lot of it's due to the number of Clayoquot protesters who've come through in the past couple of months," said Bayly, whose office normally has 71 units. "This is the highest our count's ever been."

Instead, Light and the other Coast residents sentenced have been required to follow a schedule for each day set up by the office, similar to those for people who actually wear the ankle bracelets.

Light said the sentence hasn't changed his activities.

"I'm doing exactly what I do normally."

With time off for good behaviour, the protesters could be finished their sentences by the end of the week.

Last Tuesday, Burnaby-Kingsway MP Svend Robinson was also sentenced for his part in the Clayoquot protests.

He refused electronic monitoring and is serving a 14-day sentence in a Fraser Valley institution.

There may soon be a plan afoot to soften the pebble beach panorama of Trail Bay with sand.

Chamber ponders sand for Trail Bay beach

by Jane Seyd

Aloha Sechelt.

That's what residents and visitors could be saying as they stroll along a new and improved Trail Bay beach if plans by the chamber of commerce and the district come about.

Still in the very early stages, the idea is to dump sand on the shore at Trail Bay, thereby turning a pebbly beach into one that's more inviting by average postcard standards.

Said Councillor Don Rose at the most recent council meeting, "It would be nice to have some sand on the beach so it looks like Hawaii."

According to some people, that's the way it used to be.

Sechelt resident Vic Walters, one of the first to raise the sandy beach idea, said as far as he knows sand was taken off the beach at one point in the past. "That's how nature had it and we want it back," he commented.

But another lifelong Sechelt resident disagrees. "I can remember back 75 years and it was gravel," said Billie Steele, adding she thinks the plan to dump sand is "just plain stupid."

So far, the idea is only being talked about.

John Thompson, acting chair for Sechelt's economic development committee, said a lot of environmental issues would have to be looked at first, as well as costs and public comment.

Rick Higgins, chief habitat manager of fisheries for the south coast region, said his office would definitely have to take a look at the proposal before anything is dumped.

Generally, a collection of rocks with algae attached is a better habitat than sand, which is sterile, he said.

The intertidal area of the beach is also especially important to marine life.

Approval from Crown Lands, which has authority over the foreshore, would also be needed before any sand gets strewn.

So far, questions like how much sand would be needed, how to transport it and how to get it to stay on the beach haven't been addressed in any detail.

But the project proponents might want to think about them.

"The sea tends to shape things the way they are right now," said Larry Sorken, in charge of Crown Lands for the Sunshine Coast.

"If there's gravel there now it will probably return to gravel."

Regardless whether the Trail Bay beach of the future is covered with sand or not, the chamber and district are hoping to turn people back towards the ocean. A pier for Trail Bay is another project being considered.

In the past, as a seaside village, a boardwalk and steamer stops provided a focus for social activity, said Thompson. But more recently, "we've turned our back on the sea," he said. "It seems a shame we've lost some of that."

Coordinator required for one-government talks

The Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) will decide Aug. 11 who will coordinate one government meetings and when those meetings will take place.

SCRD director and Gibsons' mayor Eric Small pressed fellow SCRD directors July 28 to remain diligent with their September deadline for public meetings concerning the issue of one government.

A main goal of the one government concept is to reduce duplication and triplication of government services to Coast residents.

"Here we are at the end of July and I'm concerned that nothing has been done yet," Small said regarding the SCRD's pledge earlier in the summer that a coordinator would be selected and an agenda would be ironed out to ensure the meetings planned for September meetings will flow smoothly.

SCRD chair Peggy Connor told Small a Ministry of Municipal Affairs team was scheduled to visit the Coast in mid-July but failed to make an appearance.

In addition, the SCRD has written to Victoria to ask for the funding they were promised by the ministry to help in the selection of a coordinator.

Connor said the ministry suggested the SCRD should proceed with their plans and do all the necessary pre-work.

"We can proceed with picking a facilitator so we can stay on target with our September meetings," Connor said.

Sunshine Coast area island residents used to travelling for their right to vote

by Ian Cobb

Having to hop it to vote isn't a major concern to Keats or Gambier Island residents.

In an open letter to the Sunshine Coast Regional District, Electoral Area F candidate John McNevin expressed his dismay over the fact that the 100-plus residents of the two islands must travel to Langdale if they wish to cast a vote in the Aug. 13 SCRD by-election.

However, while they appreciate McNevin's concerns, "It's not an issue," said Keats Island Islands Trust representative Kim Benson.

"As far as I know there's never been a polling station here for anything."

Having to take a ferry or a boat across the water to the mainland is a way of life for the islanders, she said."I have to go across to get my mail," Benson added.

"It's six of one and half a dozen of another," said Gambier Island resident and former Islands Trust member Leiani Anthony.

While voting stations have been held on Gambier for bigger elections, such as federal or provincial elections and there is now a place to vote in the recently opened Gambier Community Hall, the expense of holding a station on the island for the few votes that would be cast outweighs the placement of a voting station, she said

> 'It's not an issue'
> -Kim Benson

It's also a matter of possibly alienating some of the population of the island, with half living on one side and half on the other.

McNevin also expressed his disbelief at the SCRD holding an advanced poll on Aug. 5 at the SCRD offices in Sechelt.

An advanced poll for voters living in an Area south and east of Gibsons and on the islands to be held in Sechelt "boggles the mind," McNevin wrote, adding, "The decision does not constitute reasonable access."

Anthony agrees with McNevin on this point.

"That is inconvenient. It's way too far for people from Gambier and Keats," she said.

McNevin, currently a councillor on the Gibsons town council, suggests the Aug. 5 advance poll be held on the two islands so everyone in Area F has a chance to vote and to support the Gibsons Library, coming before the electorate in the form of a referendum once again.

The other candidate for Area F is Hopkins Landing resident Eric Cardinall.

Balancing books and taxes... improving our civic posture

A healthy library means a healthy community.

Libraries provide a research data base, they provide information to students, and they provide simple enjoyment. They are one of the most enduring symbols of civilization and they reflect a community's pride.

With this in mind, take a look at the Gibsons library one of these days and see what kind of pride you can muster. The space is cramped, the back rooms are stacked with books, and the study area consists of one small table and four chairs. There is simply no room.

There is, however, something that can be done, and done on a community level.

A referendum will be held next week in which Gibsons voters and those of areas E and F will be asked to support a new library in Gibsons.

Yes, the question came up in the fall of last year on a similar referendum and voters approved the concept by 80 per cent.

So why are we being asked to vote again? Because of a "technical error." (This in no way should reflect on the Gibsons library board. The screw-up was SCRD-generated.)

There will be two questions on this referendum, one asking voters to approve borrowing $1.5 million for the building of the library, another asking them to help pay for its operation through a mil-rate increase on their taxes.... this equates to a tax increase of roughly $10 per year for most home owners. (Those renting property in the affected areas are also entitled to vote in the referendum.)

Fact is, the area's population is growing at a rate that is nothing short of incredible. And that growth is reflected with mirror-accuracy in library use. According to library officials, use is increasing by 15 per cent a month, with much of the new business coming from outside Gibsons – Areas E and F.

Down the road, as the Coast's population continues to grow, it may be necessary to move to a branch-style operation for these outlying areas in which they will have libraries of their own, but for now, the Town of Gibsons has donated the land for the new library at Holland Park near the existing library. And everything is poised to go. The land is there, the architect's plans are in, council has given its blessing and there is dedication on the part of the library committee. All that is lacking is the support of the community... That's where next Saturday's referendum comes in.

Within two days of a positive vote, library construction will go to tender. Work could begin as early as September.

And we are not being asked to fund much in the way of frills through this referendum. The new library is simply a response to the population boom. The final result will be a facility on par with provincial standards, with a little breathing space for continued population growth.

There are a few worried library board members, however, leading up to the referendum. One of their fears is that area summer residents will vote against the library because it is not something which greatly affects them. Perhaps this is true. And perhaps the summer residents cannot be blamed too much. They more than likely help pay for a municipal library in their main place of residence.

However, if they enjoy their summers here, if they enjoy the beauty and quality of life, then they must too appreciate the town's need for a library. The amount they will be asked to pay is only a small token toward the benefits they reap.

Both questions on the Aug. 13 referendum will need a 'yes' vote in order to be effective. A no vote on either score will leave the library plans to topple like a badly stacked pile of books.

Vote yes Aug. 13.

Sorry to see it go

It was with sadness that I drove through Hopkins Landing last week to see George Skea's controversial boat shed being demolished.

I was one of George's neighbours who attended the Area Planning Committee meeting last fall.

It struck me that of the people who spoke at the meeting, those who would be most affected by the construction of the shed were largely in favour of George's venture and applauded his ambition. I wonder now if we were heard at all.

It was my understanding that George and the regional district had reached an agreement whereby George would dismantle the shed and replace it with one conforming to the bylaws. He had started to do this, but before he had a chance to finish, the machine moved in and destroyed his shed, his dreams, and thousands of dollars in materials.

What a waste! Of time, energy and money. Couldn't a better solution for all concerned, have been reached?

In support of Pillow Talk

Re: From T-Shirts to Tiaras ... Pillow Talk, Coast News, July 25, 1994

I agree with Darah Hansen that the Gibsons Ambassador Program remains a thinly disguised beauty pageant. The "Program" retains all the pageantry of crowns, gowns, capes and princesses. Supposedly the focus of the contest has shifted from the candidates' physical appearance to their ability to represent the community as an ambassador. I found it ironic therefore, that the first information listed under the candidates' names in the Coast News (July 18, 1994) was their height, hair color and eye color.

I contacted the Chamber of Commerce to inquire what relevance these physical characteristics had to a candidate's ability to act as an ambassador and was told that they were irrelevant and that the Coast News had taken it upon itself to print that information. When I contacted the Coast News I was advised that in fact the information was printed as submitted by the Chamber of Commerce.

If the contest is to remain a glorified beauty pageant then the Chamber should call it that and take responsibility for encouraging our youth to compete with one another on the basis of superficial characteristics. If it is a legitimate ambassador program then they should lose the pageantry and base the competition solely on what counts ... ambassador ability.

Golden Girl says thanks

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Coast News and its Selection Committee for choosing me to be Gibsons Golden Girl for 1994; it is a great honour.

My family and I have resided in Gibsons for 47 years and have certainly seen many changes in our community.

One thing that has not changed, however, is the spirit of co-operation and the enthusiasm of the community for an event such as the Sea Cavalcade. Such an event is wonderful because it brings together members of the community to have fun. For myself, I thoroughly enjoyed the entire weekend.

The good wishes and congratulations from community members were heart-warming and riding in the parade was a real thrill. It brought back many happy memories of bygone parades. One that I particularly remember occurred over 40 years ago, when Smitty's Marina entered a float representing a little red schoolhouse with our two children and their friends participating. The entries seem to be more every year, with lots of humour and professionalism, and of course, what's a parade without the bands; and, being of Scottish decent, the sound of the bagpipes brought tears to my eyes. The fireworks were spectacular and expertly displayed.

The Kinsmen Park activities and water sports were well attended with fun things to do for both the young and old.

It was a great weekend and all tourists and summer residents were well entertained. Well done, Gibsons!

Snow and smoke stacks... we're not in Sechelt anymore coastal beat

jane seyd

Growing in a pot that's far too small, on a windowsill overlooking leafy maple trees in southern Ontario, a hot pink geranium is blooming.

It doesn't sound exciting, but for me it is.

I planted that seed in January, a couple of weeks after my plane touched down at Pearson Airport. Outside the temperature was -35 with the windchill. The snow kept falling, and I hadn't seen sky that wasn't white or grey for days.

Amid the trauma of being a long-term west coaster dumped down in one of Ontario's worst winters, I seized on the tiny Ontario Seed Company package as a kind of personal talisman.

If the plants could somehow be induced to survive on my sill, I too could make it through my stint in Canada's most-maligned province.

Of course, even back then, I was aware that going from "out West" to "back East" was not the commonly accepted direction of travel.

Suffice it to say my reasons had something to do with mysterious forces long known for their lack of attention to rational behaviour, let alone climatic conditions.

Might as well see how the other half lives, I told myself. Soon I was a stranger in a strange land.

Predictably, I developed an obsession with the weather. Determinedly, I wore insulated rubber boots into March, while native Ontarians walked around on the snow in runners. Shedding any vestiges of west coast gypsy-ism, I developed a fashion sense that could best be described as early Michelin Man.

Months later, when the summer descended, I had my first truly visceral understanding of why air conditioners are such an important part of North American culture. I didn't have one, of course, but the neighbour did. The sound of it was a constant presence, like a plane idling for take-off on the other side of the screen.

As a novice to the "industrial heartland," previously acquainted mostly with pulp mills as my personal Blakian images, I developed a fascination with factories. There were old brick buildings with tiny panes of multi-coloured glass, vents blowing snow in plumes off the nearby roof. There was the plasticky smell rising out of the open windows of the shoe factory near downtown.

At the end of my street, the remains of the Sunshine Company sat brooding. In the boom years over 400 people worked there. It had been empty for four years by the time I saw it, grasses growing up around the entrance.

Most of the front windows had been smashed in. Birds swooped and soared around the smokestacks.

In search of further "urban Eastern experience" and historical flavour, I bought a Via Rail ticket to Montreal and Quebec City, and set off armed with a pocket French-English dictionary. I wandered around to churches eating bagels, hoping to bump into Leonard Cohen. I tiptoed around the National Assembly. I developed an appreciation of official bi-lingualism.

Back in Ontario, I developed a liking for a few other Eastern urban qualities: I enjoyed not having to get into a car to travel from my house to the park or the theatre or a restaurant. I spent whole afternoons browsing in the magazine section of the library.

Still, as I was once told, it's not the place, it's the people. When you get right down to it, having the amenities still wasn't much of a substitute for having a community.

Despite the address, throughout the six months in Ontario, there was never much question where home was.

Just click your heels together and repeat after me.

A dog's life isn't all it's cracked up to be in the middle

ian cobb

To me, life is one long unimpeded whiz.

It's hopping in my truck and going for long rides with my personal chauffeur. It's lying in the sun having primordial dreams in which I'm rending a fowl of life and lapping its warm blood.

It's running into the ocean and retrieving sticks thrown by my personal chauffeur/ chef/medic/ body guard/janitor.

Life is built around parameters designed by Mother Nature and as dogs, we never stray far from these parameters. Sure, every now and then one of us wanders back through the ages and grows wild, but we've evolved somewhat nicely, don't you agree?

Well, if you don't, you won't like it when I say we would have evolved quicker and become more intelligent if it wasn't for the interference of humans.

Somewhere wa-a-ay back in our history one of our lesser capable forebearers strayed into the warmth of a village campfire, blinded, deafened and muted by the arcuatous temptations of human society.

They lapped goat milk from bowls and had the tiny hands of human children pet them as they slept off huge wolfings of food that was simply tossed to them. None of this cavorting about the countryside chasing rabbits business—oh no. It was sheer luxury.

All except for the dogs that were domesticated for the sole purpose of being turned into dog leg sandwiches.

And there was a price to be paid for this luxury and we canines are still paying for it.

We swapped sleeping on nests of grasses for baskets in room corners. We gave up dining on wild game, carrion and long grasses for canned and bagged food and table scraps.

We traded in our inalienable rights to run whenever the urge takes hold to having to stand at doors whining to be let out to have a widdle.

And Mother Pooch if we should stray from the invisible boundaries of our yards!

We must wear jingling bits of metal like individuality-robbed soldiers and have strange, smiling people in white coats ram and poke things into us every hither and thither.

Our domesticity has become a nightmare of regulations.

I've heard that Canada is the most regulated nation of all upwardly mobile nations. Mind you, all nations are upwardly mobile to me, if you catch my drift.

We dogs are slowly being regulated into prisons. The powerbrokers, intimidated by the mewly whimperings and squeekings of the few, have pushed us into corners and soon all may be lost.

Powerbrokers allow a human, one they call the DOGCATCHER, to roam about the streets and backroads of our world to search out "strays" and take us away without nary a "by your leave."

Should I, or my pal Yoho the Piddlish accidently wander off across the invisible boundary and the dogcatcher spots us—well—goodnight Mister Rin Tin Tin. Follow this scenario, if you will my canine bretheran.

This human lunges at us with a large butterfly net. Yoho feigns to the right and I move left. The net whiffs onto the ground and the dogcatcher, his momentum flowing south, whumps into the turf.

Yoho, an excitable little mongrel at the easiest of times, decides to playfully nip the man, his bum sticking in the air like the hump of a dromedary in water-satiated repose.

With this simple reflex action, Yoho has just signed her death warrant.

You see, the powerbrokers' decrees are open ended and they have set various human sides alight with angry spleen ventilation. This is good.

The more they bicker, the better off we dogs are.

In my scenario, if Yoho is scooped by the dogcatcher she will likely be put to death because the powerbrokers will not release her to the SPCA. She has bitten.

I personally have nipped several other dogs that tried to sniff me when I didn't feel like being sniffed. Powerbroker criteria means I too should be sentenced to a fate cursed with death.

I jump fences because, well, because they're there. Ditto—here comes the overdose of ketamin rompom, you naughty dog.

It goes on and on. The humans continue to lose their wits and we, the beings THEY domesticated, are paying the price.

It kind of smacks of cattlecars loaded and on their way to Poland—doesn't it?

Enhancing efforts

In reply to many who called me, yes we were turned down by Sechelt council. But will try again next year.

Port Alberni and Campbell River live largely off their tourists, lured there by their boast "Fishing Capital of the World." That boast would not be true if it wasn't for the fact the Campbell River has the Quinsam hatchery and Port Alberni has the Robertson hatchery sitting in near proximity to each other.

Gibsons and Sechelt are situated almost equal distance from Chapman Creek hatchery that will this year release over a million fish into the streams on the Sunshine Coast. I know thousands of fish will be caught and tremendous revenues from the commercial and sport fishing will spin off into these communities. So it seemed fair and fitting, to me, that something should come back to us from those that profit from our efforts.

Don't misunderstand, we do not expect, nor accept any personal compensation. The money requested was to feed those fish or species that must stay in fresh water for a year before release to salt water.

It is an awesome task to take over a defunct fish farm and in your third year turn out a million fish with all this done by a core group of about 10 people, on a volunteer basis, for the selfish reason of wanting to see the "rivers and streams restored to their historic levels."

During your summer free time why not take in the two-woman show titled "Vision Scapes" now showing at the Gumboot Garden Cafe until Aug. 31.

The show is featuring oil paintings and driftwood collages by Charmain Dunaway. Wendy Harford is displaying her acrylic paintings and papier mache sculptures. A must for art enthusiasts!

If you prefer to keep fit during the summer why not join the gang for a complete aerobic workout with weights. Creek Step's summer schedule is Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, 9:30 am at St. Aidan's Hall. For further information, call 886-3634.

B-P guild

Once again the 14th B-P guild is offering a service to kids attending Camp Goodtimes. For the last three Thursdays in July approximately 20 members of the guild have been arriving at Camp Byng early in the afternoon, peeling potatoes, carrots and preparing chicken for all the hungry campers. A worthwhile project which gives a lot of satisfaction to the volunteers, this dinner event is an annual undertaking for the group of ex-scouts and guides. Watching the faces of the children when they tear into that chicken or savour the last bite of a fruit tart, certainly testifies that every moment is appreciated and very necessary.

T'anks for No Tanks

Wednesday, July 27, 1994 will be listed in the Creek History books as TR Day (Tank Removal) and will be remembered for many a year to come.

On this day, the Creekers received an early Christmas Gift, courtesy of ICG. Early in the morning, workers arrived and began the removal of the tanks to end the long years and months of worry, frustration and discussions. Many residents watched from the beach as they were lifted by crane onto awaiting transportation.

Later that same evening approximately 100 excited children, adults, dogs, cats gathered to give thanks and celebrate. A display of fireworks helped to express what I am sure we were all feeling as we stood on the aftermath of those "dreaded tanks." It was a joy to be able to see for miles, enjoy the glorious sunset and watch the water ripple with kayakers as they also came to join the fun. It was a happy time and our thanks to the proud Creeker who donated the fireworks and to those who helped create the atmosphere. The celebrations continued as a barbeque was planned for Sunday, July 31.

It just goes to show that if one persists, there are still some people who listen and in the end the job does get done. Thanks to our RCCA members, and Brett McGillivray and all who supported the removal of those white monsters. Oh, by the way... If you feel lonely for the tanks, you can drive to Hillside for a visit. In the meantime, we can begin to decide what to do with the area.

george in gibsons

A charming wedding was solemnized in St. Hilda's Anglican in Sechelt on the afternoon of July 12 when Claire Sakina Bujan of Gibsons, and Ronald Kevin Marshall of Victoria sealed their marriage by an exchange of rings.

Parents of the bride are Sara and Michael Bujan of Gibsons. Michael, formerly of Elphinstone teaching staff is now retired, and Sara of Gibsons elementary staff continues there as kindergarten teacher, a position she has held since that class first began in the school in 1964.

The bridegroom's father is David Marshall of Gibsons and his mother, Joan Marshall of Victoria.

Also attending the ceremony was the bridegroom's grandmother, Olive Comyn of Halfmoon Bay and his stepmother, Joni Marshall.

The Rev. Jim Ferguson, the clergyman officiating at Claire and Kevin's wedding also officiated at the wedding of Claire's parents in April 1966.

In the bridal party were best man, Barry Buholzer of Kamloops, and the groomsman, Kevin's brother Trevor of Kamloops. Matron of Honor was Rima (Turner) Rea of Maple Ridge; bridesmaid, Sandy Fielding of Toronto. Ushers were Blair Gillespie of Vancouver, and Mark Bujan, the bride's brother, of Gibsons. Soloist was the groom's sister-in-law, Kathy Marshall.

Many toasts were offered the bride and the groom by friends and relatives at the reception dinner in the Gibsons Yacht Club. The toast to the bride was offered by Alex Merling, of Tswassen, a long-time friend and colleague of the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip to Puerto Vallarta – a gift of the groom's father and step-mother – the couple will reside in Victoria.

Among the guests were school friends of Claire's who all graduated from Elphinstone Secondary together in 1986 - Rima Rea, Sandra Vandergeest, Sheila Reynolds, Bernadine Lee, Maria Risebrough, and Samantha (Sparks) Niblock. An honoured guest was family friend and teaching colleague of Sara's, Marie Scott. Among the hundred and fifty guests were a number from Kamloops, Alberta and England.

Much to the bride's regret, illness prevented her uncle Maurice Bujan of Sheffield, England, from attending and reading the gospel message of love in Corinthians 13.

dockside davis bay

Last Wednesday night, July 27, more than 50 people turned out to an information meeting dealing with the proposed mental health facility designated for Kirkland Centre in Davis Bay. In talking to numerous people during the coffee break and after the meeting, the consensus seemed to be, not that they were against the facility itself, but against the method in which it was presented. Funding appears to be in place, as well as staff and even a model of the project was in evidence.

Despite repeated assurances that it was not, most people left the meeting saying, "it's a done deal." When the question was asked, "Don't you think something as important as this issue is to the residents of Davis Bay/Wilson Creek should go to a public referendum?" the response from Chairman Duncan Fraser was less than enthusiastic or supportive, citing the cost as a factor.(?)

Over a year ago, a petition was taken up to ask for some restrictions on Jet-skis in Davis Bay. To date, there is no by law in place to regulate them and they are back in our midst. Yet it appears that in a matter of months, the Kirkland facility is in place.

Isn't anyone in Sechelt listening?

Legion picnic

The Legion Branch 140 picnic held last Sunday was a great day for the kids as well as the adults. Held at Porpoise Bay picnic site, there were races, horseshoes, hot dogs, corn on the cob, watermelon, cold drinks and coffee for everybody.

Dozens of volunteers pitched in help make this the success if was.

Goodtimes

This past weekend marked the need of Camp Goodtimes for another year.

A tremendous amount of effort and planning goes into this venture every year and one local gal who deserves a great deal of credit is Gloria Hostland.

She organized and coordinated all the volunteers, who washed dishes three times a day. Most did two or three stints during the 3-week period and spent about 2 to 3 hours up to their elbows in soapsuds. Good on yuh, Gloria!

Condolences

The entire community extends their sincere condolences to Louise Colliss and family on the passing of husband and father, Bud Colliss, on July 24.

Long-time residents of this area, Bud will be remembered by many as one of the avid fisherman seen most days fishing off the dock. There was no service by family request.

Blackberries

We are reminded that it is blackberry-picking time again and for those who have reaped the benefits of Jack Knaus's efforts, this could be a way of saying "thanks."

If you can help out, please call 885-7793.

LORDY, LORDY LOOK WHO'S NOW 40!

FROM YOUR YOUNGER FRIENDS

sechelt senario

by Margaret Watt, 885-3364

No one can say Sechelt is a dull place in summer.

The place is literally hopping with fun things to do and see. By now everyone should have their tickets for the The Festival of the Written Arts. If you haven't, well you may be lucky, but you better hurry. Phone 885-9631.

Raven's Cry Theatre

Presents Farewell My Concubine at 8 pm on Aug. 5. It's a story about a boy in China raised in an orphanage who grows up to be an opera singer.

Tickets are $7 and may be purchased at the door.

The Big One!

On Saturday, Aug. 6, the farmers market is pulling out all the stops, presenting the biggest and best market yet. They will be situated behind Gilligan's wine and beer store in Sechelt and you'll be able to buy the freshest produce, the healthiest plants, trees and shrubs. Yummy baked goods are on the block too, as well as jams and jellies - all homemade, of course. Come along from 10 am to 1 pm and have some fun, as well as healthy food. See you there!

Sechelt Library

In anticipation of the new library, Friends of the Library are holding a fair on August 20 from noon to 4 pm in the Festival Pavilion at Rockwood. There will be a celebrity and just plain terrific t-shirt event, a bake sale, a silent auction and much more. The proceeds from the fair will go toward buying a computer and shelving for the new library. No admission is expected but a small donation would be appreciated. They also need plants and if anyone out there is aching to paint t-shirts, you are asked to phone 885-4505.

Sechelt craft fair

The Sunshine Coast Arts Council is sponsoring its 7th Annual Craft Fair Aug. 13 and 14 in Hackett Park in the centre of Sechelt. Bring the children and enjoy live music, children's entertainment and good food. There will be around 75 stalls this year, all filled with a variety of wonderful stuff. Some of the best pottery in BC will be featured as well as other works of art.

Picnic Time

The Welcome Beach Community Association will be holding their annual barbecue at the hall on Saturday August 13 starting at 5:30 pm. Delicious hamburgers and salads are on the menu, cost is $5 for adults and $2 for kids under 12. Please bring your own dishes and utensils so that no one has to spend time washing up after having done all the cooking. This is always a good social occasion to which you can bring your friends and family, and where, if you are a newcomer to the area, you will make new friends and get to know your neighbours. Everyone will be welcome.

Get Well Wishes

Many of you have been enquiring as to the condition of Marg Vorley who recently suffered a stroke. She is still in Lions Gate Hospital and is being treated at the rehabilitation centre there. The family feel quite optimistic that she will respond to the treatment to help her get things moving again. It may take about a month, so for those who would like to drop a line I am sure it would reach her if addressed to the rehabilitation centre. At the same time we are wishing Marg well, we can also pass along our thoughts and get well wishes to Alva Dinn who recently underwent surgery and who, at the time of writing, is still in St. Mary's Hospital. Keep the spirits up Alva.

If you know of anyone from Halfmoon Bay who is ill and under the weather I would like to hear about it so that friends who may not otherwise be aware could read about it here and could drop in to visit.

Water supply

Since remarks in the last column expressing concern about swimming being allowed in the small lake from which some of us get our drinking water, others have been equally concerned and others why this is allowed to continue. Sure it's a lovely spot for a nice warm swim and I just wish that this could be its only purpose and that we could have alternate sources for our drinking water other than Trout Lake. It seems that every summer this controversy continues.

Blue Heron

The crow problem we had recently with the nesting blue heron has eased off now and most of the young have taken flight, hopefully to return next year if they're left in peace. One of the young injured birds which we took to the Wildlife Rehabilitation Centre in Halfmoon Bay, managed to fly away before it was officially "discharged" from hospital and flew off with a cast on its leg. We can't help wonder if anyone has spotted this bird in the Halfmoon Bay area trying to cope with its disability.

Don't forget that if you have anything you would like to have mentioned in this column I am always glad to pass it along if you just give me a call.

On the Green

There was a colourful unusual wedding on Cooper's Green last Saturday when Chris and Star Cook, both from Vancouver, exchanged vows in a medieval setting. The whole wedding party were bedecked in medieval costumes as was Pam Robins who conducted the ceremony. The group made merry throughout the evening and even had the traditional pig roasting on the spit.

Mid-Summer Festival

Not again! I hear some one saying; but this will be the last notice that I will give you, I promise.

Until of course next week when I will let you know what you might have missed if I had not been harassing you.

It is looking fantastic. Lots of arts and crafts will be there, live fish and fresh vegetables (still wiggling).

As for the entertainment there will be Skinny Jimmy, the Great Dane, a guitarist/vocalist, a couple young singers, two accordionists; Nick Van Velzen and Frank Roosen Sr., and perhaps a three-piece band.

As I said before; this could be the best event west of Mississippi. Pancake breakfast starts at 8 am until 11 am.

From noon on the Egmont Lions Club will provide you with hamburgers, hotdogs, fish dinners and what else?

The fair and music will start at 10 am until just before dusk. The playground is open all day and the kids games will be just after lunch.

I'm not sure of the hours of the beer garden but I think it will be "before the sun comes over the yard-arm!"

I wish you all a fantastic day on Sunday, August 7.

Brain Teaser

This little old farmer is going to the annual market with his prize winning 50-pound cabbage, his prize winning goat and his wolf.

On the way he has to cross a river and there is only a small dinghy which can only hold, besides himself, one of the three!

He has to figure this out. He sits down, fills his pipe and thinks. If he brought the cabbage over first the wolf would eat the goat. If he brought the wolf over first the goat would eat his prize cabbage.

If he brought the goat over first that would look like a good idea, but what would he bring over next? If he brought the cabbage, the goat would eat it. If he brought the wolf, it would be the end of the goat!

By the time he had his pipe finished he had it figured out!

I'll give you until Sunday to figure it out.

The names of the winners with the right answer will be announced from the stage.

Game any one

Mixed adult slo-pitch will be held every Thursday evening at 6:30 at the school playground. Everyone is welcome!

egmont news

by Lynn Mees

Last Sunday, the forestry service was here in town to put out a fire at the corner of Maple Road and Egmont Road. A stump pile lit several months ago decided to rekindle itself. It had travelled underground.

We are fortunate the forestry service was so efficient and quick to attend to the fire, it could have been a huge disaster for the surrounding residents.

Has anyone seen a silver cat with a white belly?

She jumped out of a car on the corner of Egmont Road and the highway. Her name is Meekah and her owners would love to find her. If you see her call her and hopefully you can catch her... she's supposedly quite friendly. You can give me a call if you find her, and I'll get a hold of the owners.

A big happy thank you to Gerry Houle who brought us lots of new things for the thrift store and for sorting through all the old unread books.

Books

Book lovers get ready, there's a vast assortment coming your way. Also a huge thank you to the Anglican Church of Pender Harbour for donating tons of trinkets... they loaded us up big time. Now our little thrift store is filling up, tidied up, and opened up! Shirley has her jams for sale in the thrift store as well!

Artist honoured through gallery show

by Jane Seyd

Above the earth, the white terraces, a donkey standing alone in a dark field, the sea and sky are moving with light. The violet trees seem to quiver.

In another painting, there is the vertical push of the North Shore mountains, then a stream of colour rushing over the Lions Gate bridge. At the end of the bridge, it disappears into a cascading tunnel of air.

These images come from works by the artist Peter Paul Ochs, who moved to Gibsons from Vancouver in 1990 after a career as a professional artist which took him around the world.

Ochs died in Gibsons of leukemia three months ago.

In honour of his work, a show of his paintings titled "Bridges and Beyond" is now on display at the Quay Works Gallery in Gibsons as the second exhibition of the Quay Gallery Society.

Ochs was well-known in the Vancouver art world for his sculpture, from bronze to cedar, and for his cool geometric paintings done in the 1960s.

The current show, however, brings together work done later, combining vibrant colours of Ochs' Greek landscape paintings and the mysterious energy of his pictures depicting Vancouver's bridges.

Both, says his wife Sulaika Ochs, represented "an emotional freeing for him."

It was the clear powerful light in Greece which first attracted Ochs to the country in 1982. During the 1980s, he lived and worked there on and off, fascinated by the sense of colour he discovered.

His lemons sit in a bowl by the window, a meditation, glowing yellow and gold with a hidden light inside them.

He worked quickly, says Sulaika, with a wet brush and paper, letting his watercolours blur.

Later, Ochs brought his love of colour back to Vancouver, where he used to comment he liked painting the Patullo Bridge because it was "so outlandishly orange."

Most of the Vancouver bridge paintings - 60 in total - were done by Ochs in 1989-90, just before he was diagnosed with leukemia. Consciously, he didn't work with the bridges as symbols, says Sulaika: "He would say 'It's a bridge - it's there.'" But she adds, "I think Peter somewhere deep inside knew he was ill."

Says Peter Millard, director for the gallery society, "They're beautiful gestural drawings."

Milard adds Och's earlier discipline as a sculptor can be seen in the structural quality of his later works. "They're tough paintings," he says. "They're structurally interesting."

The last painting done by Ochs, now hangs over his wife's dining room table. In it, a black canoe carries the golden orb of the sun across a blue background.

The current exhibit, says Sulaika Ochs, means "being able to share him with people. Having people see him, hear him, touch him. That pleases me."

A reception at the gallery will be will Aug. 6 at 7:30 pm.

'Hot stuff' now on display at Hunter Gallery

"Hot Stuff," Anne Gurney and Linda Dixon's fourth joint exhibition opened at the Hunter Gallery in Lower Gibsons on Saturday, July 30.

Gurney has been busy this year perfecting new glazes and techniques.

Gurney has studied at the Vancouver School of Art, University of BC and Capilano College, plus attending various workshops with top potters over the years. Her work is in private collections from Japan to Paris.

Dixon is a painter known for both her vibrant use of colors and her ethereal pastels, for realism and for abstract. She has trained at the Vancouver School of Art, Washington School of Art and privately. Her work is in many collections ranging from a former president of the Vancouver Art Gallery to the former art critic of the Irish Times, plus several corporate and private collections across the country. Both artists have won provincial awards.

The exhibition lasts from July 30 to Aug. 19.

Terminated Gibsons public works supervisor Skip Reeves announced his intention of pursuing legal action against the Town of Gibsons. According to his lawyer, Reeves only desire has been to have an opportunity to hear the reasons for his dismissal, have council hear the reasons and have an opportunity to answer the complaints in front of council. However, that opportunity has not been available, Reeves' lawyer said, so his client will pursue legal action.

Vandals identified as Sunshine Coast residents caused over $2000 damage to Dan Bosch Park and beach area off Highway 101 north of Pender Harbour last weekend, devastating a project that had been completed by the Parks Department only two days before.

The long awaited and controversial marina is showing evidence of becoming a reality with the installation of the floats this last week. But several new questions have arisen. Some of the concerns are the inaccessibility of the launching ramp, maneuvering problems for large boats and a high spot at the corner of the marina.

An official letter has been received stating that MacMillan Bloedel Limited "wishes to withdraw our application to perform 'hack and squirt' with 2, 4-D on the following sites," and lists all Sunshine Coast sites included in the application except D.L. 1625 on Conrad Road.

After weeks of public and private deliberations, the Sunshine Coast Regional Board at its regular meeting of July 26 gave third and final reading to by-law 264; the comprehensive and explicit document regulating the use of land, buildings and structure with zones.

"There is any amount of opportunity in fish farming," said Brad Hope of Tidal Rush Marine Farms of Nelson Island. "We're right at the base of a whole new industry, and there are no guidelines. It's no longer 'can it be done,' but 'how will it be done.' We have the opportunity to shape it into anything we want it to be."

Roberts Creek Lions hope to undertake the biggest program in Lions Club history with the approval of a proposed project to train purebred German Shepherds and Black Labradors as seeing-eye dogs.

Only five per cent of every litter of pups can be trained and the training program lasts three years.

Roberts Creek Lions have received SCRD approval to develop the Roberts Creek Park.

Senior Secondary Principal and Municipal Alderman Tom Elwood, described as a 'livewire,' is leaving Gold River to take up residence in Gibsons, where he will be principal of Elphinstone.

Elwood describes his decision to leave Gold River, where he has lived for two years, as the second hardest decision he has ever had to make. The first was getting married.

minor ball

The double A Gibsons Minor Ball Pee Wee all-stars concluded their 1994 baseball season in Surrey last weekend.

The team lost their opening game, won their second game and let their third game go in the seventh inning to fall from the running in the Lower Mainland Zone playdowns at Lionel Courchene Park in Guildford (Surrey). "They played really well for a bunch of first year pee wee kids," said coach Ron Baba, currently preparing the Triple A Pee Wees for the Lower Mainland playdowns this weekend. "They held their own."

Coast Soccer camps in offing

Sunshine Coast residents are invited to attend a free public barbecue with Vancouver 86rs soccer star Dominic Mobilio Aug. 4 at Sechelt's Ted Dixon Memorial Park.

The barbecue is part of the Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) recreation and leisure services summer programs and will highlight their summer soccer program, running Aug. 1 through 5th.

"He'll be there to sign autographs and to talk to the kids," said recreation and leisure services coordinator Dolores Maisonneuve of Mobilio's appearance.

Mobilio, one of the most prolific scorers in Canadian professional soccer history, will be conducting a clinic from 9 am to 11:30 am for six to 11-year-olds. There will be a second clinic for kids 12-years-old and over from 12:45 pm to 3:30 pm.

The barbecue, featuring hot dogs and pop, will be from 11:15 am to 12:45 pm.

"Anybody and his dog that wants to go down there is welcome," Maisonneuve said. "It'll be a lot of fun."

The SCRD summer programs are still trucking along, with some attaining great success and others suffering.

Maisonneuve said one program that isn't meeting with much success is the Traveling Playsite Crew—and it's a shame the coordinator said.

"The attendance hasn't been that great but they promise a lot of fun for the kids."

The next traveling playsite will be Aug. 8 through 12th at Whispering Firs Regional Park (off OceanView Drive in Gibsons).

Another will be staged at the Pender Harbour Community Centre in Madeira Park from August 22-26.

The traveling playsites are set up so kids that can't make the weekly playsites at Chaster House, Hackett Park, Roberts Creek Regional Park, Connor Park or Dougall Park, have a chance to take part in the fun, Maisonneuve said.

They run from Monday to Friday from 12:30 to 3:30 pm. The cost is $2 per child per day.

Roller blade tourney set to roll August 20

Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) summer program organizers are sponsoring a roller-blade tournament Aug. 20 at the Gibsons Youth Centre.

The tourney is for kids but, said SCRD recreation and leisure services coordinator Dolores Maisonneuve, if any adults are interested, they're welcome to play.

Players can sign up as a team or individually and they will be placed on a team.

And if people are interested but don't have rollerblades, the Gibsons Youth Centre has spare rollerskates.

An awards barbecue for all-participants will be held after the tourney.

"They have got some great prizes," Maisonneuve said.

The youth centre is located at Brother's Park. For more information concerning the tourney, call 885-2261.
